Rigveda Samhita — Volume 3 (English Translation)

Source: `Rig_Vol3.pdf` (663 PDF pages, scanned) — Ṛgveda-saṃhitā, Sāyaṇa-bhāṣya-sahitā with Kannada rendering, Bhāga (Part) 3: the Second Adhyāya of the First Aṣṭaka — Maṇḍala 1, Sūktas 20–32 — by Asthana Mahavidwan H. P. Venkata Rao (Śrī Jayacāmarājendra Vedaratna-mālā; printed at Sree Sharada Press, Mysore, 1949).

Relation to earlier volumes: a direct continuation of Volume 2 (`Rigveda_Samhita_Vol2_English_Translation.md`, Sūktas 3–19, First Adhyāya of the First Aṣṭaka). All conventions of Volumes 1–2 carry over unchanged (see `CLAUDE.md`): every Sanskrit citation in three layers (Devanagari + IAST + English); Kannada-script Sanskrit transcribed letter by letter; doubtful readings and numerals marked [?]; the source's own printed English reproduced as printed with [sic] for misprints; grammar pages (Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā) noted briefly; Saṃhitā-pāṭha accents given as printed where the numeral and accent pass (Oct 2026) has reached them, the Pada-pāṭha unaccented.

(Sūktas 20–32 are thirteen sūktas; the title page's "20–32" was read from small Kannada numerals and agrees with this list. The very large later sūktas, 23 [pp. 141–233], 24, 30 and 31–32, are lengthy because of extended discussions of the Ṛbhus, Mitra-Varuṇa, Aśvins and Agni, etc. listed in the contents.)

I praise Vidyātīrtha-Maheśvara, whose breath the Vedas are, and who made the whole world from the Vedas. The Veda is Śiva, Śiva is the Veda; one who studies the Veda is Sadāśiva; therefore, with every effort, one should always recite the Veda alone." (The English is my rendering; the Sanskrit is as printed, read from the Kannada script, with a few letters uncertain.)

That its deity is the Ṛbhus is stated in the Anukramaṇī: 'athamaṣṭāv ārbhavam' [as printed]. The application of the sūkta is to be known as laiṅgika or smārta. In the first chandoma day of the vyūḍha rite, at the vaiśvadeva-śastra, the tṛca to the Ṛbhus ayaṃ devāya janmane is used. So it is laid down in the section atha chandomāḥ: 'abhi tvā deva savitaḥ, pretāṃ yajñasya śambhuvā, ayaṃ devāya janmane: tṛcas' (Āśv. 8-9)."

Anuvāda (Kannada rendering): In the first sūkta of the second adhyāya of the first aṣṭaka there are eight ṛks. The ṛṣi and metres of this sūkta are as in the previous sūkta. The Anukramaṇikā says, athamaṣṭāvārbhavam iti, that the Ṛbhus are the deities of this sūkta. The application is both śrauta and smārta. In the rite called vyūḍha, at the time of reciting the mantras called prathama-chandoma, for reciting the vaiśvadeva-śastra mantras, the tṛca connected with the Ṛbhus, ayaṃ devāya janmane, is recited. This matter is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra (Ā. 8-9), in the section atha chandomāḥ: that the tṛca (three ṛks) to Savitṛ beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. saṃ. 1-24-3), the tṛca to Heaven and Earth beginning pretāṃ yajñasya śambhuvā (Ṛ. saṃ. 2-41-19) and the tṛca to the Ṛbhus beginning ayaṃ devāya janmane (Ṛ. saṃ. 1-20-1) are to be recited as the chandoma mantras.

Translation: "The Ṛbhus, being men, attained divinity by austerity; and they are the deities in this sūkta. Their company is denoted here by the word janman, meaning 'one being born', in the singular. For the deva, the god in the form of the company of the Ṛbhus, janmane, being born, for his pleasure, this stoma, a particular hymn, akāri, was made, by the vipras, the wise priests, āsayā, with their own mouth. Of what kind is the hymn? Ratnadhātama, giving in the highest degree wealth such as lovely gems. The sense is: pleased by the hymn, the Ṛbhus give wealth." (Grammatical tail: āsayā, from āsya, yāc for the instrumental singular by supāṃ suluk…, the y of the base dropped by exchange, final udātta by citaḥ; ratnadhātamaḥ, "he holds gems", ratnadhāḥ, the accent of the kṛt final member.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

जन्मने (janmane) — to those who have taken birth as the deities called Ṛbhus | देवाय (devāya) — for the deities (for the company of deities) | रत्नधातमः (ratnadhātamaḥ) — giving wealth such as lovely gems | अयं स्तोमः (ayaṃ stomaḥ) — this particular hymn | विप्रेभिः (viprebhiḥ) — by the wise, that is, by people such as the learned priests | आसया (āsayā) — with (their) mouth | अकारि (akāri) — has been made.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The deities called Ṛbhus were men before and attained divinity. Addressing the company of deities who attained such a divine birth, the learned priests and other people have made this hymn with their own mouth. This excellent hymn, by the grace of the Ṛbhu deities, gives gems and other goods to those who praise.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> This hymn, the bestower of riches has been addressed by the sages with their own mouths to the race (of Ribhus) having divine birth.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

That those called Ṛbhus were men formerly and attained divinity by their excellent conduct and the performance of good works is said in many places in the Ṛgveda. Formerly the ṛṣi Aṅgiras had a son named Nītimañjari [as printed]. In his line the ṛṣi named Sudhanvan had three sons, Ṛbhu, Vibhu and Vāja. It is believed that by good works such as the performance of good rites and helping the deities they obtained the birth of gods, or became gods. There is the custom of calling all three sons of Sudhanvan, Ṛbhu and the rest, Ṛbhus; all three sons are called by the name of the eldest. Since they are pupils of Tvaṣṭṛ, they are also called the craftsmen of the gods. It is said here and there that they made the implements needed by deities such as Indra, that is, Indra's chariot and Agni's camasa vessel. In this sūkta there is an account of some of the works they did. Descriptions are found here and there that they have wonderful power and are able to do any work. Since they have the very powers and capacities of the deities, the ṛṣis, regarding them as belonging to the group of the deities, have described them and their works in various ways. It is believed that they dwell in the sun's orb and do their works through the sun's rays. More details about them will be given later.

Āsayā: a word in the instrumental singular. Āsya is a variant form of the word mukha, mouth: the sense is that they recite with the mouth, with the lips.

Ratnadhātamaḥ: this word occurs in the very first ṛk of the Ṛgveda, agnim īḷe. Ratnāni dadhāti (dadāti) iti ratnadhāḥ atiśayena dhanapradaḥ: the sense is one who gives wealth such as gems in a high degree.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 4–5, noted briefly)

आसया (āsayā): after the word āsya the instrumental singular suffix ṭā. For it, by the sūtra "supāṃ suluk…" (Pā. sū. 7-1-39), the substitute yāc. The y of the base āsya drops by "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. sū. 3-1-85): āsayā. Yāc has c as it; so by "citaḥ" (Pā. sū. "1-1-63" [as printed, for 6-1-163]) the final udātta accent comes.

रत्नधातमः (ratnadhātamaḥ): the word ratna is always neuter; so by "nabviṣayasyānisantasya" (Phi. sū. 26) it is initial udātta. The analysis is ratnāni dadhāti. After the root, with the word ratna as upapada, kvip or the suffix vic; all the letters of the suffix drop; by the root accent dhā is final udātta; after compounding, by "gatikārakopapadāt kṛt" (Pā. sū.

6-2-139) the final member, a kṛdanta, keeps its own accent. The other letters are unaccented by the accent of the remaining unaccented. In ratnadhā final udātta may also be stated by “samāsasya” (Pā. sū. 6-1-223). The suffix tamap is pit; so by “anudāttau suppitau” (Pā. sū. 3-1-4) it is unaccented; the svarita and pracaya are to be inferred.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

ये (ye) (ऋभवः (ṛbhavaḥ)) — which Ṛbhu deities | इन्द्राय (indrāya) — for Indra's pleasure | वचोयुजा (vacoyujā) — who can be yoked (to the chariot) by a word of the mouth alone | हरी (harī) — the two horses called Harī | मनसा (manasā) — by mental resolve alone | ततक्षुः (tatakṣuḥ) — produced and gave | (ते ऋभवः (te ṛbhavaḥ)) — such Ṛbhus) | शमीभिः (śamībhiḥ) — by acts (that provide the means of sacrifice such as the graha and camasa) | यज्ञम् (yajñam) — our sacrifice | आशत (āśata) — pervaded.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

These Ṛbhus produced for Indra's pleasure, by mental resolve alone, the two well-trained horses called Harī of Indra's chariot. May such Ṛbhus provide for our sacrifice too the means of sacrifice such as the graha and camasa.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> The Ribhus who created mentally for Indra his pair of tawny horses that yoke themselves at his command attained the sacrifice by their acts of skill.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

Vacoyujā:

> ताडनादिकं विना वाङ्मात्रेण रथे युज्यमानौ ॥
> tāḍanādikaṃ vinā vāṅmātreṇa rathe yujyamānau ||

("Yoked to the chariot by speech alone, without beating and the like.") The sense is: they yoke themselves to the chariot merely at what Indra says with his mouth, without training such as beating; that is, Indra's command is enough; without any kind of urging by a charioteer they yoke themselves to the chariot: “Harnessing themselves at Indra’s word (command)” [as printed] is the intent.

Tatakṣuḥ manasā:

संपादितवन्तः, कृतवन्तः ॥

saṃpāditavantaḥ, kṛtavantaḥ ||

(“They produced, they made.”) “created” [as printed]. Since the Ṛbhus are expert in the craft-śāstra and of true resolve, they are able, by their power of mind, to create the implements of sacrifice, chariots and other things that are means of sacrifice. These Ṛbhu deities need not use tools and materials to make things like modern craftsmen. The word manasā indicates the intent that they have the power and capacity to make anything they want by mere mental resolve.

Harī:

हरतः वहत इति हरी ।

harataḥ vahata iti harī |

(“They carry, they convey: harī.”) Because they draw the chariot, Indra’s horses are named harī. This word, ending in the dual, is generally used in the Ṛgveda to denote Indra’s two horses.

Śamībhiḥ:

शमयन्ति पापानीति शम्यः कर्माणि ।

śamayanti pāpānīti śamyaḥ karmāṇi |

(“They calm sins: śamyaḥ, acts.”) Since the word śamī or śimī is read among the twenty-six names for action beginning apaḥ, apnaḥ (Ni. 3-1), śamībhiḥ means by acts such as sacrifice. The sentence śamībhir yajñam āśata used in this ṛk has several senses. The Ṛbhu deities pervade the sacrifice by their acts, that is, by their works of craft, or by acts that give the sacrificer his wishes; that is, they come to the place of sacrifice. Or, being pleased by the acts such as the giving of oblations that the sacrificer makes to the Ṛbhu deities in the sacrifice, they accept the oblation: the sense can be given in various ways. The chief intent is that these Ṛbhus, by their skill in craft, not only make the means and materials needed for the sacrifice so that the sacrifice is completed with all its parts, but, pleased by the giving of oblations the sacrificer makes in the sacrifice, give the fruit of the sacrifice, and so on.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 7–8, noted briefly)

वचोयुजा (vacoyujā): the analysis is vacasā yuñjāte. After the root yujir yoge, with the instrumental-singular word vacas as upapada, by the sūtra “satsūdviṣa…” (Pā. sū. 3-2-61) the suffix kvip; after it the accusative dual suffix au; for it, by “supāṃ suluk” (Pā. sū. 7-1-39), the substitute ā. This is unaccented by “anudāttau suppitau” (Pā. sū. 3-1-4). The u of yuj is udātta by “dhātoḥ” (Pā. sū. 6-1-162). After compounding too, by “gatikārako…” (Pā. sū. 6-2-139), the accent of the kṛt final member comes, so that accent stays. By “udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-4-66) the case-ending substitute becomes svarita.

ततक्षुः (tatakṣuḥ): the root takṣū tvakṣū tanūkaraṇe. After it liṭ, the 3rd plural substitute jhi; for it, by “parasmaipadānāṃ ṇalatusus…” (Pā. sū. 3-4-82), the substitute us; doubling and the other operations: tatakṣuḥ. It stands at the start of the second pāda. Since the bar “apādādau” (Pā. sū. 8-1-18) comes, it is not wholly unaccented by “tiṅṅatiṅaḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-1-28).

Page 8 — Rik 2: grammar (end)

शमीभिः (śamībhiḥ): śamayanti pāpāni iti śamyaḥ, karmāṇi: acts that remove sins are denoted by the word śamī. The root śamu upaśame. By “sarvadhātubhya in” (Uṇ. sū. “4-5-57”, zoom-checked: the last glyph has the open top and flat foot of the 7) the suffix in. If the feminine is meant, by “kṛdikārād aktinaḥ” (Pā. sū. 4-1-45 ga.), when the feminine is meant, ṅīṣ comes after a stem ending in an i belonging to a kṛt suffix; but after a stem ending in ktin ṅīṣ does not come: this is the sense of the gaṇa-sūtra. Here the Uṇādi suffix in is a kṛt; since the word śami ends in the i belonging to the suffix in, ṅīṣ comes after it. By “yasyeti ca” (Pā. sū. 6-4-148) the i belonging to the kṛt drops. Though final udātta would come by the suffix accent, since it is in the vṛṣa-ādi, by “vṛṣādīnāṃ ca” (Pā. sū. 6-1-203) it is initial udātta.

आशत (āśata): the root aśū vyāptau. After it laṅ, the ātmanepada 3rd plural substitute jha. This is a root of the sv-ādi group; so by “svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ” (Pā. sū. 3-1-73) the vikaraṇa śnu comes: aś + nu + jha; for the vikaraṇa, by “bahulaṃ chandasi” (Pā. sū. 2-4-73), luk. By “āḍ ajādīnām” (Pā. sū. 6-4-72) the augment āṭ; by “āṭaś ca” (Pā. sū. 6-1-90) vṛddhi. By “ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ” (Pā. sū. 7-1-5) the substitute at for the jh: āśata. By “tiṅṅatiṅaḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-1-28) it is wholly unaccented.

Translation: "For the Nāsatyas, for the pleasure of the Aśvin gods, takṣan, they fashioned, a chariot: the Ṛbhu gods fashioned a certain chariot, produced it by carving. Of what kind? Parijman, going around, sukha, pleasant for those who sit on it. And they fashioned a dhenu, a certain cow: since roots have many senses, takṣ here means producing. ॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

नासत्याभ्याम् (nāsatyābhyām) — for the Aśvin deities | परिज्मानम् (parijmānam) — going everywhere (able to move in all directions) | सुखम् (sukham) — pleasant (to sit in) | रथम् (ratham) — a chariot (these Ṛbhus) | तक्षन् (takṣan) — made at once and gave | (and) सबर्दुघाम् (sabardughām) — giving milk | धेनुम् (dhenum) — a cow too | तक्षन् (takṣan) — produced and gave.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

These Ṛbhu deities by their power produced and gave to the Aśvin deities a pleasant chariot able to move everywhere, and a cow that gives good milk.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> They constructed for the Nasatyas, an easy-moving chariot which is capable of moving everywhere, and a cow that gives milk.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

As said in the previous ṛk, in this ṛk too and in the following ṛks the extraordinary works of craft done by the Ṛbhu deities are described.

Takṣan: atakṣan. To suit the metre the a of the verb atakṣan is dropped and only takṣan is used. Atakṣan means “they produced, they made”; “built, made, chipped, fabricated, fashioned, constructed, carved” [as printed] and other senses may be given. The intent is that, unlike in the previous ṛk where they made the chariot by mental resolve, here they carved and built the chariot with tools, according to the craft-śāstra.

Nāsatyābhyām: na asatyau nāsatyau (nāsatyā): because they are not speakers of untrue words, the Aśvin deities are named nāsatyau or nāsatyā. These Aśvin deities are two; though there is a usage calling one Nāsatya and the other Dasra, there is a usage of using the word nāsatyā for both. So here nāsatyābhyām means aśvinoḥ, for the Aśvin deities. Though nāsatyābhyām is used here in the ablative, it may be taken in the sense of the ablative or of the genitive.

Parijmānam:

> परितो गन्तारम्
> parito gantāram

(“Going around.”) Able to move anywhere, that is, able to go in regions such as earth, sky and ocean. This word qualifies the word ratham.

Sukham: pleasant, “easy-moving” [as printed]: the intent is that it can move without tiring or jolting those sitting in the chariot, or that it is made ready with soft seats and the like.

Dhenum: gām, a cow. Generally in the Ṛgveda the word dhenu is used in the sense of a cow that gives milk.

Takṣan: here too the intent is atakṣan. Here a doubt arises: since takṣan means “made, built”, is it not impossible to build a cow with tools? So it is fitting that the commentator gave here the sense saṃpāditavantaḥ, “they procured”, for the word takṣan.

Sabardughām:

> सबरः क्षीरस्य दोग्ध्रीम् । अमृतस्य दोग्ध्रीम् ।
> sabaraḥ kṣīrasya dogdhrīm | amṛtasya dogdhrīm |

(“The milker of sabar, milk; the milker of nectar.”) The intent is: a cow that gives or yields milk, which is called nectar, “the cow that yields milk or ambrosia” [as printed].

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 10–13, noted briefly)

तक्षन् (takṣan): the root takṣū tvakṣū tanūkaraṇe. Since roots have many senses, here the sense “producing” is meant for takṣ. After it laṅ, the 3rd plural substitute jhi. If the sense tanūkaraṇa were meant, by “tanūkaraṇe takṣaḥ” (Pā. sū. 3-1-76), before a sārvadhātuka in the agent sense, the vikaraṇa śnu would come after takṣ in the sense of paring, so the vikaraṇa śnu would be due. But since here the sense “producing” is meant, the vikaraṇa śap comes after this root of the bhv-ādi group: takṣ + a + jhi. By “jho ’ntaḥ” (Pā. sū. 7-1-3) ant for the jh; by “itaś ca” (Pā. sū. 3-4-100) the i drops; by “saṃyogāntasya lopaḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-2-23) the t at the end of the conjunct nt drops; by “pūrvatrāsiddham” (Pā. sū. 8-2-1) the loss of the conjunct final is asiddha when the loss of n is to be made; so the loss of n by “nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya” (Sā. sū. “4-2-7” [as printed, for Pā. 8-2-7]) does not come. The a of the vikaraṇa and the a of the suffix take the pararūpa. Though the augment aṭ is due by “luṅlaṅlṛṅkṣv aḍ udāttaḥ” (Pā. sū. 6-4-71), by “bahulaṃ chandasy amāṅyoge ’pi” (Pā. sū. 6-4-75), in the Veda, with or without māṅ, the augments aṭ and āṭ come variously. The sense of bahula was explained before. So here the augment aṭ does not come: takṣan.

नासत्याभ्याम् (nāsatyābhyām): na vidyate satyaṃ yayoḥ tau asatyau: those two in whom there is no truth are called asatyau. Na asatyau: different from those who have no truth: that is the sense. In this compound, though the loss of n is due by “nalopo nañaḥ” (Pā. sū. 6-3-73), since by “nabhrāṇnapānnavedānāsatyā…” (Pā. sū. 6-3-75) the nañ of the words named in this sūtra keeps its form, the n does not drop. Lengthening of like vowels: nāsatyā.

> श्वन्नुक्षन्पूषन्प्लीहन्क्केदन्स्नेहन्मूर्धन्मज्जन्नर्यमन्विश्वप्सन्परिज्मन्मातरिश्वन्मघवन्निति (उ. सू. १-१५७)
> śvannukṣanpūṣanplīhankledansnehanmūrdhanmajjannaryamanviśvapsanparijman mātariśvanmaghavanniti (u. sū. 1-157)

(the sūtra number “1-157” as printed here; the bhāṣya gives 1-158) these thirteen words are given ready-made as ending in the suffix kani. Śvan: after the root ṭuo śvi gativṛddhyoḥ the suffix kani comes, and since this sūtra gives the loss of i ready-made, with the loss of i it is established. Ukṣan: the suffix kani after the root ukṣa secane. Pūṣan: after the root pūṣa vṛddhau, kani. Plīhan: the root pliha gatau, after it kani; since this sūtra gives it ready-made, the i in the penultimate is lengthened. Kledan: the root klidū ārdrībhāve, the suffix kani; by “pugantalaghūpadhasya ca” (Pā. sū. 7-3-86) guṇa e for the penultimate i. Sneha: the root ṣṇiha prītau, kani, then the laghūpadha-guṇa. Mūrdhan: the root muha vaicittye; after it kani, the penultimate u lengthened, dh for h, and the augment r (ram) after the ū: these come by the ready-made form. The analysis here is muhyanti asmin āhate. Majjan: the root ṭumasjo śuddhau; after it kani: masj + an. For the s, by "stoḥ ścunā ścuḥ" (Pā. sū. 8-4-40), ś; for that, by "jhalāṃ jaś jhaśi" (Pā. sū. 8-4-53), j: since by "icuyaśānāṃ tālu" ś too is palatal, in its place comes the palatal j that is part of the pratyāhāra jaś: majjan. This is n-final; following the two-form lexicon

ūṣmayā sārdhamūṣmāpi majjokto majjayā saha

("Ūṣman together with ūṣmā; majjan is said together with majjā"), they also accept the word majjā as ending in ṭāp. Aryaman: after the root māṅ māne preceded by the word arya, kani; aryamā + an; by "āto lopa iṭi ca" (Pā. sū. 6-4-64) the loss of ā: aryaman. When the nominative singular su is added after it, though the penultimate lengthening that would come by "sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau" (Pā. sū. 6-4-8) is withdrawn by "inhanpūṣāryamṇāṃ śau" (Pā. sū. 6-4-12), by "sau ca" (Pā. sū. 6-4-13), when the suffix su follows, the penultimate of a stem ending in in, of han, pūṣan and aryaman is lengthened; so the penultimate is lengthened; by "halṅyābbhyaḥ…" (Pā. sū. 6-1-68) the loss of su; by "nalopaḥ prā…" (Pā. sū. 8-2-7) the loss of n: aryamā. Viśvapsan: the root psā bhakṣaṇe; viśvaṃ psāti iti viśvapsā, meaning Agni. After the root psā, with the word viśva as upapada, kani; by "āto lopa iṭi ca" the loss of ā. Parijman: pari jāyate iti parijmā. The senses moon and Agni are conveyed by this word. After the root janī prādurbhāve preceded by pari, kani; here by the ready-made form the loss of the a of the root jan and the substitute m for the n come: parij + m + an: so the grammarians explain. In the manner of the Vedabhāṣya the derivation is made here in another way. After the root aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ preceded by the preverb pari, by the sūtra "śvannukṣan…" the suffix man: pari + aj + man; by the ready-made form the a of the root drops: parijman. The suffix man is not nit, so there is no scope for initial udātta by "ñnityādir nityam"; final udātta by the suffix accent would be due. But in this very sūtra initial udātta too is given ready-made. So parijman, though ending in the suffix man, is initial udātta. At "ataḥ parijmann ā gahi" (Ṛ. saṃ. sū. 6, ṛ. 9) the Vedabhāṣyakāra, by "anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyate" (Pā. sū. 3-2-75), describes the suffix manin after the root aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ preceded by pari, with the loss of a as a Vedic form, giving parijman, and says this is initial udātta by the nit accent (page "75", zoom-checked: flat-footed 7, lobed 5). Ujjvaladatta, reading parijvan in the sūtra, after the sautra root ju preceded by pari, kani: pariju + an, the substitute yaṇ: parijvan, meaning the moon, he explains. But since such usage is not found, this derivation is not fitting. After parijman the accusative singular am: when it comes, the penultimate is lengthened by "sarvanāmasthāne…" (Pā. sū. 6-4-8): parijmānam. Mātariśvan: mātari, in the sky, śvayati, it goes: the analysis gives mātariśvā. With the locative-final mātari as upapada, after the root ṭuo śvi gativṛddhyoḥ, kani; by the ready-made form the i of the root drops; by the ready-made form too the luk due by "supo dhātu…" (Pā. sū. 2-4-71) does not come for the locative in mātari: mātariśvan. In the sūtra "śvayuvamaghonām ataddhite" (Pā. sū. 6-4-133) the word śva takes in śvan meaning dog, and words ending in śvan meaning dog; in mātariśvan the śvan does not mean dog, so when vowel-initial endings such as śas are added, there is no saṃprasāraṇa in mātariśvan: only forms such as mātariśvanaḥ, mātariśvanā result. Maghavan: the root maha pūjāyām; here the suffix kani, gh for the h, and the augment avuk for the root are given ready-made: maghavan. In the sūtra the word iti means "and so on". So, according to usage, the suffix kani may come after other roots too. In the daśapādī this word iti is not read.

Translation: "In the second chandoma, at the vaiśvadeva-śastra, the tṛca to the Ṛbhus is yuvānā pitarā punaḥ. So it is laid down in the section of the second agniṃ vo devam: 'mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ and yuvānā pitarā punaḥ: two tṛcas' (Āśv. 8-10). The Ṛbhus, gods of that name, akrata, made, their pitarau, their own mother and father, who were old before, yuvānā, young punaḥ, again. Of what kind? Satyamantrāḥ, endowed with the power of mantras that never fail: because their mantras are perfected by performing puraścaraṇa and the like, whatever fruit the mantras are used for, that very fruit comes about; so they are able to make their aged parents young again. Ṛjūyavaḥ, desiring straightness for themselves: free of deceit; that is why the mantras they perform succeed. Viṣṭī, possessed of pervasion: here pervasion means that the power of their mantras meets with no obstacle in any undertaking. Yāska derives the word ṛbhu thus: 'the Ṛbhus shine widely, or shine varta, or are varta' (Ni. 11-15)." (Grammatical tail: yuvānā, yuvan from yu with kanin, initial udātta as nit, ā for the ending by supāṃ suluk...; pitarā, ā as before; satyamantrāḥ, a bahuvrīhi, the first member's accent; ṛju here denotes the quality: "they want straightness for themselves", kyac, lengthening by akṛtsārvadhātukayor dīrghaḥ (Pā. 7-4-25), the suffix u by kyāc chandasi, the suffix accent; viṣṭī, viṣḷ vyāptau, ktic by kticktau ca saṃjñāyām, no iṭ by titutra...; for its jas the ī by the statement iyāḍiyājīkārāṇām upasaṃkhyānam (Pā. 7-1-39-1), coming for the s by alo 'ntyasya (Pā. 1-1-52); when guṇa is made by ād guṇaḥ, the lengthening by prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ (Pā. 6-1-102); if it is said that, overriding it, the short vowel should take guṇa by jasi ca (Pā. 7-3-109) as later, no, since a rule stated with a technical name is not nityа; akrata, luṅ of kṛñ, ātmanepada, at for jha, luk of cli by mantre ghasa... (Pā. 2-4-80), yaṇ, the augment aṭ, wholly unaccented.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

सत्यमन्त्राः (satyamantrāḥ) — possessed of true mantras | ऋजूयवः (ṛjūyavaḥ) — wishing to stay on the straight path | विष्टी (viṣṭī) — possessed of pervasion (by the power of mantras) | ऋभवः (ṛbhavaḥ) — the deities named Ṛbhus | पितरा (pitarā) — (their aged) parents | पुनः (punaḥ) — again | युवाना (yuvānā) — young | अक्रत (akrata) — made.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The Ṛbhus walk only in the good path. So their mantras never go in vain; they always bear fruit. By such power of their mantras they made their aged parents youthful (young).

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> The honest Ribhus repeating true prayers made (their) parents young again by their skilful acts encountering no opposition through their infallible mantras.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

At the time of reciting the vaiśvadeva-śastra mantras, when the mantras to the Ṛbhu deities are recited, this mantra is recited as the second chandoma mantra. This is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra, in the section dvitīyasyāgniṃ vo devam, in the sūtra mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca no yuvānā pitarā punar iti tṛcau (Ā. 8-10).

Yuvānā: yuvānau: youthful, in the age of youth, not in old age.

Pitarā:

स्वकीयौ मातापितरौ

svakīyau mātāpitarau

("Their own mother and father.") Their aged parents.

Punaḥ: again, as they were before in the age of youth.

Satyamantrāḥ:

अवितथमन्त्रसामर्थ्योपेताः । पुरश्चरणाद्यनुष्ठानेन सिद्धमन्त्रत्वाद्यद्यत्फलमुद्दिश्य मन्त्राः प्रयुज्यन्ते तत्तत्फलं तथैव संपद्यते ॥

avitathamantrasāmarthyopetāḥ | puraścaraṇādyanuṣṭhānena siddhamantratvādyadyatphalamuddiśya mantrāḥ prayujyante tattatphalaṃ tathaiva saṃpadyate ||

("Endowed with the power of mantras that never fail; because their mantras are perfected by performing puraścaraṇa and the like, whatever fruit the mantras are used for, that very fruit comes about.") They have gained mastery of the mantras by reciting them with rites such as puraścaraṇa. The intent is that if such men recite a mantra for any intended fruit, that fruit is surely obtained.

Ṛjūyavaḥ:

ऋजुकामाः । ऋजुतामात्मन इच्छन्तः

ṛjukāmāḥ | ṛjutāmātmana icchantaḥ

("Desiring straightness; wishing straightness for themselves.") Those who follow justice or the true path, or who wish to become promoters of the true path.

Ṛbhavaḥ: for the word ṛbhu Yāska gives three kinds of derivation:

ऋभव उरु भान्तीति वा ।

ṛbhava uru bhāntīti vā |

("The Ṛbhus shine widely.") Uru, much; bhānti, they shine: so they are named Ṛbhus. Some think the word rubhu or ṛbhu is formed by joining the last letter ru of uru with the first letter of bhānti, as in ahaḥ + rātriḥ = horā.

ऋतेन भान्तीति वा ।

ṛtena bhāntīti vā |

("They shine by ṛta.") Because they shine by ṛta, that is, by truth or by sacrifice, they are named Ṛbhus.

ऋतेन भवन्तीति वा ।

ṛtena bhavantīti vā |

("They are by ṛta.") Because they exist by ṛta, that is, by truth (by power), that is, they are possessed of power, they are named Ṛbhus. Some say that the first letter ṛ of ṛtena and the first letter bh of bhavanti join to give ṛbhu.

Viṣṭī: viṣṭvī. Since the word viṣṭvī is read among the twenty-six names for action beginning apaḥ, apnaḥ (Ni. 3-1), it means action. To suit the metre the v of viṣṭvī is dropped and it is written viṣṭī. For this word the commentator gives the sense vyāptiyuktāḥ, possessed of pervasion. Pervasion means

> सर्वेषु कार्येष्वेतदीयस्य मन्त्रसामर्थ्यस्याप्रतिघातोऽत्र व्याप्तिरुच्यते
> sarveṣu kāryeṣvetadīyasya mantrasāmarthyasyāpratighāto 'tra vyāptirucyate

("Here pervasion means that the power of their mantras meets with no obstacle in any undertaking.") The sense is: in all undertakings they are unobstructed by the power of their mantras.

This ṛk makes clear the matter that these Ṛbhus were men formerly and later attained divinity:

> विष्वी शमी तरणित्वेन वाघतो मर्तासः सन्तो अमृतत्वमानशुः । सौधन्वना ऋभवः सूरचक्षसः संवत्सरे समपृच्यन्त धीतिभिः ॥ (ऋ. सं. १-११०-४)
> viṣṭvī śamī taraṇitvena vāghato martāsaḥ santo amṛtatvamānaśuḥ | saudhanvanā ṛbhavaḥ sūracakṣasaḥ saṃvatsare samapṛcyanta dhītibhiḥ || (ṛ. saṃ. 1-110-4)

("Having done the acts, the bearers, though mortals, by swiftness attained immortality; the sons of Sudhanvan, the Ṛbhus, sun-eyed, were joined in a year with the rites": mine and tentative.) Yāska's Nirukta on it:

> कृत्वा कर्माणि क्षिप्रत्वेन वोढारो मेधाविनो वा मर्तासः सन्तोऽमृतत्वमानशिरे ऋभवः सूरख्याना वा सूरप्रज्ञा वा संवत्सरे समपृच्यन्त धीतिभिः कर्मभिः ॥
> kṛtvā karmāṇi kṣipratvena voḍhāro medhāvino vā martāsaḥ santo 'mṛtatvamānaśire ṛbhavaḥ sūrakhyānā vā sūraprajñā vā saṃvatsare samapṛcyanta dhītibhiḥ karmabhiḥ ||

("Having done the acts quickly, the bearers or the wise, though mortals, attained immortality, the Ṛbhus, sun-famed or sun-wise; in a year they were joined with the dhītis, the acts": mine and tentative.) The chief intent is: these Ṛbhus, the sons of Sudhanvan, were men formerly. By their wisdom or intelligence, equal to the sun's, they performed all the sacrifices quickly, that is, in a single year, and attained amṛtatvam, divinity (freedom from death).

Yāska gives another sense too for the word ṛbhu:

Ādityaraśmayo 'py ṛbhava ucyante: the sun's rays too are called ṛbhavaḥ. For example:

> उद्वत्स्वस्मा अकृणोतना तृणं निवत्स्वपः स्वपस्यया नरः । अगोह्यस्य यदसस्तना गृहे तदद्येदमृभवो नानु गच्छथ ॥ (ऋ. सं. १-१६१-११)

udvatsvasmā akṛṇotanā tṛṇaṃ nivatsvapaḥ svapasyayā naraḥ | agohyasya yadasastanā gṛhe tadadyedamṛbhavo nānu gacchatha || (ṛ. saṃ. 1-161-11)

("For him on the heights you made grass, on the depths waters, by your good work, O men; when you slept in the house of the one not to be hidden, today you do not go after this, O Ṛbhus": mine and tentative.) For this ṛk Yāska gives the Nirukta

अगोह्य आदित्योऽगूहनीयस्तस्य यदस्वपथ गृहे यावत्तत्र भवथ न तावदिह भवथेति ॥

agohya ādityo 'gūhanīyastasya yadasvapatha gṛhe yāvattatra bhavatha na tāvadiha bhavatheti ||

("The one not to be hidden is the sun, who is not to be concealed; as long as you sleep in his house, so long you are not here": mine and tentative.) The commentator too, explaining the sense of this ṛk, gave for the word ṛbhavaḥ

ऋभवः उरु प्रभूतं भासमानाः ऋतेनादित्येन भासमाना वा ऋतेनोदकेनोदकार्थमुत्पन्ना वा

ṛbhavaḥ uru prabhūtaṃ bhāsamānāḥ ṛtenādityena bhāsamānā vā ṛtenodakenodakārthamutpannā vā

("The Ṛbhus: shining abundantly, or shining by ṛta, the sun, or born by ṛta, water, for the sake of water.")

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 17–19, noted briefly)

युवाना (yuvānā): the root yu miśraṇāmiśraṇayoḥ. By "kaninyuvṛṣitakṣirājidhanvidyupratidivaḥ" (Uṇ. sū. "1-154" [?]), after the roots yu miśraṇe, vṛṣu secane, takṣū tanūkaraṇe, rājṛ dīptau, dhanvi gatau, dyu abhigamane and divu krīḍādau, the suffix kanin comes; so after the root yu the suffix kanin. Yu + an: by "aci śnudhātubhruvāṃ yvor iyaṅuvaṅau" (Pā. sū. 6-4-77) the substitute uvaṅ: yuvan. After it, for the accusative dual suffix auṭ, by the sūtra "supāṃ suluk…" (Pā. sū. 7-1-39) the substitute ā: yuvānā. By the nit accent the word yuvan is initial udātta.

पितरा (pitarā): as before, here too the substitute ā for the ending.

ऋजूयवः (ṛjūyavaḥ): in ṛju a statement with the quality as chief is intended; the sense is ṛjutva, straightness. When ṛjutvam ātmanaḥ icchanti is meant, by "supa ātmanaḥ kyac" (Pā. sū. 3-1-8) (after a subanta denoting the object, the thing that the one who wishes wishes for his own benefit, the suffix kyac comes optionally in the sense of wishing: such is the sense of the sūtra), kyac comes after the subanta ṛju denoting the object; for the suffix am, by "supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ" (Pā. sū. 2-4-71), luk: ṛjuya. Now by "akṛtsārvadhātukayor dīrghaḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-4-25), when a y-initial suffix other than a kṛt or sārvadhātuka follows, a vowel-final aṅga is lengthened. Now by "kyāc chandasi" (Pā. sū. 3-2-170) (kya is a general taking of the three suffixes kyac, kyaṣ, kyaṅ; after a root ending in the suffix kya, in the Veda, in senses such as tācchīlya, the suffix u comes: such is the sense of the sūtra), so when the suffix u comes, ṛjūya + u; by "ato lopaḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-4-48) the loss of a: ṛjūyu. The suffix accent comes; in the nominative plural, ṛjūyavaḥ

विष्टी (viṣṭī): viṣḷ vyāptau. By "kticktau ca saṃjñāyām" (Pā. sū. 3-3-174), when a blessing is meant and a name is to be expressed, the suffixes ktic and kta come after the root: so the suffix ktic. Viṣ + ti: here the augment iṭ would be due for ti by "ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-2-35); but since by "titutratathasisusarakaseṣu ca" (Pā. sū. 7-2-9) these ten kṛt suffixes do not take the augment iṭ, the bar comes, so iṭ does not come. By "ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ" (Pā. sū. 8-4-41) ṭ for the t. After the word viṣṭi the ending jas is added. For it, by "iyāḍiyājīkārāṇām upasaṃkhyānam" (Pā. sū. 7-1-39 vā. 1), the three substitutes iyā, ḍiyāc and ī come for a sup; so here the substitute ī. By "alo 'ntyasya" (Pā. sū. 1-1-52), what is enjoined naming a word in the sixth case comes to the last letter of the word denoted by the sixth: so it comes for the s, the last letter of jas. Viṣṭi + a + ī. By "ād guṇaḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-1-87) guṇa: viṣṭi + e. By "prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-1-102), when the vowel of a nominative or accusative ending follows after a, i, u, ṛ, ḷ, in place of the former and latter the lengthening of the former like vowel comes as a single substitute: so for i + e the former-like lengthening gives viṣṭī. But when jas follows, besides the lengthening, guṇa is also due by "jasi ca" (Pā. sū. 7-3-109), guṇa coming after an aṅga ending in a short ik before jas. By rule, by "vipratiṣedhe paraṃ kāryam" (Pā. sū. 1-4-2), guṇa alone should come; yet by "saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ" (paribhāṣā "95", zoom-checked: the 9-glyph then the lobed 5) the guṇa rule, stated with the technical names short and guṇa, is not nitya, so it does not come. Here, even without justifying the application of the guṇas ī substitute and ād guṇaḥ, in the way stated before, since the guṇa-enjoining jasi ca is not nitya, it does not apply. If it is said that the former-like lengthening comes, the visarga would have to be heard: viṣṭīḥ.

अक्रत (akrata): the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe. Luṅ: kṛ + luṅ; by "cli luṅi" (Pā. sū. 3-1-43) cli comes. The c is called it and dropped; li remains. For it, by "mantre ghasahvaraṇaśavṛdahādvṛckṛgamijanibhyo leḥ" (Pā. sū. 2-4-80): ghasḷ substituted for the root ad, and hvṛ kauṭilye, with guṇa and the a for pronunciation, as hvara, are mentioned; ṇaśa adarśane; vṛ, by its mention without indicatory letters, takes both vṛñ varaṇe and vṛṅ saṃbhaktau; daha bhasmīkaraṇe; by āt, the ā-final roots such as prā pūraṇe are mentioned; vṛjī varjane, ḍukṛñ karaṇe, gamḷ gatau, janī prādurbhāve: after these, for the li, in the mantra, luk comes; so luk comes. Kṛ + luṅ: for the luṅ, the ātmanepada 3rd plural jha. Kṛ + jha: by "ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-1-5) at for the jh. Kṛ + ata: by "iko yaṇ aci" (Pā. sū. 6-1-77) the substitute yaṇ; by "luṅlaṅlṛṅkṣv aḍ udāttaḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-4-71) the augment aṭ: akrata. By "tiṅṅatiṅaḥ" (Pā. sū. 8-1-28) wholly unaccented.

> O Ribhus, the exhilerating [sic] Soma juices are ready to be offered to you along with Indra accompanied by the Maruths [sic] and along with the brilliant Adityas.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

At the evening rite called the third pressing, when the soma juice is pressed and offered to the Ṛbhus, it is offered addressing Indra accompanied by the Ādityas, the Ṛbhus, Ṛbhu, Vibhu and Vāja, Bṛhaspati and the Viśvadevas. This is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra:

> इन्द्रमादित्यवन्तमृभुमन्तं विभुमन्तं वाजवन्तं बृहस्पतिमन्तं विश्वदेव्यावन्तमावह (आ. ५-३)

indramādityavantamṛbhumantaṃ vibhumantaṃ vājavantaṃ bṛhaspatimantaṃ viśvadevyāvantamāvaha (ā. 5-3)

Saṃ agmata: Skandasvāmin explains these words as saṃgacchadhvam, that is, "come for the drinking of soma".

Madāsaḥ:

माद्यन्त्येभिरिति मदाः मदहेतवः सोमाः ।

mādyantyebhiriti madāḥ madahetavaḥ somāḥ |

("They are exhilarated by them: madāḥ, the soma juices, causes of exhilaration.") Because the drinking of soma produces exhilaration, the soma juice is called madāsaḥ.

Marutvatā:

मरुतोऽस्य सन्तीति मरुत्वान् । मरुद्भिर्युक्तेन ।

maruto 'sya santīti marutvān | marudbhiryuktena |

("He has Maruts: marutvān; joined with the Maruts.") Accompanied by the Marut deities (together with Indra).

Ādityebhiḥ: for the word āditya Yāska gives this derivation too (Ni. 2-13):

आदित्यः कस्मादादत्ते रसानादत्ते भासं ज्योतिषामादीप्तो भासेति वादितेः पुत्र इति वा ॥

ādityaḥ kasmādādatte rasānādatte bhāsaṃ jyotiṣāmādīpto bhāseti vāditeḥ putra iti vā ||

(1) Ādityaḥ kasmād ādatte rasān: ādatta iti ādityaḥ: one who takes, who receives, or who draws: this is the sense of the word āditya. Takes what? Rasān, that is, he draws the water through his rays. The water drawn in this way produces rain in the form of clouds. So, because he draws water through his rays from water-bodies such as the ocean, he is named Āditya.

(2) Athavā ādatte bhāsaṃ jyotiṣām: because, when the sun rises, the sun's light lowers the light of all other things (such as the moon) and draws that light, he is named Āditya.

(3) Athavā ādīpto bhāseti vā: because he shines in all places, or covering all around, he is named Āditya.

(4) Athavā aditeḥ putra iti vā: because he is the son of the goddess Aditi, mother of the gods, he is named Āditya.

Rājabhiḥ:

दीप्यमानैः ।

dīpyamānaiḥ |

("Shining.") Shining, "brilliant, shining &c." [as printed].

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 22–23, noted briefly)

मदासः (madāsaḥ): mādyati ebhir iti madāḥ somāḥ: by these soma juices one obtains joy; so madāḥ is a name of soma. The root madī harṣe. By "mado 'nupasarge" (Pā. sū. 3-3-67), when a subanta other than a preverb is the upapada, the suffix ap comes after the root mad; when ap comes, mad + a. The suffix has p as it, so it is unaccented; the root accent alone remains. After the word mada, when the nominative plural jas is added, mada + jas: by "āj jaser asuk" (Pā. sū. 7-1-50) the augment asuk for the jas after an aṅga ending in short a. Being kit, by the paribhāṣā "ādyantau ṭakitau" (Pā. sū. 1-1-46) it comes as an end-part with jas (as printed: ಅಂತಾವಯವಾಗಿ). Mada + asas: lengthening of the former like vowel; ru and visarga: madāsaḥ.

अग्मत (agmata): after the root gamḷ gatau preceded by the preverb sam, luṅ. Gam + luṅ: in "samo gamyṛcchibhyām" (Pā. sū. 1-3-29) "akarmakāc ca" (Pā. sū. 1-3-26) and, by "anudāttaṅita ātmanepadam" (Pā. sū. 1-3-12), ātmanepadam are carried on. After the roots gam and ṛ, preceded by the preverb sam and intransitive, in place of the l comes the ātmanepada; so in place of luṅ, when the 3rd plural is meant, the substitute jha named ātmanepada comes. Gam + cli + jha: by "ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-1-5) at for the jh; by "mantre ghasahvaraṇa…" (Pā. sū. 2-4-80) luk for cli. Gam + ata: now by "gamahanajanakhanaghasāṃ lopaḥ kṅity anaṅi" (Pā. sū. 6-4-98), when a vowel-initial suffix that is kit or ṅit follows, the penultimate letter of the roots gam and the rest drops; but when aṅ follows, this loss does not come; so the a of the root gam drops; the augment aṭ: agmata. By "te prāg dhātoḥ" (Pā. sū. 1-4-80) the *gati*s and preverbs must be used immediately before the root; so sam should be used directly. Yet by "chandasi pare 'pi" (Pā. sū. 1-4-81) and "vyavahitāś ca" (Pā. sū. 1-4-82), in the Veda the *gati*s and preverbs also come after the root and separated from it; so here sam is used separated. By "tiṅṅatiṅaḥ" it is wholly unaccented.

आदित्येभिः (ādityebhiḥ): by "bahulaṃ chandasi" (Pā. sū. 7-1-10) the substitute ais for bhis does not come. By "bahuvacane jhaly et" (Pā. sū. 7-3-103) e comes.

राजभिः (rājabhiḥ): the root rājṛ dīptau. By "kaninyuvṛṣitakṣirājidhanvidyupratidivaḥ" (Uṇ. sū. "1-154" [?]) the suffix kanin is nit; so by the nit accent rājan is initial udātta. After it the instrumental plural bhis; by "svādiṣv asarvanāmasthāne" (Pā. sū. 1-4-17) the pada name; by "nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya" the n drops; ru and visarga: rājabhiḥ.

Translation: "Uta, and also: the carving work belonged to the god named Tvaṣṭṛ. He made (is to be supplied) tyam, that, navam, new, camasa, a particular wooden vessel able to hold soma, niṣkṛtam, produced completely. The Ṛbhus, the pupils of Tvaṣṭṛ, who was skilled in carving, akarta, made that one camasa made by him catur, four, punaḥ, again: they made camasas divided four ways. This sense of making one into four is plain in another mantra too: 'Make the one camasa four' (Ṛgveda 1-161-2)." (Grammatical tail: navam, ṇu stutau, "it is praised": navam, the suffix ap in the object sense; being the exception to ghañ, it comes wherever ghañ would; and ghañ comes by akartari ca kārake saṃjñāyām (Pā. 3-3-19) in every kāraka other than the agent; though a name is mentioned there, since ca serves to allow departure from the name, it comes even without a name, as in saṃbandhaḥ, "it is bound", ghañ in the object sense; tvaṣṭuḥ, takṣū tvakṣū tanūkaraṇe, the Uṇādi ṭṛn, no iṭ in one alternative as the root is ūdit (Pā. 7-2-44), the k dropped by skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca (Pā. 8-2-29); niṣkṛtam, kta in the object sense after kṛñ with nis, in the prādi compound ṣ by nityaṃ samāse 'nuttarapadasthasya (Pā. 8-3-45); here the genitive due by kartṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti (Pā. 2-3-65) is barred by na lokāvyaya... (Pā. 2-3-69), and the instrumental would be due by kartṛkaraṇayos tṛtīyā (Pā. 2-3-18); yet since the agent is meant as a residue, the genitive of residue comes, as when the object is meant as a residue (Pā. 2-3-50), māṣāṇām aśnīyāt; nis udātta by gatir anantaraḥ; akarta, = akṛṣata, luṅ of kṛñ, ta for jha by exchange, luk of cli by mantre ghasa...; by chandasy ubhayathā the tiṅ is ārdhadhātuka, so not ṅit, and guṇa comes; caturaḥ, the u udātta by catur aḥ śasi (Pā. 6-1-167); punaḥ, read as initial udātta in the svar-ādi.)

> Besides, the Ribhus again made into four that new ladle, the work of the divine Twastri.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

Tvaṣṭṛ is famed as the carpenter of the gods ("Twashtri is the carpenter or artisan of the gods" [as printed]). Since the implements of sacrifice, the means used in rites such as sacrifice, are most necessary, Tvaṣṭṛ, who makes them, has an excellent place among the gods. The Ṛbhus are pupils of this Tvaṣṭṛ, the craftsman of the gods. This ṛk praises the power of these Ṛbhus, saying that they made into four the one sacrificial vessel called camasa that their teacher had made.

Uta: and, besides; that is, apart from what was said before, another matter is this.

Tyam: tam, that.

Camasam: a wooden vessel shaped like a ladle, used in the sacrifice for drinking soma.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 25–30, noted briefly)

नवम् (navam): the root ṇu stutau. By "ṇo naḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-1-65) n for the ṇ at the start of the root. In "ṛdor ap" (Pā. sū. 3-3-57), ṝ ca u ca anayoḥ samāhāraḥ ṝduḥ: if the samāhāra-dvandva compound is made, since the collection is one, the singular alone comes. But by "sa napuṃsakam" (Pā. sū. 2-4-17), in a samāhāra compound both the dvigu and the dvandva take the neuter; so here the neuter should properly come. Yet since it is a sūtra, the masculine has come, passing over this rule. In the genitive singular it becomes ṛdoḥ. Here the genitive has come in the sense of the ablative; or this is ablative-final. So the sense of the sūtra is that after roots ending in ṝ and in u

the suffix ap comes, both in the sense of the action and in the senses of the kārakas other than the agent. So, since the root nu ends in u, the suffix ap comes after it in the kāraka sense of the object. Ṛdor ap is the exception to the sūtra enjoining ghañ, "puṃsi saṃjñāyāṃ ghaḥ prāyeṇa" (Pā. sū. "3-3-19" [as printed, for 3-3-118]). So, since the suffix ap comes in whatever senses the suffix ghañ comes, its application in the senses of the action and of the kārakas other than the agent is established. In the same way, since the sūtra enjoining ghañ says saṃjñāyām, since ghañ comes only when a name is to be expressed, it is natural that the exception ap too should come only when there is a name. But in the ghañ rule the ca in akartari ca is construed with saṃjñāyāṃ ca; thus it is established that ghañ comes both when a name is to be expressed and, by the ca, when it is not. So there is no obstacle to the exception ap coming whether a name is expressed or not. This point is set out in the Vedabhāṣya as "cakārasya saṃjñāvyabhicārārthatvād asaṃjñāyām api bhavaty eva". For this very reason authorities describe the suffix ghañ in the object sense after the root bandh preceded by sam in saṃbadhyate iti saṃbandhaḥ. With nu + a, by “sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ” (Pā. sū. 7-3-84) guṇa: o; the substitute av; when the accusative singular am is added, by “ami pūrvaḥ” (Pā. sū. 6-1-107) the pūrvarūpa comes: navam.

त्वष्टुः (tvaṣṭuḥ): the root takṣū tvakṣū tanūkaraṇe. After it, by “tṛn tṛcau śaṃsikṣadādibhyaḥ saṃjñāyāṃ cāniṭau” (Uṇ. sū. “2-251”, zoom-checked: the printed number is 2-251, not 2-51), the Uṇādi suffix tṛn comes: tvakṣ + tṛ; or by “bahulam anyatrāpi” (Uṇ. sū. “2-252”, zoom-checked; the last digit smudged) tṛn. In this alternative, since the root is ūdit, for the ārdhadhātuka after it, by “svaratisūtisūyatidhūñūdito vā” (Pā. sū. 7-2-44) the augment iṭ is optional; so in the alternative the augment iṭ does not come here. By “skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca” (Pā. sū. 8-2-29), at the end of a pada and before a conjunct, the s and k-class letters at the start of a conjunct drop; so the k drops: tvaṣ + tṛ; by “ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-4-41) ṭutva: tvaṣṭṛ. When the genitive singular suffix ṅas [as printed: “jas”] is added, tvaṣṭṛ + as: by “ṛta ut” (Pā. sū. 6-1-111), when ṅasi or ṅas follow a ṛ-final word, in place of former and latter, as a single substitute, ut, that is, a short u, comes; so the substitute u; by “uraṇ raparaḥ” (Pā. sū. 1-1-51) it comes followed by r; by “rāt sasya” (Pā. sū. 8-2-24) only the s at the end of a conjunct after r drops: so the s drops: tvaṣṭur, visarga: tvaṣṭuḥ.

निष्कृतम् (niṣkṛtam): after the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe preceded by the preverb nis, the suffix kta in the object sense. By “kugatiprādayaḥ” (Pā. sū. 2-2-18) the prādi compound of the two, nis + kṛtam. For the s, by “sasajuṣo ruḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-2-66), ru. By “kharavasānayor visarjanīyaḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-3-15), when khar follows, visarga for the r: niḥkṛtam. Now by “nityaṃ samāse ’nuttarapadasthasya” (Pā. sū. 8-3-45), when the k-class or p-class follows, ṣ comes for a visarga belonging to is or us not in the final member: so ṣ: niṣkṛtam. The starting of the sūtra nityaṃ samāse, according to the Bhāṣya verse-vārttika “pratiṣedhārthas tu yatno ’yam” (Pā. sū. 8-3-45, śloka-vā. 4), is established to have come in order to bar the ṣ for the visarga of is and us standing in the final member in a compound.

> प्रतिषेधार्थस्तु यत्नोऽयम्
> pratiṣedhārthastu yatno ’yam

(“This effort is for the purpose of barring.”) Likewise in the sūtra “isusoḥ sāmarthye” (Pā. sū. 8-3-44), from

> नानापदार्थयोर्वर्तमानयोः ख्यायते यदा योगः तस्मिन्षत्वं कार्यं तद्युक्तं तच्चमे नेह
> nānāpadārthayorvartamānayoḥ khyāyate yadā yogaḥ tasminṣatvaṃ kāryaṃ tadyuktaṃ taccame neha

(Pā. sū. 8-3-44, vā. 1) it is learnt that the capacity in the form of mutual expectancy of words conveying various things is to be included here. In accordance with this definition, in the compound paramasarpiṣkuṇḍikā, because such capacity of expectancy is lacking, the optional ṣ by the sūtra “isusoḥ” does not come: that is the sense of the vārttika. So the capacity of expectancy alone is meant; therefore in the compound niṣkṛtam, since that capacity is lacking, the optional ṣ by “isusoḥ” cannot come. By “idudupadhasya cāpratyayasya” (Pā. sū. 8-3-41), when the k-class or p-class follows, ṣ comes for a visarga that has i or u as penultimate and does not belong to a suffix; by this alone the ṣ comes. That is why in places such as niṣpratyūham the ṣ is justified by idudupadhasya itself. Some divide the sūtra nityaṃ samāse into two, nityaṃ samāse as one sūtra and anuttarapadasthasya as a second. In the divided second sūtra the word samāse is to be construed. So, explaining that in a compound the visarga in the final member does not take ṣ, all ṣ due to the visarga in a final member is barred; so they explain that, though in isusoḥ sāmarthye both capacities, single meaning and expectancy, are meant, in paramasarpiṣkuṇḍikā the bar anuttarapadasthasya comes, so the optional ṣ does not come, and there is no fault. On their view, in niṣkṛtam, overriding idudupadhasya, if the optional ṣ by isusoḥ is due, the ṣ here must be justified by nityaṃ samāse to prevent it. But this is not accepted by the Mahābhāṣya. So here the description of the ṣ by idudupadhasya is right. In devasya niṣkṛtam, by "kartṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti" (Pā. sū. 2-3-65), when there is connection with a kṛdanta word, the genitive comes after a stem denoting the agent or object defined by the action denoted by the kṛt-final; since deva denotes the agent defined by the root kṛ, the base of the suffix kta in the object sense, the genitive would be due after it. But for this, by "na lokāvyayaniṣṭhākhalartha-tṛnām" (Pā. sū. 2-3-69), la is a general taking of all the la-forms laṭ and the rest; since laṭ and the rest are not used directly, la takes the substitutes of la. The substitutes of la, the u-final kṛt suffixes: since u qualifies kṛtaḥ, by "yena vidhis tadantasya" (Pā. sū. 1-1-72) the tadanta is obtained; if it is explained as taking only the suffix u, in places such as hariṃ alaṃkariṣṇuḥ the suffix iṣṇuc and the like would not be taken; where only the suffix u has come, it becomes a kṛdanta by vyapadeśivadbhāva. U, uka, indeclinables, the niṣṭhā in the form of the suffixes kta and ktavatu, the khal-sense suffixes, and tṛn: in "laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau…" (Pā. sū. 3-2-124) the pratyāhāra beginning with the tṛ there and ending with the n in tṛn: when there is use with these, there is the bar that the genitive does not come; so here the genitive is not due. Yet here we intend the agent as a residue. Śeṣa means uktād anyaḥ śeṣaḥ: the relations such as owner-and-owned other than the kārakas and the sense of the stem. The kārakas such as agent and the sense of the stem were stated before the beginning of the sūtra "ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe" (Pā. sū. 2-3-50). The relations such as owner-and-owned have not been stated; so they are other than what was stated. The sense of the sūtra ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe is that the genitive comes in such a sense, the residue. In the present case, if intended as agent, since the bar na loka… comes, the genitive of the agent does not come by kartṛkarmaṇoḥ; then, by "kartṛkaraṇayos tṛtīyā" (Pā. sū. 2-3-18), the instrumental comes after a stem denoting the agent or instrument not expressed by tiṅ, kṛt, taddhita or compound; so the instrumental would have to come; if, not meaning it as agent, it is meant as residue, since there is no intent of denoting the agent, the instrumental of the agent does not come; since there is the intent of residue, the genitive alone comes by ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe. On this point we give a traditional example: māṣāṇām aśnīyāt, one should eat beans. Here, for māṣa, by "kartur īpsitatamaṃ karma" (Pā. sū. 1-4-49),

(as printed), the name object applies. For example, the root in question is the root aś; its sense is the activity conducive to contact below the throat.

Page 29 — Rik 6: grammar

By this activity the fruit in the form of contact below the throat arises for the beans. Since in the beans there is no activity conducive to contact, the fruit in the form of contact residing in them is in a locus other than the activity. Thus, the root in question, the root aś; the activity presented by it as principal, the activity conducive to contact below the throat; the fruit impelled by that activity and residing in a locus other than the activity, the fruit in the form of contact below the throat; the wish for excess whose mode is relation to that, the wish of the form

māṣāḥ madgaḷabilādhassaṃyuktā bhavantu

(“May the beans be joined below the throat”): since the beans have the substrate of qualificand-hood defined by such a wish, they get the name object. So by “karmaṇi dvitīyā” (Pā. sū. 2-3-2), the accusative comes after a stem denoting the object not expressed by tiṅ and the rest; so the accusative comes: māṣān aśnīyāt. If the object is meant as residue, the genitive comes by ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe: māṣāṇām aśnīyāt. In the same way here too, if the agent is meant as residue, there is no obstacle to the genitive coming in the way said before. By “vivakṣātaḥ kārakāṇi bhavanti” the kārakas come according to intention; so one may intend according to the usage to be explained. Here, if agency is intended, the instrumental would have to come; so we intend the agent as residue. Thus the genitive is justified. By “gatir anantaraḥ” (Pā. sū. 6-2-49), when a kta-final in the object sense follows, a word called gati standing immediately before keeps its own accent; so the own accent of nis, udātta, remains after compounding too. By “upasargāś cābhivarjam” (Phi. sū. 81) nis is initial udātta.

अकर्त (akarta): the sense is akṛṣata. The root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; after it, luṅ, the ātmanepada 3rd plural substitute jha. For the jh, though the substitute at is due by “ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ” (Pā. sū. 7-1-5), here by “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. sū. 3-1-85) the substitute t comes; for the cli come by “cli luṅi” (Pā. sū. 3-1-43), by “mantre ghasahvaraṇaśavṛdahādvṛckṛgamijanibhyo leḥ” (Pā. sū. 2-4-80), luk; the augment aṭ: akṛ + ta. By “tiṅ śit sārvadhātukam” (Pā. sū. 3-4-113), the eighteen suffixes tip, tas and the rest stated in the section on roots, and the suffixes with ś as it, are called sārvadhātuka; so ta has the name sārvadhātuka, and it is not pit. So by “sārvadhātukam apit” (Pā. sū. 1-2-4) it becomes ṅit. Thus, since by “kṅiti ca” (Pā. sū. 1-1-5) the bar to the ik-guṇa comes, the question how guṇa comes here cannot fail to arise. Yet by “chandasy ubhayathā” (Pā. sū. 3-4-117) the suffixes enjoined in the section on roots get in the Veda both names, sārvadhātuka and ārdhadhātuka, so here ta gets the name ārdhadhātuka, not the name sārvadhātuka. So it does not become ṅit by sārvadhātukam apit; therefore the bar to guṇa does not come. Thus guṇa comes by “sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ” (Pā. sū. 7-3-84). Since it comes in place of ṛ, it comes followed by r: akarta.

चतुरः (caturaḥ): by “cater uran” (Uṇ. sū. “5-236”, zoom-checked: 5, then 2, 3, hooked 6) the suffix uran comes after catī yācane; so after the root cat the suffix uran; in the suffix the a is for pronunciation: catur. This is initial udātta by the nit accent. When after it the accusative plural suffix śas is added, by “catur aḥ śasi” (Pā. sū. 6-1-167), when the śas ending follows, the end of the word catur is udātta: so the u is udātta.

May the Ṛbhus, satisfied by our hymns, grant one by one to the sacrificer who prepares and gives the soma juice gems of three kinds, best, middling and lowest, and the three groups, each with seven rites.

> Confer, therefore, Ribhus, moved by our praises, the three-fold riches upon our sacrificer, one by one ; accomplish the thrice seven-fold works (Sacrifices).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

At the time of reciting the vaiśvadeva-śastra mantras, this ṛk and the next are recited as the third chandoma mantras. This is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra, in the section tṛtīyasyāganma maha, in the sūtra indra iṣe dadātu naḥ (Ṛ. saṃ. 8-93-34) te no ratnāni dhattanety ekā dve ca (Ā. 8-11).

In this ṛk the power and abilities of the Ṛbhu deities are not described; it is a prayer that they grant to the sacrificer who performs the sacrifice wealth such as gems and the fruits of rites such as sacrifices.

Trirā sāptāni: three sevens, that is, seven repeated three times, or twenty-one. In the order of sacrifices there are chiefly twenty-one kinds of sacrifice. They are divided in three ways.

Since in these rites what is chiefly offered to the gods is havis, they are called haviryajñas. The seven rites agnyādheya, agnihotra, darśapūrṇamāsa, āgrayaṇa, cāturmāsya, dākṣāyaṇa-yajña and sautrāmaṇī belong to this group (Ai. Brā. Bhā. They are also called gṛhya rites. In them what is chiefly offered to the gods is grain. The seven, aupāsana, vaiśvadeva, pārvaṇa, aṣṭakā, māsiśrāddha, sarpabali and īśānabali, belong to this group (according to Dhūrtasvāmin's commentary on the Āpastamba Paribhāṣāsūtra).

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 33–37, noted briefly)

रत्नानि (ratnāni): the root ramu krīḍāyām. By the sūtra "rameś ta ca" (Uṇ. sū. "3-294", zoom-checked; the bhāṣya on p. 31 prints this sūtra as 3-14), from "kṛvṛjasidrupanyanisvapibhyo nit" (Uṇ. sū. "3-290", zoom-checked) the word nit is carried on. Rameḥ is a statement of the ṇyanta. The sense of the sūtra is that after the root ram ending in ṇic the suffix na comes; it is nit, and t comes as the final substitute for the root ram. Here, from "dhāpṛvasyajyatibhyo naḥ" (Uṇ. sū. "3-286", zoom-checked), naḥ is carried on. By this sūtra, when the suffix na comes after the ṇyanta root ram, t for the m: rat + i + na. With ṇic made after the root ram, ram + i: by "ata upadhāyāḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-2-116) the penultimate vṛddhi: rām + i + na; by "janījṝṣknasurañjo 'mantāś ca" (Dhā. ga. 2 [as read]), janī prādurbhāve, jṝṣ vayohānau, knasu hvaraṇadīptyoḥ, rañja rāge, both the div-ādi and bhv-ādi ones being taken; those ending in am are mit, so it is mit. By "mitāṃ hrasvaḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-4-92), when ṇi follows, the penultimate of what is called mit is shortened: shortened. Now with the suffix na and the substitute t, rat + i + na; by "ṇer aniṭi" (Pā. sū. 6-4-51), when an ārdhadhātuka without iṭ follows, ṇi drops: so ṇi drops: ratna. The suffix being nit, by "ñnityādir nityam" (Pā. sū. 6-1-197) it is initial udātta. The word ratna, in the accusative plural, becomes ratnāni.

धत्तन (dhattana): the sense is dhatta. The root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ. After it the loṭ 2nd plural suffix tha: dhā + tha. By "kartari śap" (Pā. sū. 3-1-68) the vikaraṇa śap. For it, by "juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ" (Pā. sū. 2-4-75), ślu (loss); by "ślau" (Pā. sū. 6-1-10), in places where loss has come naming ślu, the root is doubled: doubling: dhādhā + tha; by "hrasvaḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-4-59) the abhyāsa is shortened; by "abhyāse carca" (Pā. sū. 8-4-54) jaś d for the dh: dadhā + tha. By "ī haly aghoḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-4-113), when a consonant-initial sārvadhātuka suffix that is kit or ṅit follows, ī is substituted for the ā of śnā and of abhyasta stems not called ghu; but here the ī substitute does not come. For by "dādhā ghv adāp" (Pā. sū. 1-1-20), roots of the forms dā and dhā, except daip and dāp, are called ghu; so the root dhā is called ghu, and in ī haly aghoḥ there is the bar aghoḥ. So the ī does not come. By "śnābhyastayor ātaḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-4-112), when a kit or ṅit sārvadhātuka suffix follows, the ā of śnā and of an abhyasta drops: the loss: dadh + tha. By "loṭo laṅvat" (Pā. sū. 3-4-85) the loṭ is treated as laṅ. By "tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ" (Pā. sū. 3-4-101), in place of tas, thas, tha, mip that came in place of a ṅit l, tām, tam, ta, am come respectively: so ta for tha: dadh + ta. By "dadhas tathoś ca" (Pā. sū. 8-2-38), when t, th, s, dhv follow, the ba-class letters of the root dhāñ, doubled and ending in jhaṣ, take bhaṣ: so dh for the first d: dhadh + ta. Here a doubt arises: when bhaṣ is made, the loss is sthānivat by "acaḥ parasmin pūrvavidhau" (Pā. sū. 1-1-57), so the root is thought of as ā-final, and there is no doubled dhā ending in jhaṣ; how does bhaṣ come? Here Vāmana and Mādhavācārya say that by force of the enjoining of bhaṣ, the sthānivadbhāva does not come. Others again say that in "pūrvatrāsiddhīye na sthānivat" there is the bar to sthānivadbhāva when the rules of the section pūrvatrāsiddham (Pā. sū. 8-2-1) are made; since the bhaṣ rule is of the tripādī, when it is made the sthānivadbhāva is barred; so the sthānivadbhāva does not come. Thus, since the doubled jhaṣ-final root dhā is found, there is no obstacle to bhaṣ by dadhas tathoś ca. Dhadh + ta: by “khari ca” (Pā. sū. 8-4-55), when a khar letter follows, car letters for the jhal letters: car: dhatta. Now by “taptanaptanathanāś ca” (Pā. sū. 7-1-45), for the t that came as the substitute for the loṭ 2nd plural, the substitutes tap, tanap, tana, thana come; so the substitute tana for ta: dhattana. By “tiṅṅatiṅaḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-1-28) it is wholly unaccented.

साप्तानि (sāptāni): by “saptano ’ñ chandasi” (Pā. sū. 5-1-61), after a first-case fit word whose base is the stem saptan, the suffix añ comes in the sense “tatparimāṇam asya vargasya”; so when saptaparimāṇam asya vargasya is meant, the suffix añ comes after saptan + su. Being taddhita-final, it gets the name prātipadika, and the sup that is part of the stem takes luk by “supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ” (Pā. sū. 2-4-71): saptan + a. Now by “nas taddhite” (Pā. sū. 6-4-144), when a taddhita suffix follows, the ṭi that is part of an n-final aṅga called bha drops; so an drops: sapt + a. In vowel-final words the last vowel, and in consonant-final words the penultimate vowel together with the final consonant, are called ṭi: this sense is stated by “aco ’ntyādi ṭi” (Pā. sū. 1-1-64). By “yaci bham” (Pā. sū. 1-4-18) what stands immediately before the svādi suffixes with the initials y or a vowel, not in the section kap and not sarvanāmasthāna, is called bha. By “yasmāt pratyayavidhis tadādi pratyaye ’ṅgam”, after whatever base a suffix is enjoined, the word beginning with that base is called aṅga when that suffix follows: the name aṅga is enjoined. The suffix has ñ as it. So the initial vṛddhi and the initial udātta accent both come. The initial vṛddhi by “taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ” (Pā. sū. 7-2-117): when a taddhita suffix that has ñ or ṇ as it follows, vṛddhi comes to the first vowel among the vowels of that word: so it is enjoined. Here the a after the s takes the vṛddhi ā: sāp + a = sāpta. By “ñnityādir nityam” (Pā. sū. 6-1-197) initial udātta is enjoined; the natural sense of sāpta is a group limited to the number seven. But here, by figurative indication, the sense “belonging to groups limited to seven” is intended. So the plural is justified. Otherwise, one group repeated three times, so, the group being one, the singular would have to come. After sāpta, the accusative plural śas: sāpta + śas; by “jaśśasoḥ śiḥ” (Pā. sū. 7-1-20) śi for śas; by “śi sarvanāmasthānam” (Pā. sū. 1-1-42) śi gets the name sarvanāmasthāna.

So śi has the name sarvanāmasthāna. Therefore by “napuṃsakasya jhalacaḥ” (Pā. sū. 7-1-72), when a sarvanāmasthāna follows, a neuter word ending in jhal or a vowel takes the augment num: the augment num. Sāpta + n + i: by “sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau” (Pā. sū. 6-4-8) lengthening: sāptāni.

सुन्वते (sunvate): the root ṣuñ abhiṣave; by “dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ” (Pā. sū. 6-1-64) s for ṣ; laṭ; by “laṭaḥ śatṛ…” (Pā. sū. 3-2-124) the suffix śatṛ; by “svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ” (Pā. sū. 3-1-73) the vikaraṇa śnu: su + nu + at. By “huśnuvoḥ sārvadhātuke” the substitute yaṇ: sunvat. After it the dative singular ṅe: sunvat + e. Here, though the suffix śatṛ stands after the suffix śnu, which is ṅit by the extension “sārvadhātukam apit” (Pā. sū. 1-2-4), so that one might say śatṛ should be unaccented by “tāsyanudātteṅid…” (Pā. sū. 6-1-186), in the sūtra tāsyanudāttet the ṅit meant is one by original statement; śnu is not ṅit by original statement. So śatṛ is not unaccented; by the suffix accent it is initial udātta. Thus by “śatur anumo nadyajādī” (Pā. sū. 6-1-173), after a word ending in a śatṛ suffix that has no augment num and is final udātta, the letters called nadī and the vowel-initial endings from śas on are udātta; so the suffix ṅe gets the udātta accent.

एकमेकम् (ekam ekam): “nityavīpsayoḥ” (Pā. sū. 8-1-4): from the Mahābhāṣya on this sūtra (“tiṅavyayeṣu tasyedaṃ grahaṇam” [as read]) the sense of the word nityа is ābhīkṣṇyа, that is, repetition; vīpsā means the wish to pervade. This is a word with both derivation and convention. When the speaker, not having the mutual connection, that is, togetherness, uses a sentence that conveys at once the pervasion of things having separate number, by an action or by a quality, then the particular wish residing in that speaker is indicated by the doubling: this point is clear in Kaiyaṭa, explaining the Bhāṣya

> वीप्स्यं कर्ता भवति
> vīpsyaṃ kartā bhavati

(“The thing to be pervaded is the agent”):

> अत्र प्रयोक्ता कर्ता विवक्षितः यदा पृथक्संख्यायुक्तानितरेतरयोगमप्राप्तान्सर्वानर्थान् क्रियया गुणेन वा युगपद्व्याप्नुवन्वाक्यं वक्ति तदा स वक्तृस्थ इच्छाविशेषो द्विर्वचनेन द्योत्यः
> atra prayoktā kartā vivakṣitaḥ yadā pṛthaksaṃkhyāyuktānitaretarayogamaprāptānsarvānarthān kriyayā guṇena vā yugapadvyāpnuvanvākyaṃ vakti tadā sa vaktṛstha icchāviśeṣo dvirvacanena dyotyaḥ

(“Here the user is meant as agent: when he speaks a sentence pervading at once, by an action or a quality, all things having separate number and not reaching mutual connection, then that particular wish residing in the speaker is to be indicated by doubling.”) If the sense in the form of the wish to pervade is meant, in places such as cikīrṣati the wish to pervade jars and the like by actions such as karoti is what cikīrṣati conveys; so there is no room for the doubt that it too should be doubled. For here, though cikīrṣati conveys a wish to pervade, this wish is not the particular wish residing in the user stated before.

So in places such as cikīrṣati there is no room for doubling. “Sarvasya dve” (Pā. sū. 8-1-1) is the heading here; “padasya” (Pā. sū. 8-1-16) is drawn in here. Thus for the sūtra the sense is: when repetition or the wish to pervade is indicated, in place of the whole word doubling comes. In ekam ekam, by the sūtra just stated, doubling comes when pervasion is indicated. By this, the action in the form of giving presented by the word dhattana in question is construed with each individual. After the root iṇ gatau, by “iṇbhīkāpāśalyatimarcibhyaḥ kan” (Uṇ. sū. “3-323”, zoom-checked; printed with a gap in place of the hyphen), after iṇ gatau, ñibhī bhaye, kai śabde, pā pāne, śala gatau, ata sātatyagamane, marca śabde the suffix kan comes; so kan. I + ka, guṇa: eka; the suffix being nit, eka is initial udātta by the nit accent ñnityādir nityam. The second word eka has the name āmreḍita by “tasya param āmreḍitam” (Pā. sū. 8-1-2), the second of a doubled word. So by “anudāttaṃ ca” (Pā. sū. 8-1-3), the āmreḍita takes the unaccented tone: wholly unaccented.

सुशस्तिभिः (suśastibhiḥ): ‘śasyate ābhir iti śastayaḥ ṛcaḥ’: the ṛks that are the instrument of praise are denoted by śastayaḥ. The root śaṃsu stutau. After it, by “striyāṃ ktin” (Pā. sū. 3-3-94), in the feminine, in the sense of the action and in the kāraka senses other than the agent, the suffix ktin comes after the root: kṛ [as printed] śaṃs + ktin. K and n are called it and dropped: śaṃs + ti. By “anidhitāṃ hala upadhāyāḥ kṅiti” (Pā. sū. 6-4-24), when a suffix with k or ṅ as it follows, the penultimate n of a consonant-final aṅga not having short i as it drops; since a kit suffix follows, the penultimate n drops. Though the penultimate appears to be anusvāra, not n, yet when this loss of n is made the anusvāra is asiddha, so there is an n in the penultimate; therefore it drops: śasti. Śobhanāḥ śastayaḥ suśastayaḥ: by "kugatiprādayaḥ" (Pā. sū. 2-2-18) the prādi compound. Śasti is initial udātta by the nit accent; after compounding, if the own accent of the final member came by "gatikārakopapadāt kṛt" (Pā. sū. 6-2-139), that initial accent should stay; thus su unaccented, śa udātta, sti svarita, the pracaya: suśastayaḥ should result; but that kṛt final-member accent of gatikāraka… is overridden by the later final accent of the final member enjoined by "man-ktin-vyākhyāna-śayana-āsana-sthāna-yājaka-ādi-krītāḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-2-151); so in śasti the sti is udātta. After it the instrumental plural bhis: suśasti + bhis; bhis, being a sup, is unaccented; by "udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ" it becomes svarita; ru and visarga for the s: suśastibhiḥ.

Translation: "The vahnis, the Ṛbhus, bearers of the sacrifice by producing its means such as the camasa, adhārayanta, held: though formerly, as men, subject to death, by gaining immortality they held their life-breaths. So another mantra declares: 'Being mortals, they reached immortality' (Ṛgveda 1-110-4). And these, sukṛtyayā, by the fine activity in the form of producing the materials that are the means of sacrifice, standing among the gods, abhajanta, enjoyed the yajñiya, sacrifice-worthy, bhāga, share in the form of oblation. This sense is plain in other mantras such as 'Sons of Sudhanvan, you reached the sacrificial share' (Ṛgveda 3-60-1). In the Brāhmaṇa too the story is plain: 'The Ṛbhus by austerity won the soma-drinking among the gods' (Ai. Brā. 3-30)." (Grammatical tail: vahnayaḥ, the suffix ni by vahiśri…, with nit carried on; abhajanta, not lowered at the start of the pāda; sukṛtyayā, kyap in the object sense after kṛñ by vibhāṣā kṛvṛṣoḥ (Pā. 3-1-120); "the act of enjoying whose deed is fine" is sukṛtyā; in the bahuvrīhi, overriding the first member's accent, final udātta of the final member by nañsubhyām. An objection: in kṛtya, kyap being unaccented as pit, the first is udātta by the root accent; then by ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi initial udātta should come, for it was said that an exception placed before overrides the later nañsubhyām. Then let kṛtyā be a kyap-final in the feminine in the sense of the action by kṛñaḥ śa ca (Pā. 3-3-100), the kyap udātta by exchange though pit; in the prādi compound that alone stays by the accent of the kṛt final member; bhāgam, final udātta by karṣātvataḥ (Pā. 6-1-159); yajñiyam, gha in the sense "worthy of sacrifice" by yajñartvigbhyāṃ ghakhañau (Pā. 5-1-71), iy for it, the suffix accent.)

वह्नयः (vahnayaḥ) — these Ṛbhus, who carry out the sacrifice by making its means such as the camasa | अधारयन्त (adhārayanta) — (attained immortality) | सुकृत्यया (sukṛtyayā) — by good work | देवेषु (deveṣu) — among the gods | यज्ञियम् (yajñiyam) — connected with the sacrifice | भागम् (bhāgam) — the share of the oblation too | अभजन्त (abhajanta) — obtained.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

These Ṛbhus made the means of sacrifice and through that became helpers in the performance of sacrifice, and attained immortality. By doing good works connected with the sacrifice they obtained a share of the oblation together with the gods.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Ribhus by their skill in fashioning sacrificial utensils and their pious acts lived for ever or became immortal ; they even obtained a share of the sacrifice along with the Gods.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

These Ṛbhus, by their skill in craft, made the means such as the camasa necessarily needed for sacrifice. In a single year they performed all the sacrifices and became worthy of the grace of the gods. By such good works these Ṛbhus became able to hold their life-breaths for ever. Like the gods, they attained immortality (freedom from death). And like the gods they too obtained the fitness to receive the share of the sacrifice, that is, the oblation offered to the gods in the sacrifice.

Adhārayanta: the sense of this word is “they held”. Held what? They held their life-breaths. Or the commentator explains the sense as “they attained immortality”. Though in this ṛk there are no words expressing the sense “they attained immortality”, since it is said in many ṛks that these Ṛbhus, being men, attained divinity by their good works, it seems right that the commentator, taking that very intent here, has explained the word adhārayanta as said above. On this matter the ṛk

> विष्ट्वी शमी तरणित्वेन वाघतो मर्तासः सन्तो अमृतत्वमानशुः ॥ (ऋ. सं. १-११०-४)
> viṣṭvī śamī taraṇitvena vāghato martāsaḥ santo amṛtatvamānaśuḥ || (ṛ. saṃ. 1-110-4)

(“Having done the acts, the bearers, though mortals, by swiftness attained immortality”: mine and tentative.) states this intent clearly.

("The Ṛbhus, bearers of the sacrifice by producing its means such as the camasa.") Because they make the means of sacrifice such as the camasa and so become helpers of the sacrifice, these Ṛbhus are called vahnayaḥ or voḍhāraḥ, that is, those who carry out the rite of sacrifice.

Yajñiyam:

("The share worthy of the sacrifice.") The share of oblation offered to the gods in the sacrifice. To obtain a share worthy of the sacrifice one must have the standing the gods have. The intent is that the Ṛbhus obtained such honour. This matter is supported in the ṛk

इहेह वो मनसा बन्धुता नर उशिजो जग्मुरभि तानि वेदसा । याभिर्मायाभिः प्रतिजूतिवर्पसः सौधन्वना यज्ञियं भागमानश ॥ (ऋ. सं. ३-६०-१)

("Here, here, O men, with your mind and kinship, the eager ones went to those things with knowledge; by the wonders with which, swift of form, sons of Sudhanvan, you reached the sacrificial share": mine and tentative.) and in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa statement

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 40–43, noted briefly)

वह्नयः (vahnayaḥ): "vahiśriśruyudruglāhātvaribhyo nit" (Uṇ. sū. "4-491", zoom-checked); here niḥ is carried on from "vījyājvaribhyo niḥ" (Uṇ. sū. "4-488", zoom-checked). So the sense of the sūtra is that after the roots vaha prāpaṇe and the rest the suffix ni comes, and it is nit; the same explanation is in the Bhāṣya at (Ṛ. saṃ. 3, ṛ. 9). The word nit is not seen in the preceding Uṇādi sūtras. So "nid ity anuvṛttau" here has come through an oversight of the correctors. When the suffix ni comes after the root vah, vahni results. The suffix being nit, the nit accent gives initial udātta.

अभजन्त (abhajanta): this stands at the start of a pāda; so by "anudāttaṃ sarvam apādādau" the bar comes. Therefore it is not wholly unaccented by "tiṅṅatiṅaḥ".

सुकृत्यया (sukṛtyayā): by "vibhāṣā kṛvṛṣoḥ" (Pā. sū. 3-1-120) the suffix kyap comes after the roots kṛ and vṛṣ; so the suffix kyap [as printed: "tyap"] in the object sense comes after the root kṛ: kṛ + ya. By "hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk" (Pā. sū. 6-1-71), when a kṛt suffix with p as it follows, a short-final aṅga takes the augment tuk; so the augment tuk; the suffix being kit, guṇa is barred: kṛtya. Śobhanaṃ, good, kṛtyam, the work; yasyāḥ, the act of enjoying that has it is called sukṛtyā. So this is a bahuvrīhi compound.

So by "bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam" (Pā. sū. 6-2-1), in a bahuvrīhi compound the first member keeps its own accent: the first-member accent is due. The first member su is udātta by "upasargāś cābhivarjam" (Phi. sū. 81); so, if the first-member accent came, su would be initial udātta and the rest would have to be unaccented by the lowering of the remainder. But "nañsubhyām" (Pā. sū. 6-2-172), the final udātta of the final member enjoined after nañ and su in a bahuvrīhi, overrides the first-member accent enjoined by bahuvrīhau. So in sukṛtya the last letter is udātta and the rest take the lowering of the remainder. But here there is a question. The suffix kyap is pit; so by "anudāttau suppitau" (Pā. sū. 3-1-4) it is unaccented. And in kṛtya, by the initial-udātta accent of "dhātoḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-1-162), kṛ is udātta; thus kṛtya is initial udātta; then by "ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi" (Pā. sū. 6-2-119), in a bahuvrīhi compound a two-vowel word after su that is initial udātta keeps the initial udātta in the Veda; since that is enjoined, by this sūtra the final member kṛtya would have to be initial udātta. Though the rule nañsubhyām is read later in the Aṣṭādhyāyī than the rule ādyudāttaṃ dvyac, nañsubhyām does not apply by vipratiṣedhe paraṃ kāryam (Pā. sū. 1-4-2). For ādyudāttaṃ dvyac, though read earlier, is the exception to nañsubhyām. That is, in an instance where nañsubhyām does not apply, ādyudāttaṃ dvyac does not apply either; so, since the definition of conflict,

> अन्यत्र चरितार्थयोः शास्त्रयोरेकत्र युगपत्समावेशो विप्रतिषेधः
> anyatra caritārthayoḥ śāstrayorekatra yugapatsamāveśo vipratiṣedhaḥ

("Conflict is the meeting at once, in one place, of two rules each with its own scope elsewhere"), is absent, vipratiṣedhe param does not apply. By

> येन नाप्राप्ते यो विधिरारभ्यते स तस्य बाधको भवति
> yena nāprāpte yo vidhirārabhyate sa tasya bādhako bhavati

("A rule begun where another would necessarily apply overrides it", paribhāṣā "58" (zoom-checked)), it seems natural that ādyudāttaṃ dvyac alone should apply. On that view, in "kṛñaḥ śa ca" (Pā. sū. 3-3-100), śa is a word ending in the first case with the ending dropped; the sense of the sūtra comes out that after the root kṛñ, in the sense of the action and so on, the suffix śa comes, and by the ca the suffix kyap. On this view the two forms kṛtyā and kriyā are established, but kṛtiḥ is not. For "striyāṃ ktin" (Pā. sū. 3-3-94), which enjoins the suffix ktin, is in the feminine section. So, since there is the bar astriyām, it does not come here that by "vāsarūpo 'striyām" (Pā. sū. 3-1-94) in the section "dhātoḥ" (Pā. sū. 3-1-91), an exception suffix of different form, enjoined other than in the feminine section, optionally overrides the general rule; for here both the general rule "striyāṃ ktin" (Pā. sū. 3-3-94) and the exception "kṛñaḥ śa ca" are in the feminine section; so, since the bar astriyām comes, the exception does not override optionally; then the very form kṛtiḥ would be lacking. So the rule "kṛñaḥ śa ca" is divided into two, "kṛñaḥ" and "śa ca": the sense of the first is that in the feminine the suffix kyap comes after the root kṛñ in the sense of the action and so on. By this kṛtyā is established. For "śa ca" the sense is that in the feminine, after the root kṛñ, in the sense of the action and so on, the suffix śa, and by the ca the suffix ktin, come; since kyap is established from the previous part, the ca does not add kyap but adds ktin; thus the forms kriyā and kṛtiḥ are established. In the present case, by the divided first sūtra "kṛñaḥ", kyap comes in the sense of the action; thus kṛtyā is final udātta; śobhanā ca sā kṛtyā ca: if the prādi compound is made by "kugatiprādayaḥ" (Pā. sū. 2-2-18), the accent of the kṛt final member comes by "gatikārakopapadāt kṛt"; so in sukṛtya this same accent stays. Since the feminine is shown, by "ajādyataṣ ṭāp" (Pā. sū. 4-1-4) ṭāp: sukṛtya + ā; ṭāp, being pit, is unaccented; with the preceding a the lengthening of like vowels; by "ekādeśa udāttenodāttaḥ" the single substitute is udātta. For the instrumental singular ṭā that follows, by "anudāttau suppitau" it is unaccented. With sukṛtya + ā, by "āṅi cāpaḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-3-105), before āṅ (the instrumental singular) and os, an aṅga ending in āp takes the substitute e; so in sukṛtya the a takes e, then ay; by "udāttād anudāttasya" the ending becomes svarita: sukṛtyayā.

भागम् (bhāgam): the root bhaja sevāyām. By "halaś ca" (Pā. sū. 3-3-121), after a consonant-final root the suffix ghañ comes: ghañ. By "cajoḥ ku ghiṇṇyatoḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-3-52), when a suffix with gh as it or the suffix ṇyat follows, c and j take the guttural: so g for the j; by "ata upadhāyāḥ" (Pā. sū. 7-2-116) the penultimate vṛddhi: bhāga. Now initial udātta would be due by "ñnityādir nityam" (Pā. sū. 6-1-197); its exception, "karṣātvato ghaño 'nta udāttaḥ" (Pā. sū. 6-1-159): after the root karṣ and roots having ā, the end of the word ending in the ghañ suffix is udātta; so bhāga is final udātta.

यज्ञियम् (yajñiyam): the analysis is yajñam arhati. By "yajñartvigbhyāṃ ghakhañau" (Pā. sū. 5-1-71), after the accusative-final words yajña and ṛtvij, in the sense "arhati", the suffixes gha and khañ come respectively; so the suffix gha after yajñam; the sup that is part of the stem takes luk. By "āyaneyīnīyiyaḥ phaḍhakhachaghāṃ pratyayādīnām" (Pā. sū. 7-1-2) iy for gh; by "yasyeti ca" (Pā. sū. 6-4-148) the a before the suffix drops: yajñiya. The suffix accent comes; yajñiyam ends in the accusative singular.

Translation: "The sūkta beginning ihendrāgnī, of six ṛks, is the fourth. Its ṛṣi and metre are as before. The deity is stated in the Anukramaṇī: 'iha: six, to Indra and Agni.' The application: in the agniṣṭoma, at the acchāvāka-śastra, the sūkta ihendrāgnī upa hvaye, because it is laid down in the section stotram agne śastrāt: 'ihendrāgnī and upeyaṃ vām asya manmanaḥ: nine' (Āśv. 5-10). Likewise in the abhiplava ṣaḍaha, at the morning pressing, at the acchāvāka-śastra, for the stomātiśaṃsana, this same sūkta: so it is laid down: beginning 'abhiplava and pṛṣṭhya days', 'ihendrāgnī, indrāgnī ā gatam' (Āśv. 7-5)."

Anuvāda (Kannada rendering): The sūkta ihendrāgnī is the fourth sūkta in the fifth anuvāka. It has six ṛks. The ṛṣi and metres of this sūkta are as in the previous sūkta. In the Anukramaṇikā, iha ṣaḷ aindrāgnam iti, it is said that the sūkta of six ṛks ihendrāgnī has Indra and Agni as deities. The application: in the agniṣṭoma rite, when the priest called acchāvāka recites the śastra mantras, the sūkta ihendrāgnī upa hvaye is to be recited. This is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra, in the section stotram agne śastrāt, by the sūtra ihendrāgnī upeyaṃ vām asya manmana iti nava (Ā. 5-10). And in the rite called abhiplava ṣaḍaha, at the time of the morning pressing, the acchāvāka priest recites this sūkta for the stomātiśaṃsana. On this the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra says abhiplavapṛṣṭhyāhānīty upakramyehendrāgnī indrāgnī ā gatam (Ā. 7-5).

In this sūkta the deities Indra and Agni are praised together. Praising two deities joined together in this way is special to the Ṛgveda. Mantras that set forth a pair of deities are named saṃstavika mantras (Ni. "7-8", zoom-checked). We have written on this matter before (Ṛgveda-saṃhitā Part 2, pages 710–712).

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar pages 46–48, noted briefly)

इन्द्राग्नी (indrāgnī): indraś ca agniś ca indrāgnī: a dvandva compound. By the sūtra "devatādvandve ca" (Pā. sū. 6-3-26), whereby the member before the final member of a dvandva compound naming deities takes the substitute ānaṅ, indrāgnī, though a dvandva naming deities, does not take ānaṅ. For with dvandve carried on from the previous sūtra "ānaṅ ṛto dvandve" (Pā. sū. 6-3-25), when the sense of the sentence is formed, Pāṇini placed the word dvandve again in devatādvandve ca; his intent is that if, carrying on the word of the previous sūtra, this word were not added here, then, since before the word dvandva takes all dvandvas, well known or not, here too all dvandvas would be taken. So ānaṅ would have to come in brahmaprajāpatī too. By the force of using the word dvandva again, it is established that in devatādvandve ca only dvandvas expressing well-known association are taken. Brahmaprajāpatī is not a dvandva expressing well-known association. So there ānaṅ does not come. In the Mahābhāṣya, at the time of rejecting the vārttika "brahmaprajāpatyādīnāṃ ca" (Pā. sū. 6-3-26-2), begun to bar the substitute ānaṅ in brahmaprajāpatī, it is described as

> स तर्हि वक्तव्यः । न वक्तव्यः । द्वन्द्व इति वर्तमाने पुनर्द्वन्द्वग्रहणस्यैतत्प्रयोजनं लोकवेदयोर्यो द्वन्द्वस्तत्र यथा स्यात् । कश्च लोकवेदयोर्द्वन्द्वः । वेदे ये सहनिर्वापनिर्दिष्टाः । न चैते वेदे सहनिर्वापनिर्दिष्टाः ॥
> sa tarhi vaktavyaḥ | na vaktavyaḥ | dvandva iti vartamāne punardvandvagrahaṇasyaitatprayojanaṃ lokavedayoryo dvandvastatra yathā syāt |

kaśca lokavedayordvandvaḥ | vede ye sahanirvāpanirdiṣṭāḥ | na caite vede sahanirvāpanirdiṣṭāḥ ||

("Should it then be stated? It need not be stated. While dvandve is current, the purpose of mentioning dvandva again is this: that it should apply to a dvandva of the world and of the Veda. And what is a dvandva of the world and of the Veda? Those named in the Veda as offered together. And these are not named in the Veda as offered together": mine and tentative.) Sahanirvāpa means "giving together". Here first the mental resolve of giving the oblation, as in indrāvaruṇābhyāṃ juṣṭaṃ nirvapāmi, and then, by uttering words such as svāhā, throwing the oblation into the fire: the giving up to the end of one's ownership is meant by nirvāpa; by the word loka the Kalpasūtras are meant; the association of the words in indrāgnī is not well known in this way in the world and the Veda. So here the substitute ānaṅ does not come. In the Kāśikā too it is said: "dvandva ity anuvṛttau punar dvandvagrahaṇāt lokaprasiddhasāhacaryāṇām eva dvandve ānaṅ" (Kā. "3-6-26" [as printed, for 6-3-26]). Though whether ānaṅ comes or not the form is indrāgnī alone, what then is the result of barring ānaṅ here? If ānaṅ came, in the veṣṭana (the avagraha) one would have to say indrāgnī itīndrā agnī. If ānaṅ does not come, it becomes indrāgnī itīndra agnī; for this distinction ānaṅ must not be accepted here. But since uttarapade is a locative statement, by "tasminn iti nirdiṣṭe pūrvasya" (Pā. sū. 1-1-66) the sense "of what immediately precedes" is established; thus the sense of the sūtra is "devatāvācakadvandvaghaṭakottarapadāvyavahitapūrvasya ānaṅ bhavati"; in the veṣṭana, in indrāgnī itīndrā-agnī, though there is no separation made by a letter, there is a separation made by time. So how does ānaṅ come in the veṣṭana? Tasminn iti nirdiṣṭe pūrvasya bars only separation made by a letter; it does not bar separation made by time. So the starting of the heading-sūtra "saṃhitāyām" is made purposeful. Otherwise, in sūtras such as "iko yaṇ aci" (Pā. sū. 6-1-77), since the specified is taken in tasminn iti, yaṇ and the rest would not come when there is a separation made by time or by a letter; then the heading saṃhitā would be useless. So by the indication of the starting of the saṃhitā heading, the paribhāṣā tasminn iti does not bar separation made by time. In this avagraha, since there is no separation made by a letter, ānaṅ would have to come. So it must become "indrāgnī itīndrā agnī"; the short word indra is right in the avagraha. So here the substitute ānaṅ must not be made. Indrāgnī is final udātta by "samāsasya" (Pā. sū. 6-1-223); the word agni ends in the suffix ni; it is final udātta by the suffix accent, and the a takes anudātta by the lowering of the remainder: this is set out at agnim īḷe. So the word agni is established as beginning with an unaccented syllable; therefore, since by "notarapade 'nudāttādāv apṛthivīrudrapūṣamanthiṣu" (Pā. sū. 6-2-142) there is the bar that, when a final member beginning with an unaccented syllable other than pṛthivī and the rest follows, the accent of both members stated before does not come, the accent of both members enjoined by "devatādvandve ca" (Pā. sū. 6-2-141), that in a dvandva of deities the former and latter members keep their own accent at once, does not come.

