Translation:¹ "I bow to the elephant-faced one, bowing to whom the good-minded — Vāgīśa [Brahmā] and the rest — become successful at the start of all undertakings. I praise Vidyātīrtha-Maheśvara, whose breath the Vedas are, and who made the whole world from the Vedas. The Veda is Śiva, Śiva is the Veda; one who studies the Veda is Sadāśiva; therefore, with every effort, one should always recite the Veda alone."²

And so it is laid down in the Sūtra, in the section beginning atha chandomāḥ: 'the ṛcas abhi tvā deva savitaḥ, pretāṃ yajñasya śambhuvā and ayaṃ devāya janmane' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [8-6])."

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ In the first sūkta of the second adhyāya of the first aṣṭaka there are eight riks. The ṛṣi and the meter are the same as in the preceding sūkta. The Anukramaṇikā says the deities are the Ṛbhus. The application is both śrauta and smārta. In the vyūḍha sacrifice, when the prathama-chandoma vaiśvadeva-śāstra mantras are recited, the ṛca connected with the Ṛbhus, ayaṃ devāya janmane, is used. The Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Āś. 8-6), in the section atha chandomāḥ, directs that the ṛca with Savitṛ as deity, beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [1-24-3]) — three riks — the ṛca with Heaven-and-Earth as deity beginning pretāṃ yajñasya śambhuvā (Ṛ. Saṃ. [3-?-?]), and the ṛca with the Ṛbhus as deity beginning ayaṃ devāya janmane (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-20-1) be used as chandomā mantras.

Translation: "The Ṛbhus, being originally men, attained divinity by austerity (tapas); and they are the deities in this sūkta. Their company is here denoted by the word janman in the singular, which means 'the one being born'. For the god — the company of the Ṛbhus — who is born, for his pleasure, this stoma, this particular hymn of praise, has been made (akāri, 'produced') āsayā — with their own mouths — by the viprebhiḥ, the wise priests. Of what sort is the hymn? Ratnadhātamaḥ — giving wealth, such as lovely jewels, in the highest degree. The sense is that the Ṛbhus, pleased with praise, give wealth." The grammar that follows is noted briefly: āsayā (from asya, mukha 'mouth'; the instrumental singular ṭā replaced by yāc by P. 7-1-39 supām sulug...; the y of the stem dropped by vyatyaya; the c-mark gives end accent); ratnadhātamaḥ (ratnāni dadhāti = ratnadhāḥ, with tamap; the accent of the final member of the compound).⁶

Grammar pages (pp. 4 lower half–5), noted briefly. The Kannada says: āsayā — the word asya is mukha ("mouth"), a variant form (rūpāntara) of āsyā; the dative/instrumental sense "by the mouth"; the ending ṭā is replaced by yāc (P. 7-1-39 [supām sulug-pūrvasavarṇāccheyāḍādyāyājālaḥ]); yāc has the mark c, hence end-accent by P. 1-1-... [cit P. 6-1-163]. Ratnadhātamaḥ — ratna is an eternally neuter noun and so is first-syllable accented by the Phīṭ-sūtra nabviṣayasyāniṣantasya [Phīṭ 2-[?]]; ratnāni dadhāti iti ratnadhāḥ: after the root dhā with the upapada ratna, kvip or viṭ [P. 3-2-71 anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante / P. 3-2-67 kvip ca], all letters of the suffix dropped; the root accent (end-accent on dhā); after the compound, gatikārakopapadāt kṛt P. 6-2-139 retains the accent of the final member; the other letters unaccented; ratnadhāḥ may also have end-accent by samāsasya P. 6-1-223; the tamap suffix is pit so unaccented by P. 3-1-4 anudāttau suppitau; the svarita and pracaya to be supplied.⁷

6. Grammar, noted briefly.

7. Numerals as read; pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

जन्मने (janmane) — for [the deities] called the Ṛbhus, who were born [as gods] | देवाय (devāya) — for the deity (for the company of deities) | रत्नधातमः (ratna-dhātamaḥ) — giving lovely jewels and the like (riches) | अयं स्तोमः (ayaṃ stomaḥ) — this hymn | विप्रेभिः (viprebhiḥ) — by the intelligent, the learned priests and others | आसया (āsayā) — with [their] mouth | अकारि (akāri) — has been made.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The deities called the Ṛbhus, having been men before, attained divinity. Addressing that company of deities who thus took a divine birth, the learned priests and other men have made this hymn with their own mouths. This excellent hymn gives jewels and other precious things to those who praise, through the grace of the Ṛbhu deities.

॥ English Translation ॥ ⁸

This hymn, the bestower of riches has been addressed by the sages with their own mouths to the race (of Ribhus) having divine birth.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

It is said in many places in the Ṛgveda that the Ṛbhus, having been men formerly, attained divinity by their excellent conduct and by the performance of good works. Formerly, to the ṛṣi Aṅgiras there was a son named Nītimañjarī [as read]. In his line there were three sons born to a ṛṣi named Sudhanvan: Ṛbhu, Vibhu and Vāja. By good works — helping the gods and the like — they were born as gods or became gods; so it is believed. Of these three sons of Sudhanvan, Ṛbhu and the rest, the custom is to call them "Ṛbhus"; the three sons are called by the name of the eldest.

8. as printed in the source

Because they were pupils of Tvaṣṭṛ, they are also called "divine craftsmen". It is said in various places that they made for Indra and the other gods needed things — that is, they made Indra's chariot, Agni's camasa vessel, and so on. In this sūkta some of the deeds they did are described. It is said everywhere that they have wondrous power and are capable of doing any work; since they have powers and capabilities like those of the gods, the ṛṣis, thinking them to belong to the company of gods, have variously described them and the deeds they did. It is believed that they dwell in the orb of the sun and carry out their works through the sun's rays. More details about them will be given later.

आसया (āsayā) — the singular instrumental word; āsyā — a variant form of the word mukha, "mouth"; the sense: "by the mouth", "by the lips".

रत्नधातमः (ratnadhātamaḥ) — this word occurs in the first rik of the Ṛgveda, agnim īle purohitam (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-1-1). Ratnāni dadhāti (dadāti) iti ratnadhāḥ atīṣayena dhanapradaḥ: one who gives wealth, such as gems, in the highest degree.

Translation: "Those Ṛbhus, for Indra — for his pleasure — made by the mind (manasā) the two horses harī — well-trained, which yoke themselves to the chariot (vacoyujā) at a mere word, without any beating or the like. Since the Ṛbhus are of true resolve, [their craftsmanship is such that] by the mere resolve Indra's two horses came into being [the reading tvaṣṭṛtvam is partly unclear, marked [?]]. Those Ṛbhus, by śamī — works in the form of preparing the graha cup, the camasa vessel and the like — pervaded (āśata, 'attained') our sacrifice. Among the thirty-six words for 'action' beginning with apas, the words śamī and śami are read [Nighaṇṭu 2-1, cited 'ni. 2-1', numerals as read [?]]. The grammar, noted briefly: vacoyujā (vacasā yuñjāte, yuj + kvip; the dual ending replaced by ā; accent of the final member of the compound); tataksuḥ (takṣ 'to make thin, to fashion', the perfect; jhi → us; reduplication); śamībhiḥ (śamyah karmāṇi, 'works which remove sins'; the Uṇādi in, with the feminine in ñiṣ; first-syllable accent through the vṛṣādi list); āśata (aś 'to pervade', śnu, middle voice; the augment āt; unaccented). ¹⁰

Grammar pages (pp. 7 lower half–8), noted briefly. ये (ye) — which Ṛbhu deities | इन्द्राय (indrāya) — for Indra's pleasure | वचोयुजा (vacoyujā) — which can be yoked to the chariot simply by a word | हरी (hari) — the two horses called Hari | मनसा (manasā) — by the mere resolve of the mind | ततक्षुः (tataksuḥ) — produced [for him] | (ते ऋभवः) ((te ṛbhavaḥ)) — those Ṛbhus | शमीभिः (śamībhiḥ) — with [works of the kind of] preparing the graha, the camasa and the like | यज्ञम् (yajñam) — our sacrifice | आशत (āśata) — pervaded.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

These Ṛbhus produced, by mere resolve of the mind and for Indra's pleasure, the two well-trained horses called Hari of Indra's chariot. May such Ṛbhus provide for our sacrifice also the graha, the camasa and the other implements.

॥ English Translation ॥

The Ribhus who created mentally for Indra his pair of tawny horses that yoke themselves at his command attained the sacrifice by their acts of skill.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

वचोयुजा (vacoyujā) — tāḍanādikaṃ vinā vāñmātreṇa rathe yujyamānau: yoked to the chariot at a mere word, without blows or other punishment. That is, to Indra, his command is enough; without the urging of any charioteer, the two harness themselves to the chariot — "Harnessing themselves at Indra's word (command)" [the print adds the English].

ततक्षुः मनसा (tataksuḥ manasā) — sampāditavantaḥ, kṛtavantaḥ: "created" [English added by the print]. Being skilled in the craft of building, and being of true resolve, the Ṛbhus created with the power of their intellect [Indra's chariot and horses] — items that serve the sacrifice: weapons and the like, the chariot and other things — and are able to make anything. Those deities' powers are above those of modern craftsmen: they need no tools or materials; by mere mental resolve they are able to make whatever they wish. This is what the word manasā conveys.

हरी (harī) — haraṇāt vahate iti harī: because they carry (vahate) the chariot, Indra's horses are called Hari. This dual word is, in the Ṛgveda, generally used when speaking of Indra's two horses.

Translation: "For the Nāsatyas [the Ásvins] — for the pleasure of the Ásvin gods — they fashioned (takṣan) a chariot. The Ṛbhu gods, by fashioning, produced a chariot. Of what sort? Parijmānam — going all round, travelling everywhere; sukham — comfortable [the Sanskrit gloss — 'giving comfort in sitting' — is partly unclear, marked [?]]. Further, they fashioned (produced) a cow (dhenu). Of what sort of cow? Sabardughām — a giver of sabar, i.e. a milker of milk." The grammar, noted briefly: takṣan (the augment aṭ is absent, as 'variously in the Veda'); nāsatyābhyām (na asatya — 'those in whom there is no untruth'; the n of the negative is not dropped by the exception nabhrāṇapāt... P. 6-3-75); parijmānam (aj 'to go' with the prefix pari and an Uṇādi suffix [Uṇ. 1-152, as read], with first-syllable accent by nipātana); sabardughām (sabar = milk, duh 'to milk' + kap by P. 3-2-70 duhaḥ kab ghas ca; kap has p, so the root accent remains; the compound has the accent of its final member).¹²

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

By their skill the Ṛbhu deities produced for the Aśvin deities a chariot that can travel anywhere, easy to ride in; and one cow that gives good milk.

13. A crowded run of three-and-a-half pages; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.

॥ English Translation ॥

They constructed for the Nasatyas, an easy-moving chariot which is capable of moving everywhere, and a cow that gives milk.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

As said in the earlier rik, the extraordinary craftsmanship done by the Ṛbhu deities is also described in this rik, and in the following riks.

तक्षन् (takṣan) — ataksan; for the sake of the metre in the Veda the a of the verb ataksan is dropped and only takṣan is used. Ataksan means sampāditavantah, kṛtavantah — [they] fashioned; the senses "chipped, fabricated, fashioned, constructed, carved" [the print gives these English words] can be given. As said in the earlier rik, the sense is that they did not make the chariot by mere mental resolve; rather, by lifting [the materials] with their weapons and tools, they built it according to the science of craftsmanship.

सुखम् (sukham) — comfortable ("easy-moving" [the print's English]); not tiresome to those who sit in the chariot; moving as in a kula [cradle?]; or fitted with a third (spare) seat [the Kannada's alternative, partly unclear].

धेनुम् (dhenum) — gām: a cow. In general, the word dhenu in the R̥gveda denotes a cow that gives milk.

तक्षन् (takṣan) — here too, ataksan is intended. A doubt arises here: since takṣan means "they carved, they fashioned," is it not impossible to make a cow with weapons and the like? Here the commentator's sense, "they produced (sampāditavantaḥ)", is consistent.

Application (opening lines): "In the second chandoma, at the vaiśvadeva-śāstra, the Ṛbhu ṛca yuvānā pitarā punaḥ is used. It is laid down in the Sūtra, in the section of the second [day] beginning agnim vo devam: 'the two ṛcas mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī canaḥ and yuvānā pitarā punaḥ' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [8-10])."

Translation: "The gods called the Ṛbhus akrata — made — their own parents, who had been old, young (yuvānā) again. Of what sort? Satyamantrāḥ — having the unfailing power of mantras: since their mantras are perfected by puraścaraṇa and other ritual practices, whatever fruit a mantra is applied to obtain, that fruit is obtained exactly so. Hence the sense: they were able to give youth to their aged parents. Ṛjūyavaḥ — desiring straightness for themselves: free of [crooked] designs; therefore their performed mantras succeed. Viṣṭī — viṣṭayaḥ — pervading: here 'pervading' is said of the unobstructed power of their mantras in all works. Yāska explains the word ṛbhu so: 'ṛbhavaḥ — they shine greatly (uru bhānti), or they shine by truth, or they are [what they are] by truth' (Nirukta [11-15], numerals as read [?])." The grammar, noted briefly: yuvānā (yuvan from yu with kanin, first-syllable accent through the n; the dual ending replaced by ā); pitarā (the same); satyamantrāḥ (a bahuvrīhi, first-member accent); ṛjūyavaḥ (ṛju in the abstract sense, "desire straightness for oneself": kyac, the lengthening by P. 7-4-25, then the Vedic u suffix); viṣṭī (viṣṭ 'to pervade'...).¹⁵

Grammar pages (pp. 14 lower half–15, and 18–19), noted briefly. The bhāṣya's grammar on viṣṭī continues on p. 15: viṣṭ vyāptau + kvic/ktic: kric-ktau ca saṃjñāyām P. 3-3-174 [as read

3-3-174] gives ktic in a noun-sense; titutratatha... P. 7-2-9 bars iṭ; ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ P. 8-4-41 gives ṭ for t: viṣṭi; the nominative dual au → ī by the Veda: the Vārttika iyāḍiyājikārāṇām upasaṃkhyānam P. 2-1-... [as read], which allows īkāra for jas [here jas → ī by P. 1-1-... alo 'ntyasya]; ād guṇaḥ P. 6-1-87 and prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ P. 6-1-102 give viṣṭi; akrata (ḍukṛñ karaṇe, luṇi; cli luṇi P. 3-1-43 gives cli, whose s is dropped; mantre ghasahvaraṇaśavṛdahādvṛc-kragamijanibhyo leḥ P. 2-4-80 drops cli [luk] in the Veda; ṛ of the middle ending jha → at by P. 7-1-5 ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ; iko yaṇaci; aḍāgama P. 6-4-71; all unaccented by P. 8-1-28). The Kannada's own grammar (pp. 17–19) treats yuvānā (yu miśraṇāmiśraṇayoḥ with the Uṇādi kanin, Uṇ. 1-[?] kanin-yuvṛṣitakṣirājidhanvidyupratidivah; aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor iyaṇuvaṇau P. 6-4-77 gives uv; yuvan + au; supām sulug... P. 7-1-39 gives ā), pitarā (as before), satyamantrāḥ (na vidyate... satyā mantrā yeṣām, bahuvrīhi, P. 6-2-1), ṛjūyavaḥ (ṛju here in the abstract sense, "straightness"; supa ātmanaḥ kyac P. 3-1-8, optional; the ām ending dropped by supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ P. 2-4-71; ṛjūya; akṛtsārvadhātukayor dīrghaḥ P. 7-4-25 lengthens the final a of the stem before a kyac ending; then the Vedic u suffix [kyāc chandasi P. 3-2-170 — the Kannada reads kya as covering kyac, kyaṣ, kyaṇ, u being added after kya-ending roots in the Veda]; ṛjūya + u; ato lopaḥ P. 6-4-48 drops the a; ṛjūyu; suffix accent; nominative plural ṛjūyavaḥ), and viṣṭi (viṣṭi vyāptau with ktic, as above, viṣṭi + jas; iyāḍiyāc... — three substitutes iyā, ḍiyā, ī are available for jas after su [the Vārttika]; here ī by P. 1-1-52 alo 'ntyasya [last letter s replaced]; ād guṇaḥ P. 6-1-87 would give guṇa, but the Kannada argues that prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ P. 6-1-102 is the rule that gives viṣṭi, and that jasi ca P. 7-3-109 [guṇa before jas] also has a claim; by vīpratiṣedhe paraṃ kāryam P. 1-4-2 the guṇa would win, but the paribhāṣā saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ makes the guṇa rule — which depends on the technical

सत्यमन्त्रः (satyamantrāḥ) — [those] whose mantras are true | ऋजूयवः (ṛjūyavaḥ) — desiring to remain on the straight path | विष्टी (viṣṭī) — [by the power of the mantras] pervading | ऋभवः (ṛbhavaḥ) — the deities called the Ṛbhus | पितरा (pitarā) — their [aged] mother and father | पुनः (punaḥ) — again | युवाना (yuvānā) — young | अक्रत (akrata) — made.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The Ṛbhus go always on the right path; therefore their mantras are never in vain, and are fruitful. By the power of such mantras they made their aged father and mother young again.

॥ English Translation ॥

The honest Ribhus repeating true prayers made (their) parents young again by their skilful acts encountering no opposition through their infallible mantras.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

When the mantras of the Ṛbhu deities are recited at the time of reciting the vaiśvadeva-śāstra mantras, this mantra is said as the dvitīya-chandomā mantra. This matter is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section of the second [day], agniṃ vo devam, in the sūtra mahī dyauḥ prthivī ca no yuvānā pitarā punar iti tṛcau (Āś. 8-10).

16. A crowded run; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.

युवाना (yuvānā) — yuvānau: youthful; those who are in the state of youth, not in old age.

पितरा (pitarā) — svakīyau mātāpitarau — their aged parents.

— again; as they were formerly in the state of youth.

सत्यमन्त्राः (satyamantrāḥ) — avitathamantrasāmarthyopetāḥ. By performing the puraścaraṇa and similar rites, those who have obtained mantra-siddhi: if one performs the recitation of the mantra for the sake of a given fruit, the fruit is certainly obtained.

विष्टी (viṣṭī) — viṣṭī, viṣṭ vyāptau: among the twenty-six words for karman beginning with apas, aḥnaḥ, the word viṣṭī is read (Ni. 2-1); it therefore means "action". Viṣṭī — vyāptiyuktāḥ: those who have pervasion. By "pervasion" is meant: sarveṣu kāryeṣv etadīyasya mantrasāmarthyasyāpratighāto 'tra vyāptir ucyate — in all works their power of mantra is not hindered.

The Ṛbhus — the Kannada here says — were formerly men; the manner in which they afterwards attained divinity this rik explains in detail:

विष्टी शमी तरणित्वेन वाघतो मर्तासः सन्तो अमृतत्वमानशुः । सौधन्वना ऋभवः सूरचक्षसः
संवत्सरे समपृच्यन्त धीतिभिः ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-११०-४]) viṣṭī śamī taraṇitvena vāghato martāsaḥ santo amṛtatvam ānaśuḥ | saudhanvanā ṛbhavaḥ sūracakṣasaḥ saṃvatsare

samapṛcyanta dhītibhiḥ | | (ṛ. saṃ. [1-110-4])

कृत्वा कर्माणि श्रिप्तत्वेन वोढारो मेधाविनो वा मर्तासः सन्तोऽमृतत्वमानशिरे ऋभवः सूरख्याना
वा सूरप्रज्ञा वा संवत्सरे समपृच्यन्त धीतिभिः कर्मभिः ॥ kṛtvā karmāṇi śripṛat- vena voḍhāro medhāvino vā martāsaḥ santo 'mṛtatvam ānaśire ṛbhavaḥ sūrakhyānā vā sūraprajñā vā saṃvatsare
samapṛcyanta dhītibhiḥ karmabhiḥ | |

आदित्यरश्मयोऽप्यृभव उच्यन्ते ॥ ādityaraśmayo 'py ṛbhava ucyante | |

— "the rays of the sun also are called ṛbhavaḥ"; as in the example

¹⁸. The first words of Yāska's text are partly garbled in the print; I give them as read and without translating.

उद्वत्स्वस्मा अकृणोतना तृणं निवत्स्वपः स्वपस्यया नरः । अगोह्यस्य यदसस्तना गृहे तदद्येदमृभवो नानु गच्छथ ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-१६१-११]) udvatsv asmā akr̥ṇotanā
tṛṇaṃ nivatsv apaḥ svapasyayā naraḥ | agohyasya yad asastanā gr̥he tad adyedaṃ ṛbhavo nānu gacchatha | | (ṛ. saṃ.
[1-161-11])

¹⁹ Yāska comments: agohya ādityo 'gūhanīyas tasya yad asastha
gr̥he yāvatrātrir bhavati na tāvad iha bhavatheti [partly garbled] — "Agohya is the sun, the [one] not to be hidden; as many nights as the Ṛbhus spend in his house, they are not here." The commentator Sāyaṇa, in explaining the rik, takes ṛbhavaḥ as uru prabhūtaṃ bhāsamānāḥ ṛtena-ādityena bhāsamānā vā ṛtenodakenodakārtham utpannā vā — "those who shine greatly; or those who shine by the sun; or those who arose by water, for the sake of water".

Translation: "O Ṛbhus! Your madāsaḥ — the intoxicating soma-juices — have been united (samagmata) with Indra and with the Ādityas. The Ṛbhus' drinking of soma with Indra and the Ādityas takes place at the third pressing; therefore Āśvalāyana reads it thus: '[bring] Indra with the Ādityas, with the Ṛbhus, with Vibhu, with Vāja, with Bṛhaspati, with the Viśvedevas' (Āś. [5-3]). With what Indra? Marutvatā — accompanied by the Maruts; so another mantra reads: 'marudbhir indra sakhyaṃ te astu' — 'may your friendship be with the Maruts, O Indra' (Ṛgveda [8-92-2]). With what Ādityas? Rājabhiḥ — shining ones." The rest is grammar, noted briefly: madāsaḥ (mad + ap by P. 3-3-67 mado 'nupasarge'; the suffix is pit, so the root accent stays; the jas augment asuk by P. 7-1-50); agmata (gam with sam, the aorist; middle voice by P. 1-3-29 samo gamyrcchibhyām; the cli dropped; penultimate dropped by P. 6-4-98 gamahanajanakhanaghasaṃ lopah kñity ananī; the separated sam); marutvatā (matup after marut; the bha-name by P. 1-4-19 tasau matvarthe overrides the pada-name; va for ma by P. 8-2-10 [jhayaḥ]); ādityebhiḥ (bhis does not become ais: "variously in the Veda"; e by P. 7-3-103); rājabhiḥ (rāj + Uṇādi kanin, first-syllable accent).²¹

Grammar pages (pp. 22 lower half-23), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: madāsaḥ (madī harṣe, mado 'nupasarge' P. 3-3-67 gives ap when a subanta that is not a prefix is the upapada: mad + a; ap has p, so unaccented [anudāttau suppitau P. 3-1-4]; the root

(हे ऋभवः) ((he ṛbhavaḥ)) — O Ṛbhu deities | मरुत्वता (marutvatā) — accompanied by the deities called the Maruts | इन्द्रेण च (indreṇa ca) — with Indra also | राजभिः (rājabhiḥ) — shining | आदित्येभिः च (ādityebhiḥ ca) — with the Ādityas also | वः (vaḥ) — your | मदासः (madāsaḥ) — the intoxicating [soma-juices] | सम् अगमत (saṃ agmata) — have been joined (assembled).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Ṛbhu deities! For you — joined with Indra, the Maruts, and the shining Ādityas — the intoxicating soma-juice has been got ready.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Ribhus, the exhilarating [sic] Soma juices are ready to be offered to you along with Indra accompanied by the Maruts and along with the brilliant Adityas.²³

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

In the evening, at the third pressing (tr̥tīya-savana), when the soma-juice is offered to the Ṛbhus, it is offered by addressing — together with the Ṛbhus — Indra accompanied by the Ādityas, and the deities Ṛbhu, Vibhu, Vāja, Bṛhaspati and the Viśvedevas. This matter is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra: indram ādityavantam ṛbhumantaṃ vibhumantaṃ vājavantam bṛhaspatimantaṃ viśvedevyāvantam āveti (Āś. 5-3 [?]).

सं अगमत (saṃ agmata) — Skandasvāmin explains these words as saṃgacchadhvam, "unite" — [taking agmata as] "may [the soma] come together for the sake of drinking soma".

मदासः (madāsaḥ) — mādyanty ebhir iti madāḥ somāḥ: since the soma-drinking gives intoxication (mada), the soma-juice is called madāḥ.

23. The print has "exhilerating" for "exhilarating" — [sic].

मरुत्वता (marutvatā) — maruto 'sya santīti marutvān: with Indra, who is accompanied by the Marut deities.

राजभिः (rājabhiḥ) — dīpyamānaiḥ — shining, brilliant, etc. [the print adds the English "brilliant, shining &c."].

Translation: "And further — [the work] of the god Tvaṣṭṛ, namely his act of carving: navam — new; tyam camasaṃ — that camasa, a kind of wooden vessel able to hold soma — niṣkṛtam — completely fashioned: [Tvaṣṭṛ] made it. That one camasa, made by Tvaṣṭṛ, skilled in carving, [the Ṛbhus, his pupils, took up] and again (punaḥ) akarta — made four (caturaḥ): they made four camasas, divided into four. This sense — making one thing four-fold — is plain in another mantra also: 'ekaṃ camasaṃ caturaḥ kṛṇotana' — 'make the one camasa into four' (Ṛgveda [1-161-2])." The grammar, noted briefly: navam (nu 'to praise', ap in the passive sense; ap being an exception to ghaṇ, applies to the abstract sense everywhere; the ghaṇ of P. 3-3-19 akartari ca kārake saṃjñāyām applies to any case-relation other than the agent; and though 'in a name' is stated there, the ca shows it applies even to what is not a name); tvaṣṭuḥ (takṣ + the Uṇādi tr̥n; because the root is ūdit, the iṭ is optional by P. 7-2-44 [svarati-sūti-sūyati-dhūñūdito vā], here absent; the k dropped by P. 8-2-29 [skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca]); niṣkṛtam (kṛ + kta in the object sense; the ṣatva by P. 8-3-45 [nityaṃ samāse 'nuttarapadasthasya]; the genitive devasya — in P. 2-3-65 karṭṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti the genitive is permitted after a kṛt for agent or object, though barred by P. 2-3-69 for kta etc.; here the agent is taken as 'remaining' [śeṣa], so the sixth case [P. 2-3-50 ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe]); akarta (kṛ aorist, middle; jha → ta by vyatyaya; the cli dropped; the guṇa explained by 'in the Veda both ways'); caturaḥ (catur + śas: the a of the ending is accented by P. 6-1-167); punaḥ (accented as in the svarādi list).²⁵

Grammar pages (pp. 25 lower half–30 upper), noted briefly.

The Kannada's Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā treats navam (ṇu stutau, the root's ṇ → n by P. 6-1-65 ṇo naḥ; ap after a root ending in u/r by P. 3-3-57 ṛdor ap, in the object-sense [karṭṛvyatirikta-kāraḥ]); the suffix is pit, so unaccented; the root accent stays; guṇa and av by eco 'yavāyāvaḥ P. 6-1-78; su, am, ami pūrvaḥ P. 6-1-107; with a long note on the ghaṇ suffix P. 3-3-18 bhāve and P. 3-3-19 and their exceptions), tvaṣṭuḥ (takṣū tvakṣū tanūkarāṇe; the Uṇādi tr̥n [Uṇ. 2-95 tr̥n-tr̥jau śaṃsi-kṣadādibhyaḥ saṃjñāyām cānidau? — as read: tr̥n-tr̥jau śaṃsi-kṣadādibhyaḥ saṃjñāyām cānimittau], with saṃjñā; or, by bahulam anyatrāpi Uṇ. 2-[?], tr̥n in this form; the ūdit root takes iṭ optionally by P. 7-2-44, so the optional-iṭ case is dropped here; skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca P. 8-2-29 drops the k of kṣ; ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ P. 8-4-41 gives ṭ: tvaṣṭṛ; genitive singular ṇas, rta ut P. 6-1-111 gives u in place of a + r when jas/ṇas follows a stem ending in r, then uraṇ raparaḥ P. 1-1-51 gives ur; rātsasya P. 8-2-24 drops the s of the conjunct after r; tvaṣṭur + visarga: tvaṣṭuḥ), niṣkṛtam (niṣ + kṛ + kta; kugatiprādayaḥ P. 2-2-18 compound; sasajuṣo ruḥ P. 8-2-66 and kharavasānāyor visarjanīyaḥ P. 8-3-15 for the visarga; nityaṃ samāse 'nuttarapadaasthasya P. 8-3-45 gives s for the visarga when it belongs to is or us in a compound, with the Mahābhāṣya and the Vārttika discussion of iduduphadhasya cāpratyayasya P. 8-3-41 and isusoḥ sāmārthyē P. 8-3-44 — the Kannada gives the full scholastic argument whether ṣatva is optional in this compound and whether vyapekṣā-sāmārthya, 'mutual dependence', is present; it concludes that niṣkṛtam takes ṣa by P. 8-3-41; and on the genitive devasya niṣkṛtam: P. 2-3-65 karṭṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti allows the genitive after a kṛt for the agent or object; the kta-ending is excluded by P. 2-3-69 [na lokāvyayaniṣṭhākhalarthatṛnām] — which excludes u, uk, avyaya, kta/ktavatu, khalartha and tṛn, and lādeśa [a long note on whether kta here, given as ṇit-less, counts]; so the genitive is not by karṭṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti but by ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe P. 2-3-50, the genitive of 'remainder' — the Kannada gives as example māṣān aśnīyāt ['one should eat beans'] versus māṣāṇām aśnīyāt; the instrumental of the agent by P. 2-3-18 karṭṛkaraṇayos tṛtīyā is in principle also available, but since the agent is intended as śeṣa, the genitive stands; the accent: gatiṃ anantaraḥ P. 6-2-49 gives niṣ its own accent in the compound, and by upasargāś cābhivarjam [Phiṭ 1- [?]] it is first-syllable accented), akarta (ḍukṛñ karaṇe; luṇ third plural middle jha; ṛ... by P. 7-1-5 ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ jha → at, but 'variously' [vyatyayo bahulam P. 3-1-85] ta is substituted instead; the cli of P. 3-1-43 dropped by mantre ghasahvaraṇaśavṛdahādvṛckragamijanibhyo leḥ P. 2-4-80 [lug]; aṭ augment; kṛ + ta; tiṇ śīt sārvaadhātukam P. 3-4-113 gives the name sārvaadhātuka to tiṇ and śīt suffixes; 'in the Veda both ways' [chandasy ubhayathā P. 3-4-117] gives the ārdhadhātuka name too, so here it is ārdhadhātuka, and sārvaadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ P. 7-3-84 gives guṇa: kar-ta, the aṭ [P. 6-4-71 luṇlaṇṛṇkṣv aḍudāttah] accented; wholly unaccented by P. 8-1-28), caturaḥ (cit + uran, Uṇ. 5-[?] cāter uran [as read]: from cat 'to beg' with the uran suffix, a only for pronunciation; catur; first-syllable accent by the suffix's n; śas → caturaḥ, the u accented by P. 6-1-167 caturaḥ śasy udāttaḥ), and punaḥ (accented on the first syllable in the svarādi list; the Phiṭ list). ॥6॥ ²⁶

25. Grammar, noted briefly; the sūtra numerals are as read; those I could compare against the standard numbering agree, the rest are pointers.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The god Tvaṣṭṛ made only a single wooden vessel, called the camasa. The Ṛbhus, by their own power, made four of it and so rendered [it] more useful.

॥ English Translation ॥

Besides, the Ribhus again made into four that new ladle, the work of the divine Twashtri.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

Tvaṣṭṛ is well known as the carpenter or artisan of the gods [the print adds in English: "Twashtri is the carpenter or artisan of the gods"]. Since the implements of sacrifice — the instruments used in the sacrificial work such as yāga — are essential, Tvaṣṭṛ, who makes them, has a highly honoured position among the gods. The Application (opening lines): "In the third chandoma, at the vaiśvadeva-śāstra, the two Ṛbhu riks te no ratnāni dhattana [Riks 7 and 8] are used. It is laid down in the Sūtra, in the section of the third [day] beginning agniṃ mahi: 'indra iṣe dadātu naḥ, and te no ratnāni dhattana — the one and the two' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [8-11])." ²⁹

Translation: "You Ṛbhus, spoken of in the preceding riks, joined with our good praises (suśastibhiḥ) — dhattana — bestow upon us, upon the sacrificer who presses the soma (sunvate), ratnāni — lovely riches such as gold, gems and pearls — ekam ekam, one by one, in order, each one. The words ekam ekam are said with the intention that of each kind — gold and the rest — as much as is needed be given. Of what sort are the riches? Trirā — repeated thrice: the best, the middle and the lowest; so the riches come in three sets. And further, bestow (accomplish) sāptāni — works that take the form of groups made of seven. Of what sort are the sāptāni? Trirā — thrice repeated: one group of seven haviryajñas — agnyādheya, darśapūrṇamāsa and the rest; a second group of seven pākayajñas — aupāsana-homa, vaiśvadeva and the rest; a third group of seven soma-saṃsthās — agniṣṭoma, atyagniṣṭoma and the rest. Suśastibhiḥ — by śastayaḥ, 'those by which [the gods] are praised': riks." The grammar, noted briefly: ratnāni (ram 'to play', the Uṇādi na with t for the m; first-syllable accent); dhattana (dhā, loṭ, the substitute tana for ta by P. 7-1-45); sāptāni (saptan + añ in the Veda by P. 5-1-61 in the sense 'group' [varga]; ṭi dropped by P. 6-4-144; vr̥ddhi of the first syllable; first-syllable accent; the word varga denotes the members of the group, hence the plural); ekam ekam (doubling in the sense of distribution; the second ekam is āmreḍita, unaccented); suśastibhiḥ (śaṃs + ktin, the nasal dropped; su + śasti; the final-member accent). ³⁰

Grammar pages (pp. 33 lower half–37), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: ratnāni (ramu krīḍāyām; Uṇ. 3-14 rameś ca ta ca [as read; the print shows the sūtra rameḥ stuc in one place] — the

31. A very crowded run of five pages; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.

Confer, therefore, Ribhus, moved by our praises, the three-fold riches upon our sacrificer, one by one; accomplish the thrice seven-fold works (Sacrifices).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

At the time of reciting the mantras of the vaiśvadeva-śāstra, this rik and the next are recited for the third chandomā mantra. This matter is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section of the third [day] beginning mahi [agnim mahi], in the sūtra indra iṣe dadātu naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [8-93-?]) te no ratnāni dhattaneti ekā dve ca (Āś. 8-11). In this rik the power of the Ṛbhu deities is not described; rather it is a prayer that the Ṛbhus should favour the sacrificer with jewels and the other forms of wealth, and with the fruits of sacrificial rites such as yāga.