उश्मसि (uśmasi): the root vaśa kāntau; laṭ, 1st plural mas: vaś + mas. "Idanto masi" (Pā. sū. 7-1-46): masi is a statement without a case-ending; the i is for pronunciation. In idantaḥ the word anta means "part": it, the i, antaḥ, a part, yasya saḥ: such is the analysis; in it, if the t were not there, yaṇ would come and it would have to be yantaḥ, and the doubt would arise whether the sūtra specifies i or y. To prevent this doubt the t is added in it. So the sense of the sūtra is that the s-final word mas has i as its final part. If i were meant as a substitute, for brevity the sūtra should have been arranged as mas it; so, even without the marks of augments such as ṭ-ness or k-ness, i is an augment. And if the sūtra were made masa ik, whatever sense there is, that same sense results; then why not arrange it so? Because, if arranged so, the doubt would arise that ik is a pratyāhāra. To remove this doubt it is not arranged so. In the present case, in mas, by "idanto masi" the augment i comes: vaś + masi; the root vaś is of the ad-ādi. So for the vikaraṇa that would follow, for the vikaraṇa śap, by "adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ" (Pā. sū. 2-4-72), luk; by "sārvadhātukam apit" (Pā. sū. 1-2-4) masi is ṅit. So by "grahijyāvayivyadhivaṣṭivicativṛścatipṛcchatibhṛjjatīnāṃ ṅiti ca" (Pā. sū. 6-1-16), when a kit or ṅit suffix follows, the roots grah and the rest take saṃprasāraṇa: saṃprasāraṇa, u for v; pūrvarūpa: uśmasi.

ता (tā): the sense is tau.

सोमपातमा (somapātamā): somaṃ pibati iti somapau; atiśayena somapau, somapātamau, tā; in both places, somapātamā, for the nominative dual suffix au, by the sūtra "supāṃ suluk…" (Pā. sū. 7-1-39), the substitute ā comes.

Translation: "O naraḥ, men — priests! Tā, those two, Indra and Agni, spoken of before, pra śaṃsata, praise, yajñeṣu, in the rites being performed, with śastras. Likewise śumbhata: make them beautiful with ornaments of many kinds. ॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

हे नरः (he naraḥ) — O men (priests) | ता (tā) — the Indra and Agni spoken of before | यज्ञेषु (yajñeṣu) — in the sacrifices | प्र शंसत (pra śaṃsata) — praise well | शुम्भत (śumbhata) — adorn (with ornaments of many kinds) | ता (tā) — both of them | गायत्रेषु (gāyatreṣu) — with ṛks of the Gāyatrī metre |गायत (gāyata) — sing (praise).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O priests, praise well Indra and Agni, set forth before, adorn them with ornaments, and sing them in the manner of sāman singing with ṛks of the Gāyatrī metre.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O men, praise Indra and Agni in Sacrifices, decorate them with ornaments and sing them with hymns of Gayatri metres.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

In this ṛk the ṛṣi addresses the people, that is, the priests engaged in performing the sacrifice.

शुम्भत (śumbhata) — "adorn", decorate. What is meant here by adorning the deities? How can they, who are not visible, be adorned? This point is not clear.

गायत्रेषु (gāyatreṣu) — with ṛks of the Gāyatrī metre, or with the sāman mantra called gāyatra in the Sāmaveda. Because there is a rule that in all three pressings, the morning pressing and the rest, many ṛks of the seven kinds of metre beginning with Gāyatrī are to be recited, and because the praise is made first with the Gāyatrī metre itself, the ṛṣi, in saying gāyatreṣu here, has addressed the priests and told them: praise with ṛks of the Gāyatrī metre.

ता (tā) — here too the ā in place of the case-ending by the sūtra supāṃ suluk etc.

शुम्भत (śumbhata) — for this, in the Saṃhitā, lengthening by anyeṣām api dṛśyate (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137), which says that in the Saṃhitā lengthening comes also to words other than those named in the lengthening rules. ॥2॥

Translation: "Mitrasya, of the friend — of me, the performer, the object of affection — praśastaye, for the praise, may tā, those two gods spoken of before, come to be [ours]: sampadyetām is to be supplied. Or: those two, Indra and Agni, connected with me, the mitra, we wish to praise (praśastaye): 'we wish' is to be supplied. Somapā, able to drink soma, tā, those two, Indra and Agni, spoken of before, we havāmahe, call, somapītaye, for the drinking of soma." (Grammatical tail: praśastaye, the fourth case by tumarthāc ca bhāvavacanāt (Pā. 2-3-15); overriding the accent of a kṛt final member, the prefix keeps its own accent by tādau ca niti kṛtyaṯ atau (Pā. 6-2-50); somapītaye, 'for the rite in which there is a drinking of soma', a bahuvrīhi with the first member's accent; or, as the tatpuruṣa 'drinking of soma', the first member's accent because it belongs to the dāsībhāra class.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

ता (tā) — those Indra and Agni | मित्रस्य (mitrasya) — of the one who is dear (the sacrificer) | प्रशस्तये (praśastaye) — for (the purpose of) praise; we make the hymn | सोमपा (somapā) — who drink soma | ता इन्द्राग्नी (tā indrāgnī) — those Indra and the other | सोमपीतये (somapītaye) — for drinking soma | हवामहे (havāmahe) — we call.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

We call Indra and Agni, who drink soma, to drink soma. Having drunk the soma and being satisfied, may they become the cause of praise for the sacrificer, our friend.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> For the benefit of our friend (worshipper) we invoke Indra and Agni, drinkers of Soma juice, to drink the Soma libation.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

ता मित्रस्य प्रशस्तये (tā mitrasya praśastaye) — since there is no verb in this sentence, the commentator says that the verb gāyata of the previous ṛk must be supplied (adhyāhāra). Accordingly the sentence means: praise, that is, make a hymn to, those Indra and Agni for the prosperity (for the sake) of the sacrificer, our (your) friend.

In this ṛk the word tā occurs twice. And in somapā somapītaye too the matter of soma-drinking comes with repetition. Such usages are seen here and there in the Ṛgveda, especially. Such repeated usages may have been current either for the sake of the metre or following the usage of the language of that time.

(The Kannada note says the bhāṣya supplies gāyata*; the bhāṣya as printed on p. 50 supplies* sampadyetām or "we wish". Both as printed.)

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

प्रशस्तये (praśastaye) — the root śaṃsu stutau of the first class, with the prefix pra. After it, ktin having been laid down by striyāṃ ktin (Pā. Sū. 3-3-94) under the heading bhāve (Pā. Sū. 3-3-18), when an action for the sake of another action is the upapada, the suffix ktin comes by the sūtra bhāvavacanāś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-3-11). Since there is a prohibition in titutratathasisusarakaseṣu ca (Pā. Sū. 7-2-9), the augment iṭ does not come. By aniditāṃ hala upadhāyāḥ knīti (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24) the penultimate n is dropped. [On the objection:] by the saying nakārajāv anusvārapañcamau jhali dhātuṣu, in place of n the anusvāra comes by naś cāpadāntasya jhali (Pā. Sū. 8-3-24), the form being śaṃs; this anusvāra is asiddha by pūrvatrāsiddham (Pā. Sū. 8-2-1) when the penultimate n is dropped, so the n is present, and its dropping comes in the manner stated before. By kugatiprādayaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-2-18) the compound with pra gives praśasti. After this the fourth case comes by tumarthāc ca bhāvavacanāt (Pā. Sū. 2-3-15). By tumunṇvulau kriyāyāṃ kriyārthāyām (Pā. Sū. 3-3-10), when an action meant for another action is the upapada, the suffixes tumun and ṇvul come after the root in the future sense; examples: bhoktuṃ vrajati, bhojako vrajati; in both examples, the future action of eating being the purpose, vrajati —

— the action is the upapada; so tumun and ṇvul have come after the root bhuj as alternatives. In tumarthāt the analysis is tumaḥ artha iva artho yasya saḥ: 'that which conveys the sense the suffix tumun has' is the word-meaning; and with bhāvaḥ kriyā, ucyate 'nena iti vacanaḥ, bhāvasya vacanaḥ, tasmāt, it means 'expressing an action' (kriyāvācinaḥ). The word pratyayāt must be supplied (adhyāhāra: vivakṣitavākyārthapūrakapadānusandhānam adhyāhāraḥ). Here, since by the rule avyayakṛto bhāve the suffix tumun is laid down only in the sense of the action itself, the action-sense is established by tumarthāt alone; so the further mention of the word bhāvavacana is for taking a particular sūtra; that is, bhāvavacanāt is meant to say 'laid down by the sūtra bhāvavacanāś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-3-11)';* bhāvavacanāś ca* means that the suffixes ghañ and the rest, laid down under the heading bhāve (Pā. Sū. 3-3-18), come in the future sense also when an action meant for another action is the upapada; example yāgāya yāti. In pratyayāt, by the pratyayagrahaṇa-paribhāṣā, what ends in it is obtained. So the sense of the sūtra: after nominal stems ending in those suffixes which have the same sense as the suffix tumun and are laid down by the sūtra bhāvavacanāś ca, the fourth case comes. If the word tumarthāt were not there, bhāvavacanāt would mean 'after one with the action-sense'; then in places like pākaḥ, tyāgaḥ, where ghañ has come by bhāve and there is the action-sense, the fourth case would have to come here too; tumarthāt establishes 'when an action meant for another action is the upapada'; here, there being no other action meant for it, the fourth case does not come. If bhāvavacanāś ca were not there, in pācako vrajati the word ending in the suffix ṇvul has a suffix with the same sense as tumun, so the fourth case would have to come; so bhāvavacanāt is needed. With it, since ṇvul is not laid down under the heading bhāve, pāka [as printed; for pācaka] does not have as its last part a suffix laid down by the sūtra bhāvavacanāś ca, so the fourth case does not come. So both tumarthāt and bhāvavacanāt serve to obtain the meaning stated. In the present case, in the explanation tau mitrasya praśastaye sampadyetām, sampadyetām is the action that is the purpose; that is, the praśasti arises for the performer only after the deities Indra and Agni spoken of before have come; so the sampatti serves the action of praising; therefore, the action of sampatti meant for the praising-action being the upapada, ktin comes by bhāvavacanāś ca. In the second explanation, the action of wishing being the upapada, —

Page 53 (upper) — Rik 3: grammar (end)

— after praśaṃs, ktin; so praśasti, ending in the suffix ktin, having the same sense as the suffix tumun and laid down by the sūtra bhāvavacanāś ca, takes the fourth case after it by the sūtra tumarthāt etc. By gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the accent of the kṛt final member would be obtained; overriding it, by tādau ca niti kṛty atau (Pā. Sū. 6-2-50) — when a kṛt suffix other than tu, beginning with t and without the marker n, follows, the gati immediately before keeps its own accent — the first member keeps its own accent; by upasargāś cābhivarjam, pra is accented on its first syllable.

सोमपीतये (somapītaye) — somasya pītir yasmin karmaṇi tasmai: a bahuvrīhi; by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam the first member keeps its own accent. Even if the tatpuruṣa somasya pītiḥ is made, by kuru gārhapata riktagurvasūtajaratyaślīla dṛḍharūpā pārevaḍavā taitilakadrūḥ paṇyakambalo dāsībhārāṇāṃ ca (Pā. Sū. 6-2-42) — the first members of these seven compounds and of the words in the dāsībhārādi class keep their own accent — the first member keeps its own accent. ॥3॥

Translation: "To come near to (upa) idaṃ savanaṃ sutam, this rite now being performed, the pressing in the form of the morning pressing and the rest, furnished with the pressing of soma, we havāmahe, call, the two gods who are ugrā santā, being fierce in slaying enemies and the like. May the two gods Indra and Agni ā gacchatām, come, iha, here to the rite." (Grammatical tail: santā, from as with śatṛ, the a dropped by śnasor allopaḥ; the pair savanaṃ sutam has been explained at semaṃ naḥ stomam ā gahi (Ṛgve. 1-16-5).)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

सुतं (sutaṃ) — having the soma juice made ready | इदं सवनं (idaṃ savanaṃ) — the rites now being performed, the morning pressing and the rest | उप (upa) — to come near | उग्रा सन्ता (ugrā santā) — the deities who are fierce (to enemies) | हवामहे (havāmahe) — we call | इन्द्राग्नी (indrāgnī) — O Indra and Agni | इह (iha) — to this place | आ गच्छत (ā gacchata) — come.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

To the place where the rites of the morning pressing and the rest, which make the soma juice ready, are going on, we call Indra and Agni, who are terrible to enemies. O Indra and Agni, come here.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> We invoke the two (Gods) who are fierce (to their enemies) to come to this Sacrifice where the Soma is prepared; Indra and Agni, come hither.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

उग्रा (ugrā) — vairivadhādiṣu krūrau. The intention is: although Indra and Agni behave generously toward those who praise them, they are fierce toward enemies.

उपेदं सवनं सुतं (upedaṃ savanaṃ sutaṃ) — come near, to drink the soma made ready in the sacrifice we are now performing.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

सन्ता (santā) — the root asa bhuvi; laṭ; by laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau (Pā. Sū. 3-2-124) the substitute śatṛ. By adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ the vikaraṇa śap is dropped (luk). By sārvadhātukam apit (Pā. Sū. 1-2-4) the suffix śatṛ is ṅit. By śnasor allopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-111) — when a sārvadhātuka suffix that is kit or ṅit follows, the a of the suffix śna and of the root as is dropped — the root's a is dropped: s + at = sat. After this, [?] (a short word, unclear), śatṛ is ugit; so by ugidacāṃ sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) — uk it yeṣāṃ te ugitaḥ; adhātoḥ qualifies ugitaḥ; in ac, because it is not possible, there being no qualifier, the root añcu (gatipūjanayoḥ), whose n has been dropped, is taken by ac; ugitaś ca ac ca ugidacaḥ, teṣām ugidacām is the analysis — num is carried on from idito num dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-58). So, when a sarvanāmasthāna suffix follows, words that are not roots and are ugit, and the root añc with its n dropped, take the augment num: so the augment num. For the case-ending, by supāṃ suluk the substitute ā; anusvāra and parasavarṇa: it becomes santā.

सवनं, सुतं (savanaṃ, sutaṃ) — for both words the derivation has been set out at semaṃ naḥ stomam ā gahy upedaṃ savanaṃ sutam (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-16-5). ॥4॥

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

May Indra and Agni, great-souled and protectors of the assembly, make the rākṣasas give up their cruelty and walk in the good path. And by the favour of Indra and Agni may the man-eating rākṣasas be left without descendants.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Indra and Agni, great protectors of Sacrificial house, supress [sic] the Rakshas (demons). and may the devourers of men (demons) be destitute of progeny.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

सदस्पती (sadaspatī) — "sadas is the well-known sacrificial house; its two lords are Indra and Agni; or, the two guardians of the assembly" (the heading, as printed):

> सदः प्रसिद्धं यज्ञगृहं तस्य स्वामिनौ इन्द्राग्नी । सभापालकौ वा ॥
> sadaḥ prasiddhaṃ yajñagṛhaṃ tasya svāminau indrāgnī | sabhāpālakau vā ||

When the commentator explains this word, he explains sada as sadas, the assembly, and says sadaspatī means sabhāpālakau, those who protect the assembly. Skandasvāmin says sadaḥ is the sacrificial house, and gives the sense that sadaspatī means: protect from the rākṣasas and others the sacrificial house which we are now [using]. Skandasvāmin's explanation is the better one.

रक्षः (rakṣaḥ) — the rākṣasas, those of cruel nature, "evil spirits" etc. Yāska explains rakṣāṃsi as krūrakarmiṇaḥ, those of cruel deeds (Ni. 10-12).

उब्जतं (ubjataṃ) — krauryaṃ parityājayatam: make them give up their cruel nature. Skandasvāmin, for this word, has explained it so that the intention is: by your power destroy the rākṣasas, or put them down, that is, make them run away:

(Printed वदार्थः, as printed [sic]; read वधार्थः.)

> उब्जतिरत्र सामर्थ्यात् वदार्थः न्यग्भावार्थो वा रक्षांसि हतं, न्यग्भूतानि वास्माकं कुरुतं ।
> ubjatiratra sāmarthyāt vadārthaḥ nyagbhāvārtho vā rakṣāṃsi hataṃ, nyagbhūtāni vāsmākaṃ kurutaṃ |

अप्रजाः (aprajāḥ) — prajāyanta iti prajāḥ, na prajāḥ aprajāḥ: without offspring, that is, without descendants such as sons and grandsons.

अत्रिणः (atriṇaḥ) — ada bhakṣaṇe | bhakṣayitāraḥ hiṃsitāro 'smākam | devourers, that is, those who harm us.

महान्ता (mahāntā) — after the word mahat, the suffix au; because by vartamāne pṛṣadbṛhanmahajjagacchatṛvac ca (U. Sū. 2-2-42 as printed, zoom-checked: two dashes, so three groups) it is treated as if ending in śatṛ, the augment num by ugidacām (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70): mahan + t + au; for au the substitute ā by supāṃ suluk; by sāntamahataḥ saṃyogasya (Pā. Sū. 6-4-10) — when a sarvanāmasthāna suffix other than the vocative follows, the vowel penultimate to the n belonging to a conjunct ending in s or to the word mahat is lengthened — the lengthening comes: it becomes mahāntā.

सदस्पती (sadaspatī) — sadasaḥ patī, a genitive tatpuruṣa compound; by kṛttaddhitasamāsāś ca (Pā. Sū. 1-2-46) it is a prātipadika. The genitive and au endings, as parts of a prātipadika, are dropped (luk) by supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-71); with the dropped suffix as cause, sadas is a pada by suptiṅantaṃ padam (Pā. Sū. 1-4-14) — words ending in sup and tiṅ are called pada. So by sasajuṣo ruḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-66) the substitute ru for s would be obtained; yet, as a Vedic matter, it does not come here. Sadaḥ is initially udātta by its inherent accent; the word pati ends in the suffix ḍati laid down by pāter ḍatiḥ (U. Sū. 4-4-97, zoom-checked: the last glyph has the flat foot of the 7), and is initially udātta by the suffix accent. For these two, after compounding, by ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu yugapat (Pā. Sū. 6-2-140) — in the words listed in the vanaspatyādi class both first and last member keep their own accent at once — both members keep their accent. In the vanaspatyādi class only ten words are listed: 1 vanaspatiḥ, 2 bṛhaspatiḥ, 3 śacīpatiḥ, 4 tanūnapāt, 5 narāśaṃsaḥ, 6 śunaḥśepaḥ, 7 śaṇḍāmarkau, 8 tṛṣṇāvarūthī, 9 lambāviśvavayasau, 10 marmṛtyuḥ. Nor is it an ākṛtigaṇa; so one must consider how the accent of both members comes here through being of the vanaspatyādi class.

इन्द्राग्नी (indrāgnī) — initial udātta by the sūtra of the sixth adhyāya āmantritasya ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-198). Tau = pūrvoktau; the construction is: he indrāgnī yuvāṃ rakṣaḥ ubjatam.

अप्रजाः (aprajāḥ) — prajāyante iti prajāḥ; by the sūtras anyeṣv api dṛśyate (Pā. Sū. 3-2-101), saptamyāṃ janer ḍaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-2-97) and the rest, when words ending in the seventh case, the fifth case, a prefix, or the second case are upapada, the suffix ḍa is laid down after the root jan. By this sūtra [anyeṣv api dṛśyate] it is taught that the suffix ḍa comes after jan even with an upapada other than those mentioned above; by this the suffix ḍa comes here. Although here the suffix ḍa could be derived from upasarge ca saṃjñāyām (Pā. Sū. 3-2-99) — when a name is meant by the whole, with a prefix as upapada, ḍa comes after jan — yet, since aprajāḥ is explained here as anutpannāḥ, a name is not intended. So the suffix ḍa is derived by anyeṣv api dṛśyate. Na prajāḥ aprajāḥ: a nañ-tatpuruṣa; the n of nañ dropped by nalopo nañaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-73). If the bahuvrīhi avidyamānāḥ prajāḥ yeṣāṃ te were made, then in nityam asic prajāmedhayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 5-4-122), nañduḥsubhyaḥ is carried on from nañduḥsubhyo halisakthyor anyatarasyām (Pā. Sū. 5-4-121), and from bahuvrīhau sakthyakṣṇoḥ svāṅgāt ṣac (Pā. Sū. 5-4-113) bahuvrīhau is carried on and changed to the fifth case. So the sense of the sūtra is: after a bahuvrīhi compound ending in the words prajā or medhā following nañ, duḥ or su, the suffix asic comes, and it is a compound-final. By this the suffix asic would have to come; if it came it would be aprajās; after this, when the nominative plural jas came, by yasyeti ca (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the a would be dropped and it would have to be aprajasaḥ. Since here aprajāḥ is a plural form and in a bahuvrīhi the nominative plural would not be obtained, the tatpuruṣa compound alone must be accepted here. By tatpuruṣe tulyārtha- (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) the indeclinable first member keeps its accent.

अत्रिणः (atriṇaḥ) — the root ada bhakṣaṇe; by ṇvultṛcau tṛc: attṛ; after it jas; to this, as a Vedic matter, the augment inuṭ: attṛ + inas; the ṛ belonging to the suffix tṛc is udātta by citaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163); in place of this ṛ, by iko yaṇ aci, the r comes by yaṇ substitution; now by udāttayaṇo halpūrvāt (Pā. Sū. 6-1-174) — after a yaṇ preceded by a consonant and standing in place of an udātta, a nadī and the vowel-initial case-endings śas etc. are also udātta — the i becomes udātta. So for this very reason, here by the general rule udāttasvarityor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) the svarita does not come; by the exception udāttayaṇaḥ the udātta alone comes. ॥5॥

Translation: "O Indra and Agni! Tena satyena, by that rite performed by us, true — not false, because it surely grants its fruit — adhi jāgṛtam, be watchful in a high degree, be attentive, pracetune pade, in the place that makes known in an eminent way the enjoyment of the fruit, the place such as the world of heaven. ॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Indra and Agni, there is no doubt that the rites we perform give their fruit. Heaven and the rest, your dwelling places, make this known. Being watchful on our behalf in those places, bring about happiness for us.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O Indra and Agni, by this unfailing Sacrifice be vigilant in the place which affords knowledge and bestow upon us happiness.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The meaning of this ṛk is somewhat tangled. The meaning of the words tena satyena jāgṛte [as printed] and pracetune pade is not clear. Although the commentator has explained them so that a certain sense comes out, what the ṛṣi intends is not clear. The main intention may be: being satisfied by the hymns we make and by the performance of the sacrifice and the like, be watchful on our behalf and bring about happiness for us.

प्रचेतुने पदे (pracetune pade) — prajñāpake sthale | phalabhogajñāpake pade | the place that makes known.

शर्म (śarma) — sukhaṃ gṛhaṃ vā | happiness, or a house. Since the word śarma is read among the twenty-two names for ‘house’, gaya, kṛdara and the rest, the word śarma also means a house, a dwelling (Ni. 3-13).

जागृतं (jāgṛtaṃ) — jāgṛ nidrākṣaye; loṭ, middle person dual thas; by loṭo laṅvat (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) it is treated like laṅ; by tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute tam; by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-72) the vikaraṇa śap is dropped (luk); tam is ṅit by sārvadhātukam apit (Pā. Sū. 1-2-4), so by ṅiti ca (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5) guṇa is barred; by tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) — a finite verb after a word that is not a finite verb is unaccented — it is wholly unaccented.

प्रचेतुने (pracetune) — the root citī saṃjñāne. After it ṇic; by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) guṇa of the light penultimate: ceti. After this, by the word bahula in uṇādayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-3-1), the Uṇādi suffix una; by ṇer aniṭi (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51) ṇi is dropped; in the locative singular cetune; after compounding with the word pra, by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the accent of the kṛt final member comes; the final member cetuna is accented on its middle syllable by the suffix accent.

इन्द्राग्नी (indrāgnī) — its derivation has been set out at the first mantra of this sūkta, ihendrāgnī. Here indrāgnī is āmantrita, since it is a vocative nominative. So, by āmantritasya ca (Pā. Sū. 8-1-19, as printed), the initial udātta: only this is the special point here compared with before.

यच्छतम् (yacchatam) — yamu uparame, in the bhvādi class. After it loṭ, middle person dual thas, for which the substitute tam. By kartari śap (Pā. Sū. 3-1-68) the vikaraṇa śap: yam + a + tam. Now by iṣugamiyamāṃ chaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-77) — after the roots iṣu icchāyām, gaḷḷa gatau [as printed] and yamu uparame, when a suffix with the marker ś follows, the substitute cha comes — cha for the m; by che ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-73) — before cha, a short vowel takes the augment tuk — tuk; by stoḥ ścunā ścuḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-4-40) c for the t: it becomes yacchatam. There is iṣa gatau in the divādi class, giving iṣyati. Iṣa icchāyām, tudādi, icchati; iṣa ābhīkṣṇye, kryādi, iṣṇāti: so there are three roots iṣ. Here, so that cha comes only for the tudādi root, some read iṣu in the tudādi class and also read iṣu in the sūtra prescribing cha; others say that by maṇḍūkapluti, aci is carried on from aci ra ṛtaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-100) and qualifies śiti; so the sense obtained is: when a vowel-initial suffix with the marker ś follows, cha is substituted for iṣ and the rest. Since śyan comes in the divādi class and the vikaraṇa śnā in the kryādi class, although they have the marker ś they are not vowel-initial suffixes with the marker ś, so cha does not come for them. So in the tudādi class and in the sūtra iṣugami,

they hold that to read iṣu with the marker u is not from the ṛṣi [anārṣa]. In this way, although the form yacchatam is obtained from the root yamu uparame, it does not fit the meaning yacchatam = dattam explained in the bhāṣya. For the root dāṇ dāne, loṭ, middle person dual thas, the substitute tam comes: dāṇ + a + taṃ. Now by pā ghrā dhmā sthā mnā dāṇ dṛśy arti sarti śada sadāṃ piba jighra dhama tiṣṭha mana yaccha paśya ṛccha dhau śīya sīdāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) — when a suffix beginning with ś and having the marker ś follows, the roots pā and the rest take the substitutes piba and the rest — the sixth root dāṇ takes the sixth substitute yaccha: it becomes yacchatam. If the form is taken from this root dāṇ, it fits the meaning explained in the bhāṣya. ॥6॥

Translation: "The sūkta beginning prātaryujā, of twenty-one ṛks, is the fifth. Its ṛṣi and metre are as before. The particular deities are stated in the Anukramaṇī: 'prātaryujā, with one more [than twenty]: four to the Aśvins, likewise [four] to Savitṛ, two to Agni, one each to the goddesses, to Indrāṇī, Varuṇānī and Agnāyī, to Heaven-and-Earth, to Earth, six to Viṣṇu; from there, the gods, or the divine one.' Because it is laid down in the section sūktasaṃkhyānuvartate that 'the number not stated is twenty' (Anu. 12-4), in the sūkta prātaryujā, where no particular number is stated, the number twenty is to be understood; and that twenty goes together with one more: hence saikā. Of these, the first four ṛks have the Aśvins as deity; the four from the fifth to the eighth, Savitṛ; the ninth and tenth both, Agni; for the eleventh ṛk the deities are the goddesses connected with the gods; for the twelfth, the wives of Indra, Varuṇa and Agni — Indrāṇī, Varuṇānī and Agnāyī; the thirteenth and fourteenth, Heaven-and-Earth; the fifteenth is to Earth; the six from the sixteenth have Viṣṇu as deity; or the sixteenth has all [the gods] (kṛtsna) as deity. Here the application of the sūkta is laiṅgika (by its marks). In the prātaranuvāka, at the Aśvina rite, the four ṛks prātaryujā vibodhaya; and it is laid down: 'Now at the Aśvina, eṣo uṣāḥ, prātaryujā: four' (Āśv. 4-15). For the Āśvina cup, the one ṛk prātaryujā is the puronuvākyā: it is laid down in the section dvidevatyaiś caranti: 'of the Āśvina, prātaryujā vi bodhaya' (Āśv. 5-5)."

Anuvāda (Kannada rendering): The sūkta beginning prātaryujā is the fifth sūkta in the fifth anuvāka; it has twenty-one ṛks. The ṛṣi and metres of this sūkta are as in the previous sūkta. On the deities, it is said in the section sūtrasaṃkhyānuvartate [as printed] of the Anukramaṇī: prātaryujā saikā catasra āśvinyas tathā sāvitrya āgneyyau dve devīnām ekaikendrāṇīvaruṇānyagnāyīnāṃ dyāvāpṛthivye pārthivī ṣaḍvaiṣṇavyo 'to devā daivī veti (Anu. 12-4). As stated in this Anukramaṇī the number of mantras is twenty; but in another place the number of mantras of this sūkta is said to be twenty-one. The first four ṛks of this sūkta have the Aśvins as deity; the ṛks from the fifth to the eighth have Savitṛ as deity; the ninth and tenth ṛks have Agni as deity; for the eleventh ṛk the deities are the goddesses connected with the gods, that is, the wives of the gods; for the twelfth ṛk the deities are Indrāṇī, Varuṇānī and Agnāyī, the wives of the deities Indra, Varuṇa and Agni; the thirteenth and fourteenth ṛks have Heaven-and-Earth as deity; the fifteenth, Earth; the six ṛks from the sixteenth onward have Viṣṇu as deity; or the sixteenth ṛk has kṛtsna, that is, all the gods, as deity. In all, the application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. At the time of reciting the prātaranuvāka mantras, the four ṛks prātaryujā vi bodhaya are to be recited as mantras of the Aśvina rite. This is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra in the sūtra athāśvina eṣo uṣāḥ prātaryujeti catasraḥ (Ā. 4-15). And in the particular homa called the Āśvina cup, the one ṛk prātaryujā is to be recited as the puronuvākyā mantra: this is stated in the section dvidevatyaiś caranti, in the sūtra āśvinasya prātaryujā vi bodhaya (Ā. 5-5).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Awaken the Aswins for the morning Sacrifice; let them both come hither to drink of this Soma-juice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The first half of this ṛk is spoken addressing the priest called adhvaryu.

प्रातर्युजा (prātaryujā) — prātaḥsavanagraheṇa saṃyuktau // The commentator gives the sense: so that they become ready at the time of the morning pressing for taking the cup of soma-drinking connected with the Aśvina rite. Skandasvāmin's intention too is the same. But the author of the Vedārthayatna gives the sense prātaryujā — prātaḥkāle aśvau rathe yojayantau: harnessing their horses to the chariot at morning, getting ready to come to the sacrificial altar. Since there is neither the word 'chariot' nor the word 'horse' here, and since there is the word vibodhaya, 'rouse', and it is improbable that those who have risen from their beds and are harnessing horses to the chariot are to be roused again, this sense is not acceptable. The sense of Sāyaṇa and of Skandasvāmin is the fitting one.

प्रातर्युजा (prātaryujā) — the analysis is prātaḥ yuñjāte iti prātaryujā: prātaḥ = at the morning pressing; yuñjāte = they join with the cup being taken: this is the sense of the parts. By satsūdviṣadruhaduhayujavidabhidacchidajinīrājām upasarge 'pi kvip (Pā. Sū. 3-2-61) the suffix kvip; by supāṃ suluk the substitute ā for the suffix auṭ; yuj, being a root with u, by the root accent is udātta; an upapada compound; by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt the accent of the kṛt final member.

अस्य (asya) — after the word idam, the genitive singular jas [as printed; for ṅas]; by tyadādīnām aḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-102) a for the m; by ato guṇe (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the following form; by ṭāṅasiṅasām inātsyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-12) the substitute sya; by hali lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-113) id is dropped; since it is not a case of anvādeśa, the unaccented substitute aś by idamo 'nvādeśe 'śanudāttas tṛtīyādau (Pā. Sū. 8-3-41, as printed) does not come. The a is udātta by the stem accent; by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) the case-ending would be unaccented; but since it comes after the word idam, by ūḍidampadādyapumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) the case-ending takes the udātta.

पीतये (pītaye) — since the suffix ktin has the marker n, by the nit accent the word pīti would properly be initially udātta; that is, by śeṣanighāta ktin would have to be unaccented; yet here by vyatyaya the suffix ktin is udātta. ॥1॥

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

या उभा अश्विना देवा (yā ubhā aśvinā devā) — both the Aśvin deities who | सुरथा (surathā) — who have a fine chariot | रथीतमा (rathītamā) — who are best among charioteers | दिविस्पृशा (divispṛśā) — who dwell in the world of the gods | ता (tā) — both of them (such) | हवामहे (havāmahe) — we call.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The Aśvin deities have a fine chariot, are most able in driving the chariot, and dwell in the world of the gods. We call both such ones to the sacrifice.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> We invoke the two Aswins who are both divine, the best of charioteers, dwellers in heaven, riding in an excellant [sic] car.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

सुरथा (surathā) — śobhanarathayuktau | having a fine chariot.

रथीतमा (rathītamā) — the best among rathikas; rathikas are those who fight seated in a chariot. Skandasvāmin explains: rathītamā — sārathir atra rathy ucyate | atiśayena sārathī — that is, here rathī means charioteer; rathītamā, best among charioteers, or skilled in driving the chariot.

> सारथिरत्र रथ्युच्यते । अतिशयेन सारथी ।
> sārathiratra rathyucyate | atiśayena sārathī |

दिविस्पृशा (divispṛśā) — divi spṛśata iti divispṛśau | divi spraṣṭārau gantārāv ity arthaḥ || Those who touch, or reach, heaven, that is, those who go to the world of heaven, dwellers in heaven.

या (yā) — and in all eight words beginning with it, for the accusative dual suffix auṭ, the substitute ā by supāṃ suluk (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39). Śobhanau rathau yayos tau surathau [as printed]: here by samāsasya (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223) the final udātta would be obtained; overriding it, since this is a bahuvrīhi, the first member's own accent would be obtained by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1). Overriding this too, since the last member follows the word su, the final udātta of the last member would be obtained by nañsubhyām (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172). Since the word ratha is initially udātta, by ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi (Pā. Sū. 6-2-119), the exception to nañsubhyām — in a bahuvrīhi, after the word su, a last member of two syllables that is initially udātta stays initially udātta — the last member keeps its initial udātta. After the root ramu krīḍāyām, the suffix kthan by hanikuṣinīramikāśibhyaḥ kthan (U. Sū. 2-159, zoom-checked: the first glyph is the curled 2, the same as in the Pā. 6-2-1 on the same page); the m is dropped by anudāttopadeśa… (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37): it becomes ratha, initially udātta by the nit accent ñnityādir nityam.

रथीतमौ (rathītamau) — rathaḥ anayor astīti rathinau: by ata iniṭhanau (Pā. Sū. 5-2-115) the suffix ini. With the analysis atiśayena rathinau, by atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau (Pā. Sū. 5-3-55) tamap in the sense of excess; with the internal case-ending as cause rathin is a pada, and the n is dropped by nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7). In the Saṃhitā, by anyeṣām api dṛśyate (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137), the i of the first member is lengthened.

दिविस्पृशा (divispṛśā) — divi spṛśata iti divispṛśau. By kvip ca (Pā. Sū. 3-2-76) — with or without an upapada, after all roots, both in the world and in the Veda, the suffix kvip is seen — the suffix kvip; satsūdviṣa… is an elaboration of this. In divispṛś a tatpuruṣa compound by upapadam atiṅ (Pā. Sū. 2-2-19). By tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam (Pā. Sū. 6-3-14) — in a tatpuruṣa, when a last member ending in a kṛt follows, the locative ending variously is not dropped when a name is meant — the locative in divi is not dropped; the intention is that by the word bahula the aluk comes here even though no name is meant. By gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) — in a tatpuruṣa, a word ending in a kṛt after a gati, a kāraka or an upapada keeps its own accent — the accent of the kṛt final member comes. Spṛś is final udātta by the root accent; spṛśa saṃsparśane is the root. ॥2॥

अश्विना (aśvinā) — O Aśvin deities | वां (vāṃ) — your | मधुमती (madhumatī) — soaked with the sweat of the horses | सूनृतावती (sūnṛtāvatī) — furnished with a sound pleasing and true (to the sacrificer who uses the whip) | या कशा (yā kaśā) — the whip that there is | तया (tayā) — with it (that is, using it on the horses and coming swiftly) | यज्ञं (yajñaṃ) — our sacrifice | मिमिक्षतं (mimikṣataṃ) — wish to make it furnished with soma juice (drink the soma). Or: अश्विना (aśvinā) — O Aśvin deities | वां (vāṃ) — your | मधुमती (madhumatī) — sweet, or gentle | सूनृतावती (sūnṛtāvatī) — pleasing and true | या कशा (yā kaśā) — the speech that there is | तया (tayā) — with it (furnished, that is, speaking good words) | यज्ञं (yajñaṃ) — (our) sacrifice | मिमिक्षतं (mimikṣataṃ) — make it furnished with the offering of soma juice.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Aśvin deities, driving your horses with the use of the whip so that they are soaked with sweat, and driving the horses by using the sounds that urge them on swiftly, come quickly (or, with your gentle speech, pleasing and true about the granting of boons), come to our sacrifice and be ready for the offering of soma juice (drink the soma).

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Aswanis [sic] sprinkle the sacrifice with your whip which is full of sweet juice (honey); lash (your horses) loudly.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The meaning of this ṛk is somewhat tangled. The main intention is: O Aśvin deities, striking the horses of your chariot well with your whip and urging them on with sounds uttered sharply so that the horses move fast, come quickly to this our sacrificial ground, and, made glad by drinking the sweet soma juice, give gladness to us too by your pleasing words.

कशा (kaśā) — pratodaḥ / the whip that urges the horse to move fast; "whip or horsewhip".

मधुमती (madhumatī) — sweet, pleasant to hear (a sound).

सूनृतावती (sūnṛtāvatī) — pleasing, true. In this ṛk, though the words madhumatī and sūnṛtāvatī are qualifiers of the word kaśā, it is more fitting to give each of them a separate definite meaning.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

कशा (kaśā) — the root kaśa gatiśātanayoḥ. After it, by nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-134), the suffix ac of the pacādi type. By vṛṣādīnāṃ ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-203) initial udātta.

सूनृतावती (sūnṛtāvatī) — the root ūna parihāṇe, of the tenth class. With the analysis apriyaṃ suṣṭhu ūnayati, 'that which removes the unpleasant well', it becomes sūn. Sūn-ṛtaṃ = satyaṃ yasyāṃ vāci sā sūnṛtā: a bahuvrīhi. The speech in which there is truth that removes the unpleasant well is understood by the word sūnṛtā. Sūnṛtā asyā astīti sūnṛtāvatī, the whip: by tad asyāstya asminn iti matup (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) the suffix matup; with sūnṛtā + mat, by saṃjñāyām (Pā. Sū. 8-2-11) — when a name is meant, v for the m of matup — v for the m; by ugitaś ca (Pā. Sū. 6-3-45, as printed) ṅīp: sūnṛtāvatī. The sense: the whip having this name, that is, the speech.

मिमिक्षतम् (mimikṣatam) — the root miha secane. After it, by dhātoḥ karmaṇaḥ... (Pā. Sū. 3-1-7), san; by sanyaṅoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-9) reduplication; by halādiḥ śeṣaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) the h is removed: mi mih + sa. By halantāc ca (Pā. Sū. 1-2-10) — a san beginning with a jhal after a consonant near i, u, ṛ is kit — sa is kit. Since vasatir dahadihaduho nah mih ruh lih vahis tathā (Pā. Sū. 7-2-10 [?], Kā. 6) is read in the aniṭ-kārikā, the augment iṭ does not come to san; so sa begins with a jhal. Since the suffix sa is thus kit, guṇa is barred by kṅiti ca, so guṇa of the light penultimate by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) does not come. Mi mih + sa: now by ho ḍhaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-31) — at the end of a pada and before a jhal, ḍh for h — ḍh for the h; by ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si (Pā. Sū. 8-2-41) — before s, k for ṣ and ḍh — k for the ḍh: mi mik + sa; by ādeśapratyayayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-59) ṣ for the s: mi mikṣa; this is a root by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-32). Loṭ, in the middle person dual, when tam comes for thas, it becomes mimikṣatam. ॥3॥

That way is nahi … asti, surely not, vām, for you two, dūrake, in a far place: it is not, indeed. Or: the house to which you go is not far." (Grammatical tail: nahi, final udātta by evamādīnām antaḥ; asti, no loss of accent by cādilope vibhāṣā: for here the conjunctive sense 'the house is not far and you go by chariot' is understood; the word ca is not used, so, ca being dropped, asti is the first finite verb; yatra, lengthening in the Saṃhitā by nipātasya ca; gacchathaḥ, although this is not the first, there is no loss of accent because of its connection with the yad-word yatra.)

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Aśvin deities, the house of the sacrificer who prepares the soma juice, to which you have to go on the chariot, is not far. (So you should come quickly.)

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> For to you, Aswins, the house of the Soma-sacrificer whither you go in your chariot is not far off.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

As said in the previous ṛk, your chariot can move fast. The whip with its sweet sound makes the horses move fast. So for you, who travel by chariot, the house of the performer of the soma sacrifice does not seem far. Seated in the fast-moving chariot you can come quickly to the sacrificer's house. The main intention is: that house is not far.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

नहि (nahi) — final udātta by evādīnām antaḥ (Phi. Sū. 8-2), by which the end of the words read in the evādi class is udātta. Although nahi is not in the evādi class, the intention is that, since it is an ākṛtigaṇa, it must be included there.

अस्ति (asti) — here the intended sense is: gṛhaṃ dūre ca nāsti, yuvāṃ ca rathena gacchathaḥ, the house is not far, and you travel by chariot. So the use of ca is needed; yet here that ca is not used; so by cādilope vibhāṣā (Pā. Sū. 8-1-63) — if ca, vā, ha, aha, eva are dropped, the first finite verb is not made unaccented — the first finite verb asti is not unaccented.

यत्र (yatra) — by nipātasya ca (Pā. Sū. 6-3-136) lengthening comes in the Saṃhitā to a particle in a mantra. Yatra is read in the cādi class; so by cādayo 'sattve (Pā. Sū. 1-4-57) — the words of the cādi class not expressing gender, number, case or a substance are called nipāta — it is a nipāta. Gacchathaḥ: though the dropping of ca is there, since this is not the first finite verb, the prohibition of total lack of accent by cādilope vibhāṣā does not come. Yet since there is connection with a word containing yad, namely yatra, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66) — a finite verb after a word containing yad is not unaccented — the prohibition comes, so total lack of accent does not come. In pūjanāt pūjitam anudāttam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-67), by the further mention of pūjita, it is made known that atra prakaraṇe pañcamīnirdeśe 'pi nānantaryam iṣyate; so even though gacchathaḥ is not immediately after the word yatra, there is no hindrance to the prohibition of lack of accent. ॥4॥

(The maxim quoted, as printed: "in this section, even with a fifth-case statement, immediate sequence is not required".)

> अत्र प्रकरणे पञ्चमीनिर्देशेऽपि नानन्तर्यमिष्यते ।
> atra prakaraṇe pañcamīnirdeśe 'pi nānantaryamiṣyate |

Translation: "Ūtaye, for our protection, I upa hvaye, call, the god Savitṛ. And that god Savitṛ, being the deity set forth by this mantra, is the cettā, the one who makes known, the padam, the place to be reached by the sacrificer. What kind of Savitṛ? Hiraṇyapāṇim, holding gold in his hand to give to the sacrificer. Or: in a sacrifice performed by the gods, Savitṛ himself, becoming a priest, was placed as the brahman. Then at a certain iṣṭi the adhvaryus gave to that Savitṛ, the brahman, the portion of the puroḍāśa called prāśitra; and that prāśitra, taken by Savitṛ in his hand, cut off his hand. Then the adhvaryus, the givers of the prāśitra, made a hand of gold and put it on. This matter is recorded in the Kauṣītaki-brāhmaṇa: 'They presented the prāśitra to Savitṛ; it cut off his hands; they put on him hands of gold; therefore he is praised as hiraṇyapāṇi.' Yāska explains the words hiraṇya and pāṇi thus: 'Hiraṇya — why? It is carried (hriyate) when stretched out; or it is carried from man to man; or it is a pleasing good (hita-ramaṇa); or it may be from hary, in the sense of wishing to obtain' (Ni. 2-10); likewise 'pāṇi, from paṇāy, in the sense of honouring' (Ni. 2-26)." हिरण्यपाणिं (hiraṇyapāṇiṃ) — yajamānāya dātuṃ haste suvarṇadhāriṇam | Because he holds gold in his hand to give to the sacrificer, he is named hiraṇyapāṇi. Or hiraṇmayau pāṇī yasya saḥ: because he has hands made of gold, he is named hiraṇyapāṇi. The commentator says there is a story about this in the Kauṣītaki-brāhmaṇa:

When the gods were performing a sacrifice, Savitṛ too was one of the priests. But instead of carrying out a priest's duty he was seated in the place of the brahman. Then the priests called adhvaryus in that sacrifice, thinking that this Savitṛ seated in the brahman's place was the brahman, unknowingly gave him the portion of the puroḍāśa called prāśitra, which is to be given to the brahman. But as soon as the mistake became known, before Savitṛ could eat the puroḍāśa, they cut off his hands, which were holding it. So that Savitṛ should not go without hands, the adhvaryus made hands of gold and joined them to Savitṛ. The main intention of this story is that, since Savitṛ's hands were thus made of gold, Savitṛ is praised as hiraṇyapāṇi.

Yāska has explained the derivation of the word hiraṇya and of the word pāṇi thus:

hiraṇyaṃ kasmāddhriyata āyamyamānamiti vā | hriyate janājjanamiti vā | hitaramaṇaṃ bhavatīti vā | haryatervā syātprepsākarmaṇaḥ || (ni0 2-10)

There are many reasons why gold gets the name hiraṇya. Since craftsmen and others make ornaments such as bracelets and spread its excellence, it is named hiraṇya; since people use it in dealings such as trade, it is named hiraṇya; since it stands by as a help in times of trouble to those who have it and does them good, it is named hiraṇya; since it gives joy to the mind, it is named hiraṇya; and since all desire it and it is an impeller (in the form of wealth) for all undertakings, it is named hiraṇya.

The derivation of the word pāṇi:

पाणिः पणायतेः पूजाकर्मणः प्रगृह्य पाणी देवान्पूजयन्ति ॥ (नि० २-२६)

pāṇiḥ paṇāyateḥ pūjākarmaṇaḥ pragṛhya pāṇī devānpūjayanti || (ni0 2-26)

Since one joins them and spreads them wide to worship the gods, they are called pāṇi. Hiraṇyapāṇi means one who has gold in the hand, or one who has hands made of gold (made from gold).

सवितारं (savitāraṃ) — Savitṛ. For the word savitṛ Yāska —

सविता सर्वस्य प्रसविता ॥ (नि० १०-३१) आदित्योऽपि सवितोच्यते ॥ (नि० १०-३२)

savitā sarvasya prasavitā || (ni0 10-31) āditya ’pi savitocyate || (ni0 10-32)

— has given the derivation: “Savitṛ, the impeller (prasavitṛ) of all”; “the sun too is called Savitṛ”. That is, because he brings about, that is gives, all the desired things people need, this deity is named Savitṛ; and the sun too is named Savitṛ (sūrya).

स चेत्ता देवता पदं (sa cettā devatā padaṃ) — sa ca savitā yajamānena prāpyasthānaṃ jñāpayitā bhavati: the commentator has explained this sentence as “this Savitṛ makes known the place the sacrificer is fit to reach”. Yet the sense does not fit well. What the ṛṣi intends is not clear.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

हिरण्यपाणिं (hiraṇyapāṇiṃ) — the word hiraṇya is always neuter; by nabviṣayasyānisantasya (Phi. Sū. 26) initially udātta; or, as set out at indro vajrī hiraṇyayaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-7-2), it ends in the suffix kanyan by haryateḥ kanyan hir ca (U. Sū. 5-[?]), so it is initially udātta by the nit accent. Hiraṇyaṃ pāṇau yasya saḥ: a bahuvrīhi. By bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-7 [?], as read) the first member keeps its own accent.

ऊतये (ūtaye) — with the word udāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-3-96) carried on, by ūtiyūtijūtisātihetikīrtayaś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-3-97) it is given as a set form ending in ktin and with final udātta.

सवितारम् (savitāram) — the root ṣū preraṇe. By dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-64) s for the ṣ; by ṇvultṛcau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-133) tṛc: sū + tṛ, the augment iṭ, guṇa, the substitute av: savitṛ. In the accusative singular it becomes savitāram. The suffix tṛc has the marker c; so by citaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163) the final udātta comes.

चेत्ता (cettā) — the root citī saṃjñāne; after it, by tṛn (Pā. Sū. 3-2-135) — when the agents are of that habit, that nature, or doers of it well, the suffix tṛn comes after the root — the suffix tṛn. By anityam āgamaśāsanam (Paribhā. 66) the rule prescribing the augment iṭ is not binding, so iṭ does not come here. By pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) guṇa of the light penultimate. Nominative singular suffix su: cettṛ + su; by ṛduśanaspurudaṃso 'nehasāṃ ca (Pā. Sū. 7-1-94) — when a su other than the vocative follows, to words ending in ṛ, and to the words uśanas and the rest, the substitute anaṅ comes — the substitute anaṅ: cettan + s. By aptṛntṛcsvasṛnaptṛneṣṭṛtvaṣṭṛkṣattṛhotṛpotṛpraśāstṝṇām (Pā. Sū. 6-4-11) — when a sarvanāmasthāna other than the vocative follows, the vowel penultimate in ap and the rest is lengthened — lengthening; by halṅyābbhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-68) su is dropped; by nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n is dropped: it becomes cettā. The suffix is nit; by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) initial udātta.

देवता (devatā) — by devāt tal (Pā. Sū. 5-4-27 [?]) — after the word deva, the suffix tal in its own sense — the suffix tal; by liti (Pā. Sū. 6-1-193) the v (va) before the suffix is udātta.

पदं (padaṃ) — the root pada gatau. By nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-134) the suffix ac; by citaḥ final udātta. ॥5॥

Translation: "Here the hotṛ speaks to the sāman-singing priest, or to another priest who recites the śastra. Upa stuhi, praise, Savitṛ, avase, to protect us. Tasya, of that Savitṛ, the vratāni, rites, in the form of the soma sacrifice and the like, we uśmasi, desire. What kind of Savitṛ? Apāṃ napātam, not the protector of water: that is, its drier by his heat." (Grammatical tail: apām, the case-ending udātta by ūḍidam…; napātam, pā rakṣaṇe, pāt ending in śatṛ; in its compound with nañ the dropping of n is barred by nabhrāṇ napāt…, says the author of the vṛtti; for Agni does not protect the waters, being their drier. Then how the genitive apām? If it is said that the genitive of the object is barred by na lokāvyayaniṣṭhākhalartha… (Pā. 2-3-69), then let this be the genitive of relation (śeṣa): Agni and Āditya are related to the waters as their cause, by the śruti agner āpaḥ and the smṛti ādityāj jāyate vṛṣṭiḥ (Manu 3-76). On this view the absence of num by ugidacām is also to be held as from the set form, and the absence of tuk in pā ending in kvip likewise. Or: na pātayatīti napāt, kvip after the causative of patḷ gatau: Agni and Āditya do not lead the waters to [men], but rather dry them up; the accent of the indeclinable first member; avase, asen in the sense of the infinitive by tumarthe sesen…, initial udātta as nit; uśmasi, vaśa kāntau, śap dropped by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ, the i added by idanto masi.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

अपां (apāṃ) — of water | नपातं (napātaṃ) — not the protector (the one who dries it) | सवितारं (savitāraṃ) — Savitṛ | अवसे (avase) — for our protection | उप स्तुहि (upa stuhi) — praise | तस्य (tasya) — connected with him | व्रतानि (vratāni) — the rites, the soma sacrifice and the rest | उश्मसि (uśmasi) — we wish (to perform).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

We wish to perform the rites, the soma sacrifice and the rest, connected with Savitṛ. Therefore praise Savitṛ, who dries the water with his heat.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Praise Savitri, who is no friend of water for our protection; we desire to perform his worship.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The commentator explains that the hotṛ speaks this ṛk addressing either the udgātṛ, who sings the sāman, or another priest who recites the śastra mantras.

अपां नपातं (apāṃ napātaṃ) — jalasya na pālakam | jalasya śoṣakam: the commentator here says the sense is that the sun is named apāṃ napāt because he is opposed to water, the one who dries up water.

But Yāska says that the word apāṃ napāt and the word tanūnapāt are words of the same meaning, and gives two meanings for the word tanūnapāt: ājya (melted ghee) and Agni (Ni. 10-18 and 8-5). But the meaning given here by the commentator is the fitting one.

व्रतानि (vratāni) — somayāgādirūpāṇi karmāṇi | A vrata is a rite performed by rule; here it means rites such as the soma sacrifice.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

उश्मसि (uśmasi) — kāmayāmahe | we wish. The intention is: we wish to perform the soma sacrifices and the rest addressed to Savitṛ.

अपां (apāṃ) — by ūḍidampadādyapumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) the ending ām after the word ap is udātta.

nabhrāṇnapānnavedānāsatyānamucinakulanakhanapuṃsakanakṣatranākeṣu prakṛtyā (Pā. Sū. 6-3-75) the n of the nañ-compounds in this sūtra stays as it is, that is, is not dropped; so the n is not dropped. The author of the vṛtti has said this point, and it is right. Apāṃ napāt means Agni. Apāṃ = of water; napāt = not the one who protects: so the analysis. Agni does not protect water; he only dries it. So it is fitting that apāṃ napāt denotes Agni. But in apāṃ napāt, by kartṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti (Pā. Sū. 2-3-65), the genitive of the object would have to be stated. For that, since the suffix śatṛ, a substitute for la, is used, there is the prohibition of the genitive by na lokāvyayaniṣṭhākhalarthatṛnām (Pā. Sū. 2-6-69 [?], as read). So, if it is asked how the genitive of the object is obtained in apāṃ napāt: then we do not accept the genitive of the object here at all. By ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe (Pā. Sū. 2-3-50) we accept the genitive of relation, and we take the water, which is the object, as intended in the sense of relation. Since Agni and Āditya are both causes of water, they are related to ap:

the śruti अग्नेरापः (agner āpaḥ) (Tai. Ā. 8-2), "water came from Agni", teaches that Agni is the cause of water; and the Manusmṛti आदित्याज्जायते वृष्टिः (ādityāj jāyate vṛṣṭiḥ) (Manu 3-76), "rain arises from the sun", teaches that the sun is the cause of water. So the genitive comes here in the relation of produced and producer, and there is no difficulty about the genitive. Here another doubt arises: in places like napāt, napātam, when a sarvanāmasthāna suffix follows, since śatṛ is ugit, by ugidacāṃ sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) — when a sarvanāmasthāna suffix follows, the augment num comes to an ugit not belonging to a root and to the root añc with its n dropped — the augment num might be said to come. On this view one must say that the augment num does not come because the absence of num is laid down as a set form (nipātana) by giving napāt in the sūtra nabhrāṇnapāt. Or: after the root pā, the suffix kvip by kvip ca (Pā. Sū. 3-2-76); in kvip all its letters are dropped; by nipātana the augment tuk for pā: pāt. On this view there is no use of a substitute for la and the like, so the prohibition na lokāvyaya… does not come; so the genitive of the object can come by kartṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti, and there is no trouble of resorting to the genitive of relation. At ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu yugapat (Pā. Sū. 6-2-140) the author of the vṛtti has stated this view: pāteḥ kvipi nipātanāt tuk. Or: na pātayati, na prāpayatīti napāt: after the root patḷ gatau, ṇic; by ata upadhāyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-116) vṛddhi of the penultimate: pāt + i; after these the suffix kvip; by ṇer aniṭi (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51) — when an ārdhadhātuka not beginning with iṭ follows, ṇi is dropped — ṇic is dropped. It is well known that Agni and Āditya are both driers of water (those who make it dry); so they are not those who lead water [to men] but rather driers. On this view there is no need to resort to a set form; the genitive of the object too is obtained. On the first view, pā is udātta by the root accent; śap being pit, and śatṛ, standing in place of la, being a sārvadhātuka with the accent of the original teaching, are both unaccented; by ekādeśa udāttenodāttaḥ the ā in pā is udātta. On the last two views only the root accent comes in pā. After compounding, by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the accent of the kṛt final member comes and that accent stays.

अवसे (avase) — the root ava rakṣaṇe. By tumarthe sesenasaasen… (Pā. Sū. 3-4-9), in the sense of the suffix tumun, that is, in the action sense by the rule avyayakṛto bhāve, the suffix asen comes. The suffix is nit; so by the nit accent initial udātta.

उश्मसि (uśmasi) — the root vaśa kāntau; laṭ, first person plural mas; by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-72) śap is dropped (luk); by idanto masi (Pā. Sū. 7-1-46) the augment i as the final part; by sārvadhātukam apit (Pā. Sū. 1-2-4) mas is ṅit; by grahijyāvayivyadhivaṣṭi… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-16) saṃprasāraṇa of the v: u, and the preceding form. ॥6॥

वसोः (vasoḥ) — connected with the house | चित्रस्य (citrasya) — of many kinds | राधसः (rādhasaḥ) — of wealth | विभक्तारं (vibhaktāraṃ) — the one who divides | नृचक्षसं (nṛcakṣasaṃ) — who gives light (gives knowledge) to men | सवितारं (savitāraṃ) — Savitṛ | हवामहे (havāmahe) — we call.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

We call Savitṛ, who distributes, according to each one's fitness, wealth such as gold and silver connected with houses and the like (together with houses and the like), and who gives light.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> We invoke Savitri, the distributor of various kinds of wealth including the house and the enlighter [sic] of men.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The main intention of this ṛk: the deity Savitṛ gives wealth and the like of many kinds, gives houses and the like as dwelling places, and gives knowledge to people according to each one's fitness. We call such a Savitṛ.

विभक्तारं (vibhaktāraṃ) — vibhāgakāriṇam | the one who distributes according to each one's fitness, or who gives wealth and the like according to each one's rites, such as the performance of sacrifice.

वसोश्चित्रस्य राधसः (vasoś citrasya rādhasaḥ) — wealth of many kinds and riches, together with houses and the like as dwelling places.

नृचक्षसं (nṛcakṣasaṃ) — nṝṃś caṣṭa iti nṛcakṣāḥ | taṃ nṛcakṣasam | manuṣyāṇāṃ prakāśakāriṇam || The meaning is: he who gives knowledge to men, who impels the intellect. On this the well-known Gāyatrī mantra, धियो यो नः प्रचोदयात् (dhiyo yo naḥ pracodayāt), clearly makes known that Savitṛ impels our intellect.

विभक्तारम् (vibhaktāram) — after the root bhaja with the prefix vi, the suffix tṛc. The suffix is cit, so the cit accent comes. After the compound with the word vi, the accent of the kṛt final member comes and that accent stays.

हवामहे (havāmahe) — the root hveñ saṃprasāraṇe [as printed]. With hvaḥ saṃprasāraṇam carried on, by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. Sū. 6-1-34) saṃprasāraṇa: u for the v; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) the preceding form; laṭ, mahiṅ; by ṭita ātmanepadānāṃ ṭer e (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) e for the ṭi; śap, guṇa, the substitute av; by ato dīrgho yañi (Pā. Sū. 7-3-101) the stem ending in a is lengthened.

वसोः (vasoḥ) — the root vasa nivāse. By śṝsvṛsnihitrapyasivasihanikliśibandhimanibhyaś ca (U. Sū. 1-10) the suffix u; the word nit from the preceding sūtra dhānye nit is carried on into this sūtra; so, the suffix being nit, the nit accent comes.

राधसः (rādhasaḥ) — rādha sādha saṃsiddhau; by sarvadhātubhyo 'sun (U. Sū. 4-6-28 [?]) the suffix asun. The suffix being nit, rādhasaḥ is initially udātta.

नृचक्षसं (nṛcakṣasaṃ) — nṝn caṣṭe iti (one who gives light to men): so the analysis; it becomes nṛcakṣāḥ; in the accusative singular it becomes nṛcakṣasam. By cakṣer bahulaṃ śic ca (U. Sū. 4-6-27 [?]) the suffix asun comes after the root cakṣiṅ vyaktāyāṃ vāci, and it is variously śit: so the suffix asun. The suffix being śit, by tiṅśit sārvadhātukam it is called sārvadhātuka; so the substitute khyāñ for the root cakṣiṅ by cakṣiṅaḥ khyāñ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-54), which applies when an ārdhadhātuka suffix follows, does not come. By the nit accent cakṣas is initially udātta. After compounding, the accent of the kṛt final member comes. Here asiḥ is carried on from mithune 'siḥ pūrvavac ca sarvam (U. Sū. 4-6-[?]). Jñānendrasarasvatī and others have explained it this way; yet the Veda commentator, to suit the accent, has carried on asun here by maṇḍūkānuvṛtti. ॥7॥

सखायः (sakhāyaḥ) — sakhibhūtā ṛtvijaḥ | Here the sacrificer has addressed the priests as his friends. In the Taittirīya Saṃhitā of the Yajurveda (Tai. Saṃ. 6-1) it is said that the priests are the sacrificer's friends:

> ऋत्विजो वा अस्य सखायः ।
> ṛtvijo vā asya sakhāyaḥ |

Page 86 — Rik 8: grammar

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

सखायः (sakhāyaḥ) — samānāḥ santaḥ khyānti prakāśante iti sakhāyaḥ: that is, those who shine as being of equal rank. The root khyā prakathane. By samāne khyaḥ sa codāttaḥ (U. Sū. 4-[?]) — after the root khyā with the word samāna as upapada, the suffix iṇ comes; it is ḍit; the y is dropped; the upapada is udātta — this is the sense of the sūtra following the Veda commentary. When the suffix iṇ comes here by this sūtra: khyā + i; since the suffix is ḍit, the ā, the ṭi, is dropped, and the y is dropped. By samānasya chandasy amūrdhaprabhṛtyudarkeṣu (Pā. Sū. 6-3-84) — when a last member follows other than the words mūrdhan, prabhṛti, udarka, sa is substituted for the word samāna — the substitute sa for samāna: it becomes sakhi. The author of the Svaramañjarī and others have explained it the same way. If explained so, the word sakhi would be lost to use in the world [outside the compound]. So it is proper to take the reading found now in the Uṇādi, samāne khyaḥ sa codāttaḥ, and explain that the substitute sa comes by this very sūtra. See the explanation of this at (Ṛ. Sū. 1-4-4, as printed). After the word sakhi, jas; by sakhyur asaṃbuddhau (Pā. Sū. 7-1-92) — a sarvanāmasthāna other than the vocative after a stem in the form of the word sakhi is treated as ṇit — jas is like ṇit; so by aco 'ñṇiti (Pā. Sū. 7-2-115) vṛddhi; by eco 'yavāyāvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-78) the substitute āy; s, ru and visarga: it becomes sakhāyaḥ.

निषीदत (niṣīdata) — the root ṣadḷ viśaraṇādau; by dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-64) s for the ṣ; loṭ, middle person tha; by loṭo laṅvat (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) treated like laṅ; by tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute ta; śap; by pāghrādhmā… (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) the substitute sīda: it became sīdata. When it follows the prefix ni, by sader aprateḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-66) — after the iṇ that is the final of a prefix other than prati, ṣ comes for the s of the root sad — ṣ: it becomes niṣīdata.

स्तोम्यः (stomyaḥ) — stomeṣu pratipādyatvena bhavaḥ: when the sense 'existing in' is intended, by bhave chandasi (Pā. Sū. 4-4-110) — after a related word ending in the seventh case, the suffix yat in the sense 'existing in' — the suffix yat; by yato 'nāvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-213) — a word ending in a yat laid down after a word other than nau, if it has two vowels, is udātta at the beginning — initial udātta comes.

दाता (dātā) — the meaning is 'given to giving'. By tṛn (Pā. Sū. 3-2-135), in the sense of habit, the suffix tṛn comes after the root dhāñ [as printed]; by the nit accent initial udātta.

राधांसि (rādhāṃsi) — explained in the seventh mantra. Rādhas is the word denoting the object in the action of the root dā, which is the base of the kṛt suffix tṛn. So by kartṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti (Pā. Sū. 2-3-65) — after a word denoting either agent or object of the action that is the base of a kṛt suffix, the genitive comes — the genitive of the object would be obtained. But since tṛn is used, the prohibition by na lokāvyayaniṣṭhākhalarthatṛnām (Pā. Sū. 2-3-69) comes, so the genitive of the object does not come. By karmaṇi dvitīyā (Pā. Sū. 2-3-2) — after a nominal stem denoting an object not expressed by the tiṅ and the like, the second case comes — the second case comes. ॥8॥

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

In the agniṣṭoma sacrifice, in the morning rite of pressing soma called the morning pressing, the priest called neṣṭṛ uses the ṛk agne patnīḥ as the yājyā mantra. On this the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra (Ā. 5-5), in the section praśāstā brāhmaṇācchaṃsī, has the sūtra agne patnīr ihā vaha (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-9) ukṣānnāya vaśānnāya (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-43-11).

In this ṛk and in the next three ṛks the wives of the gods are set forth. In this ṛk the name of no particular god's wife is indicated; it only speaks of the wives of the gods in general.

उशतीः (uśatīḥ) — vaśa kāntau | kāmayamānāḥ || dear to the gods, radiant; "loving, anxious &c."

त्वष्टारं (tvaṣṭāraṃ) — Tvaṣṭṛ. Why the ṛṣi has called Tvaṣṭṛ along with the wives of the gods is not clear.

पत्नीः (patnīḥ) — the root pā rakṣaṇe. By pāter ḍatiḥ (U. Sū., number not clear [?]) the suffix ḍati comes after the root pā rakṣaṇe; by the force of its being made ḍit, even without the name bha, the ṭi is dropped by ṭeḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-143). The word pati is initially udātta by the suffix accent. By pratyur no yajñasaṃyoge [as printed, for patyur] (Pā. Sū. 4-1-33) — when connection with the sacrifice, in the form of enjoying its fruit, is meant, ṅīp comes after the word pati in the feminine, and n is substituted for the t[i] of pati — with ṅīp and the n it becomes patnī. If the sūtra is explained as laying down only the substitute n, then ṅīp comes by ṛnnebhyo ṅīp (Pā. Sū. 4-1-5), as for stems ending in n. Ṅīp is pit; so by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) it is unaccented, and thus the accent of the suffix ḍati alone stays.

उशतीः (uśatīḥ) — the root vaśa kāntau, laṭ; by laṭaḥ śatṛśānacāv aprathamāsamānādhikaraṇe (Pā. Sū. 3-2-124) the substitute śatṛ, the vikaraṇa śap; by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-72) it is dropped (luk); by sārvadhātukam apit, śatṛ is ṅit; so by grahijyāvayivyadhivaṣṭi… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-16) saṃprasāraṇa, u for the v, the preceding form: uśat. By ugitaś ca (Pā. Sū. 4-1-6) — after a nominal stem ending in an ugit, in the feminine, ṅīp — ṅīp. By śatur anumo nadyajādī (Pā. Sū. 6-1-173) — after a word that ends in a śatṛ without the augment num and is final-udātta, the nadī and the vowel-initial endings śas and the rest are also udātta — ṅīp is udātta. ॥9॥

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

In this ṛk the women Hotrā, Bhāratī, Varūtrī and Dhiṣaṇā, wives of the gods, are invoked. Though they are all different deities, since the words Hotrā (Ni. 2-23 [?]), Bhāratī (Ni. 2-23 [?]) and Dhiṣaṇā (2-23 [?]) are all read among the names of speech, and since the word varūtrī, in the sense 'choice-worthy', is also a qualifier of the word dhiṣaṇā, there is room for doubt whether they are all different deities or different names of the goddess of speech. Following the commentator's explanation, Hotrā should be taken as the wife of Agni who brings about the offering (since the word hotrā is read among the names of sacrifice in Ni. 3-19 [?], she can be called the wife of Agni, lord of the sacrifice); Bhāratī as the wife of the sun named Bharata (Ni. 8-13); and Dhiṣaṇā as the goddess of speech.

ग्नाः (gnāḥ) — gnā iti strīnāma | devapatnyaḥ | The word gnāḥ is read among the names of speech too (Ni. 2-23 [?]). But there is also the Nirukta statement menā gnā iti strīṇām (Ni. 3-21): "menāḥ, gnāḥ — these are names of women". The commentator on the Nirukta has said that women are called gnāḥ because men go near women for intercourse: gnāḥ — gacchanti hy enāḥ maithunena dharmeṇa. In this ṛk gnāḥ, women, means, as said in the previous ṛk, the wives of the gods. The word gnāḥ is read in the Ṛgveda in the ṛks Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-10; 1-61-8; 4-9-4; 5-43-13; 5-46-2; 5-46-8; 6-50-15; 6-68-4; 10-95-[?].

मेना ग्ना इति स्त्रीणाम् । ग्नाः गच्छन्ति ह्येनाः मैथुनेन धर्मेण ।

menā gnā iti strīṇām | gnāḥ gacchanti hyenāḥ maithunena dharmeṇa |

यविष्ठ (yaviṣṭha) — atiśayena yuvā yaviṣṭhaḥ | young, youthful, a man in his prime.

ग्नाः (gnāḥ) — gamyante iti gnāḥ. The root gaṃl sṛpl gatau; after it the Uṇādi suffix ḍna; by the force of its being made ḍit, even without the name bha, by ṭeḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-143) the am, the ṭi of the root, is dropped: g + na = gna. In the accusative plural it becomes gnāḥ. Gna is final udātta by the suffix accent.

होत्रां (hotrāṃ) — by huyāmāśrubhasibhyas tran (U. Sū. 4-607 [?], as read) — after the roots hu dānādanayoḥ, yā prāpaṇe, mā māne, śru śravaṇe, bhasa bhartsanadīptyoḥ, the suffix tran —

— the suffix tran; the suffix being nit, initial udātta comes. Hu + tra: by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa: hotra; in the feminine it becomes hotrā, ending in the accusative singular.

यविष्ठ (yaviṣṭha) — the analysis is atiśayena yuvā. By atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau (Pā. Sū. 5-3-55): when the kṛt suffix lyuṭ comes in the agent sense after the root śīṅ svapne preceded by ati, it becomes atiśayana. Atiśayanam eva atiśāyanam: since it is given as a set form in the sūtra atiśāyane, the ś syllable is lengthened and it becomes atiśāyane. So in common usage too the form atiśāyana is correct. By abādhakāny api nipātanāni bhavanti, atiśayana with a short śa is also correct. Though the root śīṅ alone means sleeping, the root śīṅ with the prefix ati expresses, by the force of the prefix, the sense of excellence; excellence does not mean ‘more’: it means overpowering in the form of making less. The sense of the sūtra: after a stem expressing a meaning marked by such excellence, the suffixes tamap and iṣṭhan come in their own sense. If the sūtra is explained, taking atiśāyana as ending in lyuṭ in the action sense, as atiśāyane ‘rthe tamabiṣṭhanau bhavataḥ, then the meaning of the suffix would become primary, and laghor atiśayanam, laghutamam alone would have to result; the masculine and feminine forms laghutamaḥ, laghutamā and the rest would not be obtained. If the sense is given as atiśāyane vartamānāt prātipadikāt svārthe tamabiṣṭhanau bhavataḥ, the suffixes tamap and iṣṭhan would come only after words like atiśaya, prakarṣa; after words like āḍhya, which do not mean excess, these suffixes could not come. So atiśāyane must be taken as a qualifier of the meaning of the stem; then, since the sense stated before results, no fault arises. Here, when iṣṭhan comes after the word yuvan: yuvan + iṣṭhan. In sthūladūrayuvahrasvakṣiprakṣudrāṇāṃ yaṇādiparaṃ pūrvasya ca guṇaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-156), iṣṭhemeyassu is carried on from turiṣṭhemeyassu (Pā. Sū. 6-4-154), meaning ’when iṣṭhan, imanic, īyasun follow’;* lopaḥ* is carried on from allopo ‘naḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-134). Lupyate iti lopaḥ: the word lopa ending in ghañ in the action sense; yaṇ ādir yasya tat yaṇādi ends in a dropped genitive; param, the first case in the sense of the sixth; by iko* guṇavṛddhī (Pā. Sū. 1-1-3) — wherever guṇa and vṛddhi are laid down by naming them, the word ikaḥ in the sixth case is supplied — ikaḥ is obtained. Pūrvasya: 'preceding' than what? Since yaṇādi param* comes before it, 'preceding' with respect to the following yaṇādi is intended. On the view that the word yuvan is not a quality-word, by the rule ajādī guṇavacanād eva iṣṭhan and īyasun could not come; yet, by the indication given in this very sūtra, which lays down dropping and guṇa before iṣṭhan and the rest, iṣṭhan and īyasun do come after the word yuvan. In fact, on looking at the Mahābhāṣya on the sūtras ākaḍārād ekā saṃjñā (Pā. Sū. 1-4-1) and jāter astrīviṣayād ayopadhāt (Pā. Sū. 4-1-63), it appears that the word yuvan is also a quality-word. Thus the sense of the sūtra is: the yaṇādi following the six words sthūla, dūra, yuvan, hrasva, kṣipra, kṣudra is dropped and the preceding ik takes guṇa. Taking lopa as ending in ghañ in the object sense, one need not explain yaṇādi as ending in a dropped genitive: it is in the first case itself. On this view the sense is: the yaṇādi following these six words is dropped, and the preceding ik takes guṇa. In the words yuvan and hrasva, the letters y and v in the first and r and v in the second both belong to the pratyāhāra yaṇ; if the word param were not in the sūtra, the first yaṇ in these two words would also have to be dropped. In yuvan + iṣṭhan, by this sūtra the van is dropped, and with guṇa of the u: yo + iṣṭha, the substitute av: it becomes yaviṣṭha. By āmantritasya ca (Pā. Sū. 8-1-19) it is wholly unaccented.

भारतीम् (bhāratīm) — by bhṛmṛdṛśiyajiparvipacyamitaminamiharyibhyo 'tac (U. Sū. 3-110 [?]) — after these ten roots, bhṛñ bharaṇe, mṛṅ prāṇatyāge, dṛśir prekṣaṇe, yaja devapūjādau, parva pūraṇe, ḍupacaṣ pāke, ama gatau, tamu kāṅkṣāyām, ṇama prahvatve śabde ca, haryа gatikāntyoḥ, the suffix atac comes — when the suffix atac comes after the root bhṛ, with guṇa it becomes bharata. By prajñādibhyaś ca (Pā. Sū. 5-4-38) — after the words read in the prajñādi class, the suffix aṇ in their own sense — the suffix aṇ; by taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-117) the initial vṛddhi: it became bhārata; this is a name of the sun (Āditya). When bhāratasya strī is intended, since this ends in the suffix aṇ, ṅīp would be obtained by ṭiḍḍhāṇañ… (Pā. Sū. 4-1-15); yet, since in the śārṅgaravādi class there is no vṛt to show the end of the list, the śārṅgaravādi class is established as an ākṛtigaṇa; so by śārṅgaravādyaño ṅīn (Pā. Sū. 4-1-73) — śārṅgaravādi is a word ending in a dropped fifth case; ataḥ from ajādyataḥ (Pā. Sū. 4-1-4) and jāteḥ from jāter astrīviṣayāt (Pā. Sū. 4-1-63) are carried on; since ataḥ qualifies jāteḥ, by yena vidhis tadantasya (Pā. Sū. 1-1-72) 'ending in it' is obtained. So, in the feminine, after the words read in the* śārṅgaravādi* class and after a genus-word ending in the a of the suffix añ, ṅīn comes — the suffix ṅīn comes; by yasyeti ca (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the a before the suffix is dropped; ṅīn is nit, so by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) initial udātta comes. If this word were not included in the śārṅgaravādi class, ṅīp, marked by ending in aṇ, would come by ṭiḍḍhāṇañ…; and since that is pit, by the accent of an unaccented suffix the a of aṇ would be udātta and bhāratī would have to be accented in the middle.

वरूत्रीम् (varūtrīm) — by grasita-skabhita-stabhita-uttabhita-catta-vikasta-viśasta-śaṃstṛ-śāstṛ-tarutṛ-tarūtṛ-varutṛ-varūtṛ-varūtrī-ujjvaliti-kṣariti-kṣamiti-vamity-amitīti ca (Pā. Sū. 7-

2-34) these eighteen words are given as set forms. The sense: here grasu adane; skambhu, stambhu — these two are sautra roots meaning 'to obstruct'; when the suffix kta comes after them, since these roots have the marker u, there is the option of iṭ by udito vā (Pā. Sū. 7-2-56), so the prohibition of iṭ would be obtained by yasya vibhāṣā; yet the augment iṭ is given as a set form. By the mention of stabhita alone the form in uttabhita would also be obtained; still, since uttabhita is mentioned again, it is established that the augment iṭ is not given as a set form for the kta after stambh when it follows a prefix other than ut. In ut + stabhita, by udaḥ sthāstambhoḥ pūrvasya (Pā. Sū. 8-4-61) the preceding homorganic. For the kta after cate yācane and kasa gatau, the absence of iṭ is given as a set form; for the tṛc after śasu hiṃsāyām, śaṃsu stutau, śāsu anuśiṣṭau, the absence of iṭ is given as a set form. For the tṛc after tṝ plavanataraṇayoḥ, vṛṅ sambhaktau, vṛñ varaṇe, the augments uṭ and ūṭ are given as set forms. Since by the set form varūtṛ alone varūtrī would be obtained in the feminine with ṅīp marked by ending in ṛ by ṛnnebhyo ṅīp (Pā. Sū. 4-1-5), the further mention of varūtrī is for elaboration (explanation). For the śap after the four roots jvala dīptau, kṣara saṃcalane, ṭuvamu udgiraṇe, ama gatyādiṣu, the substitute i is given as a set form. In the sūtra, after kṣariti, some read kṣamiti; on this view it is to be known that the substitute i for the śap after the root kṣamūṣ sahane is a set form. As said before, by this sūtra varūtrī results when tṛc comes after the root vṛñ, with the augment ūṭ, guṇa, ṅīp and the yaṇ substitute. If this word varūtṛ is taken, the ṛ of tṛc would have to be udātta by the cit accent. It must be said that here there is no set form for one ending in tṛn. Yet, since there is the word iti at the end of this sūtra, and since it is used with the aim of showing the kinds of examples in the Veda, the word varūtṛ ending in tṛn also is to be taken as given as a set form by this sūtra. Thus by the nit accent varūtṛ is initially udātta; by anudāttaṃ padam ekavarjam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-158) it follows that the ū and the ṛ are unaccented. Though, with the ī of ṅīp as cause, r comes in place of this ṛ by the yaṇ substitute, it is not a yaṇ standing in place of an udātta but one standing in place of an unaccented vowel. So even by udāttayaṇo halpūrvāt (Pā. Sū. 6-1-174) the udātta accent does not come to ṅīp.

धिषणाम् (dhiṣaṇām) — by dhṛṣer dhiṣa ca saṃjñāyām (U. Sū. 2-2-81 [?], as read), kyuḥ being carried on from kṛpṛvṛjimandinidhāñaḥ kyuḥ (U. Sū. 2-240 [?], as read): when a name is meant, the suffix kyu comes after the root and the substitute dhiṣ for the root; so with the suffix kyu after the root dhṛṣ and the substitute dhiṣ: dhiṣ + yu; since the suffix is kit, guṇa of the light penultimate does not come. By yuvor anākau (Pā. Sū. 7-1-1) the substitute ana for yu; in the feminine, ṭāp, ṇ for the n: it becomes dhiṣaṇā. ॥10॥

अभि (abhi) — ābhimukhyena | especially, chiefly, without fail and so on.

महः (mahaḥ) — mahatā | tṛtīyārthe ṣaṣṭhī || Though this word qualifies the instrumental śarmaṇā, the genitive case is used here. It means abundant, much.

नृपत्नीः (nṛpatnīḥ) — manuṣyāṇāṃ pālayitryaḥ | those able to protect men (the wives of the gods): the intention is the goddesses spoken of in the previous ṛk — Hotrā, wife of Agni; Bhāratī, wife of Bharata (the sun); and Dhiṣaṇā, the goddess of speech — that is, the wives of the gods.

अच्छिन्नपत्राः (acchinnapatrāḥ) — na hi pakṣirūpāṇāṃ devapatnīnāṃ pakṣāḥ kenacic chidyante | Since no one cuts the wings of the wives of the gods who bear the form of birds, the commentator has explained this word as their being named acchinnapatrāḥ. This word is used nowhere else in the Ṛgveda except in this ṛk. What the ṛṣi intends in using this word is not clearly known.

देवीः (devīḥ) — after the root divu krīḍādau, by nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-134), the suffix ac of the pacādi type; with guṇa of the light penultimate it became deva. Now the analysis is devasya striyaḥ devyaḥ. Puṃyogād ākhyāyām (Pā. Sū. 4-1-48): the word division is puṃyogāt, ākhyāyām. From ajādyataṣ ṭāp (Pā. Sū. 4-1-4) ataḥ is carried on. Puṃsā yogaḥ puṃyogaḥ, tasmāt: puṃyogāt, a fifth case of cause. The heading striyām (Pā. Sū. 4-1-3) comes in; puṃyogāt is construed with striyām. So the sense is puṃyogād dhetoḥ striyāṃ vartamānāt. In ākhyāyām, by supāṃ supo bhavanti (Pā. Ma. 7-1-39) the seventh case substitutes for the fifth. The word ākhyā means 'expressing'. 'Expressing what?' — since puṃyogāt is present, it comes to mean puṃso vācakāt. The three words puṃs, yogāt, striyām are present. Puṃsā is present, though subordinate, as a qualifier of the last member yoga, a part of the compound. If it is asked why it should not mean 'expressing what? — expressing the connection with a man', or striyām ākhyāyām, 'expressing the woman': on the first view, words like gaṇaka, though in the feminine through connection with a man, do not express the connection with a man; so ṅīṣ would fail to come there. On the second view, if the sense is 'first expressing the woman rather than the connection with a man', then, since expressing a woman is not possible without connection with a man, it would be impossible. If the sense is 'expressing the woman after the connection with a man', words in the feminine through connection with a man would by rule express women; so there would be no exclusion of others. Thus, by the rule saṃbhavavyabhicārābhyāṃ syād viśeṣaṇam arthavat — saṃbhava, fitness; vyabhicāra, exclusion of others — since in the first view it is not possible and in the second view there is no exclusion of others, striyām ākhyāyām cannot be said. So puṃsā, though subordinate, is construed with ākhyāyām: puṃsaḥ ākhyāyām, giving the sense 'expressing a man'. By this qualifier ṅīṣ does not come in words like prasūtā, prajātā. Words like prasūtā, caused by connection with a man, have as their ground of use a state after conception —

— and so, though in the feminine through connection with a man, they do not express the meaning 'man'. So the qualifier puṃs has a purpose in this sūtra: to prevent ṅīṣ. From anyato ṅīṣ (Pā. Sū. 4-1-40) ṅīṣ is carried on. Prātipadikāt is the heading; ataḥ qualifies prātipadikāt, so 'ending in it' is obtained. So the sense of the sūtra: after a nominal stem ending in short a, which, by reason of (as a mark of) connection with a man, expresses a woman and is well known as expressing a man, ṅīṣ comes. Here puṃyoga means connection with a man. Since there is no authority to take a particular one, some hold that both the connection with a man in the form of producer and produced, and the connection in the form of marriage, are intended. On their view, when kekayasya duhitā is meant, ṅīṣ comes and kekayī results. Others, from a study of the Bhāṣya passage (Vyā. Ma. Bhāṣya 4-1-48) —

> यथैव ह्यसावकुर्वती किंचित्पापं भर्तृकृतान्बन्धनादिक्लेशाँल्लभत एवं प्रेष्यशब्दमपि लभते ।
> yathaiva hyasāvakurvatī kiṃcitpāpaṃ bhartṛkṛtānbandhanādikleśāṁllabhata evaṃ preṣyaśabdamapi labhate |

"just as she, doing no wrong at all, receives the troubles of binding and the like caused by the husband, so she receives the word 'servant' too" — hold that this sūtra applies only to the connection with a man in the form of marriage, not to the connection in the form of producer and produced; in places like kekayī they hold that ṅīṣ, marked as of the gaurādi class, comes by ṣidgaurādibhyaś ca (Pā. Sū. 4-1-41). Some divide the word puṃyogāt into three words, pum, yogāt, ākhyāyām: pum ends in a dropped genitive; it is repeated and construed with both yogāt and ākhyāyām: puṃso yogāt, puṃsa ākhyāyām; the other points are as before. Even so, following the view of the author of the Kaiyaṭa [as printed], the two-word division has been shown. When ṅīṣ comes by this sūtra: deva + ī; by yasyeti ca (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the a is dropped; by the suffix accent this is final udātta. After the word devī, jas: devī + as; here by prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-102) — when the vowel of the first- or second-case endings follows a vowel of the ak group, the lengthening of the like preceding vowel comes as a single substitute for both — the lengthening would come, though the prohibition by dīrghāj jasi ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-105) — after a long vowel, before jas or an ic-vowel, the lengthening of the like preceding vowel does not come — would apply. Yet by vā chandasi (Pā. Sū. 6-1-106) — in the Veda, the lengthening of the like preceding vowel comes optionally even after a long vowel before jas and ic — being laid down optionally, the lengthening comes in one alternative: it becomes devīs; ru and visarga.

अवसा (avasā) — the root ava rakṣaṇe. By sarvadhātubhyo 'sun (U. Sū. 4-6-28 [?], as read) the suffix asun. The suffix is nit, so the initial udātta accent comes.

महः (mahaḥ) — the root maha pūjāyām; by kvip ca the suffix kvip; by supāṃ supo bhavanti (Pā. Ma. 7-1-39) the instrumental singular coming after the word mah,

— ṭā — takes the substitute ṅas. By sāv ekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) — when the locative plural su follows, after a word that has one vowel, the case-endings from the third on are udātta — the case-ending is udātta.

नृपत्नीः (nṛpatnīḥ) — nṝṇāṃ patnyaḥ nṛpatnīḥ, ending in the nominative plural. Here too, by vā chandasi, the optional lengthening of the like preceding vowel comes. By patyur no yajñasaṃyoge, n is substituted for the i of the word pati; by ṛnnebhyo ṅīp (Pā. Sū. 4-1-5), ṅīp marked by ending in n; ṅīp, being pit, is unaccented. By the Uṇādi sūtra pāter ḍatiḥ, after the root pā, the suffix ḍati and the dropping of the ṭi give pati. By the suffix accent it is initially udātta, and this alone remains. So the word patnī is initially udātta; after the genitive tatpuruṣa with the word nṛ, the final udātta would be obtained by samāsasya (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223); though by parādiś chandasi bahulam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-199) the sense of this sūtra is that in the Veda the beginning of the following word is optionally udātta, here the author of the vārttika has collected the meaning of the word bahula:

> परादिश्च परान्तश्च पूर्वान्तश्चापि दृश्यते । पूर्वादयश्च दृश्यन्ते व्यत्ययो बहुलं यतः ॥
> parādiśca parāntaśca pūrvāntaścāpi dṛśyate | pūrvādayaśca dṛśyante vyatyayo bahulaṃ yataḥ ||

— "the beginning of the following, the end of the following, and the end of the preceding are also seen; and the beginnings of the preceding are seen: for the interchange is manifold." Examples: for the beginning of the following, tu vijātā urukṣayā (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-2-9); for the end of the following, ni yena muṣṭihatyayā, yas tricakraḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-8-2); for the end of the preceding, viśvāyur dhehi. By this vārttika, as in urukṣayā, here too the beginning of the last member becomes udātta.

अच्छिन्नपत्राः (acchinnapatrāḥ) — na chinnāni: by nañ (Pā. Sū. 2-2-6) the nañ compound; by nalopo nañaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-73) the n is dropped: it becomes acchinnāni. Acchinna is a tatpuruṣa with an indeclinable first member; so, overriding the final udātta by samāsasya, by tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtīyāsaptamyupamānāvyayadvitīyākṛtyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) the indeclinable first member keeps its own accent. Acchinnāni patrāṇi yāsāṃ tāḥ acchinnapatrāḥ: a bahuvrīhi compound. Here by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 3-2-1, as printed) the first member's own accent comes. ॥11॥

इन्द्राणीं, वरुणानीं (indrāṇīṃ, varuṇānīṃ) — by indravaruṇabhavaśarvarudramṛḍahimāraṇyayavayavanamātulācāryāṇām ānuk (Pā. Sū. 4-1-49), the sense of the sūtra is that the augment ānuk and the suffix ṅīṣ come in the feminine after the twelve words indra and the rest. Here for the four words hima, araṇya, yava, yavana both the augment ānuk and the suffix ṅīṣ are laid down; for the other eight words, since ṅīṣ is established by puṃyogād ākhyāyām (Pā. Sū. 4-1-48), only the augment ānuk is laid down here. When, after the present words indra, varuṇa, ṅīṣ comes by puṃyogād ākhyāyām: indra + ī, varuṇa + ī; by the present sūtra indravaruṇa… the augment ānuk. Ānuk is kit; so by ādyantau ṭakitau (Pā. Sū. 1-1-46) — an augment marked ṭ comes as the first part, one marked k —

Page 102 — Rik 12: grammar (end)

— as the final part, of that for which it is laid down — it comes as the final part: indra + ān + ī, varuṇa + ān + ī; lengthening of like vowels; in the first, by aṭkupvāṅnumvyavāye 'pi (Pā. Sū. 8-4-2), ṇ for the n: it becomes indrāṇī, varuṇānī. Ṅīṣ is udātta by the suffix accent ādyudāttaś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-1-3); thus both these words are final udātta.

अग्नायीं (agnāyīṃ) — the analysis is agneḥ strī. In vṛṣākapyagnikusitakusidānām udāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 4-1-37), ai ca is carried on from the preceding sūtra pūtakratorai ca; from saṃkhyāvyayāder ṅīp (Pā. Sū. 4-1-26) ṅīp is carried on. So the sense of the sūtra results: after the four words vṛṣākapi, agni, kusita, kusida, in the feminine, the suffix ṅīp comes, and the substitute ai for the final letter of these four words; this ai is also udātta. By this sūtra, after the present word agni, the suffix ṅīp and the udātta substitute ai for the i come. Agnai + ī: by eco 'yavāyāvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-78) the substitute āy for ai: it becomes agnāyī. Although the word agni, formed with the suffix ni by aṅger nalopaś ca (U. Sū. 4-50), is final udātta by the suffix accent, and the substitute ai coming in its place would be udātta anyway by sthāne 'ntaratamaḥ (Pā. Sū. 1-1-50), yet the word vṛṣākapi, by laghāvante dvayoś ca bahvaṣo guruḥ — in a word of many vowels ending in one or two light vowels, the heavy vowel before the light one is udātta — has ṣā udātta and the rest unaccented by śeṣanighāta; so it is final-unaccented, and the substitute ai in its place would by sthāne 'ntaratamaḥ have to be unaccented. Therefore the udātta is laid down in the present sūtra. For the three words other than vṛṣākapi, though no udātta is laid down, the udātta is established by likeness of place.