त्रिरा सप्तानि (trirā sāptāni)

— "three times seven", that is, the repetition of seven, or twenty-one. These are chiefly twenty-one kinds of sacrifices in the sacrificial order. They are divided into three groups.

1. agnyādheya-darśapūrṇamāsādīnām saptānām haviryajñānām eko vargaḥ — "one group of seven haviryajñas, agnyādheya, darśapūrṇamāsa and the rest." The name haviryajña is given to one group of seven sacrifices beginning with the agnyādheya and darśapūrṇamāsa. Since the thing offered to the deities is mainly havis, these are called haviryajñas. Agnyādheya, agnihotra, darśapūrṇamāsa, āgrayaṇa, cāturmāsya, dākṣāyaṇa-yajña and sautrāmaṇī — these seven belong to this group (Ai. Brā. [3-2]).
2. aupāsanahomo vaiśvadevam ity-ādīnām saptānām pākayajñānām vargo dvitīyaḥ — "the second group is that of seven pākayajñas, aupāsana-homa, vaiśvadeva and the rest." The name pākayajña is given to the group of seven sacrifices beginning with aupāsana and vaiśvadeva; these are also called grhyayajñas. Of them the thing offered chiefly to the deities is cooked food. Aupāsana, vaiśvadeva, pārvaṇa, aṣṭakā, māśīrāddha, sarpabali and īśānabali belong to this group (according to the explanation of Dhūrtaśvāmin on the Āpastamba-paribhāṣā-sūtra).

3. agniṣṭomo 'tyagniṣṭoma ity-ādīnām saptānām somasaṃsthānām vargas tṛtīyaḥ — "the third group is the seven soma-saṃsthās, agniṣṭoma, atyagniṣṭoma and the rest." The seven soma-sacrifices — agniṣṭoma, atyagniṣṭoma, ukthya, ṣoḍaśin, vājapeya, atirātra and aptoryāma — form the third group, called somayajñas or soma-saṃsthās; in these, what is offered to the deities is the soma-juice.

We have given the account of these three kinds of groups in Part [1] of the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, at pp. [?]-[?] and [?]-[?] [the page numerals in the print are partly unreadable].

एकमेकम् (ekam ekam) — krameṇa pratyekam: of the things we wish for — wealth, grain, cattle and the like — either one or all, each one by one they should give; that is the sense.

सुशस्तिभिः (suśastibhiḥ) — śasyate ābhir iti śastayaḥ ṛcaḥ: because the gods are praised by riks, these are called śastayaḥ; suśastayaḥ means excellent riks or hymns of praise.

Translation: "The vahnayaḥ — the Ṛbhus, carriers of the sacrifice by their making of the camasa and other implements — adhārayanta: they sustained [themselves]: though they were formerly men liable to death, by the gain of immortality they kept their lives. So another mantra reads: 'martāsaḥ santo amṛtatvam ānaśuḥ' — 'being mortals, they attained immortality' (Ṛgveda [1-110-4]). And further, these [Ṛbhus], standing among the gods by their sukṛtyā — their lovely work in the form of making the substances used in sacrifice — abhajanta — obtained, enjoyed — the yajñiya bhāga, the share worthy of the sacrifice, in the form of the oblation. This is plain in other mantras too: 'ayur martyaḥ saudhanvanā yajñiyam bhāgam ānaśa' (Ṛgveda [3-60-1]) and so on; the Brāhmaṇa also says: 'the Ṛbhus indeed, by austerity, won the right to drink soma among the gods' (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa [3-30])." The grammar, noted briefly: vahnayaḥ (the Uṇādi ni after vah, first-syllable accent); abhajanta (not made unaccented, since it begins the pāda); sukṛtyayā (kṛ + kyap by P. 3-1-120 vibhāṣā kṛvṛṣoḥ, with the tuk augment by P. 6-1-71 hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk; 'that in which the work of acquiring is lovely'; a bahuvrīhi whose first-member accent is overridden by the end-accent of P. 6-2-172; the feminine kṛtyā by P. 3-3-100 kṛñāḥ śaś ca); bhāgam (end-accent by P. 6-1-159 karṣātvato ghañ anta udāttaḥ); yajñiyam (yajña + gha by P. 5-1-71 yajñartvigbhyām ghakhañau 'that which deserves the sacrifice'; gh → iya by P. 7-1-2).³³

वह्नयः (vahnayaḥ) — these Ṛbhus, who make implements like the camasa and so carry the sacrifice through | अधारयन्त (adhārayanta) — [obtained immortality] sustained themselves | सुकृत्यया (sukṛtyayā) — by good work | देवेषु (deveṣu) — among the gods | यज्ञियम् (yajñiyam) — belonging to the sacrifice | भागम् (bhāgam) — the share of the oblation | अभजन्त (abhajanta) — obtained.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

These Ṛbhus, having made the implements of sacrifice and so been helpers of the sacrificial work, obtained immortality. By doing works proper to a sacrifice they obtained, along with the gods, a share of the oblation.

॥ English Translation ॥

Ribhus by their skill in fashioning sacrificial utensils and their pious acts lived for ever or became immortal ; they even obtained a share of the sacrifice along with the Gods.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

These Ṛbhus, by the skill of their craft, made the implements — the camasa and so on — that are needed for the sacrifice. In a single year they performed all the sacrifices and became worthy of the gods' grace. By such good works the Ṛbhus became able always to sustain their lives; they attained amṛtatva like the gods (freedom from death); and like the gods themselves they won the right to receive the share of the sacrifice — that is, the oblation offered to the gods in the sacrifice.

33. Grammar, noted briefly; sūtra numerals as read; the Ṛgveda reference [3-60-1] is as I read the small print [?].

अधारयन्त (adhārayanta) — the meaning of this word is "they sustained" — sustained what? They sustained their lives; or, as the commentator explains, they obtained immortality. Although in this rik there are no words which explain the sense "obtained immortality", since in many riks it is said that the Ṛbhus, formerly men, obtained divinity by their good works, it seems proper that the commentator here too has taken that same idea and explained the word adhārayanta as above. On this the rik states this sense plainly.

वहयः (vahnayaḥ) — camasādi-sādhana-niṣpādanena yajñasya voḍhāraḥ ṛbhavaḥ: because they made implements such as the camasa and so helped the sacrifice, these Ṛbhus are vahnayaḥ — voḍhāraḥ, "those who carry through the sacrificial work".

यज्ञियम् (yajñiyam) — yajñārhaṃ bhāgam: the share of havis offered to the gods in the sacrifice. Those who are to receive a share fit for the sacrifice must have honour and position among the gods; the Ṛbhus gained such honour. This matter is also supported in the rik

Grammar pages (pp. 40 lower half–43 upper), noted briefly.

The Kannada treats: vahnayaḥ (vahi-śri-śru-yu-dru-gnā-tvaribhyo niḥ Uṇ. 4-[?], with nīt carried over from the preceding sūtra [vījyājariviś-... niḥ; the print shows two versions of the Uṇādi sūtra]; vah + nī; the sūtra's nīt is a doubtful word, which, according to the Kannada, is a slip of the printers of Ṛg. Saṃ. 3-[?]; the suffix has n so first-syllable accent by P. 6-1-197), abhajanta (at the start of the pāda, hence P. 8-1-18 bars the loss of accent, and P. 8-1-28 tiñ atinaḥ does not apply), sukṛtyayā (vibhāṣā kṛvṛṣoḥ P. 3-1-120 — kyap after kṛ and vṛṣ in the object-sense, optionally; kṛ + ya; hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk P. 6-1-71: kṛ-t-ya → kṛtya; kyap has k and p, so no guṇa [kñiti ca P. 1-1-5]; su + kṛtyā — the bahuvrīhi śobhanam kṛtyam yasyām bhajanakriyāyām sā; first-member accent by P. 6-2-1 would make su [accented on the first syllable by the Phiṭ rule upasargāś cābhivarjam] the only accented part; but nañsubhyām P. 6-2-172 gives the final member's end accent, which overrides it; the Kannada raises a doubt: kyap is pit, so the a is unaccented [anudāttau suppitau], and the root kṛ is accented on the ṛ by dhātoḥ P. 6-1-162, so kṛtya has the accent on kṛ, giving the first-syllable accent; in the bahuvrīhi [by P. 6-2-119 ādyudāttam dvyac chandasi, 'a two-syllable word in the Veda takes first-syllable accent'] the final-member kṛtyā must be first-syllable accented; and though nañsubhyām is read in the sixth chapter, after ādyudāttam dvyac, by vipratīṣedhe param kāryam nañsubhyām [which comes after] would win; but since ādyudāttam dvyac chandasi is an exception to nañsubhyām, and a rule that applies in the case where the other is not yet applied [yena nāprāpte yo vidhir ārabhyate sa

tasya bādhako bhavati] is the stronger, the accent of kr̥tyā stands first-syllable; the second sūtra kr̥ñah śas ca P. 3-3-100 gives the feminine śa and kyap after kr̥ñ in the abstract sense [the ca takes in kyap]; hence kr̥tyā, kriyā, kr̥tiḥ — the Kannada notes that kr̥tiḥ is not obtained by this sūtra but by striyāṃ ktin P. 3-3-94; ṭāp by ajādyataṣ ṭāp P. 4-1-4, with savarṇadīrgha; the instrumental ṭā → ā with āñ; ājjasor... P. 7-3-105 āñ nadyāḥ... [as read, āño 'nāpah? — the print gives ājjasor ...]: ā → ay... giving sukr̥tyayā; the ending accented as svarita by P. 8-4-66), bhāgam (bhaj sevāyām; halas ca P. 3-3-121 ghañ; coḥ kuḥ P. 7-3-52 kutva; ata upadhāyāḥ P. 7-2-116 vṛddhi; the accent by ñnityādir nityam would be first-syllable, but karṣātvato ghañ anta udāttaḥ P. 6-1-159 gives end accent; hence bhāgam is end-accented), and yajñiyam (yajñam arhati; yajña-ṛtvigbhyām ghakhañau P. 5-1-71: gha after yajña, khañ after ṛtvij; yajña + gha; āyaneyīniyayaḥ phadhakhachaghām pratyayādīnām P. 7-1-2 gives iya for gha; yasyeti ca P. 6-4-148; suffix accent: yajñiyam). ||8||

Translation: "The six-rik sūkta beginning ihendrāgnī is the fourth [of this anuvāka]. Its ṛṣi and meter are as before [Medhātithi Kāṇva; Gāyatrī]. The deity is stated by the Anukramaṇikā: 'iha ṣaḥ indrāgnam' — the six riks beginning iha are to Indra and Agni. Its application: in the Agniṣṭoma, at the acchāvāka-śastra, the sūkta ihendrāgnī upa hvaye is recited; for it is laid down in the Sūtra, in the section beginning stotram agne śastrāt: 'ihendrāgnī [the sūkta] and the nine [riks] upeyaṃ vām asya manmana' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [5-10]). Likewise in the abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, at the morning pressing, in the acchāvāka-śastra, this very sūkta is used for the stoma-atisaṃsana [the 'over-praising of the chant']; and so it is laid down: 'beginning with abhiplava-prṣṭhya-ahānī ... ihendrāgnī indrāgnī ā gatam' (Āś. [7-3])." ¹ ॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ The sūkta ihendrāgnī is the fourth sūkta of the fifth anuvāka. Its ṛṣi and meter are as in the preceding sūkta. The Anukramaṇikā says: iha ṣaḥ indrāgnam — the six riks beginning iha have Indra and Agni for deity. Application: in the agniṣṭoma sacrifice, when the acchāvāka-priest recites the śastra mantras, he recites the sūkta ihendrāgnī upa hvaye. This is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section stotram agne śastrāt (Āś. [5-10]): ihendrāgnī upeyaṃ vām asya manmana iti nava. And in the sacrifice called abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, the acchāvāka priest recites this sūkta at the morning pressing for the stomātisaṃsana. On this the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra says, beginning with abhiplava-prṣṭhyāhānī, 'ihendrāgnī indrāgnī ā gatam' (Āś. [7-3]).

Translation: "Here, at this rite, I invoke (upa hvaye) the two gods Indra and Agni. We desire the stoma — the praise — of those two alone. Somapātamā — the two gods who are, in the highest degree, able to drink the soma: [may they] drink the soma (this is supplied)." The grammar, noted briefly: indrāgnī (a deity-dvandva, yet here the substitute ānaṃ for the first member does not occur: in P. 6-3-26 devatādvandve ca the word dvandve is repeated, so that [the rule] applies only to pairs well known in the world and the Veda as companions; the Kāśikā says as much; so here, since this pair is not so named, the word indra stays as it is; the accent is that of the final member of the compound; the 'both members keep their own accents' rule does not apply because agni, being initially unaccented, is excluded by P. 6-2-143 nottarapade 'nudāttādaū...); uśmasi (vaś 'to desire', laṭ, mas; the augment i by P. 7-1-46 [idanto masiḥ]; śap dropped, since the root is of the adādi class; saṃprasāraṇa because mas is ñit; tā somapātamā (the dual ending replaced by ā in both words). ⁵

Grammar pages (pp. 46–48 upper), noted briefly. The Kannada's long note on indrāgnī: it is a dvandva (indraś ca agniś ca); P. 6-3-26 devatādvandve ca gives ānañ to the first member of a deity-dvandva, but here it does not apply; since dvandve is carried over from the preceding sūtra ānañ ṛto dvandve [P. 6-3-25] and dvandva is repeated in P. 6-3-26, Pāṇini must intend only such pairs as are known to be companions in the world (loka) and the Veda; the Kannada cites the Mahābhāṣya discussion on the Vārttika brahmaprajāpatyādīnām ca [P. 6-3-26 Vārttika, as read], that the repeated mention of dvandva 'shows a pair of companions famous from the use of nirvāpa, i.e. the joint offering [sahadāna] — as in the mental resolve indrāvaruṇābhyām juṣṭam nirvapāmi ('I measure out [the oblation] dear to Indra and Varuṇa') followed by svāhā, when the oblation is thrown into the fire'; the Kāśikā says 'dvandva is carried over; the repetition of "dvandva" is for pairs famous in the world'; the Kannada then argues the point of the vedaprakriyā: in the word-by-word (pada) text, one has indra and agnī separately [indrāgnī iti indra-agnī] — if ānañ had applied, the Pada would read indrā...; the point is that since indrāgnī is read with the hiatus as indra-agnī, the short a of indra is as expected, and since uttarapade (in a 'following member') is stated in the locative, by P. 1-1-66 tasminn iti nirdiṣṭe pūrvasya the thing meant is the immediately preceding; the discussion concludes that the compound indrāgnī is not an ānañ-compound. On accent: indrāgnī is end-accented by samāsasya P. 6-1-223; agnī (formed by a suffix ni) is end-accented by the suffix; the ā is anudātta by the nighāta [accent-lowering] of the remaining syllables, as explained at R. Saṃ. 1-1-1 [agnim īle]; so agnī is initially unaccented, and P. 6-2-143 nottarapade

5. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 6-3-26 and 6-2-143 as read; the others unchecked pointers.

'nudāttādaṁ pr̥thivīrudrapūṣamandhiṣu bars the 'both members' accent for compounds whose final member begins unaccented — except pr̥thivī, rudra, pūṣan, mantha — so P. 6-2-142 devatādvandve ca [the 'both members keep their accent' rule for deity-dvandvas] does not apply. Uśmasi (vaś kāntau; laṭ first plural mas; mas is idanta by P. 7-1-46 iḍ antaḥ ... iditaḥ [the Kannada: mas → masi, with i only for pronunciation]; śap dropped by P. 2-4-72; mas is ñit by P. 1-2-4 [sārvadhātukam apit], so saṃprasāraṇa by P. 6-1-16 grahijyāvayivyadhivaṣṭivicativṛścatipṛcchatibhr̥jjatīnām ñiti ca: va → u; pūrvārūpa: uśmasi). Tā, somapātamā: somam pibataḥ, somapau; atīśayena somapau somapātamau: in both words the dual au → ā by P. 7-1-39 supām sulug.... ||1||⁶

Here [at this rite] we invite the deities Indra and Agni and praise them. Those two especially are fit to drink soma: may they drink the soma-juice that we have prepared.

॥ English Translation ॥⁷

I invoke hither, Indra and Agni ; we desire to present our praise to them ; let them who are both greatest drinkers of Soma juice, drink our Soma.

सोमपातमा (somapātamā) — somasya atīśayena pātārau: great (excessive) drinkers of soma.

In this sūkta the deities Indra and Agni are praised together. This joint praise of two deities is a special feature in the Ṛgveda. The mantras which treat of a deity-pair are called saṁstavika mantras (Ni. [2-8]). We have written the discussion of this subject earlier in Ṛgveda Saṁhitā Part [2], pp. 710–712 [the Volume 2 pages 710–712 printed in the Volume 2 file, Sūkta 17, Rik 1 Special Topics].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

9. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 6-3-137 as read [?].

O priests! Praise well the deities Indra and Agni spoken of before, adorn them with ornaments, and sing them in the manner of sāman with riks in the Gāyatrī meter.

॥ English Translation ॥

O men, praise Indra and Agni in Sacrifices, decorate them with ornaments and sing them with hymns of Gayatri metres.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

In this rik the ṛṣi addresses the people — that is, the priests engaged in performing the sacrifice.

शुम्भत (śumbhata)

— "decorate"; what does it mean to decorate the deities? How can invisible deities be decorated? This point is not clear.

गायत्रेषु (gāyatṛeṣu) — with riks in the Gāyatrī meter, or with the mantra called gāyatra in the Sāmaveda. Since the rule is that in the three pressings, morning and the rest, many riks of the seven meters beginning with Gāyatrī must be recited, and since at first the praise is made with Gāyatrī-meter riks, the ṛṣi, addressing the priests, says "gāyatṛeṣu": praise with riks of the Gāyatrī meter.

Grammar page (p. 49), noted briefly. Tā — here too the case-ending takes ā by P. 7-1-39 supāṃ sulug.... Śumbhata — in the Saṃhitā, by P. 6-3-137 anyeṣām api dṛśyate, 'also seen in others' (that is, lengthening is seen in words other than those named in the lengthening rules), the vowel is lengthened. ॥2॥ ¹⁰

The grammar, noted briefly: praśastaye (the fourth case by P. 3-4-14 [tumarthāc ca bhāvavacanāt — as read P. 2-3-15] after a noun in the sense of an infinitive; the accent of the prefix by P. 6-2-50, overriding the kṛt-final accent); somapītaye (a bahuvrīhi 'that in which there is a drinking of soma'; the first-member accent; or a tatpuruṣa, with the first-member accent by the dāsībhārādi class).¹²

Grammar pages (pp. 51–53 upper), noted briefly. The Kannada treats praśastaye (śaṃsu stutau of the first class with the prefix pra; under the adhikāra bhāve [P. 3-3-18], striyām ktin P. 3-3-94 gives ktin; with a verbal-action word as upapada bhāvavacanāś ca P. 3-3-11 allows ktin [the Kannada reads the sūtra bhāvavacanāś ca as permitting an action-noun in the sense of the infinitive]; the iṭ is barred by titutratathasisusarakaseṣu ca P. 7-2-9; the nasal n of śaṃs dropped by anidītām hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti P. 6-4-24, the Kannada noting that, by the saying 'for the roots with ñ/ñ... the anusvāra in place of n by naś cāpadāntasya jhali P. 8-3-24 gives śaṃs, and that anusvāra is invisible [asiddha] when the penultimate n is dropped by pūrvatrāsiddham P. 8-2-1, so the n is dropped in the manner stated before; compound with pra by kugatiprādayaḥ P. 2-2-18; the fourth case by tumarthāc ca bhāvavacanāt P. 2-3-15 [the Kannada's reading: the fourth case after a noun that stands for an infinitive, with tumun, ṇvul in the future sense by P. 3-3-10 tumunṇvulau kriyāyām kriyārthāyām; examples bhokṣye vrajati, bhojako vrajati]; the long discussion of the clause tumarthāt and bhāvavacanāt and of the need of the supplied word sampadyetām [the Kannada: since the sentence has sampadyetām as its verb, 'praise' is its goal, and since the ता (tā) — those Indra and Agni deities | मित्रस्य (mitrasya) — of the friend [the sacrificer, who is the object of affection] | प्रशस्तये (praśastaye) — for praise (for the sake of the aim [of praise]) | सोमपा (somapā) — soma-drinkers | ता इन्द्राग्नी (tā indrāgnī) — those Indra and Agni | सोमपीतये (somapītaye) — for drinking soma | हवामहे (havāmahe) — we invoke.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

We invoke the soma-drinking Indra and Agni to drink soma. May they, having drunk and been satisfied, become the cause of praise for our friend, the sacrificer.

॥ English Translation ॥

For the benefit of our friend (worshipper) we invoke Indra and Agni, drinkers of Soma juice, to drink the Soma libation.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

ता मित्रस्य प्रशस्तये (tā mitrasya praśastaye) — since in this sentence there is no verb, the commentator says that the verb gāyata ('sing') of the previous rik must be supplied (adhyāhāra). Then the sentence means: "Praise (that is, sing) those Indra and Agni for the prosperity (for the sake of the purpose) of our (your) friend the sacrificer."

In this rik the word tā occurs twice; and in somapā somapītaye too the matter of soma-drinking is repeated. Such usages are seen in places in the Ṛgveda. Perhaps they are used for the sake of the metre, or perhaps such repeated expressions were current, following the usage of the speech of the community of that time.

Translation: "Those two, Indra and Agni, spoken of before: ubjatam — straighten, [make] the rakṣas — the kind of Rākṣasas — straight; that is, make them abandon their cruelty. Of what sort are [you two]? Mahāntā — great, surpassing in qualities; sadaspatī — protectors of the assembly. By their favour, may the atrīṇaḥ — the devourers, Rākṣasas who eat [men] — be aprajāḥ, without offspring." The grammar, noted briefly: mahāntā (the lengthening by P. 6-4-10 sānta-mahataḥ saṃyogasya); sadaspatī (a compound with the genitive retained; the s is not turned into ru — a Vedic usage; both members keep their accents as in the vanaspatyādi class); indrāgnī (the vocative accent); aprajāḥ (prajā — 'those who are born' — ḍa after jan by P. 3-2-101 anyeṣv api dṛśyate; the negative compound; the bahuvrīhi substitute asic for words ending in prajā, medhā by P. 5-4-122; the accent of the first member, a particle); atrināḥ (the Uṇādi suffix after ad 'to eat' [read as ader trin], the r accented; its yaṇ substitute then the ī accented by P. 6-1-171 udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt).¹⁷ Grammar pages (pp. 57–58), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: mahāntā (mahat + au; the śatṛ-like Uṇādi at, read vartamāne prṣad-br̥han-mahaj-jagac-chatṛvac ca Uṇ. 2-[?] — 'the words prṣat, br̥hat, mahat, jagat and śatṛ are formed with ati and behave like śatṛ', so the num augment [P. 7-1-70 ugidacāṃ...] applies: mahant + au; supām sulug... P. 7-1-39 gives ā; sānta-mahataḥ saṃyogasya P. 6-4-10 lengthens the vowel before the conjunct nt of the word mahat when a non-vocative sarvanāmasthāna suffix follows: mahāntā), sadaspatī (a genitive tatpuruṣa sadasaḥ patī; kṛttaddhitasamāsāś ca P. 1-2-46 gives the name prātipadika; supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ P. 2-4-71 drops the case-ending; suptiṇantaṃ padam P. 1-4-14 gives the stem the name pada; sasajuṣo ruḥ P. 8-2-66 would turn s into ru, but in the Veda it does not here; sadas is first-syllable accented by the suffix's n; pati is first-syllable accented as formed with the Uṇādi ḍati [Uṇ. 4-62 pāter ḍatiḥ]; both members keep their accents by P. 6-2-140 ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu yugapat, since the word belongs to the vanaspatyādi class — of which the list is: 1 vanaspati, 2 br̥haspati, 3 śacīpati, 4 tanūnapāt, 5 narāśaṃsa, 6 śunaḥśepha, 7 śaṇḍāmarkau, 8 tr̥ṣṇāvaruṭhī, 9 lambāviśvavayasau, 10 marmṛtyuḥ — only ten words are read; the list is not an ākṛtigāṇa, and so the Kannada says one must consider how sadaspati gets its double accent), indrāgnī (āmantritasya ca P. 6-1-198 gives the first-syllable accent; the tau = 'those two spoken of before'; the construction is he indrāgnī yuvāṃ rakṣa ubjātam), aprajāḥ (prajāyante iti prajāḥ — anyeṣv api dṛśyate P. 3-2-101 and saptamyām janer ḍaḥ P. 3-2-97 give ḍa after jan when the upapada is in the locative, fifth case or an upasarga, and anyeṣv api extends it to other upapadas; the Kannada also notes the alternative upasarge ca saṃjñāyām P. 3-2-99, which would give ḍa where pra is an upapada in a name — here aprajāḥ is explained as 'having no offspring', so no name is intended; na prajāḥ a negative tatpuruṣa, nalopo nañāḥ P. 6-3-73 drops the n; as a bahuvrīhi avidyamānāḥ prajāḥ yeṣāṃ te, the asic of P. 5-4-122 nityam asic prajāmedhayoḥ is added after nañ-dus-su + prajā/medhā, then nañ-duḥsubhyo halisakthyor anyatarasyām P. 5-4-121 ... bahuvrīher sakthy-akṣṇoḥ svāṅgāt śac P. 5-4-113 (the Kannada's quotations here are crowded); so aprajasa + jas, yasyeti ca P. 6-4-148 drops the a, aprajāḥ [aprajasaḥ]; the Kannada concludes that since aprajāḥ here is plural nominative of the bahuvrīhi — and the asic is not needed to derive it — the tatpuruṣa is to be taken; and tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtīyā... P. 6-2-2 gives the first member [the particle] its first-syllable accent), and atriṇaḥ (ada bhakṣaṇe, nvul-ṭṛc P. 3-1-133 [as the Kannada says: ṇvulṭṛcau]; ad + ṭṛc, and with jas, the Vedic inuṭ augment; the r is accented by cit P. 6-1-163 [end-accent]; the yaṇ substitute r for the r by P. 6-1-77 iko yaṇaci, and by udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt P. 6-1-171 the following ending ina is accented because the yaṇ is preceded by a consonant and replaces an accented vowel, so atriṇaḥ gets the ī accented; and in the Saṃhitā the svarita of P. 8-4-66 does not arise, as this rule, an exception, gives accent instead). ॥5॥¹⁸

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Indra and Agni, who are great and protectors of the assembly: make the Rākṣasas give up their cruelty and walk the straight path. And by the grace of Indra and Agni, may the man-eating Rākṣasas be without offspring.

॥ English Translation ॥

Indra and Agni, great protectors of Sacrificial house, supress [sic] the Rakshas (demons) and may the devourers of men (demons) be destitute of progeny. ¹⁹

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

महान्ता (mahāntā)

— of great glory, great, mighty, etc. [the print adds the English "great, mighty &c."].

सदस्पती (sadaspatī) — sadaḥ prasiddham yajñagrham tasya svāmināv indrāgnī | sabhāpālakau vā: [the word sadas is] the well-known sacrificial hall, and Indra and Agni are the lords of it; or sabhāpālakau — protectors of the assembly. In explaining the word, the commentator says sadaḥ means sadas, the assembly, so sadaspatī means sabhāpālakau — protectors of the assembly. Skandasvāmin says sadaḥ is the sacrificial hall, and sadaspatī means that the sacrificial hall which we are now using must be protected from Rākṣasas and the like. Skandasvāmin's explanation is the more commendable.

रक्षः (rakṣaḥ) — Rākṣasas, those of cruel nature, "evil spirits" etc. Yāska explains: rakṣāṃsi krūrakarmiṇaḥ — "Rākṣasas are those who do cruel deeds" (Ni. [10-?]; numerals read as "००-०४" and marked [?]).

19. The print has "supress" for "suppress" — [sic].

उब्जतम् (ubjatam) — krauryaṃ parityājayatam: make them give up their cruel nature. Skandasvāmin explains this word as ubja-tiraskāra-sāmarthyāt vadhārtho nṛgrāhārtho vā rakṣāṃsi hataṃ nṛgrabhūtāni vāsmākaṃ kurutam ["from the sense of ubj — to put down, to bend — it has the sense of killing or of seizing men; 'kill the Rākṣasas, or make them captive to us']" — "destroy or put down the Rākṣasas through your power, that is, make them run away". [Skandasvāmin's Sanskrit here is read from small print and is partly garbled; I give only the sense as the Kannada states it.]

अत्रिणः (atrināḥ) — ada bhakṣaṇe; bhakṣayitāro hiṃsitāro 'smākam: those who eat, those who harm us.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Indra and Agni! There is no doubt that the rites we perform will yield fruit. Heaven and the other abodes of yours are the proof of it. Staying watchful in those places, make us happy.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Indra and Agni, by this unfailing Sacrifice be vigilant in the place which affords knowledge and bestow upon us happiness.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

The sense of this rik is somewhat obscure. The meanings of the words tena satyena jāgṛte and pracetune pade are not plain. Although the commentator gives one explanation of them, the ṛṣi's intention is not clear. The chief sense may be: "Being pleased with the hymns we recite and with the sacrifices we perform, be watchful on our behalf and bestow happiness upon us."

प्रचेतुने पदे (pracetune pade) — prajñāpake sthale; phalabhogajñāpake pade: a place which gives knowledge [of the enjoyment of fruit].

शर्म (śarma) — sukhaṃ grhaṃ vā: happiness, or a house. Since śarma is read among the twenty-two names for 'house' beginning with gaya, kṛdara, the word śarma also means "house, dwelling" (Ni. 3-[?]; numerals read as "३-०३" and marked [?]).

Translation: "The twenty-one-rik sūкта beginning prātaryujā is the fifth [of this anuvāka]. Its ṛṣi and meter are as before [Medhātithi Kāṇva; Gāyatrī]. The particular deities are stated in the Anukramaṇikā: 'prātaryujā saikā' — [the four riks] to the Áśvins, likewise [the next four] to Savitr, two to Agni, one to the 'divine women of the gods', one each to Indrānī, Varuṇānī and Agnāyī, to Heaven-and-Earth, to Pārthivī [Earth], and six to Viṣṇu — 'ato devā daivī veti' [so the verse; the remainder as read]. Because of the rule of the Anukramaṇikā that 'in this meter, the unstated number is twenty' (Anu. [12-4]), the unstated number of riks in the sūкта prātaryujā is to be understood as twenty — twenty together with one more, i.e. twenty-one. Of these, the first four riks have the Áśvins as deities; the four from the fifth to the eighth have Savitr; the ninth and tenth both have Agni; the eleventh has the devīs connected with the gods; the twelfth, the wives of Indra, Varuṇa and Agni — Indrāṇī, Varuṇāṇī and Agnāyī; the thirteenth and fourteenth, Heaven-and-Earth; the fifteenth, Pārthivī; the six from the sixteenth, Viṣṇu — or the sixteenth, Kṛṣṇa [the print gives kṛṣṇa; I read it so, uncertain [?]]. Application: here the application of the sūkta is laiṅgika [from the sense of the riks]. At the prātaranuvāka in the Aśvina rite, the four riks beginning prātaryujā vibodhaya are used, and it is laid down: 'atha āśvine eṣo uṣāḥ, prātaryujeti catasraḥ' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [4-13]). For the Aśvina graha, the one rik prātaryujā is the puronuvākya: in the section beginning dvidevatyaiś caranti, it is laid down 'āśvinasya prātaryujā vi bodhaya' (Āś. [5-5])." ¹

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ The sūkta that begins prātaryujā is the fifth sūkta in the fifth anuvāka; it has twenty-one riks. The ṛṣi and meters are as in the preceding sūkta. As to the deities, the Anukramaṇikā says, in a sūtra of the section sūktasaṅkhyānuvartate, that this has twenty-one [mantras] (Anu. [12-4]). As the Anukramaṇikā states, the sūkta has twenty-one riks, though in another place it is said to have twenty-one [as read]. The first four riks of this sūkta have the Aśvin deity; the riks from the fifth to the eighth have the Savitr deity; the ninth and tenth have the Agni deity; the eleventh rik has the deities who are the divine wives of the gods; the twelfth, the wives of Indra, Varuṇa and Agni — the deities Indrāṇī, Varuṇāṇī and Agnāyī; the thirteenth and fourteenth have Heaven-and-Earth; the fifteenth, Pṛthivī; the six riks from the sixteenth onward are for Viṣṇu — or, as an alternative, the sixteenth has the deity Kṛṣṇa, that is, all the gods [as read]. In all, the application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. At the time of reciting the prātaranuvāka mantras, in the sacrifice called āśvina-kratu, the four riks prātaryujā vibodhaya should be recited as the Āśvin-kratu mantras. This is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the sūtra athāśvine eṣo uṣāḥ prātaryujeti catasraḥ (Āś. [4-13]). And in the homa called āśvina-graha, the one rik prātaryujā is to be used as the puronuvākyā mantra: this is stated in the section dvidevatyaiś caranti, in the sūtra āśvinasya prātaryujā vi bodhaya (Āś. [5-5]).

1. The Anukramaṇikā quotation is compressed and its last clause is read with uncertainty [?]; Āśvalāyana numerals are read from small print and marked [?].

Awaken the Aswins for the morning Sacrifice ; let them both come hither to drink of this Soma-juice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥

The first half of this rik is spoken with reference to the priest called the Adhvaryu.

प्रातर्युजा (prātaryujā) — prātaḡsavana-grahena saṃyuktau: [the Aśvins] joined with the graha of the morning pressing. The commentator explains that they are to be made ready to receive the graha [cup of soma] at the morning pressing. Skandasvāmin's view is the same. But the author of the Vedārthayātna says prātaryujā = prātaḡ kāle aśvau rathe yojayantau — "those who in the morning yoke their horses to the chariot", in order to come to the sacrifice. Since neither the word 'chariot' nor the word 'horse' occurs here, and since vibodhaya means 'wake', the sense — those who rise from bed and so on and yoke their horses to the chariot, and then wake them — is impossible; so this sense is not acceptable. The explanations of Sāyaṇa and Skandasvāmin are the consistent ones.

Grammar pages (pp. 68), noted briefly. The Kannada treats the eight dual words from yā to devā by P. 7-1-39 supām sulug...; surathā (śobhanau rathau yayos tau; the end accent by samāsasya P. 6-1-223 would apply, but as a bahuvrīhi the first-member accent P. 6-2-1 bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam, overridden by P. 6-2-172 nañsubhyām; and again by the exceptional first-syllable rule P. 6-2-119 ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasī since the final member ratha — from ramu krīḍāyām by the Uṇādi kthan, Uṇ. 2-[?], anudāttopadeśa... anunāsikalopa P. 6-4-37 dropping the m — is a two-syllable word, accented first-syllable by the n of the suffix), rathītamau (rathino 'syāstīti rathī by P. 5-2-115 ata inīṭhanau; tamap by P. 5-3-55; nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya P. 8-2-7; the ī lengthened in the Saṃhitā by P. 6-3-137), divisprśā (kvip ca P. 3-2-76 / satsūdviṣa... P. 3-2-61: any root may take kvip in the Veda as in the world, so sprś + kvip; the compound upapadam atin P. 2-2-19; tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam P. 6-3-14 keeps the locative divi since the kṛt-final member is a saṃjñā only 'variously'; gatiḥ arakopapadāt kṛt P. 6-2-139 for the accent; sprś is end-accented by the root's accent). ||2||

10. Grammar, noted briefly; the sūtra numerals as read; pointers only.

The Ásvin deities have splendid chariots; they are very skilled in driving the chariot, and they dwell in the world of the gods. We invoke those two to the sacrifice.

॥ English Translation ॥

We invoke the two Aswins who are both divine, the best of charioteers, dwellers in heaven, riding in an excellent [sic] car.

रथीतमा (rathītamā) — the best among charioteers; "charioteers" means those who sit in a chariot and fight. Skandasvāmin says rathītamā sārathitaraḥ ratha ity ucyate: atīśayena sārathī — here rathī means 'charioteer' (driver); rathītamā — the best among charioteers, or the most skilful in driving the chariot.

दिविस्पृशा (divisprśā) — divi sprśata iti divisprśā | divi spraṣṭārau gantārāv ity arthaḥ — those who touch heaven, who reach it; that is, those who go to the world of heaven, dwellers in heaven.

Translation: "O Ásvins, you two gods! Come with that kaśā — your whip [for striking the horses], which belongs to you — and mimikṣatam: wish to sprinkle our sacrifice with soma-juice. The sense is: having struck the two horses with that whip, coming swiftly, be eager to accomplish the offering of soma-juice [made] to you. Of what sort is the whip? Madhumatī — 'honeyed': among the hundred and one words for 'water' beginning with ūrṇu [?] [Nighaṇṭu 1-12: 'ni. 1-12' as read], madhu and purīṣa are read; so madhumatī means 'containing water'. The sense: the whip is wet with the sweat-water that runs from the horses' swift pace. Sūnṛtāvatī — accompanied by a pleasant, true voice: the sound that arises from the hard cracking of the whip, and the shout made by the one mounted on the horse, at the moment of the striking; these two, as causes of the swift going, are pleasing to the sacrificer. Or: among the fifty-seven words for 'speech' beginning with śloka, dhārā, the words kaśā and dhiṣaṇā are read [Nighaṇṭu 1-11]; so kaśā may mean the speech [of the Ásvins]: the madhumatī — sweet, without roughness, sūnṛtāvatī — pleasing and true — speech which gives fruit [to those who ask]. By that speech, joined [with it], yajñam mimikṣatam — this is the construction." The grammar, noted briefly: kaśā (kaś 'to go, to cut'; ac of the pacādi class; first-syllable accent through the vṛṣādi list); sūnṛtāvatī (ūn 'to diminish': 'it removes the unpleasant thoroughly' = sūn; sūnṛtā is 'speech in which there is such truth'; the end accent barred, the first member's r is accented in the Veda; matup with va by P. 8-2-11 saṃjñāyām); mimikṣatam (mih + san; no guṇa since san after a consonant-final root is kit by P. 1-2-10 halantāc ca; dh, ṭ, k, ṣ changes).¹²

Grammar pages (pp. 71 upper), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: kaśā (kaś gatiśātanayoḥ with ac by P. 3-1-134 nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ, which gives first-syllable accent by vṛṣādīnām ca P. 6-1-203), sūnṛtāvatī (ūn parihāṇe, tenth class; apriyaṃ suṣṭhu ūnayati 'he makes the unpleasant well diminished'; sūn + ṛta: 'truth' [satya] is ṛta; sūnṛtā as a bahuvrīhi; the word sūnṛtā asyā asti + matup by P. 5-2-94; saṃjñāyām P. 8-2-11 gives va for ma when a name; ugitaś ca P. 4-1-6 for ñīp: sūnṛtāvatī), mimikṣatam (mih secane; dhātoḥ karmaṇaḥ samānakartṛkāḍ icchāyām vā P. 3-1-7 san; doubling by P. 6-1-9; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ P. 7-4-60 retains m; sanyataḥ P. 7-4-79 gives i; halantāc ca P. 1-2-10 makes san kit after a consonant-final root, but only for roots that do not take iṭ — the Kannada refers to the Kāśikā verse vasatir dihā dihu hno nahamiruhir lih vahi stthā [as printed vasatirdahādihudona neha mihruhlivahistathā, the list of roots that do not take iṭ before san]: mih is in this list, so san takes no iṭ, is jhalādi and therefore kit; no guṇa [khiti ca P. 1-1-5], and pugantalaḥpādhasya ca P. 7-3-86 is barred; then mih → mih + s; hoḍhaḥ P. 8-2-31 h → ḍh; ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si P. 8-2-41 gives k for ḍh; ādeśapratyayayoḥ P. 8-3-59 gives ṣ for s: mi-mik-ṣa; sanādyantā dhātavaḥ P. 3-1-32 gives the name dhātu; loṭ second dual thas → tam: mimikṣatam). ||3||

अश्विना (aśvinā) — O Áśvin deities | वाम् (vām) — your | मधुमती (madhumatī) — wet with the sweat of the horses | सूनृतावती (sūnṛtāvatī) — joined with a pleasant and true sound (belonging to the sacrificer who uses the whip) | या कशा (yā kaśā) — which whip is [yours] | तया (tayā) — with that (i.e. using it on the horses, coming swiftly) | यज्ञम् (yajñam) — our sacrifice | मिमिक्षतम् (mimikṣatam) — wish to sprinkle with soma-juice (drink the soma). Or: aśvinā — O Áśvins; vām — your; madhumatī — sweet or soft; sūnṛtāvatī — pleasant and true; yā kaśā — which speech; tayā — with that (speaking good words); yajñam — our sacrifice; mimikṣatam — make [it] full of the oblation of soma-juice.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Áśvins! When you drive the horses with your whip, they run quickly, wet with sweat; urging them on with swift-sounding calls, come quickly to our sacrifice and be eager in the offering of soma-juice [drinking the soma]. (Or: come to our sacrifice with your speech, sweet and soft, pleasing and true, ready to grant boons, and be eager for the offering of soma-juice.)

॥ English Translation ॥

Aswanis [sic] sprinkle the sacrifice with your whip which is full of sweet juice (honey) ; lash (your horses) loudly.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥

The sense of this rik is somewhat obscure: O Áśvins, driving your chariot-horses well with your whip, urging the horses with sharply sounding shouts so that they run swiftly, come quickly to this our sacrificial ground, and, delighted by drinking the soma-juice, give us too delight with your pleasing words: this may be the chief sense.

कशा (kaśā) — pratodaḥ: the whip which urges the horse to go quickly; "whip or horsewhip" [the print's English].

— "full of sweetness; pleasing to hear" [as for sound].

सूनृतावती (sūnṛtāvatī) — pleasant, true. Although madhumatī and sūnṛtāvatī in this rik are both adjectives of the word kaśā, it is more consistent to give them a special sense of their own, intended for each. ¹³

Translation: "O Aśvin gods! You go by chariot to the house of the sacrificer who has soma (sominaḥ). That road is certainly not (nahi) dūrake — far — for you; it does not exist [as a long road]. Or: the house to which you go is not far. [Grammar:] nahi is end-accented as one of the evamādi list; asti is not made unaccented because the dropped ca is optional [P. 8-1-63]; here the sense is a conjunction — 'the house is not far, and you go by chariot' — the word ca is not used, and with its omission the first verb is not unaccented; yatrā lengthens in the Saṃhitā by P. 6-3-136 nipātasya ca; gacchathaḥ is not made unaccented, though not the first verb, because of the relative yatra."

Grammar pages (p. 73 lower half), noted briefly. The Kannada says: nahi — words in the evādi class of Phiṭ-sūtra evādīnām antaḥ are end-accented, and nahi belongs to it as the list is open (ākṛtiḡaṇa); asti — here gr̥haṃ dūre ca nāsti, yuvāṃ ca rathena gacchathaḥ ("the house is not far, and you travel by chariot") is the sense; the ca is not used, yet since the dropped ca is optional by P. 1-4-... cādilope vibhāṣā P. 8-1-63, the first verb asti remains accented, the rule that a verb is unaccented after a non-first position [tiṅ atīnaḥ P. 8-1-28] being barred; yatrā — nipātasya ca P. 6-3-136 lengthens the final vowel of a particle in the Veda; yatra belongs to the ca-group; and since gacchathaḥ stands within the yat-clause, by yadvṛttān nityam P. 8-1-66 it too keeps its accent, though pūjanāt pūjitam anudāttam P. 8-1-67 [as printed 8-1-68], by showing 'the more honoured', teaches that in this context the rule 'the word following is unaccented' is not intended after a word that is not an anantara member. ॥4॥

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥

अश्विना (aśvinā) — O Aśvin deities | (यूयम्) सोमिनः ((yūyam) sominaḥ) — [you, to] the one who prepares soma, the sacrificer | गृहम् (gr̥ham) — to the house | रथेन (rathena) — on a chariot | गच्छथः (gacchathaḥ) — go | सः (saḥ) — that [road] | वाम् (vām) — for you | दूरके(dūrake) — far | नहि अस्ति (nahi asti) — is not.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Aśvins! The house of the sacrificer who prepares the soma, to which you must go by chariot, is not far from you. (Therefore come quickly.)

॥ English Translation ॥

For to you, Aswins, the house of the Soma-sacrificer whither you go in your chariot is not far off.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

As said in the previous rik, your chariot can travel swiftly; the whip with its sweet-sounding [call] makes the horses go fast. Therefore, to you who travel in the chariot, the house of the soma-performing sacrificer does not appear far. Sitting in the swiftly moving chariot you can come quickly to the sacrificer's house; the house is not far — that is the main idea.

Application (opening lines): "In the second chandoma of the vyūḍha sacrifice, at the vaiśvadeva-śāstra, the four Savitṛ riks beginning hiranyapāṇim ūtaye [Riks 5–8] are used; it is laid down in the Sūtra, in the section of the second [day]: 'hiranyapāṇim ūtaye — the four riks — and mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [8-10])."

Translation: "For protection (ūtaye) of us, I invoke (upa hvaye) the god Savitṛ. And that god Savitṛ — being the deity set forth in this mantra — becomes cettā, the one who makes known the padam, the place to be reached by the sacrificer. Of what sort is Savitṛ? Hiranyapāṇim — holding gold in his hand to give to the sacrificer; or [an alternative explanation from the story of the sacrifice performed by the gods, which the Kannada gives below]." The grammar, noted briefly: hiranya (first-syllable accent [as a neuter noun, P. 6-1-219, as read]; the bahuvrīhi keeps the first member's accent); ūtaye (ktin with end-accent by nipātana in the list ūti-yūti-jūti-sāti-heti-kīrti); savitāram (ṛc, end-accented by its c); cettā (cit 'to know', ṛc [or ṛn]; the augment iṭ absent because 'augments are not invariable'); devatā (tal after deva in its own sense, by P. 5-4-27); padam (pad + ac; end-accent).¹⁶

Grammar pages (pp. 77–78 upper), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: hiraṇyapāṇim (hiraṇya is a neuter noun, first-syllable accented by Phit-sūtra nabviṣayasyāniṣantasya; or, as the Ṛgveda verse indro vrtrāṇi hiraṇyayaḥ [R. Saṃ. 1-2-?, as read] says, it is formed by Uṇ. 5-[?] hṛyater kanyan hiraṭ [hṛ + kanyan with hiraṭ as substitute], and is first-syllable accented by the n-mark; the bahuvrīhi hiraṇyaṃ pāṇau yasya saḥ; P. 6-2-1 bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam), ūtaye (the word udāttaḥ is carried over [from P. 3-3-95?], and the ktin-ending ūti is given by nipātana in P. 3-3-97 ūtiyūtijūtisātihetikīrtayaś ca with end-accent), savitāram (ṣū prerane; dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ P. 6-1-64; ṇvulṛcau P. 3-1-133; su + tṛ + iṭ; guṇa, av, savitṛ; accusative singular savitāram; tṛc has c so end accent by P. 6-1-163), cettā (citī saṃjñāne with tṛn by P. 3-2-135 tācchīlyavayovacanaśaktiṣu cānaś... the Kannada reads tṛn: tṛn is added to a root when the agents are habitual, [tacchīla], dutiful [taddharma] or skilled [tatsādhukārin]; the iṭ augment is barred because 'the rules about augments are not invariable' [anityam āgamaśāsanam Paribhāṣā 66]; guṇa by P. 7-3-86; nominative singular su; ṛduśanasapurudaṃso 'nehasāṃ ca P. 7-1-94 gives anaṇ for su-ending stems in ṛ when not vocative, which is absent here; apṛnṛcṣvasṛnapṛnṣṭṛkṣattṛhotṛpotṛpraśāstṛṇām P. 6-4-11 lengthens the penultimate of ṛ-ending words before sarvanāmasthāna non-vocative; halṇyābbhyo dīrghāt sutisyapṛktaṃ hal P. 6-1-68 drops su; nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya P. 8-2-7; cettā; ñnityādir nityam P. 6-1-197 gives first-syllable accent), devatā (devāt tal P. 5-4-27 [devātal] svārthe; litī P. 6-1-193 — the syllable before a lit suffix is accented — hence devātā with the ta... [as the Kannada has it: the v before the suffix is accented]), padam (pada gatau; nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ P. 3-1-134 gives ac; cit, so end-accent). ||5|| ¹⁷

हिरण्यपाणिम् (hiranyapāṇim) — yajamānāya dātum haste suvarṇadhārīṇam: holding gold in his hand to give to the sacrificer — hence called hiranyapāṇi. Or: hiraṇmayau pāṇi yasya saḥ — he whose hands are of gold; he is called hiranyapāṇi. On this the commentator says there is a story in the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa:

¹⁸ "When the gods were performing a sacrifice, Savitṛ himself, being one of the priests, sat in the place of the Brahman. The Adhvaryu priests, not noticing, gave him — as the Brahman — the portion of the puroḍāśa cake called prāśitra. Having taken it in his hand, the prāśitra cut off his hand. Then the Adhvaryus, who had given the prāśitra, made a hand of gold and fitted it on [him]; therefore he is praised as hiraṇyapāṇi, the golden-handed." The Kannada explains: when the gods perform a sacrifice, Savitṛ, being one of the priests, took a priest's duty and sat in the Brahman's seat; the Adhvaryus took him for the Brahman and, unwittingly, gave him the prāśitra portion of the puroḍāśa; but that, being a blunder, harmed Savitṛ's hands, which were cut off. When he could not move without hands, the Adhvaryus made golden hands and fitted them to him; so Savitṛ is praised as "golden-handed".

Yāska explains the words hiraṇya and pāṇi:

*हिरण्यं कस्माद्धृते आयम्यमानमिति वा हिते च रमणं भवतीति वा ह्रियते जनाज्जनमिति वा हितरमणं भवतीति वा हर्यतेर्वा स्यात्प्रेप्साकर्मणः ॥ (नि. [२-१०]) hiraṇyam kasmād dhriyate āyamyamānam iti vā hriyate janāj janam iti vā hita-ramaṇam bhavatīti vā haryater vā syāt prepsā-karmaṇaḥ ||
 (ni. [2-10])*

18. The Sanskrit of this Kauṣītaki quotation is read from small print; the first line is garbled ["...kasyāṃcid iṣṭvādhvaryavas..."] and the whole is given as read; the English sense follows the Kannada:

"Why is gold called hiranya? Because it is hriyate — taken — held, being drawn [by effort]; or because it is carried from person to person; or because it gives pleasure to the beneficial [hita-ramaṇa]; or from hary, 'to desire', in the sense of an object of desire [prepsā-karman]." The Kannada adds: gold is called hiranya for many reasons: craftsmen make bracelets and the like and so extend its value; people use it in trade; it gives help and benefit to those who have it in times of need; it gives joy to the mind; since everyone desires it, it spurs on all workers (in the form of wealth). Of pāṇi the derivation is:

(ni. [2-16])

"Pāṇi is from paṇāy, in the sense of worship: holding up the two hands, [men] worship the gods." Hiranyapāṇi therefore means one who has gold in his hand, or one with golden (gold-made) hands.

सवितारम् (savitāram) — Savitṛ. Yāska gives for the word savitṛ these [explanations]:

सविता सर्वस्य प्रसविता ॥ (नि. [१०-३१]) आदित्योऽपि सवितोच्यते ॥ (नि. [१०-३२])
savitā sarvasya prasavitā || (ni. [10-31]) ādityo 'pi savitocyate
|| (ni. [10-32])

"Savitṛ is the one who sets in motion [engenders] everything; the Āditya too is called Savitṛ." That is: because this deity produces — gives — all the desired things that people wish for, he is called Savitṛ; and the Āditya, the sun, is also called Savitṛ.

स चेत्ता देवता पदम् (sa cettā devatā padam) — sa ca savitā yajamānena prāpyasthānaṃ jñāpayitā bhavati: "That Savitṛ informs [the sacrificer] of the place which the sacrificer is to attain" — thus the commentator explains the sentence. But the sense does not quite fit; the ṛṣi's intention is not clear.

Translation: "Here the hotṛ speaks to the sāmaga [the Udgāṭṛ] or another priest who recites a śāstra: For protection (avase) praise (upa stuhī) Savitṛ — we wish [to perform] the vratas, the acts — the Soma sacrifices and the like — that belong to that Savitṛ. Of what sort is Savitṛ? Apāṃ napātam — not a protector (na pālaka) of water: he who dries it up by his heat. [Grammar:] apāṃ — the ending is accented by P. 6-1-171 ūḍidam...; napātam — from pā 'to protect', the participle pāt, compounded with the negative; the exception nabhrāṇnapāt... [P. 6-3-75] bars the dropping of the n of nañ, says the vṛttikāra; for Agni does not protect the waters, being their drier. Then how is the genitive apāṃ? [The objection is:] P. 2-3-69 na lokāvyayaniṣṭhākhalarthatṛnām forbids the genitive of the object. [Reply:] Let the genitive be of 'relation' [śeṣa], since Agni and Āditya are related to water as its cause — [the śruti says] 'agner āpaḥ' — 'from Agni the waters', and the Smṛti says 'ādityāj jāyate vṛṣṭiḥ' — 'from the sun comes rain' (Manu [3-76]). On this view the non-appearance of the num augment [P. 7-1-70 ugīdacām] in napāt is by nipātana, and the tuk augment after the kvīp-ending of pā should be understood as given by nipātana. Or [alternatively]: na pātayatīti napāt — 'he who does not cause to fall' — from pat 'to go', with the causative and vīp; for Agni and Āditya are not what brings waters [down?], but rather what dries them [the clause is partly unclear, marked [?]]; the accent is the first-member accent of the particle. Avase — the infinitive asen by P. 3-4-9 [tumarthe sesenasen...]; first-syllable accent; uśmasi — vaś 'to desire', śap dropped; the augment i of mas by P. 7-1-46."

Grammar pages (pp. 80–81), noted briefly. The Kannada says: apām (the ending ām after ap is accented by P. 6-1-171 ūḍīdampadādyappumraidyubhyaḥ), napātam (pā rakṣaṇe, laṭ, replaced by śatṛ by P. 3-2-124; pā + at, śap, pararūpa, savarṇadīrgha: pāt; na + pāt = napāt, the nañ-tatpuruṣa by P. 2-2-6 nañ with subanta; nalopo nañah P. 6-3-73 would drop the n of nañ when the final member begins with a vowel, but here napāt belongs to the P. 6-3-75 list na bhrāṇ-napān-nāsatya-namuci-nakula-nakha-napuṃsaka-nakṣatra-nakra-nāsikeṣu ca prakṛtyā, which keeps the n by prakṛtibhāva; the vṛttikāra says so; this is also correct. Apām napāt means Agni: apaḥ = water, napāt = 'not a protector' [na pātā]. Agni does not protect the waters but dries them up; so apām napāt is a suitable name for Agni. But then in apām napāt the genitive (apām) must be explained: the genitive of an agent or object by P. 2-3-65 karṭṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti is barred when the word ends in a lādeśa, śatṛ — by P. 2-3-69 na lokāvyayaniṣṭhākhalarthatṛnām; so how is the object-genitive [karmaṣaṣṭhī] possible? The answer: we do not accept an object-genitive here; we take the 'remainder' genitive of P. 2-3-50 ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe, regarding ap as related as an object [karmakāraka] by sambandhitva: Agni and the sun, being causes of water — the śruti agner āpaḥ [Tai. Ā. 8-?] shows water arises from Agni; Manu 3-76 ādityāj jāyate vṛṣṭiḥ shows rain arises from the sun — hence the genitive in this 'cause–effect relation'. With the genitive of 'relation' there is no difficulty. In napāt, napātam etc. [where śatṛ is ugit] ugidacām sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ P. 7-1-70 would give num because śatṛ has ṛ, and the root pā ends in a vowel; but the nipātana in na bhrāṇ... shows that napāt does not take num. Alternatively pā + kvip [kvip ca P. 3-2-76], all of kvip dropped, tuk before it by nipātana — pāt, napāt; on this view there is no lādeśa and the prohibition of P. 2-3-69 does not arise; since, by P. 2-3-65 karṭṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti, the object-genitive could arise; so no need to rely on the 'remainder'. The vṛttikāra (on ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu yugapat P. 6-2-140) takes this alternative form by nipātana with kvip + tuk; or [the other derivation:] na pātayati iti napāt — from patl gatau with ṇic, ata upadhāyāḥ P. 7-2-116 vṛddhi: pāt + i; then kvip by P. 3-2-76; the ṇic dropped by ṇer aniṭi P. 6-4-51. Agni and the Ādityas are well known as śoṣaṇa [drying] agents for water — they do not cause it to fall but dry it up; in this form no nipātana is needed and the object-genitive is possible. In the first form, the root-accent of pā is udātta; śap [being pit] is unaccented, and the śatṛ — being anudāttopadeśa — is unaccented as a lasārvadhātuka; the ekādeśa P. 8-2-5 makes the ā of pā udātta; in the last two forms only the root accent remains. After the compound, gatikārapapadāt kṛt P. 6-2-139 gives the final member's accent. Avase (ava rakṣaṇe, tumarthe sesenaseasenkasenādhyai... P. 3-4-9: asen in the sense of an infinitive — i.e. by the rule avyayakṛto bhāve [the avyaya kṛt in the abstract sense]; the suffix is nit, so first-syllable accent)." ||6||

The commentator explains that this rik is spoken with reference to the udgātṛ who sings the sāman, or to some other priest who recites a śāstra mantra.

अपाम् नपातम् (apām napātam) — jalasya na pālakam; jalasya śoṣakam: the one who dries water, who is the opponent of water; the commentator explains that the sun is called apām napāt for this reason. Yāska, however, says apām napāt and tanūnapāt are words of one and the same sense, and gives for tanūnapāt two meanings: ājya (clarified butter) and Agni (Ni. 10-[?] and 8-[?]; numerals read as "००-०८" and "८-३" and marked [?]). But the sense given here by the commentator is the consistent one.

व्रतानि (vratāni) — somayāgādi-rūpāṇi karmāṇi: a vrata is an act done with a rule; here it means Soma sacrifices and the like.

उश्मसि (uśmasi) — kāmayāmahe: we wish; we desire to do Soma-sacrifices and the like for Savitṛ.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ The rik's chief sense: Savitṛ gives many kinds of wealth and houses, and gives knowledge to people according to their fitness. विभक्तारम् — one who apportions to each according to his merit or his performance of sacrificial work. नृचक्षसम् — nṛṇ caṣṭe prakāśayati: the one who illumines men — "gives knowledge, prompts the mind"; and the well-known Gāyatrī mantra dhiyo yo naḥ pracodayāt (Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-62-10) makes plain that Savitṛ prompts our minds.

22. The grammar passage printed on pp. 82–84 is dense; the words treated are vibhaktāram, havāmahe, vasoḥ, rādhasaḥ, nṛcakṣasam, with sūtras cited including P. 6-1-34 [bahulaṃ chandasī], P. 6-1-108 [saṃprasāraṇāc ca] and Uṇ. 4-[?] for vasu; "grammar pages, noted briefly"; numerals are pointers only. The Kauṣītaki quotation is read from small print: it says the god Savitṛ distributes, among created beings, the varied riches that belong to [the pair Indra and Soma? — read uncertainly [?]].

[5-5] [?]: agne patnīr ihā vaha and ukṣānnāya vaśānnāya [R. Saṃ. 1-?-?, marked [?]]). This rik and the next three praise the wives of the gods; no particular names are given, only 'the wives of the gods'. उशतीः — vaś kāntau: kāmāyamānāḥ — loving the gods, bright, anxious. त्वष्टारम् — Tvaṣṭṛ: why the ṛṣi invokes Tvaṣṭṛ along with the goddesses is not clear.

॥ English Translation ॥

O youthful Agni, bring hither for our protection the goddesses, Hotra, Bharathi, Varutri, and Dhishana.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ In this rik the divine wives Hotrā, Bhāratī, Varūtrī and Dhiṣaṇā are invoked. Hotrā is read among the words for speech (Ni. [1-11] [?]); bhāratī (Ni. [8-13]) and dhiṣaṇā among the words for speech, and varūtrī, 'the one to be chosen', are taken either as names of separate goddesses or as different names of Vāc; the commentator takes hotrā as the wife of Agni, bhāratī as the wife of Bharata-Āditya, dhiṣaṇā as Vāgdevatā [Sarasvatī]. ग्नाः — gnā means 'woman' (Ni. [3-21] [?]; also 'gnā' read among the words for speech [Ni. 1-11], and as 'women' in menā gnā iti strīṇām [Ni. 3-21]); Yāska derives it gacchanti hi enāḥ maithunena dhāraṇārtham — 'men go to women for the sake of union'. The word gnāḥ occurs in the Ṛgveda in several rikṣ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-10 [Rik 10 itself], 1-61-8, and others; numerals as read, marked [?]). यविष्ठ — atīśayena yuvā yaviṣṭhaḥ: youthful, a young man. ²⁶

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ अभि — ābhimukhyena: 'principally, face to face, [in a favourable way]'. महः — mahatā: the word is in the sixth case (ṣaṣṭhī) used for the third, qualifying śarmaṇā; it means 'great, abundant'. नृपत्नीः — manuṣyāṇām pālayitryaḥ: the goddesses who protect men; the divine wives mentioned in the previous rik — Hotrā, the wife of Agni; Bhārati, the wife of Bharata (Āditya); Dhiṣaṇā, the goddess of speech. अच्छिन्नपत्राः — the commentator says: 'the wings of divine wives who are of bird form are cut by no one' — hence acchinnapatrāḥ. The author remarks that the commentator has supplied this explanation, that the word does not occur elsewhere in the Ṛgveda [as far as he finds], and that the intention behind the use of the word is not clearly understood.

[Reading of the quotation is mine from a compressed print; the order and the clause rāṭ rājate are uncertain.] These are called the wives of the gods. In some riks the names of these wives are given separately, and in others they are named together as 'the wives of the gods'. Examples cited by the author:

34. The bhāṣya here is mainly a list of the sacrificial applications of the rik, with Āśvalāyana-sūtra citations; the author gives them in clear Kannada in the Special Topics below, which is what I follow. The ellipses mark stretches of the Sanskrit that were too crowded to read confidently.

« Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) » Applications of this rik.

(i) In the Vaiśvadeva-śāstra of the second chandoma day, this rik is used in the recitation of the mantras addressed to Dyāvāpṛthivī; in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning dvitīyasyāgniṃ va, the rik mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ is cited together with yuvānā pitarā punaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [1-160-3] [?]) (Āś. [8-10] [?]). (ii) In the Āgrayaṇa-iṣṭi this rik is the puro-'nuvākyā of the one-pot (ekakapāla) cake offered to Dyāvāpṛthivī; in the section āgrayaṇaṃ vr̥hiśyāmākam, with the rik ye ke ca jmā mahino ahimāyāḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [6-52-15] [?]) the rik mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ is described (Āś. [2-9] [?]). (iii) It also has a use at the time of agni-manthana (kindling the fire by friction): in the section prātarvaiśvadevyām, after abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [1-24-3] [?]) this rik is cited (Āś. [2-16] [?]). (iv) In the sāṃnāyya offering, the chant is used as the dripping [curds] are carried to the ahavanīya; the rik is cited in Āśvalāyana under vidhvaparādha (Āś. [3-10] [?]), where the dripping substance is to be led into the paridhi place. (v) In the Āśvina-śāstra too, in the section saṃsthiteṣv āśvināya, the rik mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ is followed by te hi dyāvāpṛthivī viśvaśambhuvā (Ṛ. Saṃ. [1-160-1]) (Āś. [6-5] [?]). Besides these śrauta rites the rik is also used in gṛhya ritual, in prayers addressed to the Earth.

द्यौः, पृथिवी — heaven and earth: the two divinities Dyāvāpṛthivī presiding over them are praised together in many hymns, and in some riks the words dyauḥ and pṛthivī occur separately. Examples [numerals as printed, marked [?]]:

उप श्वासय पृथिवीमुत द्यां पुरुत्रा ते मनुतां विष्टितं जगत् ॥ (R. Saṃ. [5-83-8] [?])
upa śvāsaya pr̥thivīm uta dyām purutrā te manutām viṣṭhitam jagat | | — "Make the earth and the sky breathe; may the world, standing in many places, think of you." (my gloss, tentative)

मित्रो जनान्यातयति ब्रुवाणो मित्रो दाधार पृथिवीमुत द्याम् । (R. Saṃ. [3-59-1])
mitro janān yātayati bruvāṇo mitro dādāhāra pr̥thivīm uta dyām | | — "Mitra, speaking, sets men to work; Mitra has upheld the earth and the sky." (my gloss, tentative)

विश्वकर्म्मन् हविषा वावृधानः स्वयं यजस्व पृथिवीमुत द्याम् ॥ (R. Saṃ. [10-81-6])
viśvakarman haviṣā vāvṛdhānaḥ svayaṃ yajasva pr̥thivīm uta dyām | | — "O Viśvakarman, grown strong by the oblation, yourself sacrifice [to] the earth and the sky." (my gloss, tentative)

Twenty-four [the printed numeral reads 24, marked [?]] words are listed (Nighaṇṭu [3-30] [?]) as names of dyāvāpr̥thivī — purandhi and the rest. In the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, in dyauḥ pitaḥ pr̥thivī mātāḥ, heaven is addressed as father and earth as mother. In the Ṛgveda the universe is usually divided into three chief regions (lokas) — heaven, the middle region (antarikṣa) and earth. Even in the heaven there are three divisions: nāka (the highest place in heaven), viṣṭapa (the middle region) and pr̥ṣṭha (the lower part); in the antarikṣa there are further divisions, though not clearly, and words like vyoman and rocana (the realm of light), antarikṣa etc. differ in sense. For the earth the names are pr̥thivī, mahī (the great expanse), ilā (this universe), vasumatī (the wealthy one), etc. In the Ṛgveda dyāvāpr̥thivī is generally understood as the presiding deities of heaven and earth, and in that sense it is used.

यज्ञं मिमिक्षताम् — svakīyasārabhūtena rasena sektum icchatām: may the deities of heaven and earth help to bring this sacrifice to successful completion by the best things in heaven and earth.
 पिपृतां नः भरीमभिः — bharanaīḥ poṣakair annādyādhāravastubhiḥ somarasādibhiś ca asmān yajñam ca paripūrṇam kurutām: may they complete our sacrifice with nourishing food and by soma-sap and the like.