This ṛk has many applications. At the time of reciting the vaiśvadeva-śastra mantras, on the second chandoma, this ṛk mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ is used as the mantra for the recitation of a mantra with Heaven-and-Earth as deity. In the section dvitīyasyāgniṃ vaḥ of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra there is the sūtra mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-13) yuvānā pitarā punaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-20-4) (Ā. 8-10).

In the āgrayaṇa-iṣṭi, this ṛk mahī dyauḥ is used as the puronuvākyā ṛk for the offering of the one-potsherd cake with Heaven-and-Earth as deity. In the section āgrayaṇaṃ vrīhiśyāmāka of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra this matter is explained in the sūtra ye ke ca jmā mahino ahimāyāḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-52-14 [?]) mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-13) (Ā. 2-9).

At the time of churning the fire too this ṛk is applied. In the section prātarvaiśvadevyām of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra there is the sūtra abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-3) mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-13) (Ā. 2-16).

When pouring the puroḍāśa called sāṃnāyya to the place of the āhavanīya, this mantra is recited. In the section vidhyaparādha of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra there is the sūtra viṣyandamānaṃ mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-13) ity antaḥparidhideśe ninayeyuḥ (Ā. 3-10).

In the recitation of the āśvina-śastra mantras too, its application is explained in the section saṃsthite ṣv āśvināya of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra by the sūtra mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-13) te hi dyāvāpṛthivī viśvaśambhuvā (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-160-1) (Ā. 6-5).

Apart from such śrauta rites, this mantra is used also in domestic rites and on occasions of prayer to the earth.

द्यौः, पृथिवी (dyauḥ, pṛthivī) — heaven and earth. Though there are many mantras that praise together (as a pair, saṃstavika) the two deities Heaven-and-Earth who preside over heaven and earth, there are also some mantras that praise them using the separate words dyauḥ and pṛthivī:

> उप श्वासय पृथिवीमुत द्यां पुरुत्रा ते मनुतां विष्ठितं जगत् ॥ (ऋ० सं० ६-४७-२९) मित्रो जनान्यातयति ब्रुवाणो मित्रो दाधार पृथिवीमुत द्यां । (ऋ० सं० ३-५९-१) विश्वकर्मन्हविषा वावृधानः स्वयं यजस्व पृथिवीमुत द्यां ॥ (ऋ० सं० १०-८१-६)
> upa śvāsaya pṛthivīmuta dyāṃ purutrā te manutāṃ viṣṭhitaṃ jagat || (ṛ0 saṃ0 6-47-29) mitro janānyātayati bruvāṇo mitro dādhāra pṛthivīmuta dyāṃ | (ṛ0 saṃ0 3-59-1) viśvakarmanhaviṣā vāvṛdhānaḥ svayaṃ yajasva pṛthivīmuta dyāṃ || (ṛ0 saṃ0 10-81-6)

(Glosses of these quotations are not given in the source.) There are twenty-four words, rodasī, purandhrī [as printed: svadhe purandhī] and the rest, that indicate the meaning of the word dyāvāpṛthivī (Ni. 3-30 [?], as read). In the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, with dyauḥ pitaḥ pṛthivi mātaḥ, heaven is addressed as father and the earth as mother. In the Ṛgveda the world (the universe) is generally counted in three main divisions (worlds): heaven, mid-air and earth. Heaven too has three divisions: nāka (the highest, best place in heaven), viṣṭap (the middle region) and pṛṣṭha (the lower part). Though there are no particular divisions in the mid-air, words like vyoman, rocana (the shining region) and antarikṣa indicate a difference in meaning. The word pṛthivī too is called by names such as pṛthivī (the wide region), mahī (the great region), iḷā (this world), vasumatī (rich in wealth). In the Ṛgveda the word dyāvāpṛthivī is generally used thinking of the presiding deities of heaven and earth.

यज्ञं मिमिक्षतां (yajñaṃ mimikṣatāṃ) — svakīyasārabhūtena rasena sektum icchatām | The intention is: may the deities Heaven-and-Earth, who preside over heaven and earth, favour this sacrifice so that it is well accomplished with the best things in heaven and on earth.

पिपृतां नो भरीमभिः (pipṛtāṃ no bharīmabhiḥ) — bharaṇasamarthair annai rasaiś ca || May they make our sacrifice complete with nourishing articles of food and with drinks such as soma juice.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

मही (mahī) — the word mahat, being treated like one ending in śatṛ by vartamāne pṛṣadbṛhanmahajjagacchatṛvac ca (U. Sū. 2-[?]), is ugit. By ugitaś ca (Pā. Sū. 4-1-6), ṅyāpprātipadikāt (Pā. Sū. 4-1-12 [?], as read), the word prātipadikāt is the heading. Ugitaḥ qualifies prātipadikāt; so by yena vidhis tadantasya (Pā. Sū. 1-1-72) a qualifier denotes what ends in it, and 'ending in it' is obtained. Though, this being a rule of suffixes, by samāsapratyayavidhau pratiṣedhaḥ (Pā. Sū. 1-1-72 Vā. 4444 [?]) — in rules of compounds and of suffixes, the obtaining of 'ending in it' is to be prohibited — the prohibition would apply, yet by ugidvarṇagrahaṇavarjam (Pā. Sū. 1-1-72 Vā. 4445 [?]) — except where an ugit or a letter is mentioned, the prohibition of 'ending in it' is to be stated in rules of compounds and suffixes — since here there is the mention of an ugit, ugitaḥ, the prohibition does not come. Or: the heading anupasarjanāt (Pā. Sū. 4-1-14) makes known that in the section on feminine suffixes there is the rule of 'ending in it'; so 'ending in it' is obtained. Striyām (Pā. Sū. 4-1-3) is the heading. From ṛnnebhyo ṅīp (Pā. Sū. 4-1-5) ṅīp is carried on. So the sense of the sūtra: after a nominal stem ending in an ugit, ṅīp comes in the feminine. Ugit is of two kinds: 1. a nominal stem; 2. a suffix. By the qualification of residing only in a nominal stem, wherever a nominal stem is mentioned, there is the prohibition vyapadeśivadbhāvo 'prātipadikena (Paribhā. 33); so vyapadeśivadbhāva cannot come there. Here, since the u-marked suffix is in both the stem and the suffix, vyapadeśivadbhāva comes here. So mahat is a stem ending in an ugit. When ṅīp follows it: mahat + ī; as a Vedic matter the word at is dropped. Viśiṣṭa apadeśaḥ, vyapadeśaḥ means the main usage. Vyapadeśinā tulyam, vyapadeśivat: for something unaccompanied, the usage 'ending in it' does not come in the main sense; yet, in the way an operation comes where there is the main usage, in the same way the operation comes: this is the meaning of* vyapadeśivadbhāva*. Here* mahat* is ugit by extension; yet, since it is not at the end of another, the main usage 'ending in an ugit' cannot come. In atimahat there is the main usage 'ending in an ugit'. Here, as the operation comes where there is the main usage, so here the operation comes: this results from vyapadeśivadbhāva. So there is no hindrance here to ṅīp coming. Ṅīp is pit; so by anudāttau suppitau it would be unaccented. Yet by bṛhanmahator upasaṃkhyānam, read at śatur anumo nadyajādī (Pā. Sū. 6-1-173) — the nadī-named suffix and the vowel-initial case-endings śas and the rest after the words bṛhat and mahat are also udātta — it is udātta. By yū stryākhyau nadī (Pā. Sū. 1-4-3): on the view that it names letters, the sense of the sūtra is that the letters ī and ū that convey the specific sense of being always feminine get the name nadī; on the view that it names what ends in them, words ending in ī and ū that convey the specific sense of being always feminine get the name nadī. Here, on the view that it names letters, ṅīp has the name nadī. Though the udātta would be established by the extension of being treated like śatṛ, we have explained before that the vārttika was begun to obtain the restriction that the udātta is excluded for a suffix after words other than bṛhat and mahat.

द्यौः (dyauḥ) — this word can be derived in two ways. 1. The root dyuta dīptau; after it, by the word bahula in uṇādayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-3-1), the Uṇādi suffix ḍo comes. By the force of the suffix being made ḍit, even without the name bha, the ṭi of the root, ut, is dropped: it became dyo. After this, the nominative singular suffix su. Goto ṇit (Pā. Sū. 7-1-90) means that the suffixes named sarvanāmasthāna after the word go — that is, the five suffixes su, au, jas, am, auṭ — are like ṇit. Here the author of the vārttika, in otaḥ ṇid iti vācyam (Pā. Sū. Vā. 7-1-90-1), says the sūtra goto ṇit should be made oto ṇit; that is, the word gotaḥ should be taken away and the word otaḥ put in its place. Accordingly it results that the sarvanāmasthāna suffixes after a word ending in o are like ṇit, that is, like those marked ṇ. So the su after the word dyo ending in o becomes like ṇit; by aco 'ñṇiti (Pā. Sū. 7-2-115) — when suffixes marked ñ or ṇ follow, a stem ending in a vowel takes vṛddhi — vṛddhi, au for o, and with ru and visarga for su it becomes dyauḥ. On this view the o is udātta by the suffix accent; the au coming in its place is also udātta by likeness of place. 2. Div is a nominal stem ending in v; it is udātta by phiṣo 'nta udāttaḥ. After it the suffix su; by diva aut (Pā. Sū. 7-1-84) — when the suffix su follows, the substitute au for the final letter of the nominal stem div — the substitute au for the v of div: di

+ au + s; by iko yaṇ aci (Pā. Sū. 6-1-77) y for the i: dyau s, the au having come in place of v. By sthānivad ādeśaḥ (Pā. Sū. 1-1-56), with sthānivadbhāva, it is as if v were there. So one may doubt that by halṅyābbhyo dīrghāt (Pā. Sū. 6-1-68) the su should be dropped; but in sthānivad ādeśo 'nalvidhau (Pā. Sū. 1-1-56), analvidhau means that sthānivadbhāva does not come in a rule about letters; so when making the rule about letters halṅyābbhyaḥ, sthānivadbhāva does not come. So the su is not dropped. With ru and visarga it becomes dyauḥ. On this view the i in div is udātta; the au coming in place of the v, by asvarakāṇām asvarakā ādeśāḥ, is unaccented; by udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) — an unaccented vowel after a yaṇ standing in place of an udātta or svarita becomes svarita — the au after the y standing in place of the udātta i becomes svarita: this is the situation. In the present Veda commentary, where it says div śabdaḥ prātipadikasvareṇāntodāttaḥ, it would be right to read dyo śabdaḥ bāhulakāt auṇādikaḍopratyayāntaḥ, pratyayasvareṇāntodāttaḥ. It is not unknown to scholars that the present reading has arisen through the carelessness of scribes and proof-readers.

पृथिवी (pṛthivī) — the root pratha prakhyāne; by pratheḥ ṣivan saṃprasāraṇaṃ ca (U. Sū. 1-144 [?], as read), the suffix ṣivan comes after the root prath, and the root takes saṃprasāraṇa: so when the suffix ṣivan comes, saṃprasāraṇa and ṛ for the r: pṛth + iv = pṛthiv; the suffix is ṣit. By ṣidgaurādibhyaś ca (Pā. Sū. 4-1-41) — after words marked ṣ and words read in the gaurādi class, ṅīṣ in the feminine — ṅīṣ comes. Though here the suffix is ṣit, and the word pṛthiv is not ṣit, yet by the maxim avayave 'caritārthaṃ liṅgaṃ samudāyopakārakaṃ bhavati, since the ṣ-marking in the suffix has no other purpose, that ṣ-marking qualifies the whole; pṛthivī is final udātta by the suffix accent.

> avayave 'caritārthaṃ liṅgaṃ samudāyopakārakaṃ bhavati |

मिमिक्षताम् (mimikṣatām) — the root miha secane. By dhātoḥ karmaṇaḥ samānakartṛkād icchāyāṃ vā (Pā. Sū. 3-1-7) the suffix san; by sanyaṅoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-9) reduplication: mih mih + sa; by halādiḥ śeṣaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) the h of the first mih is dropped. Loṭ, third person tas; by loṭo laṅvat (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) treated like laṅ; by tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute tām. Since the root mih is in the aniṭ-kārikā, vasatir dahadihaduho nah mih ruh lih vahis tathā (Pā. Sū. Pā. Mā. 7-2-10-6 [?], as read), the augment iṭ is barred by ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt (Pā. Sū. 7-2-10). Mimih + sa + tām: now by ho ḍhaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-31) ḍh for h; for this ḍh, by ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si (Pā. Sū. 8-8-41 [?], as read) the substitute t [sic; for k]; for the s after it, by ādeśapratyayayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-59)

ṣ: it becomes mimikṣatām. By tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) it is wholly unaccented.

पिपृताम् (pipṛtām) — the root pṝ pālanapūraṇayoḥ; some hold that pṛ ends in a short vowel. Loṭ, third person tas, the substitute tām as before, śap; by juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-75) ślu (dropping); by ślau (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) reduplication; on the view that ślu has come, by artipipartyoś ca (Pā. Sū. 7-4-77) — ṛ gatau, pṝ, pṛ pālanapūraṇayoḥ — i comes as the final substitute for their reduplication: so for the ṛ of the first pṛ, i; by uraṇ raparaḥ it comes followed by r. By halādiḥ śeṣaḥ the r is removed: it becomes pipṛtām. In the Bhāṣya it is described as: first, by ur at (Pā. Sū. 7-4-66), when a suffix follows, a comes for the ṛ of the reduplication; then i for the a by artipipartyoś ca. In fact, since the rule laying down i is an exception to ur at, it is right to say that i comes first. Here, since the root pṛ ending in a short vowel is taken, the u for the ṛ of the second pṛ by udoṣṭhyapūrvasya (Pā. Sū. 7-1-102) does not come. Since there is the prohibition kṅiti ca (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5), guṇa does not come. Since this is at the beginning of the pāda, by the prohibition apādādau, the total lack of accent by tiṅṅatiṅaḥ does not come. So by the suffix accent tām is udātta.

भरीमभिः (bharīmabhiḥ) — the root ḍubhṛñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ. By husṛdhṛkṣibhṛbhya īman (Daśa. Pā. 6 [as printed]) — after the roots hu dānādanayoḥ, *stya*i[ñ] ācchādane [as printed], ḍubhṛñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, dhṛñ avasthāne, svṛ śabdopatāpayoḥ, sṛ gatau, the suffix īman comes — when īman comes: bhṛ + īman, guṇa; the suffix is nit, so by the nit accent bharīmabhiḥ is initially udātta. ॥13॥

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> The wise men sitting in the eternal home of the Gandharvas taste, through their pious acts the essence of all good things of both heaven and earth as the ghee is the essence of milk.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The meaning of this ṛk fits properly if some words are supplied: in milk the essence is ghee; likewise in heaven and earth there are many things that are the essence. The main intention is that intelligent people, by the performance of sacrifice and the like, reach the eternal world of the Gandharvas (the world of mid-air), the best place, and there enjoy the finest essential things of heaven and earth.

घृतवत् पयः (ghṛtavat payaḥ) — like ghee, the essence in milk; or, since payaḥ also means water, it may be said to mean the essential things such as soma juice.

धीतिभिः (dhītibhiḥ) — karmabhiḥ / by the performance of good rites such as sacrifice.

गन्धर्वस्य ध्रुवे पदे (gandharvasya dhruve pade) — the commentator has quoted the sentence of the Tāpanīya branch, yakṣagandharvāpsarogaṇasevitam antarikṣam (Nṛ. Tā. 1-2), to say that the chief place of the Gandharvas is the mid-air. Or it may also be said to mean: in the best place (world) frequented by the Gandharva folk. The main intention is that, by good conduct such as sacrifice, they reach the best place, the world of the Gandharvas and the like, and there enjoy the finest things, the essence of heaven and the earthly world.

रिहन्ति (rihanti) — liha āsvādane; r for the l by vyatyaya; laṭ, third person plural jhi; by jho 'ntaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-3) the substitute ant for jh; by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-72) śap is dropped (luk): it becomes rihanti.

गन्धर्वस्य (gandharvasya) — by gavi gan dhṛño vaḥ, when the word go is upapada, after the root dhṛñ dhāraṇe, the suffix va, and the substitute gan for the word go: so with the suffix va and the substitute gan laid down along with it, gan + dhṛ + va; guṇa comes followed by r: it becomes gandharva. The sūtra gavi gan… is not in the Uṇādi [list]. ॥14॥

Translation: "O Earth, bhava, be possessed of the qualities of syona-ness and the rest. The word syona means 'wide': so in the Vājasaneya-brāhmaṇa, citing a mantra with the word syona, it is explained: 'indrasyorum āviśa syonaḥ syonam — it says "wide, wide" only.' Or the word syona means 'happiness', as Yāska's statement will be cited. Anṛkṣarā, free from thorns, niveśanī, being a place of dwelling, yaccha, give, naḥ, us, śarma, shelter, saprathaḥ, furnished with breadth: O Earth, give. Citing this ṛk Yāska explains it thus: 'Be happy (sukhā) for us, O Earth, thornless, a dwelling place. Ṛkṣara is a thorn, from ṛcchati; kaṇṭaka is from kantapa, or from kṛntati, or it may be from kaṇṭati, meaning to go: it stands most up. Give us shelter, wide on all sides' (Ni. 9-32)." (Grammatical tail: syonā, ṣivu tantusaṃtāne, the suffix na by siveṣ ṭer yū ca (U. 3-9), with the substitute for the ṭi [as read]; the suffix accent; syonā and pṛthivi are each construed only with the verb bhava, not with each other; so, for lack of mutual connection there is no treating as part of the following, and the o does not take the vocative initial udātta; anṛkṣarā, ṛṣī gatau, 'it goes within': ṛkṣara, a thorn; ksaran by tanyṛṣibhyāṃ ksaran (U. 3-75 [?]); k by ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si, ṣ by ādeśapratyayayoḥ; a bahuvrīhi with nañ; the augment nuṭ by tasmān nuḍ aci (Pā. 6-3-74); the last member final udātta by nañsubhyām; niveśanī, 'they enter into her', lyuṭ by karaṇādhikaraṇayoś ca, the syllable before the suffix udātta by liti; yaccha, dāṇ dāne, the substitute yaccha by pāghrā…, lengthening by dvyaco 'tastiṅaḥ; saprathaḥ, pratha prakhyāne, asun; 'that which is with breadth', compounded by tena saheti tulyayoge (Pā. 2-2-28), sa by vopasarjanasya (Pā. 6-3-82); the kṛt accent.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

पृथिवि (pṛthivi) — O Earth (you) | स्योना (syonā) — wide, or bringing happiness | भव (bhava) — be | नः (naḥ) — for us | अनृक्षरा (anṛkṣarā) — free from thorns | निवेशनी (niveśanī) — as a dwelling place | सप्रथः (saprathaḥ) — wide | शर्म (śarma) — shelter | यच्छ (yaccha) — give.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O Earth, give us extensive abode free from thorns; give us great happiness.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The application of this ṛk is in both śrauta and smārta rites. In the vow (rite) called mahānāmnī it is recited at the time of touching the ground. This matter is explained in the section etadvidaṃ brahmacāriṇam of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra by the sūtra syonā pṛthivi bhaveti samāpya (Ā. 8-14).

In smārta rites too, in the rite called hemanta-pratyavarohaṇa, this mantra is to be muttered. This matter is explained in the section mārgaśīrṣyāṃ pratyavarohaṇam of the Āśvalāyana Gṛhyasūtra by the sūtra tasminn upaviśya syonā pṛthivi bhaveti japitvā (Ā. Gṛ. 2-3-6).

स्योना (syonā) — the commentator says this word indicates two kinds of meaning, 'wide' and 'bringing happiness', and cites the Vājasaneya-brāhmaṇa sentence indrasyorum āviśa syonaḥ syonam iti vistīrṇo vistīrṇam ity eva tad āha, which sets forth the meaning 'wide'.

He has cited the explanation Yāska gave of this ṛk:

> सुखा नः पृथिवि भवानृक्षरा निवेशन्यृक्षरः कण्टक ऋच्छतेः कण्टकः कन्तपो वा कृन्ततेर्वा कण्टतेर्वा स्याद्गतिकर्मण उद्गततमो भवति यच्छ नः शर्म शरणं सर्वतः पृथु ॥ (नि० ९-३२)
> sukhā naḥ pṛthivi bhavānṛkṣarā niveśanyṛkṣaraḥ kaṇṭaka ṛcchateḥ kaṇṭakaḥ kantapo vā kṛntatervā kaṇṭatervā syādgatikarmaṇa udgatatamo bhavati yaccha naḥ śarma śaraṇaṃ sarvataḥ pṛthu || (ni0 9-32)

According to this derivation, syonā = sukhā, anṛkṣarā = niṣkaṇṭakā, niveśanī = fit for dwelling, śarma = sukham, saprathaḥ = wide on all sides. That is, it is a prayer to the earth: give a dwelling place, happy, free from thorns (free from troubles) and fit to live in, and happiness.

अनृक्षरा (anṛkṣarā) — akṣara [as printed; for ṛkṣara] means — ṛcchateḥ gatikarmaṇaḥ kṛntater vā — the thorn, the trouble, formed from the root ṛcch, which conveys the senses of going, obstructing, harming and so on. Anṛkṣara means free from such troubles, free from thorns.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

स्योना (syonā) — the root ṣivu tantusantāne. By siveṣ ṭer yo ca [as printed] (U. Sū. 3-29 [?]), naḥ being carried on from dhāpṛvasyajyatibhyo naḥ (U. Sū. 3-26 [?]): the sense of the sūtra is that after the root ṣiv the suffix na comes, and the substitute yo for the iv, the ṭi of the root. By anekālśit sarvasya the substitute yo comes for the whole iv, not only for the v. By dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-64) s for ṣ: syo + na; the suffix accent comes; with ṭāp marked by ending in a, it becomes syonā: so the Veda commentary. In the Uṇādi sūtras as now printed the reading is siveṣ ṭer yū ca (U. Sū. 3-29 [?]). On this view the substitute yū comes for the iv, the ṭi: syū + na. Now by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa, o for the ū, would be obtained. Yet whether guṇa comes after making the short substitute yu or after making the long substitute yū, it must become syo; there is no difference at all. Since there is a saving of a mora, the substitute yu alone could have been laid down. Even so, by the force of laying down the long substitute, guṇa does not come; by this sūtra the form syūnaḥ alone is established. Syūnaḥ means the sun. Since there is the word bahula in uṇādayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-3-1), when only the suffix na comes after the root ṣiv: siv + na; by chvoḥ śūḍ anunāsike ca (Pā. Sū. 6-4-19) — when a nasal, or the suffix kvip, or a jhal-initial suffix that is kit or ṅit follows, ś for the ch joined by the augment tuk, and ūṭ for v, come as substitutes — the substitute ūṭ for the v: si + ū + na; when both the yaṇ substitute and guṇa are obtained, since the yaṇ substitute has its cause inside, it is internal (antaraṅga); so by asiddhaṃ bahiraṅgam antaraṅge (Paribhā. 51 [?]) first the yaṇ substitute, then guṇa and ṭāp: it becomes syonā. This description is clear in the vṛtti on the sūtra chvoḥ śūḍ and in the Kaiyaṭa on yena vidhis tadantasya (Pā. Sū. 1-1-72).

According to the Medinī lexicon, syonaḥ kiraṇasūryayoḥ, the meaning ray or sun results for the word syona. Yet here, according to the Brāhmaṇa, ‘wide’, and according to the Nirukta (3-6-14 [?], as read), ‘happiness’, are the meanings described.

For pṛthivi: by sāmantritam (Pā. Sū. 2-3-48) — the vocative nominative singular gets the name āmantrita — it has the name āmantrita. By subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare (Pā. Sū. 2-1-2), let the word syonā, ending in sup, be as a part of the word pṛthivi; then by āmantritasya ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-198) the initial udātta would come, and the o in syo might be said to be initially udātta. But subāmantrite applies only where there is connection in the form of mutual construction. Since subāmantrite is a rule about words (padavidhi), by the paribhāṣā samarthaḥ padavidhiḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-1-1) it results that it comes only where there is that connection. In the present case the two words sukhena [as printed] and pṛthivi are construed with the verb bhava; they have no mutual construction with each other. So, for lack of connection, the treating as part of the following does not come. Thus, since the initial udātta of the vocative does not come by the sixth-book sūtra, the o is not initially udātta.

अनृक्षरा (anṛkṣarā) — the root ṛṣī gatau; with the analysis ṛṣati, ‘goes inside (within)’, it becomes ṛkṣara. It means a thorn, that is, a prickle. By tanyṛṣibhyāṃ ksaran (U. Sū. 3-75 [?]) — after these roots, tanu vistāre and ṛṣī gatau, the suffix ksaran comes — the suffix ksaran after the root ṛṣ. With the it-name and dropping for the k: ṛṣ + sara. Now by ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si (Pā. Sū. 8-2-41) — before s, k for ṣ and ḍh — the substitute k for ṣ: ṛk + sara; by ādeśapratyayayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-59) — after the iṇ vowels and the ka-row, ṣ for an s that is a substitute or part of a suffix — ṣ for the s: it becomes ṛkṣara. Na vidyamānaḥ ṛkṣaraḥ yasyāṃ sā: by nañaḥ ’sty arthānāṃ vācyo vā cottarapadalopaḥ the nañ compound with the dropping of the last member vidyamāna; by nalopo nañaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-73) the n of nañ is dropped; by tasmān nuḍ aci (Pā. Sū. 6-3-74) — the vowel-initial last member after nañ with its n dropped takes the augment nuṭ — the augment nuṭ: anṛkṣara. By bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member’s own accent would be obtained; overriding it, by nañsubhyām (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) — in a bahuvrīhi compound the last member after nañ and su is final udātta — the last member is final udātta.

निवेशनी (niveśanī) — niviśanti asyām iti niveśanī. After the root viśa praveśane preceded by the prefix ni, by karaṇādhikaraṇayoś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-3-117) — in the instrumental sense and in the locative sense, lyuṭ comes after roots — the suffix lyuṭ; by yuvor anākau (Pā. Sū. 7-1-1) the substitute ana for yu: niviś + ana, guṇa of the light penultimate; by liti (Pā. Sū. 6-1-193) the e before the suffix is udātta; since the suffix is ṭit, by the sūtra ṭiḍḍhāṇañ… (Pā. Sū. 4-1-15) ṅīp: it becomes niveśanī.

यच्छ (yaccha) — the root dāṇ dāne. By pāghrādhmāsthāmnādāṇdṛśyartisartiśadasadāṃ pibajighradhamatiṣṭhamanayacchapaśyarcchadhauśīyasīdāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78): pā pāne, ghrā gandhopādāne, dhmā śabdāgnisaṃyogayoḥ, ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau, mnā abhyāse, dāṇ dāne, dṛśir prekṣaṇe, ṛ gatiprāpaṇayoḥ [as printed: gatikṣepaṇayoḥ], sṛ gatau — for sarti, according to the vārttika sarter vegitāyāṃ gatau dhāvādeśaḥ, the root sṛ conveying going in the form of speed is intended here — śadḷ śātane, ṣadḷ viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu: when a suffix beginning with the it-named ś follows, these take in order the substitutes piba, jighra, dhama, tiṣṭha, mana, yaccha, paśya, ṛccha, dhau, śīya, sīda; so after the root dāṇ, after loṭ, sip and śap, the substitute yaccha: yaccha + si. By ser hy apic ca (Pā. Sū. 3-4-87) hi for si; by ato heḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105) hi is dropped (luk): it becomes yaccha. Now by dvyaco 'tastiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-135) — in a mantra, at the time of the Saṃhitā, the short a at the end of a two-vowelled word ending in tiṅ is lengthened — lengthening: it becomes yacchā.

सप्रथः (saprathaḥ) — the root pratha prakhyāne. By sarvadhātubhyo 'sun (U. Sū. 4-6-28 [?]) the suffix asun. Prathaḥ is initially udātta by the nit accent. Tena saheti tulyayoge (Pā. Sū. 2-2-28): tena indicates one ending in the third case. Connection in one and the same action, such as going, is called tulyayoga. Thus the indeclinable saha, which indicates tulyayoga, compounds with one ending in the third case, and it is a bahuvrīhi: so the bahuvrīhi compound prathasā saha vartate. Prathaḥ means breadth. Śarma means a house; that both śarma and prathaḥ are construed in the one action vartate is shown by the word saha. So the word saha is compounded with the word prathasā ending in the third case. In vopasarjanasya (Pā. Sū. 6-3-82), from aluk uttarapade (Pā. Sū. 6-3-1) uttarapade is the heading; from sahasya saḥ saṃjñāyām (Pā. Sū. 6-3-78) the words sahasya and saḥ are carried on. Upasarjanam asya astīty upasarjanam: so with the ac suffix in the sense of possession; the word uttarapada is conventional for the last part of a compound. So, by the maxim yaṃ vinā yan nopapadyate tat tenaivākṣipyate, the compound is implied. With upasarjanasya, a sixth case, samāsasya becomes upasarjanavataḥ samāsasya. But since in every compound some member is subordinate, by the force of the qualifier upasarjanasya it results to mean a compound whose members are all subordinate. Thus the sense of the sūtra is established: for saha before the last member of a compound whose members are all subordinate (a bahuvrīhi), the substitute sa comes optionally. By this, when the substitute sa comes for saha, it becomes saprathaḥ. Since this is a bahuvrīhi, and since the kṛt accent by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt applies only in a tatpuruṣa compound, it does not come here. By the word bahula in parādiś chandasi bahulam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-199), after compounding, the beginning of the last member is udātta. ॥15॥

Translation: "Yataḥ pṛthivyāḥ, from which region of the earth Viṣṇu, the supreme Lord, vicakrame, made various steps, saptadhāmabhiḥ, with the seven metres Gāyatrī and the rest as means — ataḥ, from this region of the earth, may the gods avantu, protect, naḥ, us. The Taittirīyas record Viṣṇu's conquest of the worlds, the earth and the rest, by the metres as means: 'The gods with Viṣṇu at their head, by the metres, won these worlds so that they cannot be won back' (Tai. Saṃ. 5-2-1-1). In Viṣṇu's incarnation as Trivikrama, the earth is mentioned [as the starting point] of the stepping of three steps. 'Protection from the region of the earth' means the warding off of the sins of those who live in the world of earth." (Grammatical tail: ataḥ, tasil after the ablative of etad by pañcamyās tasil (Pā. 5-3-7), the substitute aś by etado 'ś (Pā. 5-3-5), the a udātta by the lit accent; yataḥ, the suffixes from tasil up to diś being named vibhakti by prāg diśo vibhaktiḥ (Pā. 5-3-1), the a of the tyadādi words; the lit accent; viṣṇuḥ, the suffix nu by viṣeḥ kic ca (U. 3-39), no guṇa as it is kit, initial udātta because nit is carried on; vicakrame, the compounding of vi by the division of the rule at sup, the compound-final udātta, no loss of accent because of connection with yad; sapta, the bhis dropped by supāṃ suluk; dhāmabhiḥ, manin by dadhāter āto manin, the nit accent.)

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The application of this mantra is of four kinds. In the rite of pressing soma called the morning pressing, at the time of reciting the mantras called somātireka —

— this mantra is recited as a śastra mantra. This matter is explained in the section somātireka of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra by the sūtra mahāṃ indro ya ojasā (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-6-1) ato devā avantu naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-16) ity aindrībhir vaiṣṇavībhiś ca (Ā. 6-6).

In the soma sacrifice called aptoryāma, in the recitation of the uktha mantras by the priest called acchāvāka, the six ṛks beginning ato devāḥ are to be recited as the stotriya mantras. This matter is explained in the section yasya paśavaḥ of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra by the sūtra ato devā avantu na iti stotriyānurūpau (Ā. 9-11).

In the darśapūrṇamāsa sacrifices, at the time of the expiatory offering, the first two ṛks of this sūkta are used. This matter is stated in the section vedaṃ patnyai of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra in the sūtra ato devā avantu na iti dvābhyāṃ vyāhṛtibhiś ca (Ā. 1-11).

If, at the time of reciting the yājyā and puronuvākyā mantras, worldly talk is made between these two mantras for some other reason, this ṛk ato devāḥ is to be muttered as an expiatory mantra: so it is stated in the sūtra āpady ato devā avantu na iti japet of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra (Ā. 1-5).

In this ṛk the subject of Viṣṇu is mentioned for the first time. Though Viṣṇu's pre-eminence is great in the Purāṇas and in the modern Vedānta works, in the Ṛgveda there are only five sūktas devoted to Viṣṇu. Besides, in many places Viṣṇu's name is indicated here and there along with other deities, chiefly with Indra. Viṣṇu's chief feat is said to be the placing of three steps. These three steps are in heaven, mid-air and earth. Besides, Viṣṇu's place called the highest step is reckoned the most excellent position.

In the Ṛgveda Viṣṇu's connection with Indra is seen to be closer than with other deities. Indra seeks Viṣṇu's help when slaying the demon Vṛtra. In the Yajurveda the subject of Viṣṇu is described in many ways. There are many mantras describing Viṣṇu as lord of the sacrifice and of the mountains, as the very form of sacrifice, and as leader of all the gods ("Leader"). The commentator has explained the word viṣṇu in this ṛk as parameśvara because, as Yāska says —

> विष्णुः अथ यद्विषितो भवति तद्विष्णुर्भवति । विष्णुर्विशतेर्वा व्यश्नोतेर्वा ।
> viṣṇuḥ atha yadviṣito bhavati tadviṣṇurbhavati | viṣṇurviśatervā vyaśnotervā |

— he is named Viṣṇu because he pervades everything, or because he enters and pervades everything, or because he pervades everything with his rays; so Viṣṇu may also be said to mean the sun: so the word viṣṇu has been explained. The explanation of the word viṣṇu is in the next ṛk too.

विचक्रमे (vicakrame) — vividhaṃ pādakramaṇaṃ kṛtavān: he stepped over the region of the worlds, the earth and the rest, with his feet in various ways, that is, in many manners.

सप्त धामभिः (sapta dhāmabhiḥ) — dhāma means a place. Here the commentator has said that the word dhāma means metres; sapta dhāmabhiḥ means the seven metres Gāyatrī and the rest; or, if the meaning is taken as referring to the sun, it may be said to mean the seven rays (or the seven horses). In the Taittirīya Saṃhitā —

> विष्णुमुखा वै देवाश्छन्दोभिरिमाँल्लोकाननपजय्यमभ्यजयन् ॥ (तै० सं० ५-२-१-१)
> viṣṇumukhā vai devāśchandobhirimāṁllokānanapajayyamabhyajayan || (tai0 saṃ0 5-2-1-1)

— it is said that the gods, with Viṣṇu as their leader, won the worlds with the help of the metres. In the Purāṇas and the like there are extended descriptions of the legend that Viṣṇu, taking the Trivikrama incarnation, by the stepping of three steps gave back to the gods the earth, sky and mid-air that the demons had taken from them. It should be noted that the subtle description seen in the Veda is the source of the legends in the Purāṇas.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

अतः (ataḥ) — by pañcamyās tasil (Pā. Sū. 5-3-7) — after the word kim, the pronouns other than dvi and the rest, and the word bahu, when they end in the fifth case, the suffix tasil comes optionally — the suffix tasil after the word etad ending in the fifth case: etad + ṅasi + tas. Now they make the sūtra etado 'n (Pā. Sū. 5-3-5) into two sūtras, etadaḥ and an. The first, etadaḥ, means that when the prāgdiśīya suffixes beginning with r and th follow, the substitutes eta and it come in order for the word etad; examples etarhi, ittham. An is the second sūtra. Here the word rathoḥ is not carried on from the previous sūtra. So the meaning is that when a prāgdiśīya suffix follows, the substitute an comes for the word etad. In the present case, when the substitute an comes by the second sūtra, since it has more than one letter, by anekālśit sarvasya it comes in place of the whole: an + tas; though the fifth case, a part of a stem ending in a taddhita, is dropped (luk) by supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-71), the name pada comes because by pratyayalope pratyayalakṣaṇam (Pā. Sū. 1-1-62) the mark of the suffix remains. Since the name pada is not connected with the stem (aṅga), the prohibition of the suffix-mark by na lumatāṅgasya (Pā. Sū. 1-1-63) does not come. Thus by nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n of an is dropped; with ru and visarga for the s it becomes ataḥ. In the Mahābhāṣya the reading an ending in n is discussed. The author of the Kaiyaṭa, saying iha kecid aśaṃ paṭhanti kecid anam | tatrottarapāṭhāpekṣayā vicāraḥ, holds that the sūtra is read in two ways, etado 'ś and etado 'n. The author of the vṛtti has adopted the reading etado 'ś. Following his view, in the Veda commentary too the reading etado 'ś is accepted. On this view, as before, the division of the rule must be made and the meaning described. Aś, being śit, comes as a substitute for the whole; so it becomes ataḥ: only this much is the difference. The suffix is lit; so by liti (Pā. Sū. 6-1-93, as printed) the a before the suffix is udātta.

इह केचिदशं पठन्ति केचिदनम् । तत्रोत्तरपाठापेक्षया विचारः ।

iha kecidaśaṃ paṭhanti kecidanam | tatrottarapāṭhāpekṣayā vicāraḥ |

यतः (yataḥ) — yasmāt yataḥ: after the word yad ending in the fifth case, by pañcamyās tasil, tasil, and the fifth case is dropped. For this tasil, the suffixes laid down from the sūtra prāg diśo vibhaktiḥ (Pā. Sū. 5-3-1) up to the sūtra dikśabdebhyaḥ saptamīpañcamīprathamābhyo digdeśakāleṣv astātiḥ (Pā. Sū. 5-3-27) get the name vibhakti; so it has the name vibhakti. Therefore by tyadādīnām aḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-102) — when a vibhakti follows, a is substituted for the final letter of the words of the tyadādi class — a for the d of the word yad; by ato guṇe (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the following form. As before, the lit accent comes.

विष्णुः (viṣṇuḥ) — by viṣeḥ kic ca (U. Sū. 3-39), the sense of the sūtra is that after the root viṣḷ vyāptau the suffix ṇu comes, and it is both kit and nit. The ṇuḥ carried on from snoḥ ṇuḥ (U. Sū. 3-32 [?]); for nuḥ there is no occasion here. Viṣ + ṇu: since the suffix is kit, there is the prohibition kṅiti ca, so guṇa of the light penultimate does not come. Since the suffix is nit, viṣṇu is initially udātta by the nit accent.

विचक्रमे (vicakrame) — in saha supā (Pā. Sū. 2-1-4) they make the division of the sūtra into saha and supā. From subāmantrite, sup is carried on. From samarthaḥ padavidhiḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-1, as printed) samarthaḥ is obtained; it must be changed into one ending in the third case. Thus the sense of the first sūtra is that a word ending in sup is compounded with a connected word; since it is said iṣṭasiddhyarthaṃ yogavibhāgaḥ, to establish the form, by this sūtra a word ending in sup is compounded with a last member ending in tiṅ; but it results that this compound comes only in the Veda. By this sūtra the present word vi, ending in sup, is compounded with the word cakrame ending in tiṅ; so by samāsasya (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223) the final udātta accent comes here. Since there is connection with yad in yataḥ, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66) — a word ending in tiṅ after a word in which there is the word yad is not unaccented —

— by this prohibition, the total lack of accent by tiṅṅatiṅaḥ does not come. The meaning of the second sūtra supā is that a word ending in sup is compounded with a connected word ending in sup. It is not needed in the present case.

सप्त (sapta) — for the instrumental plural suffix bhis coming after this word, luk by supāṃ suluk (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39).

धामभिः (dhāmabhiḥ) — the root (ḍu)dhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ. It ends in ā. By āto manin kvanib vanipaś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-2-74) — when a word ending in sup or a prefix is upapada, after a root ending in ā the three suffixes manin, kvanip, vanip, and by the word ca the suffix vic too, come — the suffix manin comes. Dhā + man: by the nit accent this is initially udātta. When the instrumental plural suffix bhis is put, the n is dropped by nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya: it becomes dhāmabhiḥ. ॥16॥

Translation: "Viṣṇu, who took the Trivikrama incarnation, vi cakrame, stepped in a special way, with regard to idam, all this world that appears. Then tredhā, in three ways, he ni dadhe, put down, his padam, foot. Asya, of this Viṣṇu, in the pāṃsura, dusty, footprint, all this world is samūḷham, well contained. This ṛk is explained by Yāska thus: 'Viṣṇu, from viś or from vyaś. Whatever there is, that Viṣṇu steps over; he puts down his foot in three ways, for being threefold: on the earth, in the mid-air, in heaven, says Śākapūṇi; at the place of rising, at the Viṣṇupada, at Gayaśiras, says Aurṇavābha. Samūḷham asya pāṃsure: in the mid-air, the place of swelling, the foot is not seen; or it may be in the sense of comparison: as in a dusty place the foot is not seen. Pāṃsavaḥ, because they are produced by the feet, or because, fallen, they lie, or because they are to be crushed' (Ni. 12-19)." (Grammatical tail: tredhā, the suffix edhāc by edhāc ca (Pā. 5-3-46), final udātta as cit; samūḷham, vaha prāpaṇe, kta by niṣṭhā, saṃprasāraṇa by vacisvapi... (Pā. 6-1-15), then ḍh, dh, ṭutva, the dropping of ḍh and lengthening; the prefix keeps its own accent by gatir anantaraḥ; asya, the unaccented aś by idamo 'nvādeśe 'śanudāttaḥ..., and the suffix unaccented as a sup; pāṃsure, the suffix ra in the sense of matup by nagapāṃsupāṇḍubhyaś ceti vaktavyam (Kā. 5-2-107-1); the suffix accent.)

Viṣṇu (taking the Trivikrama incarnation) stepped over this whole world by placing his foot in three ways. In the dusty footprint of that Viṣṇu this world was covered over and became as if not seen.

In the upāṃśu-yāga connected with Viṣṇu, the ṛks idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-17) and trir devaḥ pṛthivīm eṣa etām (Ṛ. Saṃ. 7-100-3) are to be used as the puronuvākyā and yājyā mantras: since the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra says so in the section uktā devatāḥ (Ā. 1-6), the ṛk idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame in question is a puronuvākyā mantra. If a dog enters between the fire-pits called gārhapatya and āhavanīya set up in the sacrifice, then to remove that fault one must throw ashes on the place where the dog sat with the mantra idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame: so it is stated in the section vidhyaparādha (Ā. 3-10). And in the offering called ātithya, when offering the principal oblation, this very mantra idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame is the puronuvākyā mantra. In the section athātithyeḷāntā the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra says that the ṛks idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-17) and tad asya priyam abhi pātho aśyām (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-154-5) are to be used as the puronuvākyā and yājyā mantras (Ā. 4-5). Ātithya: in the soma sacrifice, when the soma is brought, the soma is imagined as the king and the seven metres Gāyatrī and the rest as his attendants, and the method is to make an offering for the pleasure of the metres Gāyatrī and the rest so as to give hospitality ("Hospitality") to the king and the king's attendants. On this subject, in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā of the Yajurveda —

> यावद्भिर्वै राजानुचरैरागच्छति सर्वेभ्यो वै तेभ्य आतिथ्यं क्रियते छन्दांसि खलु वै सोमस्य राज्ञोऽनुचराण्यग्नेरातिथ्यमसि विष्णवे त्वेत्याह गायत्रिया एवैतेन करोति सोमस्यातिथ्यमसि विष्णवे त्वेत्याह त्रिष्टुभ एवैतेन करोत्यतिथेरातिथ्यमसि विष्णवे त्वेत्याह जगत्या एवैतेन करोत्यग्नये त्वा रायस्पोषदाव्ने विष्णवे त्वेत्याहानुष्टुभ एवैतेन करोति श्येनाय त्वा सोमभृते विष्णवे त्वेत्याह गायत्रिया एवैतेन करोति ॥

— and so on. In these offerings Viṣṇu alone is the chief deity. Likewise in the offering called upasad, the ṛks gayasphāno amīvahā (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-91-12) and idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-17) are to be recited as the yājyā and puronuvākyā mantras, says the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra in the section athopasat (Ā. 4-8). This is the order of application of this ṛk; and in domestic rites and in smārta rites and the like it is customary to use this ṛk on occasions of reciting mantras connected with Viṣṇu.

(The Taittirīya passage is not given a section number in the print; its gloss is not given in the source.)

The great sage Yāska has given the Nirukta for this ṛk:

> विष्णुः । अथ यद्विषितो भवति तद्विष्णुर्भवति विष्णुर्विशतेर्वा व्यश्नोतेर्वा ॥ (नि० १२-१८)
> viṣṇuḥ | atha yadviṣito bhavati tadviṣṇurbhavati viṣṇurviśatervā vyaśnotervā || (ni0 12-18)

He has explained the meaning of the word viṣṇu in this way:

> यदा विषितो व्याप्तोऽयमेव सूर्यो रश्मिभिर्भवति तदा विष्णुर्भवति । विशतेर्वा यदा विष्टः प्रविष्टः सर्वतो रश्मिभिर्भवति तदा विष्णुर्भवति । व्यश्नोतेर्वा विपूर्वस्य वाश्नोतेः यदा रश्मिभिरतिशयेनायं व्याप्तो भवति व्याप्नोति वा रश्मिभिरयं सर्वं तदा विष्णुरादित्यो भवति ॥

That is, when the sun makes everything pervaded by his rays, then he is called Viṣṇu; or he is called Viṣṇu because he enters everything through his rays; or the sun himself is called Viṣṇu because he pervades everything exceedingly with his rays and shines. And —

> tasyaiṣā bhavati || idaṃ viṣṇurvi cakrame tredhā ni dadhe padaṃ | samūḷhamasya pāṃsure || yadidaṃ kiṃca tadvikramate viṣṇustridhā nidhatte padaṃ tredhābhāvāya pṛthivyāmantarikṣe divīti śākapūṇiḥ | samārohaṇe viṣṇupade gayaśirasītyaurṇavābhaḥ | samūḷhamasya pāṃsure pyāyane 'ntarikṣe padaṃ na dṛśyate | api vopamārthe syāt samūḷhamasya pāṃsula iva padaṃ na dṛśyata iti || pāṃsavaḥ pādaiḥ sūyanta iti vā, pannāḥ śerata iti vā, piṃśanīyā bhavantīti vā || (ni0 12-19)

— to set forth the meaning of the word viṣṇu, he has given this very ṛk idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame as an example and explained its meaning.

The view of Śākapūṇi is that Viṣṇu (the sun), to divide this world in three ways, placed three feet: he made three footsteps to separate it into three parts — earth, mid-air and heaven. That is, since he is manifest on the earth by his rays, in the mid-air by lightning, and in heaven by the sun's orb, tredhā means he is manifest in three ways: this is the intention.

Aurṇavābha holds that since the sun is seen at dawn when rising (samārohaṇe) on the eastern mountain, at midday (viṣṇupade) in the mid-air, and in the evening (gayaśirasi) on the western mountain, this is the meaning of tredhā ni dadhe padam. Samūḷham asya pāṃsure means that the lightning, the midday step, in the mid-air, never showing — — is hidden: that is the meaning. Or a sense of comparison may be given: as a thing covered by dust (or the trace of a footprint) does not show.

For the word pāṃsure: pādaiḥ sūyante janyante ity arthaḥ: they arise, come into being, from the feet, that is, they fall off; so the dust fallen from the feet is named pāṃsura. Or pannāḥ śerata iti vā | piṃśanīyāḥ dhvaṃsanīyāḥ dhvaṃsanārhās te bhavanti: because it settles on the feet, or because what is on the feet must be shaken off and destroyed, the dust of the feet is named pāṃsura.

All the matters stated above are the explanations of the great sage Yāska. In the Purāṇas and other works Viṣṇu has a place of pre-eminence. Because he pervades the whole universe, they call Viṣṇu the supreme Lord and the supreme Brahman. Or, among the three forms Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara, who carry out the creation, preservation and dissolution of the world, Viṣṇu is famed as the one who preserves the world. For this work of preserving the world, Viṣṇu had to take many incarnations; so it is the view of the commentator and other scholars that one of those incarnations, the Vāmana or Trivikrama incarnation, is described in this ṛk.

Because the incarnations of Viṣṇu and the like are not mentioned in the Ṛgveda, because the deeds of the gods seen here and there in the Veda are described in special ways in the Purāṇas, and because the Veda itself is the source of the Purāṇic stories, Western and modern scholars hold that it is not right to explain the Vedic mantras by fitting to them the incarnations and the like found in the Purāṇas.

According to the story told in the Purāṇas: while the demon called Bali Cakravartin, having conquered the gods, was ruling the kingdom, the defeated gods appealed to Viṣṇu; to protect them Viṣṇu took the Vāmana incarnation and, while Bali Cakravartin was under the consecration for a sacrifice, went to him and asked to be given as much land as three of his steps; Bali agreed and said he would give it accordingly. Then Viṣṇu, the Vāmana, took the Trivikrama incarnation, that is, assumed a huge form so as to pervade the earth and the mid-air, stepped over the whole earth with one foot and the mid-air with another, and asked Bali where to place the third foot; the king, being true to his word, since there was no other place, begged that he be favoured by its being placed on his own head; accordingly Trivikrama placed his third foot on Bali's head, made him go to the nether world and live happily ruling there, and gave him the boon he wanted: there is an extended description of this.

त्रेधा (tredhā) — by edhāc ca (Pā. Sū. 5-3-46) — for the suffix dhā after the words dvi and tri, the substitute edhāc comes — and by saṃkhyāyā vidhārthe dhā (Pā. Sū. 5-3-42), for the suffix dhā after the word tri, the substitute edhāc: tri + edhā; by yasyeti ca the i is dropped; by citaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163) tredhā is final udātta.

समूळ्हं (samūḷhaṃ) — the root vaha prāpaṇe. After it, by niṣṭhā (Pā. Sū. 3-2-102) — after a root in the sense of the past, the suffixes kta and ktavatu — the suffix kta. The k of the suffix gets the name it and is dropped: vah + ta. Now by vacisvapiyajādīnāṃ kiti (Pā. Sū. 6-1-15), the sense of the sūtra is that when a suffix marked k follows, the roots vac, svap and the roots of the yajādi class take saṃprasāraṇa. The root vah belongs to the yajādi class counted as yajir vapir vahiś caiva vasir veñ vyeñ ity api | hveñ vadī śvayatiś ceti yajādyāḥ syur ime nava. So by the sūtra vacisvapi… saṃprasāraṇa, u for the v: u + ah + ta; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) the preceding form: uh + ta; by ho ḍhaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-31) ḍh for h: uḍh + ta; by jhaṣas tathor dho 'dhaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-40) — after a letter of the jhaṣ group not belonging to the root dhā, dh is substituted for t and th — dh for the t after the ḍh: uḍh + dha; by ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-4-41) ḍh for the dh: uḍh + ḍha; by ḍho ḍhe lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-13) — a ḍh before a ḍh is dropped — the first ḍh is dropped: u + ḍha; by ḍhralope pūrvasyā dīrgho 'ṇaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-111) — a, i, u standing before the ḍh or r that caused the dropping of a ḍh or r are lengthened — the u is lengthened: ū + ḍha; by the traditional saying ajmadhyasthaḍakārasya ḷakāraṃ bahvṛcā jaguḥ | ajmadhyasthaḍhakārasya ḷhakāraṃ vai yathākramam, ḷh for the ḍh. By gatir anantaraḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-49) the gati named sam keeps its own accent.

अस्य (asya) — after the word idam, the genitive singular jas [as printed; for ṅas]; by tyadādīnām aḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-102) a for the m: ida + a + jas; by ato guṇe (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the following form: ida + jas; by ṭāṅasiṅasām ināṭsyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-12) the substitute sya for jas: ida + sya. By idamo 'nvādeśe 'śanudāttas tṛtīyādau (Pā. Sū. 2-4-32) the unaccented substitute aś for ida: asya. By anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) sya is unaccented; thus asya is wholly unaccented.

पांसुरे (pāṃsure) — at ūṣasuṣimuṣkamadho raḥ (Pā. Sū. 5-2-107) the author of the vārttika has read nagāc ca. Here the author of the Kāśikā-vṛtti has read nagapāṃsupāṇḍubhyaś ceti vaktavyam (Kāśikā 5-2-107-1). Its meaning is: it should be said that after the words naga, pāṃsu, pāṇḍu the suffix ra comes in the sense of matup. By this, when the suffix ra comes after the word pāṃsu, it becomes pāṃsura. By the suffix accent [the word] is initially udātta [as printed]. In the locative singular it becomes pāṃsure. ॥17॥

अदाभ्यः (adābhyaḥ) — who cannot be harmed by anyone | गोपाः (gopāḥ) — protecting the whole world | विष्णुः (viṣṇuḥ) — Viṣṇu | (in the places, the earth and the rest) धर्माणि (dharmāṇi) — the works of dharma proper to the performance of good rites such as the agnihotra | धारयन् (dhārayan) — nourishing (protecting) | अतः (ataḥ) — by this order of action | त्रीणि पदा (trīṇi padā) — three steps | वि चक्रमे (vi cakrame) — stepped out.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

No one can harm Viṣṇu. He is the protector of the whole world; therefore, for the upholding of dharmas such as the agnihotra, Viṣṇu made three strides.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Vishnu, the uninjurable and the protector of the Universe, stepped three steps, thereby preserving the Sacred laws.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The application of this mantra is as follows. In the rite called upasadana, when making the offering connected with Viṣṇu, this ṛk is to be used in the morning as the yājyā mantra and in the evening as the puronuvākyā mantra: so it is stated in the section trīṇi padā vi cakrama iti sviṣṭakṛdādi lupyate of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra (Ā. 4-8).

गोपाः (gopāḥ) — go means the earth; because he protects it, Viṣṇu is named gopāḥ.

अदाभ्यः (adābhyaḥ) — ahiṃsyaḥ, one who cannot be harmed. The meaning is that no one has the power to harm him.

धर्माणि, धारयन् (dharmāṇi, dhārayan) — according to the saying sarvasya hi bhagavān viṣṇur āśrayaḥ, Viṣṇu is not only the protector of the whole world but also the support of all dharmas ("Universal laws") and their protector; that is, he is foremost in punishing the wicked and protecting the good. The intention is that among creation, preservation and dissolution, the duties of the three forms Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara, Viṣṇu carries out his own duty, the preservation of the world, that is, punishing the wicked and protecting the good.

पदा (padā) — for the accusative plural suffix śas, by supāṃ suluk (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39), the substitute ḍā; by sthānivadbhāva it is unaccented. The substitute ḍā coming in place of śas —

— should be unaccented; yet, by the force of the suffix being made ḍit, even without the name bha, the final udātta a of the word pada is dropped by ṭeḥ. So by anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161) the unaccented ā that caused the loss of the udātta a becomes udātta.

अदाभ्यः (adābhyaḥ) — the root dabh is not found in Pāṇini's list of roots; yet the commentator describes that this root exists and that it means harming. By ṛhalor ṇyat (Pā. Sū. 3-1-124) — after a root ending in ṛ or in a consonant, the suffix ṇyat — the suffix ṇyat: dabh + ya; by ata upadhāyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-116) vṛddhi of the penultimate: na dābhyaḥ adābhyaḥ: by the sūtra nañ (Pā. Sū. 2-2-6) the nañ compound; by nalopo nañaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-73) the n is dropped; by tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtīyāsaptamyupamānāvyayadvitīyākṛtyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) — in a tatpuruṣa compound these seven first members keep their own accent — nañ keeps its own accent.

धारयन् (dhārayan) — dhṛñ dhāraṇe, ṇic: dhṛ + i; by aco 'ñṇiti (Pā. Sū. 7-2-115) vṛddhi, followed by r: it became dhāri. After it laṭ; by laṭaḥ śatṛśānacāv aprathamāsamānādhikaraṇe (Pā. Sū. 3-2-124) the substitute śatṛ for laṭ; by kartari śap (Pā. Sū. 3-1-68) the vikaraṇa śap: dhāri + a + at; with śap as cause, guṇa e for the i of ṇic, the substitute ay, and the following form for both a's: dhārayat; after it the suffix su; by ugidacām (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) the augment n after the ya: dhārayant + s; by halṅyābbhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-68) su is dropped; by saṃyogāntasya lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-23) the t at the end of the conjunct is dropped; since by pūrvatrāsiddham (Pā. Sū. 8-2-1) the dropping of the conjunct-final is asiddha, by nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n is not dropped: it becomes dhārayan. Here śap, being pit, is unaccented by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4). The śatṛ too, being an a-final original teaching, and following śap, is unaccented by tāsy anudāttenṅid adupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam ahnviṅoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186). The a coming by the following form for both of these is unaccented by likeness of place. So, the i of ṇic staying udātta by the suffix accent, the e coming in its place and the substitute ay coming in its place are udātta. ॥18॥

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> See the deeds of Vishnu, through which (the worshipper) has accomplished the pious acts ; he is the intimate friend of Indra.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

In this ṛk some words have to be supplied (adhyāhāra). Since there is the word paśyata, 'behold', the vocative word 'O people' is needed. Likewise in vratāni paspaśe, 'he performed the rites', the agent word 'the sacrificer' is needed, and along with the words indrasya sakhā the word viṣṇuḥ too is needed.

व्रतानि (vratāni) — the good works to be done by rule, that is, the performance of sacrifice and the like.

पस्पशे (paspaśe) — spṛṣṭavān, he touched, that is, he began; he started: this is the meaning.

युज्यः (yujyaḥ) — yogyo 'nukūlaḥ or yogyaḥ: favourable to Indra, a dear friend, who is with him, fit: this is the meaning. The commentator has cited an anuvāka of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā (Tai. Saṃ. 2-4-12) which tells of the various bold deeds of Viṣṇu told in this ṛk, Viṣṇu's friendship with Indra, the invoking of Indra and Viṣṇu together, and such matters. Its main intent is as follows —

Tvaṣṭṛ Prajāpati had a son named Viśvarūpa. Though he was the priest of the gods, he was well disposed toward the demons too and kept saying that they too should be given a share in sacrifices and the like. Knowing this, Indra, guessing that this Viśvarūpa might in course of time give his own lordship of heaven to the demons, slew this Viśvarūpa, who favoured the demons' side. By the slaying of his son —

— Tvaṣṭṛ, angered, wished for a son able to slay Indra and performed a sacrifice for it. While performing the sacrifice, out of anger at Indra, he did not invite Indra to drink soma in that sacrifice. When Indra said that he too should be invited to the sacrifice, Tvaṣṭṛ said to Indra, 'Because you killed my son I will not invite you', and performed the sacrifice leaving Indra out. But Indra, troubling his sacrifice, drank the soma by force without Tvaṣṭṛ's consent. Then Tvaṣṭṛ took up the remainder of the soma that Indra had left after drinking, went near the āhavanīya fire, kindled it so that it blazed well, and in that fire made an offering with the mantra स्वाहेन्द्रशत्रुर्वर्धस्व (svāhendraśatrur vardhasva), meaning 'may there be for me a son who will kill Indra'. But since, in uttering the word indraśatruḥ, the accent was changed, the meaning of the mantra too changed, and instead of 'a son who will kill Indra' it came to mean 'a son to be killed by Indra'; accordingly a son named Vṛtra was born. Meanwhile the fire established in the sacrifice, knowing that this Vṛtra born in the sacrifice would go to the upper world and trouble the gods, went out before the sacrifice was complete and broke the sacrifice. It is said that if the fire in a sacrifice blazes up brightly with its flames, it brings the sacrificer's wishes to pass, and that if the fire goes out without blazing well, it portends misfortune to the sacrificer. Thus Vṛtra, born of the sacrificial offering, instead of killing Indra became one to be killed by Indra. Then that Vṛtra quickly pervaded the whole world and began to grow each day by as much as the distance an arrow goes from a bow. Because he thus pervaded the world by the growth of his body, he got the name Vṛtra. Seeing this, Indra was afraid. Tvaṣṭṛ, his father, too was frightened. Then Tvaṣṭṛ made a divine thunderbolt weapon, consecrated it with mantras and gave it to Indra. Indra had not the strength even to lift that great thunderbolt, made of austerity. Seeing this, while he was thinking what to do, Viṣṇu appeared to Indra. Then Indra prayed to Viṣṇu thus: 'O Viṣṇu, seeing the strength and power of the demon Vṛtra I am greatly afraid. So I have not even the strength to lift this thunderbolt with my hand. So let the two of us together take away the world-pervading power the demon Vṛtra has. You must help in this.' When he so prayed, Viṣṇu agreed to do so, made his body (or his strength and power) into three parts and placed them in the earth, the mid-air and heaven. Then Indra, accompanied by the third part of Viṣṇu's body that was on the earth, lifted with his hand the thunderbolt that had fallen behind Viṣṇu. Then Vṛtra —

— frightened, said to Indra: 'O Indra, do not strike my body. I will give you all my strength (power) that pervades the earth'; and accordingly he gave Indra all his strength that was in the earth. Indra accepted it and gave it to Viṣṇu. Viṣṇu too accepted it. Likewise Indra accepted Vṛtra's strength that was in the mid-air and the heavenly world and gave it to Viṣṇu. Then Vṛtra, addressing Indra, asked: 'Let us both make a treaty; give me leave to enter your body.' Indra said, 'What will you do by entering my body? Will you not eat me up?' Vṛtra said, 'No; I will stay in your belly in the form of the digestive fire, digesting the food and the like that you eat, and be there for your enjoyment', and entered Indra's body. From then on Vṛtra stays in the bellies of men in the form of hunger and gives trouble to living beings. As said before, because Indra received the strength from Vṛtra three times and gave it to Viṣṇu, the oblation called puroḍāśa offered to Indra and Viṣṇu got the name tridhātuyukta. And it became customary, when offering such an oblation, to invoke Indra and Viṣṇu together and make the offering. Since this legend shows Viṣṇu's deeds and the friendship Viṣṇu had for Indra, the commentator has cited this anuvāka.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

पस्पशे (paspaśe) — the root spaśa bādhanasparśanayoḥ; after it liṭ; by liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) reduplication: spaś + spaś + liṭ. By halādiḥ śeṣaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) the remaining of only the first letter of the reduplicate would be obtained; but by its exception śarpūrvāḥ khayaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-61) — the letters kh, ph, ch, ṭh, th, c, ṭ, t, k, p following ś, ṣ, s in the reduplicate remain — the p remains, and consequently the initial s is dropped: pa + spaś + liṭ; for liṭ the substitute ta, and by liṭas tajhayor eśirec (Pā. Sū. 3-4-81) the substitute eś for ta: it becomes paspaśe. By yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66), since there is the prohibition that a word ending in tiṅ after a word containing yad is not unaccented, in yato vratāni paspaśe the paspaśe after the word yataḥ is not unaccented. In pūjanāt pūjitam anudāttam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-67), by the repeated mention of pūjita, it is made known that atra prakaraṇe pañcamīnirdeśe 'pi nānantaryam iṣyate. So though there is the separation by the word vratāni, the prohibition of the unaccented comes.

युज्यः (yujyaḥ) — since there is the word bahula in uṇādayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-3-1), after the root yuj the Uṇādi suffix kyap comes. Since the suffix is kit, there is the prohibition kṅiti ca (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5), so guṇa of the light penultimate by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) does not come. Kyap being pit, it is unaccented by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4). Thus the u in yuj stays udātta by the root accent dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-162). ॥19॥

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> The wise always contemplate that supreme place of Vishnu as the eye fixed in broad heaven.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

परमं पदं (paramaṃ padaṃ) — the highest place. The commentator has explained it as heaven. Skandasvāmin, explaining viṣṇu as the sun, has said that viṣṇoḥ paramaṃ padam means the shining orb of the sun. Some, as the Purāṇas and others say, hold that Viṣṇu's highest place is the Vaikuṇṭha world. But that meaning, well known in the Purāṇas, does not fit here. The author of the Vedārthayatna has explained the word padam, as said before at trīṇi padā, as the three footsteps. These words paramaṃ padam also occur in the next ṛk.

दिवीव चक्षुराततं (divīva cakṣur ātataṃ) — the sight fixed on the sky can see very far. That is, the sense is that, as the eye has the power of seeing things that are very far off, the learned have the power of seeing, or knowing, the excellent place of Viṣṇu.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

सदा (sadā) — the analysis is sarvasmin kāle. By sarvaikānyakiṃyattadaḥ kāle dā (Pā. Sū. 5-3-15) — after the words sarva, eka, anya, kim, yad, tad ending in the seventh case and in the sense of time, the suffix dā comes in its own sense — the suffix dā after sarvasmin: sarva + ṅi + dā. Since it ends in a taddhita, by kṛttaddhitasamāsāś ca (Pā. Sū. 1-2-46) it gets the name prātipadika, and by supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-71) ṅi is dropped —

— (luk): sarva + dā. Now by sarvasya so 'nyatarasyāṃ di (Pā. Sū. 5-3-6) — when a d-initial suffix belonging to the prāgdiśīya group follows, the substitute sa for the word sarva comes optionally — the substitute sa for sarva: it becomes sadā. Although here, by the suffix accent, it would be right for sadā to be final udātta, yet by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85), by interchange, the initial udātta alone comes here.

दिवि (divi) — when the locative singular suffix ṅi is attached after the word div: div + i, it becomes divi. The suffix ṅi is a sup, so by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) the unaccented would be obtained. Yet by ūḍidampadādyapumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) — the case-endings other than the sarvanāmasthāna after the final-udātta monosyllabic words ūṭ, idam, the six padādi substitutes pad, dat, nas, more, hṛt, niś, and ap, pums, rai, div are udātta — here the ṅi, a case-ending other than the sarvanāmasthāna after div, is udātta. By ivena vibhaktyalopaḥ pūrvapadaprakṛtisvaratvaṃ ca (Pā. Sū. 2-1-4 Vā. 2) — a word ending in sup is always compounded with the word iva; the case-ending in the compound is not dropped; even after compounding the first member keeps its own accent — so for divi + iva both the compound, the non-dropping of the case-ending i, and the first member's own accent come. By cādayo 'nudāttāḥ (Phi. Sū. 84) the word iva is unaccented, as set forth at sa naḥ pitevaḥ [as printed] (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-1-9). The final udātta i in divi and the unaccented i in iva take the long like vowel as a single substitute for both; but here by ekādeśa udāttenodāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-5) the single substitute does not become udātta. Since the word iva, beginning with an unaccented vowel, follows, by svarito vānudātte padādau (Pā. Sū. 8-2-6) — the single substitute for an udātta with an unaccented vowel at the beginning of the following word is optionally svarita — the svarita accent comes. Cakṣuḥ is a word always of neuter gender; so by nabviṣayasyānisantasya (Phi. Sū. 26) it is initially udātta.

आततम् (ātatam) — after the root tanu vistāre preceded by the prefix āṅ, in the object sense, the suffix kta: ātan + ta; the root is tan. Since the root has the it-named u, by udito vā (Pā. Sū. 7-2-56) the augment iṭ is laid down optionally for the suffix ktvā after a root marked u. So by yasya vibhāṣā (Pā. Sū. 7-2-15) — for a root for which iṭ is anywhere laid down optionally, —

— the suffixes kta and ktavatu after that root do not take the augment iṭ — the augment iṭ is barred. Then by anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kṅiti (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37) — the roots ending in a nasal that are taught unaccented, the roots tanoti and the rest, and the root van, drop the nasal before a jhal-initial suffix that is kit or ṅit — the n of tan is dropped. Yami, rami, nami, gami, hani, mani: these six roots are taught unaccented; tanu, kṣaṇu, kṣiṇu, ṛṇu, tṛṇu, ghṛṇu, vanu, manu: these eight roots are the tanoty-ādi roots; so it became ātata. By gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the own accent of the kṛt final member would be due; overriding this, by thāthaghañkṭājabitrakāṇām (Pā. Sū. 6-1-144, as read) the final udātta of the last member would be due; overriding that too, by gatir anantaraḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-49) — when a word ending in the suffix kta in the object sense follows, the immediately preceding gati keeps its own accent — the gati ā is udātta. ॥20॥

सं इन्धते (saṃ indhate) — they kindle, increase the brightness, that is, they praise with hymns and the like.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

विप्रासः (viprāsaḥ) — after the word vipra, the nominative plural jas: vipra + jas; the j is named it and dropped. By āj jaser asuk (Pā. Sū. 7-1-50) — the jas after a word ending in a takes the augment asuk — the augment asuk for jas. Since it is kit, by the paribhāṣā ādyantau ṭakitau (Pā. Sū. 1-1-46) it comes as the final part of jas: vipra + as + as; by prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-102) the lengthening of the like preceding vowel; ru and visarga for the s: viprāsaḥ is formed.

विपन्यवः (vipanyavaḥ) — in paṇa vyavahāre stutau ca, pana ca, the root pan is read in the senses of dealing and praise. Here the root pan meaning praise is to be taken. After it, by the word bahula in uṇādayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-3-1), the suffix yu by bāhulaka: vipanyu, a word ending in u; yu is udātta by the suffix accent; in the nominative plural it becomes vipanyavaḥ.

जागृवांसः (jāgṛvāṃsaḥ) — the root jāgṛ nidrākṣaye; after it liṭ; for liṭ, by liṭaḥ kānaj vā (Pā. Sū. 3-2-106) and kvasuś ca (3-2-107), the suffix kvas. The reduplication laid down by liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) does not come here, as a Vedic matter. For vas, the augment iṭ would be due by ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-35); then by neḍ vaśi kṛti (Pā. Sū. 7-2-8) — a kṛt beginning with a vaś letter does not take iṭ — the prohibition would be due; then the prohibitions of iṭ laid down by sūtras such as kṛsṛbhṛvṛstudrusruśruvo liṭi (Pā. Sū. 7-2-13) and ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt (7-2-10), conditioned by particular roots (resting on the root), and those laid down by sūtras such as śṛyukaḥ kiti (Pā. Sū. 7-2-11), conditioned by particular suffixes — however many prohibiting rules there are, in the case of liṭ they apply only to the liṭ after the four roots kṛ, sṛ, bhṛ, vṛ: no prohibition of iṭ applies to the liṭ after roots other than these four, kṛ and the rest: this is the substance of the krādi restriction. By this restriction, since no prohibiting rule applies to the liṭ after the root jāgṛ, which is not in the present krādi list, the augment iṭ would be due; but by the restriction vasv ekājādghasām (Pā. Sū. 7-2-67) — on the view that the suffix vasu takes the augment iṭ, only for the suffix after roots that have one vowel after the reduplication, roots ending in ā, and the root ghasḷ does the augment iṭ come; the vas after other roots does not take iṭ — since the root jāgṛ is not among these roots, it is prevented. So the augment iṭ does not come. Nominative plural jas: jāgṛ + vas + as; now by ugidacāṃ sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) the augment num: jāgṛvāns + as; by sānta mahataḥ saṃyogasya (Pā. Sū. 6-4-10) lengthening of the a before the n: jāgṛvāns + as; by naś cāpadāntasya jhali (Pā. Sū. 8-3-24) anusvāra for the n: jāgṛvāṃs + as = jāgṛvāṃsaḥ. ॥21॥

Translation: "The sūkta tīvrāḥ, of twenty-four ṛks, is the sixth. Here is the Anukramaṇī: 'tīvrāḥ, twenty-four: one to Vāyu, two to Indra-Vāyu; tṛcas to Mitra-Varuṇa, to Indra with the Maruts, to the All-gods, to Pūṣan; the rest to the Waters, the last one and a half to Agni; apsv antaḥ is a pura-uṣṇik, the next an anuṣṭubh, and the last three; the twenty-first is a pratiṣṭhā.' By the rule 'and the ṛṣi from the other' (Anu. 12-2), carried on, the ṛṣi is Medhātithi Kāṇva. Apsv antaḥ is a pura-uṣṇik, since the definition 'if the first [pāda] has twelve syllables, it is a pura-uṣṇik' (Anu. 5-2) applies. Apsu me somaḥ is an anuṣṭubh; the three beginning idam āpaḥ are anuṣṭubhs. The remaining nineteen ṛks are gāyatrīs, by the rule 'at the beginning, gāyatra' (Anu. 12-14). The first has Vāyu as deity; then two ṛks have Indra-Vāyu; then a tṛca to Mitra-Varuṇa; for the following tṛca the deity is Indra with the host of Maruts; then a tṛca to the All-gods; after that one to Pūṣan. The remaining ṛks have the Waters as deity; but the ṛk saṃ māgne, with the half-verse payasvān agne, has Agni as deity. The application of the sūkta is to be known from its marks. In the abhiplava ṣaḍaha, on the second day, at the praüga-śastra, tīvrāḥ somāsaḥ is the third of the tṛca to Vāyu; it is laid down in the section dvitīyasya caturviṃśena: 'tīvrāḥ somāsa ā gahi: one' (Āśv. 7-6). In the pṛṣṭhya ṣaḍaha too, on the second day, at the praüga, this ṛk."

Anuvāda (Kannada rendering): This sūkta tīvrāḥ is the sixth sūkta in the fifth anuvāka. It has twenty-four ṛks. About this sūkta the Anukramaṇī says thus: in this sūkta tīvrāḥ of twenty-four ṛks the first ṛk has Vāyu as deity; for the next two ṛks Indra and Vāyu are the deities; for the next three ṛks Mitra and Varuṇa; for the next three Indra and the Maruts; for the next three ṛks [the All-gods; for the next three] the deity called Pūṣan; for the next seven and a half ṛks the deity called the Waters (water); and for the last one and a half ṛks Agni is the deity. On the metre: ṛks one to eighteen are in the Gāyatrī metre; it is said that the nineteenth ṛk apsv antaḥ is pura-uṣṇik, the twentieth and from the twenty-second to the twenty-fourth are in the Anuṣṭubh metre, and the twenty-first ṛk is in the Pratiṣṭhā metre. The ṛṣi is Medhātithi Kāṇva, the ṛṣi of the previous sūkta —

— as said in Anu. 12-2. The nineteenth ṛk apsv antaḥ is in the metre called pura-uṣṇik. The Uṣṇik metre has three pādas, with eight syllables each in the first and second pādas and twelve syllables in the third pāda. If instead the first pāda has twelve syllables and the second and third pādas eight syllables each, that ṛk is said to be in the pura-uṣṇik metre; so the ṛk apsv antaḥ stated above is in the pura-uṣṇik metre (Anu. 5-2). The twentieth ṛk apsu me somaḥ and the three ṛks idam āpaḥ pra vahata are in the Anuṣṭubh metre. In the Anuṣṭubh metre there are four pādas with eight syllables in each pāda: this is the definition of the Anuṣṭubh metre.

The first eighteen ṛks are in the Gāyatrī metre; in the Gāyatrī metre there are three pādas with eight syllables in each pāda. The twenty-first ṛk is in the metre named Pratiṣṭhā. In the Pratiṣṭhā metre there are three pādas: eight syllables in the first pāda, seven syllables in the second pāda, and six syllables in the third pāda: this is the definition of the Pratiṣṭhā metre. We have stated the deities of the ṛks in the sūkta before. The application of the sūkta is to be known according to the meaning of each ṛk. On the second day of the rite called abhiplava ṣaḍaha, when reciting the praüga-śastra mantras, the three ṛks tīvrāḥ somāsaḥ are to be recited as the tṛca to Vāyu: so it is said in the section dvitīyasya caturviṃśena of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra (Ā. 7-6). It is said there too that in the pṛṣṭhya ṣaḍaha rite, on the second day, this tṛca is to be recited as the praüga-śastra mantra.

(The Anuvāda says "the three ṛks"; the bhāṣya says the one ṛk tīvrāḥ somāsaḥ, the third of the tṛca. Both as printed.)

(Grammatical tail: somāsaḥ, man by artistusu..., initial udātta as nit, asuk by āj jaser asuk; gahi, stated at marudbhir agna ā gahi (Ṛgve. 1-19-1); āśīrvantaḥ, śrīñ pāke; in the sūtra apaspṛdhethām... (Pā. 6-1-36) the substitute śir is given as a set form for the root with āṅ before kvip; though the mixing substance is an instrument, kvip in the agent sense is not contradicted, since it is meant as agent in its own action; 'they have āśir': āśīrvantaḥ, the v by chandasīraḥ; vāyo, the vocative initial udātta; prasthitān, in the prādi compound, overriding the accent of the kṛt final member, the indeclinable first member's accent by vyatyaya.)

O Vāyu, these soma juices are mixed with āśir substances such as curds and are full of essence. We have brought that soma juice, made ready in this way for your drinking, to the uttaravedi. Drink it.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> These intoxicating Soma juice flavoured with milk, barley, and butter-milk are extracted and placed for your use. O Vayu, drink those Soma juices.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

तीव्राः (tīvrāḥ) — the commentator has given the meaning ‘in great quantity’; Skandasvāmin ‘sharp (pungent or bitter)’; and Veṅkaṭamādhava ‘intoxicating’. The pandit Wilson and the author of the Vedārthayatna have translated it as “Sharp”. Among these various meanings, Veṅkaṭamādhava’s meaning is the more fitting. For this word the meaning “full of essence, highly-concentrated, intoxicating” fits rightly here.

आशीर्वन्तः (āśīrvantaḥ) — the custom is to use soma juice mixed with substances such as milk, curds and barley, to make it tasty. Such mixed substances are named āśir substances. Soma juice mixed with milk is named gavāśira, juice mixed with curds dadhyāśira, and juice mixed with barley (flour) yavāśira. The pandit Wilson has translated this word as “Blessing-bearing”. That does not seem right.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

सोमासः (somāsaḥ) — by artistusuhusṛdhṛkṣikṣubhāyāvāpadiyakṣinībhyo man (U. Sū. 1-137 [?]) — after these roots, ṛ gatau, ṣṭuñ stutau, ṣuñ abhiṣave, hu dānādanayoḥ, sṛ gatau, dhṛñ dhāraṇe, kṣi kṣaye, kṣu śabde, bhā dīptau, yā prāpaṇe, vā gatigandhanayoḥ, pada gatau, yakṣa pūjāyām, ṇīñ prāpaṇe, the suffix man comes — the suffix man after the root su, read as ṣuñ abhiṣave; by dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-64) s for the ṣ: su + ma; by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa, o for the u: soma is formed. The man suffix is nit; so by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197 [?]) the word soma is initially udātta; after it jas; by āj jaser asuk (Pā. Sū. 7-1-50) the augment asuk for jas.

गहि (gahi) — the derivation is described at marudbhir agna ā gahi (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-19-1).

आशीर्वन्तः (āśīrvantaḥ) — the root śrīñ pāke. In apaspṛdhethām ānṛcur ānṛhuś cicyuṣe tityāja śrātāḥ śritam āśīr āśīrtāḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-36): the root spardha saṃgharṣe; after it laṅ; for it the middle person dual āthām: spardh + āthām; by luṅlaṅlṛṅkṣv aḍ udāttaḥ the augment aṭ, śap: a-spardh + a + āthām; by āto ṇitaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-81) — the ā of a ṇit after a short a takes the substitute iy — the substitute iy for the ā: a-spardh + a + iyāthām, guṇa, dropping of the y: aspardhethām results in common usage. Here, in the Veda, the reduplication of the root, saṃprasāraṇa ṛ for the r, and dropping of the a of the spa of the latter part are all given as set forms; so in a-spardh-spardh-a-āthām, in the reduplicate, by śarpūrvāḥ khayaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-61) the p remains. A-pa-spardh + a + āthām: in the second, ṛ for the r and dropping of the a of spa having come, the rest of the derivation is set out as before, and it becomes apaspṛdhethām. This very part the author of the Mahābhāṣya has made clear by the vārttika:

> स्पर्धेर्लङ्यात्मनेपदानां मध्यमपुरुषस्य द्विवचने आथामि द्विर्वचने संप्रसारणमकारलोपश्च ।
> spardherlaṅyātmanepadānāṃ madhyamapuruṣasya dvivacane āthāmi dvirvacane saṃprasāraṇamakāralopaśca |

This derivation is described according to the branch in which apaspṛdhethām is one word; in another branch it is said to consist of two words. On that view, after the root spardh preceded by the prefix apa, laṅ, for it āthām, śap, the substitute iy, guṇa, dropping of the y; since it is Vedic, the augment aṭ does not come. In apa spṛdhethām, ṛ for the r and dropping of the a of spa are given as set forms. This part becomes clear from the other vārttika:

> अपपूर्वात् स्पर्धेर्लङ्यात्मनेपदानां मध्यमपुरुषस्य द्विवचने आथामि संप्रसारणमकारलोपश्च ।
> apapūrvāt spardherlaṅyātmanepadānāṃ madhyamapuruṣasya dvivacane āthāmi saṃprasāraṇamakāralopaśca |

On the first view apaspṛdhethām is initially udātta; on the second view spṛdhethām is initially udātta; by tiṅi codāttavati (Pā. Sū. 8-2-71, as printed) the apa is unaccented. Since in the sūtra the direction is in the monotone, which includes all accents, both, having different accents, are included here. Ānarcuḥ, ānarhuḥ are, in common usage, the forms of the third person plural of liṭ of the roots arca pūjāyām and arha pūjāyām. In the Veda, saṃprasāraṇa of the r and dropping of the a are given as set forms: it becomes ānṛcuḥ, ānṛhuḥ. The root cyuṅ, liṭ, thās: it becomes cucyuṣe. The root tyaja, liṭ, third person singular: it becomes tatyāja. In the last two, the substitute i for the vowel of the reduplicate is given as a set form. According to the vārttika —

>

— when the suffix kta is put after the root śrīñ pāke, if the substitute śrā comes for the root it becomes śrāta, and if the substitute śri comes it becomes śrita. When the suffix kvip comes after the root śrīñ pāke preceded by the prefix āṅ, the substitute śir for the root is given as a set form by the present sūtra. In kvip all letters are dropped; the nominative singular suffix su; by halṅyābbhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-68) su is dropped; by vor upadhāyā dīrgha ikaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-76) — in the case of a pada-end, the i, u, ṛ, ḷ penultimate in roots ending in r or v are lengthened — the i is lengthened: it became āśīr. With the analysis āśīḥ eṣām asti, by tad asyāsty asminn iti matup (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) the suffix matup: āśīr + mat; now by chandasīraḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-15) — in the Veda, v is substituted for the m of matup after words ending in i and in r — the substitute v for the m: āśīrvat; after it jas, the augment num by ugidacām (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70), ru and visarga: it becomes āśīrvantaḥ.

वायो (vāyo) — this ends in the vocative nominative singular. So by sāmantritam (Pā. Sū. 2-3-48) — the vocative nominative singular gets the name āmantrita — it has the name āmantrita. By the sixth-book sūtra āmantritasya ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-198) the initial udātta accent comes.

प्रस्थितान् (prasthitān) — sthita ends in the suffix kta; by kugatiprādayaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-2-18) the prādi compound. Now, though by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the own accent of the kṛt final member would be due, by vyatyayo bahulam the indeclinable first member's own accent comes by interchange. Pra, by upasargāś cābhivarjam (Phi. Sū. 82 [?]) — the prefixes other than abhi are initially udātta — is initially udātta; as said before, that same accent stays. ॥1॥

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> We invoke the two gods Indra and Vayu that reach the sky, in order that they may drink this Soma.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

दिविस्पृशा (divispṛśā) — this word, ending in the dual, conveys meanings such as 'touching heaven', that is, going to heaven, being in heaven.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

उभा देवा (ubhā devā) — for the accusative dual suffix auṭ after the words ubha and deva, the substitute ā by supāṃ suluk pūrvasavarṇācchheyāḍāḍyāyājālaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39).

दिविस्पृशा (divispṛśā) — the analysis is divaṃ spṛśata iti divispṛśau; the substitute ā for auṭ as before. Since the vārttika hṛddyubhyāṃ ṅer upasaṃkhyānam (Pā. Sū. 6-3-9-1) lays down that the locative singular after the words hṛt and div is not dropped in a compound, it is made clear by the vārttika anyārthe ca (Pā. Sū. 6-3-9-2) that here the locative comes in the sense of the object. So for the locative singular suffix, by the vārttika hṛddyubhyām…, the luk does not come. By gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the final member spṛk, ending in a kṛt, keeps its own accent. The final member is udātta by the root accent, and that accent stays.

इन्द्रवायू (indravāyū) — the analysis is indraś ca vāyuś ca. Indra and Vāyu both denote deities. So indravāyū is a dvandva of deities; by devatādvandve ca (Pā. Sū. 6-3-26) — in a dvandva of deities, the word before the last member takes ānaṅ — ānaṅ would be due for the word indra. Yet since there is the prohibition by devatādvandve ubhayatra vāyoḥ pratiṣedhaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-26-1) — in a dvandva compound containing words denoting deities, whether the word vāyu is first or last member, the prohibition of the substitute ānaṅ must be stated — the substitute ānaṅ does not come. The word indra, ending in the suffix ran by ṛjrendrāgra… (U. Sū. 2-186), is initially udātta; the word vāyu ends in the suffix uṇ by kṛvāpājimisvadisādhyaśūbhya uṇ (U. Sū. 1-1), so it is final udātta by the suffix accent. By devatādvandve ca (6-2-141) — in a dvandva compound of words denoting deities, both first and last members keep their own accent at the same time — the accent of both members would be due —

— yet by nottarapade 'nudāttādāv apṛthivīrudrapūṣamanthiṣu (Pā. Sū. 6-2-142) — when a word beginning with an unaccented vowel, other than the words pṛthivī and the rest named in the sūtra, follows, the accent of both members stated in the previous sūtra does not come — the accent of both members does not come. By samāsasya (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223) the final udātta alone comes.

हवामहे (havāmahe) — the root hveñ spardhāyāṃ śabde ca; laṭ, first person plural, the suffix mahiṅ. For its ṭi, by ṭita ātmanepadānāṃ ṭer e (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79), e; the vikaraṇa śap: hve + a + mahe. Now by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. Sū. 6-1-34) — in the Veda the root hveñ variously takes saṃprasāraṇa — saṃprasāraṇa, that is u for the v; then by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) the preceding form: hu + a + mahe; by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa o for the u; by eco 'yavāyāvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-78) the substitute av for o: hava + mahe; by ato dīrgho yañi (Pā. Sū. 7-3-101) — when a sārvadhātuka beginning with a yañ letter follows, a stem ending in short a is lengthened — lengthening: it became havāmahe. Śap being pit, it is unaccented by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4); the long vowel coming in its place is unaccented by sthānivadbhāva; mahe, a sārvadhātuka suffix coming in place of la, follows śap, an a-final original teaching. By tāsy anudāttenṅid adupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam ahnviṅoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) it is unaccented; the ha is udātta by the root accent; so havāmahe had to be an initially udātta word. But by the eighth-book sūtra tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) it becomes wholly unaccented.

अस्य (asya) — when the genitive singular suffix is put after the word idam: idam + jas [as printed]; by tyadādīnām aḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-102) — when a case-ending follows, a comes as the final substitute for the words read in the tyadādi class — a for the m; by ato guṇe (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) — when the guṇa vowels a, e, o follow an a not at the end of a pada, the following form comes as the single substitute for the preceding and following — the following form: ida + jas; by ṭāṅasiṅasām inātsyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-12) — after a word ending in short a, ina, āt, sya come in order for ṭā, ṅasi, ṅas — the substitute sya; by hali lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-113) — when a consonant-initial ending of the third case onward follows, the id of the word idam without k is dropped — the id is dropped and asya is formed. By phiṣo 'nta udāttaḥ (Phi. Sū. 1) — phiṭ means a nominal stem — by this sūtra the a of the stem is udātta. For sya, by anudāttau suppitau

(Pā. Sū. 3-1-4), the unaccented would be due; overriding it, by ūḍidampadādyapumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) — the case-endings other than the sarvanāmasthāna after these final-udātta monosyllabic words, the substitute ūṭh, the word idam, the six padādi words laid down by paddannomās… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-63), and ap, pums, rai, div, are udātta — sya is udātta. Then by the śeṣānudātta accent anudāttaṃ padam ekavarjam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-158) the a of the stem is unaccented. That the soma in front is meant is made known by asya. So there is no anvādeśa; hence by idamo 'nvādeśe 'śanudāttas tṛtīyādau (Pā. Sū. 2-4-32) the unaccented substitute aś does not come. Therefore asya does not become wholly unaccented.

पीतये (pītaye) — the root pā pāne; by sthāgāpāpaco bhāve (Pā. Sū. 3-3-95) — after these roots, ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau, gai śabde, pā pāne, ḍupacaṣ pāke, the suffix ktin in the action sense — the suffix ktin: pā + ti. Either by ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt (Pā. Sū. 7-2-10) or by titutratathasisusarakaseṣu ca (Pā. Sū. 7-2-9) the iṭ is barred. By ghumāsthāgāpājahātisāṃ hali (Pā. Sū. 6-4-66) — when a consonant-initial ārdhadhātuka suffix that is kit or ṅit follows, the roots dā, dhā with the name ghu, and sthā, gā, pā, jahā, ti [as printed], sā take the substitute ī — the substitute ī for pā: it became pīti. Since the suffix is nit, by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) the initial udātta would be due; yet by vyatyaya the final udātta alone comes. In the dative singular it becomes pītaye. ॥2॥

Translation: "The viprāḥ, the wise — priests and sacrificers — havante, call, Indra and Vāyu ūtaye, for protection. Of what kind are they? Manojuvā, swifter, like the mind; sahasrākṣā, furnished with a thousand eyes: though only Indra is thousand-eyed, Vāyu too is so called by the maxim of 'the umbrella-bearers'; dhiyaspatī, protectors of the rite or of the intellect." (Grammatical tail: manojuvā, javati in the sense of going; 'they go like the mind': manojuvā, swift like the mind; the kṛt final member's accent; the ā by supāṃ suluk; viprāḥ, the Uṇādi ran, initial udātta as ending in ran; ūtaye, the ktin udātta by ūtiyūti…; sahasrākṣā, 'whose eyes are a thousand': the compound-final ṣac by bahuvrīhau sakthyakṣṇoḥ… (Pā. 5-4-113); though the bahuvrīhi accent would be due, the compound-final suffix being satiśiṣṭa, final udātta by citaḥ; dhiyaḥ, the ṅas udātta by sāv ekācaḥ; in the Saṃhitā s for the visarga by ṣaṣṭhyāḥ patiputra…; patī, initial udātta as ending in ḍati.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

विप्राः (viprāḥ) — the intelligent (wise) people | मनोजुवा (manojuvā) — swift-going like the speed of the mind | सहस्राक्षा (sahasrākṣā) — having thousands of eyes | धियस्पती (dhiyaspatī) — lords of rites, or lords of the intellect | इन्द्रवायू (indravāyū) — the two deities called Indra and Vāyu | ऊतये (ūtaye) — for protection | हवन्ते (havante) — call.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The deities called Indra and Vāyu have the speed of the mind, are furnished with a thousand eyes, are lords of rites or impellers of the intellect. The wise call such Indra and Vāyu for protection.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> The wise invoke for protection Indra and Vayu who are swift as thought, who have a thousand eyes and who are the lords of the pious acts (or of mind).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

मनोजुवा (manojuvā) — mana iva vegayuktau: swift like the mind. The mind can think in a moment of a thing, however far away it is. So when indicating great speed, it is customary to use the comparison 'swift as the speed of the mind'.

सहस्राक्षा (sahasrākṣā) — sahasram akṣīṇi yayos tau: having a thousand eyes. In the Purāṇas and in modern Sanskrit too it is customary to call Indra 'thousand-eyed'. The reason why in the Veda such a meaning, 'having a thousand eyes', arose is this: Indra is in heaven (in the mid-air). In heaven thousands of stars twinkle like eyes. So it seems the custom of calling Indra 'furnished with a thousand eyes' may have come about. Though it is fitting here to call Indra thousand-eyed, it is not right to describe Vāyu by this qualifying word. Either through association with Indra, or because Vāyu, being all-pervading, has the power to see everything, Vāyu may have been addressed as thousand-eyed. Likewise, though the word manojuvā fits Vāyu, the address here is such that it fits Indra too. The main intention is that the word manojuvā fits only Vāyu, who is always moving or of a moving nature; the word sahasrākṣā indicates Indra alone. Yet these words are used here as qualifying words praising both Indra and Vāyu.

धियस्पती (dhiyaspatī) — the word dhī means rite or understanding. So dhiyaspatī means: lords of the good rites such as sacrifice that we perform, that is, those able to protect them so that they are accomplished without hindrance; or those able to make our intellect devoted to good works; or those able to impel our intellect to good works: this is the intention. Likewise the meanings of the words śubhaspatī, jyotiṣaspatī, vācaspati, śavasaspati and the like are worth noting.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

मनोजुवा (manojuvā) — the root ju is not read in the list of roots, but it is read in the sūtra ju caṅkramya… (Pā. Sū. 3-2-150). In the Kaumudī it is said, ju iti sautro dhātur gatau vege ca, that it has both meanings, going and speed. When the sense is manovat javata iti, 'they go like the mind (swiftly)', the suffix kvip by kvip ca, an upapada compound; after manoju the accusative dual suffix auṭ, and for it by supāṃ suluk… (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the substitute ā: manoju + ā; here, by aci śnudhātubhruvāṃ yvor iyaṅuvaṅau (Pā. Sū. 6-4-77), when the substitute uvaṅ comes, it becomes manojuvā. By gatikārakapūrvasyaiveṣyate (Pā. Sū. 6-4-82 Vā.) — the yaṇ in the case of roots ending in i, u that have some word before them comes only when the first member is named gati or kāraka; for roots ending in i, u whose first members are other than gati and kāraka, yaṇ —

— does not come; so the yaṇ that would come by oḥ supi (Pā. Sū. 6-4-83) is prevented. Here, in the sense of likeness meaning iva, the word manaḥ in the first case is construed; it is not construed with the action. So it is clear that it is neither a gati nor a kāraka.

विप्राः (viprāḥ) — by the sūtra ṛjrendrāgravipra… (U. Sū. 2-186), after the root ḍuvap bījasantāne, it is given as a set form ending in the suffix ran; the substitute i for the a of the root is given as a set form in this sūtra; the suffix is nit, so by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) it is initially udātta.

ऊतये (ūtaye) — by ūtiyūtijūtisātihetikīrtayaś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-3-97), the word udāttaḥ being carried on from the previous sūtra mantre vṛṣeṣapacamanavidabhūvīrā udāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-3-96), the sense of the sūtra is that the words ending in ktin, ūti and the rest, are given as set forms with final udātta. In the present case, after the root ava rakṣaṇe, the suffix ktin: av + ti; by jvaratvarasrivyavimavām upadhāyāś ca (Pā. Sū. 6-4-20), ūṭh for both the a and the v: ūti results. Since the suffix is nit, the nit accent, initial udātta, would be due; but by this sūtra it is final udātta.

सहस्राक्षा (sahasrākṣā) — the analysis is sahasram akṣīṇi yayos tau: the two who have a thousand eyes. This is a bahuvrīhi compound. In bahuvrīhau sakthyakṣṇoḥ svāṅgāt ṣac (Pā. Sū. 5-4-113), bahuvrīhau is in the seventh case and sakthyakṣṇoḥ in the sixth, both in the sense of the fifth; sakthyakṣṇoḥ qualifies bahuvrīhau. So by yena vidhis tadantasya (Pā. Sū. 1-1-72) 'ending in it' is obtained; the sūtras samāsāntāḥ (Pā. Sū. 5-4-68) and taddhitāḥ (Pā. Sū. 4-1-76) are the headings. The sense of the sūtra: after a bahuvrīhi compound ending in the words sakthi, akṣi that denote a limb of one's own body, ṣac comes; it is a part at the end of the compound and also has the name taddhita. Adravaṃ mūrtimat svāṅgaṃ prāṇistham avikārajam | atatsthaṃ tatra dṛṣṭaṃ ca tasya cet tat tathāyutam (Pā. Sū. 4-1-54 śloka-vārttika): the definition of svāṅga is stated in three ways. That which is not liquid, has a fixed measure, is not born of a disorder such as disease, and is in a living being is called svāṅga: this is the first definition. Even if not now in a living being, what has at some time been seen in a living being is called svāṅga: this is the second definition. A lifeless substance shaped like a living one — in the case where it is furnished with forms such as breasts that are in a living being — those forms such as breasts, though connected with a lifeless thing, are called svāṅga: this is the third definition. For the present sakthi, akṣi, the first definition alone applies. Thus, when ṣac comes by the previous sūtra: sahasrākṣin + a; by nas taddhite (Pā. Sū. 6-4-144) — when a taddhita suffix follows, the ṭi of a stem ending in n and named bha is dropped —

> adravaṃ mūrtimatsvāṅgaṃ prāṇisthamavikārajam | atatsthaṃ tatra dṛṣṭaṃ ca tasya cettattathāyutam ||

— the in is dropped: it became sahasrākṣa. By bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member's own accent would be due. Yet by satiśiṣṭasvaro balīyān anyatra vikaraṇebhyaḥ, since the satiśiṣṭa accent is stronger, the final udātta citaḥ, which is satiśiṣṭa, alone comes here. Ṣac is cit; for the case-ending the substitute ā as before.

सतिशिष्टस्वरो बलीयानन्यत्र विकरणेभ्यः ।

satiśiṣṭasvaro balīyānanyatra vikaraṇebhyaḥ |

धियः (dhiyaḥ) — by sāv ekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168), su meaning that the locative plural is intended: the sense of the sūtra is that when the locative plural suffix follows, the case-endings of the third onward after a word that has a single vowel are udātta. In dhīṣu the word dhī has a single vowel when the locative plural follows; so the genitive after the word dhī is udātta. In dhiyaḥ + patī, by ṣaṣṭhyāḥ patiputrapṛṣṭhapārapadapayasposeṣu (Pā. Sū. 8-3-53) — when the words pati and the rest follow, s is substituted for a visarga belonging to the genitive — the substitute s for the visarga.

पती (patī) — the root pā rakṣaṇe; by pāter ḍatiḥ (U. Sū. 4-57) the suffix ḍati; the suffix is ḍit; by the force of its being ḍit, even without the name bha, the ṭi, ā, is dropped: it becomes pati. And by ādyudāttaś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-1-3) it is initially udātta. ॥3॥

On the application of this mantra the commentator has said thus. On the twenty-fourth day, at the time of the morning pressing, when reciting the maitrāvaruṇa-śastra mantras, for the ṣaḍaha-stotriya mantras —

— the tṛca mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe is to be recited: so it is said in the section caturviṃśe of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra, that the ṛks ā no mitrāvaruṇā (Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-62-16) and mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-23-4) are to be recited. In the rite called abhiplava ṣaḍaha too, at the time of the morning pressing, this tṛca is to be recited for the insertion of the maitrāvaruṇa hymns: this is set out in the section abhiplavapṛṣṭhyāhāni by the sūtra pariśiṣṭān āvāpān uddhṛtya mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe (Ā. 7-5). And in the offerings and the like connected with Mitra-Varuṇa, at the time of the morning pressing, this ṛk mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe is to be used as the yājyā mantra: this is set out in the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra, in the section brāhmaṇācchaṃsī, by the sūtra idaṃ te saumyaṃ madhu (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-65-8) mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-23-4).

मित्रं (mitraṃ) — the deity named Mitra. Though calling the deities Mitra and Varuṇa together is in especially common use, on many occasions they are seen to be named and praised separately too. Yāska's explanation of the word mitra is as follows —

> मित्रः । मित्रः प्रमीतेस्त्रायते ॥
> mitraḥ | mitraḥ pramītestrāyate ||

Pramīteḥ — from death; trāyate — because he protects, he is named Mitra. Because he causes rain for all the worlds and protects them, he has the name Mitra.

संमिन्वानो द्रवतीति वा ॥

saṃminvāno dravatīti vā ||

Because he causes rain everywhere and makes the world liquid with water, he is named Mitra.

मेदयतेर्वा ॥

medayatervā ||

Medayate — snehārthasya: because he makes everything moist (unctuous) with water, he is named Mitra. Having explained it thus, as an example of Mitra's protecting the earth —

मित्रो जनान्यातयति ब्रुवाणो मित्रो दाधार पृथिवीमुत द्यां । मित्रः कृष्टीरनिमिषाभि चष्टे मित्राय हव्यं घृतवज्जुहोत ॥ (ऋ० सं० ३-५९-१)

mitro janānyātayati bruvāṇo mitro dādhāra pṛthivīmuta dyāṃ | mitraḥ kṛṣṭīranimiṣābhi caṣṭe mitrāya havyaṃ ghṛtavajjuhota || (ṛ0 saṃ0 3-59-1)

— he has given this ṛk (Ni. 10-22).

वरुणः (varuṇaḥ) — on the meaning of the word varuṇa too, vṛṇotīti sataḥ, he has given the explanation that he is named Varuṇa because he covers the mid-air with the net of clouds (Ni. 10-3).

पूतदक्षसा (pūtadakṣasā) — pūta means pure, abundant; dakṣa means strength. The meaning is: very strong, of great power.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

वरुणं (varuṇaṃ) — by kṛvṛdāribhya unan (U. Sū. 3-53) — after kṝ vikṣepe, vṛñ varaṇe and dṝ vidāraṇe in the causative, unan comes — the suffix unan: vṛ + una, guṇa followed by r: it becomes varuṇa. Since in the following sūtra there is tṝreś ca lo vā, the mention of tṝ in this sūtra is unnecessary. The suffix is nit, so by the nit accent the word varuṇa is initially udātta.

सोमपीतये (somapītaye) — by artistusu… (U. Sū. 1-137), after the root ṣuñ abhiṣave, the suffix man and guṇa come: it becomes soma; this is initially udātta by the nit accent. For the śeṣānudātta, by udāttād anudāttasya the svarita comes. The analysis is somasya pītiḥ; yet after compounding, by kurugārhapata… dāsībhārāṇāṃ ca (Pā. Sū. 6-2-42) the first member's own accent alone comes.

जज्ञाना (jajñānā) — the root janī prādurbhāve; after it chandasi liṭ (Pā. Sū. 3-2-105) — in the Veda, in the general past sense, liṭ comes after a root — so liṭ; in its place, by liṭaḥ kānaj vā (Pā.

Sū. 3-2-106) — in the Veda the substitute kānac comes optionally in place of liṭ — the substitute kānac: jan + āna. Now by gamahanajanakhanaghasāṃ lopaḥ kṅity anaṅi (Pā. Sū. 6-4-98) — when a vowel-initial suffix other than aṅ, that is kit or ṅit, follows, the penultimate letter of the roots gam and the rest is dropped — the a of jan is dropped: j + n + āna. Dvirvacane 'ci (Pā. Sū. 1-1-59): the word division is dvirvacane, aci; by the maxim yaṃ vinā yan nopapadyate tat tenākṣipyate, pratyaye is implied. The grammarians of the nyāsa and other works describe that from acaḥ parasmin pūrvavidhau, parasmin is carried on. Dvirvacane is with the analysis dvirvacanam asyāsti iti dvirvacanam, tasmin [dvirvacane]; this is a qualifier of pratyaye, and aci is a qualifier of pratyaye. So by yasmin vidhis tadādāv algrahaṇe (Paribhā. 32) the 'beginning with it' is obtained; so the sense of the sūtra results: when a vowel-initial suffix that causes reduplication follows without the intervention of another suffix, a substitute in place of a vowel takes the form of the original when making the reduplication. So even with the intervention of one letter this sūtra applies. This part is clear in the present* Sūtrakaustubha*, in the passage beginning* vastutas tu dvirvacanākṣiptaḥ. Pratyaye* is a locative of cause; likewise, if the meaning intended is ca dvitvanimittabhūtājādipratyayanimittakaḥ acsthānikaḥ ādeśaḥ sthānivadrūpaṃ labhate, then after the penultimate is dropped, the vowel-initial suffix āna that causes reduplication —

> यं विना यन्नोपपद्यते तत्तेनाक्षिप्यते । वस्तुतस्तु द्विर्वचनाक्षिप्तः ।
> yaṃ vinā yannopapadyate tattenākṣipyate | vastutastu dvirvacanākṣiptaḥ |

— causes the dropping of the penultimate, and sthānivadbhāva comes for it; but for the forms like cakratuḥ to be established, causation must be accepted even by the mere fact of being about to be. The Mahābhāṣya on 1-1-59 says:

> कानि पुनरस्य प्रयोजनानि । पपतुः पपुः । तस्थतुः तस्थुः । जग्मतुः जग्मुः । आटिटत् आशिशत् । चक्रतुः चक्रुरिति । आल्लोपोपधालोपणिलोपयणादेशेष्वनच्कत्वाद्द्विर्वचनं न प्राप्नोतीति ॥
> kāni punarasya prayojanāni | papatuḥ papuḥ | tasthatuḥ tasthuḥ | jagmatuḥ jagmuḥ | āṭiṭat āśiśat | cakratuḥ cakruriti |
> āllopopadhālopaṇilopayaṇādeśeṣvanackatvāddvirvacanaṃ na prāpnotīti ||

— by this too, even with the intervention of one letter, the present sūtra applies. Thus, the substitution of the form of the original having come, it is as if jan were there. Now by liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) reduplication: jan – j + n – āna. Though at the time of making the reduplication the extension of form comes, after reduplication this extension does not remain; so the penultimate is not heard; the reduplication comes both for the vowel that is the original and for the consonants before and after it; so this is neither a rule for what precedes the vowel that is the original, nor a rule for what follows the vowel that is the original. So here sthānivadbhāva cannot come by acaḥ parasmin pūrvavidhau (Pā. Sū. 1-1-57). On the occasion of explaining this sūtra, the author of the Kaiyaṭa —

> अचः परस्मिन्नित्यत्र योऽनादिष्टादचः पूर्व इति स्थितम् । साच्कस्य च द्विर्वचनमिति पूर्वविधित्वाभावादप्राप्तं स्थानिवत्त्वं विधीयते ।
> acaḥ parasminnityatra yo 'nādiṣṭādacaḥ pūrva iti sthitam | sāckasya ca dvirvacanamiti pūrvavidhitvābhāvādaprāptaṃ sthānivattvaṃ vidhīyate |

— has set out that "in acaḥ parasmin, it is settled that [what is meant is] what precedes a vowel that is not a substitute; and as for the reduplication of what has a vowel, since it is not a rule about what precedes, sthānivattva, which would not be obtained, is laid down". The author of the Uddyota too says that though in na padānta dvirvacana vare… (Pā. Sū. 1-1-58) the word dvirvacana takes in the reduplication of the sixth book, so that when making the reduplication of what has a vowel there is no prohibition of sthānivadbhāva, yet in acaḥ parasmin the meaning nimittabhūtācaḥ pūrvasya kārye kartavye is not established by the Bhāṣya; rather the meaning arises just as we showed before; so he describes that acaḥ parasmin does not come here. In the Śekhara, on the occasion of explaining the present sūtra, sāny acaḥ pūrvatvena dṛṣṭasyaiva cakre ity ādau kāryābhāvāt acaḥ parasminn ity anenāsiddher idam ārabdham: likewise in the present Veda commentary, if the statement tasya acaḥ parasminn iti sthānivadbhāvāj janaśabdasya dvirvacanam is to be made right, then after acaḥ parasmin, ity ataḥ parasmin ity anuvṛttau dvirvacane 'ci must be added. Otherwise it is not right. Even if dvirvacane 'ci is explained as meaning that, when making the reduplication, if a vowel-initial suffix causing reduplication follows without the intervention of another suffix, a substitute does not come in place of a vowel, first the reduplication of the word jana: jana + jana + ā; now by the sūtra gamahana… the penultimate is dropped. For the n in the reduplicate, by halādiḥ śeṣaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60), removal: ja + j + n + āna. By stoḥ ścunā ścuḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-4-40) — if s and the dental row are in contact with ś and the palatal row, ś and the palatal row come in order for s and the dental row — since the n is in contact with j, ñ comes. Thus it becomes jajñāna; śānac [as printed] being cit, by citaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163) the final udātta accent comes. After it the suffix auṭ; for it, by supāṃ suluk, the substitute ā.

पूतदक्षसा (pūtadakṣasā) — the root pūñ pavane. By niṣṭhā (Pā. Sū. 3-2-102) — after a root in the past sense, the suffixes kta, ktavatu come — the suffix kta: pū + ta; ta is an ārdhadhātuka beginning with a val letter, so by ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-35) the augment iṭ would be due. But by śryukaḥ kiti (Pā. Sū. 7-2-11) — after the root śriñ and after a monosyllabic root ending in uk (u, ṛ, ḷ), a val-initial ārdhadhātuka that is git or kit does not take iṭ — the augment iṭ does not come. The word pūta is final udātta by the suffix accent. Pūtaṃ dakṣaḥ yayos tau (meaning those whose strength is pure): if a bahuvrīhi compound is made thus, by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member's own accent alone comes. ॥ 4॥

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

यौ (yau) — the deities Mitra and Varuṇa who | ऋतेन (ṛtena) — with true speech that they will favour the sacrificer | ऋतावृधौ (ṛtāvṛdhau) — who truly give the fruit of rites | ऋतस्य (ṛtasya) — of the true or excellent | ज्योतिषः (jyotiṣaḥ) — of light | पती (patī) — who are the protectors (lords) | ता (tā) — such | मित्रावरुणा (mitrāvaruṇā) — the deities Mitra and Varuṇa | हुवे (huve) — I call (summon).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Mitra and Varuṇa are true in speech in the matter of favouring the sacrificer who performs the sacrifice; they increase the fruit of the rites done; they are lords of excellent light. I call such deities Mitra and Varuṇa.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> I invoke Mitra and Varuna who are true in speech and who are encouragers of pious acts and are the lords of true light.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

We have already explained the meaning of the words ṛta and ṛtāvṛdhā (Part 1, pages 647 and 707). Ṛta here may be taken to mean water or sacrifice.

ज्योतिषस्पती (jyotiṣaspatī) — prakāśasya pālakau: lords of the light in the form of rays. Since these two names, Mitra and Varuṇa, are included among the names of the twelve Ādityas, it is natural to call them jyotiṣaspatī.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

ऋतावृधौ (ṛtāvṛdhau) — the root vṛdhu vṛddhau; the analysis is ṛtaṃ (true fruit of rites) vardhayataḥ; vardhayata iti vṛdhau; or the analysis ṛtasya vṛdhau; here by kvip ca (Pā. Sū. 3-2-76) — with or without an upapada ending in sup, kvip comes after a root — kvip comes; kvipas sarvasyāpi lopaḥ; the accusative dual suffix auṭ: ṛta vṛdhau. By anyeṣām api dṛśyate (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137) — lengthening comes also to first members other than particles —

— the first member ṛta is lengthened; vṛdh, ending in kvip, is a kṛt-final word, and it is the last member. So by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the last member keeps its own accent.

The ṛ in vṛdh is udātta by dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-162); thus in the compound this accent stays, and by the śeṣānudātta accent ṛta is unaccented. By the sup accent au is unaccented, and by udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ it is svarita.

ज्योतिषः (jyotiṣaḥ) — the root dyuta dīptau; after it, by dyuter isinn ādeś ca jaḥ (U. Sū. 2-112, as read) — after the root dyuta dīptau, the suffix isin, and j for its initial d — when the suffix isin and j for the d come: jyut + is; by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) guṇa o for the u: it became jyotis; the suffix is nit, so by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) jyotis is initially udātta. After it the genitive jas [as printed]: jyotis + as; by ādeśapratyayayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-59) ṣ for the first s; by sasajuṣo ruḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-66) r for the s; by kharavasānayor visarjanīyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-15) visarga for the r: it became jyotiṣaḥ; in jyotiṣaḥ patī, at the time of the Saṃhitā, by ṣaṣṭhyāḥ patiputrapṛṣṭhapārapadapayasposeṣu (Pā. Sū. 8-3-53) s for the visarga.

मित्रावरुणा (mitrāvaruṇā) — the analysis is mitraś ca varuṇaś ca, a dvandva compound. At mitraṃ huve (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-2-7) it has been described that the masculine word mitra is final udātta by the stem accent phiṣo 'nta udāttaḥ (Phi. Sū. 1), and that the word varuṇa, ending in the suffix unan, is initially udātta by the nit accent. By devatādvandve ca (Pā. Sū. 6-3-26) — the first member before the last member in a dvandva compound of deities takes the substitute ānaṅ — the word mitra takes ānaṅ. By ṅic ca (Pā. Sū. 1-1-53) — a substitute marked ṅ, though of more than one letter, comes in place of the final — ānaṅ comes in place of the final letter. Mitrān varuṇa: when this is so, taking the internal case-ending as cause, there is the name pada, so by nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n is dropped. By devatādvandve ca (Pā. Sū. 6-2-141) — in a dvandva compound containing words denoting deities, first and last members both keep their own accent at once — both members keep their own accent. When it is mitrāvaruṇa + au, by supāṃ suluk pūrvasavarṇa… (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the long like vowel ā comes in place of a + au.

हुवे (huve) — the root hveñ spardhāyāṃ śabde ca; laṭ, middle voice first person singular, the suffix iṭ: hve + i. Now by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. Sū. 6-1-34) saṃprasāraṇa, u for the v —

— by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) the preceding form: hu + i. By kartari śap (Pā. Sū. 3-1-68) the vikaraṇa śap; for it, by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. Sū. 2-4-73), luk; by ṭita ātmanepadānāṃ ṭer e (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) [e]; then guṇa, o, for the u would be due; but by sārvadhātukam apit (Pā. Sū. 1-2-4) e is ṅit, so by kṅiti ca (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5) guṇa is barred. By aci śnudhātubhruvāṃ yvor iyaṅuvaṅau (Pā. Sū. 6-4-77) the substitute uvaṅ for the u: it becomes huve. By tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) it is wholly unaccented. ॥5॥ विश्वाभिः ऊतिभिः (viśvābhiḥ ūtibhiḥ) — with protections of many kinds. Here 'of many kinds' means protections such as food and the like, a place to live, and warding off the fear that comes from enemies: this is the intention.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

प्रावितā (prāvitā) — the root ava rakṣaṇe; by ṇvultṛcau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-133) tṛc; by ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-35) the augment iṭ: avitṛ. By kugatiprādayaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-2-18) the prādi compound with the word pra. Tṛc is cit, so by citaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163) avitṛ is final udātta; after compounding too, by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the same accent stays. After prāvitṛ, the suffix su; by ṛduśanaspurudaṃso 'nehasāṃ ca (Pā. Sū. 7-1-94) the substitute anaṅ; by aptṛntṛc… (Pā. Sū. 6-4-11) lengthening; by halṅyābbhyo dīrghāt… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-68) su is dropped; by nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n [printed "the s"] is dropped.

भुवत् (bhuvat) — the root bhū sattāyām; after it, by liṅarthe leṭ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-7), leṭ; for it the substitute tip: bhū + ti. By leṭo 'ḍāṭau (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) — leṭ takes the augments aṭ, āṭ — the augment aṭ: bhū + a + ti. By itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. Sū. 3-4-97) — the i of a suffix in the parasmaipada is dropped — the i is dropped: bhū + at; for the vikaraṇa śap, by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. Sū. 2-4-73), luk. By sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) — when a sārvadhātuka suffix (that is, a tiṅ suffix and a suffix marked ś) or an ārdhadhātuka (the name of the suffixes laid down under the root heading other than these) follows, a word ending in i, u, ṛ, ḷ takes guṇa — the guṇa o for the ū in bhū would be due; but by bhūsuvos tiṅi (Pā. Sū. 7-3-88) — when a tiṅ suffix named sārvadhātuka follows, bhū and sū do not take guṇa — the prohibition comes, so guṇa does not come. Aci śnudhātubhruvāṃ yvor iyaṅuvaṅau (Pā. Sū. 6-4-77): the word division is aci, śnudhātubhruvām, yvoḥ, iyaṅuvaṅau; iś ca uś ca = yū, tayoḥ yvoḥ: 'of i and u'.* Yvoḥ* is a qualifier of dhātoḥ; by yena vidhis tadantasya (Pā. Sū. 1-1-72) 'ending in it' is obtained: roots ending in i and u. Śnu and bhrū both always end in u, never in i; so, there being no possibility and no exclusion (no fitness for excluding others), yvoḥ is not a qualifier of śnu, bhrū. The maxim saṃbhavavyabhicārābhyāṃ syād viśeṣaṇam arthavat must be stated here. The fourth pāda of the sixth adhyāya and the four pādas of the seventh adhyāya, these five pādas of the Aṣṭādhyāyī, are under the aṅga heading; this too being under the aṅga heading, aṅgasya (Pā. Sū. 6-4-1) is the heading. By the maxim yaṃ vinā…, pratyaye is implied; it is changed to the seventh case; aci, being its qualifier, gives the 'beginning with it'; śnudhātubhruvām being a qualifier of aṅgasya, by yena vidhis tadantasya (Pā. Sū. 1-1-72) 'ending in it' is obtained. So the sense of the sūtra: a stem ending in the suffix śnu, a stem ending in roots ending in i, u, and a stem ending in the word bhrū take the substitutes iyaṅ, uvaṅ when a vowel-initial suffix follows. So for i, iyaṅ, and for u, uvaṅ. Short and long i, u are both taken. In bhū + at, when uvaṅ comes for the ū: bhuv + at = bhuvat. By tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) it is wholly unaccented.

विश्वाभिः (viśvābhiḥ) — the root viśa praveśane; by aśūpruṣilaṭikaṇikhaṭiviśibhyaḥ kvan (U. Sū. 1-149) the suffix kvan; viśva is initially udātta by the nit accent. After it, when the feminine is intended, by ajādyataṣ ṭāp (Pā. Sū. 4-1-4) ṭāp; the instrumental plural bhis; ṭāp and bhis are both unaccented by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4); so in viśvābhiḥ the initial udātta alone stays.

ऊतिभिः (ūtibhiḥ) — by ūtiyūtijūtisātihetibhyaś ca [as printed] (Pā. Sū. 3-3-97) the udātta ktin comes.

करताम् (karatām) — the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe, here in the bhvādi (first) class; loṭ. For it by tiptasjhi… (Pā. Sū. 3-4-78) tas: kṛ + tas; by kartari śap (Pā. Sū. 3-1-68) the vikaraṇa śap; by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa for the ṛ; it comes followed by r by uraṇ raparaḥ (Pā. Sū. 1-1-51), that is ar: kar + a + tas; by loṭo laṅvat (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) treated like laṅ; by tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute tām. Śap being pit, it is unaccented; the following tiṅ tām, by tāsy anudāttenṅid adupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam ahnviṅoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186), is unaccented. The root accent alone remains.

सुराधसः (surādhasaḥ) — the root rādha sādha saṃsiddhau. Rādhnoti anena: 'by this one attains accomplishment': rādhaḥ, meaning wealth. Śobhanaṃ rādhaḥ yeṣāṃ te, 'those who have fine wealth': by anekam anyapadārthe (Pā. Sū. 2-2-24) the bahuvrīhi compound. By sarvadhātubhyo 'sun (U. Sū. 4-628 [?], as read) the word rādhas, ending in the suffix asun, is initially udātta by the nit accent. After the bahuvrīhi compound, by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member's own accent would be due; overriding it, by nañsubhyām (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) — in a bahuvrīhi compound the last member after nañ and su is final udātta — the final udātta would be due. Overriding this too, by sor manasī alomoṣasī (Pā. Sū. 6-2-117) — words ending in man and words ending in as, other than the two words loman and uṣas, after the word su,

are initially udātta (man: what ends in it is mannanta; as: what ends in it is asanta) — so the last member has the initial udātta accent. ॥6॥

मरुत्वन्तं (marutvantaṃ) — accompanied by the Marut deities | इन्द्रं (indraṃ) — Indra | सोमपीतये (somapītaye) — for drinking soma | आ हवामहे (ā havāmahe) — we call | (that Indra) गणेन (gaṇena) — with the hosts of Maruts | सजूः (sajūḥ) — together | तृम्पतु (tṛmpatu) — may he be satisfied.

सजूः तृम्पतु (sajūḥ tṛmpatu) — juṣī prītisevanayoḥ | samānā prītir yasya sajūḥ | The intention is: may Indra and the Marut deities be satisfied alike, that is, may both be satisfied. Since here sajūḥ means 'having the same satisfaction' and tṛmpatu means 'may he be satisfied', one may doubt that there is the fault of repetition; the answer can be given that, since many such usages are in currency, they are not much worth noting.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

मरुत्वन्तम् (marutvantam) — the analysis is marutaḥ asya santi, 'he has the Maruts'. By tad asyāsty asminn iti matup (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) the suffix matup after the word marut: marut + mat. By jhayaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-10) — the m of matup after a word ending in a jhay letter takes v — the v: marut + vat. Marut is a word ending in t; so by tasau matvarthe (Pā. Sū. 1-4-19) — when a suffix in the sense of matup follows, words ending in t and s get the name bha — the name bha comes. By this name bha, the name pada that would come by suptiṅantaṃ padam, taking the internal case-ending as cause, is overridden. Since thus marut has no name pada, by jhalāṃ jaśo 'nte (Pā. Sū. 8-4-[blank in the print]) — the jhal letters at the end of a pada take j, b, g, ḍ, d — the d does not come for the t. After marutvat,

the accusative singular suffix am; by ugidacāṃ sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) the augment num: marutvan + t + am; anusvāra and parasavarṇa: marutvantam. Matup because it is pit, and am because it is a sup, are both unaccented by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4); but am, though a sup, is not pit. So the line of the Veda commentary matupsupau pittvād anudāttau (matup and sup both unaccented because pit) is a slip. By the paribhāṣā svaravidhau vyañjanam avidyamānavat (Paribhā. 7[6 or 9], see p. 166) — in making an accent rule a consonant is as if not there — the t of marut is as if not there. So the suffix matup, vat, is as if following ru, a short vowel. Then by hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matup (Pā. Sū. 6-1-176) — a matup immediately after a final-udātta word ending in a short vowel, or immediately after the augment nuṭ, is udātta — the question arises that the matup after maru should be udātta. To this the author of the Kāśikā-vṛtti (Kā. 6-1-176) has given the answer at the present sūtra. In the sūtra hrasvanuḍbhyām, the example for nuṭ is akṣaṇvantaḥ. After the word akṣi, matup; with asthidadhisakthyakṣṇām anaṅ udāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-75) carried on, by chandasy api dṛśyate — in the Veda the substitute anaṅ is seen for the words asthi and the rest, and it is udātta. Since here api dṛśyate is said, there is the exclusion of all restricting conditions. The previous sūtra laid down the substitute anaṅ when a vowel-initial case-ending of the third onward follows.

This substitute anaṅ comes both in places like asthabhiḥ, where a consonant-initial case-ending follows, and in places like asthanvantaṃ yad anasthā bibharti, where no case-ending follows. In asthanvantam, matup after the word asthi, the substitute anaṅ; by anor nuṭ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-16) nuṭ for the matup, and the dropping of the a of an; thus when the substitute anaṅ comes by this sūtra: akṣan + mat; by pūrvatrāsiddham (Pā. Sū. 8-2-1), since anor nuṭ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-16) is asiddha, first by nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n is dropped; now, since by its former state it ended in an, by anor nuṭ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-16) — the matup after a word ending in an takes the augment nuṭ — the augment nuṭ: akṣa + n + mat; since nuṭ is asiddha (Pā. Sū. 8-2-1), by mād upadhāyāś ca mator vo 'yavādibhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70 [?], as read) v for the m, and by aṭkupvāṅnumvyavāye 'pi (Pā. Sū. 8-4-2) ṇ for the n: it becomes akṣaṇvat; the a of kṣa is udātta. Thus akṣa is final udātta and ends in a short vowel. But after it there is the augment nuṭ, n. So, there being an intervention, the matup is not after a short vowel. For that reason the mention of nuṭ is made in the sūtra hrasvanuḍbhyām.

Here, on the view that the paribhāṣā svaravidhau vyañjanam avidyamānavat applies, since the n is treated as not there, it is as if absent; then the mat is as if immediately after akṣa, which ends in a short vowel. So the udātta of matup could be established anyway. If so, the mention of nuṭ again would have to be useless. Pāṇini does not use useless words; so, by the force of the mention of nuṭ, we accept that in the matter of the sūtra hrasvanuḍbhyām the paribhāṣā svaravidhau vyañjanam avidyamānavat does not apply: so they say. The Kāśikā statement giving this meaning: hrasvanuḍbhyām ity atra nuḍgrahaṇasāmarthyād avidyamānavatparibhāṣā nāśrīyate (Kā. 6-1-176). If the paribhāṣā on what is not there does not come here, the n is not made non-existent, so the matup is not immediately after the short-vowel-final, final-udātta akṣa; so the mention of nuṭ has its purpose. Therefore in the present case, if svaravidhau is not applied when making hrasvanuḍbhyām, since there is the intervention of t, the matup is not immediately after maru, which ends in a short vowel and is final udātta. So the matup is not udātta. Marut ends in the suffix uti by mṛgror utiḥ (U. Sa. 1-94), so it is final udātta by the suffix accent, and this stays. Here some others exclude the udātta of matup in another way too. Namely, the paribhāṣā svaravidhau is made known by the exclusion of pṛthivī and the rest in nottarapade 'nudāttādāv apṛthivīrudrapūṣamanthiṣu (Pā. Sū. 6-2-142). In places like dyāvāpṛthivī, since pṛthivī does not begin with an unaccented vowel, nottarapade anudāttādau, which gives the meaning anudāttādau uttarapade paratah ubhayapadaprakṛtisvaraḥ na bhavati, does not apply at all. If so, the exclusion of pṛthivī and the rest, being useless, by the maxim vyarthaṃ sat kiṃcid arthaṃ jñāpayati, makes known svaravidhau. Once it is made known, since in making the accent the consonants beginning with p are as if not there, pṛthivī begins with an unaccented vowel. So the exclusion apṛthivī… is purposeful, to remove the prohibition nottarapade 'nudāttādau that would come in dyāvāpṛthivī. By the force of this indication, this paribhāṣā applies only in rules aimed at accent; that is, to a consonant contrary to the usage of being the first part of an unaccented vowel included in the range of the object of the rule, and to a consonant contrary to the usage of being the last part of an udātta included in that range — to these two the paribhāṣā svaravidhau applies in making the accent. Uddeśyakoṭipraviṣṭodāttādisaṃbandhi caramāvayavatvādivyavahāravirodhi vyañjanaṃ svaravidhau avidyamānavat bhavati: this is the meaning drawn out from the paribhāṣā. The t of the present marut is not such. For marut is contrary both to the usage 'ending in a short vowel' and to the usage 'final udātta';

the t: in the udātta rule, the matup immediately after a final-udātta word ending in a short vowel is the object; for the t, contrary to the usage of being the final part of an udātta included in this range of the object, the treatment as not there comes, and marut is final udātta; but for the t, contrary to the usage 'ending in a short vowel', the treatment as not there does not come, so marut does not become short-vowel-final. Therefore by hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matup the udātta does not come to matup in marutvantam. In akṣaṇvantam the n is the first part of the matup, so it is no obstacle to whatever usage of being a final part connected with the udātta included in the range of the object of hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matup, which has the form 'a matup following immediately after a final-udātta short-vowel-final word'. So svaravidhau does not apply. Therefore the mention of nuṭ is purposeful; on this view there is no burden of having to imagine the non-application of the paribhāṣā svaravidhau in the matter of the sūtra hrasvanuḍbhyām by the force of the mention of nuṭ. For that very reason in the Paribhāṣenduśekhara (because it applies in rules aimed at accent) it is said: udaśvitvān ity atra hrasvanuḍbhyām iti matubudāttatvaṃ ca nety ākaraḥ (Pari. Śe. [?]).

> उदश्वित्वानित्यत्र ह्रस्वनुड्भ्यामिति मतुबुदात्तत्वं च नेत्याकरः ।
> udaśvitvānityatra hrasvanuḍbhyāmiti matubudāttatvaṃ ca netyākaraḥ |

सजूः (sajūḥ) — samānaḥ juṣ (samānā prītiḥ): those who have one and the same kind of love. The root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ; after it, by sampadādibhyaḥ kvip (Pā. Sū. 3-3-108 vārttika), kvip comes in the action sense. By samānasya chandasy amūrdhaprabhṛtyudarkeṣu (Pā. Sū. 6-3-84) — the substitute sa comes in the Veda for the word samāna before a last member other than the three words mūrdhan, prabhṛti, udarka — the substitute sa for samāna: it becomes sajuṣ. Sasajuṣo ruḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-66): the ru substitute comes for the final s of a pada and for the word sajuṣ at the end of a pada; or, the meaning is that the ru substitute comes for the final letter of a pada ending in the word sajuṣ. Here after the word sajuṣ the first-case suffix su; for it, by halṅyābbhyaḥ, the dropping. Now sajuṣ is a pada by suptiṅantaṃ padam (Pā. Sū. 1-4-14); by vyapadeśivadbhāva it is also a pada ending in the word sajuṣ. The substitute ru for its final ṣ: it became sajur. By rvor upadhāyā dīrgha ikaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-76) — at the end of a pada, the penultimate letter of a root ending in r or v is lengthened — the u is lengthened: sajūr. By kharavasānayor visarjanīyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-15) the visarga for the r: it becomes sajūḥ. Gaṇena sajūḥ: having the same love with the host, is the meaning. Sajūḥ is a bahuvrīhi, so by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member's own accent would be due. But overriding it, by antodāttaprakaraṇe tricakrā- dīnāṃ chandasy upasaṃkhyānam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-199-1) the last member gets the final udātta accent.

तृम्पतु (tṛmpatu) — the root tṛpa tṛmpha tṛptau; loṭ, tip; by eruḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-86) tu for ti: tṛp + tu; by tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77) the vikaraṇa śa: tṛp + a + tu; by śe tṛmphādīnām (Pā. Sū. 7-1-59-1) — when the suffix śa follows, tṛmph and the rest take the augment num — the augment num. If the augment num were given by reading tṛmpha as such in the list of roots, the n would have to be dropped by aniditāṃ hala upadhāyāḥ knṅiti (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24). So the vārttika would not be needed if these roots were read in the mucādi class. Tṛnp + atu: by naś cāpadāntasya jhali (Pā. Sū. 8-3-24) anusvāra for the n; by anusvārasya yayi parasavarṇaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-4-58) the homorganic m: it becomes tṛmpatu. In the Veda commentary it is tṛpa tṛmpa tṛptau; since such a reading is not found in the list of roots, tṛpa tṛmpha is taken. ॥7॥

Translation: "O devāsaḥ, gods, in the form of Indra and the Maruts, viśve, all of you, śruta, hear, mama havam, my call. Of what kind are you? Indrajyeṣṭhāḥ: those among whom Indra is the eldest, the chief; such ones, marudgaṇāḥ, in the form of the host of Maruts; pūṣarātayaḥ: Indra and the Maruts, whose rāti, giver, is the god called Pūṣan." (Grammatical tail: indrajyeṣṭhāḥ, the vocative initial udātta; not unaccented as it begins the pāda; marudgaṇāḥ, not unaccented because the preceding is treated as not there by vibhāṣitaṃ viśeṣavacane bahuvacanam (Pā. 8-1-74); devāsaḥ, pūṣarātayaḥ, as before; śruta, śru śravaṇe, tha of loṭ second person plural, the substitute ta by tasthasthamipām… (Pā. 3-4-101); śap by vyatyaya, dropped by bahulaṃ chandasi; the guṇa due by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ is barred by kṅiti ca; lengthening by dvyaco 'tastiṅaḥ; havam, hveñ spardhāyāṃ śabde ca, ap by bhāve 'nupasargasya (Pā. 3-3-75); saṃprasāraṇa, the preceding form, guṇa and av; unaccented as pit; the root accent remains.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

इन्द्रज्येष्ठाः (indrajyeṣṭhāḥ) — having Indra as chief | मरुद्गणाः (marudgaṇāḥ) — joined with the host of Marut deities | पूषरातयः (pūṣarātayaḥ) — accompanied by the deity Pūṣan, the giver of wealth | विश्वे देवासः (viśve devāsaḥ) — O all deities (you) | मम (mama) — my | हवं (havaṃ) — call | श्रुत (śruta) — hear.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O all deities, you are accompanied by Indra, the chief among the deities, and by the Marut deities, and by the deity called Pūṣan who gives wealth. Such as you are, hear the call that I make.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O Gods with the divine hosts of Maruts with Indra at your head among whom Pusha is most liberal, hear all of you this my call.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

इन्द्रज्येष्ठाः (indrajyeṣṭhāḥ) — jyeṣṭhaśabdaḥ pradhānavacanaḥ | indraḥ pradhānabhūto yeṣāṃ te indrajyeṣṭhāḥ || Jyeṣṭha means chief, principal. So indrajyeṣṭhāḥ means those who have Indra as chief, as principal: "Indra at their heads". That is, Indra is the leader of the gods ("leader"): it means the gods who set out with him in front.

पूषरातयः (pūṣarātayaḥ) — pūṣākhyo devo rātir dātā yeṣāṃ te pūṣarātayaḥ || Rāti means giver, giver of wealth: the intention is, accompanied by such a deity called Pūṣan.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

इन्द्रज्येष्ठाः (indrajyeṣṭhāḥ) — this is āmantrita; but since it is at the beginning of the pāda, there is the prohibition anudāttaṃ sarvam apādādau (Pā. Sū. 8-1-18), so the total lack of accent by the eighth-book āmantritasya ca (Pā. Sū. 8-1-19) does not come. By the sixth-book āmantritasya ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-198) the initial udātta alone comes.

मरुद्गणाः (marudgaṇāḥ) — this is an āmantrita ending in the plural. Here by vibhāṣitaṃ viśeṣavacane (Pā. Sū. 8-1-74) — when an āmantrita ending in the plural that is a qualifier follows, the preceding āmantrita ending in the plural that denotes the thing qualified is optionally treated as not there. (Here the word bahuvacana is not in the sūtra; but since the author of the Mahābhāṣya has supplied it, the stated meaning is to be known as right.) By this sūtra, since the preceding word indrajyeṣṭhāḥ, before the āmantrita marudgaṇāḥ, is treated as not there, marudgaṇāḥ does not become one following a pada. So the total lack of accent of the eighth book does not come.

देवासः, पूषरातयः (devāsaḥ, pūṣarātayaḥ) — both are āmantritas ending in the plural. Here, since devāḥ is at the beginning of the second pāda, the prohibition anudāttaṃ sarvam apādādau (Pā. Sū. 8-1-18) comes, and since the preceding words before pūṣarātayaḥ are treated as not there as said before, the total lack of accent of the eighth book does not come. By the sixth-book āmantritasya ca the initial udātta alone comes.

श्रुत (śruta) — the root śru śravaṇe. Loṭ, second person plural, the suffix tha: śru + tha. By loṭo laṅvat (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) the extension of being like laṅ. By tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) — in place of a la marked ṅ, tām, tam, ta, am come in order for the four suffixes tas, thas, tha, mip — the substitute ta for tha: śru + ta. By śruvaḥ śṛ ca (Pā. Sū. 3-1-74) — instead of the vikaraṇa śap, the vikaraṇa śnu after the root śru, and the substitute śṛ for the root — the vikaraṇa śnu would be due; but overriding it, śap comes by interchange; for it, by bahulaṃ chandasi, luk. By sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) — when a sārvadhātuka or ārdhadhātuka suffix follows, a stem ending in ik takes guṇa — guṇa would be due for the u of śru; but by kṅiti ca (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5) — taking suffixes marked g, k, ṅ as cause, guṇa and vṛddhi do not come — the prohibition comes. Here ta is not by nature git, kit or ṅit. But by sārvadhātukam apit (Pā. Sū. 1-2-4) a sārvadhātuka suffix that is not pit is like ṅit; so the treatment as ṅit comes and it is ṅit. Śruta: now, at the time of the Saṃhitā, by dvyaco 'tastiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-135) — a two-vowelled word ending in tiṅ and in short a, in a mantra, is lengthened at the time of the Saṃhitā — lengthening.

हवम् (havam) — the root hveñ spardhāyāṃ śabde ca. In bhāve 'nupasargasya (Pā. Sū. 3-3-75), from ṛdor ap (Pā. Sū. 3-3-57) ap is carried on, and from hvaḥ saṃprasāraṇaṃ ca… (Pā. Sū. 3-3-72) hvaḥ saṃprasāraṇam is carried on. So after the root hveñ without a prefix, in the action sense, the suffix ap and saṃprasāraṇa for hveñ both come: when ap and saṃprasāraṇa come, by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) the preceding form comes, giving hu + a; now by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ, guṇa: ho + a; by eco 'yavāyāvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-78) the substitute av: it became hava. The suffix ap is pit; so by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) — a sup and a pit are both unaccented — after the unaccented, the root accent alone remains. So the a of ha is udātta; when the accusative singular suffix am is attached, by ami pūrvaḥ the preceding form comes and it becomes havam. ॥8॥

सहसा (sahasā) — sahaḥ means strength, power. This word is in the instrumental singular.

युजा (yujā) — yujir yoge | being together, fit.

दुःशंसः (duḥśaṃsaḥ) — duṣṭena śaṃsanena yuktaḥ | one blamed with evil words, one known as wicked, one of wicked nature.

ईशत (īśata) — īśa aiśvarye | mā īśata means: may he not hold power over us, may he not trouble us: this is the intention.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

हत (hata) — the root hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ. Loṭ, second person plural, the suffix tha: han + tha; by loṭo laṅvat (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) treated like laṅ; by tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ (Pā. सुदानवः (sudānavaḥ) — the root ḍudāñ dāne. By dābhābhyāṃ nuḥ (U. Sū. 3-312, read at zoom: the last glyph is the round-headed 2) — after the roots ḍudāñ dāne and bhā dīptau, the suffix nu — when the suffix nu comes after the root dā, it becomes dānu. With the word su, by kugatiprādayaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-2-18), the prādi compound; since it follows a pada, and since it is not at the beginning of a pāda, by the eighth-book sūtra āmantritasya ca (Pā. Sū. 8-1-19) it is wholly unaccented.

युजा (yujā) — the root ẏujir ẏoge. By ṛtvigdadhṛksragdiguṣṇigañcuẏujikruñcāṃ ca (3-2-59) — when ṛtu is upapada, after the root ẏaj, and after dhṛṣ, sṛj, diś, ut-prefixed snih, añc, ẏuj, kruñc, the suffix kvin comes; some special operations too are given as set forms. When kvin comes after the root dhṛṣ, reduplication and final udātta are given as set forms: it becomes dadhṛk. When kvin in the object sense comes after sṛj, the augment am is given as a set form: it becomes srak. After snih with ut, the dropping of the final letter of the prefix and ṣ for s are given as set forms. After the root ẏuj —

— kvin comes by the sūtra stated before. All the letters of kvin are dropped in turn. After it the instrumental singular suffix ṭā: ẏuj + ā. By sāv ekācas tṛtīẏādir vibhaktiḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) — when the locative plural su follows, after a word that has a single vowel, the case-ending of the third onward is udātta — that case-ending is udātta.

दुःशंसः (duḥśaṃsaḥ) — by īṣadduḥsuṣu kṛcchrākṛcchrārtheṣu khal (Pā. Sū. 3-3-126) — when dus in the sense of difficulty, or īṣat, su in the sense of ease, are upapada, the suffix khal comes after roots in the action and object senses — khal comes after the root śaṃsu stutau with the prefix dus: dus + śaṃs + a: it becomes duśśaṃsa. By liti (Pā. Sū. 6-1-193) the vowel before the suffix is udātta.

luṅlaṅlṛṅkṣv aḍ udāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-71), by na māṅyoge (Pā. Sū. 6-4-74) — with māṅ, the augments aṭ, āṭ do not come — the prohibition comes: it becomes īśata. By tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) — a word ending in tiṅ after a word not ending in tiṅ is unaccented — it becomes wholly unaccented. ॥9॥

मरुतः (marutaḥ) — the Marut deities (and) | विश्वान् देवान् (viśvān devān) — all the deities | सोमपीतये (somapītaye) — for drinking soma | हवामहे (havāmahe) — we call | (those Marut deities) उग्राः (ugrāḥ) — who cannot be subdued by enemies | पृश्निमातरः (pṛśnimātaraḥ) — sons of the earth furnished with many colours | हि (hi) — well known.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

We call the Marut deities and all other deities to drink soma. Those Marut deities, being of great valour, cannot be defeated by enemies. They are sons of the earth furnished with many colours. This matter is well known.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> We invoke all the divine gods and the Maruts who are mighty and are the Sons of many coloured earth, to drink the Soma juice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

उग्राः (ugrāḥ) — cruel, "fierce": that is, of great valour when fighting with enemies; therefore unconquerable by enemies.

पृश्निमातरः (pṛśnimātaraḥ) — the commentator has given this word the meaning "sons of the earth furnished with many colours". And, as an example, giving the ṛk —

> पृश्नेः पुत्रा उपमासो रभिष्ठाः स्वया मत्या मरुतः सं मिमिक्षुः ॥ (ऋ० सं० ५-५८-५)
> pṛśneḥ putrā upamāso rabhiṣṭhāḥ svayā matyā marutaḥ saṃ mimikṣuḥ || (ṛ0 saṃ0 5-58-5)

— when explaining that ṛk he has explained the words pṛśneḥ putrāḥ as gorūpāyā antarikṣasya vā putrasthānīyāḥ, that is, sons of the earth in the form of a cow, or of the mid-air. Skandasvāmin says —

> पृश्निरिति द्युनाम । द्यौर्माता येषां मरुतां ते पृश्निमातरः । दिवः पुत्रा इत्यर्थः ॥
> pṛśniriti dyunāma | dyaurmātā yeṣāṃ marutāṃ te pṛśnimātaraḥ | divaḥ putrā ityarthaḥ ||

— that pṛśni is heaven, and they are sons of the mid-air. Since the movement of the Maruts is in the mid-air itself, it is fitting to say they are born from it. Yāska has explained this word thus —

> स्वः । पृश्निः । नाकः । गौः । विष्टप् । नभ इति षट् साधारणानि ॥ साधारणान्युत्तराणि दिवश्चादित्यस्य ॥ (नि० २-१३)

svaḥ | pṛśniḥ | nākaḥ | gauḥ | viṣṭap | nabha iti ṣaṭ sādhāraṇāni ||
sādhāraṇānyuttarāṇi divaścādityasya || (ni0 2-13)

— that is, the six words svaḥ, pṛśniḥ, nākaḥ, gauḥ, viṣṭap, nabhaḥ are common words denoting both heaven (divaḥ) and the sun. And —

पृश्निरादित्यो भवति । प्राश्नुत एनं वर्ण इति नैरुक्ताः संस्प्रष्टा रसान् । संस्प्रष्टा भासं ज्योतिषां ॥ संस्पृष्टो भासेति वा ॥ अथ द्यौः संस्पृष्टा ज्योतिर्भिः पुण्यकृद्भिश्च ॥ (नि० २-१४)

pṛśnirādityo bhavati | prāśnuta enaṃ varṇa iti nairuktāḥ saṃspraṣṭā rasān |
saṃspraṣṭā bhāsaṃ jyotiṣāṃ || saṃspṛṣṭo bhāseti vā || atha dyauḥ saṃspṛṣṭā
jyotirbhiḥ puṇyakṛdbhiśca || (ni0 2-14)

Pṛśni means the sun. Because excellent radiance pervades him all round, the etymologists (the authors of the Nirukta) say that pṛśni means the sun. Saṃspraṣṭā rasān means: sa hi nityakālam eva rasānāṃ saṃspraṣṭā bhavati | athāsya karma rasādānam | — because he is the cause of giving water, the essence, in the form of rain, the sun is named pṛśni. Or saṃspraṣṭā bhāsaṃ jyotiṣām — the light of the planets, stars, moon and the rest becomes dim through the surpassing light of the sun. Or saṃspṛṣṭo bhāseti vā — because he pervades everywhere with his radiance, pṛśni means the sun.

स हि नित्यकालमेव रसानां संस्प्रष्टा भवति । अथास्य कर्म रसादानम् ।

sa hi nityakālameva rasānāṃ saṃspraṣṭā bhavati | athāsya karma rasādānam |

Further, pṛśni means dyauḥ. For saṃspṛṣṭā jyotirbhiḥ puṇyakṛdbhiś ca — because it is joined with light and with the doers of merit, pṛśni means dyauḥ (heaven).

This is Yāska's explanation; so it is fitting to accept the meaning that pṛśni is dyauḥ, heaven, the mid-air, and to say of the word pṛśnimātaraḥ that it means divas putrāḥ, those born in the mid-air.

यद्यूयं पृश्निमातरो मर्तासः स्यातन ॥ (ऋ० सं० १-३८-४)

yadyūyaṃ pṛśnimātaro martāsaḥ syātana || (ṛ0 saṃ0 1-38-4)

When explaining the meaning of this ṛk, he has explained the word pṛśnimātaraḥ as pṛśninmāmakadhenuputrā marutaḥ (the Maruts, sons of the cow named Pṛśni). On many occasions of praising the Marut deities the use of the word pṛśnimātaraḥ is seen in particular. So it can be freely said that a definite meaning of this word was current. We have given below the ṛks of the Ṛgveda in which this word is used —

पृश्निनामकधेनुपुत्रा मरुतः ।

(Glosses of these quotations are not given in the source.) We have given above all the ṛks in which the word pṛśnimātaraḥ is used. Since in these ṛks the word pṛśnimātaraḥ is explained as meaning the Maruts alone, it can freely be said that this word is used in a definite sense only with regard to these deities.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

पृश्निमातरः (pṛśnimātaraḥ) — pṛśniḥ mātā yeṣāṃ te: the meaning of the analysis is those whose mother is the earth of many colours. The grammarians give the word pṛśni the meaning ‘one of small body’; so by pṛśnir alpatanau (Amarakośa) this is how it results. But the Veda commentator has described the meaning here as the earth with many colours. This form is established from the root spṛśa saṃsparśane. By ghṛṇipṛśnipārṣṇicūrṇibhūrṇi (U. Sū. 4-52) — after ghṛ kṣaraṇadīptyoḥ, spṛśa saṃsparśane, pṛṣu secane, cara gatau, ḍubhṛñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, the suffix ni comes, and some operations and the initial udātta are also given as set forms: this is the sense of the sūtra. In ghṛṇi, when the suffix ni comes after the root ghṛ, the absence of the guṇa that would be due by sārvadhātuka… is given as a set form, and by ṛvarṇān nasya ṇatvaṃ vācyam, ṇ comes for the n: it becomes ghṛṇi. When the suffix ni comes after the root spṛś, the dropping of the s belonging to the root and the absence of guṇa are given as set forms in this sūtra: so it becomes pṛśni. Likewise in pārṣṇi vṛddhi, in cūrṇi the substitute ū for the penultimate of the root, and in bhūrṇi u for the ṛ of the root are given as set forms, and those forms are established: so it is to be known. When the bahuvrīhi compound comes, by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member’s own accent comes, and pṛśni stays initially udātta. ॥10॥

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

जयतामिव (jayatām iva) — as warriors who have come back victorious over enemies in battle make a shout of joy marking victory.

तन्यतुः (tanyatuḥ) — for this Yāska has explained tanyatus tanitrī vāco 'nyasyāḥ: making a sound, the speech of another deity. The word tanyatuḥ is also read in the Ṛgveda in the ṛks 1-32-13; 1-116-12 (zoom-checked); 5-25-8; 6-6-2; 7-3-6; 9-100-3; 10-65-13 (numbers in small type, as read).

> तन्यतुस्तनित्री वाचोऽन्यस्याः ।
>
> tanyatustanitrī vāco 'nyasyāḥ |

धृष्णुया (dhṛṣṇuyā) — full of boldness, deep, very loud.

यत् (yat) — yadā | when.

शुभं (śubhaṃ) — to the good rite, that is, the performance of sacrifice, worship of the gods and the like. Skandasvāmin has given this word the meaning 'the water in the clouds'. Accordingly the intention is that the Marut deities, with roarings such as lightning and thunder, go near the clouds and make rain fall.

याथन (yāthana) — for the sake of the metre the final syllable is long in the Saṃhitā.

नरः (naraḥ) — vocative, first case plural. Netāraḥ: leaders, chiefs.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

तन्यतुः (tanyatuḥ) — the root tanu vistāre. By ṛtanyañjivanyañjyarpimadyatyaṅgikuyukṛśibhyaḥ katnijyatujalijiṣṭujiṣṭhajisansyanithinulyasāsānukaḥ (U. Sū. 4-442, read at zoom; the last glyph is the curled 2) — after these twelve roots, ṛ gatau, tanu vistāre, añjū vyaktyādau, vanu yācane, añjū vyaktyādau, ṛ gatau ending in ṇic, madī harṣe, ata sātatyagamane, agi gatau, ku śabde, yu miśraṇe, kṛśa tanūkaraṇe, the twelve suffixes katnic, yatuc, alic, iṣṭuc, iṣṭhac, isan, syan, ithin, uli, asa, āsa, ānuk come in order — the suffix yatuc comes after the root tan.

धृष्णुया (dhṛṣṇuyā) — the root ñidhṛṣā prāgalbhye. After it, by trasigṛdhidhṛṣikṣipeḥ knuḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-2-140) — after trasī udvege, gṛdhu abhikāṅkṣāyām, ñidhṛṣā prāgalbhye, kṣipa preraṇe, when the agents are of that habit, that nature, or doers of it well, the suffix knu comes — the suffix knu. In the suffix nu remains. Dhṛṣ + nu; by raṣābhyāṃ no ṇaḥ samānapade (Pā. Sū. 8-4-1) ṇ for the n; after dhṛṣṇu the first-case singular suffix su. For it, by supāṃ suluk pūrvasavarṇācchheyāḍāḍyāyājālaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) — in the Veda, in place of the sup endings, suluk, pūrvasavarṇa, ā, āt, śe, yā, ḍā, ḍyā, yāc, āl come according to usage — the substitute yāc comes here; it is cit, so by citaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163) the final udātta accent comes.

याथन (yāthana) — the root yā prāpaṇe; loṭ, second person plural, the suffix tha. By loṭo laṅvat (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) treated like laṅ; by tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute ta for tha; the vikaraṇa śap; for it, by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-72), luk: yā + ta. Now by taptanaptanathanāś ca

(Pā. Sū. 7-1-45) — for the ta coming in place of loṭ, one of the substitutes tap, tanap, tana, thana comes according to usage — the substitute thana: it becomes yāthana. Here, though total lack of accent would be due by tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28), by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66) — a word ending in tiṅ after a word containing yad is not unaccented — the prohibition comes. So total lack of accent does not come. In the Saṃhitā, by anyeṣām api dṛśyate (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137), it becomes yāthanā. ॥11॥

हस्कारात् (haskārāt) — making light | विद्युतः (vidyutaḥ) — shining especially | अतः (ataḥ) — from it, that is, from the mid-air | परि (pari) — in the upper part | जाताः (jātāḥ) — born | मरुतः (marutaḥ) — the Marut deities | नः (naḥ) — us | अवन्तु (avantu) — may they protect | (and) नः (naḥ) — for us | मृळयन्तु (mṛḷayantu) — may they make happiness.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

May the Marut deities, born in the upper part of the lightning, which is very bright so as to dazzle in the mid-air, protect us and make happiness for us.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> May the Maruts born from the lightning in the resplendent region protect us and make us happy.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

हस्कारात् (haskārāt) — hase hasane atra tu prakāśamātre vartate || Though the root has means laughing, the commentator says it is used here in the sense of light. Haḥ + kārāt means: making light. Skandasvāmin explains the word haḥ as a sound marking the cry of distress people use when in trouble, and gives this ṛk the sense: removing the cry of distress of the people, may the cloud make rain fall, protect us and make happiness.

विद्युतः (vidyutaḥ) — viśeṣeṇa dīpyamānāt / shining especially. The meaning 'from the lightning' can also be given to this word.

परि अतः जाताः (pari ataḥ jātāḥ) — the Marut deities born in the upper part of the mid-air, covered by light and lightning, that is, in the mid-air above the earth. Since the movement of the Marut deities is always in the mid-air itself, there may be a custom of saying that the Maruts are born in the mid-air.

हस्कारात् (haskārāt) — has, light; karoti, makes: so the analysis. The root hase hasane; here the root is in the sense of light, because roots have many meanings. By sampadādibhyaḥ

kvip (Pā. Sū. 3-3-108, Vā. 9) — after the roots read in the sampadādi class, kvip comes in the action sense — when kvip comes after the root has and all its letters are dropped, only has remains. When the object-word has in the accusative singular is upapada, by karmaṇy aṇ (Pā. Sū. 3-2-1) — when an object-word is upapada, aṇ comes after the root — the suffix aṇ comes after the root kṛ, ḍukṛñ karaṇe: has + kṛ + a. By aco 'ñṇiti (Pā. Sū. 7-11, as printed) vṛddhi ār for the ṛ: it becomes haskāra. This is a tatpuruṣa compound. So by tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtīyāsaptamyupamānāvyayadvitīyākṛtyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) — in a tatpuruṣa compound the seven first members beginning with tulyārthaka (words meaning 'equal') keep their own accent — the own accent of* has*, ending in the second case, that is, by* dhātoḥ* (Pā. Sū. 6-1-162), its being udātta, would be due; overriding it, by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) — in a tatpuruṣa compound, a kṛt-final word after a gati, a kāraka or an upapada keeps its own accent — the last member keeps its own accent; the last member kāra is final udātta by the suffix accent. So after compounding too that own accent stays. By tatropapadaṃ saptamīstham (Pā. Sū. 3-1-92) — in the sūtras under the heading dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-91), words such as has that express the meaning conveyed by words in the seventh case such as karmaṇi get the name upapada — has has the name upapada. For the s in has + kāra, by sasajuṣo ruḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-66) — the final s of a pada and the word sajuṣ take the substitute ru — the substitute ru; by kharavasānayor visarjanīyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-15) — at the end of a pada, visarga comes for an r before a khar letter and for an r at a pause — visarga. Haḥ + kāra: by ataḥ kṛkamikaṃsakumbhapātrakuśākarṇīṣv anavyayasya (Pā. Sū. 8-3-46) — when the seven words kṛ and the rest follow, for a visarga after a that does not belong to an indeclinable, s comes always in a compound; but a visarga in a last member does not get the s — so s for the visarga: haskāra is established. ॥12॥

आघृणे (āghṛṇe) — furnished with light | अज (aja) — of moving nature | पूषन् (pūṣan) — O Pūṣan | चित्रबर्हिषं (citrabarhiṣaṃ) — together with variegated darbha grass | धरुणं (dharuṇaṃ) — the soma, the support of the sacrifice | (as a man) नष्टं (naṣṭaṃ) — lost | पशुं (paśuṃ) — an animal | यथा (yathā) — in the manner in which | आ (harati) — searches and brings (so) | दिवः (divaḥ) — from the world of heaven | आ (hara) — bring and give.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Pūṣan, furnished with light, since you are of moving nature, bring us from the world of heaven the soma, which is joined with variegated darbha grass and is the support of the sacrifice, just as one searches out and brings back an animal lost in the world.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Resplendent and swift-moving Pushan, bring from heaven the Soma juice with the variegated sacred grass as a man brings back a stray animal.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The meaning of this ṛk is somewhat tangled. The main intention is: O Pūṣan, you are of great brightness and can move fast; so, as one searches out and brings back an animal (a cow, a goat and the like) lost in the world, bring and give us from heaven the soma, joined with variegated darbha grass and the support of the sacrifice.

पूषन् (pūṣan) — since the word pūṣa is read among the twenty-one words denoting the earth, gauḥ, gmā, jmā and the rest, pūṣa also means the earth. Here the word pūṣan is the deity named Pūṣan. Since this deity is well known as one who searches out and brings back lost things, there is such a description in many ṛks. Yāska's explanation of this word —

> पूषा । अथ यद्रश्मिपोषं पुष्यति तत्पूषा भवति ॥ (नि० १२-१६)
> pūṣā | atha yadraśmipoṣaṃ puṣyati tatpūṣā bhavati || (ni0 12-16)

— is this: because he is full of rays or beams, this deity is named Pūṣā. Since Pūṣā is one of the twelve Ādityas, they say that Pūṣan is a particular form of the sun. For that reason, when describing this deity, they use qualifying words such as furnished with brightness, shining, furnished with light. And Yāska has put ajāḥ pūṣṇaḥ (Ni. 2-2[6 or 9], zoom: second group ends in a hooked glyph) among the ādiṣṭopayojana words. Ādiṣṭopayojana means a qualifying word that sets out a meaning suited to be construed with that particular deity, as is well known in usage. For example harī indrasya, rāsabhāv aśvinoḥ, niyuto vāyoḥ and so on: that is, the word harī (Indra's horses) is used in the Veda only to indicate Indra's horses. Likewise the word rāsabhā is used in the praise of the Aśvin deities and the word niyutaḥ when praising Vāyu. So it is to be known that the word aja is used when praising the deity Pūṣan. In this ṛk too there is the use of the word aja. The commentator has explained it as 'of moving nature'. Since the sun (Pūṣā) moves through the three worlds and sees everything, it is natural to call him 'of moving nature'. To support the meaning of the word pūṣā —

— Yāska has given two ṛks as examples, śukraṃ te anyad yajataṃ te (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-58-1) and pathas-pathaḥ paripatiṃ vacasyā (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-49-8).

चित्रबर्हिषं (citrabarhiṣaṃ) — vicitradarbhair yuktam | The commentator says: joined with variegated darbha grass. How the soma is joined with darbha grass is not clear. It may be said so because the soma vessel is usually placed on darbha grass. Skandasvāmin has also given citram the meaning 'worthy of worship'. The author of the Vedārthayatna has given the word citrabarhiṣam the meaning 'joined with variegated feathers' ("feathers"). That soma has feathers seems strange; that meaning is not quite fitting.

> घृणिः सूर्य आदित्यः ।
> ghṛṇiḥ sūrya ādityaḥ |

धरुणं (dharuṇaṃ) — yāgasya dhārakam | the chief thing that supports the sacrifice, that is, the soma juice: this is the intention.

दिवः (divaḥ) — from the world of heaven. Skandasvāmin has joined the word dharuṇam with the word divaḥ — divaḥ dharuṇam = divaḥ dhartāram — and given the meaning: upholding heaven, nourishing heaven. Since soma juice is well known to be in heaven, the meaning the commentator gives, 'bring and give the soma juice from heaven', is the fitting one. The śruti statement tṛtīyasyām ito divi soma āsīt (Tai. Brā. 3-2-1) supports the point that soma was in heaven.

> तृतीयस्यामितो दिवि सोम आसीत् ।
> tṛtīyasyāmito divi soma āsīt |

अज (aja) — aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ | since the root aj has the meaning of going, the meaning 'of moving nature' fits here.

नष्टं यथा पशुं (naṣṭaṃ yathā paśuṃ) — as one is glad when a lost animal is found, so we would be glad if the soma in heaven were brought and given to us: to suggest this, the comparison may have been used.

(The small Nirukta numbers on these pages were zoom-read on Oct 28: 2-2[6/9], 2-21, 2-28.)

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

आघृणे (āghṛṇe) — the root ghṛ kṣaraṇadīptyoḥ. Ghṛṇipṛśni… (U. Sū. 4-52): its meaning has been set out at ugrā hi pṛśnimātaraḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-23-10). By this, the suffix ni: ghṛ + ni; by ṛvarṇān nasya ṇatvaṃ vācyam, ṇ for the n; with the prefix ā, by kugatiprādayaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-2-18), the compound; since it is at the beginning of the pāda, the total lack of accent by the eighth-book āmantritasya ca does not come. By the sixth-book āmantritasya ca the initial udātta comes.

धरुणम् (dharuṇam) — the root dhṛñ dhāraṇe. After it the suffix ṇic: dhṛ + i; now by dhārer ṇiluk ca [as printed] (Daśapā. 4) — after the root dhṛñ ending in the suffix ṇic, the suffix unan comes, and the ṇic is dropped (luk) — when the suffix unan and the dropping of ṇi come: dhṛ + una; by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa ar for the ṛ: dharuna; now by aṭkupvāṅnumvyavāye 'pi (Pā. Sū. 8-4-2) ṇ for the n: it becomes dharuṇa. Overriding the initial udātta of the suffix laid down by ādyudāttaś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-1-3), since the suffix is nit the initial udātta would be due by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197); but here, according to the sūtra vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85), the initial udātta of the suffix alone comes and the u becomes udātta.

दिवः (divaḥ) — ūḍidampadādyapumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171): here ekācaḥ and antodāttāt are carried on. Ekācaḥ, having nothing to exclude, is not a qualifier of ūṭh; even if it qualifies the whole joined with ūṭh there is no hindrance; in places like praṣṭhauh the ūh formed with ūṭh is meaningful and is obtained. So the case-endings other than sarvanāmasthāna after ūṭh and the rest, which are final udātta and monosyllabic, are udātta; so the genitive ending is udātta. Therefore by anudāttau suppitau the case-ending does not become unaccented.

राजानं (rājānaṃ) — there is a custom of calling soma 'king'. Such usage is seen more in the Yajurveda than in the Ṛgveda.

> सोमं राजानमवसेऽग्निं गीर्भिर्हवामहे ॥ (ऋ० सं० १०-१४१-३) सोमस्य राज्ञो वरुणस्य धर्मणि बृहस्पतेरनुमत्या उ शर्मणि ॥ (ऋ० सं० १०-१६७-३)

— and there are many such examples. In the first anuvāka of the second chapter of the sixth book of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā of the Yajurveda (Tai. Saṃ. 6-2-1) there is the explanation that soma is the king and the metres Gāyatrī and the rest are his servants.

अपगूळ्हं (apagūḷhaṃ) — atyantagūḍham | nigūḷham ācchāditam | the meaning is: kept in a most secret place. On this matter Skandasvāmin has told an old legend —

> अत्रेतिहासमाचक्षते । असुराः सोमं राजानं दीयमानमग्नेर्हस्तादपहृत्य गुहायां न्यदधुः । तं पर्येषमाणा अन्ये देवा नाविन्दन् । पूषा त्वविन्दत् ।

— that is: the demons stole the soma from the hand of Agni and kept it in a most secret place, a cave. However much the gods searched for it, they did not find it. Pūṣan alone searched it out and brought it.

गुहा हितं (guhā hitaṃ) — that is, hidden in a hard-to-reach secret place like a cave. Here guhā can be taken to mean a cave or a secret place. In the Ṛgveda and the Upaniṣads too it is customary to indicate a thing kept in a secret place known to no one by the words guhā hitam —

अपगूळ्हम् (apagūḷham) — the prefix apa, the root guhū saṃvaraṇe. After it, by niṣṭhā (Pā. Sū. 3-2-102) — after a root in the past sense, the suffixes kta, ktavatu come — the suffix kta in the object sense: ap + guh + ta. Now by ho ḍhaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-31) — when a jhal letter follows, and at the end of a pada, ḍh is substituted for h — for the h before the jhal letter t, the substitute ḍh: guḍh + ta. By jhaṣas tathor dho 'dhaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-40) — the t and th after a letter in the pratyāhāra jhaṣ not belonging to the root dhā take dh — dh for the t: guḍh + dha; by ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-4-41), by ṣṭutva, ḍh for the dh: guḍh + ḍha. By ḍho ḍhe lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-13) — a ḍh before a ḍh is dropped — the ḍh is dropped: gu + ḍha. By ḍhralope pūrvasya dīrgho 'ṇaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-3-111) — an aṇ before the ḍh and r that cause the dropping of ḍh and r is lengthened — the u is lengthened: gū + ḍha: it became apagūḍha. Now, according to the tradition of the Bahvṛcas, ajmadhyasthaḍakārasya ḷakāraṃ bahvṛcā jaguḥ | ajmadhyasthaḍhakārasya ḷhakāraṃ vai yathākramam ||, the ḍh between vowels becomes ḷh: it becomes apagūḷham. Apa and gūḷham both form a prādi compound. By gatir anantaraḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-49) — when a word ending in the suffix kta in the object sense follows, the immediately preceding gati keeps its own accent — the accent of apa alone stays. Apa is initially udātta by upasargāś cābhivarjam (Phi. Sū. 82).

हितं (hitaṃ) — after the root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, the suffix kta: dhā + ta. By dadhāter hiḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-42) — when a t-initial kit suffix follows, the root dhā takes the substitute hi — when hi comes for dhā: hi + ta; the accusative singular suffix am: it becomes hitam. ॥14॥

Translation: "Uto, and also, saḥ, that Pūṣan, mahyam, for me, the sacrificer, anuseṣidhat, keeps turning in order again and again — 'keeps turning' is to be supplied — the six seasons, spring and the rest, yuktān, joined indubhiḥ, with somas, the means of the sacrifice. ॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

उतो (uto) — and | सः (saḥ) — that Pūṣan | मह्यं (mahyaṃ) — for me who am performing the sacrifice | इन्दुभिः (indubhiḥ) — with the soma juices, the chief things in the sacrifice | युक्तान् (yuktān) — joined | षट् (ṣaṭ) — the six seasons, spring and the rest | (as a farmer) गोभिः (gobhiḥ) — with bullocks | यवं (yavaṃ) — to obtain the grain called yava (wheat [as printed], barley) | न चर्कृषत् (na carkṛṣat) — as he ploughs the ground again and again | अनुसेषिधत् (anuseṣidhat) — may he carry them on in an order of turning, one after the other.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

As the farmer ploughs the ground again and again, that is, many times, with bullocks to grow the grain called ɣava, so may that Pūṣan make the six seasons, joined with the soma juices that accomplish the sacrifice, go on in an order of turning, one after the other.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> And he has brought to me successively the six (seasons) connected with the drops of the Soma juice as a man repeatedly ploughs a field with bullocks for the sake of barley.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The meaning of this ṛk does not fit very well. The comparison too is not good. The intention of this ṛk may be: as the farmer ploughs the ground again and again to grow the grain ɣava, so may he make the seasons, spring and the rest, and the soma sacrifices we perform in those seasons, come again and again. Since the seasons, spring and the rest, come every year, it came about many times. To grow grain the ground must be ploughed many times. So, to suggest the meaning 'many times', —

— this comparison may have been given. In this ṛk there is only the word ṣaṭ. The commentator has explained ṣaṭ as the six seasons.

इन्दुभिः (indubhiḥ) — with drops of soma juice: since, when soma juice is pressed with a creeper, it falls drop by drop, it is customary to speak of soma juice by words for drops (indavaḥ, indubhiḥ and the like).

गोभिः (gobhiḥ) — though gobhiḥ means 'with cows', the commentator and Skandasvāmin both hold that here gobhiḥ must be given the meaning 'with bullocks', the means for the work of farming.

न (na) — this word is used here in the sense of comparison.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

मह्यं (mahyaṃ) — after the word asmad, the dative singular suffix ṅe: asmad + ṅe. Now by tubhyamahyau ṅayi (Pā. Sū. 7-2-95) — when the suffix ṅe follows, the part up to m of the words ɣuṣmad, asmad, that is ɣuṣm, asm, take the substitutes tubhya, mahya in order — the substitute mahya for asm: mahya + ad + ṅe; by ato guṇe (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the following form: mahyad + ṅe; by ṅe prathamayor am (Pā. Sū. 7-1-28) the substitute am for ṅe: mahyad + am; by śeṣe lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-90) the ad is dropped. On the view that śeṣe lopaḥ applies to the final letter, when the d is dropped, by ami pūrvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-107) the preceding form: it becomes mahyam. On the view of dropping the final, the single substitute arising by the preceding form would have to be udātta by ekādeśa udāttenodāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-5): that is, in mahyam the final a would turn out udātta. On the view of dropping the ṭi, by the accent of the loss of the udātta, anudāttasya ca ɣatrodāttalopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161), the case-ending would have to be udātta. If so, by ṅayi ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-212) — when the suffix ṅe follows, the beginning of the words ɣuṣmad, asmad is udātta — the initial udātta accent comes.

इन्दुभिः (indubhiḥ) — the root undī kledane. By underic cādeḥ (U. Sū. 1-13), after the root und, the suffix u and the substitute i for the first u: so the suffix u. With i for the u it becomes indu. By dhānye nit (U. Sū. 1-9), nit is carried on into this sūtra. So since the suffix is nit, and by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197), this is initially udātta.

युक्तान् (yuktān) — yuktān, ending in the accusative plural, + anu: for these, at the time of the Saṃhitā, by dīrghād aṭi samānapāde (Pā. Sū. 8-3-9) — if the n and a letter of the pratyāhāra aṭ are in one and the same pāda, — the n before the aṭ letter, when it follows a long vowel, takes the substitute ru — so the substitute ru for the n: yuktār + anu. Now by āto 'ṭi nityam (Pā. Sū. 8-3-3) — the long ā before the ru that is before an aṭ letter always becomes nasal — the ā becomes nasal: yuktār̃ + anu; by bhobhagoaghoapūrvasya yo 'śi (Pā. Sū. 8-3-17) y for the r; by lopaḥ śākalyasya (Pā. Sū. 8-3-19) the y is dropped; by pūrvatrāsiddham (Pā. Sū. 8-2-1), when making the lengthening of like vowels, the dropping of y is asiddha. So the lengthening of like vowels does not come.

अनुसेषिधत् (anuseṣidhat) — the root ṣidhu gatyām. By dhātor ekāco halādeḥ kriyāsamabhihāre yaṅ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-22) — when repetition or intensity is shown, yaṅ comes after a root that is monosyllabic and begins with a consonant — yaṅ: ṣidh + ya; by dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-64) s for ṣ: sidh + ya. By yaṅo 'ci ca (Pā. Sū. 2-4-74) — yaṅ is dropped (luk) when a vowel-initial suffix follows, and even when none follows — yaṅ is dropped (luk): it stays as sidh. Though yaṅ is thus dropped, by pratyayalope pratyayalakṣaṇam (Pā. Sū. 1-1-62) — though a suffix is dropped, an operation caused by the suffix comes — whatever operation would come if yaṅ were there comes now too. But here the dropping has come by pronouncing the word luk. So it may be said that by na lumatāṅgasya (Pā. Sū. 1-1-63) the mark of the suffix should be barred. The sense of the sūtra na lumatāṅgasya: in places where the dropping has come by pronouncing luk, ślu, lup, words containing lu, an operation aimed at the stem caused by the dropped suffix does not come, whether laid down under the aṅga heading or not. The present reduplication comes to what ends in yaṅ; so it is not an operation aimed at the stem. Therefore this prohibition does not come here. By sanyaṅoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-9) — the first monosyllabic part of a root ending in san or yaṅ is reduplicated, and if the root begins with a vowel, the second monosyllabic part — with the reduplication: sidh + sidh. By halādiḥ śeṣaḥ (7-4-60) — the first consonant of the reduplicate remains, the other consonants of the reduplicate are dropped — the dh is dropped: si + sidh. By guṇo yaṅlukoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-82) — in yaṅ and in yaṅluk the reduplicate takes guṇa — guṇa for si, e for the i: sesidh. By iṇkoḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-57) the cerebral substitute (ṣatva) for an s after the letters of the pratyāhāra iṇ: so the s after se becomes ṣ: seṣidh.

— so they count the sanādi suffixes. Thus what ends in yaṅ ends in a sanādi suffix. And so by sanā- dyantā dhātavaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-32) — what ends in the sanādi suffixes gets the name dhātu — seṣidh gets the name dhātu. Thus when śatṛ comes for the suffix laṭ by laṭaḥ śatṛśānacāv aprathamāsamānādhikaraṇe (Pā. Sū. 3-2-124): seṣidh + at. By kartari śap (Pā. Sū. 3-1-68) the vikaraṇa śap. Carkarītaṃ parasmaipadam adādivac ca draṣṭavyam (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-8-4 [as printed]): carkarīta is the name for what ends in yaṅluk; it is only parasmaipada; it is also as if in the adādi class; so what ends in yaṅluk is as if in the adādi class. Therefore by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-72) śap is dropped (luk). This very meaning results from the gaṇasūtra carkarītaṃ ca read in the adādi class. Since, having declared atha trayaḥ parasmaipadinaḥ and read the roots ṣasa, ṣasti svapne, vaśa kāntau, this gaṇasūtra comes after them, it results that what ends in yaṅluk is parasmaipada. Since it is read in the adādi class, it is adādi too. So it also results that, after a root of whatever vikaraṇa, if yaṅ is dropped (luk), the vikaraṇa śap alone comes there and it is dropped. When the suffix su is put after seṣidhat, by ugidacāṃ sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) num would be due; for it, by nābhyastāc chatuḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-78) — a śatṛ suffix after a reduplicated stem does not take num — the prohibition comes. By the sixth-book sūtra ubhe abhyastam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-5) — the whole of a word with reduplication gets the name abhyasta — seṣidh has the name abhyasta; when the accent of the śatṛ suffix should remain, by abhyastānām ādiḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-189) — when a vowel-initial sārvadhātuka in place of la, without the augment iṭ, follows, the beginning of the abhyasta is udātta — se becomes udātta.

गोभिः (gobhiḥ) — by sāv ekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168): su means the locative plural; when the locative plural suffix follows, the case-ending of the third onward after whatever word has a single vowel is udātta; so the udātta accent would be due for the case-ending; but by the sūtra stated next the prohibition comes. Na gośvansāvavarṇarāḍaṅkruṅkṛdbhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-182): the sense of the sūtra is that the case-ending and the matup after the words go, śvan, words ending in a/ā in the nominative singular, the word rāṭ ending in kvip, the word aṅ formed with kvin after the root añcu, the word kruñ formed with kvin after kruñca gatikauṭilyālpībhāvayoḥ, and the word kṛt formed with kvip after the root kṛñ, do not take the udātta laid down by the sūtras of the sixth book. At cau (Pā. Sū. 6-1-222), introducing the sūtra na gośvan, kasya tarhi? yo 'nena kenacil lakṣaṇena

These points are also established by the Kaiyaṭa on this Bhāṣya.

चर्कृषत् (carkṛṣat) — the root kṛṣa vilekhane. By dhātor ekācaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-22) yaṅ; for it, by yaṅo 'ci ca (Pā. Sū. 2-4-74), luk; by the mark of the suffix it ends in yaṅ. By sanyaṅoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-9) reduplication: kṛṣ + kṛṣ. By ur at (Pā. Sū. 7-4-66) — when a suffix follows, the ṛ of the reduplicate takes a — ar for the ṛ; by the mark of the suffix the suffix is to be taken as following. Though yaṅ is dropped (luk), the author of the Śekhara has made clear at the sūtra na lumatāṅgasya that ur at still comes by the mark of the suffix: kar + kṛṣ; by halādiḥ śeṣaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) the r is removed. By abhyāse carc ca (Pā. Sū. 8-4-54) — the jhal letters of the reduplicate take car and jaś letters — the first k becomes c: cakṛṣ. By rugrikau ca luki (Pā. Sū. 7-4-91) — in yaṅluk, the reduplicate of a root with ṛ as penultimate takes the augments ruk, rik, rīk — the words ṛdupadhasya and rīk from rīg ṛdupadhasya ca (Pā. Sū. 7-4-90) are carried on into the previous sūtra. After carkṛṣ, leṭ by liṅarthe leṭ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-7); for it tip; by itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. Sū. 3-4-97) — in the parasmaipada, the i of the tip coming in place of leṭ is dropped — the i is dropped. By leṭo 'ḍāṭau (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ: carkṛṣ + at; the vikaraṇa śap; by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-72) luk. By pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) — when a sārvadhātuka or ārdhadhātuka suffix follows, the ik vowel of a stem ending in puk or with a light penultimate takes guṇa — guṇa would be due. But by nābhyastasyāci piti sārvadhātuke (Pā. Sū. 7-3-87) — when a vowel-initial sārvadhātuka suffix marked p follows, the guṇa of the light penultimate does not come — the prohibition comes. So guṇa does not come. By tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) — a word ending in tiṅ after a word not ending in tiṅ is unaccented — the tiṅ-final carkṛṣat, after na, a word not ending in tiṅ, is wholly unaccented. ॥15॥

अध्वरीयतां (adhvarīyatāṃ) — for us who desire the performance of sacrifice | जामयः (jāmayaḥ) — who do good like kinsfolk | अम्बयः (ambayaḥ) — the waters in the form of mothers (the deities presiding over the waters) | पयः (payaḥ) — the milk of cows | मधुना (madhunā) — with sweet juice | पृञ्चतीः (pṛñcatīḥ) — making it mixed | अध्वभिः (adhvabhiḥ) — by the way of the worship of the gods | यन्ति (yanti) — flow.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The waters, for us who desire the performance of sacrifice, are in the form of mothers, that is, worthy of honour like a mother. They do good like kinsfolk. They make the milk of cows sweet. Such water is flowing in our path.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> The Sacred waters (dear mothers) of the Sacrificers are flowing by the way mixing the milk (of cows) with sweetness.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

अम्बयः (ambayaḥ) — in the Kauṣītaki-brāhmaṇa there is the explanation, ambayo yanty adhvabhir ity āpo vā ambayaḥ, that the word ambaya means the waters. Since it is customary to call a mother amba, it is to be known that the water here is addressed by a word expressing affection. In the Ṛgveda it is customary to call the deities presiding over the waters (or the waters) āpo devīḥ, with the feeling of honour, like honoured women. Besides, it is customary always to address these deities presiding over the waters in the feminine plural. The sūktas with the Waters as deity are very deep, full of meaning, joined with devotion, and very beautiful.

अम्बयो यन्त्यध्वभिरित्यापो वा अम्बयः ।

ambayo yantyadhvabhirityāpo vā ambayaḥ |

जामयः (jāmayaḥ) — hitakāriṇyo bandhavaḥ | kinsfolk who are well-wishers. The use of this word is in the Ṛgveda in the ṛks 1-31-10; 3-52-3 (zoom: the second group's digits are the lobed 5 and a curled 2, not the 4-glyph); 4-25-3; 8-102-13; 9-26-5; 9-65-1; 9-66-8; 9-89-4; 10-10-10 (small type, as read).

अध्वरीयतां (adhvarīyatāṃ) — adhvareṇa (by sacrifice) devayajanaṃ kartum icchatām || who desire to perform the sacrifice.

पृञ्चतीः (pṛñcatīḥ) — miśrayantyaḥ: mixing.

मधुना पयः (madhunā payaḥ) — the ṛṣi may have used this expression because water is most needed to support life, because flowing water in rivers and the like is sweet, unlike sea water, and because cows, by drinking such water, give tasty milk.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

अम्बयः (ambayaḥ) — the root rabi labi abi śabde; for the i of the root abi the it-name and dropping have come. So this is idit, that is, having i as it; so by idito num dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-58) — after the last vowel of a root marked i comes the augment num (n) — the augment num. By ac iḥ (U. Sū. 4-528 read at zoom in the small type: the 5-glyph, curled 2, 8-glyph; the bhāṣya prints उ० ४-१३८, so the two differ as printed) — after a root ending in a vowel comes the suffix i — this is its meaning. Though the root amb does not end in a vowel, since bahulam is said in this section, the suffix i comes here. By the suffix accent the i is udātta.

अध्वभिः (adhvabhiḥ) — by ader dha ca (U. Sū. 4-[?] in the small type, four lobed glyphs that I cannot separate at zoom; the bhāṣya prints उ० ४-१९४) — after the root ada bhakṣaṇe the suffix kvanip comes, and dh for the d of the root — when the suffix kvanip comes and dh for the d, it becomes adhvan. The suffix kvanip is pit; so by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) it is unaccented, and the root accent alone stays.

अध्वरीयतां (adhvarīyatāṃ) — na vidyate dhvaraḥ (hiṃsā) yasmin saḥ adhvaraḥ; by nañsubhyām (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) final udātta. The analysis is adhvaram ātmanaḥ icchanti iti adhvarīyantaḥ, teṣām adhvarīyatām. By supa ātmanaḥ kyac (Pā. Sū. 3-1-8) and the paribhāṣā pratyayagrahaṇe yasmāt sa vihitas tadādes tadantasya grahaṇam (Paribhā. 24), in supaḥ 'ending in it' is obtained. It became subantāt. From dhātoḥ karmaṇaḥ samānakartṛkād icchāyāṃ vā (Pā. Sū. 3-1-7) the three words karmaṇaḥ, icchāyām, vā are carried on. Karmaṇaḥ is a word in the fifth case, so 'from what expresses the object' results. 'The object with regard to what?' — when this expectation arises, icchāyām is present, so it results: 'being the object with regard to the root iṣ'. The word ātman conveys the meaning sva, 'oneself'. When purpose is intended, the fourth case ātmane would be fitting here; yet intending the purpose as a relation, by ṣaṣṭhī

śeṣe (Pā. Sū. 2-3-50) the genitive has come. Thus ātmanaḥ means 'for one's own purpose'. Sva intends the one who wishes. And so the sense of the sūtra: in the sense 'wishes', kyac comes after a sup-ending word expressing the object that is for the purpose of the one who wishes. This mantra is one with the Waters as deity. Those who praise the Water deity wish the sacrifice for their own purpose: this is the situation. Then adhvaram is a sup-ending word that is the object with regard to the root iṣ in icchati. This object is for the purpose of those who wish. Therefore after the word adhvaram the suffix kyac comes: adhvara + am + kyac. Kyac is included among the twelve sanādi suffixes counted as sankyackāmyac…; so by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-32) — what ends in san and the rest gets the name dhātu — adhvarīya gets the name dhātu. By supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-71) — a sup that is part of a root or a nominal stem is dropped (luk) — the am is dropped (luk): adhvara + ya. By kyaci ca (Pā. Sū. 7-4-33) — when the suffix kyac follows, ī is substituted for that a — the substitute ī for the a before ya: it became adhvarī + ya. But here by na chandasy aputrasya (Pā. Sū. 7-4-35) — when kyac follows, for words ending in a other than the word putra, the substitute ī and lengthening do not come — the question arises that the prohibition of ītva should come for the word adhvara (not being putra). To this the author of the vārttika has said by the vārttika aputrādīnām iti vaktavyam (Pā. Sū. 7-4-35 Vā.) that instead of aputrasya one should read aputrādīnām in the sūtra. Now it means that, leaving aside the words putra and the rest, for a word ending in a, when kyac follows, ītva does not come. The answer is that since the word adhvara is included among the putrādi, the prohibition of ītva does not come for it. By kavyadhvarapṛtanasyarci lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-39) — in the matter of the ṛk, when the suffix kyac follows, the final letter of the words kavi, adhvara, pṛtanā is dropped — the dropping of the a of the word adhvara would be due. But by sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante (Paribhā. 36 as read; the 3 is the ৩-glyph, the 6 the hooked glyph) — in the Veda all operations come optionally — the a is not dropped. By vartamāne laṭ (Pā. Sū. 3-2-123) laṭ comes after the root adhvarīya ending in the suffix kyac; for it by laṭaḥ śatṛśānacāv aprathamāsamānādhikaraṇe (Pā. Sū. 3-2-124) the substitute śatṛ; by kartari śap (Pā. Sū. 3-1-68) the vikaraṇa śap (a): it became adhvarīya + a + at. By citaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163) the a of kyac, being cit, is udātta. By anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) śap is unaccented. Śatṛ is a sārvadhātuka in place of la; it follows the a-final original teaching śap. So by tāsy anu- dāttenṅid adupadeśāt… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) śatṛ is unaccented; for these two unaccented a's, by ato guṇe (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97), the following form comes. By sthānivadbhāva it is unaccented. For this a and the a of kyac, again by the following form, a short a comes. Since it comes in place of both udātta and unaccented, by ekādeśa udāttenodāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-5) it becomes udātta. Thus adhvarīyat is final udātta. After it the genitive plural ām: adhvarīyat + ām. Here by śatur anumo nadyajādī (Pā. Sū. 6-1-173) — if a word ending in the suffix śatṛ without the augment num is final udātta, the nadī-named suffix and the vowel-initial case-endings śas and the rest after it are also udātta — the ām is udātta.