Translation: "The firm abode of the Gandharva is the antarikṣa (the middle region). So it is read in the Tāpanīya branch [of the Veda]: 'the antarikṣa is served by hosts of Yakṣas, Gandharvas and Apsarases.' So the water (payah) belonging to those two, Heaven and Earth, existing in the sky [gopalakṣite — 'marked by go'; the reading of this phrase is doubtful], the sages (viprāḥ, the wise) lick, like ghee, with their dhītis — their acts. Or: they lick the essence of it, like ghee. Rihanti is lihanti with r by the vyatyaya [interchange]. Gandharvasya: from dhṛṇ 'to hold', with the suffix va when go is the object — and go is replaced by gan." ³⁵ adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapah] and gandharvasya [gavi gan dhṛṇ-ñoh, a rule not found in the Uṇādi lists; so the commentary derives it as gan + dhṛ + va, guṇa following]; numerals as read, pointers only.

7-1-3 jho 'ntah; śap lost by P. 2-4-75

The wise men sitting in the eternal home of the Gandharvas taste, through their pious acts the essence of all good things of both heaven and earth as the ghee is the essence of milk.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ The meaning of this rik is correct if some words are supplied: as ghee is the essence of milk, so there are many things in heaven and earth that are their essence. The wise (medhāvī) people, by sacrifices and the like [good acts], having reached the highest and eternal abode of the Gandharvas — the world, the antarikṣa — there enjoy the best essences of heaven and earth. That is the chief meaning. घृतवत् पयः — like the essence in milk, ghee — or payah as water: the soma-juice and such, as the essence. धीतिभिः — karmabhiḥ: by acts such as sacrifice. गन्धर्वस्य ध्रुवे पदे — the commentator says the Gandharva's chief place is the antarikṣa, and quotes the Tāpanīya-śākhā text yakṣagandharvāpsarogaṇasevitam antarikṣam (Tai. Ā. [1-2] [?]). Or one may say it is the highest place served by Gandharvas [the world, loka]: by pious acts such as sacrifice, people reach the best places, the Gandharva-world and others, and there enjoy the best things of heaven and earth.

Translation: "The rik syonā prthivī is applied in the Mahānāmnī vow at the touching of the earth: it is laid down in the section etadvidam brahmacāriṇam — 'having finished [with the words] syonā prthivi bhava' (Āś. [8-14] [?]). In the domestic (smārta) rite of hemanta-pratyavarohaṇa [the 'descent' in winter] this rik is also to be muttered: in the section mārgaśīrṣyāṃ pratyavarohaṇam — 'sitting down there, having muttered syonā prthivi bhava' (Āś. Gr. [2-3-6] [?]). O Earth, be endowed with such qualities as syonā. The word syona means 'wide': so, in the Vājasaneyi-brāhmaṇa, citing some mantra containing the word, it explains indra syorum āviśa ... 'wide' [?], 'it says [syonaḥ =] wide.' Or syona means 'pleasant': so the words of Yāska will be cited. Anṛkṣarā: free from thorns. Niveśanī: being a dwelling-place. Saprathaḥ: give us, to us, wide shelter (śarma) — protection. Yāska explains this very rik thus: 'Be pleasant to us, O Earth; anṛkṣarā [thornless]: ṛkṣara is a thorn — derived from ṛch [to go], or [kaṇṭaka] from kṛntati [to cut] or kaṇṭati, a word meaning going, [i.e. what has gone up?]; ... give us shelter extending on every side' (Nirukta [9-32] [?])."

Note — Grammar pages 114–117, noted briefly: words treated are syonā [sīvu tantusantāne + na by Uṇ. [3-6/3-46] with ūṭh and yaṇ, i.e. the formation from sīv with na, the ū of sīv changed to yo; accent; the sense 'ray or sun' from the Medinīkośa, and 'happiness' by Nirukta [?]; the vocative prthivi with the discussion of whether the vocative forms an āmantrita in P. 8-1-[?]; the accent of syonā as a vocative — decided by the principle samarthaḥ padavidhiḥ, anṛkṣarā [ṛṣī gatau + * kṣaran — Uṇ. [3-70] ; ṛkṣara = thorn; nañ-bahuvrīhi, accent on the last member by P. 6-2-172], *niveśanī [ni + viś + lyuṭ in the sense of place, P. 3-3-117; yu → ana P. 7-1-1; nīp/nīṣ by P. 4-1-15], yaccha [dāṇ dāne with the substitution yaccha by P. 7-3-78; hi → luk; accent], saprathaḥ [pratha prakhyāne + asun, Uṇ. 4-[?]; compound with saha → sa, by P. 6-3-82 vopasarjanasya; the long discussion on upasarjana is scholastic and is not reproduced]. Numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ पृथिवि (pr̥thivi) — O Earth | स्योना (syonā) — wide or pleasant | भव (bhava) — be | नः (naḥ) — to us | अनृक्षरा (anṛkṣarā) — free from thorns | निवेशनी (niveśanī) — a dwelling-place | सप्रथः (saprathaḥ) — wide | शर्म (śarma) — shelter | यच्छ (yaccha) — give.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Goddess Earth! Be always wide and free from thorns, a dwelling-place for us, and give us wide shelter.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Earth, give us extensive abode free from thorns; give us great happiness.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ The applications of this rik are in both śrauta and smārta rites. In the Mahānāmnī vow [(vrata) a sacrifice] it is recited at the time of touching the earth; this is described in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section etadvidam brahmacāriṇam, in the sūtra ending syonā pr̥thivi bhaveti samāpya (Āś. [8-14] [?]). In the domestic rites it is muttered in the rite called hemanta-pratyavarohaṇa; described in Āśvalāyana's Gṛhya-sūtra, in the section mārgaśīrṣyām pratyavarohaṇam ('on the full moon of Mārgaśīrṣa...') by the sūtra tasminn upaviśya syonā pr̥thivi bhaveti japitvā (Āś. Gṛ. [2-3-6] [?]).

स्योना — the commentator says that this word shows two senses: 'wide' or 'pleasant'; for the sense 'wide' he cites the Vājasaneyabrahmaṇa passage indra syorum āviśa syonaḥ syonam iti vistīrṇo vistīrṇam ity eva tadāha. For the other sense the explanation given by Yāska is cited — [the passage quoted above]. By this Nirukta explanation: syonā = sukhā; anṛkṣarā = niṣkaṇṭakā; niveśanī = nivāsayogyā; śarma = sukham; saprathaḥ = sarvataḥ pr̥thu. That is, the Earth is prayed to give us a dwelling that is pleasant, free from thorns (free from obstacles), suitable to live in, and happiness.

अनृक्षरा — akṣara means 'ṛkṣara' from ṛṣī gatau, i.e. from ṛcchati 'it goes'; a thorn, an obstacle: kaṇṭaka [that which goes against; pierces], bādhā. Anṛkṣarā means without such obstacles, free from thorns.

Translation: "In the morning pressing, at the somātireka [the extra Soma offering], one śāstra is to be recited; here the six riks beginning ato devā are used. It is laid down in Āśvalāyana in the section somātireka [the Indra-Viṣṇu riks, with mahāṃ indro ya ojasā (R̥. 8-6-1)] (Āś. [6-2] [?]); and these six riks serve as stotriya and anurūpa in the ukthya [offering] with the acchāvāka; in the section yasya paśavaḥ: 'ato devā avantu na as the stotriya and anurūpa' (Āś. [6-11] [?]). In the expiatory (prāyaścitta) oblations of the new- and full-moon sacrifices the first two of these riks are used; in the section vedaṃ patnyai: 'ato devā avantu na with two [riks] and the vyāhṛtis' (Āś. [1-11] [?]). Between the yājyā and the anuvākya, if a worldly word is spoken, the rik ato devā avantu na is to be muttered; for it is laid down: 'in distress he mutters ato devā avantu na' (Āś. [1-5] [?]).

"Viṣṇu, the Supreme Lord, strode forth with seven dhāmans — the seven metres, Gāyatrī and the rest, as means — from whichever region (pradeśa) of the earth. He did a manifold stepping. Therefore, from that region of the earth, may the gods protect us. As to the conquest of the worlds, earth and the rest, by Viṣṇu with the metres as means, the Taittirīyas read: 'The gods, with Viṣṇu at their head, conquered these worlds by the metres, [conquering] what could not be taken back' (Tai. Saṃ. [?]). In Viṣṇu's Trivikrama incarnation, the stepping of the three steps ... the 'looking' [?] at the region of the earth is the removal of sin for those who live on the earth [the last sentence is read doubtfully]."

May the gods protect us from that portion of the earth whence Vishnu put his steps aided by seven meters.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ Applications. This mantra is used in four ways. (i) In the somātireka [the 'extra' Soma] rite, which follows the Soma-pressing of the morning [prātaḥsavana, after the somābhiṣava], this rik is used as a śāstra mantra; this is described in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, section somātireka, in the sūtra containing mahām indro ya ojasā (R. Saṃ. 8-6-1) and ato devā avantu naḥ (R. Saṃ. 1-22-16) with [the Indra-Viṣṇu hymn] (Āś. [6-2] [?]). (ii) In the recitation of the ukthya mantras in the Soma sacrifice called Āpryo[rmā] ... [name uncertain] where the acchāvāka priest officiates, the six riks beginning ato devā are to be used as stotriya-anurūpa mantras; so says the sūtra yasya paśavaḥ ... ato devā avantu na iti stotriyānurūpau (Āś. [6-11]). (iii) In the expiatory homa of the Darśa-pūrṇamāsa sacrifices the first two riks of this hymn are used; stated in the sūtra ato devā avantu na iti dvābhyām vyāhṛtibhiś ca in the section vedaṃ patnyai (Āś. [1-11]). (iv) If, between the reciting of the yājyā and puro-'nuvākyā, some worldly speech has been uttered, this rik is to be muttered as an expiatory mantra, says the sūtra āpadyato devā avantu na iti japet (Āś. [1-5]).

Viṣṇu. In this rik Viṣṇu is mentioned for the first time. Viṣṇu's pre-eminence is great in the Purāṇas and in the later Vedic-auxiliary [Vedāṅga] books, but in the Ṛgveda there are only five hymns [sūktas] in praise of Viṣṇu. Yet in many places his name is mentioned together with other deities, chiefly with Indra. His chief prowess is described as the three steps, which are in heaven, antarikṣa and earth; the place called parama-pada is also counted as the highest. In the Ṛgveda Viṣṇu's connection with Indra is especially close; when Indra slays Vṛtra he seeks the help of Viṣṇu. In the Yajurveda Viṣṇu is described in many ways — as lord of sacrifice and of the mountains, as the form of sacrifice, as the leader (Leader) of all the gods. The commentator takes the word viṣṇu in this rik as Parameśvara, because Yāska says:

विष्णुः । अथ यद्विषितो भवति तद्विष्णुर्भवति । विष्णुर्विशतेर्वा व्यश्नोतेर्वा ॥ (नि. [१२-१८] [?])

viṣṇuḥ | atha yad viṣito bhavati tad viṣṇur bhavati | viṣṇur viśater vā vyaśnoter vā || — "Viṣṇu: since he is spread out (viṣita) he is Viṣṇu; or Viṣṇu is from viś 'to enter' or from vy-aś 'to pervade'" (Nirukta [12-18] [?]) — because he pervades everything, or enters and pervades all things, or pervades all by rays; hence he may be called Viṣṇu, 'even the Āditya'. विचक्रमे — vividhaṃ pādakramaṇaṃ kṛtavān: he measured out the regions of the worlds, earth and the rest, by his strides in many ways. सप्त धामभिः — dhāma means place; the commentator takes dhāma as chandas ['seven metres, Gāyatrī and the rest']; if it is taken of the Āditya, 'seven rays' (or 'seven horses'). In the Taittirīya Saṃhitā: viṣṇumukhā vai devās chandobhir imāṃl lokān anapajayyam abhyajayan (Tai. Saṃ. [3-2-1-1?] [?]) — the gods, with Viṣṇu in front, by the help of the metres conquered the worlds. In the Purāṇas, Viṣṇu in his Trivikrama [Vāmana] incarnation is said to have taken from the Daityas, in three strides, the earth and antarikṣa they had seized, and given them back to the gods; the author asks that it be noted that such Purāṇic upākhyānas have as their root the briefer descriptions found in the Veda.

Translation: "The rik idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame is the anuvākyā for the Vaiṣṇava upāṃśuyāja; so it is laid down in the section uktā devatā — 'idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame, ... (Āś. [1-6])'. [If a dog passes] between the Gārhapatya and the Āhavanīya, ashes are thrown on the place where it stood; in the section vidhvaparādha: 'with the ashes he should cover the dog's footprint with idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame' (Āś. [3-10]). In the Ātithyā [rite] it is the puro-'nuvākyā of the chief oblation: the section athātithyā... — 'idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame tad asya priyam abhi pātho asyām' (Āś. [4-3]). In the Upasads it is the anuvākyā of the Viṣṇu oblation: 'gayasphāno amīvahā [R. 1-?-?] and idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame' (Āś. [4-8]).

"Viṣṇu, who took the Trivikrama form, strode forth looking at all this manifest world: he took a special stride. Then he set his foot in threefold manner (tredhā) — he cast down his own foot. In the dust (pāṃsure) of this Viṣṇu — in the dusty foot-place — all this world has been contained, collected (samūlham). This rik is explained thus [by the Nirukta]: 'Viṣṇu is from viś or from vy-as. All that is here he strides over; Viṣṇu places his foot threefold — for the threefold state: on earth, in the air, in the sky — says Śākapūṇi. At the rising place, at the Viṣṇu-pada (zenith), at Gayaśiras (the setting place) — says Aurnavābha. Samūlham asya pāṃsure: in the dusty region (antarikṣa) his foot is not seen, or [the phrase] may be a simile: his foot is not seen, as if in a dusty place. Pāṃsavaḥ are what 'are born from the feet' (pādaiḥ sūyante), or those which 'lie fallen' (pannāḥ śerate), or those that 'are to be ground' (piṃsanīyā bhavanti)' (Nirukta [12-19])." ³⁸

॥ English Translation ॥

Vishnu traversed this universe; three times he planted his foot and the whole universe was collected in the dust of his footsteps.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Applications. In the upāṃśuyāja sacrifice connected with Viṣṇu, the riks idam viṣṇur vi cakrame (R. Saṃ. 1-22-17) and trir devaḥ pṛthivīm eṣa etām (R. Saṃ. [6-100-3?]) are to be used as the puro-'nuvākyā and yājyā; so says the section uktā devatā of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra (Āś. [1-6]), whence this rik idam viṣṇur vi cakrame is the puro-'nuvākyā mantra. When a dog passes between the Gārhapatya and Āhavanīya fires, installed in the sacrifice, ashes are to be thrown on the place where the dog stood with the mantra idam viṣṇur vi cakrame, as the section vidhvaparādha says (Āś. [3-10]). And in the ātithyā offering, when the principal (or chief) oblation of ghee is offered, this very rik is the puro-'nuvākyā: Āś. [4-3] says the riks idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame (R̥. Saṃ. 1-22-17) and tad asya priyam abhi pātho aśyām (R̥. Saṃ. [1-154-5]) are to be used as puro-'nuvākyā and yājyā. Ātithya means the hospitality to Soma [when Soma is brought in the Soma sacrifice; Soma is the 'king', and the seven metres, Gāyatrī etc., are his attendants (retinue)]; the practice is to offer homa to please the metres, so that hospitality is shown to the king and to his retinue. On this the Taittirīya Saṃhitā of the Yajurveda says:

यावद्वै राजानुचर्या [?] आगच्छन्ति सर्वेभ्यो वै तेभ्य आतिथ्यं क्रियते । छन्दांसि खलु वै सोमस्य राज्ञोऽनुचराण्यग्नेरातिथ्यमसि विष्णवे त्वेत्याह गायत्रिया विवेयेन [?] करोति सोमस्यातिथ्यमसि विष्णवे त्वेत्याह त्रिष्टुभा ... ॥ [Tai. Saṃ. — reading of many words doubtful]

yāvad vai rājānucaryā [?] āgacchanti sarvebhyo vai tebhya ātithyaṃ kriyate | chandāṃsi khalu vai somasya rājño 'nucarāṇy agner ātithyam asi viṣṇave tvety āha gāyatriyā viveyena [?] karoti somasyātithyam asi viṣṇave tvety āha triṣṭubhā ... || — "As many as the king's followers who come, to all of them hospitality is done; the metres are the attendants of King Soma. 'Thou art the hospitality of Agni, to Viṣṇu thee' he says, and does it with the Gāyatrī ..., 'Thou art the hospitality of Soma ...' with the Triṣṭubh ..." ³⁹ In these homās Viṣṇu is the chief deity. Likewise in the upasad homa the riks gayasphāno amīvahā (R̥. Saṃ. [1-91-12]) and idaṃ viṣṇur vi cakrame (R̥. Saṃ. 1-22-17) are to be used as yājyā and puro-'nuvākyā; so says the section athopasad in Āśvalāyana (Āś. [4-8]). Such is the application of this rik; and in the domestic (grhya) rites, in the svārtha applications [for one's own purposes] and so on, it is customary to use this rik when mantras connected with Viṣṇu are recited.

Yāska's explanation. The sage Yāska explains this rik in the Nirukta [quoted above], which means: 'When the Sun fills everything with his rays, he is called Viṣṇu; or, by entering everything with his rays, Viṣṇu; or, by pervading everything exceedingly, with his rays and shining, the Āditya is called Viṣṇu.' [The Sanskrit of this commentary — *yadā viṣṭaḥ vyāpto 'yam eva sūryo raśmibhir bhavati tadā viṣṇur bhavati | viśater vā yadā viṣṭaḥ praviṣṭaḥ sarvato raśmibhir bhavati tadā viṣṇur bhavati | vyaśnoter vā ... yadā raśmibhir atīśayenāyaṃ vyāpto bhavati vyāpnoti vā raśmibhir ayaṃ sarvaṃ tadā viṣṇur āditya | ḥ — is printed in the source.] Then, for this rik, according to Śākapūṇi: 'Viṣṇu (the Āditya) places three steps in order to divide this world into three parts — earth, antarikṣa, heaven; that is, he appears in three ways: through the rays on earth, through the lightning in the antarikṣa, and through the orb of the sun in heaven.' Aurnavābha's view: 'the Sun is seen at sunrise on the mountain of rising (samārohaṇa), at midday in the antarikṣa (Viṣṇupada), and at evening on the setting mountain (gayaśiras)'; that, he says, is the sense of tredhā nidadhe padam. Samūlham asya pāmsure — in the antarikṣa at midday the foot [of the Sun] is never seen [on account of the heat, the glare of lightning...]; or [if the phrase is a simile], 'as one cannot see a thing that is lost in dust'. For pāmsu the derivation is: pādyaiḥ sūyante janyante — 'that which is produced from the feet'; or pannāḥ śerate — 'what lies fallen'; or piṃsanīyāḥ dhvaṃsanīyāḥ — 'what is to be crushed or ground' — hence the dust of the feet is called pāmsura.

All the above is from Yāska's explanations. In the Purāṇas Viṣṇu holds a special place of importance: since he pervades the whole universe, he is called Parameśvara and Parabrahman; and among the Trimūrti — Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Maheśvara — who carry on the creation, preservation and dissolution of the universe, Viṣṇu is known as its protector. For the purpose of protecting the world he has taken many incarnations; one of these, the Vāmana or Trivikrama incarnation, is described in this rik, according to the commentator and other Indian pandits. But Western and modern scholars hold that, since Viṣṇu's incarnations are not specified in the R̥gveda, and since the deities seen in the Veda are described in the Purāṇas in a different, elaborate fashion — the Veda being the root of the Purāṇic tales — it is not right to fit the incarnations of the Purāṇas on to the Vedic mantras. According to the Purāṇic story: while the asura Bali-cakravartī, having conquered the gods, ruled the kingdom, the defeated gods took refuge with Viṣṇu; to protect them, Viṣṇu took the Vāmana incarnation, came to Bali as he was performing a sacrifice, and begged three paces of land; Bali agreed. Then Vāmana took the Trivikrama form, so huge that with one foot he covered the earth, with a second the antarikṣa; and asked where the third foot should go. Bali, true to his word, bade him place it on his own head. The Trivikrama placed his third foot on Bali's head, sent him to Pātāla, and having granted him a boon he asked for, made him live there in happiness as king.⁴⁰

39. my paraphrase; the Sanskrit, with the later formulas in the Jagatī, Anuṣṭubh and Gāyatrī, is badly crowded in the print and is given only as far as it could be read.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Viṣṇu cannot be injured by anyone; he is the protector of the whole world; therefore, for the protection of the rites such as the Agnihotra, Viṣṇu placed three steps.

॥ English Translation ॥

Vishnu, the uninjurable and the protector of the Universe, stepped three steps, thereby preserving the Sacred laws.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣaya-gaṇa (Special Topics) ॥ Application. In the upasad sacrifice, in the offering made to Viṣṇu, this rik is to be used as the yājyā mantra in the morning, and as the puro-ṇuvākya in the evening; this is stated in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra in the section trīṇi padā vi cakrame iti sviṣṭakṛdādi lupyate (Āś. [4-8]). गोपाः — go is the earth; he who protects it is gopāḥ: a name for Viṣṇu. अदाभ्यः — ahimṣyaḥ: one who cannot be harmed — there is no one with the power to harm him. धर्माणि, धारयन् — according to the saying sarvasya hi bhagavān viṣṇur āśrayaḥ ('Bhagavān Viṣṇu is indeed the support of all'): Viṣṇu is the refuge and protector of all the universal laws (*dharma*s), not only of the universe. That is, among the Trimūrti — Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara, whose duties are creation, preservation and dissolution — Viṣṇu carries out his own duty of protecting the universe by punishing the wicked and protecting the good.

॥ English Translation ॥

See the deeds of Vishnu, through which (the worshipper) has accomplished the pious acts; he is the intimate friend of Indra.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Some words have to be supplied in this rik: since the word paśyata, 'behold', is there, the vocative 'O people!' is needed; so also in vratāni paspaśe — 'he accomplished the observances' — the subject, 'the sacrificer', is needed; and with indrasya sakhā the word viṣṇuḥ is needed. व्रतानि — the good acts done by rule, that is, sacrificial and other observances. पस्पशे — sprṣṭavān: 'he touched', i.e. he undertook, he began. युज्यः — yogyaḥ or anukūlah: friendly to Indra, a dear friend, ever companion, fit. The commentator quotes an anuvāka of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā (Tai. Saṃ. [2-4-12]) which describes Viṣṇu's manifold prowess, his friendship with Indra, the invoking of Indra and Viṣṇu together, and so on. Its chief import is as follows:

Tvaṣṭṛ, the Prajāpati, had a son named Viśvarūpa. Though he was priest (purohita) of the gods, he was partial to the asuras; being told that the asuras too should be given a share in sacrifices and the like, Indra understood this, and — thinking that this Viśvarūpa, as time went on, would give his own heavenly overlordship to the asuras — killed this Viśvarūpa, who sided with the asuras. In anger at his son's slaying, Tvaṣṭṛ wished for a son who might kill Indra, and performed a sacrifice for it. At this sacrifice he did not invite Indra for the soma-drinking. Indra was told: "Tvaṣṭṛ is not inviting you; you killed my son." Indra came to the sacrifice uninvited, by force, and drank the soma without Tvaṣṭṛ's permission. Then Tvaṣṭṛ took the remaining soma and went to the Āhavanīya fire, to complete it, and as one who kindles it, he made the offering with the mantra svāhendrasātrur vardhasva — 'may the slayer of Indra grow', a son who should kill Indra. But because the word indraśātruḥ was pronounced with the wrong accent, the sense of the mantra changed: instead of 'the slayer of Indra' [a tatpuruṣa] it became 'he whose slayer is Indra' [a bahuvrīhi] — and so was born a son named Vṛtra, who was to be slain by Indra. In the meantime Agni, installed in the sacrifice, [realising] that the Vṛtra born of the sacrifice would go up into the upper world and trouble the gods, broke up the sacrifice before its completion. [The sacrificial fire, blazing, appears brilliantly; if it flares, that signals the success of the wish of the sacrificer; but Agni burning dimly signals disaster for the sacrificer.] So Vṛtra, produced from the sacrificial offering, became the one to be slain by Indra. Then Vṛtra swiftly spread, pervading the whole world, like an arrow shot from a bow growing in size as it falls; so, pervading the world by the growth of his body, he was called Vṛtra. Seeing this, Indra was afraid; Tvaṣṭṛ too felt fear. Then Tvaṣṭṛ made a divine thunderbolt (vajra), consecrated it with a mantra and gave it to Indra. Indra had no strength even to lift that mighty thunderbolt. Seeing this, while he wondered what to do, Viṣṇu appeared before Indra. Then Indra prayed to Viṣṇu thus: "O Viṣṇu, seeing the power of Vṛtra I am much afraid; I have not even the strength to lift this thunderbolt in my hand; let us two together take away the all-pervading power in Vṛtra; for this you must help me." When Viṣṇu agreed to do so, he divided his body (or his own power) into three parts and placed them in earth, antarikṣa and heaven.

Then Indra, who was on the earth, accompanied by the third part of Viṣṇu's body which had entered the thunderbolt, picked up the vajra in his hand. Then Vṛtra, seized with fear, addressed Indra: "O Indra, do not strike my body; I will give you all my strength which pervades the earth." So saying he gave Indra all his power on the earth; Indra accepted it and gave it to Viṣṇu; Viṣṇu accepted it. In the same way Indra took Vṛtra's power in antarikṣa and in heaven and gave it to Viṣṇu. Afterwards Vṛtra said to Indra: "Let us two make peace; give me leave to enter your body." Indra said: "If I let you enter my body, you will eat me up." Vṛtra: "No; I shall stay in your stomach, as the fire of digestion, cooking the food you eat, for your enjoyment." So he entered Indra's body. From that time Vṛtra, in the stomachs of men, gives hunger to living beings. As said before, since Indra, having taken threefold strength from Vṛtra, gave it to Viṣṇu, the oblation offered with reference to Indra and Viṣṇu is called Indrāviṣṇū tridhātu, the 'threefold' puroḍāśa; and when such oblations are made, Indra and Viṣṇu are invited together and the homa performed. This tale shows Viṣṇu's deeds and Viṣṇu's friendship with Indra; hence the commentator has cited this hymn [rik].

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ परमं पदम् — the highest place. The commentator explains it as svarga. Skandasvāmin, taking viṣṇu as the Āditya, explains viṣṇoḡ paramaṡ padam as the shining disc of the sun. Some, following the Purāṇas, understand Viṣṇu's highest abode as Vaikuṇṡha-loka; but that Purāṇic sense does not fit here. The author of the Vedārthayatna takes padam in the sense trīṇi padā ['three steps'], as said earlier. The words paramaṡ padam occur again in the next rik. दिवीव चक्षुराततम् — the eye fixed in the sky can see up to a very great distance; that is, as one whose eye ranges over very distant things, so the learned have the power to see — to know — Viṣṇu's best abode.

Translation: "That highest place of Viṣṇu, spoken of before — the viprāsaḥ, the wise, kindle it — they illumine it fully. What sort of men? Vipanyavaḥ: pre-eminent praisers; jāgrvāṃsaḥ: awake, vigilant, being free of carelessness as regards words and meanings. Viprāsaḥ: asuk augment after jas by P. 7-1-50 [ājjaser asuk]. Vipanyavaḥ: from pan in the sense of praise, the Uṇādi suffix yu by the bāhulaka rule; the accent is that of the suffix. Jāgrvāṃsaḥ: jāgr 'to cease sleeping'; kvasu for the perfect; the it that would be got through the rule on kṛ-etc. is kept off by the restriction vasv ekājāddhasām."

Note — Grammar pages 139–140, noted briefly: the words treated are viprāsaḥ [nom. pl. of vipra, with asuk by P. 7-1-50, being kit it goes to the final of the stem by P. 1-1-46; then P. 6-1-102], vipanyavaḥ [paṇa vyavahāre stutau ca, the form pan meaning 'to praise'; the Uṇādi suffix yu by P. 3-3-1 uṇādayo bahulam; the yu → ana is avoided because of the bāhulaka rule; u as the last letter; accent of the suffix], jāgrvāṃsaḥ [jāgr nidrākṣaye + liṭ → kvasu by P. 3-2-107 kvasuś ca; the doubling that P. 6-1-8 would give is not applicable in the Vedic usage; the it — the whole long discussion of neḍ vaśi kṛti P. 7-2-8, kṛṣṛbhṛvṛstudrusrusruvo liṭi P. 7-2-13 and the restriction vasvekājāddhasām P. 7-2-67 is scholastic and is not reproduced; the num augment by P. 7-1-70; the lengthening by P. 6-4-10; the anusvāra by P. 8-3-24 — resulting in jāgrvāṃsaḥ*]; numerals as read, pointers only.*

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ विपन्यवः (vipanyavaḥ) — those who praise | विप्रासः (viprāsaḥ) — the wise | विष्णोः (viṣṇoḥ) — of Viṣṇu | यत् (yat) — which, as said before | परमं पदम् (paramaṃ padam) — the highest place | तत् (tat) — that | जागृवांसः (jāgrvāṃsaḥ) — wakeful [with great vigilance] | सम् इन्धते (sam indhate) — kindle [i.e. praise] by hymns.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The wise and discerning praise abundantly by hymns that highest place of Viṣṇu which was spoken of before.

॥ English Translation ॥

The wise, vigilant and full of praises, glorify the supreme place of Vishnu.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ विप्रासः — medhāvinaḥ: the wise, discerning, learned, and the like. विपन्यवः — stutikāmāḥ: those who long to praise, who seek hymns, who praise. जागृवांसः — jāgr nīdrākṣaye: those who keep awake, who are vigilant. सम् इन्धते — they kindle, they increase brilliance, i.e. they praise by hymns and the like.

Translation: "The sūkta beginning tīvrāḥ has twenty-four riks and is the sixth [of this anuvāka]. [Anukramaṇikā:] 'Of Atri's family [?]' [the Sanskrit of this first sentence is garbled; I give only what I can read]: tīvrā — twenty-four [riks]; the first rik has Vāyu; the next two Indra-Vāyū; three have Mitra-Varuṇa; [three the Marutvatīya (Indra with the Maruts)]; [three the Viśvedevas]; [three Pūṣan]; the rest to the waters [āpyaḥ]; the last and a half to Agni [?]. The ṛṣi is the same as of the previous sūkta, Medhātithi Kāṇva (Anu. [11-9] [?]). The rik apsv antaḥ is a pura-uṣṇik (since its first pāda has twelve syllables, the definition of the pura-uṣṇik [Anu. [3-1] [?]] is fulfilled); the rik apsu me soma is an anuṣṭubh;

the three beginning idam āpaḥ pravahata are anuṣṭubhs; the remaining nineteen riks are gāyatrī, since the Anukramaṇikā rule says 'Gāyatrī at the beginning' [?] (Anu. [11-14] [?])." ² "The use of the sūkta is to be understood from the indicative marks: in the Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, on the second day, at the prāūga-śāstra, the rik tīvrāḥ somāsa is the third of the Vāyavya-tṛca; in the section dvitīyasya caturviṃśena, 'one rik, tīvrāḥ somāsa ā gaha' (Āś. [7-6] [?]); likewise in the Prṣṭhya-ṣaḍaha, on the second day, at the prauga."

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ The sūkta tīvrāḥ is the sixth sūkta in the fifth anuvāka and has twenty-four riks. About this sūkta the Anukramaṇikā says: in this sūkta of twenty-four riks beginning tīvrā, the first rik has the Vāyu deity; the next two riks Indra and Vāyu; the next three Mitra and Varuṇa; the next three Indra and the Maruts; [the three that follow, Pūṣan]; the next seven-and-a-half riks the Āpaḥ (waters); and the last one-and-a-half riks Agni. ³ As to the metre, eighteen riks from the first are in the Gāyatrī metre; the nineteenth rik, beginning apsv antaḥ, is a pura-uṣṇik; the twentieth and from the twenty-second to the twenty-fourth are anuṣṭubh; the twenty-first is called pratiṣṭhā. The ṛṣi is Medhātithi Kāṇva, the ṛṣi of the preceding sūkta.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (हे) वायो ((he) vāyo) — O Vāyu | इमे सोमासः (ime somāsaḥ) — these soma-juices | तीव्राः (tīvrāḥ) — very strong [or: of much essence] | आशीर्वन्तः (āśīrvantaḥ) — accompanied by the āśīr substances, curd, barley and the like | सुताः (sutāḥ) — prepared so as to be drunk before | प्रस्थितान् (prasthitān) — taken to the northern altar [of the sacrifice] | तान् (tān) — those juices | पिब (piba) — drink | आ गहि (ā gahi) — come.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Vāyu! These soma-juices are mixed with curd and the like, and are very strong. For your drinking they have been prepared in this way and brought to the northern altar. Drink them.

॥ English Translation ॥ ⁶

These intoxicating Soma juice flavoured with milk, barley, and butter milk are extracted and placed for your use. O Vayu, drink those Soma juices.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ तीव्राः — the commentator has explained this word, in the passage on 'abundance of power', [in some places in this sense]; Skandasvāmin explains it as 'pungent' (kaṭuka) or 'bitter' (kahiyāna); Veṅkaṭamādhava as 'that which causes intoxication'; Wilson and the author of the Vedārthayātna translate it 'Sharps'. Of these various meanings Veṅkaṭamādhava's is the most appropriate; for this word the sense 'essence-rich, highly concentrated, intoxicating' is best suited. आशीर्वन्तः — to make the soma-juice agreeable, it is the custom to mix with it milk, curd and barley; these mixed substances are called āśīr-dravyas; soma-juice mixed with milk is called gavāśīr, mixed with curd, dadhyāśīr, mixed with barley (yava), yavāśīr. Wilson has translated the word 'blessing-bearing'; that does not appear correct.