पृञ्चतीः (pṛñcatīḥ) — the root pṛcī saṃparke. After it laṭ; for it śatṛ: pṛc + at. By rudhādibhyaḥ śnam (Pā. Sū. 3-1-78) the vikaraṇa śna; by the force of being mit, it comes after the ṛ of pṛ: pṛ + na + c + at. By śnasor allopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-111) — when a sārvadhātuka suffix that is kit or ṅit follows, the a of the suffix śna and of the root as is dropped — the a of the suffix śna is dropped: pṛ + n + c + at. By stoḥ ścunā ścuḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-4-40) the palatalisation of the n, the ñ, is asiddha when making the anusvāra; so by naś cāpadāntasya jhali (Pā. Sū. 8-3-24) — when a jhal letter follows, the n and m not at the end of a pada take anusvāra — anusvāra; for it by anusvārasya yayi parasavarṇaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-4-58) — before a yay letter, the anusvāra takes the homorganic of the following — before the c comes, by place, the homorganic nasal ñ. Pṛñc + at: when making anusvāra and parasavarṇa, since there is the prohibition na padānta… svarasavarṇānusvāra… (Pā. Sū. 1-1-58), the sthānivadbhāva for the dropping of a by acaḥ parasmin (Pā. Sū. 1-1-57) does not come. The ṛ of śatṛ has the it-name; the ṛ is in the pratyāhāra uk; so śatṛ is ugit. By ugitaś ca (Pā. Sū. 4-1-6) — when the feminine is intended after a nominal stem ending in an ugit, ṅīp comes — ṅīp comes: pṛñcat + ī. On the view that it names letters, by yū stryākhyau nadī (Pā. Sū. 1-4-3) the ī has the name nadī; so by śatur anumo nadyajādī the ī is udātta. After pṛñcatī, jas; by vā chandasi (Pā. Sū. 6-1-106) — in the Veda, after a long vowel, if jas or an ic follows, the long like vowel comes optionally — the long like vowel comes. ॥16॥

या उप सूर्ये (yā upa sūrye) — the waters near the sun, that is, the water (sea water) drawn up by the sun's rays and in the mid-air in the form of clouds. In the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka too there is the śruti statement āpaḥ sūrye samāhitāḥ. Yābhir vā sūryaḥ saha — this sentence too has the same meaning; it is said in another way, by changing the case and number. Or, since the sun's rays fall on bodies of water such as rivers, it may be said that the sun is near the water. In sum this mantra suggests that there is a close connection between water and the sun.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

याभिः (yābhiḥ) — after the word yad, bhis; by tyadādīnām aḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-102) — when a case-ending follows, the final letter of the words read in the tyadādi class takes a — the a for the d, the following form, ṭāp when the feminine is shown, the lengthening of like vowels; yā + bhis, ru and visarga for the s: it becomes yābhiḥ. Sāv ekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168): the meaning of the sūtra is that when the locative plural suffix su follows, the case-ending after a monosyllabic form that conveys the same meaning as the monosyllabic form found before su is udātta. In the Mahābhāṣya on this sūtra:

> सावितिकिमिदं प्रथमैकवचनस्य ग्रहणमाहोस्वित्सप्तमीबहुवचनस्य ।
> sāvitikimidaṃ prathamaikavacanasya grahaṇamāhosvitsaptamībahuvacanasya |

"What is sau — is it the taking of the nominative singular or of the locative plural?" — that is, does the word sau take the first-case singular suffix su, or the locative plural sup? The Bhāṣya: kutaḥ saṃdehaḥ? — what is the reason for doubt? Samāno nirdeśaḥ: even if the locative ṅi is put after the nominative singular su, it becomes sau; when the p of the locative plural sup is removed by the it-name, it stands as su, and even if the locative singular ṅi is put after it, it becomes sau. Since in both the first and the seventh case the form sau is the same, doubt arises. Here the author of the Kaiyaṭa has described the intention thus:

> यदि शास्त्रीयं सुरूपं गृह्यते तदा प्राथम्यात्प्रथमैकवचनस्य ग्रहणेन भाव्यम् । अथ प्रायोगिकं ततः सप्तमीबहुवचनस्य । तद्धि प्रयोगे सुरूपं श्रूयते । प्रथमैकवचने तु विकृतरूपप्रयोगे न सुरूपमिति संशयानः पृच्छति सावितिकिमिति ।
> yadi śāstrīyaṃ surūpaṃ gṛhyate tadā prāthamyātprathamaikavacanasya grahaṇena bhāvyam | atha prāyogikaṃ tataḥ saptamībahuvacanasya | taddhi prayoge surūpaṃ śrūyate | prathamaikavacane tu vikṛtarūpaprayoge na surūpamiti saṃśayānaḥ pṛcchati sāvitikimiti |

That is: on the view of taking the form su established in the technical usage of the science, by the maxim prathamopasthite parityāge kāraṇābhāvaḥ, among the twenty-one suffixes su and the rest the first, the nominative singular su, is taken; if it is intended to take the su heard in usage, the locative plural is taken. For in the nominative singular the order su —

> प्रथमोपस्थिते परित्यागे कारणाभावः ।
>
> prathamopasthite parityāge kāraṇābhāvaḥ |

— is not heard as the form su, because it is changed: for example rāmaḥ and the like, where the su has become visarga. In places like rāmāsu the order su is heard in the locative plural. So on the view of taking the usage, the seventh would have to be taken. Since there is such doubt, in the Bhāṣya the question has been considered whether the nominative singular or the locative plural is taken. The answer:

> saptamībahuvacanasya grahaṇam | kathaṃ jñāyate | yadayaṃ nagośvansāvavarṇeti pratiṣedhaṃ śāsti | kathaṃ kṛtvā jñāpakam | yadi prathamaikavacanasya grahaṇaṃ syādgośunoḥ pratiṣedhavacanamanarthakaṃ syāt |

"The locative plural is taken. How is it known? Because he teaches the prohibition nagośvansāvavarṇa… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-182). How does that make it known? If the nominative singular were taken, the statement of prohibition for go and śvan would be pointless." That is:

in the nominative singular the forms are gauḥ and śvā; in the word go, gauḥ is a monosyllabic form ending in au; in the word śvan, śvā is a monosyllabic form ending in ā. In gobhyām, śvabhyām, the case-ending is after the o-final monosyllable go and after the short-vowel-final monosyllable śva. So in the nominative singular, after whatever monosyllabic form there is, there is no such case-ending after that monosyllable; so sāv ekācaḥ would not apply at all, and the statement of prohibition would be useless. If the locative plural is taken, in the locative plural goṣu, śvasu, the monosyllabic forms go and śva are found when the locative plural su follows. So after the monosyllables go, śva, the bhyām in gobhyām, śvabhyām would get the udātta by sāv ekācaḥ. To prevent it, the prohibition of the udātta for the case-ending after go, śvan in the sūtra nagośvan is purposeful. So the author of the Bhāṣya has established that the locative plural alone is taken. From the Bhāṣya that states the indication itself it results that in sāv ekācaḥ the taking of the form is intended. Otherwise, sau ya ekāc —

— since in the nominative singular there are the monosyllables gauḥ, śvā, if the accent were due, the prohibition would be purposeful and could not indicate the stated meaning; if the taking of the form is intended, sau yadrūpaviśiṣṭaḥ ekāc: when the nominative singular su follows, whatever monosyllabic form there is, gauḥ, śvā, after it in gobhyaḥ, śvabhyaḥ there is no case-ending, so the prohibition is incongruous and indicates the stated meaning.

If the nominative singular is taken, a fault comes in yātā, where laṭ comes after the root yā, śatṛ for it, luk for śap, and the instrumental singular ṭā: for in the nominative singular, since the dropping of the conjunct-final is asiddha, whether as yān or as yānt, there is a monosyllabic form. After it there is no case-ending of the third onward, but after yāt there is the third case-ending. So in the nominative singular, yadarthaviśiṣṭam ekājrūpam, since there is no case-ending of the third onward after the monosyllable qualified by that meaning, sāv ekācaḥ would not come here. By taking the changed form yānt in the nominative singular, the original form yāt cannot be taken; and the maxim —

> यदागमास्तद्गुणीभूतास्तद्ग्रहणेन गृह्यन्ते ।
> yadāgamāstadguṇībhūtāstadgrahaṇena gṛhyante |

— ‘augments, being subordinate to it, are taken by its mention’ — says that where the mention is of what lacks the augment, what has the augment is also taken; so by the mention of yāns, which has the augment, yāt, which lacks it, cannot be taken. And tanmadhyapatitas tadgrahaṇena gṛhyate (Paribhā. 90 as printed, zoom-checked on p. 208: the 9-glyph and the ring) makes known only that by the mention of the bare thing the qualified one is taken; by the qualified yānt the bare yāt cannot be taken.

> तन्मध्यपतितस्तद्ग्रहणेन गृह्यते ।
> tanmadhyapatitastadgrahaṇena gṛhyate |

In sāv ekācaḥ one does not describe the meaning by intending the taking of the form, ‘whatever monosyllabic form expressing a meaning there is before su’. Rather the meaning of the sūtra sāv ekācaḥ is: when su follows, whatever word is monosyllabic, the case-ending of the third onward after that word is udātta. Thus, since the word yāt is monosyllabic in the nominative singular, the case-ending after it may get the udātta. But though in yātā there is no fault, a fault comes in doṣabhyām. In the nominative singular doḥ the word doṣ is monosyllabic. When bhyām comes after it, after the substitute doṣan by paddannomāshṛnniśasanyūṣandoṣan… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-63), in doṣan + bhyām too the bhyām would have to be udātta. The mid-udātta accent doṣabhyām is what is desired here. So the taking of the form must be intended. Now the monosyllabic form before su is doḥ. After it there is no bhyām. So by sāv ekācaḥ the case-ending does not get the udātta; but by anudāttau suppitau it is unaccented. The word doṣ —

— ends in the suffix ḍosi by damer ḍosiḥ (U. Sū. 3-28 at zoom: the first digit is a heavy-headed glyph that looks like a 3 with a dot above, then 2 and 8 [lobed]; Vol 3 elsewhere reads this as 2-28), and is final udātta by the suffix accent. When the substitute doṣan coming in its place is also final udātta, the mid-udātta doṣabhyām is established. Even if sau is intended as the locative plural, if one does not intend the taking of the form in sāv ekācaḥ as said before, the fault comes in doṣabhyām. Thus, since the intention to take the form in sāv ekācaḥ is needed to prevent the udātta of the case-ending in doṣabhyām, once that is established, if the nominative singular is taken, the udātta cannot come in ɣātā. For that it must be held that the locative plural alone is taken. Now since in the locative ɣātsu is the form, sau ɣad ekājrūpaṃ ɣāt, and the case-ending after it exists, the udātta accent is established in places like ɣātā, ɣādbhyām. Even if sāv ekācaḥ is held to be the locative and the taking of the form is intended, the fault comes in doṣabhyām. In doḥṣu, when su follows, there is the form doḥ. This is not heard in doṣabhyām. Yet since in place of doṣ the substitute doṣan has come, by the sthānivadbhāva of sthānivad ādeśaḥ (Pā. Sū. 1-1-56) the form doṣan becomes like the form doḥ. So in the locative plural, since there is a case-ending of the third onward after whatever form there is, the bhyām would have to be udātta. In the Taittirīya, doṣabhyāṃ svāhā is mid-udātta, so it cannot be said that the udātta of the case-ending is desired. Only where the form found when the locative plural follows is actually heard does sāv ekācaḥ come. Where it is not directly heard, we say that, imagining by sthānivadbhāva and the like that the same form is there, the present sūtra does not enter. Thus in doṣabhyām, since doḥ is not heard, sāv ekācaḥ does not come here. Then on this view the examples śunaḥ, śunā given by the author of the Bhāṣya at the sūtra nagośvan would have to be incongruous. In the locative plural form śvasu, the form śva is heard here; since the dropping of n is an accent rule, even though by nalopaḥ supsvara… (Pā. Sū. 8-2-2) it is asiddha, it becomes as if śvan were there. In śunaḥ, śunā the form śvan, heard in the Veda, is not heard as either śva or śvan; so here sāv ekācaḥ does not apply at all. Then why should the prohibition come here? So it is to be held that there is no strict requirement that the form be directly heard. Now, though by saṃprasāraṇa u has come for the v, a part of śvan, and a change has come to the part, by ekadeśavikṛtam ananyavat, imagining that śvan itself is there, sāv ekācaḥ would be due; to avoid it, the example śunaḥ, śunā of the prohibition becomes congruous. Likewise in doṣabhyām, by sthānivadbhāva the form doḥ —

> एकदेशविकृतमनन्यवत् ।
>
> ekadeśavikṛtamananyavat |

— being there, one may object that the case-ending should be udātta. The answer: according to usage we repeat ekācaḥ. So the meaning drawn out of the sūtra is: when the su suffix follows, whatever monosyllabic word expressing a meaning is heard, on the view that the case-ending after such a form is after that very monosyllable, it gets the udātta. Doṣabhyām follows the polysyllable doṣa, so the udātta accent does not come here. If the word sau were not there, it would mean ekācaḥ paraṃ tṛtīyādir vibhaktir udāttā syāt. In rājñā the ṭā is after the monosyllable rājñ, so it would have to be udātta. If ekācaḥ were not there, the meaning of the sūtra sāv ekācaḥ would be sau vartamānāt śabdāt parā tṛtīyādir vibhaktir udāttā syāt. Then too in rājñā, since the ṭā is after the word found in sau, it would have to be udātta. On this view of sau, a word like dvābhyām, for which being followed by su is not possible, would have to be excluded. So here both sau and ekācaḥ must be there. The conclusion has been reached that by sau the locative plural alone is to be taken and that the taking of the form is also intended.

Even so, in the feminine, in words like ābhyām and in forms like ebhiḥ, eṣām, the case-ending would have to be udātta by sāv ekācaḥ. So the total lack of accent cannot be obtained. In the feminine the locative form is āsu; so when su follows, the monosyllabic form ā is heard; in ābhyām the bhyām after such an ā would have to get the udātta by sāv ekācaḥ. In the masculine and neuter the locative form is eṣu. So, though when su follows e is monosyllabic, in ebhiḥ, eṣām the bhis and ām after such an e would have to get the udātta by sāv ekācaḥ.

When the case-ending thus gets the udātta, by the śeṣānudātta accent anudāttaṃ padam ekavarjam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-158) the stem's being unaccented is established anyway. That being so, in the sūtra idamo 'nvādeśe 'śanudāttas tṛtīyādau (Pā. Sū. 2-4-32) the rule laying down the unaccented for aś becomes useless. Being useless, it makes known that when aś has come in anvādeśa, the case-ending there does not get the udātta. So it cannot be said that in places like ebhiḥ the case-ending cannot be udātta. For if the rule of the unaccented for aś were wholly useless, by the maxim —

> व्यर्थं सत् किंचिदर्थं ज्ञापयति ।
> vyarthaṃ sat kiṃcidarthaṃ jñāpayati |

— it could be said to make known the stated meaning. But it is not wholly useless. Where by sāv ekācaḥ the case-ending must not get the udātta, there, by śeṣanighāta, the stem cannot be unaccented; there the rule of the unaccented is purposeful. For example, the masculine —

— and neuter ābhyām and the like: in the masculine and neuter, when su follows, the monosyllabic form is e, not ā; so in the locative plural there is no such monosyllabic form. In the feminine āsu, when the locative plural follows, the form ā does exist; but the meaning is different: it is a monosyllabic form expressing the feminine, while the ā of the masculine and neuter ābhyām is a monosyllabic form expressing masculine and neuter. So, since what follows sau yadarthaviśiṣṭam ekājrūpam is not there, the udātta is not established for the masculine-neuter ābhyām; so the stem does not become unaccented by śeṣanighāta. Here, to obtain the unaccented, the rule of the unaccented is purposeful. Therefore the rule of the unaccented cannot make known that in the matter of anvādeśa the case-ending accent does not come. Since in the nominative singular it does not end in a/ā, it cannot be said that in ebhiḥ and the like the udātta is barred by nagośvan. In ūḍidampadādyapumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) antodāttāt is carried on. In ābhyām the stem is unaccented. So since there is no case-ending after a final udātta, the udātta of the case-ending cannot be established by ūḍidam. So it cannot be said that the udātta accent of the case-ending is what is desired. In Vedic usages like ebhir agne piba [as printed] and ebhir agne duvo giraḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-14-1) total lack of accent alone is heard. Here, even taking the refined meaning of sāv ekācaḥ, the case-ending would have to be udātta. So in places like ebhiḥ the total lack of accent must be held to be Vedic. The author of the Uddyota, when describing the Pradīpa's intention, says, ebhir agne ityādau sarvānudāttapadaśravaṇaṃ tu chāndasam iti tadbhāvaḥ (Uddyota 6-1-168) and so on. It seems that the work that resolved this, which the Candrakalā saw in the Śekhara of the present sūtra, is lost. It now results that, even taking the refined meaning of sāv ekācaḥ in the manner of the available Śekhara, its application in ebhiḥ cannot be stopped. Considering the present case: in yābhiḥ the udātta of the case-ending would be due by sāv ekācaḥ. For that, by nagośvansāvavarṇarāḍḍaṅkruṅkṛdbhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-182) — after the word go, the word śvan, words ending in a/ā in the nominative singular, the word rāṭ ending in kvip, the word aṅ formed with kvip after the root añc, the word kruñ formed with kvin after the root kruñc, and the word kṛt formed with kvip after the root kṛ, the case-ending and the matup do not get the udātta — since in the nominative singular yā ends in a/ā, the bhis after yā does not get the udātta. The rest of the derivation is clear. ॥17॥

सिन्धुभ्यः (sindhubhyaḥ) — syandanaśīlābhyo devatābhyaḥ | In this ṛk and in other ṛks that set forth the deities presiding over the waters, the ṛṣis have made hymns with regard to āpo devīḥ, that is, excellent or honoured flowing water. On some occasions the water of lakes, tanks and the like, which do not flow, is also indicated. So sweet water fit for drinking is especially praised. Sea water is not seen to have so much pre-eminence.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

अपः (apaḥ) — after the word ap, the accusative plural suffix śas; for the ś, by laśakv ataddhite (Pā. Sū. 1-3-8) the it-name comes, and by tasya lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 1-3-9) it is dropped: ap + as = apas; for the s, by sasajuṣo ruḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-2-66) ru, by kharavasānayor visarjanīyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-3-15) the visarga: it becomes apaḥ. Here in ūḍidampadādyapumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171), ekācaḥ from sāv ekācaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168), antodāttāt from antodāttād uttarapadāt… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-169), and asarvanāmasthānam from añceś chandasy asarvanāmasthānam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-170) are carried on. Ūṭh is not a monosyllabic form. Because it is not monosyllabic, ekācaḥ is not its qualifier, asaṃbhavāt: the maxim is saṃbhavavyabhicārābhyāṃ syād viśeṣaṇam arthavat — saṃbhava, fitness; vyabhicāra, exclusion of others. Now the meaning of the sūtra: the case-ending other than sarvanāmasthāna after ūṭh, which is final udātta and stands penultimate, and after the word idam, the six padādi words, ap, pums, rai, div, which are final udātta and monosyllabic, is udātta. If by ūṭh the whole containing ūṭh is intended, then ekācaḥ is a qualifier for ūṭh too. Then the meaning for the part ūṭh: the case-ending other than sarvanāmasthāna after a monosyllabic word containing ūṭh, final udātta and penultimate, is udātta. Examples praṣṭhauhaḥ, viśvauhaḥ and the like. Since ekācaḥ is mentioned in the sūtra, the qualifier, by śrutānumitayoḥ śrutasaṃbandho balīyān, is not a qualifier of the stem. So, though the stems praṣṭhauh, viśvauh are polysyllabic, since ūh is monosyllabic, the accent applies; likewise in places like brāhmaṇapadā —

> संभवव्यभिचाराभ्यां स्याद्विशेषणमर्थवत् । श्रुतानुमितयोः श्रुतसंबन्धो बलीयान् ।
> saṃbhavavyabhicārābhyāṃ syādviśeṣaṇamarthavat | śrutānumitayoḥ śrutasaṃbandho balīyān |

— the final udātta is established. The present word ap is final udātta and monosyllabic. So the śas, a non-sarvanāmasthāna case-ending after it, is udātta.

पिबन्ति (pibanti) — the root pā pāne; after it laṭ, the third person plural suffix jhi; by jho 'ntaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-3) the substitute ant for jh: pā + anti; by kartari śap (Pā. Sū. 3-1-68) the vikaraṇa śap: pā + a + anti. Now by pāghrādhmāsthāmnādāṇdṛśyartisartiśadasadāṃ pibajighradhamatiṣṭhamanayacchapaśyarcchadhauśīyasīdāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) — when a suffix beginning with the it-named ś follows, the eleven roots pā and the rest take the eleven substitutes piba and the rest. Whether the substitute is piba ending in a or pib ending in b has been explained at the sūkta (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-18-11 [as printed]). When the substitute piba comes: piba + a + anti; twice, by ato guṇe (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) — if the guṇa letters a, e, o follow a short a not at the end of a pada, the following form comes as a single substitute for the places before and after — the following form: it becomes pibanti. On this view, by the vārttika pibādeśo nipātanāt (Pā. Sū. Vā. 6-1-162) read in the sūtra dhātoḥ, the i of pi is udātta, the a of ba unaccented by the śeṣānudātta; the a of the vikaraṇa śap is unaccented by anudāttau suppitau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) since it is pit; the a coming by the following form in place of these unaccented a's is unaccented by sthānivadbhāva; by the lasārvadhātuka accent of tāsy anudātten… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the a of anti is unaccented. Again, the following form is unaccented by sthānivadbhāva. This unaccented follows the udātta i. So by udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-4-66) it is svarita: this is the situation on the view of the a-final substitute. On the view of the consonantfinal substitute pib, by dhātoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-162) the i of pi is udātta, śap unaccented as before, anti likewise, the following form likewise, the svarita likewise. On the first view there is no occasion at all for pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86): since piba ends in a, the b is the penultimate; a light vowel is not the penultimate. On the second view, by aṅgavṛtte punarvṛttāv avidhir niṣṭhitasya (Paribhā. 90, zoom-checked on p. 214) — once a stem-section rule has come and a form is completed, another stem-section rule does not come — after the substitute piba has come, guṇa does not come for the penultimate letter; so guṇa is warded off; and it must be known that the sixth adhyāya's fourth pāda and the whole of the seventh adhyāya are the stem section. Nipātair yadyadihantakuvinnec ceccaṇkaccid yatrayuktam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-30): the word yatra in yad and the rest is a single word ending in a dropped third case; here, if a compound with the word yukta is intended, the qualifier nipātaiḥ is unconnected. If a compound is accepted, the word ending in yatra would be a part of the compound. Then by padārthaḥ padārthenānveti na tu tadekadeśena, the meaning of one word —

> अङ्गवृत्ते पुनर्वृत्तावविधिर्निष्ठितस्य । पदार्थः पदार्थेनान्वेति न तु तदेकदेशेन ।
> aṅgavṛtte punarvṛttāvavidhirniṣṭhitasya | padārthaḥ padārthenānveti na tu tadekadeśena |

— is construed only with the meaning of the qualified presented by another word; it is not construed with a part; so for nipātaiḥ there is no construction with the word ending in yatra, a part of the compound. If such construction is intended, since there is no connection (sāmarthya), the compound cannot come. That is why all teachers accept that in ṛddhasya rājapuruṣaḥ there is no construction of ṛddhasya with rājñaḥ, a part of the compound. Thus the meaning of the sūtra results: since by this sūtra there is the prohibition that a tiṅ-final word joined with the particles yat, yadi, hanta, kuvit, net, cet, caṇ, kaccit, yatra is not unaccented, the total lack of accent by tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) does not come for pibanti.

> ऋद्धस्य राजपुरुषः ।
> ṛddhasya rājapuruṣaḥ |

कर्त्वम् (kartvam) — the root (ḍu)kṛñ karaṇe. Kṛtyārthe tavaikenkenyatvanaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-14): in the sūtra tayor eva kṛtyaktakhalarthāḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-70) it is said that the kṛtya suffixes, the suffix kta and the khalartha suffixes come only in the two senses of action and object. So action and object are both kṛtya senses. The sūtra kṛtyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-95) is a heading up to the sūtra ṇvultṛcau (Pā. Sū. 3-1-133). In the science of grammar the suffixes belonging to this heading are called kṛtya suffixes. And so the meaning of the sūtra: in the kṛtya sense, in the form of action and object, the suffixes tavai, ken, kenya, tvan come after a root. By this, when tvan comes in the object sense after the root kṛ: kṛ + tvan; by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) — when sārvadhātuka and ārdhadhātuka suffixes follow, the ik end of a stem takes guṇa — when the ārdhadhātuka tva follows, guṇa for the ṛ; it comes followed by r: kar + tvan; the n has the it-name and is removed: kartva; this is initially udātta by ñnityādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197). In the nominative singular it becomes kartvam. ॥18॥

Translation: "Apsu antaḥ, within the waters, is amṛtam, nectar, because it is a product of water, and from the other śruti 'the waters indeed are nectar'. Likewise apsu, in the waters, is bheṣajam, medicine, since food, which removes the disease of hunger, is a product of water. Uta, and, praśastaye, for the praise of such waters, the deities, O devāḥ, priests and the rest, the brāhmaṇas — from the other śruti 'these indeed are the visible gods, the brāhmaṇas' — bhavata, be, vājinaḥ, swift: that is, make the praise quickly." (Grammatical tail: apsu, the locative udātta by ūḍidam…; in the Saṃhitā svarita by udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svaritaḥ; amṛtam, the last member's initial udātta by naññho jaramaramitramṛtāḥ (Pā. 6-2-116); praśastaye, the prefix keeps its own accent by tādau ca niti… (Pā. 6-2-50); bhavata, since the preceding vocative is treated as not there by āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat, it is at the beginning of the pāda, so no loss of accent.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

अप्सु अन्तः (apsu antaḥ) — in the midst of the waters (in water) | अमृतं (amṛtaṃ) — there is nectar | अप्सु (apsu) — in water | भेषजं (bheṣajaṃ) — there is medicine that destroys disease | उत (uta) — and | (हे) देवाः ((he) devāḥ) — O deities (and people, priests, sacrificers and the rest) | अपां (apāṃ) — of the waters | प्रशस्तये (praśastaye) — for praise, or to make hymns | वाजिनः (vājinaḥ) — swift (ready quickly) | भवत (bhavata) — be.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

There is nectar in water; in water there is the power that cures disease, that is, of medicine. Therefore, O deities and people, priests, sacrificers and the rest, be ready quickly to praise those waters.

The śruti statement of the Taittirīya Upaniṣad describes very well the qualities and pre-eminence of water —

> आपो वा इदꣳ सर्वं विश्वा भूतान्यापः प्राणा वा आपः पशव आपोऽन्नमापोऽमृतमापः सम्राडापो विराडापः स्वराडापश्छन्दाꣳस्यापो ज्योतीꣳष्यापो यजूꣳष्यापः सत्यमापः सर्वा देवता आपो भूर्भुवः सुवराप ओं ॥
> āpo vā idaṁ sarvaṃ viśvā bhūtānyāpaḥ prāṇā vā āpaḥ paśava āpo 'nnamāpo 'mṛtamāpaḥ samrāḍāpo virāḍāpaḥ svarāḍāpaśchandāṁsyāpo jyotīṁṣyāpo yajūṁṣyāpaḥ satyamāpaḥ sarvā devatā āpo bhūrbhuvaḥ suvarāpa oṃ ||

— that is, everything has arisen from water. All living beings and animals live by water; that is, water itself is the support of all living creatures and plants. Without water no living being can live. So water itself is said to be life. Since plants, trees and the vegetable kingdom grow by water, water is directly and indirectly food for living beings. Without food one can live some days; without water it is impossible to live. In our body most is water; since blood and the rest are in liquid form, water is most necessary for living. So it is no exaggeration to call water nectar. Since water is one of the five elements, since there is the śruti statement āpo vā idam agre salilam āsīt, and since the śruti says that other things were created from water, it is fitting to say that everything is the very form of water, or that water is the root of all things. So the śruti proclaims that water is the form of all the deities.

āpo vā idamagre salilamāsīt |

अमृतं भेषजं (amṛtaṃ bheṣajaṃ) — since water is most necessary for living beings and is the support of life, it is called nectar. Since nectar is in liquid form, and since all liquid things are indicated by the word āpaḥ, 'water', it is right to call water nectar. Many diseases can be cured by water; and since medicines are generally in liquid form mixed with water, it is also fitting to say that medicines are in water. How great the pre-eminence of water is in the matter of curing disease is described specially in medical works such as the Āyurveda.

देवाः (devāḥ) — though the deities are addressed here as devāḥ, it may be said to mean either people such as priests and sacrificers, or the deities. Or since śruti statements such as —

एते वै देवाः प्रत्यक्षं यद्ब्राह्मणाः ।

ete vai devāḥ pratyakṣaṃ yadbrāhmaṇāḥ |

— say that brāhmaṇa priests are visible deities, the brāhmaṇas have been addressed by the word deva.

वाजिनः (vājinaḥ) — vegavantaḥ, śīghragāminaḥ: quickly, promptly, without delay, and so on. Or, since there is the śruti statement annaṃ vai vājaḥ, that vāja means food, it may be explained as: furnished with food or oblation, that is, praise with offerings of oblation and the like.

अन्नं वै वाजः ।

annaṃ vai vājaḥ |

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

अप्सु (apsu) — after the word ap, the locative plural suffix su; for the meaning of ūḍidampadādyapumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) see the previous mantra. By this the case-ending su is udātta. In place of this udātta u, at the time of the Saṃhitā, when the vowel of the word antaḥ follows, by iko yaṇ aci (Pā. Sū. 6-1-77) the yaṇ v comes. And so this v is a yaṇ that has come in place of an udātta; by udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) — an unaccented after a yaṇ that has come in place of an udātta or svarita becomes svarita — the unaccented a of the word antaḥ becomes svarita.

अमृतं (amṛtaṃ) — when a bahuvrīhi compound of nañ with the word mṛta comes, the n is dropped and only a remains. By bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the own accent would be due; overriding it, by nañño jaramaramitramṛtāḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-116) — in a bahuvrīhi compound, the four words jara, mara, mitra, mṛta after nañ take the initial udātta — the last member mṛta gets the initial udātta accent.

प्रशस्तये (praśastaye) — the prefix pra, the root śaṃsu stutau. By striyāṃ ktin (Pā. Sū. 3-3-94) the suffix ktin; the n is dropped by aniditāṃ hala upadhāyāḥ kniti (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24): praśasti; dative singular praśastaye. Here by tādau ca niti kṛtyatau (Pā. Sū. 6-2-50) — when a kṛt suffix other than tu, without the marker n and beginning with t, follows, the immediately preceding gati keeps its own accent — the gati pra gets its own accent. This is an exception to the kṛt accent laid down by gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139); pra is initially udātta by upasargāś cābhivarjam (Phi. Sū. 81). This same accent stays after compounding, in the manner shown before.

भवत (bhavata) — before it is the āmantrita devāḥ; by āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat (Pā. Sū. 8-1-72) — a preceding word ending in a vocative first case is as if not there — the treatment as not there comes. And so bhavata does not follow a pada. It comes to be at the beginning of the pāda —

— too. Since in the rule of the unaccented there is the heading padāt (Pā. Sū. 8-1-17), the unaccented comes only for what follows a pada. Since it is said anudāttaṃ sarvam apādādau (Pā. Sū. 8-1-18), the unaccented does not come for what is at the beginning of a pāda. So for the word bhavata the total lack of accent by tiṅṅatiṅaḥ (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) does not come. ॥19॥

Translation: "Somaḥ, the god Soma, abravīt, told me, me, the seer who saw the mantra, that apsu antaḥ, within the waters, are viśvāni bheṣajā, all medicines. Likewise Soma told of Agni, viśvaśambhuvam, the bringer of happiness to the whole world, so named, who is in the waters. And so the Taittirīyas record in the anuvāka agnes trayo jyāyāṃsaḥ Agni's entry into the waters: 'he entered the waters' (Tai. Saṃ. 2-6-6-1). That medicines such as creepers, bushes, the roots of trees and the like are in water, as they are produced by rain, is well known. Viśvabheṣajīḥ: he told also of the waters, such that all medicines are in them." (Grammatical tail: bheṣajā, the ā by supāṃ suluk; viśvaśambhuvam, kvip after bhū with the causative sense included; the first member's own accent by vyatyaya; or: 'whose all activities make happiness': in the bahuvrīhi the first member is final udātta by bahuvrīhau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām (Pā. 6-2-106); āpaḥ, śas being due in the object sense, jas by vyatyaya; the lengthening of the penultimate by aptṛn…; viśvabheṣajīḥ, as for viśvaśambhuḥ.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

अप्सु अन्तः (apsu antaḥ) — in the midst of the waters | विश्वानि (viśvāni) — all | भेषजा (bheṣajā) — medicines that destroy disease, that there are | अग्निं च (agniṃ ca) — Agni | विश्वशंभुवं (viśvaśambhuvaṃ) — as the one who makes happiness for the whole world | आपः (āpaḥ) — the waters | विश्वभेषजीः (viśvabheṣajīḥ) — as furnished with all medicines that destroy disease | सोमः (somaḥ) — the deity Soma | मे (me) — to me | अब्रवीत् (abravīt) — told.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

In the midst of the waters are all the medicines that remove diseases. Agni makes happiness for the whole world; the waters are joined with all medicines. So the deity Soma told me.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Soma has revealed to me that in the waters are all medicaments; that Agni is the benefactor of the Universe, the waters contain all the healing medicines.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

In the kārīrī sacrifice this ṛk apsu me is recited as the puronuvākyā mantra when making the ājyabhāga offering. On this matter, in the section varṣakāmeṣṭi of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra, it is said that the ṛks apsv agne sadhiṣ ṭava (8-43-9) and apsu me somo abravīt (1-23-20) are to be used as the yājyā and puronuvākyā mantras (Ā. 2-13). The main intention of this ṛk: Soma himself told me that Agni, who makes happiness for the whole world, is in the waters in the form of lightning, and that all the herbs that cure the diseases of living beings are in the waters themselves. On the point that Agni is in the waters, the commentator has cited the sentence so 'paḥ prāviśat taṃ devatāḥ praiṣam aicchan from the anuvāka agnes trayo jyāyāṃso bhrātara āsan in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā (Tai. Saṃ. 2-6-6-1). We have explained before ([blank in the print]) its explanation and the explanation on this subject in the Ṛgveda.

> सोऽपः प्राविशत्तं देवताः प्रैषमैच्छन् ।
> so 'paḥ prāviśattaṃ devatāḥ praiṣamaicchan |

अग्निं च विश्वशंभुवं (agniṃ ca viśvaśambhuvaṃ) — there is no need to explain at length the benefit that comes to the whole world from Agni. Besides giving us warmth when it is cold, we use Agni for cooking food and in many other useful or most necessary works.

Since this matter is known by everyone's experience, there is no need to say more.

आपश्च विश्वभेषजीः (āpaś ca viśvabheṣajīḥ) — we have explained in the previous ṛk itself what the part of water is in curing diseases.

सोमः (somaḥ) — for the word soma the commentator has said somadevaḥ, the deity Soma. Soma here is to be known as the Moon, the presiding deity of plants and trees.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

भेषजा (bheṣajā) — by supāṃ suluk (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the substitute ā for the nominative plural jas.

विश्वशंभुवम् (viśvaśambhuvam) — viśvasya śaṃ bhavatīti (bhāvayatīti) viśvaśambhūḥ, tam: so the analysis. Here after the root bhū with the causative sense included, by kvip ca (Pā. Sū. 3-2-76) kvip; the sup, a part of a nominal stem, is dropped (luk): viśvaśambhū; after it the accusative singular am; by na bhūsudhiyoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-85) the yaṇ is barred; by aci śnudhātu... (Pā. Sū. 6-4-77) the substitute uvaṅ: it becomes viśvaśambhuvam. Here, though by samāsasya (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223) the final udātta (which is satiśiṣṭa) would be right, by vyatyaya [it is said that] the first member viśva gets the final udātta. By śeṣanighāta the other letters are unaccented. Among them the unaccented ś syllable becomes svarita by udāttād anudāttasya... (Pā. Sū. 8-4-66). The other two letters, by svaritāt saṃhitāyām anudāttānām (Pā. Sū. 1-2-39), are in the monotone (pracaya): this is the situation. Here the word viśva is formed by the suffix kvan by aśūpruṣilaṭi... (U. Sū. 1-149). So at (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-9-1) it has been described as initially udātta by ñnity ādir nityam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197). So if the first member's own accent is said here by vyatyaya, the initial udātta would have to come; then the form viśvaśambhuvam [with that accent] would not result: it must be viśvaśambhuvam [with final udātta on viśva]. So in the Veda commentary vyatyayena pūrvapadāntodāttatvam is the right reading. Yet through the carelessness of the proof-readers and others it may have dropped to vyatyayena pūrvapadaprakṛtisvaratvam. However this may be, in describing the meaning there is no description by the commentator of a meaning that fits this derivation. So it is clear that the commentator was not pleased with this derivation. That is why he begins with yadvā and gives another derivation: viśve — all activities; śambhuvaḥ — that make happiness; yasya — whose; saḥ — he is viśvaśambhūḥ, tam: a bahuvrīhi compound. On this view the compound-final udātta —

> व्यत्ययेन पूर्वपदान्तोदात्तत्वम् । व्यत्ययेन पूर्वपदप्रकृतिस्वरत्वम् ।
>
> vyatyayena pūrvapadāntodāttatvam | vyatyayena pūrvapadaprakṛtisvaratvam |

— overriding it, by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member's own accent would be due. But in bahuvrīhau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām (Pā. Sū. 6-2-106), pūrvapadam from bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) is carried on. It must be changed into the genitive case to suit the meaning of the present sentence; antaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-92) is the heading. So it becomes pūrvapadasya antaḥ; by ādir udāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-64) udāttaḥ is carried on. Saṃjñāyām is a qualifier of the whole; and so, when a name is shown by the whole, the end of the word viśva, the first member of a bahuvrīhi compound, is udātta: so viśva is final udātta. On this view there is no trouble of having to establish the accent by vyatyaya.

आपः (āpaḥ) — this is the object word with regard to the root abravīt. So when the object sense is intended, by the teaching karmaṇi dvitīyā (Pā. Sū. 2-3-2) the second case; and since the word ap always ends in the plural, when the plurality of the object sense is intended, by bahuṣu bahuvacanam (Pā. Sū. 1-4-21) it would be right for the accusative plural śas to come. Yet by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85), by interchange, the nominative plural case-ending jas has come here: ap + as. Now since the suffix as, named sarvanāmasthāna, follows, by aptṛntṛc… (Pā. Sū. 6-4-11) — when a sarvanāmasthāna other than the vocative follows, the penultimate letter of the word ap and of words ending in the suffixes tṛn and the rest is lengthened — lengthening: āpas; for the s, ru and visarga.

विश्वभेषजीः (viśvabheṣajīḥ) — viśvāni bheṣajāni yāsu tāḥ: so the analysis; here, overriding the first member's own accent caused by the bahuvrīhi, the first member gets the final udātta in the manner stated at viśvaśambhuvam. By bhiyaḥ ṣug ghrasvaś ca (U. Sū. 1-135 as printed at zoom: ∩, ∩, ৩, lobed 5; the last digit is not clear between 5 and 4) — after the root ñibhī bhaye, the suffix aj and the augment ṣuk for the root — when the suffix aj, shortening of the root and the augment ṣuk come after the root bhī, it becomes bhiṣaj. Bhiṣajaḥ imāḥ: so the analysis. By tasyedam (Pā. Sū. 4-3-120) the suffix aṇ: bhiṣaj + a; now since the suffix is ṇit, by taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-117) vṛddhi in bhi would give bhai; yet by set form e comes for the ī of bhi. When the feminine is intended, ṅīṣ comes and it becomes bheṣajī. The ī of ṅīṣ is udātta by the suffix accent.

(An ornament follows.)

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O waters (or O deities presiding over the waters), so that my body may be without disease, make the excellent medicine full (make it ready); then, free from disease, may I see the sun for a long time, that is, may I live long.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Waters, grant me a medicament that shall be an armour to my body that I may long behold the Sun.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

पृणीत (pṛṇīta) — pṝ pālanapūraṇayoḥ // make full: the intention is, make the body without diseases and the like, and able to do its work in order.

वरूथं (varūthaṃ) — varaṇīyam, roganivārakam // to be desired, that is, warding off disease.

> तस्मा अग्निर्भारतः शर्म यंसज्ज्योक्पश्यात्सूर्यमुच्चरन्तं । (ऋ० सं० ४-२५-४) तव क्रत्वा तवोतिभिर्ज्योक्पश्येम सूर्यं ॥ (ऋ० सं० ९-४-६) शं नः क्षेत्रमुरु ज्योतींषि सोम ज्योङ्नः सूर्यं दृशये रिरीहि ॥ (ऋ० सं० ९-९१-६) उद्यन्तं त्वा मित्रमहो दिवेदिवे ज्योग्जीवाः प्रति पश्येम सूर्य ॥ (ऋ० सं० १०-३७-७) ज्योक्पश्येम सूर्यमुच्चरन्तमनुमते मृळया नः स्वस्ति ॥ (ऋ० सं० १०-५९-६)

(Glosses of these quotations are not given in the source.) Besides these, in the Yajurveda too there are many sentences suggesting this intention, such as —

> पश्येम शरदः शतं ... ज्योक् च सूर्यं दृशे । ज्योक् च पश्यामि सूर्यं ।
>
> paśyema śaradaḥ śataṃ ... jyok ca sūryaṃ dṛśe | jyok ca paśyāmi sūryaṃ |

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

पृणीत (pṛṇīta) — the root pṝ pālanapūraṇayoḥ. Loṭ, second person plural, the suffix tha: pṝ + tha. By loṭo laṅvat (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) [the extension] —

— the operations of laṅ come to loṭ: so the treatment as laṅ. By tasthasthamipāṃ tāṃtaṃtāmaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) — for the four suffixes tas, thas, tha, mip the substitutes tām, tam, ta, am come in order — the substitute ta for tha: pṝ + ta. By kryādibhyaḥ śnā (Pā. Sū. 3-1-81) — when a sārvadhātuka suffix in the agent sense follows, the vikaraṇa suffix śnā (nā) comes after a root of the kryādi class — so when śnā comes: pṝ + nā + ta. By pvādīnāṃ hrasvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-80) — the roots read in the list of roots beginning with pūñ pavane are shortened — the ṝ of pṝ is shortened to ṛ: pṛ + nā + ta. By ī halyaghoḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-113) — when a consonant-initial sārvadhātuka that is kit or ṅit follows, the ā of the suffix śnā and the ā of a reduplicated stem take the substitute ī — when the substitute ī comes: pṛ + nī + ta. Ṛvarṇāc ceti vaktavyam: this is a paraphrase of the meaning of raṣābhyāṃ ṇatve ṛkāragrahaṇam (Pā.

Sū. 8-4-1, vārttika 1). Its meaning is that ṇ is substituted for the n after ṛ. By this the n gets the substitute ṇ, and it becomes pṛṇīta.

आपः (āpaḥ) — this ends in the vocative first case. So by sāmantritam (Pā. Sū. 2-3-48) — what ends in the vocative first case gets the name āmantrita — it has the name āmantrita. So by āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat (Pā. Sū. 8-1-72) — the preceding āmantrita is avidyamānavat, that is, as if not there though it is there — the treatment as not there comes. So pṛṇīta does not follow a pada; it is at the beginning of the pāda. So since there is no word not ending in tiṅ before the word ending in tiṅ, the total lack of accent by tiṅṅatiṅaḥ does not come. Satiśiṣṭasvarabalīyastvam anyatra vikaraṇebhyaḥ: in the matter of vikaraṇas, though it is satiśiṣṭa, that is, comes last, that accent is not stronger: so they say with anyatra vikaraṇebhyaḥ. The ta, the tiṅ suffix, gets the initial udātta by the suffix accent. The others are unaccented by the śeṣānudātta accent.

तन्वे (tanve) — the root tanu vistāre. By bhṛmṛśītṛcaritsaritanidhanimimasjibhya uḥ (U. Sū. 1-7, zoom-checked: the flat-footed 7) — after the roots bhṛñ bharaṇe, mṛṅ prāṇatyāge, śīṅ svapne, tṝ plavanataraṇayoḥ, cara gatibhakṣaṇayoḥ, tsara chadmagatau, tanu vistāre, dhana dhānye, ḍumiñ prakṣepaṇe, ṭumasjo śuddhau, the suffix u comes — so after the root tan the suffix u: tan + u = tanu, final udātta by the suffix accent. After it the dative case-ending ṅe: tanu + e. Ṅiti hrasvaś ca (Pā. Sū. 1-4-6):

here, since there is the word ca, two sentences result. Yū stryākhyau nadī is carried on: īś ca ūś ca = yū. Since it is a sūtra, though there is an ic vowel after the long vowel, the prohibition of the long like vowel by dīrghāj jasi ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-105) does not come. Striyam evācakṣāte iti stryākhyau: those that convey only the feminine, that is, always feminine: this is the meaning. Neyaṅuvaṅsthānāv astrī (Pā. Sū. 1-4-4): the whole sūtra except na is carried on: iyaṅuvaṅoḥ sthānaṃ = sthitiḥ yayoḥ tau: the meaning is, fit to get the substitutes iyaṅ, uvaṅ. By vāmi (Pā. Sū. 1-4-5) vā comes; and so when a suffix with the it-name ṅ follows, words ending in ī and ū, always feminine, fit to get the substitutes iyaṅ, uvaṅ, other than the word strī, optionally get the name nadī: this is the meaning of the first sentence ṅiti. Hrasvaś ca is the second sentence. Here the words yū stryākhyau nadī vā ṅiti are carried on. And so, when a suffix with the it-name ṅ follows, words ending in short i or short u optionally get the name nadī: this is its meaning. The meaning of the first sentence does not apply here. Though the meaning of the second sentence applies, since it says 'optionally' there, here the word tanu does not have the name nadī. So by āṇ nadyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-112) the augment āṭ does not come; by the yaṇ substitute, when v comes for the u, it becomes tanve. Here, since e is a sup, by anudāttau suppitau the unaccented would be due. Overriding it, by udāttayaṇo halpūrvāt (Pā. Sū. 6-1-174) — y, v, l that have come in place of an udātta letter and are after a consonant: the nadī-named letters and the case-endings śas and the rest coming after such y, v, l are also udātta — the udātta would be due for the e after the v. Yet since it is said vyatyayo bahulam, here, contrary to this, by udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) — the unaccented after a yaṇ that has come in place of an udātta or svarita becomes svarita — the unaccented e becomes svarita. To make this svarita known, the numeral ३ is indicated after it.

दृशे (dṛśe) — the root dṛśir prekṣaṇe. Dṛśe vikhye ca (Pā. Sū. 3-4-11): the meaning is that in the sense of the suffix tumun, that is, in the action sense, the two forms dṛśe and vikhye are given as set forms. Here, after the root dṛś and after the root khyā preceded by the prefix vi, the suffix ke is given as a set form in the sense of the suffix tumun. Dṛś + e: the suffix is kit, so dṛś does not take guṇa of the light penultimate. In vikhyā + e, since the suffix is kit, by āto lopa iṭi ca (Pā. Sū. 6-4-64) the ā is dropped. ॥21॥

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

मयि (mayi) — in me, the sacrificer | यत्किं च (yat kiṃ ca) — whatever | दुरितं (duritaṃ) — sins done through ignorance there are | वा (vā) — or | अहं (ahaṃ) — I | यत् अभिदुद्रोह (yat abhidudroha) — though I have done hurt (to anyone) knowingly | वा (vā) — or | यत् शेपे (yat śepe) — though I have spoken evil words about someone | उत (uta) — and | अनृतं (anṛtaṃ) — though (I have spoken) a lie | इदं (idaṃ) — such sin | आपः (āpaḥ) — the waters | प्र वहत (pra vahata) — (separating it from me) may they carry it away in the form of a current.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

May the waters (the flowing water) carry away in their current all such sins: the sins that may be in me, done through ignorance; or if I have done hurt to anyone; or if I have spoken evil words; and if I have told lies.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O Waters, whatever sin there is in me, whatever ill-will I may have borne to others, whatever imprecations I may have uttered, and whatever falschood [sic] I may have told, wash it away all from me.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

In the animal sacrifice this ṛk idam āpaḥ pra vahata is recited for the cleansing (sprinkling). In the section hutāyāṃ vapāyām of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra it is said that the ṛk idam āpaḥ pra vahata is to be recited as the cleansing mantra (Ā. 3-5). Besides this, in the avabhṛtha-iṣṭi performed at the end of the sacrifice, this mantra is used at the time of bathing. This matter is stated in the section patnīsaṃyājaiś caritvā, that the mantras idam āpaḥ pra vahata and sumitryā na āpa oṣadhayaḥ santu are to be recited (Ā. 6-13).

दुरितं (duritaṃ) — ajñānān niṣpannaṃ kāyikaṃ pāpam // the sin in the form of acts done through ignorance or knowingly, that is, sins done by the use of force, such as beating someone: this is the meaning.

अभिदुद्रोह (abhidudroha) — thinking evil with the mind is called droha. This is a sin of the mind.

शेपे, अनृतं (śepe, anṛtaṃ) — cursing, telling lies and the like are sins done by speech. These are of speech. The prayer is that the flowing water may carry away these three kinds of sins.

मयि (mayi) — the word yuṣmad [as printed; for asmad], locative singular; for the part up to m, by tvamāv ekavacane (Pā. Sū. 7-2-97) the substitute ma: ma + ad + i; by ato guṇe (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the following form: mad + i; by yo 'ci (Pā. Sū. 7-2-89) — when a vowel-initial case-ending without a substitute follows, the d of the words yuṣmad, asmad takes y — so when y comes it becomes tvayi [as printed; mayi].

दुद्रोह (dudroha) — the root druha jighāṃsāyām. Liṭ, parasmaipada, third person singular ti; by parasmaipadānāṃ ṇal… (Pā. Sū. 3-4-82) ṇal: druh + a. By liṭi dhātoḥ… (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) reduplication. By hrasvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-59) shortening: though it is already short here, since it is said parjanyaval lakṣaṇaṃ pravartate (Paribhā. 120), the shortening comes. By halādiḥ śeṣaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) the r and h of the first druh are dropped: dudruh + a, guṇa of the light penultimate. Yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66): a word ending in tiṅ after a word in which there is the word yad is not unaccented. Here, by the further mention of pūjita in pūjanāt pūjitam (Pā. Sū. 8-1-67), it is made known that atra prakaraṇe pañcamīnirdeśe 'pi nānantaryam iṣyate. So even though there is an intervention, the prohibition of the unaccented comes by this. In the same way in śepe too the unaccented is barred.

parjanyavallakṣaṇaṃ pravartate | atra prakaraṇe pañcamīnirdeśe 'pi nānantaryamiṣyate |

शेपे (śepe) — the root śapa ākrośe; liṭ: though this is a parasmaipada root, the middle-voice suffix comes by vyatyaya. First person singular, iṭ: śap + i. By ṭita ātmanepadānāṃ ṭer e (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) e for the i; reduplication; by ata ekahalmadhye 'nādeśāder liṭi (Pā. Sū. 6-4-120) — when a liṭ that is kit follows, a short a standing between single consonants and belonging to a stem whose initial is not a substitute takes e, and the reduplicate is dropped — when the e and the dropping of the reduplicate come, it becomes śepe. ॥22॥

> I have this day entered into the waters; we have mingled with their essence; O Agni, existing in the waters, approach and fill me with vigour.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

In the animal sacrifice, at the time of attending on the āhavanīya fire, they recite the ṛk āpo adyānv acāriṣam. This matter is stated in the section manotāyai saṃpreṣite of the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra, in the sūtra etyopatiṣṭhanta āpo adyānv acāriṣam (Ā. 3-6).

आपः (āpaḥ) — Skandasvāmin too says dvitīyārthe prathamā: the word āpaḥ, in the first case, is to be given the meaning of the second case.

रसेन (rasena) — jalasāreṇa: with the essence of water, “essence of water”. The intention is: may pure water remove the faults (the dirt) inside and outside my body.

पयस्वान् (payasvān) — payasā jalena yuktaḥ, or payasi tiṣṭhatīti payasvān: he who is in the water. In the Yajurveda, sentences such as so ’paḥ prāviśat say that Agni hid himself in the water. So it is said on many occasions that Agni is in the water. The second half of this ṛk has Agni as its deity.

> सोऽपः प्राविशत् ।
>
> so ’paḥ prāviśat |

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

आपः (āpaḥ) — in the object sense it would be right for śas to come and form apaḥ. But here by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) the case-ending jas comes instead of śas in the object sense.

अचारिषम् (acāriṣam) — the root cara gatau; by luṅ, cleḥ sic, sic; mip with the substitute am, the augment aṭ: a + car + s + am. By ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-35) an ārdhadhātuka beginning with a consonant other than y takes the augment iṭ. When iṭ comes: acar + is + am. Vṛddhi would be due by sici vṛddhiḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. Sū. 7-2-1); then by neṭi (Pā. Sū. 7-2-4), when a sic beginning with iṭ follows, vṛddhi does not come: so the bar on vṛddhi would be due. But by its exception ato lrāntasya (Pā. Sū. 7-2-2) — when a sic in the parasmaipada follows, the short a of a stem ending in r or l that follows the short a takes vṛddhi — the vṛddhi comes; ṣatva: it becomes acāriṣam.

अगस्महि (agasmahi) — by samo gamyṛcchibhyām (Pā. Sū. 1-3-29) — the substitutes of la after the intransitive roots gam and ṛcch following the prefix sam are middle — the middle-voice suffix comes. Luṅ, first person plural mahiṅ; for cli, sic: gam + s + mahi, the augment aṭ. By mantre ghasahvaraṇaśavṛdahādvṛc kṛgamijanibhyo leḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-80) the luk of cli would be due; yet since this is Vedic, by sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante the luk of cli does not come. By ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt (Pā. Sū. 7-2-10) — a val-initial ārdhadhātuka after a root that is monosyllabic in its teaching and taught unaccented does not take the augment iṭ — the iṭ is barred. By vā gamaḥ (Pā. Sū. 1-2-13) — the jhal-initial liṅ and sic after the root gam are optionally kit — sic is kit. So by anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kṅiti (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37) the nasal m is dropped, the augment aṭ: it becomes agasmahi. ॥23॥

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Agni, grant me splendour, sons and descendants, and long life. May the gods, and Indra together with the ṛṣis, know the sacrifice I have performed.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O Agni, confer upon me vigour, progeny and long life; the gods may know of this my sacrifice and Indra, with the Rishis may know it.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The meaning of the first half of this ṛk can be known easily. Agni is prayed to give splendour, sons and descendants, and long life. The meaning of the second half is not so clear; for the words vidyur me asya the commentator has explained the meaning "the performance of sacrifice I do". In the sentence indro vidyāt saha ṛṣibhiḥ, why the word ṛṣibhiḥ is used is also unclear. It seems the ṛṣi's intention is that this sacrifice, or hymn, made with regard to the deities, should be known to Indra, to the deities and to the other ṛṣis.

Translation: "In the sixth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala there are seven sūktas. Of these the first is the sūkta kasya nūnam, of fifteen ṛks; its ṛṣi is Śunaḥśepa, son of Ajīgarta; it is in triṣṭubh; the tṛca abhi tvā deva is in gāyatrī. Because the first ṛk does not name its deity, Prajāpati is its deity; of agner vayam, Agni; of the tṛca abhi tvā deva, Savitṛ; bhagabhaktasya has Bhaga as deity, optionally; the rest are to Varuṇa. And so the Anukramaṇī: 'kasya, fifteen less five [as printed: pañcona]; Ājīgarti Śunaḥśepa, he, the adopted Vaiśvāmitra Devarāta; to Varuṇa, in triṣṭubh; at the beginning one to Ka and one to Agni; a tṛca to Savitṛ in gāyatrī, of which the last is to Bhaga, optionally.' In the rājasūya, on the day of the consecration, when the marutvatīya is finished, this group of seven sūktas beginning here is to be narrated by the hotṛ before the consecrated king, surrounded by his sons and the rest. And so it is said in the sūtra: 'When the marutvatīya is finished, seated on a golden cushion to the south of the āhavanīya, he should tell the Śaunaḥśepa to the consecrated king, surrounded by his sons and ministers' (Āśv. 9-3). And there is the brāhmaṇa: 'This is the Śaunaḥśepa story, of more than a hundred ṛks and with gāthās; the hotṛ tells it to the consecrated king; seated on a golden cushion he tells it; seated on a golden cushion [the adhvaryu] responds' (Ai. Brā. 7-18 [as read])."

Anuvāda (Kannada rendering): With this sūkta the sixth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala begins. In it there are seven sūktas. In the first sūkta, kasya nūnam, there are fifteen ṛks. For all seven sūktas in this anuvāka the ṛṣi is Śunaḥśepa, son of Ajīgarta. The three ṛks beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ are in the Gāyatrī metre. The remaining ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre. Since in the first ṛk no deity is set forth by name, —

— Prajāpati himself is its deity; for the ṛk agner vayam, Agni is the deity; for the three ṛks abhi tvā, Savitṛ is the deity. But among these three ṛks, for the third ṛk, bhagabhaktasya, Savitṛ or Bhaga is the deity; for all the remaining ṛks Varuṇa is the deity. On this matter the Anukramaṇī says thus —

कस्य पञ्चोनाजीगर्तिः शुनःशेपः स कृत्रिमो वैश्वामित्रो देवरातो वारुणं तु त्रैष्टुभमादौ काय्याग्नेय्यौ सावित्रस्तृचो गायत्रोऽस्यान्त्या भागी वेति ॥

kasya pañconājīgartiḥ śunaḥśepaḥ sa kṛtrimo vaiśvāmitro devarāto vāruṇaṃ tu traiṣṭubhamādau kāyyāgneyyau sāvitrastṛco gāyatro 'syāntyā bhāgī veti ||

— that is: for the sūkta kasya nūnam, containing fifteen ṛks, the ṛṣi is Śunaḥśepa, son of Ajīgarta. This Śunaḥśepa is well known by the name Devarāta as the adopted son of the ṛṣi Viśvāmitra. This sūkta has Varuṇa as deity and is made of ṛks in the Triṣṭubh metre. But for the first two ṛks Ka, that is Prajāpati, and Agni are the deities. For the next ṛks, that is 3–5, Savitṛ is the deity; for the fifth ṛk it is said that Savitṛ or Bhaga is the deity. These three ṛks are in the Gāyatrī metre. For all the remaining ṛks Varuṇa is the deity and the metre is Triṣṭubh.

Its application: in the rājasūya sacrifice, on the day of consecration, after the recitation of the marutvatīya-śastra mantras, the hotṛ must recite the seven sūktas beginning kasya nūnam (the seven sūktas of this anuvāka) facing the consecrated king, surrounded by sons and other kinsfolk. On this matter the Āśvalāyana Śrautasūtra says thus —

saṃsthite marutvatīye dakṣiṇata āhavanīyasya hiraṇyakaśipāvāsīno 'bhiṣiktāya putrāmātyaparivṛtāya rājñe śaunaḥśepamācakṣīta || (ā0 9-3) brāhmaṇaṃ ca bhavati — tadetatpararṛkśatagāthaṃ śaunaḥśepamākhyānaṃ taddhotā rājñe 'bhiṣiktāyācaṣṭe hiraṇyakaśipāvāsīna ācaṣṭe hiraṇyakaśipāvāsīnaḥ pratigṛṇāti || (ai0 brā0 7-18)

— that is: in the rājasūya sacrifice, after the recitation of the marutvatīya-śastra mantras, the consecrated king must sit, together with his sons and ministers, on a golden seat (cushion) to the south of the āhavanīya fire. Then the hotṛ must recite the seven sūktas, connected with Śunaḥśepa, that is, having Śunaḥśepa as ṛṣi, beginning kasya nūnam (Ā. 9-3).

In the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa too it is said on this matter: the hotṛ must recite the hundred ṛks (97 ṛks [as printed]) of the seven sūktas beginning kasya nūnam, which contain the Śunaḥśepa story, while sprinkling the king who has been consecrated and is seated on the golden seat (Ai. Brā. 7-18).

Who among the gods is the best? By remembering (praising) which god will this trouble of mine be removed and release from bondage come, and who will favour me to live on the earth like everyone? When shall I see my father and mother again?

॥ Viśeṣārthaḥ ॥ (explanation)

In the sacrifice performed by the king named Hariścandra, the ṛṣi named Śunaḥśepa, bound as a victim to the sacrificial post, not knowing where to turn and seeing death before him, speaks thus, with a cry of distress, thinking which god he should take refuge with so as to be released from bondage: the gods are many. Among them who is the best? By uttering whose name, or praising whom, will he free me, who am facing death, from the noose, and protect me so as to live again like the other people on the earth? When shall I, escaped from this trouble, see my father and mother? Lamenting in this way he first remembers Prajāpati. Afterwards, knowing from him that if he remembers Agni he will be released from bondage, he praises Agni in the next ṛk.

> Of many immortal gods whose good name should we contemplate? Who will deliver us back to the vast earth that I may again behold my father and mother?

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

It has been said before that all seven sūktas in this anuvāka are used in the rājasūya sacrifice for sprinkling the consecrated king, the sacrificer. On this matter the legend about Śunaḥśepa is described at length in the Purāṇas and the like, and in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. Since the legend in the Purāṇas and the like differs, and since it is not so fit to be taken as authority, we explain here only the legend in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. This story is described thus in the 33rd adhyāya of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa —

The legend of Śunaḥśepa (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa), as printed. (The print gives it as continuous prose, the khaṇḍas closed by ॥१॥, ॥२॥ … ; the line-breaks below follow the sentences.)

Translation: "Hariścandra, son of Vedhas, of the line of Ikṣvāku, was a king without a son. He had a hundred wives; among them he obtained no son. Parvata and Nārada lived in his house. He asked Nārada: 'This son whom people desire, those who understand and those who do not — what does one gain by a son? Tell me that, Nārada.' Asked in one verse, he answered in ten: (1) He pays off his debt in him and reaches immortality — the father who sees the face of his son born living. (2) As many enjoyments as there are on earth, as many in fire, as many in the waters for living beings — greater than those is the father's in a son. (3) Always by a son have fathers crossed over the abundant darkness; for the self is born of the self; he is a boat laden with food that carries across. (4) What is the dirt, what the antelope-skin, what the beard, what the austerity? Desire a son, O brahmins; he is the world that is well spoken of. (5) Food is life, clothing is shelter, gold is beauty, cattle are marriages; a wife is a friend, a daughter is a pity; a son is light in the highest heaven. (6) The husband enters the wife; becoming an embryo, he enters the mother; becoming new again in her, he is born in the tenth month. (7) That is the wife's wifehood (jāyā), that he is born (jāyate) in her again; she is the source, the becoming; the seed is placed in her. (8) The gods and the seers brought great splendour to her; the gods said to men: 'She is your mother again.' (9) 'For the sonless there is no world': all animals know this; therefore the son mounts even mother and sister. (10) This is the wide, pleasant path which those with sons tread without sorrow; animals and birds see it; therefore they mate even with the mother. Having told him this, —"

Translation: "Then Varuṇa seized the Aikṣvāka [Hariścandra]; his belly swelled [dropsy]. Rohita heard of it. He came from the forest to the village. Indra, in the form of a man, came round to him and said: 'There is no fortune for one who has not toiled, Rohita; so we have heard. The man who sits among men is bad; Indra is the friend of the wanderer. Wander on!' 'A Brahmin has told me to wander' — so he wandered a second year in the forest. He came from the forest to the village; Indra, in the form of a man, came round to him and said: 'The wanderer's legs are flowering; his body grows and gathers fruit; all his sins lie slain by the toil on the road. Wander on!' … a third year …: 'The fortune of one who sits, sits; it stands up for one who stands; it lies down for one who lies; it moves for one who moves. Wander on!' … a fourth year …: 'Kali is the one lying down; Dvāpara the one getting up; Tretā the one standing; Kṛta is attained by the one who moves. Wander on!' … a fifth year …: 'The wanderer finds honey, the wanderer the sweet udumbara fruit. See the splendour of the Sun, who never tires as he moves. Wander on!' 'A Brahmin has told me to wander' — so he wandered a sixth year in the forest. He came in the forest upon the seer Ajīgarta Sauyavasi, overcome by hunger. He had three sons: Śunaḥpuccha, Śunaḥśepa and Śunolāṅgūla. [Rohita] said to him: 'Seer, I give you a hundred [cows]; with one of these I shall ransom myself.' He, holding back the eldest son, said: 'Surely not this one.' 'Nor this one,' said the mother of the youngest. The two of them settled on the middle one, Śunaḥśepa. Having given a hundred for him, [Rohita] took him and came from the forest to the village. He came to his father and said: 'Father, look, I ransom myself with this one.' He went to king Varuṇa: 'With this one I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it,' said Varuṇa, 'a Brahmin is worth more than a kṣatriya.' He taught him this sacrificial rite, the Rājasūya; at the Abhiṣecanīya he took him as the human victim."

Translation: "Viśvāmitra was his Hotṛ, Jamadagni the Adhvaryu, Vasiṣṭha the Brahman, Ayāsya the Udgātṛ. When he had been brought forward, they found no one to bind him [to the post]. Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said: 'Give me another hundred and I shall bind him.' They gave him another hundred, and he bound him. When he had been brought forward, bound, propitiated with the Āprī verses and had fire carried round him, they found no one to slaughter him. Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said: 'Give me another hundred and I shall slaughter him.' They gave him another hundred; he came sharpening his knife. Then Śunaḥśepa reflected: 'They will slaughter me as if I were not a man. Look, I shall run to the deities.' He went first of the deities to Prajāpati, with the ṛk kasya nūnaṃ katamasyāmṛtānām. Prajāpati said to him: 'Agni is the nearest of the gods; run to him.' He went to Agni with the ṛk agner vayaṃ prathamasyāmṛtānām. Agni said to him: 'Savitṛ rules over the impulses; run to him.' He went to Savitṛ with the triplet abhi tvā deva savitaḥ. Savitṛ said to him: 'You have been bound for king Varuṇa; run to him.' He went to king Varuṇa with the thirty-one [ṛks] that follow. Varuṇa said to him: 'Agni is the mouth of the gods, the most kind-hearted; praise him, and then we shall release you.' He praised Agni with the twenty-two that follow. Agni said to him: 'Praise the All-gods, and then we shall release you.' He praised the All-gods with the ṛk namo mahadbhyo namo arbhakebhyaḥ. The All-gods said to him: 'Indra is the most vigorous, strongest, most powerful, truest of the gods, the best at bringing across; praise him, and then we shall release you.' He praised Indra with the sūkta yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ and with fifteen [ṛks] of the next. Indra, pleased as he was praised, gave him in his mind a golden chariot; he acknowledged it with the ṛk śaśvad indra. Indra said to him: 'Praise the Aśvins, and then we shall release you.' He praised the Aśvins with the triplet that follows. The Aśvins said to him: 'Praise Uṣas, and then we shall release you.' He praised Uṣas with the triplet that follows. As each ṛk was spoken, the fetter came loose and the Aikṣvāka's belly grew smaller; when the last ṛk was spoken, the fetter came off and the Aikṣvāka was well."

Translation: "The priests said to him: 'You yourself bring the rite of this day to its completion for us.' Then Śunaḥśepa saw the Añjaḥsava [the quick pressing of soma]. He pressed the soma with these four [ṛks], yac cid dhi tvaṃ gṛhe gṛhe. Then he poured it into the droṇa-kalaśa with the ṛk ucchiṣṭaṃ camvor bhara. Then, while [the king] kept hold of him, he made the offerings with the four preceding [ṛks] that end in svāhā. Then he led him to the Avabhṛtha [the final bath] with the two [ṛks] tvaṃ no agne varuṇasya vidvān. After that he had him attend upon the Āhavanīya fire with śunaś cic chepaṃ niditaṃ sahasrāt. Then Śunaḥśepa sat down in Viśvāmitra's lap. Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said: 'Seer, give me back my son.' 'No,' said Viśvāmitra, 'the gods have given him to me.' He became Devarāta Vaiśvāmitra; the Kāpileyas and Bābhravas are his descendants. Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said: 'You come here; let the two of us call to him.' Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said: 'You are an Āṅgirasa by birth, the son of Ajīgarta, a renowned seer. Seer, do not leave the line of your grandfathers; come back to me.' Śunaḥśepa said: 'They saw you with the knife in your hand, a thing not found even among Śūdras. You chose three hundred cows over me, O Aṅgiras.' Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said: 'That evil deed I did torments me, my son. I make amends to you: let the hundreds of cows go back.' Śunaḥśepa said: 'He who does an evil thing once will do the next one too. You have not turned away from the ways of a Śūdra; what you did cannot be mended.' 'Cannot be mended,' Viśvāmitra repeated, and came forward. Viśvāmitra said: 'Terrible was Sauyavasi, wanting to cut you up with the knife. Do not stay his son; come to be my son.' Śunaḥśepa said: 'Tell us, prince, as you make it known, how I, being an Āṅgirasa, may become your son.' Viśvāmitra said: 'You shall be the eldest of my sons, and your offspring the best. You shall receive my divine inheritance; with that I call you.' Śunaḥśepa said: 'If they agree, say it, for my friendship and my fortune, so that I may become your son, bull of the Bharatas.' Then Viśvāmitra called his sons: 'Madhucchandas, hear, and Ṛṣabha, Reṇu and Aṣṭaka, and all you who are brothers: grant him the seniority.'"

Translation: "Viśvāmitra had a hundred and one sons: fifty older than Madhucchandas and fifty younger. The older ones did not think it right. He pronounced on them: 'Your offspring shall inherit the ends [of the land].' These are the Andhras, Puṇḍras, Śabaras, Pulindas and Mūtibas, many dwelling at the borders; the descendants of Viśvāmitra are the most numerous of the Dasyus. Madhucchandas, together with the fifty, said: 'What our father agrees to, by that we stand. We all put you in front; we follow after you.' Then Viśvāmitra, pleased, praised his sons: 'You, my sons, will be rich in cattle and rich in heroes, you who, honouring my wish, have made me rich in heroes. Gāthins, with Devarāta going before, you will be rich in heroes. You are all to prosper, my sons; this is a true word for you. This hero of yours, Kuśikas, is Devarāta; follow him. He will receive you as my inheritance, and the knowledge we know. Those Vaiśvāmitras, the Gāthins, all of one mind, all sharing the gift, stood by Devarāta for his steadiness and his seniority. Devarāta the seer was placed in both inheritances: in the lordship of the Jahnus and in the divine Veda of the Gāthins.' This is the Śaunaḥśepa legend, with more than a hundred ṛks and with gāthās. The Hotṛ tells it to the anointed king. Seated on a golden cushion he tells it; seated on a golden cushion [the Adhvaryu] responds. Gold is glory: with glory he thus makes him prosper. Om is the response to a ṛk, tathā to a gāthā; om is divine, tathā human. With the divine and the human he thus frees him from sin and guilt. Therefore a king who is victorious, even if he is not sacrificing, should have this Śaunaḥśepa legend told; then not the least guilt remains in him. He should give a thousand to the teller and a hundred to the responder, and these two seats; and to the Hotṛ a white chariot drawn by mules. Those who want sons should also have it told; they obtain sons, they obtain sons."

Title, as printed: ಶುನಶ್ಶೇಪಾಖ್ಯಾನವು ("The Śunaḥśepa story"). The Kannada retelling runs to p. 249 and is translated here in full, page by page. The bracketed summaries in small type are the source's own.

[Hariścandra's wish for a son is granted. The praise of having sons.]

Hariścandra, son of Vedhas, born in the Ikṣvāku line, had a hundred wives, yet no son was born to him. Once, when the seers Parvata and Nārada came to his house, Hariścandra said to Nārada: "O Nārada, human beings, who have the power of discernment, and also the other creatures, which lack it, long eagerly for offspring. What is gained by the birth of offspring?" So he asked.

To the question Hariścandra asked in one sentence, Nārada gives his answer in ten sentences, as set out below:

(1) The father, together with the joy he feels at seeing the face of the son born to him, also pays off his debt to the ancestors through that son and attains immortality.

(2) A father's joy at gaining a son is greater than the enjoyment to be had from the earth, greater than the help to be had from fire, and beyond the use to be had from water. The enjoyment that comes from gaining a son is far greater than all these enjoyments.

(3) Through his son a father crosses many great dangers. Since the father is himself born again as a son, the son carries the father across the sorrows of this world and the next in the sea of worldly life, just as a boat stocked beforehand with provisions carries a man across a river or a sea.

(4) What is the use of a householder's life without children? Why brahmacarya? Why the vānaprastha stage? Why become a wandering ascetic? What is the use of these? "O best of Brahmins, desire offspring": so the world says of people who give up married life in order to practise the Vedic rites.

(5) Food protects life. Clothes protect from cold. Gold gives the use of ornaments. Marriage and the like bring wealth in the form of cattle. The wife becomes a friend. The daughter becomes an object of affection. But the son alone shines in the highest world of the gods as a lamp that lights up the self.

(6) The husband enters the wife in the form of seed. When the seed changes into the form of an embryo, he makes her a mother. Afterwards he is born from her again, in the tenth month.

(7) Only when the husband is born in her womb does the wife truly receive the meaningful name "jāyā". The seed produced in her she raises in the form of a son, makes it shine and makes it beautiful.

(8) The gods and the seers have granted the highest radiance to her who has become a jāyā. Then the gods declared to human beings: "She becomes your mother."

(9) Even animals know that one without offspring has no lasting state; and among them the male young even covers its own mother or sister.

(10) This is the road on which those who have sons walk free of sorrow. Even beasts and birds know it. In these words he praised the having of sons.

[A son is born to Hariścandra. Varuṇa comes again and again and insists that the son be given to him as an offering in sacrifice. But Hariścandra puts forward one reason after another, keeps postponing the sacrifice and slips out of it.]

Then Nārada advised Hariścandra: "Go to Varuṇa and pray to him to grant you a son. And give him your word that, after the son is born, you will offer that very son to him in sacrifice." Hariścandra went to Varuṇa as told and prayed: "Grant me a son. I shall give him to you as an offering." At once a son named Rohita was born. Varuṇa came and said: "A son has been born to you. Give him as an offering." To that Hariścandra said: "Before any creature becomes fit to be an offering, ten days must pass. Let ten days pass for my son too. Then I shall offer him to you." When ten days had passed for Rohita, Varuṇa came and asked for him. Then Hariścandra said: "For any creature to be given as an offering, its teeth must have come. When my son's teeth have come, I shall offer him." After Rohita's teeth had come, Varuṇa came and asked for him. Then Hariścandra said: "No creature should be given as an offering until its teeth have fallen. Let this one's teeth fall too." Varuṇa came again: "Rohita's teeth are falling; give him as an offering." Hariścandra asked for time until his teeth had grown again.

Then, when Varuṇa came, he said: "One born in a warrior family is not fit to be an offering until he puts on a warrior's armour. Wait until then." When that time also came and Varuṇa firmly demanded Rohita, Hariścandra called his son and said: "Child, I must now give you as an offering to Varuṇa, who granted you to me." Rohita said: "That shall never be." He took up his bow, fled to escape into a lonely forest, and wandered there for one year.

[Rohita wanders aimlessly in the forest for six years. Then he buys from his parents a Brahmin's son named Śunaḥśepa, to give to Varuṇa as the offering in his place.]

After Rohita had escaped and gone, Varuṇa seized Hariścandra, and Hariścandra was struck with dropsy (mahodara). Rohita heard the news, left the forest and came to a village. Indra came in human form, met him and said: "O Rohita, there is no happiness for one who does not travel. However excellent a man may be, if he grows up among the people of one caste he falls into wrong ways and is ruined. So go about in lonely regions. Indra becomes the friend of the man who travels like this. You too go about." So he advised.

Rohita understood that a Brahmin had advised him to travel, and he wandered in the forest for a second year as well. Then, as he was coming to a village, Indra came again in human form and said: "The feet of a man who travels are like the nectar of flowers. From that flower the self grows and gains the fruit of good health. All his sins are removed by the toil of travelling. So go about."

Following that word, Rohita went about for a third year as well. Just when he was entering the village again, Indra came and said: "The fortune of a man sitting in one place sits in one place like him. If he goes about, it too goes about and grows. So go about."

In the same way a fourth year passed. At the time he again entered the village, Indra came, described the nature of the four yugas, and told Rohita to go about once more. Rohita completed the fifth year in the same way. Just as he was entering the village, Indra came and said: "Honey and the sweet udumbara fruit come to the man who travels. See the radiance of the Sun, who does not tire even with his ceaseless moving. Like him, you too go about."

Rohita wandered in the forest for the sixth year as well. Then he met a seer named Ajīgarta, son of one called Suyavas. That Ajīgarta, through poverty, was fasting in the forest without food. He had three children, named Śunaḥpuccha, Śunaḥśepa and Śunolāṅgūla. Rohita went to the seer and said: "O seer, I shall give you a hundred cows. Give me one of your three sons. I shall give him to Varuṇa as the offering in my place and so escape." Ajīgarta agreed to it, but he would not send away his eldest son. His wife would not let go of the youngest. Leaving those two, only the middle one was obtained. As agreed, Rohita gave Ajīgarta the hundred cows, brought Śunaḥśepa to his father and told him of the arrangement he had made. Hariścandra went to Varuṇa and said: “In place of my son I shall give you this one as the offering.” Varuṇa agreed that this would do, since a Brahmin is greater than a kṣatriya. Then Varuṇa explained the procedure of the Rājasūya sacrifice to the king and arranged for a human sacrifice, in place of the animal sacrifice, on the day of the rite.

[Four great seers become the priests. The appointed time of the human sacrifice draws near. To escape a terrible death, Śunaḥśepa appeals to the gods. The gods he appealed to and the mantras he uttered.]

For this human sacrifice Viśvāmitra was appointed Hotṛ, Jamadagni Adhvaryu, Vasiṣṭha Brahman and Ayāsya Udgātṛ. After the rites that come before the sacrifice were over, no one would agree to tie Śunaḥśepa to the sacrificial post. “If you give me another hundred cows, I shall tie him,” said Ajīgarta, and came forward. They agreed and gave him a hundred cows. Then Ajīgarta tied his son to the post. Next, after the Āprī hymn had been recited and fire carried round him, no one would agree to cut him. “If you give me another hundred cows, I myself will cut him,” said Ajīgarta, and came forward for that too. He took the hundred cows in the same way, sharpened his knife and got ready to kill his son. Śunaḥśepa woke to the fact that they would cut him like an animal. He resolved, “I shall take refuge among the gods,” and appealed to Prajāpati with the sūkta “kasya nūnaṃ katamasya” (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-1). Prajāpati appeared and said: “Agni is the deity nearest to all of you; take refuge in him.” Then, when Śunaḥśepa prayed to Agni with the ṛk “agner vayaṃ prathamasyāmṛtānām”, Agni came and said: “Savitṛ is the lord of all beings; take refuge in him.” Then he prayed with the three ṛks beginning with the ṛk “abhi tvā deva savitaḥ”. Then Savitṛ came and said: “You have been bound by Varuṇa, who is the lord; take refuge in him.” Then, when he prayed to Varuṇa with thirty-one ṛks, Varuṇa came and said: “Agni is, as it were, the mouth of all the gods and is most merciful. If you pray to him now, we shall all release your bond.” When he again prayed to Agni with twenty-two ṛks, Agni came and said: “If you pray to the Viśvedevas, you will be released.” Then Śunaḥśepa entreated them with “namo mahadbhyo namo arbhakebhyaḥ” (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-27-13). They came and said: “Indra is the most powerful of all, very strong and enduring; among the gods he is the nearest to truth, and he knows the means of bringing every matter to its end. If you pray to him, we shall release you.” Then, when Śunaḥśepa prayed with the sūkta “yac cid dhi satya somapā” and with fifteen ṛks of the sūkta after it, Indra came, was pleased with his hymn and granted him a chariot made of gold. Śunaḥśepa accepted it with the words “śaśvad indra”. Indra again instructed him: “Pray to the Aśvin deities. Then we shall release you.” The Aśvins, being prayed to, came and said: “Pray to the goddess Uṣas. We shall release you.” While the prayer to Uṣas went on, as he spoke the three ṛks one by one, the noose of Varuṇa’s bond gradually loosened and Hariścandra’s dropsy kept getting better. When he uttered the last ṛk, the noose was taken off completely and Hariścandra regained his health as before.

[Śunaḥśepa’s release; his way of pressing the soma juice in the form of the Añjaḥsava. Viśvāmitra accepts him as his son.]

Then the priests said to Śunaḥśepa: “Now you too are a priest, like us. Take part with us in this special rite.” Then he learnt the procedure of pressing the soma juice, which in the form of the Añjaḥsava is done very quickly. After he had pressed it, he took it and went, reciting the four ṛks "yac cid dhi tvaṃ gṛhe gṛhe". Uttering the ṛk "ucchiṣṭaṃ camvoḥ", he brought it into the droṇa-kalaśa. As soon as Hariścandra touched [him], he uttered the mantra "yatra grāvā" and offered the oblation with the word "svāhā". Then he came with the implements needed for the avabhṛtha, recited the ṛk "tvaṃ no agne varuṇasya" and performed the avabhṛtha. After this he called Hariścandra to the Āhavanīya fire and recited the mantra "śunaś cic chepaṃ niditam".

At last Śunaḥśepa went to Viśvāmitra's side. Ajīgarta too came up to him and said: "O seer, give my son back." Viśvāmitra said: "That cannot be. The gods have given him to me as a gift." From then on he became Viśvāmitra's son, named Devarāta ("given by the gods"). (Later the Kāpileyas and the Babhrus were born from him.) Then Ajīgarta called Śunaḥśepa: "You are a seer who belongs to the family of Ajīgarta. So do not forget your line; come back to us." Śunaḥśepa answered his father: "Not even a Caṇḍāla takes a knife in his hand to kill his son. To you the three hundred cows were worth more than I. Out of greed for them you took the knife to cut me, your son." When he mocked him so, Ajīgarta said: "Child, what I did before was wrong. I shall rid myself of this sin. I shall give you a hundred cows too. Come home." In answer Śunaḥśepa said: "You, who once did not shrink from this sinful deed, will not fear to do such deeds again and again. For this deed of yours there is no reconciliation at all." Viśvāmitra too said: "Yes, for this deed there is no expiation at all."

Viśvāmitra said to Śunaḥśepa: "When he held the knife in his hand to kill you, Ajīgarta was terrible to look at. Do not be his son again. Come to my house and be my son." Then Śunaḥśepa voiced his doubt: "How can one born in the line of Aṅgiras become a kinsman of Viśvāmitra?" Viśvāmitra then called all his children and declared: "O Madhucchandas and the rest, from today you have no right of seniority in my property. From today all of it is Śunaḥśepa's. He is the eldest of all."

[Viśvāmitra's descendants. The reward for those who recite the story of Śunaḥśepa.]

The seer Viśvāmitra had a hundred children. Fifty were older than Madhucchandas and the rest were younger. The older fifty did not accept that Śunaḥśepa should be the heir to Viśvāmitra's property. When they opposed it, Viśvāmitra cursed them to have low offspring. As the result of that curse, various low clans were born, such as the Śabaras and the Pulindas. Madhucchandas and the younger fifty bowed to Viśvāmitra's decision and honoured Śunaḥśepa: "O Śunaḥśepa, we shall always be obedient to our father's command, and as he wishes we shall give you the place of first honour." Viśvāmitra was pleased with their obedience and said: "O children, because you agreed to my wish, honoured me and made my fatherhood fruitful, may abundant cows and offspring be your reward. Having taken this Devarāta as your leader, be victorious. This Devarāta has gained the eminence of the Jahnu line and the divine knowledge of the Gāthi line, and is renowned as a seer. May you, who walk under this seer's leadership, and your children gain every prosperity." So he blessed them.

This story of Śunaḥśepa is told in more than a hundred ṛks. After holy water has been sprinkled on the king, the Hotṛ sits on a jewelled blanket adorned with gold thread and recites it. The Adhvaryu, who gives the response "oṃ tathā", sits in the same way and increases the king's glory. With the divine word "oṃ", which belongs to the ṛks (they are apauruṣeya, not of human authorship), and with the human assent "tathā", the Adhvaryu makes the king free of sin. Therefore every king who wishes to be victorious should hear this Śunaḥśepa story, both for his victory and for the cleansing of the sinful acts that come with it. To those who recite this story a thousand cows should be given; and to the Adhvaryu, who encourages the king by giving the needed words of assent, a hundred cows. To the Hotṛ a silver chariot yoked with excellent horses should be given. Those who have no son, whether they recite this tale or hear it, will surely obtain sons.

॥ ಶುನಶ್ಶೇಪಾಖ್ಯಾ ನವು ಮುಗಿದುದು ॥ (The Śunaḥśepa story ends.)

This story of Śunaḥśepa is told at length in Vālmīki's Rāmāyaṇa. There Śunaḥśepa is said to be the son of a seer named Ṛcīka; and in place of the name of king Hariścandra there is the name of a king Ambarīṣa, lord of Ayodhyā and other lands. The Bhāgavata and Viṣṇu Purāṇas also give an account of this tale. But in the Purāṇas and similar works the tale comes with small differences; in its main points it is like this one.

कस्य देवस्य अथवा कस्य कतमस्य देवस्य (kasya devasya athavā kasya katamasya devasya) — the meaning is "of which god, of what kind of god". Here Śunaḥśepa recites this ṛk while thinking to himself which god he should take refuge in (or praise) to be freed from the sacrificial post to which the sacrificial victim is tied. Although the word kasya has the general sense "which", here the word also means Prajāpati. So the commentator, explaining it, says that Śunaḥśepa first asked Prajāpati for help, and on this point cites the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa sentence:

> हन्ताहं देवता उपधावामीति स प्रजापतिमेव प्रथमं देवतानामुपससार ।
> hantāhaṃ devatā upadhāvāmīti sa prajāpatimeva prathamaṃ devatānāmupasasāra |

"Look, I shall run to the deities": so saying, he went first of the deities to Prajāpati (Ai. Brā. 7-16).

अमृतानां (amṛtānāṃ) — मरणरहितानां देवानां (maraṇarahitānāṃ devānāṃ), "of the gods who are free from death".

महौ अदितये (mahyai aditaye) — among the twenty-one names of the earth beginning with gauḥ, gmā, the words mahī and aditiḥ are read (Ni. 1-1), so these words mean pṛthivī, the earth. Since both words here convey the same sense, the word mahī can be given the meaning "broad, great".

पुनर्दात्, पितरं च दृशेयं मातरं च (punar dāt, pitaraṃ ca dṛśeyaṃ mātaraṃ ca) — Śunaḥśepa, tied to the sacrificial post and standing in the victim's place, understood that death was near and was at a loss for fear. He laments: "Shall I again become a creature that belongs to the earth as before? That is, which deity will favour me so that I may live on the earth again? And how shall I be freed from this noose of death and see my father and mother?" In the next ṛk he prays to Agni to be freed from his bond.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

कतमस्य (katamasya) — by the sūtra (Pā. Sū. 5-3-93)

> वा बहूनां जातिपरिप्रश्ने डतमच्
> vā bahūnāṃ jātiparipraśne ḍatamac

the suffix ḍatamac comes after the words kim, yat and tad when one out of many is singled out and a class is meant, and after the word kim when a question about the class is meant. Kaiyaṭa (kaiyaṭakāraru) says, on the words

> किमादीनां द्विबह्वर्थे प्रत्ययविधानादुपाध्यानर्थक्यं पूर्वसूत्रे द्वयोरिति अत्र सूत्रे जातिपरिप्रश्ने इति च न कर्तव्यमिति भावः
> kimādīnāṃ dvibahvarthe pratyayavidhānādupādhyānarthakyaṃ pūrvasūtre dvayoriti atra sūtre jātiparipraśne iti ca na kartavyamiti bhāvaḥ

"since the suffix is enjoined for kim and the rest in the sense of two and of many, the limiting conditions (upādhi) are pointless"; and "the sense is that in the earlier sūtra the word dvayoḥ, and in this sūtra the words jātiparipraśne, need not be stated". Therefore the suffix also comes when action, quality or name is meant, as in katama eṣāṃ pācakaḥ ("which of these is the cook?"), śūraḥ, devadattaḥ. kim + atama: loss of the ṭi.

अमृतानां (amṛtānāṃ) — the acute on the last syllable of the second member, due by nañsubhyām (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172), is set aside by nañjo jaramaramitramṛtāḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-2-116): in a bahuvrīhi compound, the first syllable of the second members jara, mara, mitra and mṛta after nañ is acute. So the first syllable of mṛta is acute.

मनामहे (manāmahe) — the root mana jñāne, of the Divādi class. So the vikaraṇa śyan would be expected, but śap comes by the Vedic interchange. laṭ, first person plural, mahiṅ, e-substitution; lengthening by akṛtsārva[dhātukayor dīrghaḥ] (Pā. Sū. 7-4-25).

दात् (dāt) — ḍudāñ dāne; luṅ, third person singular tip, cli; sic in its place: dā + s + ti; loss of i by itaś ca lopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-97); by gātisthāghupābhūbhyaḥ sicaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. Sū. 2-4-77) the sic after the roots gai, sthā, dā, dhā, pā and bhū is dropped (luk); so sic is dropped. The aṭ augment does not come, because this is Vedic.

दृशेयं (dṛśeyaṃ) — the root dṛśir prekṣaṇe. āśīrliṅ, first person singular mip, substituted by am. By dṛśer agvaktavyaḥ (Pā. Ma. 3-1-87-3 [as printed]), when the benedictive liṅ follows the root dṛś, a comes; so aṅ in place of śap. Since aṅ is kit, the laghūpadha guṇa does not come. By liṅy āśiṣy aṅ (Pā. Sū. 3-1-86), in the Veda aṅ comes after the root when the benedictive liṅ follows. When aṅ comes, guṇa is required by ṛdṛśo 'ṅi guṇaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-16): when aṅ follows, roots ending in ṛ and the root dṛś take guṇa. The yāsuṭ augment: dṛś + yās + am; loss of the s. By ato yeyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-2-8 [as printed; for 7-2-80]), iy comes for the yā that is part of a sārvadhātuka after short a: so iy, then guṇa. ॥1॥

Gist: Having voiced his doubt in the first ṛk and learnt from Prajāpati that the god is Agni, he praised Agni with this ṛk. So it is heard: "Prajāpati said to him: 'Agni is the nearest of the gods; run to him.' He went to Agni with this ṛk, agner vayaṃ prathamasyāmṛtānām" (Ai. Brā. 7-16). The construction is as before. The two words are to be construed as a wish: dāt = "may he give", dṛśeyam = "may I see".

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Having learnt from Prajāpati that Agni is the first among the gods, I (Śunaḥśepa) utter the auspicious name of Agni, the chief of the gods. May Agni (pleased by this) send me (who am facing death) back to the great earth. (Freed from death by Agni's grace,) I shall see my father and mother.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> Of many immortal gods we shall contemplate the god Agni's name first; he will deliver us back to this vast earth that I may again behold my father and mother.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

As said before, Śunaḥśepa learnt from Prajāpati that Agni is able to protect him. So Śunaḥśepa first prays to Agni, as the best among the gods, to protect him, to let him live on the earth again, and to grant that he see his father and mother again.

The special explanation given under the previous ṛk applies to this ṛk too.

वयं (vayaṃ) — although the plural "we" is used here, it is to be understood as applying to Śunaḥśepa, who is praying to Agni.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

महे (mahyai) — meaning mahatyai, "to the great". By vartamāne pṛṣadbṛhanmahajjagacchatṛvac ca (Uṇ. Sū. 2-…; the digits are not clear [?]), these words are formed irregularly (nipātana) as ending in the suffix ati. Because they are treated like words in śatṛ, by ugitaś ca (Pā. Sū. 4-1-6) ṅīp comes; the at is dropped as a Vedic usage. By bṛhanmahator upasaṅkhyānam (Pā. Sū. 6-1-173 vā. 1) the ṅīp is acute. The suffix ṅe follows the word mahī. By āṇ nadyāḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-12 [as printed; for 7-3-112]), āṭ comes before a ṅit case-ending after a stem ending in a nadī; by āṭaś ca (Pā. Sū. 6-1-70 [as printed; for 6-1-90]), vṛddhi. mahī + ai: yaṇ substitution. By udāttayaṇo halpūrvāt (Pā. Sū. 6-1-17 [as printed; for 6-1-174]), after a yaṇ standing in place of an acute vowel and preceded by a consonant, a nadī ending and a case-ending from śas onwards are acute. So the case-ending is acute.

दृशेयं (dṛśeyaṃ) — its derivation is given under the previous mantra. Through the ca in mātaraṃ ca, dṛśeyaṃ is drawn in (anukṛṣṭa). Compared with that, the dṛśeyaṃ that stands in the mantra is the one uttered first. By cavāyoge prathamā (Pā. Sū. 8-1-59), a finite verb uttered first does not become unaccented when there is a connection with ca or vā; so the loss of all accents is blocked. ॥2॥

Gist: In the first Chandoma, in the Vaiśvadeva-śastra, the Savitṛ triplet abhi tvā deva savitaḥ takes the place of the sūkta (Āś. 8-9). It is also used at the kindling of fire by friction (Āś. 2-16; Ai. Brā. 1-16: "with abhi tvā deva savitaḥ he recites the Sāvitrī"), in the Pravargya (Āś. 4-7) and in the Grāvastotra (Āś. 5-12). Impelled by Agni, Śunaḥśepa prays to Savitṛ with this triplet (Ai. Brā. 7-16). "O ever-protecting divine Savitṛ, we ask you, the lord of the riches to be chosen, for a share of wealth from every side." The grammatical tail notes the accents of īśānam (śānac; root accent by tāsy anudāttet), vāryāṇām (ṇyat; initial acute by īḍavanda…), avan (vocative lowered) and bhāgam (ghañ, final acute by karṣātvataḥ).

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

सदावन् (sadāvan) — O you who always protect | सवितः देव (savitaḥ deva) — O god Savitṛ | वार्याणां (vāryāṇāṃ) — of the riches (things) to be desired | ईशानं (īśānaṃ) — (you) who are the lord | भागं (bhāgaṃ) — the desired wealth | अभि ईमहे (abhi īmahe) — we ask.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O god Savitṛ, who always protect, we ask you, the lord of wealth (lord of wealth or of desired things), for the wealth (we) desire.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> Divine and ever protecting Savitri, the lord of all that is desirable, we ask for wealth- [sic]

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The uses (viniyoga) of this ṛk are as follows:

When the mantras of the Vaiśvadeva-śastra are recited, the triplet (three ṛks) abhi tvā deva savitaḥ, addressed to Savitṛ, is to be recited as the mantra of the first Chandoma. This is set out in the sūtra abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-3) pretāṃ yajñasya śaṃbhuvā (Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-41-19) of the section atha chandomāḥ of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Āś. 8-9).

This ṛk abhi tvā is also to be recited at the start of a sacrifice, when fire is churned from the araṇis. This is set out by the sūtra abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-3) mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-13) in the section prātarvaiśvadevam (Āś. 2-16). On this point there is the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa sentence abhi tvā deva savitar iti sāvitrīm anvāha (Ai. Brā. 1-16).

It is also to be recited in the sacrifice called Pravargya; the sūtra abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-3) samī vatsaṃ na mātṛbhiḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-104-2) in the section athottaram of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra explains this (Āś. 4-7).

It is also to be recited at the Grāvastotra, that is, when the stones used for pressing the soma juice are praised; the sūtra madhyamasvareṇedaṃ savanam abhi tvā deva savitaḥ in the section grāvastut tells this (Āś. 5-12).

Śunaḥśepa, sent on by Prajāpati, approached Agni and praised him; then, urged by Agni to praise Savitṛ, he praises Savitṛ with the three ṛks beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ. In this ṛk and in the next, Śunaḥśepa prays to Savitṛ to give him wealth and the like. It seems strange that Śunaḥśepa, tied to the sacrificial post and facing death, leaves off praying for his release and prays that wealth and power be given to him, who is close to death.

ईशानं वार्याणां (īśānaṃ vāryāṇāṃ) — वरणीयानां धनानां स्वामिनं (varaṇīyānāṃ dhanānāṃ svāminaṃ): the lord of the wealth and power that all desire, that is, the one who gives wealth and power.

भागं (bhāgaṃ) — भजनीयं (bhajanīyaṃ): worthy to be worshipped.

The main sense of this ṛk may be this: “O god Savitṛ, you are the lord of the wealth and power that all desire, and you are worthy of worship. I pray to such a one as you.” Here Śunaḥśepa prays to Savitṛ, calling him the giver of what is desired and worthy of worship; it does not appear that he has asked to be given wealth. In this ṛk there is no word that indicates wealth. Although the commentator has explained the word vāryāṇāṃ as “riches desired by all”, one may freely say that here the thing desired is not wealth but release from death.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

वार्याणां (vāryāṇāṃ) — vṛñ saṃbhaktau. By ṛhalor ṇyat (Pā. Sū. 3-1-120 [as printed; for 3-1-124]), ṇyat comes after a root ending in ṛ or in a consonant; so ṇyat after the root vṛ: vṛ + ya. By aco ñṇiti (Pā. Sū. 7-2-115), vṛddhi ār comes for the ṛ: vārya. By īḍavandavṛśaṃsaduhāṃ ṇyataḥ (Pā. Sū. 5-1-214 [as printed; for 6-1-214]), the first syllable of the roots īḍ and the rest, when they end in the suffix ṇyat, is acute; so vārya has the initial acute.

भागं (bhāgaṃ) — bhaja sevāyām. By halaś ca (Pā. Sū. 3-3-121), ghañ comes after a root ending in a consonant: bhaj + a. By cajoḥ ku ghiṇṇyatoḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-3-52), kutva (j → g); upadhā-vṛddhi. By karṣātvato ghaño ’nta udāttaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-59 [as printed; for 6-1-159]), the last syllable of the root karṣ of the first class and of a root with ā ending in the suffix ghañ is acute; so the final acute comes. ॥3॥

Gist: "O Savitṛ, the desirable wealth that has been held in your hands, that wealth we ask for" (construed with the previous ṛk). Cit is for honour, hi for "well known"; that wealth deserves honour is known everywhere. Itthā śaśamānaḥ: praised in this way. To the objection that wealth seized by enemies is blamed and hated by all, he answers nidaḥ purā adveṣaḥ: before such blame, while it is still one's own, it is free from hatred; so it is praised as one's own. The grammatical tail covers itthā (thamu; ḍā for the case-ending), śaśamānaḥ (cānaś; final acute), nidaḥ (kvip; acute ablative), adveṣaḥ (bahuvrīhi; final acute by nañsubhyām) and dadhe (passive liṭ; suffix accent; no lowering because of yat).

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O god Savitṛ, (although wealth that is carried off and lost deserves blame,) before that it does not deserve hatred; (that wealth,) thus praised, which is in your hands (we ask for).

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> (We ask for) that wealth which has been retained in your hand and is so much praised against every envy or reproach

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The meaning of this ṛk is obscure. The intent does not fit properly.

चित् (cit) — the commentator says that this word is used in the sense of honour and that the word hi denotes "well known".

इत्था (itthā) — in this way; that is, everyone praises wealth as an excellent thing. Such भगः (bhagaḥ), that is, भजनीयो धनविशेषः (bhajanīyo dhanaviśeṣaḥ): the particular wealth that one longs for.

शशमानः (śaśamānaḥ) — शश प्लुतपतौ । शस्यमानः स्तूयमानः (śaśa plutapatau | śasyamānaḥ stūyamānaḥ) [sic: प्लुतपतौ for प्लुतगतौ]: being praised, being extolled.

पुरा निदः (purā nidaḥ) — what use these words have in this ṛk, and what meaning, is not at all clear. निदः (nidaḥ) — ṇidi kutsāyāṃ: being blamed. No one blames wealth; everyone praises it. But when enemies, that is foes, carry it off, people blame it: so the commentator explains. The intent does not fit properly.

भगः — भजनीयः धनविशेषः (bhagaḥ — bhajanīyaḥ dhanaviśeṣaḥ) — although the commentator has said "the particular wealth that is desired", here the thing desired should be understood to be not wealth but life-span, that is, life itself.

अद्वेषः — अविद्यमानो द्वेषो यस्मिन्सोऽद्वेषः । द्वेषवर्जितः (adveṣaḥ — avidyamāno dveṣo yasmin so 'dveṣaḥ | dveṣavarjitaḥ) — free from hatred, needed by all, praised by all, and so on.

In this ṛk Śunaḥśepa may have prayed to Savitṛ to give him the life that all desire.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

इत्था (itthā) — by idamas thamuḥ (Pā. Sū. 5-3-24), the suffix thamu comes after the word idam in the sense of manner: idam + tham. By etetau rathoḥ (Pā. Sū. 5-3-4), when a suffix beginning with r or th follows, idam is replaced by eta and it respectively; so the substitute it: it + tham = ittham. By taddhitaś cāsarvavibhaktiḥ (Pā. Sū. 1-1-38) this is an indeclinable, so the following case-ending would properly be dropped. Yet, by Vedic interchange, through supāṃ suluk (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the instrumental singular ṭā is replaced by ḍā; the ṭi am is dropped, giving itthā.

शशमानः (śaśamānaḥ) — śaśa plutagatau, here in the sense of praise. By tācchīlyavayovacanaśaktiṣu cānaś (Pā. Sū. 3-2-129), cānaś comes for laṭ in the sense of habit; the vikaraṇa śap: śaś + a + āna. By āne muk (Pā. Sū. 7-2-82), the muk augment. By citaḥ, the final acute. ॥4॥

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

भगभक्तस्य — धनेन संयुक्तस्य (bhagabhaktasya — dhanena saṃyuktasya) — possessed of wealth. Skandasvāmin explains this word as

> भगो देवः तेनापि सेवितस्य, भजनीयेन वा हविषा स्तोत्रेण वा सर्वमनुष्यैः सेवितस्य ॥
> bhago devaḥ tenāpi sevitasya, bhajanīyena vā haviṣā stotreṇa vā sarvamanuṣyaiḥ sevitasya ||

that is, "served by the deity named Bhaga; or served by all men with objects of worship such as worshipful oblations".

उत् अशेम — उत्कर्षेण व्याप्नुमः (ut aśema — utkarṣeṇa vyāpnumaḥ) — we pervade in a special way, that is, we obtain. तव अवसा (tava avasā) — by your protection we pervade, that is, we obtain your protection; the intent is: we desire your protection.

मूर्धानं रायः (mūrdhānaṃ rāyaḥ) — the excellence of wealth, that is, abundant wealth: "Plenty of riches."

आरभे, आरब्धुं (ārabhe, ārabdhuṃ) — to begin, to enjoy.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

भगभक्तस्य (bhagabhaktasya) — by ghañarthe kavidhānam, the suffix ka comes after the root bhaj, with kutva. Bhagena bhaktaḥ: an instrumental tatpuruṣa. The word bhaga is initial-acute, being in the vṛṣādi group. By śeṣanighāta, the final syllable, which is unaccented, becomes svarita. Even after compounding, by tṛtīyā karmaṇi (Pā. Sū. 6-2-48), when a word ending in kta in the passive sense follows, a word in the instrumental keeps its own accent. So, as an exception to the thāthādi accent, the first member keeps its own accent.

आरभे (ārabhe) — by kṛtyārthe tavaikenkenyatvanaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-14) and tayor eva kṛtyaktakhalarthāḥ, since the kṛtya suffixes are enjoined in the senses of bhāva and karman, bhāva and karman are the kṛtyārthas; in those senses the suffixes tavai, ken, kenya and tvan come. Here the suffix ken comes after the root rabh, preceded by āṅ. Only its e remains: ā + rabh + e = ārabhe. By the nit accent it is initial-acute. ॥5॥

Gist: Then, impelled by Savitṛ, Śunaḥśepa praised Varuṇa with the rest of this sūkta and with the next; the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (7-16) says Savitṛ told him "you are assigned to king Varuṇa; run to him", and he went to Varuṇa with the ṛks that follow. O Varuṇa, these visible birds (hawks and the like) flying up in the lofty sky have not attained your bodily strength, power or wrath; the ever-flowing waters have not attained your strength; the motions of the wind do not surpass your speed. The grammatical tail notes patayantaḥ (a curādi root in a; śatṛ; śap; guṇa and ay; the accent of ṇic), āpuḥ (reduplication; lengthening of the reduplicate by ata ādeḥ, Pā. 7-4-70; not lowered because it comes first in the sense), carantīḥ (pūrvasavarṇadīrgha by vā chandasi) and praminanti (śnā; loss of ā, Pā. 6-4-112; shortening, Pā. 7-3-81 as printed; the accent of pra lowered by Pā. 8-1-71; no lowering of the verb, by the connection with a yat-word).

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

(हे वरुण (he varuṇa) — O Varuṇa) | पतयन्तः (patayantaḥ) — flying | अमी (amī) — these (visible) | वयः चन (vayaḥ cana) — birds, too | ते (te) — your | क्षत्रं (kṣatraṃ) — bodily strength | नहि आपुः (nahi āpuḥ) — have not obtained | (तथा (tathā) — likewise) सहः (sahaḥ) — (your) prowess | न (आपुः) (na (āpuḥ)) — have not obtained | मन्युं (manyuṃ) — wrath | न (na) — have not obtained | अनिमिषं (animiṣaṃ) — always | चरन्तीः (carantīḥ) — flowing | आपः (āpaḥ) — waters | न (na) — have not obtained (your strength) | वातस्य (vātasya) — of the wind | ये (ye) — which motion | अभ्वं (abhvaṃ) — (your) speed | न प्रमिनन्ति (na praminanti) — do not injure (do not surpass).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Varuṇa, neither these birds that fly above nor the waters that always flow have obtained your bodily strength or your prowess. They cannot withstand your wrath. The motion of the wind too cannot surpass your speed. The wind has no strength like yours.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> O Varuna, these birds that are flying have not obtained your strength or your power; they are not able to endure your wrath; these waters that flow without interruption or the winds have not surpassed your speed.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The chief import — O Varuṇa, your power and might are boundless. Even the birds that fly in the sky have neither the swift-going and other qualities that you have, nor strength. They cannot stand against your wrath. Even the water that flows constantly, that is, the current of the river, and the wind that blows swiftly in the sky cannot match you in speed.

Śunaḥśepa praised Savitṛ with the three ṛks beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ; then, by the prompting of Savitṛ, pleased by that praise, he praises Varuṇa with the remaining ten ṛks of this sūkta and the twenty-one ṛks of the next sūkta, thirty-one ṛks in all. On this matter there is this sentence of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (Ai. Brā. 7-16):

> तं सवितोवाच वरुणाय वै राज्ञे नियुक्तोऽसि तमेवोपधावेति स वरुणं राजानमुपससारात उत्तराभिरेकत्रिंशता ॥
> taṃ savitovāca varuṇāya vai rājñe niyukto 'si tamevopadhāveti sa varuṇaṃ rājānamupasasārāta uttarābhirekatriṃśatā ||

(The quotation as printed here has एकत्रिंशता; the bhāṣya on p. 261 has एकविंशता.) The Brāhmaṇa says that Savitṛ told him: "You are assigned to king Varuṇa; run to him"; and he went to king Varuṇa with the ṛks that follow.

क्षत्रं — त्वदीयं शरीरबलं (kṣatraṃ — tvadīyaṃ śarīrabalaṃ) — your bodily strength; strength, power: "bodily strength."

सहः — त्वदीयं पराक्रमं (sahaḥ — tvadīyaṃ parākramaṃ) — your prowess, heroism: "valour, prowess &c."

मन्युं — कोपं (manyuṃ — kopaṃ) — wrath (the sense being that they have no power to face it).

अनिमिषं, चरन्तीः — सर्वदा चरन्तीः प्रवाहरूपेण गच्छन्तीः (animiṣaṃ, carantīḥ — sarvadā carantīḥ pravāharūpeṇa gacchantīḥ) — flowing at all times without break, in the form of a current: "flowing unceasingly."

न प्रमिनन्ति अभ्वं — वेगं न हिंसन्ति । न प्राप्नुवन्ति (na praminanti abhvaṃ — vegaṃ na hiṃsanti | na prāpnuvanti) — they cannot surpass your speed; that is, they cannot equal it.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

पतयन्तः (patayantaḥ) — the root is printed पत्लृ (patḷ, zoom-checked Oct 28) gatau, a root of the 10th class, ending in a; after it the svārthika ṇic, then laṭ, śatṛ and śap. pata + i + a + at; by ato lopaḥ the a of the root is dropped (the sūtra number is not printed). Guṇa and the ay-substitution give patay + at; pararūpa; nominative plural jas; because the ending is ugit, the augment num; then ruttva and visarga. Here śap is anudātta. Because (the root) ends in a in the upadeśa, at is anudātta, and the accent of ṇic remains.

आपुः (āpuḥ) — āplṛ vyāptau; liṭ; jhi; by parasmaipadānāṃ ṇalatususthalathusaṇalvamāḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-82) the jhi becomes us; reduplication: āp + āp + us; the p of the reduplicate is dropped; by hrasvaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-59) the reduplicate is shortened; by ata ādeḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-4-70), a long vowel comes to the first a of the reduplicate. Savarṇadīrgha; ruttva and visarga. Again, the verb āpuḥ is connected with each of the following sentences:

> वयश्चन क्षत्रं नापुः । वयश्चन सहो नापुः । वयश्चन ते मन्युं नापुः । अनिमिषं चरन्तीः इमा आपः ते क्षत्रं नापुः ॥
> vayaścana kṣatraṃ nāpuḥ | vayaścana saho nāpuḥ | vayaścana te manyuṃ nāpuḥ | animiṣaṃ carantīḥ imā āpaḥ te kṣatraṃ nāpuḥ ||

(The birds have not obtained your strength; the birds have not obtained your prowess; the birds have not obtained your wrath; these ever-flowing waters have not obtained your strength.) This āpuḥ is uttered first, before the āpuḥ connected with the later sentences; therefore, by cādilope vibhāṣā (Pā. Sū. 8-1-63), it does not become anudātta.

चरन्तीः (carantīḥ) — vā chandasi (Pā. Sū. 6-1-106): in the Veda, a pūrvasavarṇadīrgha comes optionally, where a long (vowel's) jas, or letters of the ic pratyāhāra, are present (as printed: dīrghada jas athavā ic pratyāhārada varṇagaḷu); hence pūrvasavarṇadīrgha.

प्रमिनन्ति (praminanti) — mīñ hiṃsāyāṃ, of the kryādi class; śnā is the vikaraṇa suffix. By śnābhyastayor ātaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-112), when a sārvadhātuka suffix that is kit or ṅit follows, the śnā suffix and the abhyasta (forms) lose their ā; so the ā of the śnā suffix is dropped. Laṭ, jhi, ant-substitution; the preverb pra: pra + mī + n + anti. By mīnāter nigame (Pā. Sū. 7-3-81, as printed), in the Veda, when a suffix that is śit follows, the root mīñ is shortened; hence the shortening. The suffix accent: by tiṅi codāttavati (Pā. Sū. 8-1-71), when a tiṅanta that has an udātta follows, the gati before it becomes anudātta; hence pra is anudātta. Because of ye vātasya there is a connection with a yat-word, and so the sarvānudātta does not come. ॥6॥

Gist: Varuṇa, of pure strength, standing in the rootless sky, holds on high a heap of lovely light; its rays (to be supplied) point downward, with their root above. That being so, may the vital breaths that make us know be placed within us (the bhāṣya ends the sentence with varaṇaṃ na bhaviṣyati, as printed). The grammatical tail notes the end-acute of abudhne (nañ + bahuvrīhi), stūpa (suffix pa with saṃprasāraṇa and ū; initial acute), nīcīnāḥ (kvin, loss of the nasal, kha by Pā. 5-4-8, īn; the vārttika as printed 7-1-2-1; Pā. 6-4-138, 6-3-138 are in the Kannada grammar), sthuḥ (loss of sic, Pā. 2-4-77; jus, Pā. 3-4-110 as printed; pararūpa, Pā. 6-1-96; no augment aṭ), asme (śe for the locative) and nihitāḥ (the gati keeps its accent), syuḥ (loss of a of śnas).

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

पूतदक्षः (pūtadakṣaḥ) — of pure strength | राजा (rājā) — shining | वरुणः (varuṇaḥ) — Varuṇa | अबुध्ने (abudhne) — in the rootless (antarikṣa, standing there) | वनस्य (vanasya) — of the praiseworthy light | स्तूपं (stūpaṃ) — the heap | ऊर्ध्वं (ūrdhvaṃ) — above | ददते (dadate) — makes (the rays of that light) | नीचीनाः (nīcīnāḥ) — facing downward | स्थुः (sthuḥ) — are | एषां (eṣāṃ) — of these rays | बुध्नं (budhnaṃ) — the root | उपरि (upari) — above (it is; this being so) | केतवः (ketavaḥ) — (for us) the supporting (vital breaths) | अस्मे (asme) — in us | अन्तर्निहिताः स्युः (antarnihitāḥ syuḥ) — become established.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Varuṇa, of pure strength and shining, stands in the supportless antarikṣa and is the support of a heap of light. The rays of this heap of light face downward, with their roots above. This being so, the vital breath, which is our support, is established in our body.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> The king Varuna of pure strength being in baseless firmament, sustains on high a heap of light, the rays of which are pointed downwards while their base is above; may they become concentrated in us as the source of existence.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The meaning of this ṛk is difficult; the sense does not fit properly. The chief import is this: the king Varuṇa shines in the antarikṣa, full of light. His shining rays go out from the antarikṣa downward and pervade this earth. Therefore the root-place of those rays is in the very antarikṣa where Varuṇa is; may their light, gathered together, be the support of our living beings (prāṇigaḷu) who live on the earth.

पूतदक्षः (pūtadakṣaḥ) — one of pure strength; "of pure strength, mighty."

राजा (rājā) — there is a custom of addressing Varuṇa as king. In the next ṛk too the word rājā is used: urum hi rājā varuṇaḥ. Although this word could be said to mean "shining", for Varuṇa the sense rājā, "lord, ruler", is the fitting one.

अबुध्ने (abudhne) — budhna means root. Abudhne means the rootless antarikṣa. Since the antarikṣa does not stand on the support of any object on the earth, the epithet "without root or support, without refuge" is fitting.

वनस्य — वननीयस्य तेजसः (vanasya — vananīyasya tejasaḥ) — light, or rays, have the nature of spreading all round; so vanasya means "of light". Although the singular vanasya is used here, it must be taken in the plural sense, tejasāṃ: this is the opinion of Skandasvāmin.

स्तूपं ददते — संघं दधते (stūpaṃ dadate — saṃghaṃ dadhate) — he bears a collection, a mass; that is, he is covered with light, and from him the light goes out on all sides and spreads everywhere.

नीचीनाः — अधोमुखाः (nīcīnāḥ — adhomukhāḥ) — facing downward: the rays in the antarikṣa go out facing downward and reach the earth below.

उपरि बुध्न एषां (upari budhna eṣāṃ) — the root-place of these rays is in the upper part, that is, in the antarikṣa near Varuṇa. Since Varuṇa is in the antarikṣa, the root-place of his rays also is in the antarikṣa itself.

अन्तर्निहिताः — स्थापिताः (antarnihitāḥ — sthāpitāḥ) — placed, established: "concentrated."

केतवः — प्रज्ञानानि प्राणाः (ketavaḥ — prajñānāni prāṇāḥ) — the vital breaths. The word ketu has many meanings, such as ray and act.

स्तूपः (stūpaḥ) — the root styai ṣṭyai śabdasaṃghātayoḥ (as printed). By styāyaḥ saṃprasāraṇam ūc ca (as printed; no number): the suffix pa after the root, and saṃprasāraṇa of the root's y, that is, i; and further ū comes as a substitute for the last letter. So when the suffix pa comes: styai + pa; by ādeca upadeśe 'śiti (Pā. Sū. 6-1-45) the ai becomes ā (the print has "vi" for "ai"); y → i: sti + ā + pa; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (no number) the earlier form: sti + ā. For the last letter i the substitute ū by stuvo dīrghaś ca (Uṇ. Sū. 3-305, zoom-checked), from ṣṭuñ stutau: after the root the suffix pa comes, which is nit; and in addition the root's u is lengthened; so, when pa and the like come after the root stu, the form is stūpa: this derivation is in the Uṇādi. In both views the nit accent, initial acute, results. The first is not seen in the Uṇādi pāda as it now exists; by the second way the sense given in the bhāṣya is not established.

नीचीनाः (nīcīnāḥ) — the root ni upasargapūrvaka añcu gatipūjanayoḥ; after it kvin by ṛtvikdadhṛk- (Pā. Sū. 3-2-59); by aniditāṃ hala upadhāyāḥ knīti (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24), when a suffix that is kit or ṅit follows, the penultimate nasal of a base ending in a consonant, without it, is lost: loss of n. ni + ac, yaṇ substitution: nyac. After this, by vibhāṣāñcer adikstriyām (Pā. Sū. 5-4-8), after a word ending in añc, leaving aside direction-words and the feminine, the suffix kha comes in the sense of the word itself: the suffix kha. For kha, īn by āyaneyīnīyiyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-2); by āyanādiṣūpadeśivadvacanam (Pā. Sū. 7-1-2-1 vā., as printed) the substitutes āyan and the rest of the suffixes phaḍha etc. come in the upadeśa stage itself; so īn comes in the upadeśa stage, and the ī becomes initial-acute by the suffix accent. By acaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-138) loss of the a; by cau (Pā. Sū. 6-3-138) lengthening of the ni: nīcīnāḥ, feminine nominative plural. ॥7॥

Gist: Varuṇa the king made the sun's path wide — hi means "well known", the width of the northern and southern courses being well known; and he did so in order that the sun might go in succession through rising and setting. Likewise in the footless sky he made [a path] for the feet to be set down (akaḥ: "he made the path"; the difference from the previous ṛk is that there it was the chariot's path, here it is the feet's). Or: for me, tied to the post, where I cannot go on the ground, let him make a means of setting the feet — release from the bond. And may he be the repeller, the one who turns away, of the enemy who pierces our heart. The grammatical tail notes: cakāra (the ā is udātta by the liṭ accent; no lowering after hi), panthām (ā in the accusative too by vyatyaya of Pā. 7-1-85; the Uṇādi suffix; initial acute by Pā. 6-1-199), anvetavai (suffix tavai; acute on first and last by Pā. 6-2-51), pādā (suluk), pratidhātave (suffix taven, by the same sūtra; the gati keeps its accent by Pā. 6-2-50), akaḥ (luṅ in the sense of loṭ; tip; loss of cli by Pā. 2-4-80; guṇa and raparatva; loss of tip by Pā. 6-1-68; augment aṭ), hṛdayāvidhaḥ (hṛñ + kayan, Uṇ. 4-100 as printed; vyadh + kvip; lengthening of the first member by Pā. 6-3-116; the accent of the second member).

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

वरुणः राजा (varuṇaḥ rājā) — King Varuṇa | सूर्याय (sūryāya) — for the sun | पंथां (panthāṃ) — the path of the sun | अन्वेतवा उ (anvetavā u) — only for the sake of attaining rising and setting | उरुं चकार (uruṃ cakāra) — made wide | हि (hi) — (it is well known, is it not, that the path of the sun is wide, in the form of the northern and southern courses) | अपदे (apade) — in the footless antarikṣa | पादा (pādā) — the feet | प्रतिधातवे (pratidhātave) — only for placing | अकः (akaḥ) — (the path) he made | (अथवा) अपदे ((athavā) apade) — (for me, bound to the post) on the earth, which it is impossible to move over | (पादा प्रतिधातवे) ((pādā pratidhātave)) — (for placing the feet, the means of release from the bond) | अकः (akaḥ) — let him make | उत (uta) — and | हृदयाविधश्चित् (hṛdayāvidhaś cit) — (the enemy) who torments (me) as well | अपवक्ता (apavaktā) — one who removes (may he be).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

King Varuṇa made wide, only for the sun's rising and setting, the path known as the southern and northern courses. He made a path in the antarikṣa, which has no support at all. May such a Varuṇa, for me who am bound, make a means of release from the bond, so that I may move over the earth, which is fit for moving; and may he remove my tormenting enemy.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> The King Varuna made wide the path of the sun by which to travel on his daily course; a path to traverse in pathless space; may he be the repeller of every foe that breaks the heart.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 269–270)

अन्वेतवै उ (anvetavai u) — so that it may be convenient for going in the rising and setting.

चकार सूर्याय पंथां (cakāra sūryāya panthāṃ) — he made the path (wide) so that it is convenient for the sun's going. How Varuṇa widens the path of the sun's going is not explained here in detail.

> पादरहितेऽन्तरिक्षे
> pādarahite 'ntarikṣe

the region where it is not possible to go on foot, that is, the antarikṣa. Or apade, yūpe baddhena mayā gantum aśakye bhūpradeśe:

> अपदे, यूपे बद्धेन मया गन्तुमशक्ये भूप्रदेशे
> apade, yūpe baddhena mayā gantumaśakye bhūpradeśe

the earthly region where I, tied to the sacrificial post (Śunaḥśepa), cannot go having freed myself; that is, so that it is convenient, having freed myself from the sacrificial post, to go to another place.

> पादौ प्रक्षेप्तुं, पादौ प्रति निधातुं
>
> pādau prakṣeptuṃ, pādau prati nidhātuṃ for placing the feet; for going on foot.

अकः (akaḥ) — (he made the path.)

अपवक्ता (apavaktā) — apavaditā:

> अपवदिता
>
> apavaditā

one who speaks evil words.

हृदयाविधः (hṛdayāvidhaḥ) — asmadīyavedhakasya śatroḥ:

> अस्मदीयवेधकस्य शत्रोः
> asmadīyavedhakasya śatroḥ of the enemy who hurts us. Or:

> अथवा परुषवचनायोग्यव्यवहारसमाचरणादिभिर्हृदयं यो विध्यति पीडयति स हृदयावित् तस्य
> athavā paruṣavacanāyogyavyavahārasamācaraṇādibhirhṛdayaṃ yo vidhyati pīḍayati sa hṛdayāvit tasya

one who afflicts the heart (the mind) by harsh words, improper dealings and conduct is called hṛdayāvidh; that is, of the enemy who causes pain to our mind, or of the man who causes pain to the heart (mind) by the practice of bad words, bad conduct, durvyāra [as printed; sense unclear] and the like. The intention is Varuṇa as the one who restrains such a man.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥

पन्थां (panthāṃ) — the root patḷṛ gatau (as printed); by pateḥ stha ca (Uṇ. Sū. 4-452, as printed): after the root pat the suffix in comes and t is replaced by th; so with in and th it becomes pathin. Accusative singular am: by pathimathyṛbhukṣām āt (Pā. Sū. 7-1-85) — when su follows, the last letter of pathi and the like becomes ā; this ā, enjoined in the nominative singular, comes by vyatyaya, because the language is Vedic, also in the accusative singular. pathi + ā + am: by ito 'tsarvanāmasthāne (Pā. Sū. 7-1-86) — when the five endings beginning with su follow, the i of pathi and the like becomes a: that is the substitute a. By tho nthaḥ (Pā. Sū. 7-1-87) — when the five su-endings are present, the th of pathi and mathi becomes nth;

when nth has come: panthā + am, single substitute of the earlier form. By pathimathoḥ sarvanāmasthāne (Pā. Sū. 6-1-199) — when the five su-endings are present, the first of pathi and mathi becomes udātta: so, setting aside the suffix accent, the udātta comes on the first syllable.

अकः (akaḥ) — ḍukṛñ karaṇe. By chandasi luṅlaṅliṭaḥ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6): showing the connection of the meanings of the roots, these suffixes come in the Veda in the three times. luṅ — tip — kṛ + ti; by mantre ghasa-hvaraṇaśavṛdahādvṛc-kagamijanibhyo leḥ (Pā. Sū. 2-4-80; the middle of the sūtra read with doubt [?]) — in a mantra the li following these [roots] takes luk; so the cli that comes by cli luṅ (as printed) takes luk; guṇa comes and it becomes ar. kar + ti: by halṅyābbhyaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-1-68) the ti, which is apṛkta, is dropped. Augment aṭ; r becomes visarga.

हृदयाविधः (hṛdayāvidhaḥ) — hṛñ haraṇe; by vṛhroḥ ṣugdukau (Uṇ. Sū. 4-540, as printed; the sūtra is read letter by letter) — after the roots vṛñ varaṇe and hṛñ the suffix kayan comes and, respectively, the augments ṣuk and duk; so after hṛ the suffix kayan comes, hṛ + aya, augment d: hṛd + aya = hṛdaya. After the root vyadh the suffix kvip; by nahivṛtivṛṣivyadhirucisahitaniṣu kvau (Pā. Sū. 6-3-116) the earlier member is lengthened; genitive singular. ॥8॥

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 272–273)

शतं सहस्रं भिषजः (śataṃ sahasraṃ bhiṣajaḥ) — in you are hundreds and thousands of medicines, that is, innumerable.

उर्वी गभीरा सुमतिः (urvī gabhīrā sumatiḥ) — may your thought toward us be most good and generous.

निर्ऋतिं (nirṛtiṃ) — Yāska in the Nirukta (reference printed "(२-५)"; not zoomed) gives the meaning "earth"; here the commentator gives "sin-goddess". On the ṛk mo ṣu ṇaḥ parāparā nirṛtir durhaṇā vadhīt ("let not the hard-to-slay Nirṛti, far and near, strike us" — mine and tentative) (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-38-6) the commentator explains nirṛti as rakṣojātidevatā. The sentence breaks here at bādhasva, and goes on p. 273.

> मो षु णः परापरा निर्ऋतिर्दुर्हणा वधीत्

The word bādhasva ("afflict") makes it impossible for the sense to be the earth or another inanimate thing, so the sense "sin-goddess of the rākṣasa class, evil-natured" is apt. In later Sanskrit nirṛti means a yātudhāna, a special rākṣasa; this Nirṛti is well known as one of the eight Dikpālas, lord of the south-west. In the Ṛgveda nirṛti is used where the senses duḥkha, pāpa, rākṣasa are intended. The print then lists Ṛ. Saṃ. references for nirṛtiḥ: 1-38-6; 5-41-17; 7-37-7; 10-10-11; 10-36-2; 10-59-1; and for nirṛtim: 1-24-9; 1-164-32; 6-74-2; 10-36-4; 10-76-4 (as printed; the flat-footed "2"-like glyph read as 7). The forms nirṛtīḥ, nirṛtīnām, nirṛteḥ, nirṛtyāḥ, nirṛtyai are said to occur in many ṛks.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (grammar page, as printed):

सुमतिष्टे (sumatiṣṭe) — "तादौ च कृतिनित्यतौ" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-50): since a kṛt (ktin) beginning with t follows, the first-member accent that would arise is set aside, and mankrin (Pā. Sū. 6-2-151, as read) gives the end-udātta of the second member.

युष्मत्तत्ततक्षुःष्वंतःपादं (yuṣmattattatakṣuḥṣvaṃtaḥpādaṃ) (Pā. Sū. 8-3-103): after yuṣmat, tat, tatakṣuḥ standing in the pāda, the s coming in place of a visarga becomes ṣ, by "विसर्जनीयस्य सः" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-34) s in place of visarga, which in the Saṃhitā yields ṣ.

मुमुग्धि (mumugdhi) — "मुचॢ मोक्षणे"; loṭ, sip, hi; muc + hi; the śa is dropped (ślu) by "बहुलं छंदसि" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-76, as read); "हुझल्भ्यो हेर्धिः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-101) gives dhi; muc + dhi; doubling after ślu (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10), "हलादिः शेषः"; hi is apit so ṅit, so no laghūpadha guṇa; "चोः कुः" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30); "झलां जश् झशि" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-53) gives g; mumugdhi. ॥९॥

As printed: the Pada has ये (the Saṃhitā य), ददृश्रे, विऽचाकशत्, चन्द्रऽमाः; नि. ३-२० (the Nirukta number as read; the digit before ० is the curled 2); आज्ञसेरसुक्, पा. ६-२-१४४; पा. ६-४-[?] ६ (the digit before the last is not clear); पा. ५-३-१३ (the first glyph is the same as in the Kannada grammar's ५-३-१०); पा. ७-२-१०४. The bhāṣya breaks at the foot of p. 274 inside किंशब्दादु-/त्तरस्य.

The Uṇādi number after चंद्रे मांजो डित् on p. 275 is left [?] (the Kannada grammar on p. 276 prints a different-looking number).

Gist: The seven ṛṣis, the stars seen by us at night, set high in the sky, are seen by night and go somewhere by day; these are Varuṇa's undisturbed acts, and by his command the moon shines brightly at night. Grammatical tail: nihitāsaḥ (asuk; gati keeps its accent, Pā. 6-2-144 as read), dadṛśre (liṭ, ire → re; the Pada/accent by vyatyaya; no lowering because of the relative), kuha (ku for kim by Pā. 7-2-104, ha for tral by Pā. 5-3-13), vicākaśat (kaś, yaṅ-luk, śatṛ; first syllable acute by "abhyastānām ādiḥ"), candramāḥ (suffix asi, Uṇ. 4-[?]; the first member keeps its accent as in dāsībhārādi).

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

अमी (amī) — (seen at night) these | ऋक्षाः (ṛkṣāḥ) — the Saptarṣi-maṇḍala (the stars) | उच्चाः (uccāḥ) — above (in the sky) | निहितासः (nihitāsaḥ) — placed | ये (ye) — which (those that are) | नक्तं (naktaṃ) — at night | ददृश्रे (dadṛśre) — are seen | दिवा (divā) — by day | कुह चित् (kuha cit) — somewhere | ईयुः (īyuḥ) — go | वरुणस्य (varuṇasya) — (of the king) Varuṇa's | व्रतानि (vratāni) — (the deeds in the form of showing the stars and so on) deeds | अदब्धानि (adabdhāni) — (that cannot be known by anyone) unobstructed (and by his command) | चंद्रमाः (candramāḥ) — the moon | नक्तं (naktaṃ) — at night | विचाकशत् (vicākaśat) — shines specially.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The stars seen in the antarikṣa are visible to everyone at night, and by day they go off somewhere; these are the unobstructed deeds of Varuṇa. By his command alone the moon too shines specially at night.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> These constellations placed on high which are visible by night and go elsewhere by day are the undisturbed acts of Varuna and by his commands, the moon moves and shines brightly by night.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

ऋक्षाः (ṛkṣāḥ) — the group of stars called the Saptarṣi-maṇḍala, seen in the sky at night. Ṛkṣāḥ means "stars" in general, yet here the bhāṣyakāra explains it as the seven ṛṣis.

अदब्धानि (adabdhāni) — the deeds of Varuṇa that no one can obstruct; irresistible.

व्रतानि (vratāni) — deeds, works, acts of daring.

ददृश्रे (dadṛśre) — dṛśir prekṣaṇe; liṭ, jh → ire c, doubling, abhyāsalopa (as printed); dadṛś + ire; "इरयोरे" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[?]6) gives re for ire in the Veda, hence dadṛśre. Because the relative ye is joined, there is no all-anudātta (nighāta); by the Vedic vyatyaya the first syllable is udātta rather than the final.

कुह (kuha) — after kim "सप्तम्यास्त्रल्" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-10) gives tral; "वा ह च छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-13) gives ha for tral optionally in the Veda, hence the ha-substitute (so in the Veda-bhāṣya). The grammarians take the sūtra vā ha ca to mean that after kim ending in the seventh-case sense the suffix ha, and by ca the suffixes at and tral, may come. In this option an independent suffix ha comes: kim + ha, and "कु तिहोः" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-104) gives ku for kim before a t-initial or h-initial case-ending. In the first option tral is lit, so the ha standing in its place is lit by sthānivadbhāva, and by "लिति" the syllable before the suffix is udātta; in the second option the accent is to be established as Vedic usage.

विचाकशत् (vicākaśat) — kaś gatiśāsanayoḥ; the verbs of the adādi class have many senses, so "shining" is taken here. Or kāś dīptau of the bhvādi; the shortening of the long ā is Vedic. Thus the form is not of ordinary usage. yaṅ, then luk; doubling by "सन्यङोः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-9); "हलादिः शेषः" drops the ś of the reduplicate; "अभ्यासे चर्च" makes the first k a c; ca + kaś, "दीर्घोऽकितः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-83) lengthens the final vowel of a non-kit reduplicate; as the form is parasmaipada, by "चर्करीतं परस्मैपदम् अदादि वच्चाप्रष्टव्यम्" śatṛ for laṭ, śap dropped; cākaśat; "अभ्यस्तानामादिः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-189) makes the initial of the reduplicated stem udātta; the compound with vi keeps this by the kṛdd-uttarapada accent.

चंद्रमाः (candramāḥ) — "चंद्रे मांजो डित्" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[?]): asi after māṅ (māj) with the upapada candra, which is ḍit; so as-ṭi-loss; candramas. By "कुरुगार्हपत… दासीभाराणां च" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-42, as read) the accent of the first member is retained. ॥१०॥

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

हे वरुण (he varuṇa) — O Varuṇa (I who am facing death) | ब्रह्मणा (brahmaṇā) — by excellent hymns | वंदमानः (vandamānaḥ) — as one who praises | त्वा (tvā) — you | तत् (tat) — that life | यामि (yāmi) — I beg | यजमानः (yajamānaḥ) — the sacrificer (also) | हविर्भिः (havirbhiḥ) — with oblations | तत् (tat) — that life | आ शास्ते (ā śāste) — begs (you also) | इह (iha) — in this rite | अहेळमानः (aheḷamānaḥ) — without disregard | बोधि (bodhi) — know (our wish) | उरु शंस (uru śaṃsa) — O one praised by many, O Varuṇa | नः (naḥ) — our | आयुः (āyuḥ) — life | मा प्रमोषीः (mā pramoṣīḥ) — do not take away.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Varuṇa, I who am facing death praise you with excellent hymns and ask for life. The sacrificer too asks for life with his oblations (pleasing you). You, praised by many, understand in this rite what we wish. Do not take away our life.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> With adoration I ask you for that life which the sacrificer solicits with oblations; Varuna, do not neglect us; praised by many, do not deprive us of our life.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 278–279)

In the animal sacrifice belonging to Varuṇa, when the vapā-homa of the animal with its eleven prayājas is performed, the two ṛks beginning तत्त्वा यामि (tattvā yāmi) are to be used as yājyā-mantras. This is determined in the Āśvalāyana-śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra तत्त्वा यामि ब्रह्मणा वंदमान इति द्वे अस्तभ्नाद्यां (tattvā yāmi brahmaṇā vandamāna iti dve astabhnādyāṃ) (Āś. 3-7, as read).

Page 279 — Rik 11: Special Topics (continued), grammar (beginning)

Likewise, in the Varuṇapraghāsa homa, when the havis is offered to Varuṇa, this ṛk तत्त्वा यामि (tattvā yāmi) is to be used as yājyā-mantra; this is explained in the section called पंचम्यां पौर्णमास्यां (pañcamyāṃ paurṇamāsyāṃ) by the sūtra इमं मे वरुण श्रुधि तत्त्वा यामि ब्रह्मणा वंदमानः (imaṃ me varuṇa śrudhi tattvā yāmi brahmaṇā vandamānaḥ) (Āś. 9-17, as read).

तत् (tat) — "that": here, the life needed by Śunaḥśepa, who is facing death.

तदाशास्ते यजमानः (tadāśāste yajamānaḥ) — the sacrificer who performs the yajña, together with [Śunaḥśepa], offering oblations, seeks only life from Varuṇa.

ब्रह्मणा (brahmaṇā) — the word brahma has the meanings anna (Ni. 3-[?]), dhana (Ni. 3-[?]) and stotra (the last digit of each reference is printed with a glyph I cannot settle as 8 or 9); though it has many meanings, here the meaning stotra is to be taken.

> अनादरमकुर्वन्
>
> anādaramakurvan

heḍa anādare: not disregarding, not neglecting.

उरुशंस (uruśaṃsa) — bahubhiḥ stutya:

> बहुभिः स्तुत्य
>
> bahubhiḥ stutya

one who is praised by many.

मा न आयुः प्रमोषीः (mā na āyuḥ pramoṣīḥ) — moṣīḥ, from muṣa steye; na moṣīḥ means "do not steal"; that is, do not make our life shorter, do not cut it off.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers as read at page width, not zoomed)

अहेळमानः (aheḷamānaḥ) — root heḍṛ anādare, bhvādi, anudāttet; "लटः शतृशानचौ" gives śānac; with śap it becomes heḷamāna; śap is pit and so anudātta; if śānac were ādyudātta, "तास्यनुदात्तेत्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) makes it anudātta, and then "धातोः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-162) leaves the final udātta of the root. After the nañ-compound, "नलोपो नञः" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-73) drops the n; as a tatpuruṣa with an indeclinable first member, "तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थ... " (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) gives the first member's accent: aheḷamānaḥ is ādyudātta.

मोषीः (moṣīḥ) — root muṣa steye, kryādi; "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) gives luṅ in the sense of loṭ; sip; "इतश्च" drops the i of sip; "च्लि लुङि" gives cli, and "च्लेः सिच्" turns it into sic; being val-initial it takes iṭ; "अस्ति सिचोऽपृक्ते" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-96, as read) gives īṭ to the single-letter ending; "वदव्रजहलन्तस्याचः" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-3) would give vṛddhi to the u of the consonant-final muṣ, but "नेटि" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-4) forbids vṛddhi before iṭ-initial sic; then guṇa of the penultimate; "इट ईटि" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-28, as read) drops sic; the s becomes ru and visarga; by "बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्योगेऽपि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) there is no aṭ augment, whether or not māṅ is attached (here māṅ is connected, so no aṭ for the root); the form is moṣīḥ, with nighāta accent.

‖ Prati-padārthaḥ ‖ (continued)

गृभीतः (gṛbhītaḥ) — seized (bound to the post) | शुनःशेपः (śunaḥśepaḥ) — (this man) called Śunaḥśepa | यं (yaṃ) — which | वरुणं (varuṇaṃ) — Varuṇa | अह्वत् (ahvat) — has called | सः वरुणः राजा (saḥ varuṇaḥ rājā) — that king Varuṇa | अस्मान् (asmān) — us (Śunaḥśepa) | मुमोक्तु (mumoktu) — (from bondage) may release.

‖ Bhāvārthaḥ ‖

Those who know tell me, Śunaḥśepa, that I should do Varuṇa's praise by night and by day. My mind too makes this very matter clear. May Varuṇa, called by me, Śunaḥśepa, who am bound, release me.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> This (your praise) is what they have told me at night, this in the day-time; this knowledge speaks to my heart; may that king Varuna whom Sunashepa, invoked when fettered liberate us.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

तत् इत् (tat it) — that very thing, that very matter of Varuṇa.

तत् अयं केतः हृद आ वि चष्टे (tat ayaṃ ketaḥ hṛda ā vi caṣṭe) — this matter is fixed in my mind. Ketaḥ here means a particular kind of knowledge, awareness.

शुनःशेपः यं अह्वत् सः (śunaḥśepaḥ yaṃ ahvat saḥ) — that Varuṇa whom I, the one named Śunaḥśepa, am calling.

गृभीतः (gṛbhītaḥ) — gṛhītaḥ; I, Śunaḥśepa, seized in order to be bound to the sacrificial post.

अस्मान् राजा वरुणः मुमोक्तु (asmān rājā varuṇaḥ mumoktu) — may King Varuṇa, called by me, free us (me) from this bondage of the sacrificial post, release us.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar page, noted briefly)

मह्यम् (mahyam) — after the word asmad, when the fourth case singular is intended, the suffix ṅe; "ङेप्रथमयोरम्" gives am for it (the print gives the sūtra by name, no number); "तुभ्यमह्यौ ङयि" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-95, as read) gives, in the fourth singular, the substitute mahya for the stem asmat up to its ma (as the print says: maparyantakke); "शेषे लोपः" drops the remaining ad; mahya + am, "अमि पूर्वः" gives the earlier form: mahyam.

मह्यम् (mahyam) (end) — "ङयि च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-2[?]): in the fourth case singular the words yuṣmad and asmad take the ādyudātta accent; hence the ādyudātta accent here.

आहुः (āhuḥ) — root brūñ vyaktāyāṃ vāci, adādi; laṭ, third person plural, parasmaipada jhi. By "ब्रुवः पंचानामादित आहो ब्रुवः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-84) the first five parasmaipada endings of brū in the laṭ take the ṇal etc. substitutes optionally and the root takes āh; so jhi becomes us; āh + us, and by "उस्यपदांतात्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-96) the following form remains: āhuḥ.

हृदः (hṛdaḥ) — the ablative of hṛdaya. hṛdaya + ṅasi: by "पद्दन्नोमास्हृ-…" (as printed) (Pā. Sū. 6-1-63) hṛd is substituted for hṛdaya; ruttva and visarga give hṛdaḥ. By "ऊडिदंपदादि-…" (as printed) (Pā. Sū. 6-1-1[?]) the ablative ending, being anudātta, is set aside and the udātta accent comes; the six substitutions of the "padda…" sūtra are to be taken together, so hṛdaḥ is a word with final udātta.

शुनःशेपः (śunaḥśepaḥ) — śuna iva śepo yasya saḥ (one whose organ is like a dog's), śunaḥśepaḥ. Here the case-ending would be dropped by "सुपो धातुप्रातिपदिकयोः"; but by "शुनः शेपपुच्छलांगूलेषु संज्ञायां षष्ठ्या अलुग्वक्तव्यः" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[?]) the genitive of śvan does not drop before the three words śepa etc. in a compound that is a name; śunaḥśepaḥ is here a person's name, so it holds. As a bahuvrīhi the first member's accent would come by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्", but by "उभे वनस्पत्यादिषु युगपत्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-140, as read) both members of the compounds in the vanaspati group keep their own accent at the same time; this word belongs to that group, so both members keep their accent, and two udāttas are heard here.

अह्वत् (ahvat) — root hveñ spardhāyām, bhvādi, luṅ, third person singular tip; "इतश्च" drops the i; for the cli of luṅ, "लिपिसिचिह्वश्च" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-5[?], printed ३-१-५३ as read) gives aṅ; since a suffix beginning with a vowel with ṅ follows, "आतो लोप इटि च" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-64) with "आदेच" (as printed; the sūtra is not otherwise named) drops the final ā of the root; the luṅ-marked aṭ augment comes, and ahvat results.

अह्वत् (ahvat) (end) — the aṭ augment is prescribed as udātta, so the word is ādyudātta; because yat (the relative yam) is connected, "यद्वृत्तयोगान्नित्यं" gives no nighāta accent.

गृभीतः (gṛbhītaḥ) — root graha upādāne, kryādi; the suffix kta in the passive sense; being kit, "ग्रहिज्या… " gives saṃprasāraṇa; the suffix being val-initial, the iṭ augment comes, and "ग्रहोऽलिटि दीर्घः" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-37, as read) lengthens the iṭ after the root graha when what follows is not liṭ; with gṛhīta, "हृग्रहोर्भश्छन्दसि" gives bha for ha: gṛbhītaḥ.

सो अस्मान् (so asmān) — "प्रकृत्यान्तःपादमव्यपरे" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-115, as read): a e or o in the middle of the pāda of a ṛk, when a short a follows, keeps its form, so no pūrvarūpa etc. comes here.

मुमोक्तु (mumoktu) — root mucḷ mokṣaṇe, tudādi; loṭ, third person singular; "एरुः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-86, as read) gives tu for the i-ending; "तुदादिभ्यः शः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77, as read) would give śa, but "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-76) makes it śluk; the root is then reduplicated and "हलादिः शेषः" applies; laghūpadha guṇa and kutva give mumoktu.

गृभीतः (gṛbhītaḥ) — seized in order to be bound to the sacrificial post.

आदित्यं (ādityaṃ) — aditeḥ putraṃ ādityaṃ; since Aditi, the mother of the gods, is his mother, Varuṇa is praised here by the word āditya.

द्रुपदेषु (drupadeṣu) — drumamayeṣu, dārumayeṣu; belonging to a tree or to wood, that is, wooden pillars. The print adds in English: "Wooden pillar or post to which the animal to be sacrificed is tied before being killed." In explaining the ṛk

(Ṛ. अव ससृज्यात् (ava sasṛjyāt) — avasṛṣṭaṃ, bandhanād vimuktaṃ karotu:

अवसृष्टं, बन्धनाद्विमुक्तं करोतु

अदब्धः (adabdhaḥ) — dasbhu dambhe; kenāpy ahiṃsitaḥ:

kenāpyahiṃsitaḥ

one who cannot be harmed by anyone, unobstructed.

पाशान् (pāśān) — the ropes with which Śunaḥśepa was tied firmly to the sacrificial post.

‖ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ‖ (grammar page, noted briefly; the sūtra numbers were zoom-checked from the print on Oct 28)

त्रिषु (triṣu) — locative plural of tri. By "षट्त्रिचतुर्भ्यो हलादिः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-179) a case-ending beginning with a consonant, standing after ṣaṭ and the three words tri, catur etc., is udātta; so here the ending's anudātta accent is set aside and the ending is udātta. In the Saṃhitā text, with triṣu + ādityam, the yaṇ substitution comes. triṣu is an antodātta word. By "उदात्तस्वरितयोर्यणः स्वरितोऽनुदात्तस्य" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) an anudātta that follows a yaṇ standing in the place of an udātta or a svarita becomes svarita; so in triṣvādityam, since the yaṇ stands in the place of an udātta, the ā becomes svarita.

सस्सृज्यात् (sasṛjyāt) (the heading is printed सस्सृज्यात्, as in the Saṃhitā) — root sṛja visarge, tudādi. By "विधिनिमंत्रण-..." (Pā. Sū. 3-3-161) liṅ comes in the sense of a prayer. If the śa vikaraṇa is attained, by "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-10, as printed) the i of "tippina" (as printed tippina ikārakke; the context, with śluḥ in the next sentence, suggests śap, but the printed word is kept) is dropped. When śluḥ follows, by "श्लौ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) the root is doubled. By "यासुट् परस्मैपदेषूदात्तो ङिच्च" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-103) the liṅ takes the yāsuṭ augment. If the retention of the initial consonant in the reduplicate and the at-substitution (uradatva, the printed word is split across a line) are attained, the form sasṛjyāt results. Because it follows a verb (printed atijanta, probably tiṅanta: my reading, tentative), the nighāta (all-anudātta) accent comes.

विद्वान् (vidvān) — root vida jñāne, adādi. By "लटः शतृशानचौ... " (Pā. Sū. 2-2-124 as printed: the first glyph is the round-headed 2, not the ३ 3-glyph used for 3-3-161 on the same page) śatṛ comes. For it, by "विदेः शतुर्वसुः" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-36) vasu is optionally substituted after the root vid; hence the vasu substitution; vidvas becomes a word ending in s. When the nominative singular su follows, by "उगिदचां सर्वनामस्थानेऽधातोः" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) the num augment comes, since vasu is ugit; vidvans + s. By "हल्ङ्यादि... " (the sūtra is named in short; no number printed) the su is dropped; by the dropping of a consonant-cluster's last member the final s is dropped; by "अत्वसन्तस्य" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-14) the penultimate vowel is lengthened; the form is vidvān. In the Saṃhitā text, by "दीर्घादटि समानपादे" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-9) the n after a long vowel becomes ru; next comes adabdhaḥ, which begins with a vowel, so the ru gets a y substitution, and since aś follows, that is dropped. By "आतोऽटि नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-3) the preceding ā, in the ru-stage, takes the anunāsika; the form is vidvā̃.

अदब्धः (adabdhaḥ) — root dambhu dambhe, svādi; a root with n as penultimate. When kta follows, by "अनिदितां हल उपधायाः क्ङिति" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24; the print quotes it as "अनिदितां हल") the penultimate n is dropped before a kit suffix; dabh + ta.

By "झषस्तथोर्धोऽधः" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-40) the t and th after a jhaṣ become dh; so here the t after the bh becomes dh. By "झलां जश् झशि" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-53) when a jhaś follows, the bh becomes jaś, that is b. The form is dabdhaḥ; in the nañ-tatpuruṣa it is adabdhaḥ. By "तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थ... " (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) the indeclinable first member keeps its own accent (pūrvapada-prakṛti-svara). So adabdhaḥ is an ādyudātta word.

> Varuna, we propitiate your anger with prostrations, with sacrifices, with oblations; averter of misfortunes and the wise, be present amongst us and slacken the sins we have committed.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 290) At the avabhṛtha, the bathing rite at the close of the sacrifice, when an oblation is offered to Varuṇa, the ṛk ava te heḷaḥ and the next ṛk udutamam are the yājyā and anuvākyā; this is set out in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section patnīsaṃyājaiś caritvā, by the sūtra ava te heḷo varuṇa namobhir iti dve (Ā. 6-13).

हेळः (heḷaḥ) — krodham, anger; kopa. Since the word heḷaḥ is read among the names of anger beginning heḷaḥ, haraḥ (the printed count is "ಹನ್ನೆಂದು", clearly so on a zoom; probably a misprint for ಹನ್ನೊಂದು "eleven": mine and tentative), heḷaḥ means anger (Ni. 3-9).

अव ईमहे (ava īmahe) — avanayāmaḥ: we do away with, we pacify.

नमोभिः (namobhiḥ) — with salutations; यज्ञेभिः (yajñebhiḥ) — with sacrificial rites; हविर्भिः (havirbhiḥ) — by offering oblations we appease your anger: this is the sense.

क्षयन् (kṣayan) — nivasan, dwelling; kṣi nivāsagatyoḥ; kṣaya is a dwelling-place (Ni. 8-18).

प्रचेतः (pracetaḥ) — one who knows well, wise.

शिश्रथः (śiśrathaḥ) — śrath daurbalye; śrathitāni śithilāni; make [them] slack, remove them.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (pp. 290–291; grammar noted briefly; the numbers were read from strips at page width except where marked)

हेळः (heḷaḥ) — root heḍṛ anādare, bhvādi; by "सर्वधातुभ्योऽसुन्" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-6-28, as printed: ७-६-७७, zoom-read) the suffix asun; heḷas, a neuter stem ending in s; since asun is nit, by "ञ्नित्यादिर्नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) the form is initially udātta.

यज्ञेभिः (yajñebhiḥ) — the third plural takes bhis; after a stem in a the ais substitute (aisādeśa) would be attained, but by "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-10) it is optional in the Veda, so it does not come here; by "बहुवचने झल्येत्" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-103) the stem's a becomes e; with ruttva and visarga the form is yajñebhiḥ.

ईमहे (īmahe) — root īj gatau, divādi; by "टित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) the ṭi of the laṭ first-person plural ending mahiṅ becomes e; śyan would come as vikaraṇa but by "बहुलं छन्दसि" it takes luk; īmahe.

क्षयन् (kṣayan) — root kṣi nivāsagatyoḥ, tudādi; śatṛ for the laṭ of present sense; śap for the vikaraṇa by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" (vyatyayo bahulam; no number printed).

(kṣayan, continued) Guṇa of the root; kṣayat; in the vocative the num augment, then the loss of the hal ending and of the final consonant of the conjunct give kṣayan. By "आमन्त्रितस्य च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-198) it is initially udātta.

असुर (asura) — root asu kṣepaṇe, divādi; by "असेरुरन्" (Uṇ. Sū. 1-42, as printed on p. 291; the bhāṣya on p. 289 prints 1-43) the suffix uran; the vocative asura; by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-19) the nighāta accent.

शिश्रथः (śiśrathaḥ) — root śrath daurbalye, curādi, ending in a; the svārthika ṇic; before ṇic by "अतो लोपः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-48) the root's a is dropped; śrathi has the name dhātu by "सनाद्यन्ता धातवः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-32); then by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) luṅ in the sense of the imperative; the second person singular sip; "इतश्च" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-100) drops the i; cli attained in the luṅ, and by "णिश्रिद्रुस्रुभ्यः कर्तरि चङ्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-48) caṅ replaces it after a ṇyanta of these roots; by "णेरनिटि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51) the ṇi is dropped; śrath + a + s is doubled by "चङि" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-11); by "हलादिः शेषः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) only the first consonant remains; because the ṇic-conditioned a has been dropped, no further operation is attained; "सन्वल्लघुनि चङ् परे" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-93) would give san-like doubling but, the a having been dropped, it does not apply; yet by "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-78) the reduplicate takes i; the suffix s becomes visarga; śiśrathaḥ. By

"बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्योगेऽपि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come; being a tiṅanta it takes the nighāta accent.

उत्तमं, अधमं मध्यमं (uttamaṃ, adhamaṃ madhyamaṃ) — release the upper, lower and middle ropes or bonds. When the animal is tied to the sacrificial post, so that it does not slip away and does not struggle while it is being killed, the upper part of its body (that is, the neck), the lower part (the feet) and the middle part (the belly) are tied tight with rope; the ṛṣi points to these three kinds of rope-binding places, asking that they be loosened.

अनागसः (anāgasaḥ) — aparādharahitāḥ: without faults, without sin, and so on.

उत्तमम् (uttamam) — tamap in the superlative sense; as a pit suffix it is anudātta by "अनुदात्तौ सुप्पितौ" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4); against this, the uñchādi list (printed ৩৩০ঌ৯) reads "उत्तमशब्धत्तमौ सर्वत्र" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-160 ग, i.e. a gaṇa sūtra), so the word is end-acute.

अधमम् (adhamam) — "अवद्यावमाधमार्वरेफाः कुत्सिते" (Uṇ. Sū. 5-732, as printed: ৯-২৯৩, the 7 flat-footed, the 3 ৭-shaped, the 2 curled; the bhāṣya gives उ. ५-५४): av rakṣaṇe + amac, dh for v; end-acute by "चितः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163); since roots have many senses, the sense here is not 'to protect'.

श्रथाय (śrathāya) — śratha daurbalye, curādi; loṭ second singular sip → hi; śap; hi dropped by "अतो हेः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105); guṇa and ay of the ṇic give śrathaya; lengthened in the Saṃhitā as a Vedic licence; the tiṅanta takes the nighāta accent.

तव (tava) — genitive singular of yuṣmad; initially acute by "युष्मदस्मदोर्ङसि" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-211).

अनागसः (anāgasaḥ) — na vidyate āgaḥ eṣāṃ te: those who have no offence. The n of nañ is dropped and the following vowel takes the nuṭ augment; as a bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its accent by "बहुव्रीहौ प्र-" (Pā. 6-2-1), so the word is initially acute; by vyatyaya the end-acute of "नञ्सुभ्याम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) does not come. Or: āgas ends in s, so by "अस्मायामेधास्रजो विनिः" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-121; the print's heading reads ಅಸ್ಮಾ ಯಾಮೇಧಾ ಸೃಜೋ ವಿನಿಃ) vini comes in the possessive sense, and it is dropped by "विन्मतोर्लुक्" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-5, as printed: ೫-೩-೫; the bhāṣya on p. 293 prints ५-३-६५); āgas remains; with nañ it is a tatpuruṣa, and by "तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थ-" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) the indeclinable first member keeps its accent: initially acute.

Gist: Yac cid is the second sūkta, of twenty-one ṛks (so the Anukramaṇī: yac cit tv ekā); by the general rules the ṛṣi is Śunaḥśepa and the metre Gāyatrī, and the deity, by the rule cited (Anukr. 12-3), Varuṇa. Its use was stated in the Śunaḥśepa legend; its special use: in the Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, in the hotraka-śastra, for the insertion connected with the stoma, as Āś. 7-5 lays down: "the Maitrāvaruṇa should insert this Varuṇa triplet yac cid dhi te viśa".

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ Yac cid dhi te is the second sūkta in the sixth anuvāka. It has twenty-one ṛks. The Anukramaṇikā also says that the sūkta yac cit has twenty-one ṛks. Śunaḥśepa is the ṛṣi of this sūkta; the metre is Gāyatrī. As said before, the deity of this sūkta is Varuṇa alone. Its application is when the Śaunaḥśepa, that is the Śunaḥśepa legend, is told. Besides, it has a special application: in the sacrifice called Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, when the hotraka-śastra mantras are recited, the priest called Maitrāvaruṇa must recite this sūkta for the stoma-āvāpa; so there is the sūtra yac cid dhi te viśa iti vāruṇam etasya tṛcam āvapeta maitrāvaruṇaḥ in the section abhiplavapṛṣṭhyāhāni of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra (Ā. 7-5).

Gist: O Varuṇa, as people in the world are at times careless, so we too, day by day, mar whatever rite of yours we perform; make that rite complete by removing the lapse.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ वरुण (varuṇa) — O god Varuṇa | विशः यथा (viśaḥ yathā) — as (the people of the world) (at times) make mistakes, we, being mere humans, (we too) | ते (te) — your (meant for you) | यच्चिद्धि (yaccid dhi) — whatever | व्रतं (vrataṃ) — the rite (in the rite) | द्यविद्यवि (dyavidyavi) — every day | प्र मिनीमसि (pra minīmasi) — we err through ignorance (set right that deficiency).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O god Varuṇa, as the people of the world by nature err at times, so we too: if every day we cause some deficiency through ignorance in the rite performed for you, set it right and make our rite be accomplished in full.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> O Varuna, inasmuch as all people commit errors so do we; daily we cause imperfections to be made in your worships.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

विशः यथा (viśaḥ yathā) — as people, or common folk, make mistakes, so do we. That is natural.

मिनीमसि (minīmasi) — pramādena hiṃsitavantaḥ: through carelessness, unknowingly, not deliberately, we err; that is, in the rite of praising you we cause some deficiency.

द्यविद्यवि (dyavidyavi) — every day.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; every number zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

यथा (yathā) — by "प्रकारवचने थाल्" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-23) thāl after yad; by "प्राग्दिशो विभक्तिः" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-1) it is called vibhakti, so by "त्यदादीनामः" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-102) the stem takes a; yathā. "लिति" would make it initially acute, but by "यथेति पादान्ते" (Phi. Sū. 85, as printed here; the bhāṣya gives फि. ४-१७) it stands at the end of the pāda and is wholly anudātta.

मिनीमसि (minīmasi) — mīñ hiṃsāyām, kryādi; first plural mas, augment i by "इदन्तो मसि" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-46); śnā by "क्र्यादिभ्यः श्ना" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-81); in mīnāmasi the ā of śnā becomes ī by "ई हल्यघोः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-113); the root's ī is shortened in the Veda before a śit suffix by "मीनातेर्निगमे" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-81): minīmasi. The suffix's accent would set aside the root's, and the śnā, coming last, would set aside that, but by "सतिशिष्टस्वरबलीयस्त्वं अन्यत्र विकरणेभ्यः" (Vā. 3650) this priority does not hold for vikaraṇas, so the tiṅ's accent, being sati-śiṣṭa, is initially acute: the a after m is udātta. Because the yad-word (yathā) stands before, by "यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66; the print quotes it as ಯದ್ವೃತ್ತಯೋಗಾನ್ನಿತ್ಯಂ) the nighāta of the verb is barred. ॥१॥ (A printed ornament follows.)

Gist: O Varuṇa, do not hand us over to the deadly stroke of you who slay the sinner who slights you, nor to the wrath of you when angered.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (वरुण) ((varuṇa)) — (O Varuṇa) | जिहीळानस्य (jihīḷānasya) — of one who shows (you) disrespect | हत्नवे (hatnave) — your (stroke) that destroys | वधाय (vadhāya) — to the destruction | नः (naḥ) — us | मा रीरधः (mā rīradhaḥ) — do not make objects | हृणानस्य (hṛṇānasya) — of you when angry | मन्यवे (manyave) — to the wrath too | मा (mā) — do not make (us objects).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O god Varuṇa, you surely destroy those who show you disrespect; but do not make us objects of that destruction. Do not make us the objects of the cruel wrath of you when angry.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> Make us not the objects of death through your wrath, though your wrath is directed towards a person who neglects (to worship) you.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

वधाय हत्नवे (vadhāya hatnave) — to the act of your killing them in order to punish the sinners (do not give us up); the two words convey one meaning. Yet the sense of the words is: to the act of slaying (destruction), which is the punishment of you who are ready to destroy the sinners or the wicked.

जिहीळानस्य (jihīḷānasya) — anādaraṃ kṛtavataḥ: of one who has slighted you (to the slaying).

हृणानस्य (hṛṇānasya) — hṛṇīyamānasya kruddhasya ruṣṭasya: of you, who are angry.

Chief sense — O Varuṇa, you destroy the wicked who behave towards you with contempt; when destroying the wicked you are full of wrath. Do not give us up to such wrath; be gracious, so that we do not become objects of your wrath.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read, v3a)

वधाय (vadhāya) — hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ, adādi; by "हनश्च वधः" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-76) ap in the abstract sense after han with no prefix, and the stem becomes vadha; dative singular vadhāya. "उंछादीनां च"

(Pā. Sū. 6-1-160): since it is read in the uñchādi list it is end-acute; vadhāya is a word with the udātta in the middle.

हत्नवे (hatnave) — the same root with knu by "कृहनिभ्यां क्नुः" (Uṇ. Sū. 3-310, as printed in the Kannada grammar's continuous Uṇādi numbering; the bhāṣya gives उ. ३-३०); the root's n becomes t; hatnu; dative singular; the case-ending being anudātta, the suffix accent stands.

रीरधः (rīradhaḥ) — rādha sādha saṃsiddhau, svādi; causative ṇic, then luṅ; caṅ for cli by "णिश्रिद्रु-" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-48); shortening of the penultimate before ṇi followed by caṅ by "णौ चङ्युप-" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-1); doubling by "चङि" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-11); halādiśeṣa and shortening in the reduplicate; second singular radh + i + a + s; ṇi dropped by "णेरनिटि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51); san-like treatment by "सन्वल्लघुनि-" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-93), so i for the reduplicate's a by "सन्यतः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-79), lengthened by "दीर्घो लघोः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-94); with māṅ the augment aṭ does not come by "न माङ्योगे" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-74); rīradhaḥ.

हृणानस्य (hṛṇānasya) — hṛṇīṅ roṣaṇe lajjāyāṃ ca, kaṇḍvādi; śānac in the sense of laṭ; by "पृषोदरादीनि यथोपदिष्टम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-109), being in the pṛṣodarādi list, a letter is dropped and the form is hṛṇāna, so the svārthika yak does not come; genitive singular; being cit it is end-acute, the ā after n is udātta. ॥२॥

Gist: O Varuṇa, for our happiness we bind (win over) your mind with praises, as a chariot-owner soothes his horse worn out by a long journey with fodder and the like.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ वरुण (varuṇa) — O Varuṇa | रथीः (rathīḥ) — the owner of the chariot (the charioteer) | संदितं (saṃditaṃ) — (by a long journey) worn out | अश्वं न (aśvaṃ na) — as (one) soothes the horse (by giving grass, water and so on) (so we too) | मृळीकाय (mṛḷīkāya) — for our happiness | ते (te) — your | मनः (manaḥ) — mind | गीर्भिः (gīrbhiḥ) — with words of praise | वि सीमहि (vi sīmahi) — we satisfy.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O Varuṇa, as a charioteer soothes his tired horse by giving it water and putting down grass, so we too, for our happiness, satisfy your mind with our words of praise.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> O Varuna, We soothe your mind by our praises for our good as a charioteer soothes (or unties) his weary horse.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

मृळीकाय (mṛḷīkāya) — for happiness.

रथीः अश्वं न संदितं (rathīḥ aśvaṃ na saṃditaṃ) — as the charioteer of a chariot soothes his horse that has come in tired by gently patting it with his hand, so we satisfy Varuṇa with words in the form of praise; that is, we make him pleased.

संदितं (saṃditaṃ) — do avakhaṇḍane; samyak khaṇḍitaṃ dūragamanena śrāntaṃ: much fatigued, worn out by a long journey, and so on.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read at 450 dpi, v3a)

रथीः (rathīḥ) — ratha asya asti iti rathīḥ; the suffix ī in the possessive sense; nominative singular.

संदितम् (saṃditam) — do avakhaṇḍane, divādi, with sam; kta in the past sense by "निष्ठा" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-102); by "द्यतिस्यतिमास्थामित्ति किति" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-40) these roots take i as final before a t-initial kit suffix: saṃdita; accusative singular; by "गतिरनन्तरः" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-49) the prefix keeps its accent: initially acute.

गीर्भिः (gīrbhiḥ) — gir with bhis: the i lengthened by "र्वोरुपधाया दीर्घ इकः" (named in short, no number); by "सावेकाचः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) the bhis after a monosyllable is udātta.

सीमहि (sīmahi) — ṣivu tantusantāne, divādi; s for the initial ṣ; though parasmaipadin it takes the ātmanepada by vyatyaya; first plural; the śyan takes luk by "बहुलं छन्दसि"; the penultimate is lengthened (stem in v), and the v is dropped before a val by "लोपो व्योर्वलि" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-66). Or: ṣiñ bandhane, svādi, ubhayapadin; luk of the śnu by "बहुलं छन्दसि"; the lengthening is Vedic; sīmahi; the tiṅanta takes the nighāta accent. ॥३॥

Gist: O Varuṇa, my thoughts, free of anger, fly out, never to return, towards a life rich in wealth, as birds go to their nests.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ वरुण (varuṇa) — O Varuṇa | मे (me) — my (of me, Śunaḥśepa) | विमन्यवः (vimanyavaḥ) — thoughts of the mind free from anger (calm) | वस्य इष्टये हि (vasya iṣṭaye hi) — for the very attainment of a precious life | वसतीः उप (vasatīḥ upa) — around (their own) nests | वयो न (vayo na) — as birds flutter | परा पतंति (parā pataṃti) — roam (with eager desire).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O Varuṇa, as birds flutter fondly round their own nests, so my calmed thoughts too roam with keen desire for the attainment of a most precious life.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

My peaceful meditations revert to the desire of life as birds hover around their nests.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

मे (me) — mama śunaḥśepasya: of me, named Śunaḥśepa.

विमन्यवः (vimanyavaḥ) — free from anger; “peaceful thoughts” (so in English in the print); far from evil reflections, and so on.

वस्य इष्टये (vasya iṣṭaye) — atiśayena vasumato jīvanasya prāptaye: for a most excellent life endowed with wealth and the like. Though I am now bound to the post and facing death, my desires turn to the many kinds of enjoyment to be had on earth: so Śunaḥśepa voices the longing in his mind.

वयो न वसतीरुप (vayo na vasatīr upa) — as birds, on nearing the nest they love, fly round it for a little while and then go in, so the movements of my mind turn towards enjoyments: this is the point of the comparison.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read at 450 dpi, v3a)

पतंति (pataṃti) — patḷ gatau, bhvādi; third plural. Though it follows a tiṅanta, the prohibition “-अपादादौ” applies: it stands at the beginning of the pāda, so it is not all-anudātta; initially acute by the root accent.

वस्य इष्टये (vasya iṣṭaye) — matup after vasu by “तदस्यास्त्य-”; in the sense “very wealthy” īyasun by “द्विवचन-” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-57); before īyasun the matup takes luk by “विन्मतोर्लुक्” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-65); vasu + īyas; the y of īyasun is dropped as a Vedic licence, and with ṭi-loss before the vowel-initial suffix the form is vasyas; vasyasaḥ iṣṭiḥ compounded gives vasyaiṣṭiḥ; dative singular vasya iṣṭaye.

वसतीः (vasatīḥ) — vasa nivāse, bhvādi; śatṛ in the sense of laṭ: vasat, a stem in t; in the feminine, since śatṛ has the ṛ as it, by “उगितश्च” (Pā. Sū. 4-1-6)

ṅīp; accusative plural śas; vasatī + as, lengthening to the like vowel, rutva and visarga: vasatīḥ. By “शतुरनुमो नद्यजादी” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-173) the ṅīp, otherwise anudātta as pit, is udātta: vasatīḥ is end-acute. (A printed ornament follows.)

Gist: When shall we bring to this rite, for our happiness, Varuṇa, who is attended by strength, the leader, the seer of many?

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ क्षत्रश्रियं (kṣatraśriyaṃ) — attended by (endowed with) strength | नरं (naraṃ) — the guide | उरुचक्षसं (urucakṣasaṃ) — who sees many people | वरुणं (varuṇaṃ) — the god Varuṇa | मृळीकाय (mṛḷīkāya) — for (our) happiness | कदा (kadā) — when | आ करामहे (ā karāmahe) — shall we make (him) come (to this sacrifice of ours)?

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ When shall we, for the gaining of our happiness, make the god Varuṇa — mighty, the guide of all, who watches over many people — come to this sacrifice?

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> When, for our happiness shall we bring Varuna, the mighty, the guide of men, and beholder of many?

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

क्षत्रश्रियं (kṣatraśriyaṃ) — the commentator has explained in the 6th ṛk of the 24th sūkta that kṣatra means bodily strength. Kṣatraśriyaṃ means rich in strength, of great strength.

उरुचक्षसं (urucakṣasaṃ) — bahūnāṃ draṣṭāraṃ: one who sees many people; that is, one who is seen, or praised, by many people.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read, v3a)

क्षत्रश्रियम् (kṣatraśriyam) — kṣatrāṇi śrayati iti kṣatraśrīḥ; by the vārttika "क्विब्वचिप्रच्छ्यायत-" (Pā. 3-2-178-3, as printed; the bhāṣya gives ३-२-१७८-२) kvip after śriñ with an upapada, with lengthening; accusative singular. By "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the kṛt final member keeps its accent: the i of śri is udātta.

नरम् (naram) — nṝ naye, kryādi; ap after a root in ṛ by "ऋदोरप्" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-57); guṇa, r; accusative singular naram; ap being pit is anudātta, so the root's end-acute (by "धातोः"), being sati-śiṣṭa, makes naram initially acute.

करामहे (karāmahe) — ḍukṛñ karaṇe; laṭ first plural mahiṅ, e by "टित आत्मने-" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79); the u vikaraṇa due by "तनादिकृञ्भ्य उः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-79) is replaced by śap by vyatyaya; guṇa; kara + mahe, lengthening by "अतो दीर्घो यञि" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-101); the tiṅanta takes the nighāta accent.

Page 307 (upper) — Rik 5: grammar (end)

उरुचक्षसम् (urucakṣasam) — cakṣiṅ vyaktāyāṃ vāci; asun by "चक्षेर्बहुलं शिच्च" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-672, as printed in the Kannada series: hook-6, flat-footed 7, curled 2; the bhāṣya gives उ. ४-२३२), treated as śit; urucakṣas, a stem in s; accusative singular. Because the suffix is śit, the khyāñ substitution of "चक्षिङः ख्याञ्" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-54), conditioned by an ārdhadhātuka, does not come; being nit, cakṣas is initially acute. ॥५॥ (A printed ornament follows.)

Gist: For the sacrificer who keeps the rites and gives oblations, Mitra and Varuṇa, desiring it, both enjoy this common oblation we give, and never neglect [him].

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ धृतव्रताय (dhṛtavratāya) — who performs the sacrificial rite | दाशुषे (dāśuṣe) — and who offers oblations: to the sacrificer | वेनंता (venaṃtā) — Mitra and Varuṇa, both gracious | समानं (samānaṃ) — common (to both) | तदित् (tadit) — that same oblation (offered by us) | आशाते (āśāte) — enjoy | न प्रयुच्छतः (na prayucchataḥ) — (never) cause harm.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ For the sacrificer who performs the sacrifice and offers oblations, Mitra and Varuṇa both, ever gracious, enjoy together the oblation offered to the two of them jointly; and they never cause harm to the performer of the sacrifice.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> (Mitra and Varuna,) partake of the common oblation ; this offering is propitious to the giver and celebrator of this sacrifice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

समानं (samānaṃ) — common to Mitra and Varuṇa both; that is, offered to the two together, not separately.

वेनंता (venaṃtā) — kāmayamānau: Mitra and Varuṇa, who desire the oblation.

न प्र युच्छतः (na pra yucchataḥ) — yuccha pramāde; kadācid api na pramādaṃ kurutaḥ: they never commit a lapse (a fault).

धृतव्रताय (dhṛtavratāya) — anuṣṭhitakarmaṇe: who has performed sacrifices and other observances, who worships Mitra and Varuṇa with sacrifices and the like.

दाशुषे (dāśuṣe) — havirdattavate yajamānāya: to the sacrificer who gives the oblation.

Skandasvāmin, besides giving this explanation of the ṛk, explains the words dhṛtavratāya and dāśuṣe otherwise: for dhṛtavrata, svakarmaṇām aparityaktatvāt dhṛtavrato varuṇaḥ — Varuṇa, who never abandons his own work, the protection of sacrificers and so on; and dāśuṣe — to Varuṇa, who gives the sacrificer what he desires.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

आशाते (āśāte) — aśa bhojane, kryādi; liṭ third dual ātām; e by "टित आत्म-" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79); doubling and halādiśeṣa: aś + āte; by "अत आदेः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-70) the reduplicate's initial a is lengthened, setting aside pararūpa; lengthening of like vowels gives āśāte. Since "आगमशास्त्रमनित्यम्" (Paribhā. 95) holds, the nuṭ augment of "अश्नोतेश्च" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-72) does not come.

वेनंता (venaṃtā) — venṛ gatijñānacintāniśāmanavāditragrahaṇeṣu, bhvādi; here to be taken in the sense of kānti (kānti = desire); śatṛ; the nominative dual au is replaced by ā by "सुपां सुलुक्" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39); being ugit, the num augment: venaṃtā.

प्र युच्छतः (pra yucchataḥ) — yuccha pramāde, bhvādi; third dual; the tiṅanta takes the nighāta accent.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Since Varuṇa shines in the antarikṣa, he can know the paths by which birds fly, which no one else can know. Likewise, since Varuṇa is lord of the waters, he can know the path of the ships (vessels) that move on the ocean. The road from one place to another on the earth is plainly visible to all, and it is not hard to see and know it; but since the paths that move through the antarikṣa and over the ocean are not marked out, mere human beings cannot know them; only Varuṇa has the power to know them. The main point: may such a Varuṇa release us from our bonds.

वेद (veda) — vida jñāne, adādi; for laṭ, by "विदो लटो वा" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-83) the parasmaipada endings of liṭ (ṇal etc.) optionally replace those of laṭ after vid: ṇal in the third singular; guṇa of the light penultimate: veda. As ṇal is lit, initially acute by "लिति" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-193). By "द्व्यचोऽतस्तिङः" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-135) the final a of a two-syllable tiṅanta is lengthened in the Saṃhitā.

वीनाम् (vīnām) — genitive plural of vi; the stem is lengthened by "नामि"; by "नामन्यतरस्याम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-177) the nām is udātta.

पतताम् (patatām) — patḷ gatau, bhvādi; śatṛ: patat; śap is anudātta as pit; the śatṛ after śap, being a lasārvadhātuka, is anudātta by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्-" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186); the root's accent remains: patatām is initially acute.

नावः (nāvaḥ) — genitive singular of nau, with āv, rutva and visarga; as a monosyllabic word, the genitive ending is udātta by "सावेकाचः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168).

समुद्रियः (samudriyaḥ) — samudre bhavaḥ (avasthitaḥ): that which is in the ocean. In the sense "tatra bhavaḥ" the suffix gha by "समुद्राभ्राद्घः" (Pā. Sū. 4-4-118); iya for the gh by "आयनेयीनीयियः-" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-2);

the final a of samudra dropped by "यस्येति च" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148): samudriyaḥ; by the suffix accent the i is udātta. ॥७॥ (A printed rule follows.)

Gist: Varuṇa, keeper of the rite, knows the twelve months, Caitra to Phālguna, with the creatures born in them, and knows also the thirteenth, the intercalary month, that arises of itself near the year; (may he free us, as before).

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ धृतव्रतः (dhṛtavrataḥ) — Varuṇa, who accepts the sacrificial rite | प्रजावतः (prajāvataḥ) — together with all the creatures born | द्वादश मासः (dvādaśa māsaḥ) — the twelve months too | वेद (veda) — knows | यः (yaḥ) — that which (as the thirteenth, intercalary month) | उपजायते (upajāyate) — is born (as an appendage) (that too) | वेद (veda) — he knows.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ The god Varuṇa knows well the twelve months of the year and the nature of all the creatures born in that time, and the thirteenth month of the year, born as an appendage to the twelve. (May such a Varuṇa release our bonds.)

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> He who accepts the worship of the sacrificer knows the twelve months and the progeny they produce ; and he who knows also the supplimentary [sic] month ; (may he loosen our bonds).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Varuṇa knows well the nature of time: the meaning is that he knows the measure of the twelve months and the measure of the thirteenth month, the intercalary month that comes once in three years. By the method of astronomy (jyotiśśāstra) the measure of the year is arranged in two ways. By the sun's motion: noting the sun's motion through the twelve signs and dividing the twelve months accordingly, the span of time up to one year is called the solar (sauramāna) year. In this solar reckoning there are only twelve months; there is no thirteenth month. Each month has thirty or thirty-one days; these days are called dates (tēdi). The other kind of yearly measure is called lunar (cāndramāna); it is reckoned by the moon's motion. According to the waxing and waning of the moon, once in 14 or 15 days the day of the full moon is called paurṇamāsyā. The 15 days or fortnight ending in the full moon are called the bright fortnight (śuklapakṣa). The 15 days after the full moon are called the dark fortnight (kṛṣṇapakṣa). The last day of this dark fortnight is called amāvāsyā. On the new-moon day the moon does not rise; that day is known as darśaḥ sūryendusaṅgamaḥ, the meeting of sun and moon. This new moon is the last day of every month of the lunar year; so, in the order of one full moon and one new moon in every month, a lunar year has twelve full moons and twelve new moons. It is customary to name the lunar month after the nakṣatra in which the moon stands on the full-moon day: in the first month the full moon is in Citrā, so that month is called Caitra; likewise the month containing the full moon in Viśākhā is Vaiśākha, and the month with the full moon in Jyeṣṭhā is Jyeṣṭha, and so on. In this reckoning a month made of two fortnights never has thirty days or tithis. Since there are 27 nakṣatras, the moon's course gives fewer than thirty days to the lunar month; reckoned this way, every year falls short by 8–10 days. Therefore, to bring it level with the measure of the solar year, a lunar month is added once in 3 years. The month so added is called the intercalary month (adhikamāsa). This intercalary month exists only in the lunar reckoning. The point is that Varuṇa knows the span of time of thirteen months in all: the twelve lunar months named in this ṛk and the intercalary month that comes from time to time.

मासः (māsaḥ) — māsa before the instrumental plural (the print says tṛtīyā bahuvacana, though māsaḥ here is accusative plural) takes the substitute mās by "पद्दन्नोमास्-" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-63); rutva and visarga: māsaḥ. By "ऊडिदम्पदाद्य-" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) the ending is udātta: māsaḥ is end-acute.

द्वादश (dvādaśa) — dvau ca daśa ca: a dvandva. By "द्व्यष्टनः संख्यायाम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-47) dvi and aṣṭan take ā before a numeral: dvādaśa. By "संख्या" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-35) in a dvandva the numeral first member keeps its own accent.

प्रजावतः (prajāvataḥ) — janī prādurbhāve, divādi; viṭ by "जनसनखनक्रमगमो विट्" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-67); by "विड्वनोरनुनासिकस्यात्" (Pā. Sū.

6-4-41) the root's n becomes ā before viṭ; the viṭ is wholly dropped; with pra, prajā. By "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the kṛt final member keeps its accent. Prajā eṣāṃ santi iti prajāvantaḥ: matup by "तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप्" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94); with prajā + mat, by "मादुपधायाः-" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-9) the m of matup becomes v after a; accusative plural prajāvataḥ; matup, being pit, and śas, being a sup, are anudātta.

उपजायते (upajāyate) — the same root; laṭ in the reflexive-passive (karmakartṛ) sense; by "कर्मवत्कर्मणा तुल्यक्रियः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-82, as printed: the last digit is the round-headed curled 2-shape, unlike the flat-footed 7 in the next number; the bhāṣya gives पा. ३-१-८७, the standard number) the karmakartṛ is treated as object, so ātmanepada endings come; by "सार्वधातुके यक्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-87, as printed; for 3-1-67) yak before a sārvadhātuka; jan + ya + te; by the vārttika "जनादीनामुपदेश एवात्वं वक्तव्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-1[?]5-3: the digit after ० is unclear, ७- or ६-like; the bhāṣya gives ६-१-१९५. ३) the ā comes: upajāyate. By "अचः कर्तृयकि" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-195) roots ending in a vowel in the teaching take the initial acute before yak in the agent sense; here, the ā being taught already at the stage of teaching, jan counts as vowel-final, so the initial acute. By "तिङि चोदात्तवति" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-71) the prefix upa becomes all-anudātta before a tiṅanta with an udātta. Because of yaḥ before it, "यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्" (quoted as ಯದ್ವೃತ್ತಯೋಗಾನ್ನಿತ್ಯಂ, no number) bars the nighāta of the tiṅanta. (A printed rule follows; Ṛk 9 begins on the same page.)

वातस्य, ऋष्वस्य, बृहतः (vātasya, ṛṣvasya, bṛhataḥ) — it is well known that the antarikṣa (the sky), the path along which the wind moves, is very wide and beautiful to look at.

ये अध्यासते (ye adhyāsate) — "above" means the gods who are in the world of heaven, higher even than the antarikṣa; the sense is that Varuṇa knows their nature.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

वातस्य (vātasya) — vā gatigandhanayoḥ, adādi; the suffix tan by "असिहसि-"; genitive singular; being nit, initially acute by "ञ्नित्यादिर्नित्यम्" (Pā. 6-1-197).

वर्तनिम् (vartanim) — vṛtu vartane, bhvādi; the suffix ani by "वृतेश्च" (Uṇ. Sū. 2-263, in the Kannada grammar's series; the bhāṣya's Uṇādi number is not given for this word); guṇa of the light penultimate; accusative singular vartanim. Vartate anena iti vartaniḥ: so that vartani meaning "hymn of praise" may be end-acute, by the gaṇa sūtra "वर्तनिः स्तोत्रे" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-160 ग) the word is read in the uñchādi list (printed ಉಂಛಾದಿ), and "उञ्छादीनां च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-160) gives the end-acute; when the suffix accent (udātta on the a of ani) sets this aside and would make it medially acute, the end-acute comes by vyatyaya.

अध्यासते (adhyāsate) — āsa upaveśane, adādi; for the laṭ third plural jha, since no a precedes, at is substituted by "आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-5): āsate. As the root is anudāttet, the following lasārvadhātuka is anudātta, and the root's end-acute remains. By "तिङि चोदात्तवति" (Pā. Gist: Varuṇa, keeper of the rite and doer of good works, has come and taken his seat among the divine peoples, to establish his sovereignty over them.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ धृतव्रतः (dhṛtavrataḥ) — who accepts the sacrificial rite | सुक्रतुः (sukratuḥ) — and who does excellent deeds | वरुणः (varuṇaḥ) — Varuṇa | पस्त्यासु (pastyāsu) — among the people of the world of the gods | साम्राज्याय (sāmrājyāya) — to exercise lordship | नि षसाद (ni ṣasāda) — (has come and) is seated.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ Varuṇa, who accepts the sacrificial rite and does excellent deeds, has come and sits among the descendants of the gods in order to exercise lordship.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> Varuna, the acceptor of sacrifices, the performer of good deeds is sitting amongst the divine progeny to exercise dominion over them.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

पस्त्यासु (pastyāsu) — daivīṣu prajāsu: among the people of the world of the gods, among the gods.

साम्राज्याय (sāmrājyāya) — samrājo bhāvaḥ sāmrājyam: samrāṭ means king; sāmrājya is the rule or lordship that a king exercises.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

नि षसाद (ni ṣasāda) — ṣadḷ viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu, bhvādi; by "धात्वादेः षः सः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-64) the initial becomes s; liṭ third singular sasāda. The prohibition of ṣatva by "सात्पदाद्योः" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-111) would apply, but by "सदिरप्रतेः" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-66) the s of sad after a prefix other than prati that conditions it becomes ṣ: niṣasāda.

साम्राज्याय (sāmrājyāya) — samrājo bhāvaḥ sāmrājyam: in the abstract sense ṣyañ by "गुणवचनब्राह्मणादिभ्यः-" (Pā. Sū. 5-1-124); being ñit, initial vṛddhi: sāmrājyam; ending in a ñit suffix, initially acute by "ञ्नित्यादिर्नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197).

सुक्रतुः (sukratuḥ) — "नञ्सुभ्याम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) would give the end-acute, but by "क्रत्वादयश्च" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-118) kratu and the like after su are initially acute, so the final member keeps its initial acute: sukratuḥ is medially acute. ॥१०॥

‖ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ‖

चिकित्वान् (cikitvān) — kita jñāne: one who has knowledge, understanding, wisdom; “the wise, the sage &c.” (so in English in the print).

कृतानि (kṛtāni) — pūrvaṃ kṛtāni: done before, or that happened before.

कर्त्वा (kartvā) — itaḥ paraṃ kartavyāni: to be done hereafter, that will happen; “acts to be done in future &c.” (so in English in the print).

‖ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ‖ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

अद्भुता (adbhutā) — the accusative plural śas after adbhuta; in the neuter it is replaced by śi by “जश्शसोः शिः” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-20); this is dropped in the Saṃhitā by “शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10, as printed; for 6-1-70). By “प्रत्ययलोपे प्रत्ययलक्षणम्” (Pā. Sū. 1-1-62) the operations conditioned by śi still apply: the stem takes num by “नपुंसकस्य झलचः” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-72); śi being sarvanāmasthāna, the penultimate of the n-stem is lengthened by “सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-8); with adbhutān, the n is dropped by “न लोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7): adbhutā.

चिकित्वान् (cikitvān) — kita jñāne, bhvādi; kvasu for liṭ by "क्वसुश्च" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-107); doubling, halādiśeṣa and cutva in the reduplicate: cikitvas, a stem in s. By the restriction in "वस्वेकाजाद्घसाम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-67) vasu does not take iṭ. In the nominative singular num, lengthening and loss of the final of the cluster give cikitvān. In the Saṃhitā, by "दीर्घादटि समानपादे" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-9) rutva, and by "आतोऽटि नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-3) the ā is nasalised.

पश्यति (paśyati) — dṛśir prekṣaṇe, bhvādi; laṭ third singular; śap; then by "पाघ्राध्मास्था-" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) paśya is substituted for the root: paśyati.

कर्त्वा (kartvā) — ḍukṛñ karaṇe; tvan by "कृत्यार्थे तवैकेन्केन्यत्वनः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-14); guṇa of the root before tvan; neuter accusative plural śas → śi; dropped by "शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्"; by pratyayalakṣaṇa the num, lengthening and loss of n: kartvā. Ending in a nit suffix, it is initially acute. ॥११॥ (A printed ornament follows; Ṛk 12 begins on the same page.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ सुक्रतुः (sukratuḥ) — of excellent wisdom | सः आदित्यः (saḥ ādityaḥ) — that Varuṇa, son of Aditi | विश्वाहा (viśvāhā) — on all days | नः (naḥ) — us | सुपथा (supathā) — as people who walk on a good path | करत् (karat) — may he make | (and) नः (naḥ) — for us | आयूंषि (āyūṃṣi) — the lifespans | प्र तारिषत् (pra tāriṣat) — may he make grow well.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ May that Varuṇa, of excellent wisdom and son of Aditi, make us walk on the right path on all days, and may he increase our lifespans.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> May the wise son of Aditi (Varuna) keep us, all our days in the right path and prolong our lives.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

विश्वाहा (viśvāhā) — viśveṣu sarveṣv ahassu: on all days; “all our days, always &c.” (so in English in the print).

सुपथा करत् (supathā karat) — may he make us walk on the good road.

तारिषत् (tāriṣat) — pravardhayatu: may he increase, make grow.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi except where marked, v3a)

सुपथा (supathā) — śobhanaś cāsau panthāś ca supanthāḥ. By "न पूजनात्" (Pā. Sū. 5-4-69) the samāsānta does not come after words in the sense of honour, and by "स्वती पूजायाम्" (Pā. Vā. 2-2-18-4) in the compound the samāsānta ap does not come after the final member pathin; su here is in the sense of honour. In the instrumental singular the ṭi is dropped by "भस्य टेर्लोपः" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-88): supathā. "तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थ-" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) would give the indeclinable first member's accent; setting it aside, by "परादिश्छन्दसि बहुलम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-199) the final member is initially acute, by bahula. One should not object: since su precedes, would not "क्त्वादयश्च" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-118) give the same, so why invoke bahula?

That sūtra operates only in a bahuvrīhi; this is a tatpuruṣa, so the accent it states does not come. Nor can it be said that by "आद्युदात्तं द्व्यच्छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-119) a two-syllable initially acute word after su is initially acute here, since pathin is end-acute and the condition is absent.

करत् (karat) — ḍukṛñ karaṇe; leṭ third singular tip; the i dropped by "इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-97); śap by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85); guṇa of the root before it; luk of śap by "बहुलं छन्दसि"; the aṭ augment of the leṭ ending by "लेटोऽडाटौ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94): karat. Or: in the luṅ, the tip as before; since the moods are stated for all times, the sense does not change; by "कृमृदृरुहिभ्यश्छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-59) the cli of the luṅ is replaced by aṅ; before aṅ, the root ending in ṛ takes guṇa by "ऋदृशोऽङि गुणः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-16); by "बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्योगेऽपि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come though māṅ is absent: karat.

प्र णः (pra ṇaḥ) — being a separate word, there is no condition for ṇatva; but by "उपसर्गाद्बहुलम्" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-28) the n of nas after a prefix that conditions it becomes ṇ.

तारिषत् (tāriṣat) — tṝ plavanataraṇayoḥ; ṇic in the causative sense: tāri, a ṇyanta root; in the leṭ third singular tip, with loss of i and the aṭ augment as before; sip by "सिब्बहुलं लेटि" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-34); by the vārttika "सिब्बहुलं णिद्वक्तव्यः" it is treated as ṇit even without ṇic, so the ṇit operation applies; the iṭ augment on sip; by "आदेशप्रत्यययोः" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-59) the s of sip becomes ṣ: tāriṣat. ॥१२॥

(P. 324 is a faint, grainy page: 6-2-119, 3-1-59, 7-4-16, 6-4-75, 8-4-28 and 8-3-59 were checked on crops; 3-4-97, 3-1-85, 3-4-94 and 3-4-34 were read at line width only, the glyphs consistent with those numbers.)