Translation: "The viprāḥ — the wise: priests and sacrificers — invoke Indra and Vāyu ūtaye, for protection. What kind? Manojuvā: swift as the mind; sahasrākṣā: having a thousand eyes. Or, [the epithet 'thousand-eyed' belongs to Indra alone, and is applied to Vāyu as well, by the chatrin analogy ('those with umbrellas')]. Dhiyaspatī: the two protectors of rites [or of the ॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ विप्राः (viprāḥ) — the intelligent [priests and sacrificers] | मनोजुवा (manojuvā) — swift as the mind | सहस्राक्ष (sahasrākṣā) — with a thousand eyes | धियस्पती (dhiyaspatī) — lords of rites or of the intellect | इन्द्रवायू (indravāyū) — Indra and Vāyu | ऊतये (ūtaye) — for protection | हवन्ते (havante) — invoke.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Indra and Vāyu are swift as the mind, have a thousand eyes, and are lords of rites or of the intellect; such Indra and Vāyu are invoked by the wise for protection.

॥ English Translation ॥

The wise invoke for protection Indra and Vayu who are swift as thought, who have a thousand eyes and who are the lords of the pious acts (or of mind).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ मनोजुवा — mana iva vegayuktau: swift as the mind. However distant a thing is, the mind can think of it in a moment; hence it is the custom, when describing great speed, to use the comparison 'as swift as the mind'. सहस्राक्ष — sahasram akṣiṇī yayos tau: those with a thousand eyes. Both in the Purāṇas and in later Sanskrit it is customary to call Indra sahasrākṣa. In the Veda, why should there be such a [belief]? Indra is in heaven (in such a place), where the thousand constellations shine like [his] eyes; hence, from Indra's being called sahasranayanopeta ('provided with a thousand eyes'), this custom seems to have arisen. Here, though sahasrākṣa suits Indra, applying the epithet to Vāyu also is, the author says, not quite proper. Possibly because of Indra's companionship, or because Vāyu, being all-pervading, is able to see everything, the poet has addressed Vāyu too as sahasrākṣa. Just as the word manojuvā applies to Vāyu and is [better] applied also to Indra, so here the vocative [dual] is used. The chief meaning is that the word manojuvā applies chiefly to Vāyu, who always moves or has the habit of moving; the word sahasrākṣa applies to Indra. But these words are used here as epithets praising both Indra and Vāyu. धियस्पती — dhī means 'act' (karma) or 'intellect' (prajñā). So dhiyaspatī means 'the two protectors who see that the rites we perform, the sacrifices and so on, are completed without hindrance', or 'who see that our intellect does not become attached to evil acts', or 'who impel our intellect to be attached to good deeds'. The meaning of such words as śubhaspatī, jyotiṣaspatī, vācaspatī, śavasaspatī may also be understood in this way.

Translation: "On the twenty-fourth day [of the Soma-sacrifice], at the morning pressing, in the Maitrāvaruṇa-śastra, the tṛca beginning mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe is a padaśastrotrīya; so it is laid down in the section caturviṃśa: 'ā no mitrāvaruṇā, mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe' (Āś. [6-3] [?]). In the Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha too, at the morning pressing, this tṛca is for the āvāpa [insertion] of the Maitrāvaruṇa [priest] — in the section abhiplavaṣaḍahānī: 'having left aside the vāpas, ... mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe' (Āś. [8-5] [?]). As the prasthita-yājyā of the Maitrāvaruṇa at the morning pressing, this rik mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe is used; the Praśāstr ... idaṃ te saumyaṃ madhu mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe (Āś. [3-8] [?]).

We, the performers, invoke both Mitra and Varuṇa for the drinking of soma. What are those two like? Jajñānā: manifest at the place of the rite; pūṭadakṣasā: of pure strength."

॥ English Translation ॥

We invoke Mitra and Varuna, present (at our Sacrifice) and of pure strength that they may drink Soma.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ Application. The commentator states the application of this mantra thus: on the twenty-fourth day [of the ṣaḍaha], at the morning pressing, in reciting the Maitrāvaruṇa-śāstra mantras, the tr̥ca beginning mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe is to be used for the ṣaḍaha-stotriya mantras; in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section caturviṃśe, it is said that the riks ā no mitrāvaruṇā (Ṛ. Saṃ. [3-62-?]) and mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-23-4) are to be used. In the Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha too, for the Maitrāvaruṇa-stotra at the morning pressing together [with the prātaḥsavana], this trca is to be used, as stated in the section abhiplavaṣaḍahāni by the sūtra pariśiṣyānnānāvāpān uddhṛtya mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe (Āś. [8-5]). And in the homa and other rites connected with Mitra and Varuṇa, at the morning pressing this rik mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe is to be used as the yājyā mantra, as stated in the section brāhmaṇācchaṃsī of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the sūtra idaṃ te saumyaṃ madhu (Ṛ. Saṃ. [8-?-?]) mitraṃ vayaṃ havāmahe (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-23-4).

मित्रम् — the deity Mitra. Ordinarily the two deities Mitra and Varuṇa are invited together; but though that is the main practice, it is also seen that they are separately named and praised on many occasions. On the word mitra Yāska's explanation is as follows:

मित्रः । मित्रे प्रमीतेस्त्रायते (नि. [१०-२१] [?])

mitraḥ | mitre pramīter trāyate — "Mitra: from pra-mī 'to die' and trai 'to protect'" — Mitra is so called because he protects [those in danger of death]; that is, he protects all the worlds by giving rain. And:

सं मिन्वानो द्रवतीति वा ॥ saṃ minvāno dravatīti vā — "or because he flows (dravati) [pouring] together (saṃ minvānaḥ)" — in every place he makes the world moist by giving water. And:

मेदयतेर्वा ॥ (मेदयते — स्नेहार्थस्य)

medayater vā — "or from medayati, 'he makes unctuous'" — because he makes all things moist with water; hence Mitra. After giving this explanation, in order to illustrate that Mitra protects the earth, the author cites:

मित्रो जनान्यातयति ब्रुवाणो मित्रो दाधार पृथिवीमुत द्याम् । मित्रः कृष्टीरनिमिषाभि चष्टे
मित्राय हव्यं घृतवज्जुहोत ॥ (ऋ. सं. ३-५९-१)

mitro janān yātayati bruvāṇo mitro dādāhāra pṛthivīm uta dyām | mitraḥ kṛṣṭīr animiṣābhi caṣṭe mitrāya havyaṃ ghṛtavaj juhota | | — "Mitra, speaking, sets men to work; Mitra has upheld the earth and the sky; Mitra looks upon the peoples with unwinking eye; to Mitra offer the oblation with ghee." ⁷ (Ni. [10-22] [?])

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ मरुत्वन्तम् (marutvantam) — endowed with the deities Maruts | इन्द्रम् (indram) — Indra | सोमपीतये (somapītaye) — for the drinking of soma | आ हवामहे (ā havāmahe) — we invoke [that Indra] | गणेन (gaṇena) — with the host of the Maruts | सजूः (sajūḥ) — together | तृप्पतु (tṛmpatu) — may he be satisfied.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

We invoke Indra, who is united with the Marut deities, for the drinking of soma. May that Indra, together with the Maruts, come here, drink the soma and attain satisfaction.

॥ English Translation ॥

We invoke Indra with his Maruts to drink the Soma-juice; may he be satisfied with his host (of Maruts).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣaya-gaṇu (Special Topics) ॥ सजूः तृप्पतु — juṣī prītisevanayoḥ; samānā prītir yasya sajūḥ — 'he whose satisfaction is the same'. [The sense:] may Indra and the Marut deities attain satisfaction equally — that is, may both be satisfied. An objection is raised: if sajūḥ means 'having equal satisfaction' and tṛmpatu means 'let him be satisfied', the words say the same thing twice, and there is the fault of repetition. The answer: such usages are customary in the Veda, and since they are common they are not to be reckoned as faults.

पृश्निमातरः

— the commentator explains this word as 'sons of the earth of many colours', and quotes as an example:

पृश्नेः पुत्रा उपमासो रभिष्ठाः स्वया मत्या मरुतः सं मिमिक्षुः ॥ (ऋ. सं. [३-२६-५] [?])

prśneḥ putrā upamāso rabhiṣṭhāḥ svayā matyā marutaḥ saṃ mimikṣuḥ || — "The sons of Pṛśni, the best, the most impetuous, the Maruts, by their own wisdom [have mingled together]."

In explaining the words prśneḥ putrāḥ of that rik he renders them gorūpāyā bhūmeḥ antarikṣasya vā putrasthānīyāḥ — 'sons of the earth in the form of a cow, or of the antarikṣa'. Skandasvāmin: prśnir iti dyunāma; dyaus mātā yeṣāṃ marutāṃ te prśnimātaraḥ — 'Pṛśni is a name of heaven; those Maruts whose mother is heaven are prśnimātaraḥ': i.e. sons of Pṛśni, of heaven or of the antarikṣa; since the Maruts move in the antarikṣa, to say that they are born of it is proper. Yāska explains the word thus:

स्वः । पृश्निः । नाकः । गौः । विष्टपं । नभ इति षट् साधारणानि । साधारणान्युत्तराणि दिवस्त्राद्यादित्यस्य [?] ॥ (नि. [२-१४] [?])

svaḥ | prśniḥ | nākaḥ | gauḥ | viṣṭapaṃ | nabha iti ṣaṭ sādharmaṇāni | sādharmaṇāny uttarāṇi divas trādityasya [?] || — "Svar, prśni, nāka, go, viṣṭapa, nabhas — these six are common [names of heaven and of the Āditya]" (Ni. [2-14] [?]). And:

पृश्निरादित्यो भवति । प्राशनुते एनं वर्ण इति नैरुक्ताः । संस्पृष्टा रसान् । संस्पृष्टा भासं ज्योतिषाम् । संस्पृष्टो भासेति वा । अथ द्यौः संस्पृष्टा ज्योतिर्भिः पुण्यकृद्भिश्च ॥ (नि. [२-१४] [?])

*prśnir ādityo bhavati | prāśnute enaṃ varṇa iti nairuktāḥ |
 saṃspraṣṭā rasān | saṃspraṣṭā bhāsaṃ jyotiṣām | saṃsprṣṭo
 bhāseti vā | atha dyauḥ saṃsprṣṭā jyotirbhiḥ punyakṛdbhiś ca ||*
 — "Pṛśni is the Āditya; 'colour [light] pervades him', say the Nairuktas; [he is] the one that touches the sap [of the waters]; the one who touches the light of the luminaries; or the one touched by the light; and heaven is that which is touched by lights and by those who have done good." ¹⁴ That is: Pṛśni means the Āditya — the Nirukta-writers say the Āditya because his brilliant light pervades the whole; saṃspraṣṭā rasān: he touches the saps [of the waters] always, the work of taking the sap of the waters; since the Āditya, as the cause, gives water in the form of rain, he is called Pṛśni. Or saṃspraṣṭā bhāsaṃ jyotiṣām: the light of planets, stars, moon and the like are dimmed by the sun; or saṃsprṣṭo bhāseti vā: he is Pṛśni because he pervades everywhere with his own light. Then Pṛśni means dyauḥ ['heaven'], for it is touched by lights and by the virtuous: Pṛśni is heaven (svarga), [reached] by brilliance and by those who have merit. This is Yāska's explanation; accordingly, taking prśni to mean dyauḥ — svarga, antarikṣa — it is correct to say of the word prśnimātaraḥ that they are sons of heaven — born in the antarikṣa — and so Yāska is followed.

On the Marut-hymn yad dyāvo indraḥ prśnimātaro martāsaḥ syātana (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-38-4), the commentator [on the phrase prśnimātaraḥ] says prśninām akadhenuputrā marutaḥ, 'the Maruts, sons of the cow named Pṛśni' [the reading is doubtful]. In many places where the Maruts are praised the word prśnimātaraḥ is seen; so it may be said confidently that this word is used for these deities in one fixed sense. The author lists the riks in the Ṛgveda where the word occurs (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-38-4; 1-23-10 [this rik]; 1-64-2 [?]; 1-85-2 [?]; 5-52-16 [?]; 5-57-3 [?]; 8-7-3 [?]; 8-20-1 [?] and others — the numerals as I read them from the

(The ṛk-numerals printed under these quotations are small and are given only as best read, marked [?].) Since in all these riks the word pṛśnimātaraḥ is explained as 'Maruts', it can be said that the word has been used in one fixed sense for these deities.

॥ English Translation ॥

May the Maruts born from the lightning in the resplendent region protect us and make us happy.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ हस्कारात् — hase hasane atra tu prakāśamātre vartate: though the root has means 'to laugh', the commentator says that here it is used in the sense of 'brightness'; haḥ + kārāt — 'that which makes light'. Skandasvāmin takes haḥ as a word expressing the cry of pain made by people when they suffer; for this rik he explains: 'may the Maruts, having removed the cries of distress of men, making the cloud rain, protect us and give us happiness.' विद्युतः — viśeṣeṇa dīpyamānāt: 'from the one that shines specially'; for this word the meaning 'from lightning' may also be given. परि अतः जाताः — born in the upper region of the antarikṣa, which is spread over by light and lightning — that is, in the antarikṣa above the earth — the Marut deities. Since the movement of the Marut deities is always in the antarikṣa, it may be a usage that they are said to be born in the antarikṣa.

Translation: "O Pūṣan! Bring (ā hara — [the verb is to be supplied]) from heaven (divaḥ, from the heavenly world) the soma — citrabarhiṣam (accompanied by variegated darbha grass), dharuṇam (the support of the sacrifice). Pūṣan is qualified: āghṛṇe, 'O thou of radiant light that has come'. An illustration: O aja — mover! — as in the world someone, having sought for a lost animal in the great forest and the like, brings it back. Āghṛṇe: from ghṛ kṣaraṇadīptyoḥ ['to flow, to shine'] with the Uṇādi suffix

Note — Grammar page 190, noted briefly: the words treated are āghṛṇe [ghṛ kṣaraṇadīptyoḥ + ni — Uṇ. 4-[?]] ghṛṇi pr̥śni pār̥śni..., the same Uṇādi group quoted for pr̥śni under Rik 10; the meaning is explained by R. Saṃ. 1-23-10 ugrā hi pr̥śnimātarah; the nipātana of ṇ for n by the vārttika ṛvarṇān nasya ṇatvaṃ vācyam; the compound with ā by P. 2-2-18; no lowering of the vocative's accent because it is the first of the second pāda — rather P. 8-1-72 does not apply — and in the sixth-adhyāya sūtra āmantritasya ca (P. 6-1-198) it takes first-syllable acute], dharuṇam [dhṛṇ dhāraṇe + ṇic → dhāri, then unan (Uṇ. 3-[?]) with loss of ṇic, guṇa and raparatva; the n → ṇ by P. 8-4-2 aṭkupvāṇnumvyavāye 'pi; the Uṇ. rule ādyudāttaś ca is overridden by P. 3-1-3 ādyudāttaś ca... the accent of the suffix by vyatyayo bahulam], divah [the discussion of the sūtra P. 6-1-171 ūdidampadādyappumraidyubhyaḥ: the words div etc. take acute on the case-ending; the ūṭh element], aja [from aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ आघृणे (āghṛṇe) — O luminous one | पूषन् (pūṣan) — O Pūṣan | अज (aja) — O mover | चित्रबर्हिषम् (citrabarhiṣam) — with variegated darbha | धरुणम् (dharuṇam) — the soma, support of the sacrifice | दिवः (divah) — from heaven | नष्टम् (naṣṭam) — lost | पशुम् (paśum) — animal | यथा (yathā) — as | (आ हरति) (ā harati) — one brings back | आ [हर] (ā [hara]) — [likewise] bring.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O luminous Pūṣan! Since you move quickly, bring us from heaven the soma, which supports the sacrifice and is accompanied by variegated darbha, as one seeks out an animal lost in the world and brings it back.

॥ English Translation ॥

Resplendent and swift-moving Pushan, bring from heaven the Soma juice with the variegated sacred grass as a man brings back a stray animal.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ The sense of this rik is slightly loose: 'O Pūṣan, since you are of great brilliance and swift motion, bring us from heaven the variegated-darbha, sacrifice-supporting soma, as one seeks and brings back a lost animal (cattle, goat, etc.) in the world.' That is the chief meaning.

पूषन् — the word pūṣā is read among the twenty-one words for the earth, beginning gauḥ, gmā, jmā (Nighaṇṭu [1-1] [?]), so pūṣā can also mean earth. Here it is the deity Pūṣan, who is well known as the one who seeks and brings back lost things; hence many riks describe him in this way. On this word Yāska explains:

पूषा । अथ यद्रश्मिपोषं पुष्यति तत्पूषा भवति ॥ (नि. [१२-१६] [?])

pūṣā | atha yad raśmipoṣaṃ puṣyati tat pūṣā bhavati | — "Pūṣan: since he nourishes [the world] with the nourishment of rays, he is Pūṣan" (Ni. [12-16] [?]) — that is, he is called Pūṣan because he is full of rays; Pūṣan is one of the twelve Ādityas, so he is said to be a special form of the Sun. Hence in describing this deity special epithets like tejasvin (brilliant), prakāśamāna, dīptiyukta are used. And Yāska has included ajāśvaḥ pūṣṇaḥ (Ni. [?]) among the ādiṣṭopayojana words — words whose meaning is explained by the context to suit the deity. For example, harī indrasya; rāśabhā aśvinoḥ; niyutaḥ vāyoḥ, etc.: the word harī ('two bay horses') in the Veda is used only for Indra's horses; so also the word rāśabha ('ass') in praise of the Āśvins, and the word niyut for Vāyu. Hence ajā is to be understood as the word used to praise the deity Pūṣan. In this rik too the word ajā is used; the commentator explains it as 'one given to motion': since the Sun (Pūṣan) moves through the three worlds, and sees everything, 'given to motion' is natural. To justify the meaning of ajā, Yāska cites śukraṃ te anyad yajataṃ te anyat (Ṛ. Saṃ. [6-58-1]) and pathaspathaḥ paripatim vacasyā (Ṛ. Saṃ. [6-53-1]) as examples.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ राजानम् — Soma is called rājan ('king') by custom. Such usage is seen more in the Yajurveda than in the Rgveda:

and so on, with many examples. In the first prapāṭhaka [anuvāka] of the second chapter, sixth kāṇḍa of the Yajurveda (Tai. Saṃ. [6-1-1]) it is described that Soma is king, and the metres, Gāyatrī etc., are his servants.

अपगूळहम् — atyantagūḍham: [very much hidden]; Skandasvāmin cites an old legend about this:

अत्रेतिहासमाचक्षते । असुराः सोमं राजानं दीयमानमग्नेर्हस्तादपहृत्य गुहायां न्यदधुः । तं पर्येषमाणा अन्ये देवा नाविदन् । पूषा त्वविन्दत् ॥

The other gods, though they sought him all round, did not find him; but Pūṣan found him." ¹⁸ That is, the asuras seized soma from Agni's hand and hid him in a very secret cave; the gods could not find him though they searched; Pūṣan found and brought him.

18. my translation of the Kannada exposition of Skandasvāmin's Sanskrit; the exact Sanskrit wording as printed is partly doubtful

गुहा हितम् — 'placed in a cave', i.e. in a hidden place difficult of access. Here guhā may be taken as guhāyām or as 'secret place'. In the Ṛgveda and in the Upaniṣads the expression guhā hitam is customary for something placed in a secret place unknown to anyone. Examples:

गुहा त्रीणि निहिता नेङ्गयन्ति तुरीयं वाचो मनुष्या वदन्ति ॥ (ऋ. सं. १-१६४-४५) guhā trīṇi nihitā neṅgayanti turīyaṃ vāco manuṣyā vadanti || —

The illustration: gobhir yavaṃ na carkṛṣat — as with oxen one ploughs [the field] again and again for barley. Na is here in the sense of comparison: as the field is ploughed repeatedly each year for the sake of barley."

Note — The commentary in the middle of this passage is read with doubt. Grammar pages 194–199, noted briefly: the words treated are mahyam [yuṣmad/asmad + ñe: mahyam from asmad by P. 7-2-95 tubhyamahyau ñayi, with am for ñe, P. 7-1-28 ñer yaḥ... the ending in the Veda treated by P. 6-1-107 ami pūrvaḥ; the accent by P. 6-1-168 jayi ca], indubhiḥ [undī kledane + u, Uṇ. 1-13 under icca ādeḥ — the nit accent], yuktān [yuj + kta; acc. pl.; in the Saṃhitā the n before the ṭ... by P. 8-3-7 naś chavy aprasān and 8-3-1-?: P. 6-3-135 dīrghāt ṭi samānapāde, giving yuktām̐], anuseṣidhat [ṣidhu gatyām with yañ in the sense of repetition, yañ-luk; reduplication; vowel e; ṣatva by P. 8-3-59 ādeṣapratyayayoḥ; a long, scholastic discussion on whether the san-yañ endings count as dhātu (P. 3-1-32 sanādyantā dhātavaḥ), the luk, and whether the num augment is blocked by P. 7-1-78 nābhyastācchatuḥ; the accent P. 6-1-189 abhyastānām ādiḥ — so the first syllable has the acute], gobhiḥ [acc. ॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

As farmers plough the field again and again with oxen to raise barley, may that Pūṣan cause the six seasons, with the soma-sacrifices that are the chief thing in the sacrifice, to go in their regular order for me.

॥ English Translation ॥

And he has brought to me successively the six (seasons) connected with the drops of the Soma juice as a man repeatedly ploughs a field with bullocks for the sake of barley.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ The sense of this rik is not well fitted together, and the simile too is not good. The purport may be: just as, for the sake of raising barley, farmers plough the earth step by step again and again, so [the six seasons] spring and the rest — may our soma sacrifices come step by step in those seasons. Since the seasons, spring and the rest, come round each year, a doubt of repetition arose; to raise barley the field must be ploughed repeatedly; so this simile may be given to suggest the idea of repetition. The word ṣaṭ in this rik means only the six seasons, as the commentator explains. इन्दुभिः — the drops of the soma-juice, i.e. the soma-juice; since the juice, being squeezed, falls drop by drop, it is customary to call it indavaḥ ('drops'). गोभिः — the word means 'with cattle', but here, according to the commentator and Skandasvāmin, it should be understood as 'with oxen, the means of agriculture'. न — this word is used here in the sense of comparison.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अध्वरीयताम् (adhvariṇyatām) — of us who look forward to performing the sacrifice | जामयः (jāmayah) — doing good like kinsmen | अम्बयः (ambayah) — in the form of mothers, the waters (the deities of water) | पयः (payah) — [to] the milk of cows | मधुना (madhunā) — with sweetness | पृञ्चतीः (pr̥ñcatīḥ) — mixing | अध्वभिः (adhvabhiḥ) — by the paths to the place of divine sacrifice | यन्ति (yanti) — flow.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The waters (milk) are like mothers to us who look forward to the sacrifice; they do good like kinsmen; they give sweetness to the milk of cows. Such waters flow along our paths.

॥ English Translation ॥

The Sacred waters (dear mothers) of the Sacrificers are flowing by the way mixing the milk (of cows) with sweetness.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ अम्बयः — in the Kauṣītaki-brāhmaṇa the meaning of the word ambaya is given as 'waters': ambayo yanty adhvabhir ity āpo vā ambayaḥ. As a mother is called ambā, it is customary that here the waters are addressed with a word expressing affection. In the Ṛgveda, the deities presiding over water — or the waters themselves — are worshipped as goddesses in āpo devīḥ, and it is the custom to address them in the plural feminine. These hymns to the water-deity are deep in meaning, full of significance, and, with their devotion, very beautiful.

Note — Grammar pages 206–211, noted briefly: the words treated are amūḥ, yāḥ, upa (accent), sūrye, yābhiḥ, hinvantu and adhvaram. By far the greater part of these six pages is one long scholastic discussion of the Pāṇinian rule P. 6-1-171 sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ ('after a monosyllabic stem the case-ending from the instrumental onward takes the acute') and its prohibition P. 6-1-182 na gośvan-sāvavarṇa-rāḍ-aṅkru-ṅkr-dṛdbhyaḥ: it asks whether the word sau in the sūtra means the nominative singular only or also the locative plural su; the vārttika sau ca and the argument of the Mahābhāṣya on grahaṇa; the forms yāta, rāma and doṣabhyām, abhyām, ebhiḥ, eṣām, śvabhiḥ, śunā are examined, and the role of the paribhāṣā svaravidhau vyañjanam avidyamānavat. It is purely technical, bears on the accent of yābhiḥ only, and is characterized, not transcribed; the discussion ends (p. 211) by concluding that the case-ending after yā takes no acute here, so yābhiḥ has the acute on yā only. The verbal forms: hinvantu [hi gatau vṛddhau ca, loṭ, nu by P. 3-1-73 svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ? — here P. 3-1-79 tanādikṛñbhya uḥ [?] — and the accent], adhvaram [as in Rik 16]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

May those waters that are near the sun — or those near which the sun himself stays — carry out our sacrifice gladly.

॥ English Translation ॥

Those sacred waters who are near the sun or to whom the sun is near, may they promote our sacrifice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ या उप सूर्ये — the waters near the sun are, that is, the water that is drawn up by the sun's rays (from the ocean) and stands in the antarikṣa in the form of clouds. In the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka too there is a śruti sentence, āpaḥ sūrye samāhitāḥ ('the waters are placed in the sun'). Yābhir vā sūryaḥ saha has the same meaning: the commentator has explained the cases and the words in a different way. Or, since rays of the sun fall on the waters of rivers and the like, it may be said that the sun is near the water; this mantra suggests the close relation between water and the sun.

Translation: "In the waters, even within (antaḥ, in the middle), is amṛta — the nectar; for the waters are its cause; as another śruti says, 'the waters are indeed amṛta'. Likewise, in the waters is bheṣaja — medicine — since they cook [i.e. digest] the food that increases the hunger-fire [?]. And for the praśasti — the praise — of such waters, the deities, O devāḥ — O priests, the Brahmins and the rest, for 'these Brahmins are gods visibly' says another śruti — become vājinaḥ: swift; praise quickly. Apsu: the locative plural, acute by ūḍidam...; in the Samhitā the yaṇ of an udātta becomes svarita. Amṛtam: by P. 6-2-116 jaramaramitramṛtāḥ the second member's first syllable is acute. Prasāstaye: the gati keeps its accent by P. 6-2-50 [?]. Bhavata: the preceding vocative is as if non-existent (P. 8-1-72 āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat); being at the beginning of the pāda, the verb's accent is not lowered."

In water there is nectar; in water there is the medicine that cures disease. Therefore, O all gods, priests and the rest, be quickly ready to praise those waters.

॥ English Translation ॥

(There is) ambrosia in the waters, (there is) medicine in the waters; therefore divine priests, be prompt in their praise.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

The qualities and pre-eminence of water are described in great variety in the śruti passage of the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka:

आपो वा इदं सर्वं विश्वा भूतान्यापः प्राणा वा आपः पशव आपोऽन्नमापोऽमृतमापः सम्राडापो विराडापः स्वराडापश्छन्दास्यापो ज्योतीष्यापो यजूष्यापः सत्यमापः सर्वा देवता आपो भूर्भुवः सुवरापः ओम् ॥

āpo vā idam sarvaṁ viśvā bhūtāny āpaḥ prāṇā vā āpaḥ paśava āpo 'nnam āpo 'mṛtam āpaḥ samrāḍ āpo virāḍ āpaḥ svarāḍ āpaś chandāṁsy āpo jyotīṁsy āpo yajūṁsy āpaḥ satyam āpaḥ sarvā devatā āpo bhūr bhuvāḥ suvar āpa om || — "The waters are all this, all beings; the waters are breath; the waters are cattle, food, amṛta; the waters are samrāj, virāj, svarāj; the waters are the metres, the lights, the yajus formulas, the truth; the waters are all the deities; bhūr bhuvāḥ suvar; the waters; om." ²⁰

That is, everything is produced from water. All living beings and animals live by water; water is the support of all living things, even trees and plants; if there were no water no creature could live. Hence it is said that water is life (prāṇa). From water herbs, trees and the vegetable kingdom grow, so water is the food of living beings, directly and indirectly. Without food some can live some days; without water none can live. Since much of our body is water — blood and the like are liquid — water is essential to life. Hence to call water amṛta is no exaggeration. Since water is one of the five elements, and since the śruti says apo vā idam agre salilam āsīt ('in the beginning this was water'), it is proper to say that all things are produced from water or that water is the root of all things; hence śruti declares water to be the form of all the deities.

20. my rendering; the Sanskrit is printed with a few small variants from the standard text — I have kept the printed words as far as legible अमृतं भेषजम् — water is called amṛta because it is indispensable to living things and is the support of life. Since the word apaḥ indicates things in liquid form, it is also reasonable to call water amṛta. Many diseases can be cured with water. And since herbs are generally mixed with water in liquid form, it is right to say that the herbs are in the water. How important water is in curing disease is described at length in medical books such as the Āyurveda.

देवाः — though addressed to the devas, the word can be taken as meaning the priests and sacrificers, and also the deities; or as the Brahmin priests, who are visible deities: the śruti passages say ete vai devāḥ pratyakṣaṃ yad brāhmaṇāḥ ('these Brahmins are visibly the gods'), and so the Brahmins are addressed by the word deva. वाजिनः — vegavantaḥ, śīghragāminaḥ: swift, quick, without delay; or, since annaṃ vai vājaḥ ('food is vāja', śruti), 'possessing food or oblation': 'praise with offerings' may be taken as the sense.

Translation: "In the kārīrī [rite], of the second ājyabhāga (the later butter-portion), the rik apsu me is the anuvākyā; in the section varṣakāmeṣṭi: 'the riks apsv agne sadhiṣṭava [?] and apsu me somo abravīt' (Āś. [3-13] [?]) — so it is laid down. 'In the waters, within (antaḥ), are all (viśvāni) medicines (bheṣajā)', Soma, the god, said to me, the mantradraṣṭṛ seer. Likewise Soma told [me] of Agni, viśvaśambhū — the benefactor of the whole world — who is also in the waters. And so the Taittirīyas record Agni's entry into the waters: 'Agni had three elder brothers; Agni, Soma, [Varuṇa?] entered [the waters]' (Tai. Saṃ. [2-6-6-1] [?]). It is well known that the creepers and herbs, and the roots of trees and the like, being produced by rain, abide in water. Viśvabheṣajīḥ: the waters in which all medicines are — [he told of] such waters too. Bheṣajā: ā by supām suluk. Viśvaśambhuvam: [from] bhū with an included causative sense, with kvip; the accent of the first member by vyatyaya; or: 'he whose every action brings happiness'; in the bahuvrīhi P. 6-2-106 [viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām] gives the accent on the end of the first member. Āpaḥ: jas instead of śas by vyatyaya; lengthening of the penultimate by P. 6-4-11 [apṛnn...]. Viśvabheṣajīḥ: as viśvaśambhū."

Note — Grammar pages 221–222, noted briefly: the words treated are bheṣajā [jas → ā by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk...], viśvaśambhuvam [viśvasya śaṃ bhavatīti — an included causative sense of bhū, with kvip by P. 3-2-76; the loss of the su of the prātipadika; am for the accusative; uvañ by P. 6-4-88; the accent: by P. 6-2-1 the bahuvrīhi would take the first member's accent, but P. 6-2-106 bahuvrīhau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām gives the acute on the end of viśva; the Vedabhāṣya says 'vyatyayena pūrvapadāntodāttatvam'; the second explanation viśve sarve vyāpārāḥ śambhuvāḥ sukarāḥ yasya as a bahuvrīhi], āpaḥ [āpaḥ is the object of abravīt, so the accusative śas would be expected; jas stands by vyatyaya, P. 3-1-85; the penultimate lengthening by P. 6-4-11 apṛnn... [read as 'āpaḥ' with as→aḥ by P. 8-2-66, 8-3-15]], viśvabheṣajīḥ [viśvāni bheṣajāni yāsu; bheṣaja from bhī bhaye + ajip and puk — P. 3-2-... ॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अप्सु अन्तः (apsu antaḥ) — in the middle of the waters | विश्वानि (viśvāni) — all | भेषजा (bheṣajā) — the medicines which cure disease | अग्निं च (agniṃ ca) — and Agni | विश्वशम्भुवम् (viśvaśambhuvam) — one who gives happiness to the whole world | आपः (āpaḥ) — the waters | विश्वभेषजीः (viśvabheṣajīḥ) — with all medicinal herbs | सोमः (somaḥ) — the deity Soma | मे (me) — to me | अब्रवीत् (abravīt) — told.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

In the middle of the waters are all the medicines which cure disease. Agni gives happiness to the whole world. The waters are accompanied by all herbs. So the deity Soma told me.

॥ English Translation ॥

Soma has revealed to me that in the waters are all medicaments; that Agni is the benefactor of the Universe, the waters contain all the healing medicines.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Application. In the kārīrī rite, when the ājyabhāga oblation is made, this rik apsu me somo abravīt is used as puro-'nuvākyā; Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section varṣakāmeṣṭi, says that the riks apsv agne sadhiṣṭava (R. Saṃ. [8-39-?]) and apsu me somo abravīt (R. Saṃ. 1-23-20) are to be used as yājyā and puro-'nuvākyā (Āś. [3-13] [?]). The chief purport of this rik is: Soma has told me that Agni, the benefactor of the whole world, is in the waters in the form of lightning, and that all the medicines which cure the diseases of beings are in the waters themselves. As to Agni being in the water, the commentator cites the passage of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā [2-6-6], in the anuvāka agner vai trayo jyāyāṃso bhrātara āsan, the sentence so 'psuḥ prāviśat taṃ devatāḥ praiṣam aicchan ('he entered the waters; the gods sought him'); an account of this we have already given in the Ṛgveda on this subject [reference left blank in the print].

अग्निं च विश्वशंभुवम् — there is no need to describe at length the benefits to the whole world which come from Agni. Agni is not only the giver of warmth when we are cold: we use him in many other useful or essential tasks, such as cooking food. This is known to everyone from experience, so there is no great need to say more. आपश्च विश्वभेषजीः — we have already explained, under the preceding rik, the sense that water is the means of curing diseases. सोमः — for the word soma the commentator says somo devaḥ, 'the deity Soma'; soma should be understood as the deity presiding over the herbs and plants — the Moon (candra).