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

द्रापिं (drāpiṃ) — kavacam: the coat of mail worn in time of battle so that arrows do not strike the body; “Armour” (so in English in the print).

हिरण्ययं (hiraṇyayaṃ) — hiraṇmayam: made of gold, fashioned from gold.

वस्त (vasta) — vasa ācchādane; ācchādayati: covers (the body with the armour), puts on, wears.

निर्णिजं (nirṇijaṃ) — ṇijir śaucapoṣaṇayoḥ: well-nourished, grown well (the body).

स्पशः (spaśaḥ) — spaśa bādhanasparśanayoḥ; hiraṇyasparśino raśmayaḥ: (the rays) that touch, that go forth.

परि निषेदिरे (pari niṣedire) — spread all around or everywhere, pervade.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

बिभ्रत् (bibhrat) — ḍubhṛñ bharaṇe, juhotyādi; śatṛ; with the ślu vikaraṇa the root is doubled; by “भृञामित्” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-76) the reduplicate takes i. Being ugit, num would come, but by “नाभ्यस्ताच्छतुः” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-78) it does not, the stem being abhyasta. By “अभ्यस्तानामादिः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-1[7?]4, as printed: the third digit is the glyph used for 7 on this page, possibly a poor 8; for 6-1-189) it is initially acute.

द्रापिम् (drāpim) — drā kutsāyāṃ gatau, adādi; drāpayati iṣūn kutsitāṃ gatiṃ prāpayati iti drāpiḥ kavacam: the coat of mail is called drāpi because it makes the arrows’ flight useless. Before ṇic, by “अर्तिह्रीव्ली-” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-36) the root ending in ā takes the puk augment: drāpi; then the Uṇādi suffix i; the ṇi is dropped by “णेरनिटि” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51), and again the form is drāpi.

हिरण्ययम् (hiraṇyayam) — hiraṇyasya vikāraḥ: in the sense of a product the suffix mayaṭ; then by “ऋत्व्यवास्त्व्यवास्त्वमाध्वीहिरण्ययानि छन्दसि” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-175) the loss of the m of the mayaṭ is irregularly given.

वस्त (vasta) — vasa ācchādane, ātmanepadin; by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः” laṅ; in the singular, the root being adādi, the śap takes luk; by “बहुलं छन्दस्य-” the aṭ augment does not come: vasta.

निर्णिजम् (nirṇijam) — ṇijir śaucapoṣaṇayoḥ, juhotyādi.

स्पशः (spaśaḥ) — spaśa bādhanasparśanayoḥ, bhvādi; by “क्विप् च” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-76) kvip, wholly dropped; nominative plural spaśaḥ.

नि षेदिरे (ni ṣedire) — ṣadḷ viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu; here used in the sense of motion; liṭ in the passive sense; doubling, e for the vowel and loss of the reduplicate; by “सदिरप्रतेः” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-66), since it follows a prefix other than prati that conditions it, ṣatva. ॥१३॥ (A printed ornament follows; Ṛk 14 begins on the same page.)

दिप्सवः (dipsavaḥ) — dambhu dambhe; hiṃsitum icchanto vairiṇaḥ: enemies, or the wicked, whose nature is to harm people.

न दिप्संति (na dipsaṃti) — do not wish to do harm.

द्रुह्वाणः (druhvāṇaḥ) — druha jighāṃsāyām: wicked people who do harm.

अभिमातयः (abhimātayaḥ) — pāpmānaḥ: sinners, base people who do evil deeds.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

दिप्संति (dipsaṃti) — dambhu dambhe; by “धातोः कर्मणः-” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-7) san in the desiderative sense; with dambh + sa, the iṭ would come, the suffix beginning with a val, but “सनीवन्तर्ध-” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-49) bars it; by “सन्यङोः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-9) the root is doubled before san; by “अत्र लोपोऽभ्यासस्य” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-58) the whole reduplicate is dropped; by “दम्भ इच्च” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-56) before the s-initial san the root’s vowel becomes i. By “हलन्ताच्च” (Pā. Sū. 1-2-10) a san beginning with a jhal after a consonant near an ik is kit; there is a statement that hal here denotes the class, so although n and bh stand after the i, there is no fault, and the san is kit. Then by “अनिदितां हल उ-” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24) the penultimate n is dropped before a kit suffix. With dibh + sa, the bh becomes p by cartva. In the laṭ plural, anta for jha; śap; pararūpa of the following a: dipsanti. With bh still before s, “एकाचो बशो-” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-37) would actually give dh for the d, but since in the Veda all operations are optional, the bhaṣ-substitution does not come. Śap is anudātta as pit; tiṅ, a lasārvadhātuka, is anudātta by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्-” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-188, as printed; for 6-1-186); san being nit, initial acute. Because yam (a yad-word) precedes, by “यद्वृत्तयोगान्नित्यम्” (quoted so, no number) the nighāta is barred.

दिप्सवः (dipsavaḥ) — after the same desiderative root, u by “सनाशंसभिक्ष उः” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-168); before u, the a of san is dropped by “अतो लोपः” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-48); nominative plural dipsavaḥ; by the suffix accent a medially acute word.

द्रुह्वाणः (druhvāṇaḥ) — druha jighāṃsāyām, divādi; by “अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यते” the suffix kvanip: druhvan, an n-stem; in the plural, lengthening by “सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-8); ṇatva by “अट्कुप्वाङ्-” (Pā. Sū. 8-4-2): druhvāṇaḥ. The suffix being pit,

it is anudātta; the root’s end-acute alone remains, and druhvāṇaḥ is an initially acute word. (A printed ornament follows; Ṛk 15 begins on the same page.)

(The Pratipadārtha continues at the top of p. 331, which opens with the Bhāvārtha heading; p. 330 ends with "ಉದರೇಷು—" and no gloss for it or for the final ā is printed.)

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ Varuṇa distributed abundant food so that all men are satisfied. In that too he made our stomachs fill completely.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> (Varuna) who has distributed unlimited food to all men (and the gods) has filled our stomachs with food.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

Chief sense — Varuṇa, who gave food in full to gods and men, made the food in our stomachs too be full; that is, he gave food and other nourishment as much as we wished, without stint, so that we are satisfied.

यशः (yaśaḥ) — food. Since the word yaśaḥ is read among the twenty-eight names of food beginning andhaḥ, vājaḥ, yaśaḥ means food (Ni. 3-9).

असामि (asāmi) — sāmi śabdo 'rdhavacanaḥ; na sāmi = asāmi sakalaṃ prabhūtam ity arthaḥ: sāmi means half, incomplete; asāmi means fully, abundantly.

अस्माकं उदरेषु आ (चक्रे) (asmākaṃ udareṣu ā (cakre)) — in our stomachs, that is, he gave food as we wished, so that our stomachs are filled and we are satisfied: this is the meaning.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read at 450 dpi, v3a)

मानुषेषु (mānuṣeṣu) — by "मनोर्जातावञ्यतौ षुक् च" (Pā. Sū. 4-1-161), when the sense is a class, manu takes añ and the stem the ṣuk augment; being ñit, initial vṛddhi: mānuṣa; locative plural. Initially acute by "ञ्नित्यादिर्नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197).

the restriction "अव्यये नञ्कुनिपातानामिति वक्तव्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2-3) is made for indeclinables, so the indeclinable first member keeps its accent: an initially acute word.

यशः (yaśaḥ) — aśū vyāptau; by "अशेर्युट् च" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-630, in the Kannada grammar's series; the bhāṣya gives उ. ४-१९०) the suffix asun, and with it the augment yuṭ on the root; the y, being ṭit, comes as the first part: yaśas, an s-stem; being nit, initially acute.

Gist: My thoughts, longing for Varuṇa whom many behold, go out to him and do not turn back, as cows go to their pastures.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ गव्यूतीः अनु (gavyūtīḥ anu) — keeping the pastures in mind | गावो न (gāvo na) — as cows return | उरुचक्षसं (urucakṣasaṃ) — Varuṇa, who is seen by many people | इच्छंतीः (icchaṃtīḥ) — longing for | मे (me) — my | धीतयः (dhītayaḥ) — thoughts of the mind | परा यंति (parā yaṃti) — return (turned towards him).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ As cows, remembering their pastures, return eagerly towards them, so my thoughts, longing for Varuṇa, who is worthy of the regard of many people, return with devotion towards him.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> My thoughts always turn back to him who is seen by many, as the cows return to the pastures.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

मे धीतयः (me dhītayaḥ) — my mind, my reflections.

परा यंति (parā yaṃti) — go back, that is, again and again move only in the matter of Varuṇa.

गावो न गव्यूतीः (gāvo na gavyūtīḥ) — gāvo yatra caranti sa bhūpradeśo gavyūtir ity ucyate: the grazing ground, the pasture. As cows go of their own accord, without anyone's urging, to the place where grass has grown well, so my mind too wishes to rest in Varuṇa alone: the sense is that my mind is attached to Varuṇa alone.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

गव्यूतीः (gavyūtīḥ) — yu miśraṇāmiśraṇayoḥ, adādi. Gāvaḥ atra yūyante iti gavyūtiḥ: ktin in the locative sense. With go + yūti, by the vārttika "गोर्यूतौ छन्दस्युपसंख्यानम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-79-2) the av substitute comes, in the Veda only: gavyūti. Since gavyūti is read in the dāsībhārādi list, the first member keeps its accent. Or: yūti means yavanam (joining); gavāṃ yavanam atra iti gavyūtiḥ, the place where cows gather; as a bahuvrīhi, by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member keeps its accent.

इच्छंतीः (icchaṃtīḥ) — iṣu icchāyām, tudādi; śatṛ for laṭ; with śatṛ following, the vikaraṇa śa by "तुदादिभ्यः शः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77); before śa, ch by "इषुगमियमां छः" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-77): icchat, a t-stem; being ugit, the num augment; in the feminine, ṅīp by "उगितश्च" (Pā. Sū. 4-1-6). Śatṛ, a lasārvadhātuka, is anudātta by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्-" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186); the vikaraṇa's accent, being sati-śiṣṭa, remains, so icchaṃtīḥ is a medially acute word. ॥१६॥ (A printed rule follows; Ṛk 17 begins on the same page.)

Gist: Since sweet oblation has been prepared for my life in the rite called añjaḥsava, you, like a hotṛ, eat the dear oblation; then, you satisfied and I alive, let us two surely speak together pleasantly.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ यतः (yataḥ) — for which purpose (that is) | मे (me) — my (for life) | मधु (madhu) — sweet oblation | आभृतं (ābhṛtaṃ) — has been prepared | अतः (ataḥ) — (for that very purpose) | होतेव (hoteva) — like the performer of the homa (you too) | प्रियं (priyaṃ) — the dear oblation | क्षदसे (kṣadase) — you partake | पुनः (punaḥ) — afterwards (when you are satisfied and I am alive) | नु (nu) — surely | सं वोचावहै (saṃ vocāvahai) — let us both, together, hold pleasant converse.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ For the sake of my living I have offered the oblation dear to you. For that very purpose you too partake of it gladly. Afterwards let us both together hold pleasant converse.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> Let us together declare that my offering has been prepared and that you like the sacrificer (Hotri) accept the oblation which you like.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

वोचावहै (vocāvahai) — this dual word here indicates King Hariścandra, the sacrificer, and Śunaḥśepa, bound to the post. For it has been said before that Śunaḥśepa, bound to the post, is praying to Varuṇa in this sūkta for release from his bonds. So of the two who pray to Varuṇa, one is Śunaḥśepa. Since the offering of oblation is spoken of in this ṛk, the other is the sacrificer who offers the oblation, that is, King Hariścandra. Hence Śunaḥśepa has said “we two”.

मधु (madhu) — madhuram: sweet, delicious oblation, or food.

होतेव (hoteva) — the sense is: like the sacrificer who performs the homa, you too eat the oblation.

क्षदसे (kṣadase) — aśnāsi: eat, partake.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read at 450 dpi, v3a)

वोचावहै (vocāvahai) — brūñ vyaktāyāṃ vāci; by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) luṅ in the sense of loṭ; first-person dual ātmanepada vahi; by "ब्रुवो वचिः" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-53) vac for the root before luṅ; by "अस्यतिवक्तिख्यातिभ्योऽङ्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-52) aṅ for cli. With vac + a + vahi, by "वच उम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-20) the root takes the um augment before aṅ; being mit, it comes after the last vowel; with guṇa, voca + vahi; by "अतो दीर्घो यञि" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-101) lengthening; the i of the suffix becomes ai. Or: luṅ replaces loṭ itself; then by sthānivadbhāva it counts as loṭ, and by "एत ऐ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-93) the ai comes: vocāvahai.

आभृतम् (ābhṛtam) — the prefix āṅ is also called gati. Hṛñ haraṇe; kta; being kit, no guṇa. By "गतिरनन्तरः" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-49), before a kta-word in the passive sense, an immediately preceding gati keeps its accent; so here the gati's udātta remains, and ābhṛtam is initially acute. For the root's h, by "हृग्रहोर्भश्छन्दसि" bh comes: ābhṛtam. ॥१७॥ (A printed rule follows; Ṛk 18 begins on the same page.)

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

विश्वदर्शतं (viśvadarśataṃ) — sarvair darśanīyam asmadanugrahārtham atrāvirbhūtaṃ varuṇam: Varuṇa, who for our favour has become manifest in this place of sacrifice and is seen by all.

दर्शं नु (darśaṃ nu) — I have truly seen.

अधि (adhi) — ādhikyena: I have seen well.

एताः जुषत मे गिरः (etāḥ juṣata me giraḥ) — let Varuṇa enjoy these words of mine in the form of a hymn; that is, may Varuṇa accept (hear) them and be satisfied by them.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read on 450-dpi line crops, v3a)

दर्शम् (darśam) — dṛśir prekṣaṇe, bhvādi; before the luṅ first singular, by "इरितो वा" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-57) aṅ for cli, the root having the ir marker; before aṅ the root's ṛ takes guṇa by "ऋदृशोऽङि गुणः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-16); by "बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्योगेऽपि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come: darśam.

विश्वदर्शतम् (viśvadarśatam) — the same root takes atac by "भृमृदृशि-" (Uṇ. Sū. 3-390, in the Kannada grammar's series; the bhāṣya gives उ. ३-१०९); with guṇa, darśata. Since it is read in the marudvṛdhādi list, for which the end-acute of the first member is prescribed (Pā. Sū. 6-2-106-2), the first member's final accent comes here. Or: by "बहुव्रीहौ विश्वं संज्ञायाम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-106) the first member's end-acute; then viśvaṃ darśataṃ darśanīyam asya iti viśvadarśataḥ is to be taken as a bahuvrīhi; since a name of Varuṇa is meant, the sense of the sūtra fits.

क्षमि (kṣami) — kṣamā, a feminine stem in ā; before the locative singular, by the split of the sūtra "आतो धातोः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-140), the part ātaḥ drops the final ā although it is not a root; for forms such as ktvaḥ, snaḥ, this split is necessarily accepted there. With the loss of ā: kṣami. ॥ १८॥

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

O Varuna, hear this my invocation ; make us happy to-day ; I desire your protection.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ In the homa called Varuṇapraghāsa, when the offering belonging to Varuṇa is made, this ṛk imaṃ me varuṇa is to be used as the puro'nuvākyā mantra: so it is set out in the section pañcamyāṃ paurṇamāsyām of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra imaṃ me varuṇa śrudhi (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-25-19) tat tvā yāmi brahmaṇā vandamānaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-11) (Ā. 2-17).

अवस्युः (avasyuḥ) — rakṣaṇecchur aham; ātmapālanakāmo 'ham: I, who seek protection in the form of release from my bonds.

आ चके (ā cake) — kai gai śabde: I make sound, that is, I praise. Skandasvāmin takes this word thus — ā cake: kāntikarmāyaṃ kāmaye pālaya ity arthaḥ: that is, I desire, I desire release from the bonds; so protect me.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read on 450-dpi line crops, v3a)

श्रुधि (śrudhi) — śru śravaṇe, bhvādi; in the loṭ second singular the hi substitute; by "श्रुशृणुपॄकृवृभ्यश्छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-102) in the Veda dhi for hi. By "श्रुवः शृ च" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-74) the vikaraṇa would come, but by "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-76) it takes luk: śrudhi. In the Saṃhitā the lengthening by "अन्येषामपि दृश्यते" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137).

अवस्युः (avasyuḥ) — after the word avas, by "सुप आत्मनः क्यच्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-8) kyac in the sense of desire; by "सनाद्यन्ता धातवः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-32), kyac being in the sanādi group, the name dhātu: avasyati. In the sense of one who desires protection for himself, by "क्याच्छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-170) the suffix u after a kya-ending stem when habit and the like are meant; so after the kyac-ending avasya the suffix u; with avasya + u, by "अतो लोपः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-48) the a of kya is dropped; with the case-ending, avasyuḥ; by the suffix accent, end-acute.

आ चके (ā cake) — ā is the prefix; kai gai śabde, bhvādi; liṭ first singular iṭ; by "टित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) it becomes e. By "आदेच उपदेशेऽशिति" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-45), the root ending in ai in the teaching takes ā before liṭ. With kā + e, doubling conditioned by liṭ; shortening and cutva in the reduplicate. With cakā + e, by "आतो लोप इटि च" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-64) the ā is dropped before a vowel-initial ārdhadhātuka: cake. By "तिङ्ङतिङः" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28), following the non-verb avasyuḥ, it takes the nighāta accent. ॥१९॥

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

O Varuna, you are wise and you shine in heaven and earth ; hear my prayer and reply with a promise of prosperity.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

मेधिर (medhira) — medhāvin: intelligent, wise, one with understanding. Skandasvāmin explains it as yajñavan: one who is worshipped in sacrifice.

यामनि (yāmani) — kṣemaprāpaṇe 'smadīye: in our attaining of welfare, or for the attaining of welfare. Skandasvāmin takes this word thus: yāmani | adhikaraṇe 'tra manir draṣṭavyaḥ | mṛtyuṃ prati gamyate yasmin sa yāmā maraṇakālaḥ tatra | — that is, the root yā means to go; going here means facing death; so the word yāmani (the locative singular of yāman) formed from this root means "at the time of death". To me, who am at the time of death — muñcāmi tvāṃ | tvaṃ na mriyase — "I release you; you will not die": Śunaḥśepa prays to Varuṇa to give this assurance.

प्रति श्रुधि (prati śrudhi) — utter a word in the form of a reply; that is, rakṣiṣyāmīti pratyuttaraṃ dehi: say in reply, "I will release you, Śunaḥśepa, from the bonds of the noose and protect you."

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read on 450-dpi line crops, v3a)

दिवः (divaḥ) — the genitive of div; by "ऊङिदम्पदादि-" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) the genitive ending is udātta; divaḥ is end-acute.

ग्मः (gmaḥ) — gmā is read among the synonyms of the earth (Ni. 1-1-2). Before its genitive singular the yāṭ augment would come; but in "आतो धातोः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-140) the split ātaḥ has been made, by which the final ā of a non-root ending in ā is in some places dropped before a vowel-initial suffix; so here, with the loss of ā, the form is gmaḥ. Since the Bhāṣya says the split must not be applied everywhere but only in some places for the desired forms, if it is said that the loss does not come here, the loss is to be accepted by vyatyaya. By "अनुदात्तस्य च यत्रोदात्तलोपः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161) an anudātta becomes udātta when an udātta before it is dropped; here the case-ending is anudātta, and as the udātta ā before it is dropped, the ending becomes udātta.

यामनि (yāmani) — yā prāpaṇe, adādi; by "आतो मनिन्क्वनिब्वनिपश्च" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-74), the root ending in ā, the suffix manin; after yāman, in the locative singular ṅi; by "विभाषा ङिश्योः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-136) optionally the loss of a, giving the form yāmani. Manin being nit, initially acute.

श्रुधि (śrudhi) — explained in the previous mantra (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-2-25-19, as printed: a "2" stands between the maṇḍala and sūkta numbers). ॥२०॥ (A printed ornament follows; Ṛk 21 begins on the same page.)

Gist: Loosen and release our upper noose, at the head; cut away the middle one, at the belly; draw down and destroy my lower nooses, at the feet, so that we may live.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

उत्तमं, मध्यमं, अधमानि (uttamaṃ, madhyamaṃ, adhamāni) — uttamam: the rope tied above, that is, binding the head; madhyamam: the rope tied at the belly; adhamāni: the ropes tied below, that is, binding the feet.

उत् मुमुग्धि (ut mumugdhi) — untie (the ropes) and release.

वि (अव) चृत (vi (ava) cṛta) — viyujya nāśaya: untie and destroy, or take them off.

जीवसे (jīvase) — jīvayitum: the sense is that the noose must be untied and released so as to keep us alive.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read on 450-dpi line crops, v3a)

उत्तमम् (uttamam) — tamap in the superlative sense; being pit, the anudātta accent would come; but by "उञ्छादीनां च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-160), since it is read in the uñchādi list (printed ಉಂಛಾದಿ), it is end-acute.

मुमुग्धि (mumugdhi) — mucḷ mokṣaṇe, tudādi; loṭ second singular sip → hi. By "तुदादिभ्यः शः" the vikaraṇa śa would come, but by "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-73, as read at line width) the vikaraṇa ślu; by "श्लौ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) the root is doubled; with halādiśeṣa, mumuc + hi. By "हुझल्भ्यो हेर्धिः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-101), after a jhal, dhi for hi. Before dhi, by "चोः कुः" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30) the c becomes k, and by jaśtva g: mumugdhi. By "तिङ्ङतिङः" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28), after the non-verb uttamam, the nighāta accent.

चृत (cṛta) — cṛtī hiṃsāgranthanayoḥ, tudādi; in the loṭ second singular hi; by "तुदादिभ्यः शः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77) the vikaraṇa śa; with cṛt + a + hi, by "अतो हेः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105) the hi after a takes luk: cṛta. The nighāta accent.

जीवसे (jīvase) — jīva prāṇadhāraṇe, bhvādi; in the sense of the infinitive jīvitum, by "तुमर्थे सेसेन्-" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-9) the suffix ase: jīvase. By the suffix accent (initially acute), jīvase is a medially acute word.

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ Vasiṣvā hi miyedhya is the third sūkta in the sixth anuvāka. This sūkta and the next have Agni as deity. At the time of reciting the Prātaranuvāka mantras, these two sūktas are to be recited for the ṛks in the Gāyatrī metre belonging to the Agni rite: so it is set out by the sūtra vasiṣvā hīti sūktayor uttamām uddharet of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Ā. 4-13).

Gist: Urged by Varuṇa to praise Agni, Śunaḥśepa praised him with this and the next sūkta (Ai. Brā. 7-16). O Agni, worthy of sacrifice, lord of foods, put on your garments of splendour, blaze up, and so accomplish this our sacrifice.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ मियेध्य (miyedhya) — fit for the sacrifice | ऊर्जां पते (ūrjāṃ pate) — and protector of food (the support of life), O Agni | वस्त्राणि (vastrāṇi) — the garments (in the form of splendour) | वसिष्व (vasiṣva) — put on | हि (hi) — for that very reason | सः (saḥ) — such a one, you | नः (naḥ) — our | इमं अध्वरं (imaṃ adhvaraṃ) — this sacrifice | यज (yaja) — accomplish.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O Agni, worthy of sacrifice and protector of the food that sustains life, put on your garments in the form of splendour; and, so adorned with splendour, accomplish this sacrifice of ours.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> (O Agni) lord of nourishment, you are being worshipped in the sacrifice ; Put on your clothes (covering of light) and perform this our sacrifice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Śunaḥśepa had so far praised Varuṇa; Varuṇa, pleased, said to him: "O Śunaḥśepa, Agni is the mouth of the gods, that is, it is through Agni alone that the gods receive the oblation in the sacrifice. So now praise Agni; by that your noose will be loosed." Accordingly Śunaḥśepa praises Agni with this sūkta vasiṣvā hi miyedhya and with the next sūkta aśvaṃ na tvā vāravantam. On this there is the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa passage: taṃ varuṇa uvācāgnir vai devānāṃ mukhaṃ suhṛdayatamas taṃ nu stuhy atha tvotsrakṣyāma iti so 'gniṃ tuṣṭāva uttarābhir dvāviṃśatyā (Ai. Brā. 7-16).

मियेध्य (miyedhya) — yajñasya yogya, yajñārha: fit to be worshipped in the sacrifice.

वस्त्राणि (vastrāṇi) — ācchādakāni tejāṃsi: Agni's garments are the coverings in the form of splendour. Since splendour (light) is spread all round Agni, the ṛṣi has said that he wears the garment called splendour.

ऊर्जां पते (ūrjāṃ pate) — lord, protector, of food or nourishment. Since the word ūrk is read among the twenty-eight names of food beginning andhaḥ, vājaḥ, ūrjām means "of food and nourishment".

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read on 450-dpi line crops, v3a)

वसिष्व (vasiṣva) — vasa ācchādane, adādi; loṭ second singular thās; by "थासः से" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-80) se; by "सवाभ्यां वामौ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-91) va replaces the final: sva. By "छन्दस्युभयथा" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-117) sva also counts as ārdhadhātuka, so by "आर्धधातुकस्येड्वलादेः" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-35) it takes iṭ; then by "आदेशप्रत्यययोः" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-59) the s after i becomes ṣ: vasiṣva. The lasārvadhātuka is anudātta by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्-" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) after an anudāttet root, so the root's end-acute remains. By "अन्येषामपि दृश्यते" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137) the Saṃhitā lengthens it.

मियेध्य (miyedhya) — after medha, yat in the sense of "deserving": medhya; in the Veda, without cause, the augment iya between m and e; with the vocative's loss, miyedhya.

ऊर्जां पते (ūrjāṃ pate) — pate is a vocative singular and so is called āmantrita. By "सुबामन्त्रिते पराङ्गवत्स्वरे" (Pā. Sū. 2-1-2), in an accent rule, a subanta before an āmantrita is treated as part of it; so ūrjām is part of pate, and by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-19) the whole group takes the āmantrita-nighāta.

सेमम् (semam) — sas + imam. By "सोऽचि लोपे चेत्पादपूरणम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-134), when a vowel follows and the loss fills out the pāda, the su of sas is dropped; here the loss fills the pāda, so it comes; sa + imam with guṇa-sandhi gives semam. ॥१॥

> O ever youthful Agni, being praised with brilliant hymn, sit down, here, as we have selected you as our Hotri to perform the sacrifice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

सदा यविष्ठ (sadā yaviṣṭha) — sarvadā yuvatama: one who is always young. However much firewood and the like is put in, Agni keeps blazing strongly; so they call him ever young.

वरेण्यः (vareṇyaḥ) — varaṇīyaḥ: one who has been chosen; they have chosen Agni alone to carry out the sacrifice. Or the sense "best" may also be given.

मन्मभिः (manmabhiḥ) — mana jñāne; jñāpakais tejobhir yuktaḥ: the commentator explains the word as "endowed with splendour that makes known", that is, with natural splendour. The authors of the Vedārthayatna take manmabhiḥ as dhyānaiḥ, "meditations" (so in English in the print), by meditations. This sense too fits here.

दिवित्मता (divitmatā) — dīptimatā: shining. Since the word qualifies vacaḥ, "with shining words" may be explained as excellent, meaningful, mature words and the like.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

यविष्ठ (yaviṣṭha) — atiśayena yuvā yaviṣṭhaḥ. By "अतिशायने तमबिष्ठनौ" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-55) iṣṭhan after yuvan; by "स्थूलदूरयुवह्रस्व-" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-156) before iṣṭhan the part from the yaṇ onward is dropped; then the preceding u takes guṇa: yo + iṣṭha; by "एचोऽयवायावः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-78) av for o: yaviṣṭha. In the vocative, the nighāta by "आमन्त्रितस्य च".

मन्मभिः (manmabhiḥ) — mana jñāne, divādi; by "अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यन्ते" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-130, as printed: the middle digit is the curled 2; for 3-2-75) the suffix manin: manman, an n-stem. Before the instrumental plural bhis it is called pada, so by "नलोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य" the n is dropped; since that loss is asiddha, bhis does not become ais; with rutva and visarga, manmabhiḥ. Manin being nit, by "ञ्नित्यादिर्नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) initially acute.

दिवित्मता (divitmatā) — divu krīḍādau, divādi, read in the ten senses krīḍā, vijigīṣā and so on. By "इक्श्तिपौ धातुनिर्देशे" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-108-2), when a root is named, the suffixes ik and śtip come; here ik: diviḥ. Divi means the root div; but here, by lakṣaṇā, the root's sense, light, is to be taken; then divi means light. Or, in the abstract sense, an Uṇādi suffix is to be stated; then divi means light directly. In the sense diviḥ asya asti (that which has light), by "तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप्" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) the suffix matup; with divimat, the t augment comes in the middle as a Vedic form; after divitmat, the instrumental singular ṭā gives divitmatā. Or: by bahula, after the root div the suffix itak in the abstract sense; after divit, matup gives divitmat; by "तसौ मत्वर्थे" (Pā. Sū. 1-4-19) a stem in t is called bha before a possessive suffix, so there is no pada name and no jaśtva; in the instrumental singular divitmatā.

वचः (vacaḥ) — vaca paribhāṣaṇe, adādi; by "सर्वधातुभ्योऽसुन्" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-6[?]8, as printed: the third glyph is blurred; on p. 290 the same sūtra is printed ४-६-२८) the suffix asun: vacas, an s-stem. When the instrumental singular is meant, by "सुपां सुलुक्" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) it takes luk: vacaḥ. Ending in a nit suffix, it is initially acute. ॥२॥

Gist: O Agni, worthy to be chosen, being like a father, give me, who am like a son, what I desire; as a kinsman gives to a kinsman, and a friend to a dear friend, wholly, so do you give.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ आपिः (āpiḥ) — one who is a kinsman | आपये (āpaye) — to his kinsman (and) | सखा (sakhā) — a (dear) friend | सख्ये (sakhye) — to his friend | आ यजति हि स्म (ā yajati hi sma) — (what is desired) surely gives, does he not (so) | सूनवे (sūnave) — to me, who stand as a son | पिता (pitā) — you, who are as a father (graciously grant my desire).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O Agni, as a kinsman provides for the desire of his own close kinsman, and as one who is a friend for that of his dear friend, so do you, who are like a father, fulfil for me, who am like a son, my desire.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

O Agni, you are indeed as a loving father to a son, as a kinsman to a kinsman, as a friend to a friend.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

आपिः, आपये (āpiḥ, āpaye) — bandhuḥ bandhave: as a kinsman behaves with goodwill towards his kinsman, so; in this ṛk the ṛṣi points to the great love there is between father and son, between kinsmen, and between friends, and prays that Agni likewise should protect him.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

स्मा सूनवे (smā sūnave) — sma is a particle; so by "निपातस्य च" (6-2-136, as printed, without "Pā. Sū."; the middle digit is the curled 2; for 6-3-136) it is lengthened in the mantra.

यजति (yajati) — yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu, bhvādi; laṭ third singular. Following a word that is not a verb, the nighāta would come; but here, since the verb is understood also in sakhā sakhye, it is the first one uttered; so by "चादिलोपे विभाषा" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-63), when ca, vā and the like are dropped, the first-uttered tiṅanta is not all-anudātta, and the nighāta does not come. Or: by "हि च" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-34) a tiṅanta joined with hi is not anudātta, so the nighāta is naturally barred. Śap and tip being anudātta, by the root's accent yajati is initially acute.

सख्ये (sakhye) — since "शेषो घ्यसखि" excludes it, sakhi is not called ghi; so before the dative singular ṅe the yaṇ substitute comes: sakhye. By "समाने ख्यः स चोदात्तः" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-5[7?]6, as printed: the third glyph is a 2-like shape with a flat foot, read as 7 with doubt), with samāna as upapada, the root khyā prakathane takes the suffix iṇ, which is ḍit; samāna is replaced by sa and is udātta; the loss of y is laid down in the sūtra itself. Because the suffix is ḍit, the ā of khyā, called ṭi, is dropped; the y is dropped by the sūtra itself: sakhi. Since sa is made udātta, sakhi is initially acute. The sup ending is anudātta by "अनुदात्तौ सुप्पितौ" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4), so the accent stated before remains as sati-śiṣṭa; sakhye too is initially acute. ॥३॥ (A printed ornament follows; Ṛk 4 begins on the same page.)

Gist: O Agni, may Varuṇa and the other gods, your kinsmen, sent by you, devourers of the harmful, sit on our sacrificial grass, as they sit at the sacrifice of Manu Prajāpati.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (अग्ने) ((agne)) — (O Agni) | रिशादसः (riśādasaḥ) — the destroyers of enemies | वरुणः (varuṇaḥ) — Varuṇa | मित्रः (mitraḥ) — Mitra | अर्यमा (aryamā) — together with Aryaman | यथा (yathā) — in the manner in which | मनुषः (manuṣaḥ) — of Manu (they sat on the altar in the place of sacrifice, so) | नः (naḥ) — our | बर्हिः (barhiḥ) — on the seat of the sacrificial ground | आ सीदंतु (ā sīdaṃtu) — may they come and sit.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> Let Varuna, Mitra, Aryama, destroyers of the wicked, sit down upon our sacred grass as they did at the Sacrifice of Manu.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

बर्हिः (barhiḥ) — the seat of darbha grass, made ready by cutting the tips of the darbha called kuśa and spreading them soft in three layers, so that the gods may come and sit on the sacrificial altar.

रिशादसः (riśādasaḥ) — riśa hiṃsāyām; riśanti hiṃsantīti riśāḥ śatravaḥ; tān adantīti riśādasaḥ: the root riś means to harm; those who harm are called riśāḥ, enemies; since they destroy such enemies, riśādasaḥ means destroyers of enemies.

सीदंतु मनुषो यथा (sīdaṃtu manuṣo yathā) — as the gods came to the sacrificial ground in the sacrifice made by Manu Prajāpati and sat on the darbha seat, so may Mitra, Varuṇa and the others come to this our sacrificial ground and sit: this is the ṛṣi's prayer.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read on 450-dpi line crops, v3a)

बर्ही रिशादसः (barhī riśādasaḥ) — with barhis + riśādasaḥ, by "ससजुषो रुः" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-66) the word-final s of barhis becomes ru; by "रो रि" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-14) an r before an r is dropped, so the r of barhir is dropped. With barhi + riśādasaḥ, by "ढ्रलोपे पूर्वस्य दीर्घोऽणः" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-111) the preceding aṇ is lengthened when a following letter is the cause of the loss of ḍh or r; so the i is lengthened: barhī riśādasaḥ.

रिशादसः (riśādasaḥ) — riśa hiṃsāyām, tudādi. By "इगुपधज्ञाप्रीकिरः कः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-135), since the penultimate is an ik, the suffix ka; being kit, no guṇa of the light penultimate: riśa. Riśān adanti iti riśādasaḥ: those who eat, destroy, enemies. By "सर्वधातुभ्योऽसुन्" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-6[?]8, as printed: the third glyph is blurred, as on p. 352) the suffix asun after ad bhakṣaṇe: riśādas, an s-stem; nominative plural riśādasaḥ. By "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139), the first member being a kāraka upapada, the kṛt final member keeps its accent; adas, ending in a nit suffix, is initially acute, so in riśādasaḥ the ā after ś is udātta.

by "पाघ्राध्मास्था-" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) the root takes the substitute sīda; by "अतो गुणे" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) pararūpa: sīdantu. Śap being pit is anudātta; after an adupadeśa, the lasārvadhātuka is anudātta by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्-" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186); then the root's end-acute, coming by "धातोः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-162), remains as sati-śiṣṭa.

मनुषः (manuṣaḥ) — mana jñāne, divādi. Manyate jānātīti manuḥ prajāpatiḥ: the one who knows all. With "जनेरुसिर्निच्च" continuing, by "बहुलमन्यत्रापि" (Uṇ. Sū. 2-278, as read: the third glyph is the flat-footed 7; the bhāṣya gives उ. २-१२२) the suffix usi after man, and it is nit: manus, an s-stem. In the genitive singular the ending as; since the s follows an iṇ and is part of a suffix, it becomes ṣ: manuṣaḥ. Ending in a nit suffix, by "ञ्नित्यादिर्नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) it is initially acute.

सख्यस्य (sakhyasya) — the sense is: so that you, regarding us as friends, may show favour. On the theme of desiring the friendship of the gods: tavedd hi sakhyam astṛtam (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-15-5); devānāṃ sakhyam upasedimā vayaṃ devā na āyuḥ pra tirantu jīvase (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-89-2); anu vrātāsas tava sakhyam īyur anu devā mamire vīryaṃ te (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-13-21); pra so agne tavotibhiḥ suvīrābhis tirate vājabharmabhiḥ | yasya tvaṃ sakhyam āvaraḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-19-30); adabdhasya svadhāvato dūtasya rebhataḥ sadā | agneḥ sakhyaṃ vṛṇīmahe (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-44-20) — many such examples can be given.

Glosses, mine and tentative: “your friendship is unbroken”; “we have come to the friendship of the gods; may the gods prolong our life for living”; “the companies followed your friendship, the gods measured your might”; “whose friendship towards us is to be gained among the gods”; “since you have chosen this friendship, drink of this juice”; “he prospers, O Agni, by your aids rich in heroes and booty, whose friendship you have chosen”; “we choose the friendship of Agni, the unharmed, self-powered messenger, ever resounding”.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers zoom-read at 450 dpi, v3a)

पूर्व्य (pūrvya) — pūrve bhavaḥ pūrvyaḥ: one born before; yat in the sense of “being there”; in the vocative pūrvya. Standing not after another word, by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-198) it is initially acute.

होतः (hotaḥ) — hu dānādanayoḥ, juhotyādi; tṛc in the agent sense; vocative hotaḥ. Here both pūrvya and hotaḥ are āmantrita. Then by “आमन्त्रितं पूर्वमविद्यमानवत्” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-72) the earlier āmantrita would be treated as non-existent; but here the two words are in apposition, both meaning the same thing; so by “नामन्त्रिते समानाधिकरणे सामान्यवचनम्” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-73) it is not treated as non-existent, that is, it counts as a word standing before; so by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-19) hotaḥ, an āmantrita after a word, takes the nighāta accent.

अस्य (asya) — after idam, the genitive singular ṅas; by “त्यदादीनामः” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-102) the stem takes a; with idas, after a, by “टाङसिङसामिनात्स्याः” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-12) ṅas becomes sya; before a consonant-initial suffix by “हलि लोपः” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-113) the id is dropped: asya. By “ऊडिदम्पदादि-” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) the ending is udātta: asya is end-acute.

मंदस्व (maṃdasva) — madi stutimodamadasvapnakāntigatiṣu, bhvādi; loṭ second singular maṃdasva. Being idit, it takes num. Śap is anudātta as pit; the tiṅ after an adupadeśa is anudātta by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्-” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186); the root’s end-acute remains; maṃdasva is initially acute. Since "अपादादौ" excludes it, by "तिङ्ङतिङः" (Pā. Sū. 5-1-28, as printed: the first glyph is the same as the 5 of the bhāṣya's ५-१-१२६; for 8-1-28) the nighāta does not come.

सख्यस्य (sakhyasya) — sakhyuḥ karma sakhyam: the work of a friend. By "सख्युर्यः" (Pā. Sū. 5-1-126) the suffix ya in the sense of state or action; before a y-initial suffix the stem is bha: sakhya; genitive singular. By the suffix accent sakhyasya is medially acute.

उ षु (u ṣu) — by "सुञः" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-107), after a conditioning sound (iṇ or a ka-class letter) in the preceding word, the s of the particle suñ becomes ṣ; here, after u, the ṣatva comes.

श्रुधि (śrudhi) — śru śravaṇe, bhvādi; loṭ second singular, hi for si. By "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-73) the vikaraṇa śap takes luk; by "श्रुशृणुपॄकृवृभ्यश्छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-102) dhi for hi: śrudhi. ॥ ५॥ (A printed ornament follows.)

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O Agni, the oblation, offered without missing a single day, that is, offered every day, and most abundant, which we offer intending it for the gods Varuṇa, Indra and the others — all that oblation we offer first in you, that is, we offer it through you alone.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> Whatever we offer as plentiful oblations to the different deities every day is assuredly offered to (through) you.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

शश्वता (śaśvatā) — śāśvatena, nityena: which we offer every day.

तना (tanā) — vistṛtena: with ample, abundant oblation.

देवंदेवं (devaṃdevaṃ) — anyam anyaṃ varuṇendrādirūpaṃ nānāvidhaṃ devatāviśeṣam: every deity, that is, intending the various gods Varuṇa, Indra and the others.

त्वे इत् हूयते हविः (tve it hūyate haviḥ) — the oblation we offer intending the other gods we offer in you alone, Agni. Since by the scriptural statement parokṣaṃ vā anye devā ijyante the other gods are not seen by the eye, we offer in Agni alone the oblation that is to be given to them, intending them. The sense is: you, the messenger of the gods, carry the oblation offered in you to them.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read at 450 dpi, v3a)

तना (tanā) — tanu vistāre, tanādi; by "क्विप् च" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-76) the suffix kvip, wholly dropped: tan, an n-stem; instrumental singular tanā. Or: by "नन्दिग्रहिपचादिभ्यः-" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-134), being in the pacādi list, the suffix ac: tana, an a-stem; for the instrumental singular, by "सुपां सुलुक्" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the substitute ā: tanā.

देवंदेवम् (devaṃdevam) — by "नित्यवीप्सयोः" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-4), when repetition (vīpsā) is meant, the word is doubled; here vīpsā is meant. By "तस्य परमाम्रेडितम्" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-2) the latter form is called āmreḍita; by "अनुदात्तं च" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-3) the repeated latter form is all-anudātta; so the latter form takes the nighāta accent.

यजामहे (yajāmahe) — yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu; first plural. Because of its connection with yat in yaccid dhi, by "निपातैर्यद्यदिहन्त-" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-30) the tiṅanta's nighāta does not come.

त्वे (tve) — after yuṣmad, for the locative singular, by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute śe; being śit, it replaces the whole. By "त्वमावेकवचने" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-97) tva for the part up to m; with tva + ad + e, by "शेषे लोपः" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-90) the ad after the m-part is dropped; by "अतो गुणे" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) pararūpa: tve. By "शे" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-13) śe is called pragṛhya, so tve is pragṛhya; with tve + iti, by "प्लुतप्रगृह्या अचि नित्यम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-25, as printed; for 6-1-125; the bhāṣya gives ६-१-१२५) there is no sandhi.

हूयते (hūyate) — hu dānādanayoḥ, juhotyādi; laṭ third singular in the passive; by "टित आत्मनेपदानाम्-" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) e; by "सार्वधातुके यक्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-67) yak; by "अकृत्सार्वधातुकयोर्दीर्घः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-15, as printed; for 7-4-25; the bhāṣya gives ७-४-२५) the vowel-final stem is lengthened before a y-initial suffix other than a kṛt or sārvadhātuka: hūyate. ॥६॥ (A printed rule follows; Ṛk 7 begins on the same page.)

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

प्रियाः स्वग्नयो वयं (priyāḥ svagnayo vayaṃ) — in this ṛk Agni is praised with several epithets: viśpati, hotā, mandra, vareṇya. So the ṛṣi has referred to Agni, endowed with such qualities, in the plural. Or, since Agni is present in every house as lord of the house, the plural priyāḥ svagnayaḥ may have been used thinking of the fires (in our houses) that bring auspiciousness.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read on 450-dpi line crops, v3a)

विश्पतिः (viśpatiḥ) — viśāṃ patiḥ viśpatiḥ: the lord of the people. By "पत्यावैश्वर्ये" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-18), when pati in the sense of lordship is the final member, the first member keeps its accent; this being attained, by "परादिश्छन्दसि बहुलम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-199), bahula being mentioned, the final member's initial acute comes here: viśpatiḥ is medially acute.

वरेण्यः (vareṇyaḥ) — by "वृञ एण्यः" (Uṇ. Sū. 3-3[?]8, in the Kannada grammar's series: the middle digit is not settled; the bhāṣya gives उ. ३-९८), after vṛñ varaṇe the suffix eṇya; before it, by "सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa of the root's ṛ; since it replaces ṛ, by "उरण् रपरः" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-51) it is followed by r: vareṇyaḥ. Though the suffix accent would come, by "वृषादीनां च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-203) it is initially acute; vareṇya is read in the vṛṣādi list.

स्वग्नयः (svagnayaḥ) — śobhanāḥ agnayaḥ yeṣāṃ te svagnayaḥ: those who have holy fires; a bahuvrīhi. By "नञ्सुभ्याम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172), in a bahuvrīhi the final member after nañ or su is end-acute; so here agni, after su, is end-acute. Before jas, by "जसि च" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-109) the stem takes guṇa; before the vowel, ay: svagnayaḥ. ॥७॥ (A printed ornament follows.)

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> As the brilliant priests possessed of holy fires have taken charge of our oblation, so we with holy fires pray to you.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

वार्यं (vāryaṃ) — varaṇīyaṃ, śreṣṭham: an excellent thing, the oblation.

देवासः (devāsaḥ) — dīpyamānā ṛtvijaḥ: shining priests.

This ṛk may also be explained differently: svagnayaḥ prasannāgniyuktā devāso devā vāryaṃ varaṇīyaṃ dhanaṃ no 'smabhyaṃ dadhire ca dadati khalu | ataḥ svagnayaḥ prasannāgniyuktā vayaṃ tvāṃ manāmahe stumahe — that is, the gods joined with Agni give us the excellent wealth and the like that we need; therefore we, joined with Agni (worshipping Agni), praise you, Agni.

वार्यम् (vāryam) — vṛñ varaṇe, svādi. By "ऋहलोर्ण्यत्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-124), the root ending in ṛ, the suffix ṇyat; being ṇit, by "अचो ञ्णिति" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-115) vṛddhi of the root; followed by r: vārya; accusative singular. By "ईडवन्दवृशंसदुहां ण्यतः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-214) these roots ending in ṇyat are initially acute; so the suffix accent is set aside and the initial acute comes.

दधिरे (dadhire) — ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, juhotyādi; in the liṭ third plural, by "लिटस्तझयोरेशिरेच्" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-81) irec for jha; doubling conditioned by liṭ; halādiśeṣa, shortening and jaśtva in the reduplicate; with dadhā + ire, the suffix being kit, by "आतो लोप इटि च" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-64) the ā is dropped: dadhire. Irec being cit, by "चितः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-163) the end-acute comes. Since hi precedes, the nighāta does not come.

Page 368 — Rik 8: grammar (end)

(Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) here the vikaraṇa śap comes. By “अतो दीर्घो यञि” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-101) before mahiṅ the a-final stem is lengthened. By “टित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) the suffix takes e: manāmahe. Following a non-verb, by “तिङ्ङतिङः” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) the nighāta accent.

देवासः (devāsaḥ) — with deva + jas, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-50) the jas after an a-final stem takes the augment asuk: asas; lengthening of the like vowel, rutva and visarga: devāsaḥ. ॥ ८॥ (A printed rule follows; Ṛk 9 begins on the same page.)

Gist: O immortal Agni, after the rite let there be words of praise between both of us, us mortals and you: "well performed" for the sacrificer, "well favoured" for Agni.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अमृत (amṛta) — O Agni, free from death | अथ (atha) — after the completion of the sacrificial rite | प्रशस्तयः (praśastayaḥ) — (in the matter of the rite, ours and yours) words in the form of praise | मर्त्यानां (martyānāṃ) — being human | नः (naḥ) — to us | उभयेषां (ubhayeṣāṃ) — (we and you) to both sides | मिथः (mithaḥ) — mutually (and for the happiness of both) | संतु (saṃtu) — may they be fulfilled.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O Agni, free from death, after the sacrificial rite, may the words of praise, ours and yours, that ought to pass concerning the rite, praising the fruitfulness of the sacrifice, bring happiness to both sides, to us who are human and to you.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed)

> And now, Agni, may there be an interchange of praises between you, the immortal, and us the mortals.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

उभयेषां (ubhayeṣāṃ) — to both, to you who are Agni and to us who are men.

प्रशस्तयः (praśastayaḥ) — praśaṃsārūpā vācaḥ | samyag anuṣṭhitam iti yajamānaviṣayā praśaṃsā | samyag anugṛhītam ity agniviṣayā: conversation in the form of mutual praise; Agni says, "you have carried out the sacrifice well", and the people, the sacrificers, say, "we have been favoured by you": they greet each other in this way.

॥ Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ॥ (grammar, noted briefly; numbers read on 450-dpi line crops, v3a)

अथ (atha) — by "चादयोऽसत्त्वे" (Pā. Sū. 1-4-57) it is called nipāta; by "निपातस्य च" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-136) it is lengthened in the Saṃhitā: athā.

Page 370 — Rik 9: grammar (end)

मर्त्यानाम् (martyānām) — mṛṅ prāṇatyāge; by "असिहसिमृग्रि-" (Uṇ. Sū. 3-366, in the Kannada grammar's series) the suffix tan; guṇa of the root before tan, followed by r: marta. Then by "भवे छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 4-4-110) yat in the sense of "being there"; before a y by "यस्येति च" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-

148) the preceding a is dropped: martya; genitive plural martyānām. By "यतोऽनावः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-213), as it is not the word nau and ends in yat, it is initially acute.

संतु (saṃtu) — asa bhuvi, adādi; in the loṭ third plural the anta substitute for jha; by "एरुः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-86) u. With as + antu, by "अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-72) the vikaraṇa takes luk; by "श्नसोरल्लोपः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-111), before a vowel-initial ṅit suffix, the a of as is dropped: santu.

प्रशस्तयः (praśastayaḥ) — śaṃsu stutau; before ktin, by "अनिदितां हल-" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24) the penultimate n is dropped: praśasti; nominative plural. By "तादौ च निति कृत्यतौ" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-50), before a t-initial nit kṛt suffix other than tu, the gati keeps its own accent; since ktin follows, the gati's udātta is not set aside: praśastayaḥ is initially acute. ॥९॥ (A printed rule follows; Ṛk 10 begins on the same page.)

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Agni, Son of Strength, accept this Sacrifice and this our praise with the three different Sacrificial fires, and grant us abundant food.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 371–372) विश्वेभिः अग्निभिः — with many fires: i.e. with those fires established in the sacrifice — the Āhavanīya, Gārhapatya and Dakṣiṇāgni — or with the many fires in the various places or houses. चनः — food; cana is a name for food, according to Yāska (Ni. 6-16). सहसः — of strength: among the twenty-eight names of strength beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ the word sahas is read, so sahasaḥ means 'of strength' (Ni. 3-9). यहो — son: among the fifteen names for 'offspring', beginning with tukk, tokam, the word yahuḥ is read, so yaho is 'O son' (no reference printed). In the Ṛgveda Agni, and on some occasions Indra too, is called sahasas putra — the son of strength or of power — as is specially seen. Some examples (glosses mine and tentative):

अग्निं सूनुं सनश्रुतं सहसो जातवेदसम् ॥ (ऋ. सं. ३-११-४) agniṃ sūnuṃ sanaśrutaṃ sahaso jātavedasam // — “Agni, the son of strength, famed of old, Jātavedas.”

अग्ने द्युम्नेन जागृवे सहसः सूनवाहुत ॥ (ऋ. सं. ३-२४-३) agne dyumnena jāgṛve sahasaḥ sūnav āhuta // — “O Agni, wakeful with splendour, son of strength, oblation-receiver.”

अस्माकमग्ने अध्वरं जुषस्व सहसः सूनो त्रिषधस्थ हव्यम् ॥ (ऋ. सं. ५-४-८) asmākam agne adhvaraṃ juṣasva sahasaḥ sūno triṣadhastha havyam // — “O Agni, take our sacrifice, son of strength, seated in the three places, the oblation.”

हुवे वः सूनुं सहसो युवानमद्रोघवाचं मतिभिर्यविष्ठम् ॥ (ऋ. सं. ६-५-१) huve vaḥ sūnuṃ sahaso yuvānam adroghavācaṃ matibhir yaviṣṭham // — “I call your son of strength, the young one, of guileless speech, the most youthful, with hymns.”

In these and many other riks the words sahasaḥ sūnuḥ and sahasas putraḥ are used of Agni.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ You are the emperor of all sacrifices. As a horse, with its tail, drives away the gnats and flies in all directions, you drive away enemies in all directions with your flames; such Agni we praise with hymns.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> We have come to worship Agni, the sovereign lord of sacrifices with praises; that Agni who scatters enemies like a horse which brushes off flies with his tail.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 376–377) In this rik Agni is described only as a horse with its tail. There is no obvious similarity between a horse with its tail and Agni; so the commentator supplies some words: 'as a horse with its tail drives off gnats and flies without trouble, so Agni drives off enemies.' अश्वं न — like a horse; the particle na here does not give a negation but the sense of comparison, 'as'; this sense of na exists in the Veda only, not in later Sanskrit. वारवन्तम् — in this word r is used in place of l by vyatyaya; so it means vālavantam, 'having a tail'. नमोभिः — with salutations, with praises. सम्राजन्तम् अध्वराणाम् — like an emperor in sacrifices — Agni who shines with great glory, as the verb rāj dīptau implies. There is no sacrifice without Agni; therefore he is chief, the one who shines as lord and emperor.

Translation: "In the Aptoryāma, in the extra uktha of the Hotṛ, the triplet jarābodha tad viviḍḍhi is a stotriya; so it is laid down in the section yasya paśavo nopadadheran: 'the extra ukthas, jarābodha tad viviḍḍhi' (Āś. 9-11). O jarābodha — Agni, awakened (bodha) by praise (jarā)! For every people (viśe-viśe), that is, for the favour of the people in the form of sacrificers, for the accomplishment of the sacrifice (yajñiyāya), enter (viviḍḍhi) that very worship. And the sacrificer also offers to you, Rudra — the terrible Agni — a dṛśīkam — pleasing, excellent — stomam — hymn: this is to be supplied. Yāska explains thus: 'jarā is praise, from jarati of the sense of praising; awaken to it, or [O] awakener by it; do that; for the worship of every man, a pleasing stoma for Rudra' (Ni. 10-8). Jarābodha: jṝṣ vayohānau [to decay with age]; here the sense of praise; the suffix aṅ by P. 3-3-104 [ṣidbhidādibhyo 'ṅ], then ṭāp; 'he whose awakening (bodha) is by praise', or 'he who is awakened by praise', with ghañ in the passive sense; the vocative's first-syllable acute. Viviḍḍhi: viśa praveśane; hi for the loṭ; ślu for śap by bahulaṃ chandasi; the reduplicate keeps only its first consonant; dhi for hi by hujhalbhyo her dhiḥ; ṣ and ṣṭutva. Or from viṣlṛ vyāptau, in the loṭ 2nd singular, with no guṇa of the reduplicate. Viśe-viśe: the dative ending acute by sāvekācaḥ; the repeated word anudātta by anudāttaṃ ca. Yajñiyāya: gha by P. 5-1-71 [yajñartvigbhyāṃ ghakhañau]. Dṛśīkam: kīkan by anidṛśibhyāṃ ca; first-syllable acute since it is nit." (Bhāṣya ends // ২.৩ // = Varga 23; the part after jarābodha*'s sūtra, p. 396, was missing in this file and has been added from the print, w3.) ॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (p. 396) जराबोध (jarābodha) — O Agni, awakened by praise | विशेविशे (viśe-viśe) — for every sacrificer | यज्ञियाय (yajñiyāya) — for the accomplishment of the sacrifice | तत् (tat) — that [divine sacrificial place] | विविड्ढि (viviḍḍhi) — enter | रुद्राय (rudrāya) — to you of terrible form | दृशीकम् (dṛśīkam) — pleasant | स्तोमम् (stomam) — hymn | [करोति] ([karoti]) — [the sacrificer] offers.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O Agni, awakened by praise! For the success of each man's sacrifice, enter the sacrificial place of the gods. That sacrificer too offers to you, of terrible form, pleasing hymns.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> (O Agni) you who are awakened by praise enter into the oblation for the completion of the sacrifice that benefits mankind; the worshipper offers beautiful (or agreeable) prayers to the terrible Agni.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 396–397) Application. In the Soma-sacrifice called Aptoryāma, the priest called Hotṛ is to recite, at the time of reciting the atirikta-uktha śastra mantras, the three riks beginning jarābodha (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-27-10, 11, 12). Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section yasya paśavo nopadadheran, explains it in the sūtra atiriktokthāni jarābodha tad viviḍḍhi (Āś. 9-11).

जराबोध — jarayā stutyā bodhamāna: one who is awakened by praise. In order that Agni may be awakened at dawn for carrying out the sacrifice in the sacrificial ground, these three riks beginning jarābodha are used at that time. विविड्ढि — praviśa: enter. विशेविशे — for every people; for every sacrificer. यज्ञियाय — for the success of the sacrifice; for the sacrifice to be performed in complete form. रुद्राय — krūrāyogneẏ: to Agni of terrible form; because Agni burns up all things, he has the nature of Rudra. Among the thirteen names of praisers beginning rebhaḥ, jaritā [etc.] the word rudra is read (Ni. 3-19), so rudrāya may mean 'to the praiser'; here one can take it either as 'to Agni, who is pleased by praise' or 'to the Agni who is praised with hymns'. दृशीकम् — darśanīyaṃ saṃdarśanīyam: beautiful, excellent; stomaṃ — hymn; the words yajamānaḥ karoti ['the sacrificer offers'] must be supplied.

> May Agni, of vast splendour, the lord of men, the invoker and messenger of gods hear us through our prayers as a wealthy king listens to his followers.

It is natural, in the world, for people to praise a rich man, and for him to be pleased at hearing that praise. विश्पतिः — prajāpālakaḥ: Agni who protects the people. दैव्यः — belonging to the gods: i.e. of the company of the gods; moreover because Agni invokes the gods, he is called dūta — the messenger. On this the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa has the sentence agnir vai devānāṃ hotā (Ai. Brā. 3-14) and the Taittirīya Saṃhitā has agnir vai devānāṃ dūta āsīt (Tai. Saṃ. 2-5-8-5). केतुः — since ketu has the sense prajñā, the commentator gives for the word an alternative meaning, ‘the messenger who makes the gods known, as he brings them to the place of sacrifice’; as the word also has the sense of ‘act’ [karma], ketuḥ may be taken as ‘one who completes sacrificial acts’. बृहद्भानुः — prauḍharaśmiḥ: of fierce rays — one with fiery, burning rays.

Translation: “In the japa [muttering] that comes before the srugādāpana [as printed; the taking up of the ladle] at the Darśa-pūrṇamāsa, this rik namo mahadbhyaḥ is used; so it is laid down in the section brahmādene prāśiṣyamāṇe: ‘sūryo no divaspātu; namo mahadbhyo namo arbhakebhyaḥ’ (Āś. 1-4). Impelled by Agni, Śunaḥśepa praised all the gods (viśvān devān) with this rik. So it is handed down: ‘Agni said to him, “Now praise the Viśvedevas; then we shall release you.” He praised the Viśvedevas with this rik, namo mahadbhyo namo arbhakebhyaḥ’ (Ai. Brā. 7-16). Mahantaḥ: those greater in qualities; arbhakāḥ: those lesser in qualities; yuvānaḥ: the young; āśinaḥ: those pervaded by age, the old. Translation: "The sūkta yatra grāvā is the fifth [of this anuvāka] and has nine riks. The first six are in Anuṣṭubh; the three beginning āyajī are in Gāyatrī. Of the first four the deity is Indra; then two have the mortar (ulūkhala) as deity; the two that come next have both mortar and pestle (musala); of the last, ucchiṣṭam, the deity is one of these: Hariścandra, the pressing-skin (adhiṣavaṇa-carma) or Soma. So the Bṛhaddevatā says: 'with the last [rik] he praises either the pressing-skin or the Soma' (Bṛ. 3-411 as printed). So also the Anukramaṇikā: 'yatra grāvā, nine, six Anuṣṭubh at the beginning; yac cid dhi, two to the mortar; the next two to the pestle as well; the last, of Prajāpati Hariścandra, is in praise of the skin.' The first four are applied in the homa at the añjaḥsava; the four from the fifth in the pressing; the last at the Droṇakalaśa, in the pouring-down of the Soma. So the Brāhmaṇa: 'Then Śunaḥśepa saw this añjaḥsava; he pressed it with these four; with yac cid dhi tvaṃ gṛhe gṛhe he then poured it down into the Droṇakalaśa; with the rik ucchiṣṭaṃ camvor bhara; then, when [Hariścandra] had taken hold of him, he offered it with the four former [riks] with the svāhā-call' (Ai. Brā. 7-17)." [Translation of the Anukramaṇikā and Brāhmaṇa mine and tentative.]

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ (pp. 408–409) Yatra grāvā is the fifth sūkta of the sixth anuvāka and has nine riks. The first six riks are in Anuṣṭubh; the three beginning āyajī are in Gāyatrī. The first four riks have Indra as deity; the next two the mortar; the two after that the mortar and the pestle; the last rik has Hariścandra, the adhiṣavaṇa skin, or Soma as deity. The Bṛhaddevatā, a work by Śaunaka, says: carmādhiṣavaṇīyaṃ vā somaṃ vāntyā praśaṃsati (Bṛ. 3-411 as printed); the Anukramaṇikā too says: yatra grāvā nava ṣaḷanuṣṭubādi yac cid dhy ūlūkhalyau pare mausalyau ca prajāpater hariścandrasyāntyā carmapraśaṃsā veti [as printed]. The application of this sūkta is as follows: the first four riks are used in the homa called añjassava; the four from the fifth in the pressing (abhiṣavaṇa); the last rik is used when the Soma-juice is poured into the Droṇakalaśa, the wooden vessel, for the mantras needed. In this connection:

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Indra, in the sacrifice in which flat-bottomed stone is raised to press the Soma-juice, partake of that Soma expressed in the mortar.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 411–415) Chief sense. O Indra! In this sacrifice the soma-creeper is placed in the mortar, and a broad-based stone is raised in the hand for crushing it, and the juice is taken; know that the soma-juice thus crushed and standing here is prepared for you alone; accept it, that is, drink it, and be satisfied.

The preparation of the soma-juice (summary of the author's long note, pp. 411–413). In the Soma-yāga it is customary to crush, press and strain the soma-creeper with a stone, mix with it milk, curds and barley, offer it to the gods, and then for the priests and the sacrificer to drink the rest. This is done on the chief days in the morning, at midday and in the evening — the prātaḥsavana, mādhyandinasavana and tṛtīyasavana — the pressing being called abhiṣavaṇa, savana. The soma-creeper is no longer found nowadays; formerly it grew on river banks and on the mountains and was brought, at great cost, for sacrificial use; even now the rite of somakrayaṇa ('buying the soma') is performed. The creeper is brown (babhru), ruddy (aruṇa), or yellow-brown; it was brought chiefly from the mountains, the mountain called Mūjavat being famous for it. Its shoot is called aṃśa (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-168-3; 3-48-2, etc.); the shoot with sprouts vakṣaṇā (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-1-17) and vāṇa (Ṛ. Saṃ. 4-24-9; 9-50-1); the juice andhaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-28-7; 3-48-1; 4-16-1); the stalk parvan (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-9-1). (These references were omitted in the first version and are restored from the print, w3.) The mortar in which it is crushed is the ulūkhala; the stone for pounding is the grāvan (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-83-6; 1-135-7) or adri (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-130-2; 1-135-5; 1-137-1); the vessel in which it is offered to the gods is camū; the vessels for the priests' drinking are kalaśa and camasa; in some places camū stands for the mortar and the pounding stone, 'mortar and pestle' (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-28-9; 4-18-3; 6-57-2); the skin (tvak) on which it is pounded is of ox-hide (gocarma) (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-94-9; 10-116-4); the vessels for collecting the juice are kośa (Ṛ. Saṃ. 7-101-4; 8-20-8), sadastha (Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-62-15; 9-1-2; 9-17-8), dru (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-1-2; 9-65-6; 9-98-2), vana (Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-14-9; 9-66-9), droṇa (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-15-7; 9-33-2); the ladle is sruva (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-116-24); the cloth or net for straining is pavitra, and sometimes the soma was strained through the gaps of the fingers; the juice used unmixed is called śukra (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-137-1; 3-32-2; 8-2-10) or śuci (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-5-5; 1-30-2; 8-2-9), and, according to colour, babhru (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-33-2; 9-63-4 & 6), harita (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-3-9; 9-7-6; 9-65-8), aruṇa (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-40-2; 9-45-3), aruṣa (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-61-21), śoṇa (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-97-13); it is also fragrant (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-97-9; 9-107-2). To give the juice a taste, milk is mixed (gavāśira), curds (dadhyāśira), barley (yavāśira); the residue after pressing is ṛjīṣa.

unnataḥ: broad at the base; a stone that is round like a grindstone. ऊर्ध्वो भवति सोतवे — to lift the stone up in the hand to crush the creeper — when it is necessary to pound the creeper placed in the mortar or on the stone, another stone is held and brought down: this is what is said here. उलूखलसुतानाम् — the ulūkhala is the mortar, a stone in the middle of which there is a hollow, the vessel to receive the creeper pounded and its juice. On the word ulūkhala Yāska says:

> उलूखलम् । उलूखलमुरुकरं वोर्ध्वखं वोर्क्करं वोरु मे कुर्वित्यब्रवीत्तदुलूखलमभवत् । उरुकरं वैतत्तदुलूखलमित्याचक्षते परोक्षेणेति ब्राह्मणम् ॥ (नि. ९-२०)

ulūkhalam | ulūkhalam urukaraṃ vordhvakhaṃ vorkkaraṃ voru me kurv ity abravīt tad ulūkhalam abhavat | urukaraṃ vaitat tad ulūkhalam ity ācakṣate parokṣeṇeti brāhmaṇam || (ni. 9-20) — "Ulūkhala: either urukara, 'making much [food]'; or ūrdhvakha, 'a hollow that is upright'; or ūrkkara, 'making sap' [ūrj]; or, 'he said: "Make much for me!" [uru me kuru], and that became the ulūkhala'; 'this is indeed urukara; they call it ulūkhala indirectly' — so the Brāhmaṇa." (The Kannada exposition follows: the l* is for r, so urukhara/urukara; the grain placed in it and pounded with the pestle gives much food; or the one on which the creeper is crushed gives the juice; and so on.)*

> यो वै दश यज्ञायुधानि वेद मुखतोऽस्य यज्ञः कल्पते । स्फ्यश्च कपालानि चाग्निहोत्रहवणी च शूर्पं च कृष्णाजिनं च शम्या चोलूखलं च मुसलं च दृषच्चोपला चैतानि वै दश यज्ञायुधानि य एवं वेद मुखतोऽस्य यज्ञः कल्पते ॥ (तै. सं. १-६-८)

yo vai daśa yajñāyudhāni veda mukhato 'sya yajñaḥ kalpate | sphyaś ca kapālāni cāgnihotrahavaṇī ca śūrpaṃ ca kṛṣṇājinaṃ ca śamyā colūkhalaṃ ca musalaṃ ca dṛṣac copalā caitāni vai daśa yajñāyudhāni ya evaṃ veda mukhato 'sya yajñaḥ kalpate || — "He who knows the ten sacrificial weapons — for him the sacrifice is arranged from the very start: the sphya (wooden sword), the kapālas (potsherds), the agnihotra-havaṇī (ladle), the śūrpa (winnowing-basket), the black antelope skin, the śamyā (peg), the mortar, the pestle, the dṛṣad (lower stone) and the upalā (upper stone). These are the ten weapons of the sacrifice; for him who knows thus the sacrifice is arranged from the very start." (Tai. Saṃ. 1-6-8.) The author then explains each: the sphya is a wooden sword for cutting darbha and the like; the kapālas are the potsherds on which the puroḍāśa cake is baked; the agnihotra-havaṇī is a wooden ladle-like vessel for the agnihotra oblation; the śūrpa is the winnowing basket; the kṛṣṇājina is the black antelope-skin on which the pounding is done; the śamyā is the peg used for killing the animal; the ulūkhala, the mortar, is for pounding grain and pressing soma; the musala, pestle, for pounding grain; the dṛṣad is the lower stone on which soma is pounded, or a stone slab; the upalā is the pebble stone used to crush what is placed on the dṛṣad. Of these ten implements, the mortar is one.

अव इत् — avagatyaiva: knowing; i.e. 'knowing that the soma-juice pressed in the mortar is prepared for you'. The commentator gives ava the sense avagamanārtha ('knowing'). Skandasvāmin takes ava and it as prepositions to be joined with the verb, and glosses ava it jalgulaḥ as punar punar avagira pibety arthaḥ — 'swallow again and again; drink'. जल्गुलः — gala adane; bhakṣaya: eat, drink — ‘knowing that the juice of the soma-creeper pressed in the mortar is prepared for you alone, drink it’.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 417–418) जघना अधिषवण्या — jaghanā means the two hip-regions of women, the upper parts of the thighs; they are by nature broad and fleshy. Adhiṣavaṇa means the wooden boards [vessels] for filling with soma-juice; they are as big as hips — that is, they hold much juice. Or the hip-regions touch each other when close; so when the juice is taken, the two boards, rubbing against each other, press the soma and take the juice: that is the intention. On this occasion adhiṣavaṇa means the two wooden boards used for pressing out the soma-juice. Between the ends of these boards the soma-creeper is placed, and the juice is pressed out. The seer compares the rubbing of these boards with the hip-regions of a woman. Or, as the commentator explains, the adhiṣavaṇa means the large wooden vessels used for filling with the pressed soma; these, like women's hips, are large and hold much juice — that is the chief intention. [Rik 2, grammar tail — printed p. 419] (Grammar, noted briefly: the last word treated is kṛtā [ḍukṛñ karaṇe + kta; the dual ending is replaced by ā by P. 7-1-39 supāṃ suluk…]; numerals as printed.)

> Indra, where they bind the churning staff with ropes like reins to restrain (a horse), partake of that Soma expressed in the mortar.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 422) In this rik the seer describes the process of churning butter with a churning-stick and rope, in which the rope round the churning-stick is compared to the reins tied to a horse. The reins tied to a horse let it go no further than the driver wishes; so the rope fixed to the churning-staff makes it work under control. The seer thus describes the sacrifice as adorned with works of churning and the like. मन्थाम् — mathi viloḍane; mathnāty anena iti manthā: the churning-staff used for churning. रश्मीन् यमितवा इव — here the word aśva is not stated, but to complete the sense the commentator explains ‘as one ties the reins of a horse’. Though raśanā means a rope, how the word raśmi got this sense the commentator does not explain.

Translation: "O ulūkhalaka — dear mortar! Although (yac cid dhi) you are employed in every house for pounding [grain], yet here, in this Vedic rite, with the sharp strokes of the pestle, utter (vada) a sound dyumattamam — most brilliant, exceedingly bright, with a great noise. An illustration: jayatām iva dundubhiḥ — as, in war, the drum of kings who have won the victory makes a great sound. Yāska has explained the word ulūkhala thus [the same passage as under Rik 1]. Ulūkhalaka: the first-syllable acute [vocative]; since the sūtra apādādau excludes … the lowering does not apply. Yujyase: the yak accent remains; no lowering since the yat-type particle precedes. Dyumattamam: kvip of the saṃpadādi class for the sense 'to shine'; ut for div by P. 6-1-131; y by yaṇ …; matup is acute by [hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matup]; But it was said that in diva ut the stem, not the root, is meant; then, as in akṣadyūḥ, ūṭh (P. 6-4-19) would be due here too. > And, lord of the forest, the wind is blowing gently over your head; therefore, O mortar, press out the Soma for Indra to drink.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 428) वनस्पते — here the seer addresses the mortar as vanaspati, 'lord of the forest', which is to be understood from the fact that the mortar is made of wood; mortars are made both of stone and of wood; the one used here may be a wooden one; hence the word vanaspati is used. वातो वि वात्यग्रमित् — the wind blows in front, or above; the commentator says that, by the strokes of the pestle, the air stirs and blows. This sense does not fit very well. उलूखल — ūrdhvaṃ khaṃ yasya sa ulūkhalaḥ: one whose hollow (kha, space) is upward.

natural. विजर्भृतः — hṛñ haraṇe: they sport; they seem to sport. हरी इव — like Indra's horses; the two horses of Indra are called harī; Yāska gives the derivation harī indrasya ('the two bay horses of Indra'). अन्धांसि — foods: andhaḥ (Ni. 5-1, as printed) is a name for food. बप्सता — bhasa bhakṣaṇadīptyoḥ: eating, chewing; the sound made as horses chew gram and the like is compared to the sound made by pounding in the mortar with the pestle.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Fill the remaining Soma in the two jars, pour it on the sieve, and put it on the cow-hide.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 436–437) In this rik the seer, addressing Hariścandra, the sacrificer, or some priest (the adhvaryu, perhaps), tells him what is to be done with the remaining soma. उच्छिष्टम् — śiṣṭam, the remainder: the soma-creeper is placed in the mortar and crushed, and the juice, standing on top of the stone (grāvan), flows down; the remainder, small in amount, is what stays in the mortar [and on the boards]. चम्वोः — camū is a wooden vessel used in the soma-pressing, used for offering the soma to the gods; here it means the two wooden boards (adhiṣavaṇa-phalaka) between which the soma-creeper is pressed. Skandasvāmin explains camasa as the drinking-vessel of the priests; the dual here, by vyatyaya, stands for 'the two camasa vessels'. पवित्रे — Yāska explains pavitra as 'what purifies' (punāti) (Ni. 5-6), listing its many senses — mantra, ray, water, fire — but here it must be understood as the filter or sieve with which the soma-juice is strained. In some places kuśa grass is placed over the vessel in which the soma is strained, and the juice is poured over it so that the pure juice falls into the vessel; hence pavitra here means the 'filter'. गोः त्वचि — on the cow-hide: besides pouring the soma into droṇakalaśa and other wooden vessels, there are descriptions in the Ṛgveda of the soma being poured on a sieve made of cow-hide, or of the hide being spread under the stalks, so that the juice falls on it and goes down — so a cow-hide was used in the soma-pressing.

Translation: "The sixth sūkta, beginning yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ, has seven riks; its seer is Śunaḥśepa; the metre is Pankti; the deity is Indra. The Anukramaṇikā too says: 'yac cid dhi — seven, Pāṅkta.' In the Pṛṣṭhya-ṣaḍaha, on the fifth day, at the midday pressing, the hotrakas [assistants of the Hotṛ] should make the seven-rik sūkta yac cid dhi into three triplets and insert one triplet each into their own śastra; in the section caturthe 'hani: 'yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ — one each, in the same way' (Ā. 7-11) — so it is laid down in the sūtra."

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ (p. 438) Yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ is the sixth sūkta of the sixth anuvāka and has seven riks. Śunaḥśepa is the seer; the metre is Pankti. The Anukramaṇikā says 'yac cid dhi sapta pāṅktam', that is, the sūkta yac cid dhi has seven riks. In the Soma-sacrifice called Pṛṣṭhya-ṣaḍaha, on the fifth day, at the mādhyandina-savana (midday pressing), three priests who are assistants of the Hotṛ (the hotrakas) are to take the three triplets of this sūkta — tṛca, tṛca, [and the remaining rik] — and use them, each at his own śastra recitation: so it is explained in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra in the section caturthe 'hani, in the sūtra yac cid dhi satya somapā (Ā. 7-11).

Translation: “Impelled by the Viśvedevas, Śunaḥśepa praised Indra with the twenty-two riks beginning with this one. So the Brāhmaṇa says: ‘The Viśvedevas said to him: “Indra is the most vigorous, the strongest, the mightiest, the best, the most capable of carrying across of the gods; praise him now; then we shall release you.” He praised Indra with the sūkta yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ and fifteen [riks] of the next’ (Ai. Brā. 7-16). O somapāḥ — drinker of soma! Satya — truth-speaking Indra! Yac cid dhi — although we are anāśastā iva — as if undeserving of yathā — twenty-two riks in all. (Ai. Brā. 7-16). We have explained this matter in the Śunaḥśepa story itself.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 441) Śunaḥśepa, having prayed to the Viśvedevas with the rik namo mahadbhyaḥ, [was told by them:] "Śunaḥśepa, among the gods Indra is the strongest, the most glorious, the most patient (sahiṣṇu); praise him, so that you may be released from this bond"; and, with their consent, Śunaḥśepa praises Indra with this sūkta yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ and with the next fifteen riks of the following sūkta ā va indraṃ kriviṃ

> अनाशस्ता इव अप्रशस्ता इव । ईषच्छंसनं स्तुतिराशस्तं अविद्यमानं आशस्तं येषां ते अनाशस्ताः ईषत्स्तुतिवर्जिताः ।

anāśastā iva apraśastā iva | īṣacchaṃsanaṃ stutirāśastaṃ avidyamānaṃ āśastaṃ yeṣāṃ te anāśastāḥ īṣatstutivarjitāḥ |

"Anāśastā iva: as if unpraised. A slight praising is āśasta; those who have no āśasta are anāśastāḥ: devoid of even slight praise." Unworthy of praise: we are, in praising you, not fit [for it]; yet because we praise you, may you be pleased and give us the cows and horses we need. आ तू न इन्द्र शंसय गोष्वश्वेषु शुभ्रिषु सहस्रेषु तुवीमघ — the sense of śaṃsaya — 'make [us] praiseworthy among cows and horses' — appears to be: 'give us thousands of cows and horses, and make us renowned as persons possessing them'. तुवीमघ — tuvi means 'much' (Ni. 3-13), magha means 'wealth' (Ni. 3-9 as printed); hence tuvīmagha is 'having much wealth'.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Send to sleep the two females that see each other, let them sleep and not be wakeful;
> Indra, of plentiful wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 446–447) The sense of this rik is not clear. The commentator says: Śunaḥśepa, who is expecting death, prays to Indra that the two female messengers of Yama who may come to take away his life at the time of his death should not do so, but fall asleep without waking. Both the commentator and Skandasvāmin explain the sense by supplying words here and there. In the rik there is no word yamadūtī ('Yama's messenger') nor any word suggesting the time of death; the rik speaks only of two persons — females — looking at each other: abudhyamāne is feminine dual; hence the commentator says that mithūdṛśā is 'the two Yama-messengers looking at each other' [by supplying the word]. The seer's intention is not clear.

नि स्वापय — nitarāṃ supte kuru: put them into a deep sleep. मिथूदृशा — mithunatayā paśyantī [those who see as a pair]: two persons seeing each other: the word yamadūtyau ('two messengers of Yama') the commentator supplies; this is a dual word. सस्ताम् — ṣasa svapne: 'let them sleep'. अबुध्यमाने — [two] not waking: a dual word. ### Pages 448–450 — Sūkta 29, Rik 4

(Bhāṣya re-read from the print, w3: the compressed and doubtful parts of the tail filled (तस्यासिद्धवत्… , जभि नाशने, कृञ् हिंसायाम् (was कृकं हिंसायाम् [?]), कृदाधारार्चिकलिभ्यः कन्, उ. ३-४० and उ. १-६ confirmed, किदित्यनुवृत्तेर्गुणाभावः, तथा च कृको हिंसा… कृकदाशुः, बहुलग्रहणाद्दाशतेरपि कृक उपपदे, प्रत्ययस्वरेणोदात्तः); पा. ६-४-३६ confirmed; the closing ॥ २७ ॥ is the varga number (Varga 27 ends here).)

Gist (mine): "Kill (jahi) every man who abuses (parikrośam) us from all sides; destroy (jambhaya) the enemy who deals harm (kṛkadāśvam). The rest as before." The grammatical tail (p. 455) treats parikrośam (pacādi ac), jahi (hanter jaḥ, with the principle asiddhavad atrābhāt), jambhaya (curādi ṇic) and kṛkadāśvam (kṛka from kṛñ hiṃsāyām with kan (U. 3-40) in the bhāva sense, dāś dāne with uṇ by kṛke vacaḥ kaś ca (U. 1-6), end-acute; in the accusative ami pūrvaḥ is set aside by vā chandasi, yaṇ, and the ending made svarita by udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ).

Pratipadārtha (p. 456, rendered) — परिक्रोशम् [him] who reviles and blames us; सर्वम् every one; जहि destroy; कृकदाश्वम् the enemy who does us harm; जम्भय kill; तुवीमघ [Indra] of plentiful wealth; इन्द्र O Indra; नः us; सहस्रेषु in thousands; शुभ्रिषु excellent; गोषु in cows; अश्वेषु in horses; आ शंसय make [us] worthy (give us thousands of cows and horses).

Bhāvārtha (p. 456) — O Indra, destroy every enemy who reviles us and speaks ill of us; kill all who do us harm. O Indra of abundant wealth, give us thousands of excellent cows and horses and make us rich.

English Translation (as printed, p. 456)

> Strike down everyone who reviles us; destroy everyone that does us injury; O Indra of plentiful wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (p. 456) — परिक्रोशम् — kruśa āhvāne; paritaḥ krośayatīti parikrośaḥ: one who, out of hostility, rages at us or speaks ill. जहि — hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ: restrain, injure, destroy. जम्भय — jabhi nāśane: destroy. कृकदाश्वम् — kṛñ hiṃsāyām; kṛko hiṃsā | tāṃ dāśati prayacchatīti kṛkadāśuḥ: a man who deals injury, who brings us harm.

Grammar pages (pp. 456–457), noted briefly (corrected from the print, w3): the Kannada grammar treats parikrośam (kruśa āhvāne, bhvādi; paritaḥ krośayati iti parikrośaḥ; ac by nandigrahapacādibhyo… (P. sū. 3-1-134), being in the pacādi list; guṇa of the light penultimate; accusative; a compound with a kṛt-final second member, so gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (P. sū. 6-2-139)), jahi (hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ, adādi, loṭ 2nd sg. sip → hi; ja for the root by hanter jaḥ (P. sū. 6-4-36); since by asiddhavad atrābhāt (P. sū. 6-4-22) the ja-substitute counts as not effected, the loss of hi by ato heḥ (P. sū. 6-4-105) does not occur), jambhaya (jabhi nāśane, curādi; ṇic in its own sense by satyāpapāśa… (P. sū. 3-1-25); num as an idit; the ṇic-final jambhi is a root by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ (P. sū. 3-1-32); loṭ, śap, hi lost after a; guṇa and ay of ṇic; śap being pit is anudātta, so the udātta of ṇic remains: the a after the bh is acute) and kṛkadāśvam (kṛñ hiṃsāyām, kryādi; kan in the bhāva sense by kṛdādhārārcikalibhyaḥ kan (U. sū. 3-320), kit carried over, so no guṇa: kṛkaḥ; kṛkaṃ hiṃsāṃ dāśati prayacchati iti kṛkadāśuḥ: dāś dāne; by the word bahulam in uṇādayo bahulam (P. sū. 3-3-1), with kṛka as upapada, uṇ by kṛke vacaḥ kaś ca (U. sū. 1-6); end-acute by the suffix's initial acute; in the accusative kṛkadāśu+am: ami pūrvaḥ (P. sū. 6-1-107) would give the single prior form, but by vā chandasi it does not apply; yaṇ: kṛkadāśvam; the ending becomes svarita by udāttasvarityor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya (P. sū. 8-2-4): a svarita-final word). ॥ ७ ॥ File's Uṇ. 3-40 [?] (grammar prints U. sū. 3-320), Uṇ. 1-6 [?] (confirmed) and P. 6-1-106 (not printed) corrected.

Close of Sūkta 29 (p. 457) — ಇಪ್ಪತ್ತೊಂಭತ್ತನೆಯ ಸೂಕ್ತವು ಸಮಾಪ್ತವಾಗಿದೆ (ippattombhattaneya sūktavu samāptavāgide) — "The twenty-ninth sūkta is ended." (At the foot of p. 457: sheet-mark "58" and "VOLUME 3".)

Translation: "We, the Śunaḥśepas, desiring food (vājayantaḥ), O priests and sacrificers, pour (ā siñce: 'we sprinkle on all sides, we satisfy') this Indra of yours with Soma-juices (indubhiḥ) — Indra who has a hundred rites (śatakratum) and is exceedingly grown (maṃhiṣṭham). The illustration for the sprinkling: as one fills a well (krivim) with water, so. The word krivi is vapriḥ [as printed]: among the fourteen names of a well beginning with kāṭuḥ, 'kriviḥ, kūpaḥ, sūdaḥ' is read." The grammatical tail treats krivim (kṛtī chedane; kvin, by nipātana under Uṇ. 4-56, hence loss of the t; initial udātta as nit), yathā (all-grave at the end of a pāda, Phi. 4-17), vājayantaḥ (kyac; the ī and lengthening prohibited by na chandasy aputrasya, as the separate rule aśvāghasyāt shows), maṃhiṣṭham (iṣṭhan after tṛc by Pā. 5-3-59, loss of tṛ by Pā. 6-4-154) and siñce (singular by vyatyaya; num by śe mucādīnām).

Pratipadārtha (pp. 459–460, rendered) — वाजयन्तः we who desire food; वः [you], the priests and sacrificers — your; शतक्रतुम् him who is endowed with a hundred deeds; मंहिष्ठम् the exceedingly grown

(Pratipadārtha continued) इन्द्रम् Indra; इन्दुभिः with Soma-juices; यथा क्रिविम् as a well [is filled with water]; आ सिञ्चे we fill all round and satisfy.

Bhāvārtha (p. 460) — We who desire food satisfy, on every side, with Soma-juices this your Indra, who has a hundred deeds and is exceedingly great, as a well is filled with water.

English Translation (as printed, p. 460)

> We, desirous of wealth satisfy this your Indra who is the mightiest (among gods) and (is the performer or is praised) in a hundred sacrifices with drops of Soma-juice as a well (is filled with water).

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (p. 460) — क्रिविम् — kūpaḥ kātuḥ and so on: since the word krivi is read among the fourteen names of a well, krivi means a well. Krivim yathā: as a well is filled with water, so Indra's belly is filled with Soma-juice: much Soma is prepared for Indra's drinking. शतक्रतुम् — kratu is 'act' (Ni. 3-1) and 'wisdom' (Ni. 3-13); hence śatakratu is 'one who has done a hundred mighty deeds' or 'very wise'. The Purāṇas say 'one who did a hundred sacrifices' (Indra obtained Indra's rank so); but that sense does not fit here; the sense intended is 'one who has done a hundred [mighty] deeds'. मंहिष्ठम् — mahi vṛddhau; atiśayena maṃhitā maṃhiṣṭhaḥ: most grown, most excellent. वः इन्द्रम् — 'your Indra', the Indra whom you praise: by the word vaḥ the speech is understood as addressed to the priests. सिञ्चे — ṣicir kṣaraṇe: we make [him] wet, fill; with indubhiḥ: we satisfy Indra with Soma-juices.

Translation: "The aforesaid hundred or thousand [of Soma] is brought together for the exhilaration (madāya) of mighty (śuṣmiṇe: strong) Indra. By this very hundred and thousand (enā hi), in this Indra's belly, the pervasion (vyacaḥ) is held (dadhe): is held. Illustration: samudro na — like the sea: as water pervades the middle of the sea, so." The grammatical tail treats enā (ā for the instrumental by supāṃ suluk), vyacaḥ (the kuṭādi status of vyac is denied before asi (Kā. 1-2-1-1), so the ṅit-like treatment lapses and grahijyā… gives no saṃprasāraṇa; initial udātta as asun is nit) and dadhe (passive liṭ; after the reduplicated syllable's shortening and jaś, loss of ā by āto lopa iṭi ca; final udātta by the suffix accent; not made grave because of hi ca).

Pratipadārtha (p. 465, rendered) — यत् those (described before) hundreds and thousands of Soma-juices; शुष्मिणे for the strong Indra; मदाय for satisfaction (exhilaration); एना हि these [Soma-juices]; समुद्रः न as the sea [is filled with water]; अस्य this Indra's; उदरे in the belly; व्यचः दधे [they] fill.

Bhāvārtha (p. 465) — Those offerings of hundreds and thousands of Soma-juices described before, prepared for the exhilaration of the mighty Indra, together fill his belly as the sea is filled with water.

English Translation (as printed, p. 465)

> All those libations of Soma (which were mentioned above) are, for his intoxication, accumulated in the belly of powerful Indra as the water in the sea.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (p. 465) — मदाय — for contentment, to bring about intoxication. शुष्मिणे — balavate: to the strong Indra. समुद्रो न — as water gathers in the sea, so the hundreds and thousands of Soma-juices we offer collect in Indra's belly and give him exhilaration. व्यचो दधे — vyāptir dadhe | dhṛtā bhavati: 'pervasion' means they are held, gathered together in the belly.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 465–466, noted briefly) — enā: 'dvitīyāṭausv enaḥ' (Pā. sū. 2-4-34): ena for idam/etad in anvādeśa before the accusative, ṭā and os; (p. 466) ā for ṭā by 'supāṃ suluk' (Pā. sū. 7-1-39). vyacaḥ: vyaca vyājīkaraṇe, tudādi; asun by 'sarvadhātubhyo 'sun' (U. sū. 4-628); 'vyaceḥ kuṭāditvam anasi' (Kā. 1-2-1-1), so no ṅit-treatment under 'gāṅkuṭādi', and no saṃprasāraṇa by 'grahijyāvayi' (Pā. sū. 6-1-16); initial udātta by 'ñnityādir nityam' (Pā. sū. 6-1-197). dadhe: ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, juhotyādi, passive liṭ third person singular; eś by 'liṭas tajhayor eśirec' (Pā. sū. 3-4-81); doubling, shortening, jaśtva; loss of ā by 'āto lopa iṭi ca' (Pā. sū. 6-4-64); final udātta; no lowering, by 'hi ca' (Pā. sū. 8-1-34).

Translation: “O Indra, lord of riches (rādhānām pate: protector of wealth), carried by praise-words (girvāhaḥ), hero (vīra: endowed with valour) — of you, whose praise is such: may your glory (vibhūti: fortune) be pleasing and true (sūnṛtā).” The grammatical tail treats stotram (ṣṭran by ‘dāmnīśasa…’, Pā. 3-2-182; then ac of the arśa-ādi group; or aṇ ‘belonging to the praiser', without vṛddhi since a rule framed with a technical name is optional), rādhānām pate ('by which they prosper' = riches; the genitive and vocative grave together, the genitive counting as part of the vocative by subāmantrite), girvāhaḥ (asun after vah even with a kāraka first member, 'vahihādhāñbhyaś chandasi', with the first member's accent, U. 4-226; vṛddhi of the penultimate as ṇit continues; no lengthening under 'rvor upadhāyāḥ', Pā. 8-2-76, a Vedic licence; initial acute of the vocative by the sixth-book rule) and vibhūtiḥ (the preverb keeps its accent by tādau ca niti).

Pratipadārtha (p. 469, rendered) — राधानाम् of riches [for the Kannada: of prosperities]; पते O protector; गिर्वाहः who bears [accepts] praises; वीर O Indra, endowed with valour; यस्य whose (whoever makes); ते your; स्तोत्रम् praise; तस्य his; विभूतिः prosperity; सूनृता pleasant and true in form; अस्तु let it be.

Bhāvārtha (p. 470) — O Indra, protector of riches, who accept praise-words and are endowed with valour: may the prosperity of the sacrificer who praises you thus be pleasant and true.

English Translation (as printed, p. 470)

> Indra, hero and lord of riches and accepter of praises, may genuine prosperity be the reward of him who praises you.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (p. 470) — गिर्वाहसः [the print's lemma] — giraḥ stuteyaḥ tā uhyante prāpyante yatra stotṛbhiḥ sa girvāhaḥ: he to whom praise-words are carried by the praisers; tasya saṃbodhanaṃ he girvāhaḥ | stutihavya: its vocative, 'O girvāhaḥ', one to whom praises are offered; girvāhaḥ = one praised by such words, or one who receives praises. Giraḥ are words in the form of praise. यस्य — because yat is used, tasya is required. विभूतिः — vibhavatīti vibhūtiḥ: prosperity, wealth, riches (English as printed: "prosperity, wealth, riches &c."). सूनृता — priyasatyarūpā; or śobhaneṣu nṛṣu stutipareṣu tāyate vistīryate iti sūnṛtā: spreading among good men devoted to praise; stotrakṛdbhyo bhogyety arthaḥ: to be enjoyed by those who make praises; "genuine and well-liked" (English words as printed in the Kannada); that which, producing growth among those who praise, is enjoyed by them.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 470–471, noted briefly) — stotram: ṣṭuñ stutau, adādi; s for the initial ṣ; ṣṭran by 'dāmnīśasa-' (Pā. sū. 3-2-182); guṇa; then in the sense 'it has praise' ac by 'arśa ādibhyo 'c' (Pā. sū. 5-2-127), loss of a by 'yasyeti ca' (Pā. sū. 6-4-148); or tṛc, stotṛ, and aṇ by 'tasyedam' (Pā. sū. 4-3-120), the vṛddhi of 'taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-2-117) not applied (saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ); (p. 471) end-acute. rādhānām pate: rādha sādha saṃsiddhau; 'subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare' (Pā. sū. 2-1-2): the genitive becomes part of the vocative, so the āṣṭamika lowering of 'āmantritasya ca' covers both. girvāhaḥ: vah prāpaṇe, bhvādi; asun by 'vahihādhāñbhyaś chandasi' (U. sū. 4-660) even with a kāraka first member, with the first member's accent; ṇit by 'vaser ṇit' (U. sū. 4-657) continued, so vṛddhi by 'ata upadhāyāḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-2-116); the lengthening of 'rvor upadhāyā dīrgha ikaḥ' (Pā. sū. 8-2-76) does not apply, 'vā chandasi'; at the start of the pāda initial udātta by the ṣāṣṭhika

‘āmantritasya ca’ (Pā. sū. 6-1-198). vibhūtiḥ: bhū sattāyām, ktin; ‘tādau ca niti’ (Pā. sū. 6-2-50): vi keeps its accent, initial udātta.

Translation: "At each undertaking (yoge yoge), at the start of each rite; at each battle (vāje vāje) that obstructs the work — in each such contest we, friends (dear like friends), call (havāmahe) upon Indra, exceedingly strong (tavastaram), for protection. Yoge yoge: yujir yoge; ghañ by halaś ca; kutva by Pā. 7-3-52 cajoḥ ku ghiṇṇyatoḥ; initial acute because ghañ is ñit; doubling by nityavīpsayoḥ, the repeated member unaccented. Tavastaram: from tavas, the possessive vini by Pā. 5-2-121 asmāyāmedhā…, whose loss is Vedic."

Pratipadārtha (p. 474, rendered) — योगेयोगे at each (rite's) beginning; वाजेवाजे in each battle (that hinders the rite); तवस्तरम् the very strong; इन्द्रम् Indra; ऊतये for protection; सखायः we, dear like friends; हवामहे we call, praying.

Bhāvārtha (p. 474) — At each beginning of a rite and at each battle that obstructs it, we, dear to him like friends, call the exceedingly strong Indra for protection.

English Translation (as printed, p. 474)

> On every occasion and in every battle we, his friends invoke the powerful Indra for our protection.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (pp. 474–475) — योगेयोगे — yujir yoge; praveśe praveśe tattatkarmopakrame: on each occasion, at each beginning of work. तवस्तरम् — since tavas is read among the twenty-one names of strength beginning ojas, pājas (Ni. 3-9), tavas is strength; tavastaram: exceedingly strong.

वाजेवाजे — vāja is read among the forty-four names of battle beginning raṇa, vivāk (Ni. 3-9, as printed); doubled, it means 'in each battle'. सखायः — sakhivat priyāḥ: we who, like friends, are dear to you.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (p. 475, noted briefly) — yogeyoge: yujir yoge, rudhādi; ghañ by 'halaś ca' (Pā. sū. 3-3-121); kutva by 'cajoḥ ku ghiṇṇyatoḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-3-52), g by the paribhāṣā 'sthāne 'ntaratamaḥ' (Pā. sū. 1-1-50); locative singular; initial udātta as ghañ is ñit; doubling by 'nityavīpsayoḥ' (Pā. sū. 8-1-4); the second member called āmreḍita by 'tasya param āmreḍitam' (Pā. sū. 8-1-2) and grave by 'anudāttaṃ ca' (Pā. sū. 8-1-3); initial udātta. tavastaram: vini in the possessive sense by 'asmāyāmedhā-' (Pā. sū. 5-2-121), dropped in the Veda; then tarap in the sense 'exceedingly', unaccented as pit. Translation: "If he hears (yadi śravat) — if this Indra should hear our invocation (havam) — then of himself, with thousand-fold protections (sahasriṇībhir ūtibhiḥ: many protections) and with foods (vājebhiḥ), he will surely (gha: necessarily) come near (upa ā gamat: may he come)." The grammatical tail treats gha (lengthened in the Saṃhitā by ṛci tunugha…), gamat (leṭ in the optative sense, aṭ by leṭo 'ḍāṭau, loss of i by itaś ca lopaḥ; or a Vedic luṅ with aṅ for cli by Pā. 3-1-55, and no augment aṭ by bahulaṃ chandasy amāṅyoge 'pi), śravat (likewise leṭ with aṭ), vājebhiḥ (no ais for bhis by bahulaṃ chandasi) and havam (ap after hvā by bhāve 'nupasargasya, with saṃprasāraṇa; ap is pit and grave, so the root accent makes it initial-acute).

Pratipadārtha (p. 476, rendered) — (सः that Indra) नः our हवम् invocation; यदि श्रवत् if he hears; सहस्रिणीभिः with many kinds of; ऊतिभिः protections; वाजेभिः with foods too; उप to our neighbourhood; आ घ certainly, entirely; आगमत् may he come.

Bhāvārtha (p. 476) — If Indra hears our invocation made with prayer, he will come, of himself, to our neighbourhood with many kinds of protections and with foods.

English Translation (as printed, p. 476)

> If he hears our invocation, he will surely come to us with numerous helpful bounties and abundant food.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (p. 477) — सहस्रिणीभिः ऊतिभिः वाजेभिः — ūtibhiḥ are the protections that guard us, the means necessary for it; vājebhiḥ are foods and the like; the sense: bringing them in thousands, that is, in great numbers, he will come near us.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (p. 477, noted briefly) — gha: lengthening in the Saṃhitā by 'ṛci tunugha' (Pā. sū. 6-3-133). gamat: gamḷ gatau; leṭ by 'liṅarthe leṭ' (Pā. sū. 3-4-7); loss of the i of tip by 'itaś ca lopaḥ' (Pā. sū. 3-4-97); aṭ by 'leṭo 'ḍāṭau' (Pā. sū. 3-4-94); or luṅ in the sense of liṅ by 'chandasi luṅlaṅliṭaḥ' (Pā. sū. 3-4-6), cli by 'cli luṅi' (Pā. sū. 3-1-43) replaced by aṅ under 'puṣādidyutā-' (Pā. sū. 3-1-55); no augment by 'bahulaṃ chandasy amāṅyoge 'pi' (Pā. sū. 6-4-75). śravat: śru śravaṇe; leṭ with aṭ as before. vājebhiḥ: ais for bhis due by 'ato bhisa ais' (Pā. sū. 7-1-9) but withheld by 'bahulaṃ chandasi' (Pā. sū. 7-1-10); e by 'bahuvacane jhaly et' (Pā. sū. 7-3-103). havam: hveñ spardhāyām, bhvādi; ap and saṃprasāraṇa by 'bhāve 'nupasargasya' (Pā. sū. 3-3-75); pūrvarūpa by 'saṃprasāraṇāc ca'; hu + a, guṇa and av; ap is pit and grave, so the root's end-acute (by 'dhātoḥ') remains: initial udātta.

Translation: "O viśvavāra (to be chosen by all), puruhūta (called by many, each in his own rite), friend (sakhe: dear like a friend), vaso (cause of dwelling), Indra! You, endowed with the aforesaid qualities, we pray (ā śāsmahe: we pray) for the favour of the praisers (jaritṛbhyaḥ)." The grammatical tail treats ā śāsmahe (śāsu icchāyām with āṅ; luk of śap by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ), vaso (since nāmantrite samānādhikaraṇe denies that the preceding vocative counts as non-existent, it becomes part of the next by parāṅgavat, and the whole is grave either by the rule for the remainder or by āmantritasya ca) and jaritṛbhyaḥ (jarati 'to praise'; end-acute as tṛc is cit).

Pratipadārtha (p. 481, rendered) — विश्ववार [O Indra] who are lovingly chosen by all; पुरुहूत invoked by many; सखे dear like a friend; वसो [cause of] dwelling-places; तं त्वा you, endowed with the said qualities; वयम् we; जरितृभ्यः for the sake of the praisers; आ शास्महे we pray.

Bhāvārtha (p. 481) — O Indra, lovingly chosen by all, invoked by many, dear like a friend, cause of dwelling-places: we pray to you, endowed with the said qualities, for the favour of the praisers.

English Translation (as printed, p. 481)

> We implore you, Indra, protector of dwellings, as our friend who is preferred and invoked by many to be favourable to your worshippers.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (pp. 481–482) — विश्ववारा [the print's lemma] — sarvair varaṇīya: invoked, wished for by all ("invoked by all", English as printed).

आ शास्महे — śāsu icchāyām: we pray. पुरुहूत — bahubhiḥ svasvakarmaṇy āhūtaḥ: invoked by many, in the sacrifices each performs. वसो — nivāsahetoḥ: cause of dwellings, or protector of dwellings. जरितृभ्यः — jaritā is read among the thirteen names of 'praiser' beginning rebha (Ni. 3-19; the last digit is the glyph of 9, as in Pā. 8-1-19 on the same page); jaritṛbhyaḥ = 'on behalf of the worshippers' (English as printed).

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (p. 482, noted briefly) — ā śāsmahe: āṅaḥ śāsu icchāyām, adādi, always with āṅ; laṭ first person plural mahiṅ; e as ṭit; luk of śap by 'adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ' (Pā. sū. 2-4-72); grave as a tiṅ form. vaso: vocative; 'nāmantrite samānādhikaraṇe sāmānyavacanam' (Pā.

sū. 8-1-73): as the two (sakhe, vaso) denote one thing, the preceding sakhe is not treated as non-existent; at the head of the pāda it escapes the āṣṭamika lowering; by 'subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare' sakhe is joined to what follows, and the whole is grave either by the lowering of the remainder or by 'āmantritasya ca' (Pā. sū. 8-1-19); sakhe, at the head of the pāda, takes initial udātta by the ṣāṣṭha rule. jaritṛbhiḥ (so printed in the lemma, for jaritṛbhyaḥ): jṝ vayohānau; tṛc, guṇa and iṭ; here the root in the sense of praise is to be taken: 'praiser'; end-acute as tṛc is cit, the ṛ udātta.

Translation: "O Soma-drinker, friend, thunderbolt-bearer! For the desired object (iṣṭaye), in the way (yathā) in which we desire (uśmasi) your (te) favour, so (tathā) do (kṛṇu) you; by your grace let that wish be so (tathā astu)." The grammatical tail treats kṛṇu (kṛvi hiṃsākaraṇayoś ca; num as idit; u by dhinvikṛṇvyor a ca, with a for the v, then its loss by ato lopaḥ, which, by sthānivadbhāva, prevents the guṇa of the light penult; hi dropped by utaś ca pratyayād asaṃyogapūrvāt), uśmasi (vaśa kāntau; masi by idanto masiḥ; luk of śap; saṃprasāraṇa by grahijyā…; the suffix accent; not grave because of yad) and iṣṭaye (iṣu icchāyām with ktin, no iṭ by tituatra…; or from yaj, with saṃprasāraṇa by Pā. 6-1-15, ṣ by vraśca… and ṣṭutva; the udātta of ktin by mantre vṛṣa… in the first view, by vyatyaya in the second).

Pratipadārtha (p. 485, rendered) — सोमपाः drinker of Soma; सखे friend; वज्रिन् holder of the thunderbolt; इष्टये for the fulfilment of our wish; ते your [favour]; यथा in whatever manner; उश्मसि we desire; तथा in that manner [bestow]; तत् that wish; तथा अस्तु be fulfilled in that very way.

Bhāvārtha (p. 486) — O Indra, Soma-drinker, holder of the thunderbolt, our friend! Grant your favour in the manner in which we desire it for the fulfilment of our wish; and may our wish also be fulfilled in the same manner.

English Translation (as printed, p. 486)

> O Soma-drinker, weilder [sic] of the thunderbolt, our friend, cause it to pass in such a manner as we wish to induce you to do.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (p. 486) — इष्टये — abhilaṣitārtham: for the wished-for object; or iṣṭaye tava yogāya: for the sake of joining with you. Since iṣṭi can mean 'sacrifice', iṣṭaye may also be explained as 'for the sake of sacrificing to you' ("for the purpose of performing the sacrifice").

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 486–487, noted briefly) — kṛṇu: kṛvi hiṃsākaraṇayoś ca, bhvādi, loṭ second person singular, sip → hi; num by 'idito num dhātoḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-1-58); u instead of śap by 'dhinvikṛṇvyor a ca' (Pā. sū. 3-1-80), with a for the v; loss of that a by 'ato lopaḥ' (Pā. sū. 6-4-48); by 'acaḥ parasmin pūrvavidhau' (Pā. sū. 1-1-57) the lost vowel counts, so no guṇa of the light penult ṛ; luk of hi by 'utaś ca pratyayād asaṃyogapūrvāt' (Pā. sū. 6-4-106); ṇatva; grave as a tiṅ form. uśmasi: vaśa kāntau, adādi, laṭ first person plural mas; i added by 'idanto masi' (Pā. sū. 7-1-46); luk of śap by 'adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ' (Pā. sū. 2-4-72); as mas is treated as ṅit, saṃprasāraṇa by 'grahijyāvayi-' (Pā. sū. 6-1-16) and pūrvarūpa by 'saṃprasāraṇāc ca'; (p. 487) initial udātta of the suffix: the a after m is udātta; not grave by 'yadvṛttayogān nityam' (yathā precedes). iṣṭaye: iṣu icchāyām, divādi; ktin by 'striyāṃ ktin' (Pā. sū. 3-3-94); no iṭ by 'titutratatha-' (Pā. sū. 7-2-9); ṣṭutva: iṣṭi; or yaja devapūjāsaṃgatikaraṇadāneṣu, bhvādi, with ktin: saṃprasāraṇa by 'vacisvapiyajādīnāṃ kiti' (Pā. sū. 6-1-15), pūrvarūpa, ṣ for j by 'vraścabhrasja-', ṣṭutva: iṣṭi; dative singular. Accent: in the first view the udātta of ktin by 'mantre vṛṣa-' (Pā. sū. 3-3-96); in the second, initial udātta would be due, but ktin is udātta by 'vyatyayo bahulam' (Pā. sū. 3-1-85).

Translation: “We, possessed of food (kṣumantaḥ), with whatever cows (yābhiḥ) we may rejoice (madema: be glad) — Indra being glad together with us (sadhamāde) — may those cows of ours be rich (revatīḥ: possessing wealth in milk, ghee and the like) and of abundant strength (tuvivājāḥ).” The grammatical tail treats revatīḥ (rayi + matup: saṃprasāraṇa and pūrvarūpa by rayer matau bahulam, v for the m by chandasīraḥ, lengthening by vā chandasi; the udātta of matup after re, as said before, by the dictum on āre), sadhamāde (‘he gladdens together’; ac; sadha for saha by Pā. 6-3-96; initial udātta of the second member by parādiś chandasi bahulam), tuvivājāḥ (tu, a sautra root ‘to grow’, with i; no guṇa, the rule being framed with a technical name; first-member accent in the bahuvrīhi), kṣumantaḥ (ṭukṣu śabde; no tuk before kvip, a Vedic licence; matup udātta by hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matup) and madema (śap by vyatyaya, grave as pit; the root accent remains).

Pratipadārtha (p. 488, rendered) — इन्द्रे Indra; सधमादे (together with us) being glad; क्षुमन्तः we who are rich in food; याभिः with which (cows); मदेम we may rejoice; नः our; ता गावः those cows; रेवतीः possessed of wealth such as milk and ghee; तुविवाजाः exceedingly strong; सन्तु let them be.

Bhāvārtha (p. 488) — O Indra, while you are glad together with us, may those cows of ours, with which we, rich in food, rejoice, be rich in milk, ghee and the like, and be exceedingly strong.

English Translation (as printed, p. 488)

> So Indra, rejoicing along with us, we may have abundant food and may our cows be robust and rich in milk, so that we may be happy.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (pp. 488–489) — रेवतीः — for this word the commentator says kṣīrājyādhanavatyaḥ gāvaḥ: cows possessing wealth in milk, ghee and the like. Skandasvāmin explains it as dhanavatyaḥ stutayaḥ: 'praises that bring wealth'. Since go does not occur in this Rik, any sense can be given to revatīḥ.

सधमादे — saha madema; Indra, being glad with us; sadha must be taken in the sense of saha; Yāska explains sadhamāda as sadamādaṃ sahamadanam (Ni. 7-31, as printed). तुविवाजाः — tuvi is 'abundant, much' (Ni. 3-13); vāja is strength (Ni. 3-9); so 'of much strength'. क्षुमन्तः — kṣu is food (Ni. 3-9, as printed); kṣumantaḥ: possessing food.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 489–490, noted briefly) — revatīḥ: saṃprasāraṇa by 'rayer matau bahulam' (Vā. 3540) and pūrvarūpa; v for the m of matup by 'chandasīraḥ' (Pā. sū. 8-2-15); guṇa: revat; feminine ṅīp by 'ugitaś ca' (Pā. sū. 4-1-6); before jas the lengthening barred by 'dīrghāj jasi ca' (Pā. sū. 6-1-105) is allowed by 'vā chandasi' (Pā. sū. 6-1-106); the udātta of matup by the dictum 'āre śabdāc ca matupa udāttatvaṃ vaktavyam', extended to re: the ā after v is udātta. sadhamāde: mada tṛptiyoge, curādi, ṇic by 'satyāpapāśa-'; ac by 'nandigrahapacādi-' (Pā. sū. 3-1-134); loss of ṇi by 'ṇer aniṭi' (Pā. sū. 6-4-51); sadha by 'sadhamādasthayoś chandasi' (Pā. sū. 6-3-96); locative singular; end-acute of the second member due by 'thāthaghañktāj-' (Pā. sū. 6-2-144) but initial udātta of it by 'parādiś chandasi bahulam' (Pā. sū. 6-2-199). (p. 490) tuvivājāḥ: tu, a sautra root 'to grow'; i by 'aca iḥ' (U. sū. 4-578); guṇa due by 'sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-3-84) withheld by 'saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ' (Pari. 95); uvaṅ by 'aci śnudhātubhruvām' (Pā. sū. 6-4-77); first-member accent by 'bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam' (Pā. sū. 6-2-1); tuvi end-acute by the suffix. kṣumantaḥ: ṭukṣu śabde, adādi; ṭu dropped by 'ādir ñiṭuḍavaḥ' (Pā. sū. 1-3-5); kvip by 'kvip ca' (Pā. sū. 3-2-76); tuk by 'hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk' (Pā. sū. 6-1-71) not applied, Vedic; matup by 'tad asyāsty asminn iti' (Pā. sū. 5-2-94); udātta matup by 'hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matup' (Pā. sū. 6-1-176). madema: madī harṣe, divādi; śap by 'vyatyayo bahulam' (Pā. sū. 3-1-85); liṅ first person plural mas, its s dropped by 'nityaṃ ṅitaḥ' (Pā. sū. 3-4-99); yāsuṭ by 'yāsuṭ parasmaipadeṣūdātto ṅic ca' (Pā. sū. 3-4-103); iya by 'ato yeyaḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-2-80); guṇa; loss of y by 'lopo vyor vali' (Pā. sū. 6-1-66); śap grave by 'anudāttau suppitau' (Pā. sū. 3-1-4), the ending grave by 'tāsy anudātten-'; the root's end-acute remains: initial udātta.

Translation: "O Śatakratu Indra! The wealth (duvaḥ) — the desired object — which the praisers are to obtain: that wish of the praisers you bring (ā ṛṇoḥ) and deliver for their favour. Illustration: śacībhiḥ — by actions, by operations proper to a cart — as one sets the axle. Śacībhiḥ: śacī ends in ṅīn (śārṅgaravādibhyo ṅīn, P. 4-1-73) and is initial-acute."

Pratipadārtha (p. 495, rendered) — शतक्रतो O Indra; यद् दुवः whatever wished-for wealth; आ [your worshippers] should obtain; कामम् the desired wealth; जरितॄणाम् for the favour of the praisers; शचीभिः by [the cart's] turning movements; अक्षं न as one turns and sets the axle; आ ऋणोः bring and give.

Bhāvārtha (p. 495) — O Indra! Bring and give to your praisers, for their favour, the wished-for wealth that they ought to obtain, as the axle of a cart is turned and set by its own movements.

English Translation (as printed, p. 495)

O Satakratu (Indra), you bestow upon your praisers such wealth as they desire as the axle revolves with the acts (movements of the cart).

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (p. 495) — In this Rik too the simile does not fit well; as the axle between the wheels of a chariot turns quickly and continually, so quickly fulfil my wishes. दुवः — the commentator takes it as ‘wealth’; Skandasvāmin as paricaryā; Veṅkaṭamādhava, following Skandasvāmin, takes it as paricaraṇaṃ karma. जरितॄणाम् — stotṝṇām: of the praisers. शचीभिः — karmabhiḥ; śakaṭocitavyāpāraviśeṣaiḥ: since śacī is read among the twenty-six names of action beginning apaḥ, apnaḥ, ‘by actions, by work’. Since the word cakryoḥ is used [in the preceding Rik], the sense is by the works of the wheels or of the chariot, that is, by swift-moving actions.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 495–496, noted briefly) — śacībhiḥ: feminine ṅīn by ‘śārṅgaravādyaño ṅīn’ (Pā. sū. 4-1-73); śaci is read in the śārṅgarava group; instrumental plural bhis. (p. 496) rutva and visarga: śacībhiḥ; initial udātta as ṅīn is ñit, by ‘ñnityādir nityam’ (Pā. sū. 6-1-197); bhis grave by ‘anudāttau suppitau’; the ī after c svarita by ‘udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ’. śatakrato: all grave by ‘āmantritasya ca’ (Pā. sū. 8-1-19). ṛṇoḥ: explained in the preceding sūkta [as printed; i.e. Rik]; at the head of the pāda, the lowering of ‘tiṅṅ atiṅaḥ’ is barred by ‘apādādau’. jaritṝṇām: explained in the tenth mantra; genitive plural.

Translation: “With this [Rik] he accepted the golden chariot given by the pleased Indra. So the Brāhmaṇa: ‘Indra, being praised, pleased in mind, gave him a golden chariot; he accepted it with this [Rik] śaśvad indraḥ’ (Ai. Br. 7-16). Indra has ever (śaśvat) won (jigāya: conquered) the wealth (dhanāni) of the enemies — with horses (aśvaiḥ is the remainder) — of what kind? popruthadbhiḥ: making the lip-sound that follows eating grass; nānadadbhiḥ: making the neighing sound, the noise in the mouth; śāśvasadbhiḥ: breathing hard again and again. The doer of deeds (daṃsanāvān), the giver (sanitā), that Indra gave (adāt) us, for our enjoyment (sanaye), a golden chariot (hiraṇyaratham), a chariot made of gold. The repetition sa naḥ sa naḥ is for respect.” The grammatical tail treats popruthadbhiḥ (yaṅluk; shortening, Pā. 7-4-59; guṇa, Pā. 7-4-82; u for the penult, Vedic; initial udātta by abhyastānām ādiḥ), jigāya (vṛddhi before ṇal; reduplication of ji by sthānivadbhāva; k-sound after the reduplicate by Pā. 7-3-57), nānadadbhiḥ (yaṅluk, lengthening by dīrgho ‘kitaḥ), śāśvasadbhiḥ (likewise), hiraṇyaratham (end-acute by samāsasya), adāt (luk of sic by gātisthā…) and daṃsanāvān (daṃsa read among* the names of 'deed': apnaḥ, daṃsaḥ, veṣaḥ; daṃsanā* = daṃsa; matup; or 'that by which one is harmed').

Pratipadārtha (p. 497, rendered) — इन्द्रः Indra; पोप्रुथद्भिः making the lip-sound; नानदद्भिः neighing [by the help of horses]; धनानि the riches of the enemies; शश्वत् always; जिगाय has conquered; दंसनावान् possessed of valour; सनिता the giver; सः that Indra; नः to us; सनये as a gift; हिरण्यरथम् a chariot made of gold; अदात् gave.

Bhāvārtha (p. 497) — Indra, with the aid of horses that make the sound of eating, that neigh, and that breathe hard, always conquers the riches of enemies. That Indra, valiant and a giver, gave us, as a gift, a golden chariot.

> Indra has always won riches (from his enemies) with the help of champing, neighing and snorting horses ; he the performer of brave deeds, the giver of bounties, has given us a golden chariot as a present.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (pp. 498–499) — Śunaḥśepa, having praised Indra, received a golden chariot from the pleased Indra; he praises that here; on this there is the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa sentence tasmā indraḥ stūyamānaḥ prīto manasā hiraṇyarathaṃ dadau tam etayā pratīyāya śaśvad indra iti (Ai. Br. 7-16); its meaning has been given in the Śunaḥśepa narrative. शश्वत् — sarvadā: always. पोप्रुथद्भिः — prothṛ paryāptau; ghāsabhakṣaṇānantarabhāvinam oṣṭhaśabdaṃ kurvadbhiḥ atyantaṃ samarthair aśvaiḥ: by very able horses making, after eating, the lip-sound that shows their contentment; since the later words nānadadbhiḥ, śāśvasadbhiḥ define horses, aśvaiḥ must be supplied. नानदद्भिः — ṇada avyakte śabde: neighing. शाश्वसद्भिः — śvasa prāṇane: breathing hard repeatedly ("snorting and panting", English as printed). धनानि — because jigāya is used, the riches of the enemies. हिरण्यरथम् — a chariot made of gold. दंसनावान् — karmavān; daṃsa iti karmanāma (Ni. 3-1 [as printed; the grammar, p. 500, gives Nirukta 2-1-3]); dasyate 'neneti daṃsanā: the one who does daring deeds, the valiant. सनिता — dātā.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 499–500, noted briefly) — popruthadbhiḥ: prothṛ paryāptau; yaṅluk in the intensive sense by 'yaṅo 'ci ca' (Pā. sū. 2-4-74); doubling by 'sanyaṅoḥ' (Pā. sū. 6-1-9); 'halādiḥ śeṣaḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-4-60); shortening by 'hrasvaḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-4-59), u for o by 'eca ig ghrasvādeśe' (Pā. sū. 1-1-48); guṇa of the reduplicate by 'guṇo yaṅlukoḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-4-82); u for the root's penultimate o, Vedic; root status by 'sanādyantā dhātavaḥ'; śatṛ; initial udātta by 'abhyastānām ādiḥ' (Pā. sū. 6-1-189). jigāya: ji jaye, bhvādi, liṭ ṇal; vṛddhi by 'aco ñṇiti'; 'dvirvacane 'ci' (Pā. sū. 1-1-59): reduplication of ji; āy by 'eco 'yavāyāvaḥ'; g by 'sanliṭor jeḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-3-57). nānadadbhiḥ: ṇada avyakte śabde, bhvādi; n by 'ṇo naḥ'; yaṅluk, doubling, 'dīrgho

Translation: "In the morning litany, at the Āśvina rite, in the Gāyatrī metre, the triplet āśvināv aśvāvatyā: it is laid down in the section 'athāśvine': 'aśvinā yajvarīr iṣaḥ, āśvināv aśvāvatyā' (Āś. 4-15). Śunaḥśepa, impelled by Indra, praised the Aśvins; so the Brāhmaṇa: 'Indra said to him, "Praise the two Aśvins now; then we shall let you go"; he praised the Aśvins with the following triplet' (Ai. Br. 7-16). O Aśvins! On a swift (śavīrayā: being urged) [conveyance] with many horses (aśvāvatyā), with food (iṣā), come (ā yātam) to our rite. O Dasras, Aśvins, by your favour may our house be filled with many cows (gomat) and with much gold (hiraṇyavat) — this is the remainder." The grammatical tail treats aśvāvatyā (lengthening by Pā. 6-3-131), iṣā (udātta instrumental ending by sāv ekācaḥ), yātam (tam for tas in the loṭ; luk of śap) and śavīrayā (īran by 'kṝśṝpṝkaṭipaṭiśauṭibhya īran', U. 4-30, applied to śu too by the word bahulam; initial udātta as nit).

Pratipadārtha (p. 501, rendered) — अश्विनौ O Aśvin gods; अश्वावत्या drawn by many horses; शवीरया urged on, swift; इषा with food; आ यातम् come (to this rite); दस्रा O Aśvin gods (by your favour our house) गोमत् with cows; हिरण्यवत् with abundant gold (let it be).

Bhāvārtha (p. 501) — O Aśvin gods! Come to this rite of ours, with food, on a chariot drawn by many horses and urged on. By your favour may this our house be filled with cows and with gold.

English Translation (as printed, p. 501)

> Aswins, come hither with food borne on fast moving horses; Dasras, (destroyers of foes) let our dwelling be filled with cattle and with gold.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (pp. 501–502) — At the time of reciting the morning-litany mantras in the Aśvina-kratu, when the Gāyatrī Riks are recited, the triplet beginning aśvināv aśvāvatyā is to be recited, as Āśvalāyana's sūtra says in the section athāśvine: 'aśvinā yajvarīr iṣa āśvināv aśvāvatyā' (Āś. 4-15). After praising Indra, Śunaḥśepa, impelled by him, praised the Aśvins with the three Riks; on this the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa has tam indra uvācāśvinau nu stuhy atha tvotsrakṣyāma iti so 'śvinau tuṣṭāvāta uttareṇa tṛcena (Ai. Br. 7-16); its meaning was given in the Śunaḥśepa narrative.

अश्वावत्या, शवीरया — these are adjectives of the instrumental iṣā: aśvāvatyā 'with horses', śavīrayā 'of swift motion'; the commentator gives preryamāṇayā 'being urged'; since śavīra is formed from śu gatau, the sense 'going' should be said as an adjective of aśvāvatyā. गोमत्, हिरण्यवत् — 'having cows, having gold'; though gṛha ('house') is not in the Rik, the commentator supplies it. दस्रा — the Aśvins, destroyers of foes; the word dasra denotes one of them, but here both are meant, so the dual is used.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 502–503, noted briefly) — aśvāvatyā: in the sense 'aśvā asyāḥ santi', matup by 'tad asya-'; v for m after a; ṅīp in the feminine by 'ugitaś ca'; instrumental singular; lengthening of aśva before matup in the Saṃhitā by 'mantre somāśvendriyaviśvadevyasya matau' (Pā. sū. 6-3-131). iṣā: instrumental singular; the ending, grave by 'anudāttau suppitau' (Pā. sū. 3-1-4), becomes udātta by 'sāv ekācas tṛtīyādiḥ' (Pā. sū. 6-1-168). yātam: yā prāpaṇe, adādi, loṭ third person dual tas; the loṭ is treated like laṅ by 'loṭo laṅvat' (Pā. sū. 3-4-85), (p. 503) so tam for tas by 'tasthasthamipām' (Pā. sū. 3-4-101); luk of śap by 'adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ' (Pā. sū. 2-4-72); grave as a tiṅ form. śavīrayā: śu gatau; īran prescribed by 'kṝśṝpṝkaṭipaṭiśauṭibhya īran' (U. sū. 4-470; the bhāṣya, p. 501, prints ৩. ४. ३০) comes to this root too by the word bahula, though not named in the sūtra; guṇa by 'sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-3-84); av by 'eco 'yavāyāvaḥ' (Pā. sū. 6-1-78); ṭāp by 'ajādyataṣ ṭāp' (Pā. sū. 4-1-4); instrumental singular; initial udātta, īran being nit, by 'ñnityādir nityam' (Pā. sū. 6-1-197).

ईयते — another wheel goes round heaven or the atmosphere. Since in many places the Aśvins' chariot is said to have three wheels (Ṛg-Saṃhitā 1-34-9 etc.), the third wheel is not located in this Rik.

Translation: "In the morning litany, in the Āśvina-śastra, at the Uṣas rite, in the Gāyatrī metre, the triplet kas ta uṣaḥ; laid down in the section athoṣasyaḥ: 'the three beginning kas ta uṣaḥ' (Āś. 4-14). Impelled by the Aśvins, Śunaḥśepa praised Uṣas; so the Brāhmaṇa: 'The Aśvins said to him: "Praise Uṣas now; then we shall let you go." He praised Uṣas with the following triplet. As each Rik was spoken the fetter loosened and the belly of the Aikṣvāka grew smaller; when the last Rik was spoken the fetter was loosened and the Aikṣvāka was free of disease' (Ai. Br. 7-16). O kadhapriye (fond of praise), amartye (deathless) Uṣas — the deity presiding over the dawn-time, the one named by this word! What mortal (martaḥ: man) is there for your enjoyment (bhuje)? O vibhāvari (endowed with special splendour), goddess Uṣas, which man do you reach (nakṣase)? No man is able to give the enjoyment fitting you; therefore you go to no man in expectation of enjoyment: such is your greatness." The grammatical tail treats te (Pā. 8-1-22, all grave), kadhapriye (katha, an a-final curādi root; no vṛddhi of the penult because the lost a counts before ṇi; aṅ by Pā. 3-3-105; loss of ṇi; ṭāp; shortening in the genitive compound by Pā. 6-3-63; dh for th, Vedic; grave as a vocative), bhuje (kvip of the saṃpad group; the ending udātta by sāv ekācaḥ), martaḥ (initial udātta, ending in tan by asihasi…), nakṣase (tṛkṣa stṛkṣa ṇakṣa gatau) and vibhāvari (vanip; ṅīp and r for n by Pā. 4-1-7; shortening by Pā. 7-3-107).

Pratipadārtha (p. 509, rendered) — कधप्रिये fond of praises; अमर्त्ये free from death; उषः O goddess Uṣas; भुजे for your enjoyment; मर्तः a mortal; कः which one [is there]; विभावरि O Uṣas, possessed of special lustre; कम् which man; नक्षसे you reach (do you reach).

Bhāvārtha (p. 509) — O goddess Uṣas, fond of praise and deathless! Which mortal is there to enjoy you? O Uṣas of special lustre! Which man do you come to of your own will?

English Translation (as printed, p. 509)

> O immortal Ushas, fond of praises, what mortal is fit for your enjoyment ? O fair one, to whom do you go ?

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (pp. 509–511) — After praising the Aśvins, Śunaḥśepa, impelled by them, praises Uṣas with this and the two following Riks; on this the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa has tam aśvinā ūcatur uṣasaṃ nu stuhy atha tvotsrakṣyāma iti… (Ai. Br. 7-16); its meaning was given in the Śunaḥśepa narrative. On Uṣas: the deity of this Rik and the two that follow is the dawn, or the deity who presides over it; in the Ṛgveda there are about twenty sūktas to Uṣas, mostly of the best class, in both the description of colour and the arrangement of words and sense. Uṣas is the light before sunrise, when night is gone; since dawn is the time of great joy for sages and all people, they describe it beautifully. Poets imagine the dawn as a young woman and describe her qualities with ornaments; because light comes from the sky she is divo duhitā, ‘daughter of heaven’; she is ever young, shortens men’s lives as days pass, gladdens all creatures as soon as she rises, drives away demons and night-wanderers, wakes the cows with morning light so that they go out lowing, and, since the sun’s rays at sunrise are slightly red, she is said to travel swiftly on a chariot drawn by red horses or red oxen. Derivation of uṣas — Yāska:

(As printed, p. 510: the definition stands as one line, then a Kannada link “how did the word uṣā arise? —“, then the rest; the second पुनरियमुषाः is followed by a printed “?”.)

> उषाः कस्मादुच्छतीति सत्या रात्रेरपरः कालः ॥ उच्छतीति सत्याः । उच्छी विवासे । विवासयति हीयं तमांसि तस्मादुच्छतीत्येनमस्या उषा इत्येतदभिधानं भवति । पुनरियमुषा? रात्रेरपरः कालः ॥ (नि. २-१९)

(mine, tentative:) “Why is it uṣas? Because it shines forth (ucchati): truly, the time after night. Ucchī is ‘to dispel’: for she dispels the darkness; hence the name uṣā.” In another place Yāska gives a different derivation:

uṣāḥ vaṣṭeḥ kāntikarmaṇa ucchateritarā mādhyamikā | (ni. 12-7)

(Mine, tentative:) "Uṣas is from vaṣṭi (to shine); the other, from ucchati, is optional [mādhyamikā]." That is, uṣas may be derived from vaś kāntau ('to shine'); the derivation from ucchī is optional. The sages describe the goddess with many epithets — beloved of the Sun, daughter of night, sister of Āditya, Bhaga and Varuṇa, daughter of heaven, friend of the Aśvins. दुहितर्दिवः — since the sun's light comes to us from heaven (the atmosphere), and dawn precedes sunrise, she is called divo duhitā ("daughter of heaven", English as printed). कधप्रिये — stotrapriye: fond of hearing praises. भुजे — bhuja pālanābhyavahārayoḥ; bhogāya: "for enjoyment" (English as printed). नक्षसे — nakṣ gatau: you reach, you seek. विभावरि — bhā dīptau: shining with light or beauty (Ni. 2-19). Skandasvāmin explains bhuje as pālanāya 'for protection', and kaṃ nakṣase bhuje as 'to protect which man do you go?'.

Translation: "O daughter of heaven (divo duhitaḥ: daughter of the heaven-deity), goddess Uṣas, come (ā gahi: come here) with those (tyebhiḥ) foods (vājebhiḥ); establish (ni dhāraya: set firmly) wealth (rayim) in us (asme)." The grammatical tail treats tyebhiḥ (no ais for bhis after tyad, by bahulaṃ chandasi), gahi ('said more than once'), duhitar divaḥ (though divaḥ follows, it is construed first, so by subāmantrite the genitive and the vocative together are all grave; or, by the maxim 'kāryakālaṃ hi saṃjñāparibhāṣam' (Pari. 3), subāmantrite is read together with the āṣṭamika 'āmantritasya ca', and parāṅgavadbhāva, being later, applies, giving the all-grave accent; after the accents are fixed the order of genitive and vocative is reversed by vyatyayo bahulam) and asme (śe for the locative ending by supāṃ suluk).

English Translation (as printed, p. 516)

> Daughter of heaven, come to us with plenty of food and place wealth among us.

Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (p. 516) — त्येभिः — tya has the sense of tad; tyebhiḥ = taiḥ, 'by those'. अस्मे रयिं निधारय — 'place wealth in us specially': give us wealth in particular.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 516–517, noted briefly) — tyebhiḥ: tyad, instrumental plural bhis; a for the final by 'tyadādīnām aḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-2-102); pararūpa by 'ato guṇe' (Pā. sū. 6-1-97); ais for bhis after a withheld by 'bahulaṃ chandasi' (Pā. sū. 7-1-10); rutva and visarga. gahi: gamḷ gatau, loṭ second person singular, hi for sip, ṅit as apit; loss of m by 'anudāttopadeśa-' (Pā. sū. 6-4-37); as that loss is treated as not done by 'asiddhavad atrābhāt' (Pā. sū. 6-4-22), hi is not dropped by 'ato heḥ' (Pā. sū. 6-4-105). vājebhiḥ: no ais for bhis by 'bahulaṃ chandasi'. duhitar divaḥ: though divaḥ follows, it is construed before duhitaḥ, so by 'subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare' (Pā. sū. 2-1-2) the genitive joins the vocative, and the all-grave accent of 'āmantritasya ca' covers the genitive group; or by 'kāryakālaṃ saṃjñāparibhāṣam' (Pari. 3) the paribhāṣā subāmantrite is read at the place of the āṣṭamika rule 'āmantritasya ca' and makes one sentence with it, so parāṅgavadbhāva comes first (p. 517) and then the all-grave accent; once the accents are fixed, the reversed order divaḥ duhitaḥ is to be explained by 'vyatyayo bahulam', and no doubt remains. asme: asmad, locative plural sup; śe by 'supāṃ suluk' (Pā. sū. 7-1-39), for the whole ending, as it is śit; loss of the d-portion by 'śeṣe lopaḥ' (Pā. sū. 7-2-90).

Translation: "In the seventh anuvāka there are five sūktas. Of these, the first, tvam agne prathamaḥ, has eighteen riks; the seer is Hiraṇyastūpa Āṅgirasa; the eighth, sixteenth and eighteenth riks are Triṣṭubh; the rest are Jagatī by the convention 'what remains after the Triṣṭubh'. Deity: Agni. So the Anukramaṇikā: 'tvam agne — two less than twenty [i.e. eighteen]; Hiraṇyastūpa; Āgneya; Triṣṭubh: the last, the eighth, and the sixteenth.' In the prātar-anuvāka, in the Agni-rite [āgneya kratu] and in the Aśvina-śastra, the sūkta tvam agne prathamaḥ [is used]; in the section athaitasyā rātreḥ [of the Āśvalāyana sūtra] it is laid down: 'tvam agne prathamo aṅgirā ṛṣir no cit sahojā amṛto ni tundate' (Āś. 4-13). On the third day of the abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, in the Agni-Māruta śastra, this sūkta serves as the jātavedasya [and] nividdhānīya; so it is laid down in the section tṛtīyasya tryaryama [as printed]: 'tvam agne prathamo aṅgirā — the Āgnimāruta [śastra]' (Āś. 7-7). In the Vājapeya, in the Agnimāruta [śastra], this sūkta is the jātavedasya [and] nividdhānīya, because the third pressing is extended [to it] by the rule 'the third pressing as stated for the third abhiplavika [day]' (Āś. 9-9)."

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada) ॥ (pp. 517–518) From this sūkta the seventh anuvāka begins. In this anuvāka there are five sūktas (Sūktas 31–35). Of them the first, beginning tvam agne prathama, has eighteen riks. The seer of this sūkta is Hiraṇyastūpa, son of Aṅgiras. Of its eighteen riks the eighth, sixteenth and eighteenth are in Triṣṭubh metre; the rest are in Jagatī. The deity is Agni. The Anukramaṇikā says: tvam agne dvyūnā hiraṇyastūpa āgneyaṃ triṣṭubantyāṣṭamīṣoḍaśyau ca. In the section rātriḥ of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra it is said that this sūkta has its use [viniyoga] in reciting the morning-litany mantras connected with the Agni-sacrifice, and for reciting the mantras of the Aśvina-śastra (Āś. 4-13). In the sacrifice called Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, on the third day, the Agni-Māruta-śastra mantras are to be recited with this sūkta: this is explained in the section tṛtīyasya tryahaḥ by the sūtra tvam agne prathamo aṅgirā ity āgnimārutam (Āś. 7-7). In the sacrifice Vājapeya, too, this sūkta is used in reciting the Agni-Māruta-śastra mantras: so, in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra [it is said] jātavedasyaṃ nividdhānīyaṃ tṛtīyenābhiplavikenoktaṃ tṛtīyasavanam (Āś. 9-9).

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O Agni, you are the first Angiras Raishi; a good friend of the gods; in your rite, the wise, the skilful and the bright-weaponed Maruts were born.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 520–523) On the Aṅgirases. In this rik it is said that Agni is the first among the Aṅgiras seers; that is, Agni became the root-man [mūla-puruṣa] of the Aṅgirasa seers. In many other riks of the Ṛgveda too the word aṅgiraḥ is used to address Agni; discussion of this matter is necessary. [The Brāhmaṇa passage:] ये ऽङ्गारा आसंस्तेऽङ्गिरसोऽभवन् (ye 'ṅgārā āsaṃs te 'ṅgiraso 'bhavan; Ai. Br. 3-34) — "the embers [aṅgāras] that were, those became the Aṅgirases": thus, in the Prajāpati-duhitṛ-dhyāna [Prajāpati's-daughter-meditation] narrative of the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa it is said that the embers [of the sacrifice that sprang from the seed of Rudra's arrow] were named Aṅgirases. [The Kannada gives the story:] In the beginning Prajāpati (Brahmā), with a wicked thought — with desire — meditated in his mind on his own daughter (Uṣas, or in the form of Dyaus); the gods, knowing it, resolved to prevent this wicked act. But they had no strength to force Prajāpati to refrain from the deed; so all the gods, bringing together their own several forms, produced a deity called Rudra, and said [to him], "punish this Prajāpati." Hearing this, Prajāpati, terrified, assumed the form of a stag and fled to the sky. As the constellation Mṛgaśiras [Orion's head / the Deer], Prajāpati may be seen even now.

Then Rudra, appearing in the form of the star Ārdrā, discharged an arrow at Prajāpati. Prajāpati's seed fell, and the Maruts scattered it in many directions and burned it to ashes. From that seed first Āditya and then Bhṛgu Vāruṇi were born; from the remaining embers the Aṅgirases were born: so it is said.

In the Purāṇas and other works the sage Aṅgiras is said to be one of Brahmā's mind-born sons. In the Vedas, the Aṅgiras is said to be a seer of great fame, the root-man of many famous seers. In the Mahābhārata, Vana-parvan, in the dialogue of Mārkaṇḍeya and Yudhiṣṭhira, there is this story: For some reason Agni left his duty and went off to the forest in disguise. Then the sage named Aṅgiras, in Agni's place, carried the shares of the oblation to the gods in the sacrifice and did Agni's work; and he prayed Agni to come back and do his own duty. Because he did Agni's duties, this sage Aṅgiras came to be called Agni's son; hence the descendants of this sage became famous as ‘Aṅgirases’. There are still other such narratives in the Purāṇas. Besides, in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā itself:

> ते अङ्गिरसः सूनवस्ते अग्नेः परिजज्ञिरे । (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-62-5) te aṅgirasaḥ sūnavas te agneḥ parijajñire | Mine, tentative: “They, the Aṅgirases, are the sons; they were born around Agni.”

— that is, it is said clearly that the seers called Aṅgirases are Agni’s sons. The commentator, however, does not cite this rik as an instance; why, one cannot tell.

That the sage Aṅgiras was of very ancient time, and that many seers in the Ṛgveda call this one the root-man of their own lineage, appears from several riks of the Ṛgveda:

These riks show that Aṅgiras is known as the forefather of many seers. In the lineage of the Aṅgirasa seers was one named Atharvan, a leading man; he had three sons, Bṛhaspati, Gotama and Vṛṣaṇa. The one named Vṛṣaṇa was a son born to this Atharvan of his wife Pathyā; his history is hinted at in many places in the Veda. The son of Vṛṣaṇa, called Sudhanvan Āṅgirasa, had three sons, Ṛbhu, Vibhvan and Vāja. These three, who are called the Ṛbhus in the Veda, are said to be pupils of Tvaṣṭṛ-Prajāpati. In this lineage of Aṅgiras there were three seers named Bṛhaspati. The Ṛbhus mentioned above and Bṛhaspati are imagined as gods, and many riks that are their praise are in the Ṛgveda. Of those three Bṛhaspatis, the first, so the tradition goes, killed the Dasyu king called Paṇi and brought back the cows he had carried off; and, with his ten thousand followers, fought and defeated another Dasyu chief named Dāsa, who ruled on the bank of the river Aṃśumatī. Another Bṛhaspati’s son named Bharadvāja was the priest of Divodāsa, who killed the daityа Śambara. Thus the lineage of Aṅgiras was very large, and many famous men belonged to it. In the Ṛgveda, in many places — wherever the word agni would have to be used — the word aṅgira is used plentifully.

Since Hiraṇyastūpa, the seer of this sūkta, was born in the Aṅgirasa line, he praises Agni, the root-man of his line, with riks full of excellent meanings. Most of the riks of this sūkta begin with the words tvam agne or tvaṃ no agne. This seer Hiraṇyastūpa is the seer of the 31st–35th sūktas of the first maṇḍala in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā (71 riks), of the 4th sūkta of the ninth maṇḍala (10 riks) and of the [?]th sūkta of the tenth maṇḍala (10 riks; the number is printed like ६ङ but not clear [?]) — in all 91 riks. All the sūktas of this seer are in the prauḍha style [i.e. of mature, weighty composition].

देवो देवानामभवः शिवः सखा (devo devānām abhavaḥ śivaḥ sakhā) — to the gods you became a friend of excellent mind. तव व्रते (tava vrate) — tvadīye karmaṇi: in the work that belongs to you; that is, in sacrifices and the like performed with your help. कवयः (kavayaḥ) — medhāvinaḥ: the intelligent.

विद्मनापसः (vidmanāpasaḥ) — vida jñāne; vidmo vedanam; tad asyāstīti vidmanam; vidmanāni apāṃsi yeṣāṃ te vidmanāpasaḥ; jñānena prāpnuvānā jñātaikakarmāṇo vā — those who are the knowers of everything through knowledge, or who know the works of sacrifice and the like, [or: knowing the nature of work]. भ्राजदृष्टयः (bhrājadṛṣṭayaḥ) — here the word must be divided bhrājat + ṛṣṭi: bhrājadṛṣṭayaḥ. Bhrāja dīptau; ṛṣī gatau: bhrājat means shining; ṛṣṭi is a weapon; so bhrājadṛṣṭayaḥ means 'those who have shining weapons'.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 523–524, noted briefly) — abhavaḥ: bhū sattāyām, laṅ second person singular; grave by 'tiṅṅ atiṅaḥ' (Pā. sū. 8-1-28). vidmanāpasaḥ: vida jñāne, adādi; vidma ('knowing'); mak of the Uṇādi list by the word bahula in 'uṇādayo bahulam' (Pā. sū. 3-3-1); no guṇa of the light penult as mak is kit; 'vidma asyāsti': na in the possessive sense by 'lomādipāmādipicchādibhyaḥ śanelacaḥ' (Pā. sū. 5-2-100), the word being in the pāmādi group; end-acute by the suffix's initial udātta; 'vidmanāni apāṃsi yeṣāṃ te': first-member accent by 'bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam' (Pā. sū. 6-2-1); as 'anyeṣām api dṛśyate' (Pā. sū. 6-3-137) names the root dṛś, the first member is lengthened even at the time of avagraha. ajāyanta: janī prādurbhāve, divādi, laṅ third person plural, anta for jha; śyan by 'divādibhyaḥ śyan' (Pā. sū. 3-1-69); before śyan jā for the root by 'jñājanor jā' (Pā. sū. 7-3-79); aṭ; ajāya + anta: pararūpa by 'ato guṇe' (Pā. sū. 6-1-97); as the augment is udātta, initial udātta. bhrājadṛṣṭayaḥ: bhrājṛ dīptau, bhvādi, ātmanepadī; by 'vyatyayo bahulam' (Pā. sū. 3-1-85) śatṛ in the sense of laṭ; śap; bhrājat; śap grave as pit; (p. 524) after śap the lasārvadhātuka śatṛ is grave by the sūtra 'tāsyanudātteṭ', so the root's end-acute remains. ṛṣī gatau: ktic by 'kticktau ca saṃjñāyām' (Pā. sū. 3-3-174); ṛṣ + ti: ṣṭutva by 'ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ' (Pā. sū. 8-4-41); no guṇa of the light penult as the suffix is kit: ṛṣṭi; 'bhrājantaḥ (jantya) ṛṣṭayaḥ yeṣāṃ te' [so printed], bahuvrīhi; first-member accent by 'bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā' (Pā. sū. 6-2-1).

Gist: Agni, first and most Aṅgiras-like, wise, adorns the work of the other gods; he takes many forms (the Āhavanīya and the rest) for the good of all the world; wise; born of the two fire-sticks, or maker of the two worlds; for man's sake he lies in each man's house in ways no one can count. The grammatical tail treats bhūṣasi, vibhuḥ (ḍu, Pā. 3-2-180), bhuvanāya (kyun, U. 2-80), medhiraḥ (iran), dvimātā (no kap by Pā. 5-4-153, which the bhāṣya calls optional for mātṛ; or a tatpuruṣa), śayuḥ (u, U. 1-7), katidhā (Pā. 1-1-23, 5-3-42) and āyave (uṇ, U. 1-2).

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ (pp. 525–526) O Agni! You are the first among the seers named Aṅgirases, and exceedingly great; wise, endowed with many forms such as the Āhavanīya for the favour of all the worlds; intelligent; born of the two araṇi [sticks] as of two mothers; lying in many ways for the sake of man; you adorn all round the works of the other gods.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed, p. 526)

> O Agni, you are the very first and foremost among Angiras ; you conduct the work (sacrifice or worship) of the gods ; you are wise, son of two mothers ; manifold for the benefit of all the world you reside in every house for the use of man.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 526–527) देवानां परिभूषसि व्रतम् (devānāṃ paribhūṣasi vratam) — 'you adorn the works of the gods': in the rites performed with the gods in view [sacrifices and the like], you take the chief part and complete the sacrifice; without Agni there is no sacrifice; so Agni is the adornment of the sacrificial rites. विभुः (vibhuḥ) — vipūrvād bhavater ḍuprayayaḥ: viśeṣeṇa bahuprakāreṇa bhavatīti vibhuḥ: because [he exists] in many forms as in the Āhavanīya [fire] and others, and in many houses, he is 'one existing in many forms'. विश्वस्मै भुवनाय (viśvasmai bhuvanāya) — for all the world [the source adds "For all the world"]. मेधिरः (medhiraḥ) — medhṛ saṅgame ca: medhāvān: the intelligent, the wise. द्विमाता (dvimātā) — dvayor mātā | dvayor araṇyor utpannaḥ | yadvā dvayor lokayor nirmātā: 'Agni is born, in the sacrifice, when two pieces of wood called araṇi are rubbed together; so, with the two araṇis as 'two mothers', Agni is called dvimātā — "one with two mothers". Or: when the Śruti tells the order of creation, by its words agner āpaḥ | adbhyaḥ pṛthivī ('from Agni the waters; from the waters the earth') the atmosphere (āpaḥ means the atmosphere, Ni.

2-10) and the earth come from Agni; so they say Agni is dvayor lokayor nirmātā, the maker of the two worlds, the earth and the atmosphere. आयवे (āyave) — āyuḥ ayanāt eti hy asau viśvam: 'for the sake of pervading the whole world'. [The Kannada: "to pervade the whole creation".]

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (pp. 527–528, noted briefly) — bhūṣasi: bhūṣa alaṃkāre, bhvādi, second person singular; grave as a tiṅ form (no number printed). vibhuḥ: bhū sattāyām with vi; ḍu by 'viprasaṃbhyo ḍvasaṃjñāyām' (Pā. sū. 3-2-180); loss of the ṭi as ḍit; a kṛdanta second member after a gati, so its accent by 'gatikārakopapadāt kṛt' (Pā. sū. 6-2-139): end-acute. bhuvanāya: kyun by 'bhūsūdhūbhrasjibhyaś chandasi' (U. sū. 2-238, as printed; the bhāṣya prints उ. २-८०); ana for yu by 'yuvor anākau' (Pā. sū. 7-1-1); guṇa and av; dative singular; initial udātta, the suffix being nit, by 'ñnity ādir nityam' (Pā. sū. 6-1-197). medhiraḥ: medhṛ saṃgame ca, bhvādi; iran by the word bahula in 'uṇādayo bahulam' (Pā. sū. 3-3-1); initial udātta as nit. dvimātā: 'dve mātarau yasya asau', a bahuvrīhi with a numeral first member; as it ends in ṛ, the samāsānta kap is due by 'nadyṛtaś ca' (Pā. sū. 5-4-153); but since mātṛ and mātṛka differ in sense in common use, the rule is said to be optional for mātṛ; mātṛ has many senses ('mother', 'one who measures' and others); so no kap; being in the tricakrādi group, the second member is end-acute; or 'dvayoḥ mātā', a tatpuruṣa, no question of kap, end-acute by 'samāsasya'. śayuḥ: śīṅ svapne, adādi; u by 'bhṛmṛśī-' (U. sū. 1-7); guṇa, ay; end-acute by the suffix. (p. 528) katidhā: ḍati after kim by 'kimaḥ saṃkhyāparimāṇe ḍati ca' (Pā. sū. 5-2-41); loss of the ṭi; kati is called saṃkhyā by 'bahugaṇavatuḍati saṃkhyā' (Pā. sū. 1-1-23); dhā by 'saṃkhyāyā vidhārthe dhā' (Pā. sū. 5-3-42), 'in many ways'; end-acute by the suffix. āyave: iṇ gatau, adādi; uṇ by 'chandasīṇaḥ' (U. sū. 1-2); vṛddhi as ṇit by 'aco ñṇiti' (Pā. sū. 7-2-115); āy by 'eco 'yavāyāvaḥ' (Pā. sū. 6-1-78); dative singular; middle udātta by the suffix.

Vāyu requires Agni as the chief; since in the Śruti sentence agnir vāyur ādityaḥ Agni is mentioned first among the deities Agni, Vāyu, Āditya etc., Agni is the first, the chief; that is, Agni and Vāyu are closely related; and of the two, Agni is the chief — that is the sense. Skandasvāmin’s view. Skandasvāmin explains the sentence tvam agne prathamo mātariśvana āvir bhava in a different way: “O Agni! At the beginning of creation [or: at the first beginning], you were first seen directly by Vāyu, before everyone else.” To support this he tells an old story (itihāsa): “In the beginning the whole world was enveloped in darkness. Then Mātariśvan (Vāyu) saw Agni in the sky in a subtle form. Then the sages Atharvan, Parāśara, Bharadvāja and others, by churning, brought Agni forth in the araṇi.” This is described in the riks: > मथीद्यदीं विष्वो मातरिश्वा होतारं विश्वाप्सुं विश्वदेव्यम् ॥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-148-1) — mathīd yad īṃ viṣṇo mātariśvā hotāraṃ viśvāpsuṃ viśvadevyam || — Mine, tentative: “When Mātariśvan churned him, the all-formed, all-divine hotṛ.” > त्वामग्ने पुष्करादध्यथर्वा निरमन्थत ॥ *(Ṛ. [The idea that] Agni was seen first by Mātariśvan is described in this rik; so [Skandasvāmin]

says. सुक्रतूया (sukratūyā) — sukratum ātmana icchatīti; śobhanakarmecchayā: out of desire for excellent works, i.e. [out of] anticipation of the best works. विवस्वते (vivasvate) — [Sanskrit: vivasati] or vivāsati: because the word means paricaraṇakarma (Ni. 3-13), vivasvate [the dative of vivasvān] means 'to the sacrificer who performs paricaryā, that is, service'. Vivasvān is also a name of Manu; see the special remark made in a later rik on the word manave. रोदसी (rodasī) — since the word rodasī is read among the twenty-four names of 'heaven and earth' beginning svadhe, purandhī, rodasī means the two [worlds] heaven and earth (Ni. 3-22, as printed). होतृवूर्ये (hotṛvūrye) — hotrā vriyate iti hotṛvūryo yajñaḥ | hotṛvaraṇayukte — 'the sacrifice in which the hotṛ is chosen'; in a sacrifice in which the priest called hotṛ is appointed. भारम् (bhāram) — bharaṇam: the load, the duty, the responsibility, the weight; Skandasvāmin explains a purāṇa-narrative about carrying the burden: ### Page 532 — Sūkta 31, Rik 3 (continued)

That is: in olden times the gods themselves used to come, take the oblations offered to them, and eat them. Since it was well known that each single oblation offered in a sacrifice weighs more than the three worlds, some gods had no strength to carry off their oblations. Then the asuras snatched those oblations and ran off [the Sanskrit adds: even from some who could]. Seeing this, the gods came to Agni and prayed: "O Agni, carry for us the oblations offered in the sacrifice and bring them to us"; and Agni agreed and carried those heavy oblations as mere play. This story, [Skandasvāmin] says, is what the words asaghnor bhāram describe.

In the Ṛgveda the name Manu occurs in many riks (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-80-16; 2-33-13; 8-63-1; 10-100-5); in the Yajurveda, Taittirīya Saṃhitā 1-5-1-3; 7-5-15-3; 2-5-9-1; 2-6-7-1; 3-3-2-1; 5-4-10-5; 6-6-6-1; Atharvaveda 14-2-41; Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā 8-15; Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 1-1-4-14; Jaiminīya Upaniṣad-Brāhmaṇa 3-15-2 — and in many other mantras Manu is spoken of. In the Ṛgveda this Manu is said to be the root-man of mankind, and the first and the chief among those who perform sacrifice and in other matters. In Taittirīya Saṃhitā 3-1-9-4 and in the Aitareya-

Brāhmaṇa 5-14-1-2 [as printed], Nābhānediṣṭha, a son of this Manu, is described as striving to get his share of his father's estate. To Manu in the Ṛgveda the name Vivasvān (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-50-1), or Vaivasvata, son of Vivasvān (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-10-24 [as printed]; Śata. Brā. 13-4-3-3; Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra 10-7; Nirukta 12-10), is given; and since he is said to be of the line of Savarṇā or Saraṇyū, he is also called Sāvarṇi (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-10-24 [as printed] etc.); and as Saṃvaraṇa's line, Sāṃvaraṇi (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-51-1). In the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, in the eighth maṇḍala, of sūktas 27–31 (59 riks), Manu Vaivasvata is the seer; and in the ninth maṇḍala, in sūkta 101, of riks 10–12 (3 riks), Manu Sāṃvaraṇa is the seer. So Vaivasvata and Sāṃvaraṇi must be taken as different persons. अवाशयः (avāśayaḥ) — vāśṛ śabde: śabditavān asi, prakaṭitavān asi: you uttered, made known. पुरूरवसे (pururavase) — puru rautīti pururavāḥ; ru śabde: 'one who makes much noise (sound) in front'; that is the etymological sense of pururavas. Yāska says pururavā bahudhā roruyate ['Pururavas is much shouted at'] (Ni. 10-46). In this rik the word pururavase denotes a king of that name. In the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, in the 95th sūkta of the tenth maṇḍala, as in the line pururavo mā mṛthā … [the print quotes:]

> पुरूरवोऽनु ते केतमायं राजा मी [?] वीर तन्वस्तदासीः । purūravo 'nu te ketamāyaṃ rājā mī [?] vīra tanvastadāsīḥ |

(Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-95-5; मी as read, the vowel sign is not certain.) Gloss (mine and tentative): "Pururavas, I followed your will; the king [?], O hero, was [master] of my body." This rik supports the account of a king Pururavas. In the 95th sūkta of the tenth maṇḍala of the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā there is a conversation between this king and the apsaras Urvaśī, who deserted him; this conversation is explained in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (11-5-1) as a story, nicely. The Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa [11-5-1-1] says this king is the son of the goddess Iḍā; in the Ṛgveda he is called Aila ['son of Iḍā'] Pururavas [by the name] ailaḥ pururavāḥ; and this king is the seer of 9 riks in all (1, 3, 6, 8–10, 12, 14, 17) of the 95th sūkta [of the tenth maṇḍala]. In the Purāṇas and other works the history of this king Pururavas is described in different ways. सुकृते (sukṛte) — tava paricaraṇaṃ kurvate: 'one who does service to you, [i.e.] who does work in the form of attendance on you'. सुकृत्तरः (sukṛttaraḥ) — atiśayena śobhanaphalakāryabhūḥ: 'one who gives in abundance excellent fruits'. श्वात्रेण (śvātreṇa) — kṣipramathanena: 'by the swift [kṣipra] churning, [the one] who is born'; śvātram iti kṣipranāma āśu ātanaṃ bhavati (Ni. 5-3): 'the word śvātra is a name of "swift": it is a quick spreading'. पित्रोर्मुच्यसे (pitror mucyase) — here pitroḥ means the two araṇis, which are the two parents; [the sense is] 'you are released from them'; that is, 'you are born from them'. Skandasvāmin explains pitroḥ as dyāvāpṛthivyoḥ — 'of heaven and earth'. आ त्वा पूर्वमनयन् आ अपरं पुनः (ā tvā pūrvam anayan ā aparaṃ punaḥ) — after Agni is produced in the araṇi, [priests] first place him in the fire-pit called Āhavanīya in the eastern part of the sacrificial altar; and then, from there, in the fire-pit called Gārhapatya in the western part — that is the sense. This order is still followed in sacrifices; it is described in the Śrauta-sūtras.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O Agni, you are the showerer of desires, the increaser of prosperity of your worshipper ; you will hear the hymns of the worshipper as soon as the ladle is lifted (to pour the oblation on the fire). Upon him who fully understands the invocation and makes the oblation with the word Vashatkriti at the moment of pouring the clarified butter on the fire, you, the provider of food, first bestow light, and then upon all men.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 541) वृषभः (vṛṣabhaḥ) — kāmānāṃ varṣitā: the one who rains down wishes; 'the bestower of desires' [English as printed]. पुष्टिवर्धनः (puṣṭivardhanaḥ) — vṛdhu vṛddhau, puṣṭeḥ vardhitā: one who gives the sacrificer wealth, food and the like; one who nourishes and increases growth. उद्यतस्रुचे (udyatasruce) — sruk is the wooden ladle with which the homa is made; one who, with that ladle filled with ghee (tuppa), lifts it up to pour it in the fire — the sacrificer. श्रवाय्यः (śravāyyaḥ) — śravaṇīyo bhavasi: you hear the sacrificer's call. य आहुतिं परि वेदा वषट्कृतिम् (ya āhutiṃ pari vedā vaṣaṭkṛtim) — when performing a homa in the fire, after reciting the yājyā mantra addressed to the deity, they add at the end of the invocation the word vaṣaṭ and perform the homa; this is called vaṣaṭkṛti. Knowing this rule, the sacrificer who performs the homa with the vaṣaṭkāra is one who knows the rules of rites. एकायुः (ekāyuḥ) — mukhyānnastvam: [you are] the chief among givers of food. On the sense of this word Skandasvāmin tells a story: formerly, Āyu, a gandharva, son of the apsaras Urvaśī, brought Agni from the world of the Gandharvas and performed a sacrifice; so Agni first favoured that Āyu and afterwards favoured the people of the other gods; that story is hinted at here, he says, by the words ekāyur agre. विशः (viśaḥ) — prajāḥ: subjects, and other people. आविवाससि (āvivāsasi) — sarvataḥ prakāśayati: you cause to shine; that is, you gratify; you make glad.

You join in a good rite, and protect, the man who walks on a bad path; and when a battle is on [sought by the brave], to win wealth which is to be sought on all sides and can be won only by the brave, you, by your favour, kill the mighty enemy hosts with the few and heroism-less [men].

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

All-knowing Agni, you direct the man who follows improper paths to acts that are fitted to make him good ; in a battle where the great warriors strive for wealth you kill the many by means of the few.

And you are spoken of by the knowledgeable as the ‘father’ (pitā), the protector — pramati, one of excellent understanding — even of the sacrificer who is [weak and] to be sustained from all sides (ādhrasya cit). Likewise you, the most knowing (viduṣṭaraḥ), instruct (pra śāssi) the child [pākam] — [the sacrificer] who is ‘to be cooked’ [paktavyaḥ] — and also instruct the directions, east and the rest. Without your guidance the performers would be bewildered. So it is heard [in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, 6-1-5-1]: ‘The gods, setting out to the sacrificial ground, did not know the directions’ — that bewilderment is removed from the south and other directions by Agni. That, too, is told there: ‘They performed the pathyā svasti; they knew the eastern direction; then by Agni the southern.’ The Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa too says so: ‘Then he chose this boon: “In me alone shall they know the east, then by Agni the south”’ (Ai. Br. 1-7).”

Even for a weak sacrificer who is fit for protection, the wise say that you are of favourable intent and his protector. You, most wise, make the sacrificer who knows nothing, like a child, wise by your instruction; and you point out to him the directions east and the rest in a way that suits him.

“So the anāhitāgni, [in] the domestic [fire], [with] imām agne śaraṇiṃ mīmṛṣo naḥ (‘Agni, forgive this fault of ours’).” (Mine, tentative.)

प्रयतदक्षिणम् (prayatadakṣiṇam) — one who has given fees (dakṣiṇā) to the priests who took part in the sacrifice. वर्मेव स्यूतम् (varmeva syūtam) — as well-woven armour protects the body in battle; as when [one] is fighting in armour the enemy’s arrows do not reach the body: so Agni protects the sacrificer’s body like armour. स्वादुक्षद्मा (svādukṣadmā) — svādu means sweet, delicious; kṣadma means food (Ni. 3-9): sweet food, or provisions. स्योनकृत् (syonakṛt) — syona means comfort (Ni. 3-13): one who brings about comfort. जीवयाजम् (jīvayājam) — jīvayajanasahitaṃ yajñam: a sacrifice in which living creatures are offered: that is, a sacrifice in which animals are bound at the stake, offered to the gods, and an oblation made; hence the sense ‘animal sacrifice’.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 583) ययातिवत् (yayātivat) — Yayāti was a king. From this example, Yayāti is said to be related to Nahuṣa or the Nahuṣa clan; this king can therefore be said to have been a king of the Nahuṣa people, or he may have been of the lineage of Nahuṣa. The kings named Nahuṣa and Yayāti spoken of in the Purāṇas and other works have no connection with the kings of those names spoken of in the Ṛgveda. दैव्यं जनम् (daivyaṃ janam) — devatāsaṃbandhiyād janaran: 'people connected with deities', that is, the gods.

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada) ॥ (p. 588) Indrasya nu vīryāṇi is the second sūkta in the seventh anuvāka. It has fifteen riks. Hiraṇyastūpa Āṅgirasa is the seer of this sūkta; the metre is Triṣṭubh; Indra is the deity. In the Anukramaṇikā it is said indrasya pañconā [fifteen]. In the Agniṣṭoma and other sacrifices, at the midday pressing, in reciting the mantras of the Niṣkevalya-śastra, the sūkta indrasya nu vīryāṇi is to be recited as a nividdhānīya sūkta: this is explained in the section niṣkevalyasya of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra indrasya nu vīryāṇītya etasminn aindrīṃ nividaṃ dadhyāt (Āś. 5-15). In the Viṣuvat too, this sūkta is used for reciting the mantras of that śastra; that matter is shown in the section viṣuvān vā kīrtyaḥ of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra indrasya nu vīryāṇītya etasminn aindrīṃ nividaṃ śaṃstvā (Āś. 8-6). In the Mahāvrata also the sūkta is used for reciting the Niṣkevalya-śastra mantras. This matter is described in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, in the section rāthantaro dakṣiṇaḥ pakṣaḥ, in the sentence catasraḥ satīḥ ṣaḍbṛhatīḥ karotīndrasya nu vīryāṇi pra vocam (Ai. Ā. 5-2-1).

> I will now ennumerate [sic] the valorous deeds of Indra, the weilder [sic] of the thunderbolt has achieved ; he clove the cloud, he sent down the waters, he broke open a way for the torrents of the mountain.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 590–591) The seer of this sūkta, Hiraṇyastūpa, begins, with this sūkta and the next, to praise Indra by relating, one by one, Indra's mighty deeds. Of these, the commentator says that Indra's first heroic deed is the striking, with his vajra, of Vṛtra, who has the form of a cloud; the second is the work of making the rain from that cloud fall on the earth; the third, [the] water fallen on the earth flows as a river and breaks through the mountains. वीर्याणि (vīryāṇi) — deeds of prowess; mighty deeds done with prowess. प्र वोचम् (pra vocam) — I shall say; I shall describe them one by one. यानि प्रथमानि (yāni prathamāni) — the first deeds of valour; or one may say that the word prathamāni means 'chief' — the principal deeds of valour. वज्री (vajrī) — one who holds the vajra in hand. अहिम् (ahim) — 'the cloud': since the word ahi is read among the thirty names of cloud beginning adri, grāvā, ahim means 'the cloud' (Ni. 2-21); ahi also means 'water' (Ni. 2-24); in modern Sanskrit ahi means 'a serpent' [the print: ādhunikasaṃskṛta]. वक्षणाः (vakṣaṇāḥ) — since the word vakṣaṇāḥ is read among the thirty-seven names of rivers beginning avanayaḥ, yakṣyaḥ, vakṣaṇāḥ means 'rivers': the rain from the cloud falls on the mountains and flows from there as rivers: that is what is described here. प्र अभिनत् पर्वतानाम् (pra abhinat parvatānām) — the rivers that flow out of the mountains split the mountains and the earth and flow, [and he] makes a way for them; that is the sense. See the Ṛgveda-Saṃhitā, part 3, pp. 123–124 [the print gives the page numbers of its own earlier volume], for the account of the demon Vṛtra.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (p. 594) पर्वते (parvate) — on the mountain | शिश्रियाणम् (śiśriyāṇam) — [one that] had taken shelter | अहिम् (ahim) — the cloud | अहन् (ahan) — he cleft | अस्मै (asmai) — for this Indra | स्वर्यम् (svaryam) — [of] quick motion, or [that makes] noise | वज्रम् (vajram) — the thunderbolt | त्वष्टा (tvaṣṭā) — Tvaṣṭṛ [the craftsman] | ततक्ष (tatakṣa) — fashioned [for him; after the cloud was cleft by that weapon] | स्यन्दमानाः (syandamānāḥ) — flowing | आपः (āpaḥ) — the waters [of the rivers] | वाश्रा इव (vāśrā iva) — as, lowing, | धेनवः (dhenavaḥ) — cows, [carefully] going to their calves | समुद्रम् (samudram) — the sea | अञ्जः (añjaḥ) — eagerly | अव जग्मुः (ava jagmuḥ) — went and reached.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ Tvaṣṭṛ made for Indra a vajra of quick motion, or sounding loudly. By that vajra Indra cleft the cloud that had taken shelter on the mountain. Afterwards the waters, streaming down as rivers, hastened eagerly and reached the sea, as cows, lowing, go with eagerness to their calves.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> He clove the cloud which had taken shelter on the mountain ; on that occasion Twasta fashioned for him the rumbling thunderbolt ; the flowing waters quickly hastened to the ocean like lowing cows hastening to their calves.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 594–595) What was said in the previous rik is described more fully in this rik. पर्वते शिश्रियाणम् (parvate śiśriyāṇam) — since clouds ordinarily rest [on the peaks] of mountains, the seer has described the clouds as having taken shelter on a mountain. त्वष्ट्रास्मै वज्रं स्वर्यं ततक्ष (tvaṣṭrāsmai vajraṃ svaryaṃ tatakṣa) — Tvaṣṭṛ, the divine craftsman, made the vajra weapon for Indra. In many places in the Ṛgveda it is said that Tvaṣṭṛ made, of iron, the shining vajra weapon for the killing of Vṛtra: > मह्यं त्वष्टा वज्रमतक्षदायसं मयि देवासोऽवृजन्नपि क्रतुम् ॥ (Ṛg-Saṃhitā 10-48-3 [as the source gives it]) — mahyaṃ tvaṣṭā vajram atakṣad āyasaṃ mayi devāso 'vṛjann api kratum ‖ — Mine, tentative: "For me Tvaṣṭṛ fashioned the iron vajra; in me the gods set [their] will." In this rik Indra himself says that Tvaṣṭṛ made the iron vajra for him. वाश्रा इव धेनवः (vāśrā iva dhenavaḥ) — as cows go to their calves, lowing, so the rivers, roaring loudly from the mountain regions, go to the sea: this is the simile.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ Indra, like a bull, chose the Soma-juice with eagerness. He drank the pressed Soma-juice in the three kinds of sacrifice called jyotiḥ, gauḥ and āyuḥ. Indra, the wealthy, lifted up the vajra in his hand and struck with it the cloud that was first born among the clouds.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> Impetuous (or mighty) as a bull, Indra desired Soma ; he drank of the extracted Soma-juice in the three-fold sacrifice ; Indra, lord of riches took his deadly thunderbolt and with it struck the first-born of the clouds.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 597–598) वृषायमाणः (vṛṣāyamāṇaḥ) — vṛṣa ivācaran: ‘behaving like a bull’; having the strength of a bull, or the strength of the bull-like; that is, ‘one who shows [his] strength like a bull’: exceedingly powerful. त्रिकद्रुकेषु (trikadrukeṣu) — for this word the commentator says: ‘the three kinds of sacrifice (yāga) called jyotiḥ, gauḥ and āyuḥ’. This word has the sense of ‘wooden vessels in which Soma-juice is placed’. A few riks in which this sense is found we give as examples: > उग्रेष्विन्नु शूर मन्दसानस्त्रिकद्रुकेषु पाहि सोममिन्द्र ॥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-11-17) — ugreṣv in nu śūra mandasānas trikadrukeṣu pāhi somam indra || — Mine, tentative: “Exhilarated among the mighty, O hero, drink Soma in the trikadrukas, O Indra.” > त्रिकद्रुकेष्वपिबत्सुतस्यास्य मदे अहिमिन्द्रो जघान ॥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-15-1) — trikadrukeṣv apibat sutasyāsya made ahim indro jaghāna || — Mine, tentative: “In the trikadrukas he drank of the pressed [Soma]; in its exhilaration Indra slew the ahi.” > त्रिकद्रुकेषु महिषो यवाशिरं तुविशुष्मस्तृपत्सोममपिबद्विष्णुना सुतं यथावशत् ॥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-92-21; the same pāda printed again, with केष) — trikadrukeṣa [sic] cetanaṃ devāso yajñam atnata || — Mine, tentative: as the preceding. > त्रिकद्रुकेभिः पतति षळुर्वीरेकमिद्बृहत् ॥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-14-16) — trikadrukebhiḥ patati ṣaḷ urvīr ekam id bṛhat || — Mine, tentative: “With the trikadrukas [one] flies over the six wide [regions], the one great.” This word is always used in the plural, and its use is always in contexts of drinking Soma. प्रथमजामहीनाम् (prathamajām ahīnām) — meghānāṃ madhye prathamotpannaṃ megham: among the clouds, the cloud that was first produced. When clouds, in the form of masses, gather, the first of them to arise is called prathamajā. Since, in the beginning of a rain-cloud, small drops [of the cloud] have already been gathered into small, scattered pieces, it is [said] here that [Indra] struck the cloud that was produced first.

> Indra, after you have destroyed the first-born of the clouds, you have destroyed machinations of the deluders and then making the sun, the dawn and the firmament bright and clear, you have not left an enemy to oppose you.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 601) मायिनाम्, मायाः (māyinām, māyāḥ) — māyopetānām asurāṇāṃ saṃbandhinīr māyāḥ: 'the wiles of the demons who are endowed with wiles'. Māyā means 'deceit, wile, strategy &c.' [the English as printed]: here māyināṃ māyāḥ means the deceitful tricks of the demons who have [such] wiles. For the detailed sense of these words see the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, part 3 [the print: bhāga 3], pp. 476–477. प्र अमिनाः (pra aminaḥ) — mīñ hiṃsāyām: you destroyed. आत् सूर्यं जनयन् द्यां उषसम् (āt sūryaṃ janayan dyām uṣasam) — removing completely the network of clouds that covered the sun, [you] make the sun, the atmosphere, and the dawn-time shine clearly and brightly: that is the sense. तादीत्ना (tādītnā) — tadānīm: 'then'; at the time after the removal of the clouds.

(Grammar pages 610–611, noted briefly: ayoddhā — na vidyate yoddhā asya, bahuvrīhi; the first-member accent set aside by 'nañsubhyām': end-acute; the samāsānta is optional by 'samāsāntavidhir anityaḥ' (Paribhā. 84), so no kap by 'nadyṛtaś ca' (Pā. sū. 5-4-153); juhve — hveñ spardhāyāṃ śabde ca, liṭ, ta → e by 'liṭas tajhayor eśirec', saṃprasāraṇa by 'abhyastasya ca' (Pā. sū. 6-1-33), pūrvarūpa by 'saṃprasāraṇāc ca': hu, doubling, cutva; uvaṅ by 'huśnuvoḥ sā-' not applied in the Veda; or, sārvadhātuka by 'chandasy ubhayathā', yaṇ by 'huśnuvoḥ sārvadhātuke' (Pā. sū. 6-4-87); the paribhāṣā 'lakṣaṇapratipadoktayoḥ pratipadoktasyaiva grahaṇam' (Paribhā. 105) is not applied (else ājuhvānaḥ would fail); sātaye huve vām (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-10-13 as printed here; the bhāṣya prints 6-60-13) has no yaṇ since 'er anekācaḥ' requires a polysyllabic stem; end-acute by the affix accent; mahāvīram — mahāṃś cāsau vīraś ca, ā by 'ān mahataḥ samā-' (Pā. sū. 6-3-46), end-acute by 'samāsasya'; tuvibādham — bādhṛ viloḍane, ac by 'nandigrahipacādibhyaḥ' (Pā. sū. 3-1-134), the kṛt-final accent by 'gatikārakopapadāt kṛt'; samṛtim — ktin by 'striyāṃ ktin', sam a gati by 'gatiś ca', which keeps its accent by 'tādau ca niti kṛty atau' (Pā. sū. 6-2-50); rujānāḥ — rujo bhaṅge, rujanti kūlāni iti; śānac by 'vyatyayo bahulam' though parasmaipadin, śa by 'tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ', no num (Vedic); Yāska: 'rujānā nadyo bhavanti rujanti kūlāni' (Niru. 6-4); śānac unaccented, so the vikaraṇa accent; pipiṣe — piṣḷ saṃcūrṇane, liṭ by 'chandasi luṅlaṅliṭaḥ', eś, doubling, halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; nighāta after an atiṅanta; indraśatruḥ — bahuvrīhi, first-member accent by 'bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā'. Only these numbers are printed.)

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ Vṛtra lies dead upon the earth. The waters, attractive to the minds of men, flow wherever they like and in full abundance over him, like a river that has burst its banks and flows over them in many places. In his lifetime, by his strength, he held back the waters of the clouds so that they did not fall on the earth below; now he lies dead beneath those same waters.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> The waters that delight the minds of men flow over him as a river bursts forth its broken banks ; Ahi (Vritra) has been prostrated beneath the feet of the waters which he had obstructed by his strength.

flows without minding the banks, breaking them and flowing, and gives men's minds joy: so the commentator explains the words mano ruhāṇāḥ. महिना पर्यतिष्ठत् (mahinā paryatiṣṭhat) — [the waters] which Vṛtra, by his very great power, had obstructed. पत्सुतःशीः (patsutaḥśīḥ) — pādasyādhaḥ śete: [one] who lies at the foot; or who is thrown down. When it is said here that the waters have feet, the meaning is that, as the waters flow over him, he must be said to lie beneath the water; this idea is put as 'in the region of the feet of the water', that is, 'in the lower part'.

This is made plain: the waters stood confined (niruddhāḥ), as cows confined by a Paṇi — as the asura named Paṇi stole the cows, placed them in a cave, shut the mouth of the cave and kept them in. The cave (bilam) of the waters — the passage of their flowing — which had been closed (apihitam), shut by Vṛtra: that opening Indra, having killed Vṛtra, uncovered (apa vavāra); he removed the confinement of the waters that Vṛtra had made. ॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> The waters, the wives of the destroyer (Vritra) guarded by Ahi had stood confined like cows confined by Panin (robber) ; by slaying Vritra, Indra threw open the gate of the water that had stood closed.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 629–631) Yāska gives an etymology of this rik (quoted above in the bhāṣya; the Kannada, here, reads it as the Anuvāda): dāsa means one who makes work done by workers; such a worker-master (adhipati) is called adhipatnī [feminine: dāsapatnī]; since the waters, by the water they provide for the work, give the workers rest and comfort, they are said to be those who give [the master] protection. In dāsapatnīḥ the word dāsa means 'one who makes others do labour' — here Vṛtra. Ahigopāḥ — ahinā guptāḥ: 'guarded by ahi (Vṛtra)', that is, hidden and shut up in places. Ahi means ayanāt, 'going in the atmosphere'; or āhanti [from han]: because it kills people, ahi, the ā-prefix being shortened: a serpent. Paṇir vaṇig bhavati — paṇi is a trader. Paṇiḥ paṇanāt — he is so called because he does buying and selling. Vaṇik paṇyaṃ nenekti — a trader washes and cleans the goods he has made ready for sale, as befits their price; such goods are called paṇya. Bilaṃ bharaṃ bhavati — it is a bila because it is filled with water; i.e. an opening. Vṛtro vṛṇoter vā vartater vā vardhater vā: since he covers (vṛṇoti), is (vartate) or grows (vardhate) — and these are said to be the reasons for the name vṛtra: this is Yāska's explanation [as given above]. दासपत्नीः (dāsapatnīḥ) — the waters of which Vṛtra was the husband or lord; since Vṛtra is in the form of the cloud, he is called the lord of the waters in the cloud — that is, 'the waters in his power'. अहिगोपाः (ahigopāḥ) — guarded by the demon Vṛtra, that is, hidden away on the earth and placed, as in a cowshed, in the safe-keeping of one who watches. पणिनेव गावः (paṇineva gāvaḥ) — as cows were [confined] by the Paṇi. In the Ṛgveda the word paṇi in some places denotes 'a miser who deals in trade'; but, since there are places where it is said that he did not perform sacrifices and did not give dakṣiṇā gifts, the seers regard him as a man not worthy of respect and as 'a man of low mind'; in some places [the word] is a singular, and since the use of the plural is particularly frequent, one should understand paṇi as a name pointing to a class of people. On the Paṇis. The commentator quotes a story (upākhyāna): the rākṣasas called Paṇis stole the cows that were in the world of the gods and confined them in a cave in a mountain. To find them, Indra sent Saramā, a divine bitch (a female dog of the gods), who went to the Paṇis and, by friendly words, made friends with them and helped to bring away the cows. With the help of the Maruts, Indra destroyed the mountain-cave and brought back the cows that were in it, so the story says. In the Ṛg-Saṃhitā, sūkta 108 of the tenth maṇḍala treats this matter, with a long dialogue between Saramā and the Paṇis. These Paṇis: that they were [the earlier] inhabitants of this country, engaged in trade and the like, is the opinion of some; they, without performing sacrifices or any pious works and without attachment to them, regarded only the earning of wealth, by right or wrong means, as the chief thing, and since they behaved so, the Āryas call them dasyus and look down on them as people of low conduct; so the prevailing opinion has been put in the mantras. In the Ṛgveda the Paṇis are looked down on in this way, and there are many riks concerning them: the word and its forms occur in these riks (references as printed, p. 631): पणयः (paṇayaḥ) — Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-134-10; 1-151-9; 4-51-3; 6-20-4; 10-108-7; 10-108-8; 10-108-2 (last digit curled 2 as printed, out of order); 10-108-4; 10-108-6; 10-108-10; 10-108-11; पणिः (paṇiḥ) — 1-33-3; 1-1[8?]0-7 (an ink blot covers the middle digit); 5-61-8; पणिना (paṇinā) — 4-25-7; पणिना इव (paṇinā iva) — 1-32-11; पणिभिः (paṇibhiḥ) — 4-58-4;

It is customary to say that these Paṇis were the followers of the asura named Vala; and the matter of their having stolen the cows and hidden them in caves is treated in many riks: for this, see what we wrote earlier, in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, part 2, pages 228, 465–466. बिलम् (bilam) — a door; an opening.

When the shining Vṛtra, skilled in all weapons, the one without a second, struck against you — O Indra — then you became a horse's hair (aśvyo vāraḥ): as a horse's tail drives off flies and the like without effort, so you, not reckoning Vṛtra at all, cast him off. Further, you won (ajayaḥ) the cows stolen by the Paṇi; O valiant Indra, you won the Soma. So the Taittirīyas record, in the story of Tvaṣṭṛ whose son was killed: 'having made a disruption of the sacrifice, he drank the Soma by force' (Tai. Saṃ. 2-4-12-1). You released the seven rivers (sapta sindhūn) — [the seven] such as the Gaṅgā, named in the Ṛk 'imaṃ me gaṅge' (Ṛg. 10-75-5) — so that they might flow in streams: that is, you cast aside the obstruction of the flow made by Vṛtra. Bhāvārtha, end (p. 635): … you won the stolen cows; you won the Soma-juice; and the seven rivers, such as the Gaṅgā, you let go free to flow in streams.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> When the mighty Vritra, though single, struck you in return, O weilder [sic] of the thunderbolt, you became furious like a horse's tail (which easily sweeps flies) ; you have rescued the stolen cows ; O hero, you have won the Soma-juice ; you have let loose the seven rivers to flow without obstruction.

[Note on the print's English: "You became furious like a horse's tail" is as printed; the Kannada says Indra became like a horse's tail towards the enemies, i.e. swept them off with ease.]

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 635) अश्व्यो वारो अभवत् (aśvyo vāro abhavat) — here Indra is compared to the tail-hair of a horse. As a horse's tail, with which it swishes away the flies and the like that settle on its body, drives them off without effort: so you, Indra, are, in destroying enemies, like a horse's tail: the seer gives this simile. सृके (sṛke) — vajre, vajrāyudhadharaṇe: among the eighteen names of vajra beginning didyut, nemiḥ, the word sṛkaḥ is read; sṛka means the weapon vajra; sṛko 'syāstīti sṛkī: [he who has the sṛka]; tasya sambuddhiḥ sṛke: 'O Sṛkin' [the Kannada: sṛke is the vocative singular of the word sṛkin]. प्रत्यहन् (pratyahan) — struck back, eight against eight [the print: eṭige prati eṭu, 'blow for blow']. सर्तवे (sartave) — to flow; to flow as streams. सप्त सिन्धून् (sapta sindhūn) — the seven rivers; that is, the seven rivers named in the rik beginning imaṃ me gaṅge [Ṛg-Saṃhitā 10-75-5]: Gaṅgā, Yamunā, Sarasvatī, Śutudrī, Paruṣṇī, Asiknī, Marudvṛdhā.

(Grammar pages 635–636, noted briefly: aśvyaḥ — aśve bhavaḥ aśvyaḥ*; the affix* yat* by Pā. sū. 4-4-110 bhave chandasi; the initial acute by Pā. sū. 6-1-213 yato 'nāvaḥ;* vāraḥ — vārayati daṃśamaśakān iti vāraḥ*;* ṇic* in the causative sense; it is in the pacādi group (nandigrahapacādibhyaḥ…), so ac; ṇic gives vṛddhi of the root; ac causes the loss of ṇi by ṇer aniṭi; since vāra belongs to the kapilakādi group, the l-substitution (vāla) is optional (Pā. sū. Ma. 8-2-18); the end-acute through the suffix, but, the word being in the vṛṣādi group, the initial acute by Pā. sū. 6-1-203 vṛṣādīnāṃ ca;* pratyahan — prati* as a prefix; han hiṃsāgatyoḥ, adādi; śap dropped by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ; the final i of tip and the t dropped by halṅyābbhyo…; lowering would arise but, because of the correlation with yat (Pā. sū. 8-1-66 yadvṛttān nityam), is prevented; the root's end-acute gives the initial acute; the gati prati is low-accented by tiṅi codāttavati (Pā. sū. 8-1-71);* ajayaḥ — ji jaye*;* laṅ* 2nd singular, ajayaḥ; the first ajayaḥ is at the pāda's head, so no lowering; although the second ajayaḥ stands after gāḥ, a non-verb, and might be lowered by tiṅ atiṅaḥ, the dictum samānavākye nighātayuṣmadasmadādeśā vaktavyāḥ (Pā. sū. 8-1-18-5; the bhāṣya prints पा. ९-१-१८-५ (pā. 1-1-18-5)) applies: since gāḥ is connected to the earlier verb, they are different sentence-parts, and so the second ajayaḥ is the head of a pāda-part and is not lowered;* sartave — sṛ gatau*; the affix* taveṅ* by tumarthe sesen… (Pā. sū. 3-4-9); guṇa of ṛ because the suffix is ārdhadhātuka; taveṅ is nit, so initial acute by ñnity ādir nityam. The print gives only Pā. sū. 4-4-110, 6-1-213, Ma. 8-2-18, 6-1-203, 8-1-66, 8-1-71, 8-1-18-5, 3-4-9; ends ॥ १२ ॥.)*

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ O Indra! When fear arose in your heart as you set out to kill Vṛtra, whom, other than yourself, did you think of as the slayer of Vṛtra? For what reason did you, [frightened], cross the ninety-nine flowing rivers swiftly, like a hawk?

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

> O Indra, when you killed Vritra, what fear did enter your heart ? what persuer [sic] did you see on behalf of Vritra ? what was that which, frightened as you were, made you flee and traverse ninety-nine streams like a swift hawk ?

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 641–642) There is some difficulty in the sense of this rik. The commentator has explained the meaning thus: when Indra was about to kill the demon Vṛtra, he feared in his mind that he, [being] so powerful, might have a slayer; so, frightened, he fled swiftly like a hawk and crossed the rivers flowing in torrents. If we alter this explanation a little the sense fits better: after killing the demon Vṛtra, Indra, from the fear that Vṛtra's followers might come behind him, ran swiftly, like a hawk, and, crossing the ninety-nine rivers that lay on the way, came to a safe place. Support for this idea is found in the Purāṇas and elsewhere; but there, the fear that overcame Indra was that, having killed Vṛtra, who was a Brāhmaṇa, he had committed a great sin and incurred the guilt of Brahmin-slaying; fearing so, he fled far away and hid in a lake, where, it is said, he stayed for a long time. Vṛtra was the son of Tvaṣṭṛ, the craftsman of the gods; being a Brāhmaṇa, Indra, thinking that by his slaying he had done a great wrong, departed to a distant place. This is established by two Śruti sentences cited by the commentator: > (१) इन्द्रो वै वृत्रं हत्वा नास्तृषीति मन्यमानः पराः परावतोऽगच्छत् ॥ (Ai. Brā. 3-15) — indro vai vṛtraṃ hatvā nāstṛṣīti manyamānaḥ parāḥ parāvato 'gacchat — "Indra, having killed Vṛtra, thinking 'I have not prevailed', went to the farthest distances." (Mine, tentative.)* > (२) इन्द्रो वृत्रगं हत्वा । परां परावतमगच्छत् । अपाराधमिति मन्यमानः ॥ (Tai. Brā. 1-6-7-4; अपाराधम् (apārādham) as printed, the bhāṣya has अपराधम् (aparādham)) — indro vṛtragṃ hatvā \| parāṃ parāvatam agacchat \| apārādham iti manyamānaḥ — "Indra, having killed Vṛtra, went to the farthest distance, thinking [it] an offence." (Mine, tentative.) On the basis of such passages one may say that this matter was widely told in the Purāṇas and elsewhere. अहेर्यातारम् (aher yātāram) — the person who comes from the side of Vṛtra to kill [me]. नव च नवतिं च (nava ca navatiṃ ca) — 'ninety-nine': many rivers; the sense is that while going far he crossed many rivers that lay on the way. स्रवन्तीः (sravantīḥ) — sru gatau*: rivers flowing in streams.* श्येनो न (śyeno na) — the bird called śyena*, the hawk; it is well known that it can fly very swiftly and to a great distance; the seer gives it as a simile.* रजांसि (rajāṃsi) — waters, that is, currents of flowing water: Yāska has the statement udakaṃ raja ucyate* (Ni. 4-19).