Translation: "At the paśu [animal-sacrifice], at the mārjana [sprinkling], this rik idam āpaḥ pra vahata is applied. In the section hutāyāṃ vapāyām: 'idam āpaḥ pravahata' (Āś. [3-9] [?]).

The same rik is applied also at the bath in the avabhṛtha rites; in the section patnīsaṃyājaiś caritvā: 'idam āpaḥ pra vahata [and] sumitryā na āpa oṣadhayaḥ santu' (Āś. [6-13] [?]). Whatever (yat kiṃ ca) sin (duritam) done through ignorance is in me, the sacrificer; or [vā] whatever hostility I have shown (abhidudroha) knowingly, on all sides; or whatever I have cursed (śepe) — abusing good people; and whatever anṛta — untruth — I have uttered: all this offence, carry (pra vahata) away; remove it from me and carry it off by the current elsewhere. Dudroha: druha jighāmsāyām [to wish to harm], perfect, with ṇal of P. 3-4-82; doubling by P. 6-1-8; shortening by P. 7-4-59. Śepe: śapa ākrośe [to curse]; present; the ātmanepada by vyatyaya; first person singular iṭ; e by P. 3-4-79 ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e."

Note — Grammar page 229, noted briefly: the words treated are mayi [the locative of asmad: mad + ni with ma-ending, P. 7-2-97 tvamāṇ ekavacane; ā + i; P. 6-1-87 ād guṇaḥ; the yat... aci rule P. 7-2-89 yo 'ci gives y; in the Vedic forms yuṣmad/asmad's final d is replaced by y before a vowel-initial case-ending, giving tvayi/mayi] and dudroha [druha jighāmsāyām; liṭ → ṇal by P. 3-4-82 parasmaipadānām ṇalatusus...; doubling P. 6-1-8; hrasva P. 7-4-59; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ P. 7-4-60 drops the h; the accent: P. 8-1-66 yadvṛttān nityam — the verb after yad is not lowered; and P. 8-1-72 pūjā — the word pūjanāt pūjitaṃ anudāttaṃ kāṣṭhādibhyaḥ; the author of the Kāśikā is cited on whether pūjita includes the abhi compound], śepe [śapa ākrośe, laṭ, the ātmanepada by vyatyaya; iṭ → e by P. 3-4-79; e for the stem vowel and loss of the reduplicate — P. 6-4-120 ata ekahalmadhye 'nādeśāder liṭi — forms śepe; no num; the accent not lowered]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ मयि (mayi) — in me, the sacrificer | यत् किं च (yat kiṃ ca) — whatever | दुरितम् (duritam) — sins done through ignorance | वा (vā) — or | अहम् (aham) — I | यत् (yat) — whomever | अभिदुद्रोह (abhidudroha) — have knowingly harmed | यत् वा शेपे (yat vā śepe) — and whom I have cursed [spoken ill of] | उत (uta) — and | अनृतम् (anṛtam) — falsehoods [which I have uttered] | इदम् (idam) — all this [sin] | आपः (āpaḥ) — O waters | प्र वहत (pra vahata) — carry off in the stream.

The sins I have committed through ignorance, or the harm I have done to anyone knowingly, or the abuse and the lies I have uttered — may the waters carry away all these in their flow.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Waters, whatever sin there is in me, whatever ill-will I may have borne to others, whatever imprecations I may have uttered, and whatever falsehood I may have told, wash it away all from me.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Application. In the animal sacrifice, to perform the sprinkling (mārjana, prokṣaṇa), the rik idam āpaḥ pravahata is to be used; Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section hutāyāṃ vapāyām, says that the rik idam āpaḥ pravahate is to be used as the sprinkling mantra (Āś. [3-9]). The same rik is used also at bathing time in the avabhṛtha [final bath] at the end of the sacrifice; stated in the section patnīsaṃyājaiś caritvā, where the mantras idam āpaḥ pra vahata and sumitryā na āpa oṣadhayaḥ santu are to be used (Āś. [6-13]).

दुरितम् — ajñānān niṣpannam kāyikaṃ pāpam: the sin done by the body through ignorance, or the sin which is the result of an act done knowingly — that is, acts such as striking someone, the sins done by physical force. अभिदुद्रोह — droha is the name for thinking evil with the mind; this is a mental sin. शेषे, अनृतम् — sins done with speech, such as cursing and telling falsehoods; this is a prayer that the flowing waters may carry away these three kinds of sin — mental, bodily and verbal.

Translation: "In the animal sacrifice, at the Āhavanīya-upasthāna, the rik āpo adyānv acāriṣam [is used]; so it is laid down in the section manotāyai saṃpreṣite: 'having come, he approaches with [the mantra] āpo adyānv acāriṣam' (Āś. [3-6] [?]). 'Today, for the avabhr̥tha [bath], I have entered (anv acāriṣam) the waters; having entered I have joined (samagasmahi) with their essence (rasena) — the essence of the waters. O Agni! payasvān — being in the water you are milk-filled — come (ā gahi) to this rite. Unite me, so bathed, with varcas — splendour."

Note — Grammar pages 230–232, noted briefly: the words treated are āpaḥ [a nominative plural used in the sense of the accusative śas, by vyatyaya], acāriṣam [cara gatau; aorist with sic; it by P. 7-2-35; the lengthening of the penultimate vowel by P. 7-2-3 ato lāntasya, since P. 7-2-4 neṭi prohibits it only where it is absent], agasmahi [saṃ + gam with the ātmanepada by P. 1-3-29 samo gamyrcchipracchisvaratyartīśrutividibhyaḥ; sic → luk not applied in the Veda (P. 2-4-80 mantre ghasahvara...); it prohibited by P. 7-2-10 ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt; P. 1-2-13 vā gamaḥ makes sic optionally kit, with the loss of the nasal], gahi [loṭ + sip → hi by P. 3-4-87; being nīt, the loss of the nasal by P. 6-4-37; hi lost by P. 6-4-105 ato heḥ; the asiddha rule P. 6-4-22 for the loss of m] and payasvān [payas + matup; vat by P. 8-2-15; nuḍ, num; vowel lengthening]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अद्य (adya) — now, today | आपः (āpaḥ) — the waters | अन्वचारिषम् (anvacāriṣam) — I have entered [for the final bath] | रसेन (rasena) — with the essence of the waters | समगस्महि (samagasmahi) — we have joined | (हे) अग्ने ((he) agne) — O Agni | पयस्वान् (payasvān) — in the water, therefore full of water | अगहि (ā gahi) — come to this rite | तम् (tam) — such a one, bathed | माम् (mā) — me | वर्चसा (varcasā) — with splendour | सं सृज (saṃ sṛja) — unite.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ For the avabhṛtha bath I have now entered the waters; all the essence in the waters has joined me. O Agni, since you abide in the waters, come to this rite and make me, who have bathed, splendid.

॥ English Translation ॥

I have this day entered into the waters; we have mingled with their essence; O Agni, existing in the waters, approach and fill me with vigour.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Application. In the animal sacrifice, at the time of worshipping the Āhavanīya fire, the rik āpo adyānv acāriṣam is to be used. This is stated in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section manotāyai saṃpreṣite, in the sūtra etyopatiṣṭhate āpo adyānv acāriṣam (Āś. [3-6]). आपः — Skandasvāmin says that āpaḥ is the nominative plural in the sense of the accusative; that is, the meaning of āpaḥ is apaḥ — the accusative. रसेन — jalasāreṇa, with the essence of water; the sense is: may the pure water remove the impurities, the internal and external faults, of my body. पयस्वान् — payasā jalena yuktaḥ, or payasi tiṣṭhatīti payasvān: 'one who abides in the water'. In the Yajurveda sentences such as so 'psv aprāviśat say that Agni, concealed, lives in the waters; hence on many occasions it is said that Agni is in the waters. The second half of this rik is addressed to Agni.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Agni! Grant me splendour, offspring and long life. May the gods, and Indra together with the seers, know the sacrificial rite I have performed.

21. Grammar pages 233–234, noted briefly: the words treated are vidyuh [vida jñāne, liṅ 3rd plural; jhi → jus by P. 3-4-108 jher jus; the augment yāsuṭ and the loss of its s by P. 7-2-79 liṅaḥ salopo 'nantyasya; the jus with s lost by P. 8-2-29 skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca; pararūpa by P. 6-1-96 usy apadāntāt, giving the single u; the accent: the yāsuṭ being udātta by P. 3-1-... the u of jus ... hence vidyuh is accented on the first syllable by P. 6-1-... and rutva-visarga] and saha ṛṣibhiḥ [saha ṛṣibhiḥ: ṛty akaḥ P. 6-1-128 — before ṛ a short a, i, u or r at the end of a word takes hrasva and prakṛtibhāva; hence no guṇa, saha ṛṣibhiḥ; the print says P. 6-1-128 ṛty akaḥ without further discussion]. The grammar ends at the head of p. 234 with an ornament; numerals as read, pointers only.

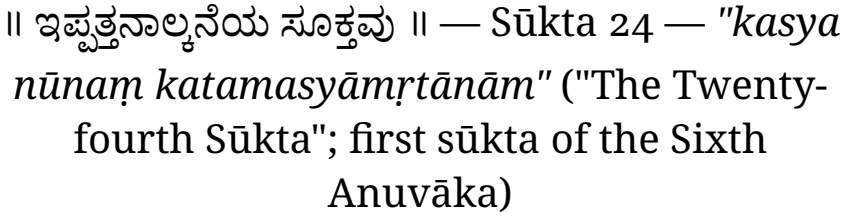

॥ English Translation ॥

O Agni, confer upon me vigour, progeny and long life; the gods may know of this my sacrifice and Indra, with the Rishis may know it.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ The sense of the first half of this rik is easily understood: Agni is prayed to grant long life, offspring and vigour (varcas). The sense of the second half is not very clear. The commentator explains vidyur me asya as 'anuṣṭhānaṃ jānīyuh' — 'may they know the rite I perform'. In the words indro vidyāt saha ṛṣibhiḥ the word ṛṣibhiḥ has been used for some reason that is again not clear. The ṛṣi's intention seems to be that this sacrifice or praise of mine be known to Indra, to the gods, and to the other seers.

॥ Close of Sūkta 23 ॥ ²²

22. p. 234, upper part: the grammar ends and an ornamental rule is printed; no colophon with a varga number appears. The headline of printed p. 234 gives "Maṇḍala 1, Aṣṭaka 1, Adhyāya 2, Sūkta 24" [numerals as printed, small].

(Printed pp. 234 lower half–294. The heading, Sāyaṇa's note and the Kannada rendering are on pp. 234–235; Rik 1 begins on p. 236.)

Translation: "In the sixth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala there are seven sūktas. Of these, the first is the sūkta of fifteen riks beginning kasya nūnam. Its seer is Śunaḥśepa, son of Ajīgarta; the metre is Triṣṭubh; the triplet abhi tvā deva is Gāyatrī. Because the first [rik] is not specified, its deity is Prajāpatya [Prajāpati] and the like; the rik agner vayam is Agni's; the triplet abhi tvā deva has Savitr; the rik bhagabhakṣasya has Bhaga [or Savitr]; the rest are Varuṇa's. As the Anukramaṇikā says: 'kasya — fifteen; Ājīgarti Śunaḥśepa — he, the adopted son of Viśvāmitra, called Devarāta; Varuṇa's, Triṣṭubh; at the beginning, [the deities are] Ka [Prajāpati] and Agni; the triplet is Savitr's and Gāyatrī; the last of it is Bhāgī [Bhaga's]' [wording of the last clause read with doubt].

At the Rājasūya, on the Abhiṣecanīya day, when the Marutvatīya is finished, this group of seven sūktas is to be recited by the Hotṛ in front of the anointed king, surrounded by his sons and the rest. So the sūtra says: 'When the Marutvatīya is finished, [the Hotṛ], seated on a golden mat to the south of the Āhavanīya, should recite the Śunaḥśepa [legend] to the anointed king surrounded by his sons and ministers' (Āś. 6-3). And the Brāhmaṇa says: 'This is the Śunaḥśepa legend with its verses: the Hotṛ, seated on a golden mat, recites it to the anointed king; the Adhvaryu responds' (Ai. Brā. 7-18)."

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ From this sūkta the sixth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala begins; it contains seven sūktas. The sūkta kasya nūnam has fifteen riks; the seer of all seven sūktas of this anuvāka is Śunaḥśepa, son of Ajīgarta, known as Devarāta, the adopted son of Viśvāmitra (the kṛtrima-putra). The sūkta has Varuṇa as its deity and Triṣṭubh as its metre. The first rik has Prajāpati (Ka) as deity; the rik agner vayam has Agni; the three riks abhi tvā deva have Savitṛ — but of these three the rik bhagabhakṣasya [the third, Rik 5] has Savitṛ or Bhaga; all the remaining riks have Varuṇa. The Anukramaṇikā says: [the quotation above]. Use: in the Rājasūya sacrifice, on the day of the anointing, after the Marutvatīya śāstra, the seven sūktas beginning kasya nūnam must be recited to the king facing him, who has been anointed and is surrounded by his sons and kinsmen. Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra says: [the sūtra above] (Āś. 6-3). The Aitareya-brāhmaṇa also says: 'The Hotṛ, seated on his golden seat, recites to the anointed king the seven sūktas, the hundred [and one] riks, beginning kasya nūnam, with the Śunaḥśepa-legend, while the king, seated on his own seat, looks on' (Ai. Brā. 7-18).

Translation: "With this rik Śunaḥśepa, bound to the sacrificial post, bewildered, wonders which god he should run to. So it is handed down: 'Come, I shall run to the gods' — and he went first to Prajāpati among the gods (Ai. Brā. 7-16). We — Śunaḥśepa by name — among the immortal gods, katamasya — of which, of what kind of god — do we think (manāmahe; we utter) the fair (cāru) name? Which god will give me, about to die, back again to great Aditi — the Earth — so that, by that gift, I, being alive [amṛta, not dead], may see my father and mother? The name Ka is Prajāpati, as the śruti says [?]; from the likeness of the word kasya here it is understood that Prajāpati is suitable for this rik. Katamasya: ḍatamac [P. 5-3-93] after kim in the sense of selection among many; the accent on the last syllable on account of cit. Amṛtānām: the end-acute that nañsubhyām would give is overridden by P. 6-2-116 [nañah jaramaramitramṛtāḥ], which gives the first syllable of the second member the acute. Manāmahe: mana jñāne with śap by vyatyaya; no nighāta because it stands at the head of the pāda. Mahyai: the case-ending acute by P. 6-1-174 [udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt]. Dāt: loss of sic by P. 2-4-77 [gātisthāghupābhūbhyah...]; the augment aṭ not present since [the verb] is joined with mā-less ... by bahulaṃ chandasi. Drśeyam: drśir prekṣaṇe, benedictive ..."

Note — Grammar pages 250–251, noted briefly: the words treated are katamasya [P. 5-3-93 vā bahūnām jātiparipraśne ḍatamac; the rule that ḍatamac also follows kim when a property or action is in question — the Kāśikā's remark that kimādīnām dvibahvarthe pratyayavidhānāt...; the Sanskrit of the printed note was too crowded to reproduce], amṛtānām [nañ-tatpuruṣa; accent P. 6-2-116], manāmahe [mana jñāne of the divādi class, which would give śyan, but śap stands by vyatyaya, P. 3-1-85; laṭ mahiṇ; the lengthening of the stem-vowel by P. 7-3-101/6-4... akṛtsārva dhātukayor dīrghah], dāt [ḍudāñ dāne, luṇ → sic → luk by P. 2-4-77 — iṭ lost; the augment aṭ absent by bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi; accent], drśeyam [drśir prekṣaṇe; the root takes a-vowel by P. 7-2-... drśer a; āśirliṇ with yāsuṭ; ā+iy; the guṇa blocked by P. 1-1-5? — the printed note says that since liṇ is ārdhadhātuka in the benedictive, śap is replaced by añ; the a-augment and guṇa are discussed]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Among the gods, who is the best? Whose name shall I utter (if I praise him) so that he may free me from this bondage and the death [sacrifice], and grant me to live again on earth? Whom shall I invoke so that I may see my father and mother again?

॥ English Translation ॥³

Of many immortal gods whose good name should we contemplate? Who will deliver us back to the vast earth that I may again behold my father and mother?

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥

In the sacrifice of King Hariścandra, the ṛṣi Śunaḥśepa — bound as a victim to the sacrificial post, seeing death before him and not knowing where to look — thinks of the gods, to be freed from his bondage, and speaks thus: of the gods there are many; of them who is best? Whose name shall I utter, or whom praise, that he may free me, who am caught by death, and let me live again on earth like the other people there? How shall I see my father and mother again after escaping this danger? Lamenting thus, he first thinks of Prajāpati; then, knowing from him that if he thinks of Agni he will be freed, he praises Agni in the next rik.

4. Reading caveat: this Sanskrit is in small, dense Kannada-script print and was read at 130 dpi without zooming. The readings in §§ 1–4 are fairly secure; those in §§ 5–7 are provisional — in a number of places the print was too crowded to read and I may have been guided by the familiar wording of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa rather than by the page, so every word there should be checked against the page at higher resolution before being relied on. Words I could not read are marked [?] or left as ellipses. The Kannada retelling that the author gives afterwards is translated in full below and is the safer guide to the sense.

Translation: "Hariścandra, the Aikṣvāka, son of Vedhas, was a king without a son. He had a hundred wives, but among them he obtained no son. The seers Parvata and Nārada lived in his house. He asked Nārada: 'What do they gain by a son, those who desire him — those who know and those who do not know? Tell me that, Nārada.' Being asked in one verse, he answered in ten: (1) The father pays off his debt in him and attains immortality, if he sees the face of the living son who is born. (2) As many enjoyments as there are on earth, in fire, in the waters for living beings — the father's share in a son is greater than these. (3) Always by sons have fathers crossed over the abundant darkness. The self is born of the self; he is the boat laden with food, to carry across. (4) What is dirt, what the skin of an antelope, what the beard, what penance? Brahmins, desire a son: he is the world beyond reproach. (5) Food is life; clothing is shelter; gold is beauty; cattle [and] marriages [are riches]; a wife is a friend; a daughter is a pitiable thing; a son is a light in the highest heaven. (6) The husband enters the wife; having become the embryo he enters the mother; renewed in her, he is born in the tenth month. (7) That is why a wife is a jāyā: because in her [the husband] is born again; she is the ābhūti, the bhūti, the receptacle of seed [last clause doubtful]. (8) The gods and the seers placed great splendour in her; the gods said to men: 'She is your mother again.' (9) 'For the sonless there is no world': all the animals know that; therefore the son mounts mother and sister [doubtful sentence]. (10) This is the broad, pleasant road, which the fathers of sons travel without sorrow; the animals and birds see it; therefore even they mate with their mothers [doubtful]. Thus he recited."

Translation: "Then [Nārada] said to him: 'Run to king Varuṇa [and say]: 'Let a son be born to me; with him I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it.' He approached king Varuṇa: 'Let a son be born to me; with him I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it.' A son was born to him, named Rohita. [Varuṇa] said to him: 'A son has indeed been born to you; sacrifice with him.' He said: 'A beast is fit for sacrifice only when it is ten days old; let him be ten days old; then I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it.' He became ten days old. [Varuṇa] said: 'He has become ten days old; sacrifice with him.' He said: 'A beast is fit for sacrifice when its teeth come; let his teeth come; then I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it.' His teeth came. [Varuṇa] said: 'His teeth have come; sacrifice with him.' He said: 'A beast is fit when its teeth fall out; let his teeth fall out; then I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it.' His teeth fell out. [Varuṇa] said: 'His teeth have fallen; sacrifice with him.' He said: 'A beast is fit when its teeth come again; let his teeth come again; then I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it.' His teeth came again. [Varuṇa] said: 'His teeth have come again; sacrifice with him.' He said: 'A kṣatriya is fit [for sacrifice] when he has become fit for armour; let him get his armour; then I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it.' He attained to [bearing] armour. [Varuṇa] said: 'He has got his armour; sacrifice with him.' [Hariścandra] said 'So be it' and called his son: 'Child, [Varuṇa] gave you to me; [with you] I shall sacrifice to him.' But [Rohita] said 'No', took his bow, and went to the forest; he wandered a year in the forest." ⁵ Translation: "Then Varuṇa seized the Aikṣvāka [Hariścandra]; he got a swelling of the belly [dropsy]. Rohita heard of it. He set out from the forest toward the village. Indra, in the form of a man, came round him and said: (1) 'There is no prosperity, Rohita, for one who has not toiled; so we have heard. The best man among men becomes bad by staying at home. Indra is the friend of the wanderer. Wander on!' 'A Brahmin told me to wander' — so he wandered a second year in the forest. He came toward the village; Indra said: (2) 'The wanderer's thighs are flowering; his soul grows, gathers fruit; all his sins are laid to rest, killed by the toil of the road. Wander on!' A third year...; (3) 'The fortune of one who sits, sits; of one who stands, stands; of one who lies, lies; of one who moves, moves. Wander on!' A fourth year...; (4) 'The Kali [age] is for the sleeper; the Dvāpara, for the one who rouses himself; the Tretā, for him who stands up; the Kṛta is attained by the wanderer. Wander on!' A fifth year...; (5) 'The wanderer finds honey, the wanderer the sweet udumbara fruit. See the glory of the Sun, who never tires of travelling. Wander on!' 'A Brahmin told me to wander' — so he wandered a sixth year in the forest."

He came to his father and said: 'Father, with this one I ransom myself.' [The father] went to king Varuṇa: 'With him I shall sacrifice to you.' 'So be it; a Brahmin [is better than] a kṣatriya,' said Varuṇa. He taught him this Rājasūya sacrificial rite; on the day of the Abhiṣecanīya they took him as the human victim." ⁶ Translation: "Viśvāmitra was his Hotṛ, Jamadagni the Adhvaryu, Vasiṣṭha the Brahman, Ayāsyā the Udgātṛ. When he had been brought forward, they could not find anyone to bind him [to the post]. Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said: 'Give me another hundred and I shall bind him.' They gave him another hundred, and he bound him. When he had been bound and the fire carried round him, they could not find anyone to slay him. Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said: 'Give me another hundred and I shall slay him.' They gave him another hundred; he went to sharpen his knife. Then Śunaḥśepa said: 'They will slay me as if I were not a man; let me run to the gods.' He went first to Prajāpati, among the gods: kasya nūnam katamasyāmṛtānām (Ṛ. 1-24-1). Prajāpati said: 'Agni is the nearest of the gods; run to him.' He went to Agni with the second rik, agner vayaṃ prathamasyāmṛtānām. Agni said: 'Savitṛ rules over the impulses (prasava); run to him.' He went to Savitṛ with the triplet abhi tvā deva savitaḥ. Savitṛ said: 'You are assigned to king Varuṇa; run to him.' He went to king Varuṇa with the thirty-one that follow [the rest of the sūkta and the next]. Varuṇa said: 'Agni is the mouth of the gods, the kindly one; praise him.' He praised Agni with the twenty-two [riks] that follow. Agni said: 'Praise the Viśvedevas.' He praised the Viśvedevas with the rik namo mahadbhyaḥ [Ṛ. 1-27-13]. The Viśvedevas said: 'Indra is the most vigorous, strongest, mightiest, best and most able to carry across of the gods; praise him.' He praised Indra with the sūkta yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ [Ṛ. 1-29] and the fifteen of the one after [Ṛ. 1-30]. Indra, pleased by the praise, gave in his mind a golden chariot; he received it with the rik śaśaṃsendra [?]. Indra said: 'Praise the two Aśvins; they will release you.' He praised the Aśvins with a triplet. The Aśvins said: 'Praise Uṣas; she will release you.' He praised Uṣas with a triplet; as each rik was being recited the bond loosened ... Translation (of what is legible): "The priests said to him ... [Śunaḥśepa was released; the sacrificial rite was completed; Agni was praised at each rite (?)]. Then Śunaḥśepa sat in Viśvāmitra's lap. Ajīgarti Sauyavasi said: 'Seer, give me my son back.' 'No,' said Viśvāmitra, 'the gods have given him to me.' Translation (of what is legible): "Viśvāmitra had a hundred and one sons: fifty older than Madhucchandā and fifty younger. The elders did not approve; [Viśvāmitra] cursed them: 'May your offspring inherit the ends [of the earth].' These are the Andhras, Puṇḍras, Śabarās, Pulindas and Mūtibas — many of the Vaiśvāmitras, mostly among the Dasyus. Madhucchandā, with the fifty, said: 'What our father decides, in that we abide; we make you the foremost; we shall follow you.' Then Viśvāmitra, pleased, praised the sons: 'You will be rich in cattle and in heroes, you who have honoured me and made me rich in heroes [?]. You Gāthins [descendants of Gāthin] with Devarāta shall be [lords]; you are all fit to prosper, my sons; this is a good word for you. Devarāta, the hero of the Kuśikas — follow him. ... The Vaiśvāmitras, united, all with one gift ... Devarāta, a seer of both inheritances; in the lordship of the Jahnus and in the divine Veda of the Gāthins.' This Śunaḥśepa legend with its verses — the Hotṛ recites it to the anointed king, seated on a golden mat; the Adhvaryu responds, [with] om to the riks, tathā to the verses. Om is divine, tathā human: with the divine and the human he frees [the king] from sin. Therefore a king who desires victory, or any sacrificer, should have this Śunaḥśepa legend recited, and not even a little guilt is left to him. To the narrator he should give a thousand; to the respondent a hundred; and those two [seats]: the white chariot drawn by mules is for the Hotṛ. Those who desire sons, if it be told to them, obtain sons, obtain sons."

The Kannada retelling (pp. 243–249), translated in full.

Śunaḥśepa's story (the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa version) — [the grace of the birth of a son, in praise of the wealth of sons]. In the Ikṣvāku family there was a king named Hariścandra, son of Vedhas. Though he had a hundred wives, he had no son; he performed sacrifices for a son, but without result. One day the ṛṣis Parvata and Nārada came to his house. Hariścandra asked Nārada: 'O Nārada, all creatures — men with discernment and even those without — long for offspring. What is the benefit that comes of the birth of a son?' Nārada answered in ten sentences:

1. The father who has a son, in the joy of seeing the face of the son born to him, repays through that son his debt to his ancestors and attains immortality.
2. The joy of begetting a son is greater than all the enjoyments to be had from the earth, greater than the benefits to be had from fire, greater than what is obtained from water. Of all enjoyments the enjoyment of attaining a son is the greatest.
3. Through the son a father crosses many great dangers. Since the father is born himself as his son, the son is like a boat laden with the means of life — as one is carried over a river or a sea in a boat — and carries the father across the sea of worldly existence, with its sorrows in this world and the next.

4. What is the use of the householder's life that has no son? What use are celibacy or the forest life, or wandering as a mendicant? What are these for? 'O Brahmins, desire offspring' — thus the world says of those who would leave the married state for the sake of Vedic observances.
5. Food protects life; clothes protect from cold; gold gives the use of ornaments; marriage and the like bring the wealth of cattle; the wife is a friend; the daughter is an object of affection; but the son alone shines as a lamp, giving light to the self, in the highest world of immortality.
6. The husband enters the wife in the form of seed; the seed is transformed into the form of an embryo; she is made a mother; afterwards he is born again from her in the tenth month.
7. The wife gets the name jāyā — which has a meaning — because the husband is born in her again; the seed is nurtured in her and made to shine in her as a son.
8. The gods and the seers gave to the one who has become a jāyā an extraordinary radiance; then the gods announced to men: 'She will be your mother.'
9. Animals and the like also know that one who has no offspring has no eternal state; among them one's own son, and even a sister or mother, [is approached] [the print says "the sentence is garbled"].
10. This is the path of those who have sons, who walk without sorrow; even animals and birds know it; hence the praise of having offspring.

[A note in brackets in the source: Hariścandra will get a son. Varuṇa will come again and again and ask that his son be given as a sacrifice. But Hariścandra, putting forward different reasons each time, keeps postponing the sacrifice.]

Then Nārada: 'Go to Varuṇa and pray that he grant you one son, and promise that after the son is born you will offer him to Varuṇa in the sacrifice.' Hariścandra did so, went to Varuṇa and prayed: 'Grant me a son; I shall offer him to you.' Soon the boy Rohita was born. Varuṇa came and said: 'A son has been born to you; offer him to me.' Hariścandra said: 'For a living being to be offered, ten days must pass; let ten days pass for my son; then I shall offer him.' After ten days Varuṇa came and asked for him. Hariścandra said: 'For any creature to be offered it must have teeth; when my son has teeth I shall offer him.' When the teeth had come, Varuṇa came and asked again. Hariścandra said: 'Not until the teeth fall out may any creature be offered; let his teeth fall.' Varuṇa came again; when the teeth fell out and Rohita's teeth began to grow again, he asked for him. 'Until the teeth have grown, no creature may be offered; let this one wait.' Varuṇa came again; [Hariścandra said:] 'Until he who is born into the warrior caste has been equipped with armour, he is not fit to be offered.' Then Varuṇa called Rohita and Hariścandra said: 'Son, I must offer you to Varuṇa in return for his favour to me.' Rohita said 'That cannot be,' took up his bow, and, to escape, fled into a lonely forest, where he wandered for a year.

[In the source: Rohita wanders six years in the forest for his own protection; afterwards, to take his place, he brings a Brahmin's son named Śunaḥśepa from his father's hand, to be given to Varuṇa as the offering.]

After Rohita escaped, Varuṇa seized Hariścandra; he developed dropsy. Rohita heard the news, left the forest and came toward a village; Indra met him in human form and said: 'O Rohita, there is no happiness for one who lives in one place without moving about. Even the best man among those of the same caste falls into bad ways and is ruined. So wander in lonely places. [Thus the one who travels...]' So Indra advised him to travel. Rohita, thinking that a Brahmin had advised him to wander, spent the second year also in the forest. When he was returning to the village, Indra again came as a man and said: 'The feet of a traveller are like flowers; by travel the soul gains the fruit of health; all his sins are removed by the weariness of the journey; so wander.' In the same way, in the third year Indra, as a seated man, said: 'The fortune of the one who sits sits; the one who stands, stands; one who lies, lies; but the fortune of the one who moves moves. Therefore wander.' In the fourth year Indra, describing the four yugas, bade Rohita wander again. When the fifth year was finished and he was entering the village, Indra came as a man and said: 'For the man who travels, honey and sweet udumbara fruit are to be had. See the radiance of the Sun, who, though he moves unceasingly, is never weary. So you too wander.'

In the sixth year Rohita met in the forest a sage named Ajīgarta, son of Suyavasa. Ajīgarta, in poverty, was fasting in the forest for want of food. He had three sons: Śunaḥpuccha, Śunaḥśepa and Śunolāṅgūla. Rohita went to the sage and said: 'O sage, I will give you a hundred cows; give me one of your three sons; I shall give him to Varuṇa as an offering in my place.' Ajīgarta agreed, but refused to give the eldest; his wife would not give the youngest; so the middle son, Śunaḥśepa, was left. Rohita gave Ajīgarta the hundred cows, took Śunaḥśepa to his father and told him what had happened. Hariścandra went to Varuṇa and said: 'I shall give you this one as an offering in place of my son.' Varuṇa agreed, since a Brahmin is superior to a kṣatriya. Then Varuṇa described the Rājasūya, and on the day when the sacrifice was to be performed ordered a human sacrifice in place of the animal sacrifice.

[In the source: four great seers become the priests; when the time for the human sacrifice comes, Śunaḥśepa, who is about to be killed through fear of death, praises the gods and wins their favour; he is released and recites the mantras he spoke.]

At that human sacrifice Viśvāmitra was the Hotṛ, Jamadagni the Adhvaryu, Vasiṣṭha the Brahman and Ayāsyā the Udgātṛ. When the time came to bind Śunaḥśepa to the sacrificial post, no one was willing; Ajīgarta came forward: 'Give me another hundred cows and I shall bind him.' They agreed, gave him a hundred cows, and Ajīgarta bound his son to the post. Then, when it was time to slay him, no one would; Ajīgarta again came forward: 'Give me yet another hundred cows and I shall kill him.' So he took the hundred cows, had his knife sharpened and was preparing to kill his own son. Śunaḥśepa, realising he was about to be slain like a beast, thought: 'I shall take refuge in the gods,' and prayed to Prajāpati with the sūkta kasya nūnaṃ katamasya (Ṛ. 1-24-1). Prajāpati appeared and said: 'Agni is the god closest to all of you; take refuge in him.' Then with the rik agner vayaṃ prathamasyāmṛtānām Śunaḥśepa prayed to Agni; Agni appeared and said: 'Savitṛ is lord of all beings; take refuge in him.' Then with the three riks beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ he prayed; Savitṛ came and said: 'You are bound by Varuṇa, who is mighty; he will release you.' He then prayed to Varuṇa with the next thirty-one [ṛks]; when Varuṇa came, he said: 'Agni is the mouth of the gods and is very merciful; pray to him now.' He then prayed to Agni with the twenty-two riks that follow; Agni appeared and said: 'Pray to the Viśvedevas.' Śunaḥśepa prayed to them with 'namo mahadbhyo namo arbhakebhyaḥ' (Ṛ. 1-27-13). They came and said: 'Indra is the strongest of all, the mightiest, the victorious, the one who can carry across; pray to him.' Then with the sūkta yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ (Ṛ. 1-29) and the fifteen riks after, Śunaḥśepa praised Indra; pleased, Indra gave him a golden chariot. Śunaḥśepa accepted it with the words 'śaśvad indra' [?]. Indra again instructed: 'Pray to the Aśvins; then we shall free you.' The Aśvins, prayed to, came and said: 'Pray to Uṣas.' As he recited the mantras to Uṣas one by one, the noose loosened completely and Hariścandra's dropsy was cured, so that he regained health.

[In the source: the story of Śunaḥśepa's release; the order of pressing the soma-juice; Viśvāmitra accepts him as a son.]

The priests then said to Śunaḥśepa: 'Now you also are a priest, like us; take your share in this rite.' He then learnt the order of pressing the soma-juice, in all its details, and, wide awake, performed it; taking the four riks beginning 'yacciddhi tvam gr̥he gr̥he', he went; reciting the rik 'ucchiṣṭam camvor bhara' he brought the soma to the droṇakalaśa. At the touch of Hariścandra he recited the mantra 'yatrā grāvā' and, with svāhā, offered the oblation; then, to complete the avabhṛtha, he came with the vessels and recited the rik 'tvam no agne varuṇasya' and completed the avabhṛtha. Then he called Hariścandra to the Āhavanīya and recited the mantra 'śunaśicchepaṃ viditam'.

At last Śunaḥśepa went to Viśvāmitra's side. Ajīgarta also came and said: 'O seer, give me back my son.' Viśvāmitra said: 'No; the gods have given him to me.' From then on he was Devarāta, son of Viśvāmitra [the Kāpileyas and Bābhravas are his descendants]. Then Ajīgarta said: 'Son, you belong to the family of the Ājīgartas; come, take your own ancestry again.' Śunaḥśepa answered his father: 'Even a Caṇḍāla does not take up the knife to kill his son. You have a hundred cows more than enough; for them you wished to cut your own son's throat. I shall not come.' Ajīgarta said: 'Son, what I did was wrong; I shall remove this sin; I shall give you a hundred cows too; come home.' Śunaḥśepa: 'Once you have done such a sinful deed, you will do it again and again; there is no reconciliation.' Viśvāmitra too said: 'Yes, there is no expiation for this act.' When he held the knife for your slaying, Ajīgarta was of terrible voice; do not go to his house; be my son.' Śunaḥśepa asked: 'How can I who was born in the Āṅgīrasa family be kin to Viśvāmitra?' Viśvāmitra called his sons: 'O Madhucchandās and the rest, from today you have no right to the eldest's place in my property; from today all this belongs to Śunaḥśepa; he is the eldest of all.'

[Viśvāmitra's progeny. Blessing on those who hear the story of Śunaḥśepa.] Viśvāmitra had a hundred sons; the elder fifty and the younger fifty [Madhucchandas and the younger]; the elder fifty did not agree to Viśvāmitra's decision, and Viśvāmitra cursed them to have base offspring: from that curse the Śabaras, Pulindas and others were born. Madhucchandas and the younger fifty bowed to Viśvāmitra's decision: 'O father, we shall always be obedient to you; we accept Devarāta as our elder.' Viśvāmitra, pleased, blessed them: 'You will have many cows and offspring as the fruits [of your obedience]; having accepted this Devarāta as your leader, you who are of Gāthin's line and well versed in the divine knowledge of the Gāthins — may you and your sons attain all prosperity.'

This story of Śunaḥśepa is told in more than a hundred riks. After the anointing, the king, sprinkled with pure water, sits on a throne of gold-embroidered cloth; the Hotṛ narrates this; the Adhvaryu, sitting likewise, responds with om tathā, increasing the king's glory. As with the apauruṣeya riks [the Vedic mantras] the divine voice om [responds to the riks], so the human response tathā [responds to the gāthās]; the Adhvaryu makes the king free of sin by both. Therefore every king who desires victory, and also every sacrificer, should listen to this Śunaḥśepa story, to be cleansed from sins that might arise in the course of his victory. To the narrator a thousand cows and — with the acceptance of the responding words — a hundred to the Adhvaryu; to the Hotṛ a white chariot drawn by mules. Those who have no sons will obtain sons if they recite or hear this story. Here the Śunaḥśepa legend ends. This story of Śunaḥśepa is also told at length in Vālmiki's Rāmāyaṇa [where Śunaḥśepa is the son of a sage named Ṛcika, and in place of Hariścandra the king is Ambarīṣa of Ayodhyā]; the Bhāgavata and Viṣṇu Purāṇas give it too, with slight differences; in the main points it is similar.

Word notes (pp. 249–250). कस्य देवस्य अथवा कस्य कतमस्य देवस्य — which god, what kind of god. When Śunaḥśepa is bound to the sacrificial post and no one can free him, he considers: 'which god should I praise?', and thus utters this rik. Although the word kasya has the common sense 'of what', here Prajāpati is meant; the commentator explains this by saying that Śunaḥśepa first prayed to Prajāpati; on this he cites the Aitareya passage hantāhaṃ devatā upadhāvāmīti sa prajāpatim eva prathamam devatānām upasasāra (Ai. Brā. 7-16). अमृतानाम् — of the deathless gods. मह्यै अदितये — among the eleven names of the earth beginning gauḥ, gmā... are read the words mahī and aditiḥ (Ni. [1-1]), so both words mean prthivī; as both words have the same sense, mahī may be taken as 'broad, great'. पुनर्दात्, पितरं च दृश्यं मातरं च — Śunaḥśepa, bound to the post and standing in the place of the victim, takes himself to be near death and, fearing, looks all round: 'when shall I again attain the world — who will favour me, that I may live again on earth? how shall I see my father and mother, freed from this snare of death?' He laments thus, and prays to Agni in the next rik for freedom from his bondage.

Of many immortal gods we shall contemplate the god Agni's name first; he will deliver us back to this vast earth that I may again behold my father and mother.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ As said before, Śunaḥśepa, knowing from Prajāpati that Agni is able to save him, prays to Agni first — "Agni is the best of the gods" — and asks to be allowed to live on the earth again and to see his father and mother once more. The special explanations given under the preceding rik apply to this rik too. वयम् — although the plural is used here, it refers to Śunaḥśepa, who is praying to Agni.

Translation: "In the first chandoma, in the Vaiśvadeva-śāstra, the Savitṛ triplet abhi tvā deva savitaḥ stands in the place of the sūkta; so it is laid down in the section atha chandomāḥ (Āś. [8-8] [?]). The rik abhi tvā is also applied at the kindling of fire by friction: in the section prātarvaiśvadevyām, 'abhi tvā deva savitar mahe dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ' (Āś. 2-16); and it is heard: 'with abhi tvā deva savitaḥ he recites the Sāvitṛ' (Ai. Brā. 1-16). It is applied also in the Pravargya (Āś. 4-2 [?]) and at the Grāvastotra (Āś. 5-13). Then, impelled by Agni, [Śunaḥśepa] prays to Savitṛ with this triplet; so it is heard: 'Agni said to him, "Savitṛ rules over the impulses; run to him." He went to Savitṛ with the triplet abhi tvā deva savitaḥ' (Ai. Brā. 7-16). O ever-protecting (sadāvan) divine Savitṛ! We ask (īmahe) of you — the lord (īśāna) of things to be chosen (vāryāṇām) — for a share (bhāgam), a wealth to be enjoyed, from every side. Īśānam: īśa aiśvārye, the participle śānac [with the sense of habit] ... Vāryāṇām: vrñ sambhaktau + nyat; accent by P. 6-1-214. Avan: the vocative's accent is lowered. Bhāgam: acute on the end by the ghañ rule karṣātvataḥ." ¹⁰

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ सदावन् (sadāvan) — O ever-protecting | सवितः देव (savitaḥ deva) — O deity Savitṛ | वार्याणाम् (vāryāṇām) — of the wealth to be chosen [of the things desired] | ईशानम् (īśānam) — the lord [you] | भागम् (bhāgam) — the wealth to be enjoyed | अभि ईमहे (abhi īmahe) — we ask.

O ever-protecting Savitṛ, lord of wealth! We ask of you for the wealth that we long for.

Divine and ever protecting Savitri, the lord of all that is desirable, we ask for wealth-

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Application. In the Vaiśvadeva-śāstra of the prathama-chandoma, the triplet abhi tvā deva savitaḥ, with the Savitṛ deity, is to be recited as the śāstra mantra; Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra says in the section atha chandomāḥ — abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-3) pretām yajñasya śambhuvā (Ṛ. Saṃ. [3-6-?]) (Āś. [8-8]). When fire is kindled by friction of the two araṇis at the beginning of a sacrifice this rik is also to be used: in the section prātarvaiśvadevam, the sūtra abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-3) mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-22-13) is explained (Āś. 2-16); and the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa has the sentence abhi tvā deva savitar iti sāvitṛm anvāha (Ai. Brā. 1-16). It is also to be used in the pravargya sacrifice, as Āśvalāyana's section athottaram shows with the sūtra abhi tvā deva savitaḥ, samīpa [?] vatsaṃ na mātṛbhiḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [9-?]) (Āś. 4-2); and in the grāvastotra — the recitation in praise of the pressing stones used for pressing the soma-juice — in the section grāvastut the sūtra madhyamasvareṇedaṃ savanam abhi tvā deva savitaḥ is cited (Āś. 5-13).

Śunaḥśepa, having approached Agni and praised him, is told to praise Savitṛ and does so with the three rikṣ beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ; in this rik and the next he prays to Savitṛ for wealth and the like. It is curious that Śunaḥśepa — bound to the post of sacrifice, in the grip of death — should ask for wealth, not for his freedom.

ईशानं वार्याणाम् — varaṇīyānām dhanānām svāminam: the lord of the wealth that all desire, i.e. the giver of wealth and power. भागम् — bhajanīyam: that which is to be enjoyed; worthy of honour. The chief sense: 'O Savitṛ, you are lord of all the wealth and powers that all desire, and worthy of worship; so we pray to you.' Śunaḥśepa asks Savitṛ for the sake of wealth, praising him as the giver of wealth — and in this rik there is no word that indicates wealth [being asked in the ordinary sense]. Although the commentator explains vāryāṇām as sarvair abhīkṣitānām dhanānām ('of the wealth that is desired by all'), one may say that what is desired here is not wealth, but release from death — life.

Translation: "O Savitr! That bhaga — that wealth to be enjoyed — which (yaḥ) is held (dadhe) in your two hands: we ask of that wealth — so the construction runs with the preceding [rik]. Cit is in the sense of honour; hi in the sense of 'well-known'. That wealth is worthy of honour is well known everywhere; he makes the matter clear: itthā śāsāmānaḥ — praised in this manner, extolled. Everyone knows the manner of praising wealth. If it is objected: when one's own wealth has been carried off by enemies, everybody blames and hates wealth seized by the enemy, so praise of wealth is not constant — [he answers] nidaḥ purā adveṣaḥ: before the blame, when it stood as one's own, it was free of hatred; the meaning is that the praise is meant of the wealth as one's own [my paraphrase; the sense of this passage is doubtful]. Itthā: idam + thamu in the sense of 'manner' (P. 5-3-24). Śāsāmānaḥ: śāśa plutagatau; cānaś by P. 3-2-129; the final acute through cit. Nidaḥ: ṇidi kutsāyām [to blame]; kvip of the saṃpadādi class; acute of the ending by sāvekāca. Adveṣaḥ: bahuvrīhi with nañ; end-acute by nañsubhyām. Dadhe: liṭ in the passive; as an ārdhadhātuka ending it does not take the initial acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ, but keeps the suffix accent; no lowering after yat-connection." ¹² this rik, and their meaning, is not clear. Nidaḥ — ṇidi kutsāyām: blamed; no one blames wealth; everyone praises it. The commentator explains: when enemies carry off wealth, one blames it [hates it], as the Nirukta-reading says; the sense is not well fitted. भगः — the commentator says it means bhajanīyo dhanaviśeṣaḥ, a kind of wealth to be desired; but since the thing desired here is not wealth, it should be taken as āyus — life. अद्वेषः — avidyamāno dveṣo yasmin so 'dveṣaḥ: one in whom there is no hatred; or dveṣavarjitaḥ: free of hatred, needed by all, approached by all. In this rik Śunaḥśepa may be praying to Savitr to give him the life that everyone wishes for.

| मन्युम् (manyum) — wrath | न (na) — [nor] | अनिमिषम् (animiṣam) — always | चरन्तीः (carantīḥ) — flowing | इमाः आपः (imāḥ āpaḥ) — these waters | न (na) — [your strength] have not attained | वातस्य (vātasya) — of the wind | ये (ye) — which motions | अभ्वम् (abhvam) — [your] speed | न प्रमिनन्ति (na praminanti) — do not surpass.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Varuṇa! Neither these birds that fly, nor the waters that flow ever, have obtained your bodily strength or valour; they cannot withstand your wrath. The wind's speed cannot exceed your speed; the wind has no strength like yours.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Varuna, these birds that are flying have not obtained your strength or your power; they are not able to endure your wrath; these waters that flow without interruption or the winds have not surpassed your speed.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ The chief import: O Varuṇa! Your strength and power are immeasurable. In the antarikṣa the birds that fly have not your swiftness and the like; nor your strength; they cannot stand up against your wrath. Even the waters that flow constantly — the currents of rivers — and the wind that blows swiftly in the antarikṣa cannot vie with you in speed.

Śunaḥśepa, having praised Savitṛ with the three riks beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ, with the favour of Savitṛ who was thus pleased, praises Varuṇa with the remaining ten riks of this sūkta and with the whole of the following sūkta — in all thirty-one riks. On this the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa has the sentence taṃ savitovāca varuṇāya vai rājñe niyukto 'si tam evopadhāveti sa varuṇaṃ rājānam upasasārāta uttarābhir ekatrimśatā (Ai. Brā. 7-16).

क्षत्रम् — tvadīyaṃ śarīrabalam — your bodily strength, power (bodily strength). सहः — tvadīyaṃ parākramam — your prowess, valour (prowess &c.). मन्युम् — wrath; the sense is that they have no power to stand against it. अनिमिषं चरन्तीः — sarvadā carantyaḥ pravāharūpeṇa gacchantaḥ: always moving, flowing as streams; flowing unceasingly at all times. न प्रमिनन्ति अभ्वम् — vegaṃ na hīṃsanti: they do not surpass your speed; they cannot overtake.

pointing | स्थुः (sthuh) — are | उपरि (upari) — above | एषाम् (eṣām) — of these [rays] | बुध्नः (budhnaḥ) — the root | अस्मे (asme) — in us | अन्तः निहिताः (antaḥ nihitāḥ) — placed within | केतवः (ketavaḥ) — [our supports] the vital breaths | स्युः (syuh) — may be.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ Varuṇa, of pure strength and shining, stays in the base-less antarikṣa and holds on high a mass of lovely light. The rays of that mass of light go downward, and their root is above. May the vital breaths — our support — be established within our bodies.

॥ English Translation ॥

The king Varuna of pure strength being in baseless firmament, sustains on high a heap of light, the rays of which are pointed downwards while their base is above; may they become concentrated in us as the source of existence.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ The meaning of this rik is difficult, and the sense is not well-fitted. The chief import, perhaps: the king Varuṇa shines in the antarikṣa, full of light. The rays of that shining go downward from the antarikṣa and spread over this earth. So the root-place of those rays is in the antarikṣa where Varuṇa abides; may their light, joined together, be the support of the vital breaths in our bodies here on the earth.

पूतदक्षः — śuddhabalavanu — of pure strength, mighty. राजा — there is a custom of addressing Varuṇa as rājan; in the following rik too the word rājā is used: urum hi rājā varuṇaḥ — the word rājā, though it could mean 'shining', is applied to Varuṇa in the sense of king, ruler. अबुध्ने — budhna means root; abudhne is the antarikṣa without a root; since the antarikṣa does not stand on the support of anything on earth, the epithet 'without root or support' is appropriate. वनस्य — vananīyasya tejasah: of the light [or radiance] that spreads on all sides — though vanasya is singular, Skandasvāmin thinks it should be taken in the sense of tejasām, plural. स्तूपं ददते — saṃgham dadhate: holds a mass, or a group; he who is wrapped in light, from whom light spreads on all sides and fills everywhere. नीचीनाः — adhomukhāḥ: downward-facing; the rays in the antarikṣa go out downward and reach the earth below. उपरि बुध्न एषाम् — the root-place of these rays is above, i.e. in the antarikṣa near Varuṇa; since Varuṇa is in the antarikṣa, the root-place of his rays is also in the antarikṣa. अन्तर्निहिताः — sthāpitāḥ: placed, established, concentrated. केतवः — prajñānāni prāṇāḥ: life-breaths. The word ketu has many senses — ray, act, and others.

O king, you have a hundred and a thousand medicaments; may your kindness to us be great; keep away from us Nirriti (the god of sin) and torture him; liberate us from whatever sin we may have committed.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ शतं सहस्रं भिषजः — the medicines in you, hundred and thousand — that is, innumerable. उर्वी गभीरा सुमतिः — may your thought concerning us be most favourable, and generous. निरृतिम् — in the Nirukta Yāska gives for the word nirṛti the meaning pr̥thivī ('earth'; Ni. [2-8]); but here the commentator says pāpadevatā — the goddess of sin. On the rik mo ṣu ṇaḡ parāparā nirṛtir durhaṇā vadhīt (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-38-6) the commentator explains the word nirṛti as rakṣojātidevatā — a deity of the demon class. The same sense should be given in the present rik, since [bādhasva] 'afflict' is connected with it: it would be impossible to harm the earth or other things; so it is natural to take it as a sin-deity of evil nature, of the rākṣasa class. In later Sanskrit too nirṛti has the sense of yātudhāna, a special rākṣasa; this Nirṛti is well known as one of the eight Dikpālakas, the guardian of the south-west quarter, between south and west. In the Ṛgveda the word nirṛti is used where the evil senses of duḡkha, pāśa and rākṣasa are intended. The word is used in the riks Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-9; [1-38-6]; [1-38-1?]; 2-[?]; 10-[?]. . . nirṛtim in 1-[?]; and in other riks; there are also many uses of the forms nirṛtīḡ, nirṛtīnām, nirṛtaye, nirṛtyāḡ and nirṛtyai (numerals read from the print and marked [?]).

Translation: "These ṛkṣāḥ seen by us at night are the Seven Seers [the Great Bear]; so the Vājasaneyins say: 'In former times they used to call the seven seers ṛkṣāḥ.' Or ṛkṣāḥ are all the constellations, as Yāska says in the list of names of the constellations (Ni. [3-20]), 'ṛkṣāḥ, str̥bhiḥ' [the reading is garbled]. Uccā — high; nihitāsaḥ — placed in the upper region of the sky; those ṛkṣāḥ are seen by everyone naktam, at night; by day kuha cit īyuh — they go somewhere; they are not seen. The vratāni — the acts — of king Varuṇa, such as the appearing of the constellations, are adabdhāni — not harmed by anyone. And by Varuṇa's command alone the moon moves (eti) at night, shining (vicākaśat) especially. Nihitāsaḥ: asuk after jas by P. 7-1-50; though the end-acute of the second member would arise by the thāthādi rule P. 6-2-144, the gati keeps its accent by P. 6-2-49. Dadṛśre: liṭ of dṛś; re for the ending by P. 6-4-76 [irayo re]; the initial acute by vyatyaya; no nighāta because of the yat- connection. Kuha: from kim with ha by P. 5-3-13 vā ha ca chandasi in the place of tral; ku for kim before ti... by P. 7-2-104; the acute by lit-svara through sthānivadbhāva. Vicākaśat: kāśr dīptau — a yañ-luk form of [kāś], with śatṛ; abhyastānām ādih; kṛt-accent in the compound. Candramāḥ: mā after candra by Uṇ. 4-221 with asi; the compound would take the accent of the second member but the first member keeps its accent by the dāsībhārādi rule."

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The stars seen in the sky at night — everyone sees them at night; by day they go somewhere. These are the undisturbable acts of Varuṇa. By his command the moon too shines specially at night.

॥ English Translation ॥

These constellations placed on high which are visible by night and go elsewhere by day are the undisturbed acts of Varuṇa and by his commands, the moon moves and shines brightly by night.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ ऋक्षाः — the group of stars called the Saptarṣi-maṇḍala, visible in the sky at night; though ṛkṣāḥ means 'stars' generally, the commentator explains it here as the Seven Seers. अदब्धानि — Varuṇa's acts cannot be obstructed by anyone; they are unimpeded. व्रतानि — acts, works, deeds of valour.

Note — Grammar page 276, noted briefly: the words treated are dadṛśre [dṛśir prekṣaṇe, liṭ, ruṭ-ire-t, doubling and the loss of the reduplicate's [final]; iṭ + ire; P. 6-4-76 irayo re gives re for ire in the Veda; since it is joined with yat-type word the verb is not wholly lowered; the accent on the first syllable by vyatyaya], kuha [kim + tral by P. 5-3-10 saptamyās tral; in the Veda ha in place of tral by P. 5-3-13 vā ha ca chandasi; so ku + ha; the Vaiyākaraṇa-Mahābhāṣya's discussion of the sūtra vāhac; ku for kim before ti and ho by P. 7-2-104 kuti hoḥ], vicākaśat [kaś gatiśāsanayoh, many senses of roots, here 'to shine'; or kāśṛ dīptau; yañ-luk with doubling; jaś; the reduplicate's ca for ka; P. 7-4-83 dīrgho 'kitaḥ lengthens the reduplicate; then śatṛ for laṭ; śap lost; the accent by abhyastānām ādiḥ: the first syllable is acute — cākaśat; with the vi compound the kṛt-accent follows] and candramāḥ [candra + mā + asi, Uṇ. 4-221 candre māñah ḍit; the ḍit effect; the compound takes the first member's accent by the dāsibhārādi rule P. 6-2-42 — the printed number is read doubtfully; numerals as read, pointers only.

Translation: "In the Varuṇa animal-sacrifice of the ekādaśina [group of eleven], the two riks tat tvā yāmi are the yājyā for the vapā and the puroḍāśa; so the sūtra says: 'the two riks tat tvā yāmi brahmaṇā vandamānaḥ' (Āś. [3-8] [?]). In the Varuṇapraghāsa, the rik tat tvā yāmi is the yājyā of the Varuṇa oblation; in the section pañcamām paurṇamāsyām the sūtra reads 'imaṃ me varuṇa śrudhi; tat tvā yāmi brahmaṇā vandamānaḥ' (Āś. [2-17] [?]). O Varuṇa! I, about to die, yāmi — ask of you for that life; how? Vandamānaḥ — praising with brahma, a mature hymn. The sacrificer too, everywhere, with oblations asks for that life. And do you, in this rite, ahelamānaḥ — not neglecting, not disregarding — attend (bodhi, 'know') what we desire. O urusamṣa — praised by many! Do not rob (mā pra moṣīḥ) us of our life — do not take it away. Ahelamānaḥ: heḍa anādare [to disregard]; as a verb of the a-class, its sārvadhātuka is anudātta, and śap, being pī, is anudātta, so the accent of the root remains; in the nañ-compound the first member keeps the accent by P. 6-2-2. Bodhi: budha avagamane, loṭ → hi; śap lost by bahulaṃ chandasi; by P. 3-4-88 [vā chandasi] hi is optionally not pī, so it is not nit, and guṇa of the penultimate syllable occurs; hi → dhi by P. 6-4-101 after ... Moṣīḥ: muṣa steye [to steal]; the Vedic luṇ in the sense of the imperative; vṛddhi would come by P. 7-2-3, but is prevented by P. 7-2-4 [neṭi]; guṇa of the penultimate; the aṭ augment is absent since it is joined with mā."

Note — Grammar pages 278–280, noted briefly: the words treated are aheḷamānaḥ [heḍr anādare, class 1; śānac by P. 3-2-124 laṭaḥ śatṛśānacāv aprathamāsamānādhikaraṇe; śap with the accent of its p-it; P. 6-1-186 ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e is not relevant; the acute of the root P. 6-1-162 dhātoḥ; nañ-compound — with n lost by P. 6-3-73 nalopo nañāḥ, and P. 6-2-2 tatpuruṣe tulyārtha... — the accent of the avyaya-first compound P. 6-2-2 gives aheḷamānaḥ initial acute], bodhi [budha avagamane; loṭ, sip → hi by P. 3-4-87 ser hy apic ca; the śap lost by P. 2-4-73/bahulaṃ chandasi; the guṇa by P. 7-3-86 pugantalaghūpadhasya ca; hi → dhi by P. 6-4-101; the final dh lost in the Veda; the verb is lowered since it is not at the head of the pāda], moṣiḥ [muṣa steye, kryādi; the Vedic luṇ in imperative sense by P. 3-4-6; sip → s; iṭ + iṭ by P. 7-2-35 and 7-2-28; the loss of s of sic by P. 7-2-79 [? the printed note's numbers are crowded]; no vṛddhi by P. 7-2-4 neṭi; the aṭ augment absent by P. 6-4-74 na māṇyoge and the Vedic exception]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (हे) वरुण ((he) varuṇa) — O Varuṇa [I, who am about to die] | ब्रह्मणा (brahmaṇā) — with the excellent hymn | वन्दमानः (vandamānaḥ) — praising | त्वा (tvā) — you | तत् (tat) — that [life] | यामि (yāmi) — ask | यजमानः (yajamānaḥ) — the sacrificer too | हविर्भिः (havirbhiḥ) — with oblations | तत् (tat) — that life | आ शास्ते (ā śāste) — prays for [from you] | इह (iha) — in this rite | अहेळमानः (aheḷamānaḥ) — without disregard | बोधि (bodhi) — understand [what is desired by us] | उरुशंस (uruśamsa) — O you praised by many | नः (naḥ) — our | आयुः (āyuh) — life | मा प्र मोषीः (mā pra moṣiḥ) — do not take away.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Varuṇa! I, about to die, praise you with excellent hymns and ask for life. The sacrificer, too, asks for life from you with oblations. Do not disregard us; understand what we want. O you who are praised by many, do not take away our life.

॥ English Translation ॥

With adoration I ask you for that life which the sacrificer solicits with oblations; Varuna, do not neglect us; praised by many, do not deprive us of our life.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ Application. In the Varuṇa animal-sacrifice, called the ekādaśinī group, when the offering of the omentum (vapā) and the puroḍāśa is made, the two riks beginning tat tvā yāmi are to be used as yājyā mantras. This is stated in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra tat tvā yāmi brahmaṇā vandamāna iti dve astabhnād dyām (Āś. [3-8]). And in the Varuṇapraghāsa homa, the rik tat tvā yāmi is to be used as the yājyā mantra when the oblation is offered to Varuṇa; the section pañcamāṃ paurnamāsyām explains it in the sūtra imaṃ me varuṇa śrudhi tat tvā yāmi brahmaṇā vandamānaḥ (Āś. [2-17]).

तत् — that, i.e. the life that is needed here by Śunaḥśepa, who is about to die. तदा शास्ते यजमानः — the sacrificer who performs the sacrifice, too, offering oblations, asks Varuṇa for life. ब्रह्मणा — though brahman has many senses — food (Ni. [2-7]), wealth (Ni. [2-10]), hymn (Ni. [3-9]) — here the sense of hymn must be taken. अहेळमानः — anādaram akurvan: heḍa means disrespect; not neglecting, not slighting. उरुशंस — bahubhiḥ stutya: praised by many. मा न आयुः प्र मोषीः — moṣiḥ: muṣa steye; na moṣiḥ means 'do not steal'; that is, 'do not reduce our life; do not take it away'.

Sunashepa, seized and bound to the three-fold post has invoked the Son of Aditi (Varuna); may the King Varuna who knows all and whom none can deceive liberate him and loosen his bonds.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ गृभीतः — yūpastambhakke kaṭṭalpaḍuvudakkāgi hiḍiyalpaṭṭa — seized in order to be bound to the sacrificial post. आदित्यम् — the son of Aditi is āditya; since the mother of the gods is Aditi, here Varuṇa is praised by the name āditya. द्रुपदेषु — drumayeṣu, dārumayeṣu: on the wooden [posts], i.e. of a tree or of wood; the parts of the wood. 'Wooden pillar or post to which the animal to be sacrificed is tied before being killed.' On the rik kanīnakeva vidradhe nave drupade arbhake (R. Saṃ. [4-32-23] [?]), Yāska explaining vidradhe and drupade takes them as words of one meaning, and gives for drupada the sense dāru [wood] and the derivation dr̥ṇāteḥ vā drotāteḥ vā; tasmād eva dru (Ni. [6-27]). अव ससृज्यात् — avasṛṣṭaṃ bandhād vimuktaṃ karotu: may he set free. विद्वान् — vida jñāne, vimokaprakārābhijñāḥ: one who knows the way of release. अदब्धः — dambhu dambhe; kenāpy ahiṃsitaḥ: one who cannot be harmed by anyone — invincible. पाशान् — the ropes with which Śunaḥśepa is tied tightly to the post of sacrifice. [Rik 13, grammar tail — printed p. 288]¹⁸

Translation: "In the avabhṛtha-iṣṭi, the two riks ava te heḷaḥ are the yājyā and anuvākyā of the Varuṇa oblation; so it is laid down in the section patnīsaṃyājaiś caritvā: 'the two, ava te heḷo varuṇa namobhiḥ' (Āś. [6-14] [?]). O Varuṇa! Te heḷaḥ — your anger — we appease (avemahe, we turn away) with namobhiḥ — salutations; likewise with yajñebhiḥ — with sacrifices, the full performance, with oblations worthy of worship — we ask to dispel it; having gratified Varuṇa we remove his anger. O asura — thrower away of what is ill — pracetaḥ — endowed with highest wisdom — rājan — shining Varuṇa! Dwelling (kṣayan) among us, in this rite, for our sake, slacken (śísrathaḥ) — loosen — the sins (enāṃsi) committed (kṛtāni) by us. Heḷaḥ: the first syllable is acute from the n-it of asun. Yajñebhiḥ: ais does not appear [a Vedic form with ebhis], by bahulaṃ chandasi. Īmahe: īñ gatau [here: īd?]; the vikaraṇa lost. Kṣayan: kṣi nivāsagatyoh; śatr; śap by vyatyaya; the vocative's first-syllable acute. Asura: Uṇ. 1-42 aser urān [suffix uran]; the vocative's accent is lowered. Śísrathaḥ: śratha daurbalye [to be weak], a curādi root in a; luñ in the Veda: cañ for cli by P. 3-1-48 ṇisridrusrubhyaḥ kartari cañ; reduplication and the loss of the first consonant; ... ; i for the reduplicate's vowel by P. 7-4-78/79; no aṭ as before."

Note — Grammar pages 290–291, noted briefly: the words treated are heḷaḥ [heḍr anādare + asun by Uṇ. 4-[?]] sarvadhātubhyo 'sun'; the form heḷas is a neuter ending in s; being nit, first-syllable acute by P. 6-1-197 ñnityādir nityam], yajñebhiḥ [bhis in the instrumental plural; ais would be substituted by P. 7-1-9 ato bhisa ais — in the Veda optional by P. 7-1-10 bahulaṃ chandasi; hence yajñebhiḥ; jhaṣam...; P. 8-2-... bahuvacane jhaly et P. 7-3-103 gives e; ru-visarga — yajñebhiḥ], īmahe [īja gatau of the divādi group; laṭ mahiñ; the ṭeḥ e — P. 3-4-79 ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭere — gives e; śyan would come; lost by bahulaṃ chandasi], kṣayan [kṣi nivāsagatyoh, a tudādi root; śatr in the sense of laṭ; śap by vyatyaya, with guṇa, ay; vocative: num added to the śatr stem, loss of su, and of the final t, giving kṣayan; the accent on the first syllable by P. 6-1-198 āmantritasya ca], asura [asu kṣepaṇe of the divādi class + uran by Uṇ. 1-42 aser urān; the vocative's accent is lowered], and śísrathaḥ [śratha daurbalye — curādi, ṇic, loss of the a by P. 6-4-48 ato lopaḥ; the root śrath is given the name dhātu by P. 3-1-32 sanādyantā dhātavaḥ; Vedic luñ in the sense of the benedictive by P. 3-4-6; sip → s; loss of i by P. 7-2-... itaś ca lopaḥ; cañ for cli by P. 3-1-48; the aṅga-doubling by P. 6-1-11 cañi; the a of the reduplicate shortened and made i by P. 7-4-93 sanvallahuni cañpare — optionally prevented, but bahulaṃ chandasi P. 7-4-78 gives i for the reduplicate; aṭ absent; s → ru-visarga]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (हे) वरुण ((he) varuṇa) — O Varuṇa | ते (te) — your | हेळः (heḷaḥ) — anger | नमोभिः (namobhiḥ) — with salutations | यज्ञेभिः (yajñebhiḥ) — with worshipful rites | हविर्भिः (havirbhiḥ) — with oblations | अव ईमहे (ava īmahe) — we turn away (and reduce) | (हे) असुर ((he) asura) — O averter of the undesirable | प्रचेतः (pracetaḥ) — O wise one | राजन् (rājan) — O shining [Varuṇa] | अस्मभ्यम् (asmabhyam) — for us | क्षयन् (kṣayan) — dwelling [in this rite] | कृतानि (kṛtāni) — committed by us | एनांसि (enāṃsi) — sins | शिथ्रयः (śiśrathaḥ) — make slack.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Varuṇa! We [Śunaḥśepas] reduce your anger with salutations, with rites and with oblations. O Varuṇa, remover of calamities, wise and shining! Be present in this rite for our sake and loosen the sins we have committed.

॥ English Translation ॥

Varuna, we propitiate your anger with prostrations, with sacrifices, with oblations; averter of misfortunes and the wise, be present amongst us and slacken the sins we have committed.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Application. At the end of the sacrifice, in the avabhṛtha rite — the bath-offering — when an oblation is offered to Varuṇa, the two riks beginning ava te heḷaḥ are to be recited as yājyā and anuvākyā; Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section patnīsaṃyājaiś caritvā, describes it in the sūtra ava te heḷo varuṇa namobhir iti dve (Āś. [6-14]).

हेळः — krodham: anger; kopavan; in the list of synonyms for 'anger' beginning heḷaḥ, haraḥ, the word heḷaḥ is read; so heḷaḥ is 'anger' (Ni. [?-?]). अव ईमहे — avanayāmaḥ: we remove; we set at rest; we appease. नमोभिः — with salutations; यज्ञेभिः — with sacrificial acts; हविर्भिः — with offerings of oblations — in this way,

'we calm your anger'. क्षयन् — dwelling; kṣi nivāsagatyoh; kṣaya means a dwelling-place (Ni. [3-4]). प्रचेताः — the knowing; the one of great wisdom. शिथ्रथः — śratha daurbalye; śrathitāni śithilāni: make them slack; remove them.

Translation: "O Varuṇa! Loosen (ucchrathāya) the highest bond (uttamam pāśam), the one fastened on my head, from us — drawing it up, make it slack. Loosen downwards (ava śrathāya) the lowest (adhamam) bond, the one fixed at the foot — drawing it down, slacken it. Loosen apart (vi śrathāya) the middle (madhyamam) bond, the one at the navel — unfasten it and slacken it. Then, O Āditya — son of Aditi — Varuṇa, may we, Śunaḥśepas, in your vrata — in your rite, [in the service] of Aditi, without harm — be anāgasah — free of offence. Uttamam: the suffix tamap is pit, so its accent is lowered and the first syllable would be acute; but since uttama is read among the uṃbhādi [Uṇādi] words, the end-acute (P. 6-1-160 [?]). Adhamam:

avadyāvamādhamārvarephāḥ kutsite (Uṇ. 5-54), from av with amac; v → dh. Śrathāya: śratha daurbalye; the Vedic lengthening in the Saṃhitā. Tava: [the genitive of yuṣmad] ... Anāgasah: in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps the accent, though nañsubhyām operates by vyatyaya; or, from āgas with the suffix asu in the sense of 'there is'; the possessive vini; the loss of the vin by P. 5-3-65 [?]; in the nañ-compound the avyaya-first member's accent."

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Varuṇa! Loosen the rope at my head from above, the rope at my feet from below, and the rope at my middle by cutting it. Afterwards may we, free from sin, be pure for the sake of your rites, without break.

॥ English Translation ॥

Loosen up, Varuna, the upper bond from us, loosen down the lower bond, and loosen the middle bond, that we may then O Aditya (son of Aditi or Varuna) be free from sin in your worship.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ उत्तममधममध्यमम् — [loosen] the upper, lower and middle ropes. When a sacrificial animal is bound to the post, the ropes are tied at the three places — the upper part of the body (the head), the lower (the feet) and the middle part (the belly) — so that it cannot escape and so that it can be killed; the ṛṣi indicates the three kinds of rope-bondage places, asking that all of them, which hold him tightly, be loosened. अव श्रथाय — viyujya śithilikuru: unfasten the rope and release. आदित्य — son of Aditi, Varuṇa; the Varuṇa, son of the goddess-mother Aditi. व्रते — tvadīye karmaṇi: in your rite; in the sacrificial work done to worship you (so that we may share in it). अनागसः — aparādharahitāḡ: faultless, sinless.

Translation: "The sūkta beginning yac cid dhi te viśaḥ has twenty-one riks and is the second [of this anuvāka]. So the Anukramaṇikā says: 'yac cid dhi' [— twenty-one, Varuṇa's, Gāyatrī]. By the rule 'the ṛṣi is the same as the other [sūkta's]', the seer is Śunaḥśepa himself; since 'the metre at the beginning is Gāyatrī' [as a rule], the metre is Gāyatrī; since 'Varuṇa's' was said before, the deity is Varuṇa. The application has been stated in the Śunaḥśepa legend. The special application is as follows: in the Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, in the Hotraka-śāstra, this sūkta is to be recited by the Maitrāvaruṇa for the insertion (āvāpa) of the stoma [?]. In the section abhiplavaṣaḍahāni it is likewise laid down: 'yac cid dhi te viśaḥ — the Maitrāvaruṇa should insert the Varuṇa triplet of this [sūkta]' (Āś. 8-5)."

|| Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) || Yac cid dhi te is the second sūkta of the sixth anuvāka. It has twenty-one riks. The Anukramaṇikā also says it has twenty-one riks, in the sūkta yac cit. Śunaḥśepa is the ṛṣi of this sūkta; the metre is Gāyatrī; as said before, the deity of this sūkta is Varuṇa alone. Its use is in the Śunaḥśepa legend [the sacrifice of Hariścandra]. Besides, it has a special use: in the sacrifice called Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, when the hotraka-śāstra mantras are recited, the priest named Maitrāvaruṇa must recite this sūkta for the purpose of inserting the stoma (the āvāpa): so it is laid down in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section abhiplavaṣaḍahāni, in the sūtra yac cid dhi te viśa iti vāruṇam etasya ṛcam āvapeta maitrāvaruṇaḥ (Āś. 8-5).

Translation: "When (kadā) shall we bring (ā karāmahe) Varuṇa to our rite — for mṛṣīka, our happiness? To this rite: may we cause him to come. How is he? Kṣatraśriyam — he who is attended by strength, naram — the leader, uruccakṣasaṃ — the seer of many. Kṣatraśriyam: 'he who resorts to (śrayati) kṣatras'; kvip, with lengthening; the accent of the last member of a kṛt-compound. Naram: from nṛ, the u substitute; first-syllable acute. Karāmahe: śap of kṛ by vyatyaya. Uruccakṣasaṃ: from cakṣ with asun by Uṇ. 4-183, being śit..."

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ क्षत्रश्रियम् (kṣatraśriyam) — served by strength [endowed] | नरम् (naram) — the guide | उरुचक्षसम् (uruccakṣasam) — the one who sees many | वरुणम् (varuṇam) — the deity Varuṇa | मृळीकाय (mṛḷikāya) — for [our] happiness | कदा (kadā) — when | आ करामहे (ā karāmahe) — may we bring [to this rite].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

When shall we invite to this rite the mighty Varuṇa, the guide of all, the one who sees the many, for the sake of our happiness?

॥ English Translation ॥

When, for our happiness shall we bring Varuna, the mighty, the guide of men, and beholder of many?

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ क्षत्रश्रियम् — kṣatra means bodily strength, as the commentator explained in the 6th rik of the 24th sūkta; kṣatraśriyam means 'possessing strength and wealth', 'of much strength'. उरुचक्षसम् — bahūnāṃ draṣṭāram: one who looks on many — seen by many, or praised by many.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ धृतरताय (dhṛtavratāya) — to the sacrificer who performs the rite | दाशुषे (dāśuṣe) — who offers oblations | वेनन्ता (venantā) — Mitra and Varuṇa, desiring [him] | समानम् (samānam) — common to both | तत् इत् (tat it) — that [offered] oblation itself | आशाते (āśāte) — enjoy | न प्र युच्छतः (na pra yucchataḥ) — they never cause harm.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Mitra and Varuṇa, pleased with the sacrificer who does the rite and offers the oblation, together partake of the oblation offered to them both; and they never cause the sacrificer any harm.

॥ English Translation ॥

(Mitra and Varuna,) partake of the common oblation; this offering is propitious to the giver and celebrator of this sacrifice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ समानम् — common to Mitra and Varuṇa, i.e. offered to both together, not to each separately. वेनन्ता — kāmayamānau: Mitra and Varuṇa, who desire the oblation. न प्र युच्छतः — yuccha pramāde: they never do carelessness; they are never negligent. धृतव्रताय — anuṣṭhitakarmanē: to the one who performs sacrificial rites, who worships Mitra and Varuṇa with sacrificial rites. दाशुषे — havirdattavate yajamānāya: to the sacrificer who gives oblations. Besides this explanation, Skandasvāmin gives another meaning for the words dhṛtavratāya and dāśuṣe: dhṛtavratāya — 'to him who holds [carries] his vrata' — svakarmaṇām paritrāṭṛtvād dhṛtavrato varuṇaḡ — 'Varuṇa is dhṛtavrata because he guards the actions that belong to himself [?]', and dāśuṣe — 'to Varuṇa, who gives to the sacrificer the things he desires'.

॥ English Translation ॥

He who knows the path of the birds flying through the air, he who knows the course of the ship in the ocean; (may he loosen our bonds).

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ Since Varuṇa is present in the antarikṣa, shining, he can know the flight-paths of birds that cannot be known to anyone else. Likewise, being lord of the waters, he can know the paths of the boats that travel over the sea. The path from one place to another on earth is plain and everyone can see it; to know it is no great thing. But the paths in the antarikṣa and on the sea are not marked; it is impossible for ordinary men to know them; Varuṇa alone has the power to know them. May such a Varuṇa release our bonds — that is the chief purport.

He who accepts the worship of the sacrificer knows the twelve months and the progeny they produce; and he who knows also the supplementary month; (may he loosen our bonds).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ Varuṇa is one who knows the form of Time well; the sense is that he knows the measure of the twelve months and also the measure of the thirteenth month, an additional one, which comes once in three years. In the astronomical science there are two methods of ordering the measure of the year. One follows the motion of the Sun: noting the sun's passage through the twelve rāśis (zodiacal signs), and dividing, in accordance with this, the twelve months, the measure of time up to the completion of one year is called the saṛamāna year. In this system there are only twelve months; there is no thirteenth. Every month has thirty or thirty-one days; these are called tithis [days — as the print says]. The other method of reckoning the year is the cāndramāna; this is reckoned by the motion of the Moon. With the waxing and waning of the moon, the day on which, once in about thirty days, the moon is full is called paurṇamāsī. The period ending with the day of the full moon — fifteen days — is called śukla-pakṣa; the fifteen days that follow the full moon are called kṛṣṇa-pakṣa. The last day of the dark half is called amāvāsyā. On the amāvāsyā the moon does not rise; its other name is darśa, the day of the sūrya-candra-saṅgama — of the conjunction of Sun and Moon. This amāvāsyā is the final day of every lunar month; therefore in every month there is one full moon and one new moon; in a lunar year there are twelve full moons and twelve new moons. The name of the lunar month is, by custom, derived from the nakṣatra in which the full moon falls: in the first month the full moon is in the nakṣatra Citrā, so the month is called Caitra; similarly the month whose full moon is in Viśākhā is Vaiśākha; the month whose full moon has the nakṣatra Jyeṣṭhā is Jyeṣṭha; and so on. In this system a month made of two fortnights is never of thirty or thirty-one days; since the moon's motion is such that it falls short of thirty days in the lunar month, a calculation on this basis shows a deficit of 10–11 days in each year. Therefore, in order to make the lunar year agree with the solar year, one lunar month is added once every three years; this is called adhikamāsa, 'the extra month'. This intercalary month exists only in the lunar system; the sense of the rik is that Varuṇa knows the measure of time of all 1,500 [?] — the printed numerals are not clear — months, including the twelve lunar months and the intercalary month that arises in the rik under discussion.

Varuṇa knows; and he knows those gods who sit (adhyāsate) above. Vātasya: the word vāta, ending in tan by Uṇ. 3-94 [āsihasi...], has the initial acute because of nit. Vartanim: 'vartaniḥ' meaning 'hymn' — for the word vartani in the sense of 'hymn' to take the end-acute, it is read in the umbhādi list; its accent by the suffix would be the middle one, but by vyatyaya the end is acute. Br̥hataḥ: the jas is acute by br̥hanmahator upasaṃkhyānam. Adhyāsate: since the laṭ ending is anudātta, the root's accent remains."

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Varuṇa knows the path of the wind, which is wide, attractive and great, and he knows the nature of the other gods who dwell in the upper region.

॥ English Translation ॥

He who knows the path of the vast, the graceful and the excellent wind and who knows those (gods) who reside above. (may he remove our bonds)

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ वातस्य, ऋष्वस्य, बृहतः — it is well known that the antarikṣa (the sky), the path along which the wind moves, is extremely spacious and beautiful to look at. ये अध्यासते — 'above' means the gods who dwell in the heavenly world, above even the antarikṣa. The sense is that Varuṇa knows the nature of these.

॥ English Translation ॥

(Varuna) who has distributed unlimited food to all men (and the gods) has filled our stomachs with food.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ Chief sense: the Varuṇa who has given food in full measure to gods and men — that Varuṇa has filled our stomachs with food; that is, he has given us food as much as we wish, so that we are satisfied. यशः — food; among the names for food beginning vājaḥ [the twenty-eight? names of food] the word yaśaḥ is read (Ni. [2-7]); so yaśaḥ means food. असामि — sāmi means half, 'incomplete'; asāmi means completely, abundantly. अस्माकं उदरेषु आ (चक्रे) — he has satisfied our stomachs; i.e. he has given food as we desire.

Translation: "My dhītayaḥ — Śunaḥśepa's thoughts — desiring Varuṇa, uruccakṣasam — to be seen by many — go away (parā yanti), turned away, with no return. An illustration: gāvo na — as cows go (gacchanti) anu gavyūtīḥ — toward the pastures, having in view the boundaries of the herd-land. Gavyūtīḥ: av for o of go before yūti in the Veda by P. 6-1-79; by the dāsībhārādi class the accent of the first member; or, 'yūti is a joining; the place where cows are joined [pastured]' as a bahuvrīhi, with the first member's accent. Ichchantīḥ: iṣu icchāyām, śatṛ for laṭ; śa after tudādi; cha for the last letter by P. 7-3-77 [iṣugamiyamām chaḥ]; the accent of the vikaraṇa remains." ⁹

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ गव्यूतीः अनु (gavyūtiḥ anu) — [with] the pastures in view | गावः न (gāvaḥ na) — as cows | उरुचक्षसम् (uruccakṣasam) — seen by many, Varuṇa | इच्छन्तीः (icchantīḥ) — desiring | मे (me) — my | धीतयः (dhītayah) — thoughts | परा यन्ति (parā yanti) — go back [turn toward him].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

As cows return, thinking of the pastures, so my thoughts, longing for Varuṇa who is seen by many, turn toward him.

॥ English Translation ॥

My thoughts always turn back to him who is seen by many, as the cows return to the pastures.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ मे धीतयः — my mind, my thoughts. परा यन्ति — 'go back' means [that they] again and again turn to Varuṇa. गावो न गव्यूतीः — gāvo yatra caranti sa bhūpradeśo

9. Grammar pages 334, noted briefly: the words treated are gavyūtiḥ [yu miśraṇāmiśraṇayoḥ, adādi; the cows are brought together (yūti); kvin in the locative sense of adhikaraṇa; go + yūti → gavyūti by P. 6-1-79 goryūtau chandasy upasaṃkhyānam — only in the Veda; the accent by the dāsibhārādī group P. 6-2-42; or as a bahuvrīhi with the first member's accent; yūti may mean 'ploughing/joining'; gavām yavanam atra, 'a place where cows are joined'] and icchantīḥ [iṣu icchāyām, tudādi, śatṛ in place of laṭ; the śa vikaraṇa is added by P. 3-1-77; iṣugamiyamām chaḥ P. 7-3-77 changes the last ṣ into cch; ñīp with ugit P. 4-1-6, num by P. 7-1-70; śatṛ's accent is lowered by tāsyānudāttenn... P. 6-1-186; the accent of the vikaraṇa śa remains, hence middle-acute]; numerals as read, pointers only.

gavyūtir ity ucyate: the place where cows graze — 'the pasture': as the cows go of their own accord, without anyone's prompting, to a place where grass has grown well, so my mind too fixes itself on Varuṇa; the intention is that my mind is attached to Varuṇa. उरुचक्षसम् — bahubhir draṣṭavyam: seen by many; or the one who looks at many.

॥ English Translation ॥

Let us together declare that my offering has been prepared and that you like the sacrificer (Hotri) accept the oblation which you like.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ वोचावहै — here this dual-ended word suggests both the sacrificer, King Hariścandra, and Śunaḥśepa, who is bound to the post. For, as said before, Śunaḥśepa is praying to Varuṇa in this sūkta for release from his own bondage; so of the two who pray to Varuṇa Śunaḥśepa is one. Since in this rik the giving of the oblation is spoken of, the other is the sacrificer, King Hariścandra. Therefore Śunaḥśepa ॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ Application. In the Varuṇapraghāsa sacrifice, when the oblation to Varuṇa is offered, this rik imaṃ me varuṇa is to be used as the puro-'nuvākyā; the section pañcamāṃ paurṇamāsyām of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra explains it in the sūtra imaṃ me varuṇa śrudhī (R̥. Saṃ. 1-25-19) tat tvā yāmi brahmaṇā vandamānaḥ (R̥. Saṃ. 1-24-11) (Āś. [2-17]). अवस्युः — rakṣaṇecchur aham: I who desire protection — here, the protection that consists in release from my bonds. आ चके — kai gai śabde: he speaks, i.e. he praises. Skandasvāmin explains the word: kāntikarmāyaṃ kāmāye pālayetyarthaḥ — 'it is a word of desire: I desire; the meaning is "protect me".' Hence the sense: 'I long for the release of my bonds; so protect me.'

Translation: "O medhira — wise Varuṇa! You shine (rājasi) in the midst of the whole (viśvasya) world — divaḥ of heaven ca and gmaḥ of the earth ca — such is [the whole]. Such as you are, in my yāmani — in the attaining of well-being (kṣema) — answer (prati śrudhi): give a promise; give the reply, 'I shall protect'. Divāḥ: the genitive's acute by ūḍidam.... Gmaḥ: the word gmā is read among the names of the earth (Ni. [1-1]); the loss of ā is excluded by P. 6-4-140 but nonetheless [it takes place] by vyatyaya; the ending's acute follows from the cessation of the udātta. Yāmani: yā prāpaṇe; manin by Uṇ. [4-145]; since nī, the first syllable acute. Śrudhi: explained earlier."

Note — Grammar pages 342–343, noted briefly: the words treated are divaḥ [the genitive singular of div; acute by P. 6-1-171 ūḍidampadādyappumraidyubhyaḥ; end-acute word], gmaḥ [gmā in the list of names for earth: P. 6-4-140 āto dhātoḥ would cause loss of the final ā of roots; the printed note explains that gmā is not a root in the strict sense but the sūtra's yoga-vibhāga device (ātaḥ alone) applies; the loss of ā in gmāḥ being thus sanctioned vyatyayena; the genitive ending, being preceded by a lost udātta, takes the acute by P. 6-1-161 anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ; therefore the case-ending bears the acute: gmaḥ], yāmani [yā prāpaṇe of the adādi class + manin by P. 3-2-... ato maninkranibvanipaś ca; locative singular ni → i optionally with loss of al by P. 6-4-136 vibhāṣā niśyoh; hence yāmani; nit, first-syllable acute] and śrudhi [explained in the preceding rik]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (हे) मेधिर ((he) medhira) — O wise Varuṇa | त्वम् (tvam) — you | दिवः च (divaḥ ca) — of heaven | गमः च (gmaḥ ca) — and of the earth | विश्वस्य (viśvasya) — of the whole universe including both | राजसि (rājasi) — shine | सः (saḥ) — such you | यामनि (yāmani) — in my request | प्रति श्रुधि (prati śrudhi) — give a reply [assure me].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O wise Varuṇa, you shine in the whole world including heaven and earth. Such as you are, give us the assurance that you will bestow good fortune on us who ask for it.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Varuna, you are wise and you shine in heaven and earth; hear my prayer and reply with a promise of prosperity.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ मेधिर — medhāvin: the intelligent, the knowing; of good understanding. Skandasvāmin explains yajñavān — one who is worshipped in sacrifices. यामनि — kṣemaprāptau — in the attaining of my well-being; or, for the attaining of well-being. Skandasvāmin gives for this word yāmani adhikaraṇatvāt manin pratyayaḥ [as an adhikaraṇa word]; 'at the time of death' — vṛtyam prati gamyāt, yasmin sa yāmaḥ maraṇakālaḥ ['the death-time'] — i.e. the root yā means 'go', and 'going' here is the going to death; therefore yāmani derived from this root (a locative of yāman) means 'at the time of death'. For me who am at the time of death — muñcāmi tvām na mriyase ['I release you, you will not die'] — Śunaḥśepa asks Varuṇa to give the assurance that he will be freed. प्रति श्रुधि — pratiśravaṇarūpaṃ vākyam uccāraya: speak a sentence of promise — 'I shall release you, Śunaḥśepa, from the bondage of the noose and protect you'; give such an answer.

गमः — gmā is read among the names of earth (Ni. [1-1-?]); here the genitive.

॥ English Translation ॥

Remove our upper bonds, untie the centre and the lower bonds that we may live.

and the next are to Agni. In the Prātaranuvāka, in the rite of Agni, in the Gāyatra metre, these two sūktas are to be recited; so it is laid down: 'of the two sūktas vasiṣvā hi, he should take out the last [rik]' (Āś. [4-13] [?])."

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ Vasiṣvā hi miyedhya is the third sūkta of the sixth anuvāka. It has ten riks. The Anukramaṇikā says: 'vasiṣva' — a sūkta with ten riks, to Agni. The seer of this sūkta is Śunaḥśepa; the metre is Gāyatrī. The following sūkta also has Agni as its deity. At the time of the recitation of the Prātaranuvāka mantras, in the Agni-rite, these two sūktas in the Gāyatrī metre are to be used; so Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra says: vasiṣvā hīti sūktayor uttamām uddharet (Āś. Translation: "Impelled by Varuṇa to praise Agni, Śunaḥśepa praised Agni with this sūkta and the one that follows. So it is handed down: 'Varuṇa said [to him], "Agni is the mouth of the gods, the kindly one; praise him now." He praised Agni with the twenty-two [riks] that follow' (Ai. Brā. 7-16). O miyedhya — fit for the medha, the sacrifice! O ūrjām pate — protector of foods, Agni! Vasiṣva: put on (vasiṣva) the vastrāṇi — the covering, [i.e.] the splendours; clothe [yourself]: become blazing with splendour. Hi — since you are splendid, as such perform (yaja) this our sacrifice — bring it to completion. Vasiṣva: vasa ācchādane; loṭ 2nd person singular thās → sva; the iṭ augment before the ārdhadhātuka beginning with v; root accent remains; lengthening in the Saṃhitā. Miyedhya: the augment iya inserted between m and e is Vedic. Ūrjām pate: the vocative's accent; the whole group is lowered by P. 8-1-... Semam: sas + imam, the loss of s before a vowel if it fills the pāda, P. 6-1-134 [soci lope cet pādapūraṇam]."

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ मियेध्य (miyedhya) — O one fit to be worshipped in the sacrifice | ऊर्जापते (ūrjām pate) — O protector of food, the source of life | (हे) अग्ने ((he) agne) — O Agni | वस्त्राणि (vastrāṇi) — [your] garments in the form of splendour | वसिष्

(vasiṣva) — put on | हि (hi) — therefore | सः (saḥ) — such you | नः (naḥ) — our | इमम् अध्वरम् (imam adhvaram) — this sacrifice | यज (yaja) — carry out.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Agni, worthy of the sacrifice and protector of the food that sustains life! Put on your garments of splendour; and, so adorned with radiance, bring this our sacrifice to completion.

॥ English Translation ॥ ³

(O Agni) lord of nourishment, you are being worshipped in the sacrifice; Put on your clothes (covering of light) and perform this our sacrifice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ So far Śunaḥśepa prayed to Varuṇa; Varuṇa, being gratified, directed him: 'O Śunaḥśepa, Agni is the mouth of the gods — that is, through Agni alone the gods accept the oblation offered in the sacrifice. Therefore praise Agni; then you will be freed from the bonds.' Accordingly Śunaḥśepa praises Agni with this sūkta vasiṣvā hi miyedhya and with the next, aśvaṃ na tvā vāravantam. On this the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa has the sentence kaṃ varuṇa uvācāgnir vai devānāṃ mukhaṃ suhrdayetamasmin nu stuhi so 'gniṃ tuṣṭāvottarābhir dvāviṃśatyā (Ai. Brā. 7-16).

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ सदा (sadā) — always | यविष्ठ (yaviṣṭha) — most youthful | अग्ने (agne) — O Agni | वरेण्यः (vareṇyaḥ) — chosen [by us] | मन्मभिः (manmabhiḥ) — with your splendours | दिवित्मता (divitmatā) — shining | वचः (vacaḥ) — praised with the words | नः (naḥ) — for us | होता (hotā) — performing the homa | नि (ni) — sit down.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ O Agni, you are ever young. We choose you for our sacrificial rite. You shine with your radiant splendours; being praised by us with luminous hymns, come here and sit down as the performer of our homa.

॥ English Translation ॥

O ever youthful Agni, being praised with brilliant hymn, sit down, here, as we have selected you as our Hotri to perform the sacrifice.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ सदा यविष्ठ — sarvadā yuvatama: always the youngest; ever youthful. Since Agni blazes up with great force whenever wood and the like are put in, he is called ever young. वरेण्यः — varaṇīyaḥ: one chosen — chosen by us for the sacrifice; or, 'the best'. मन्मभिः — mana jñāne; jñāpakais tejobhir yuktaḥ: the commentator explains it as 'endowed with radiance that makes you known'. The author of the Vedārthayatna explains manmabhiḥ as dhyānaiḥ, 'meditations' — that fits here too. दिवित्मता — dīptimatā: shining; since this word is an epithet of vacaḥ, it can be understood as 'splendid, full of meaning, mature' and similar senses.

4. the end of the passage is read with doubt

Note — Grammar pages 353–354, noted briefly: the words treated are śmā [sma — a nipāta; the lengthening of its vowel in the mantra by P. 6-3-136 nipātasya ca], yajati [yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu; laṭ 3rd singular; the verb would be lowered after an acute word by P. 8-1-28, but in sakhā sakhye the anuṣaṅga [yaja takes the nasal in the sense of 'give' to read sakhā...] makes it prathamoccaritā [first-uttered] so P. 8-1-... cādilope vibhāṣā does not lower it; or by P. 8-1-... hi ca the verb with hi is not lowered; śap and tip are anudātta, so the root-accent stands: yajati has first-syllable acute], sakhye [sakhi does not take the name ghī by P. 1-4-7 śeṣo ghy asakhi, so the dative ending ne takes yādāgama ...; sakhi from samāne khyāḥ sa codāttaḥ (Uṇ. 4-[?]) — khyā prakathane + iṇ [dit]; sa substituted for samāna with the acute; loss of ya-kāra; the ā of khyā is lost because of dit, hence sakhi; the sa being acute, sakhi is first-syllable acute; with the supiti rule P. 3-1-4 anudāttau suppitau the ending ne is anudātta, so the stem's own accent stands]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ आपिः (āpiḥ) — the kinsman | आपये (āpaye) — to his own kinsman | सखा (sakhā) — the dear friend | सख्ये (sakhye) — to his friend | सूनवे (sūnave) — to the one in the position of a son | पिता (pitā) — [as] a father | आ यजति हि स्म (ā yajati hi sma) — gives [what he wishes], truly | (तथा) वरेण्यः ((tathā) vareṇyaḥ) — [so do you], the chosen — | [give me what I desire].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Agni! As a kinsman gives to his own kinsman, as a friend gives to his dear friend what he desires, so — being like a father to me, who am as a son — fulfil my desire.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Agni, you are indeed as a loving father to a son, as a kinsman to a kinsman, as a friend to a friend.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ आपिः, आपये — bandhuḥ bandhave: a kinsman to a kinsman. As a kinsman acts towards his own kinsman with goodwill, so in this rik the ṛṣi makes known

Note — Grammar pages 359–360, noted briefly: the words treated are pūrvya [pūrve bhavaḥ pūrvyaḥ — yat in the sense of 'being in' by the Uṇ./ bhāve; in the vocative it takes first-syllable acute by P. 6-1-198 āmantritasya ca since it stands at the head of the pāda], hotaḥ [hu dānādanayoḥ, juhotyādi; trc in the sense of agent; in the vocative hotaḥ; both pūrvya and hotaḥ are āmantrita; by P. 8-1-72 āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat the former would be treated as non-existent, but by P. 8-1-74 nāmantrite samānādhikaraṇe sāmānyavacanam it is not so when the two words are co-referential, so hotaḥ is lowered by P. 8-1-19 āmantritasya ca], asya [idam + ṇas: a for idam; sya by P. 7-1-... ṇasaḥ syaḥ; the final of the stem by tyadādīnām aḥ P. 7-2-102; the case-ending's acute by P. 6-1-171], mandasva [madi stutimodamadasvapnakāntigatiṣu, bhvādi; loṭ 2nd singular thās → sva; num by P. 7-1-58 idito num dhātoḥ; śap; the verb is not lowered since P. 8-1-... āpādādau; the accent of the root stands, initial acute], sakhyasya [sakhyuḥ karma sakhyam, yat by P. 5-1-126 sakhyur yaḥ [print: 4-1-138?]; ya is yat so bha-status; the final i of sakhi is lost by P. 6-4-148 yasyeti ca; genitive singular; middle-acute through the

O Ancient Hotri, Agni, be pleased with this our sacrifice and with our friendship and listen to these our prayers.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ पूर्व — asmād ādeḥ pūrvam utpannaḥ: born before all of us — the ancient one. होतः — the performer of homa: he who summons the gods to the sacrifice. अस्य — of this sacrifice of ours being performed now. सख्यस्य — for [our] friendship, i.e. so as to show favour to us as to a friend. On the matter of the gods' friendship the author cites many R̥gvedic riks, which I list as printed (the glosses are mine and tentative):

तवेद्धि सख्यमस्तुतम् ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-२६-३]) taved dhi sakhyam astṛtam | |
— "Your friendship is indeed unbroken."

देवानां सख्यमुपसेदिमा वयं देवा न आयुः प्र तिरन्तु जीवसे ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-८९-२])
devānāṃ sakhyam upasedimā vayaṃ devā na āyuh pra tirantu jīvase | | — "We have approached the friendship of the gods; may the gods prolong our life that we may live."

अनु व्रातासस्तव सख्यमायुरनु देवा ममिरे वीर्यं ते ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-१६३?-८] [?]) anu vrātāsas tava sakhyam āyur anu devā mamire vīryam te || — "The hosts have followed your friendship and life; the gods have measured your valour."

ययोरस्ति प्र णः सख्यं देवेष्वध्याप्यम् ॥ (ऋ. सं. [८-१०-३] [?]) yayor asti pra ṇaḥ sakhyam deveṣv adhyāpyam || — "[Those two] whose friendship among the gods is to be studied [?]."

यदिमे सख्यमावर इमस्य पाह्यन्धसः । (ऋ. सं. [१-१०१-?]) yad ime sakhyam āvara imasya pāhy andhasaḥ | — "Since these have chosen [your] friendship, drink of this juice."

प्र सो अग्ने तवोतिभिः सुवीराभिस्तिरते वाजभर्मभिः । यस्य त्वं सख्यमावरः ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-३१-?]) pra so agne tavotibhiḥ suvīrābhis tirate vājabharmabhiḥ | yasya tvam sakhyam āvaraḥ || — "He, O Agni, goes forward with your aids, rich in heroes and bearing strength, whose friendship you have chosen."

and many other examples. मन्दस्व — madi stutimodamadasvapnakāntigatiṣu — be pleased, be glad.

Translation: "O Agni! Although (yac cid dhi) we worship — with śaśvatā — constant, tanā — abundant oblations — each and every different god, Varuṇa, Indra and the rest, of manifold kinds, yet all that oblation is offered in you (tve it) alone. Therefore even the worship directed to other gods is carried out by your power alone — that is the meaning. Tanā: tanu vistāre, kvip; or ac of the pacādi group; the instrumental's ā by supām suluk. Devam devam: doubling in the sense of constancy or repetition; the second is āmreḍita by P. 8-1-2, hence wholly anudātta by P. 8-1-3 anudāttaṃ ca. Yajāmahe: the verb is not lowered because it follows yat-type particles (P. 8-1-30). Tve: locative of yuṣmad; śe by supām suluk; tva for yuṣmad up to the m by P. 7-2-97; ... śe has the name pragrhya by P. 1-1-13, so prakṛtibhāva by P. 6-1-125 [plutapragrhyā aci nityam]. Hūyate: hveñ spardhāyām; lengthening by P. 6-4-2."

Note — Grammar pages 362–363, noted briefly: the words treated are tanā [tanu vistāre + kvip by P. 3-2-76; with the loss of everything, tan; or by nandigrahipacāḍibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ P. 3-1-134 — ac — so tana; the instrumental tā → ā by P. 7-1-39], devam devam [nityavīpsayoḥ P. 8-1-4: doubling; tasya paramāmreḍitam P. 8-1-2; anudāttaṃ ca P. 8-1-3 makes the repeated word anudātta], yajāmahe [yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu, lot/laṭ 1st plural mahiṇ; the print says the lowering by tiñ atīṇaḥ is prevented because of the yat-word (P. 8-1-66 yadvṛttān nityam), and by P. 8-1-30 nipātair yad yadihanta...], tve [yuṣmad + ñi → śe; tva; e by P. 6-1-87 / 6-1-94; śe is pragrhya by P. 1-1-13 īdūdeddvivacanam pragrhyam? — the print gives śe-pragrhya; then plutapragrhyā aci nityam gives no sandhi before a vowel] and hūyate [hu dānādanayoḥ, juhotyādi, laṭ in the passive: ta → te by P. 3-4-79; yak by P. 3-1-67; lengthening by P. 6-4-2 ākṛtsārvadhātukayor dīrghaḥ [print: ākṛt-sārvadhātukayoḥ]; so hūyate]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (अग्ने) ((agne)) — O Agni | यत् चित् हि (yat cit hi) — whatever | शश्वता (śaśvatā) — not failing even for one day | तना (tanā) — in great abundance | देवं देवम् (devam devam) — every god [Varuṇa, Indra, and others] | यजामहे (yajāmahe) — we worship | हविः (haviḥ) — that oblation | त्वे इत् (tve it) — in you alone | हूयते (hūyate) — is offered.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Agni! Every day without fail we offer plentiful oblations to Varuṇa, Indra and the other deities; yet all those oblations we offer first in you — that is, through you.

॥ English Translation ॥

Whatever we offer as plentiful oblations to the different deities every day is assuredly offered to (through) you.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ शश्वता — śāśvatena, nityena: every day, constantly. तना — vistrtena: abundant, with much oblation. देवं देवम् — anyam anyam varuṇendrādirūpaṃ nānāvidhaṃ devatāviśeṣam: each deity — Varuṇa, Indra and the other deities, one after another. त्वे इत् हूयते हविः — the oblation offered to the other deities is offered in you, Agni. The other gods are not seen directly by the eye, as the śruti says parokṣaṃ vā anye devā ijjante ('the other gods are worshipped indirectly'); so the oblation offered for them is offered with Agni as the medium, and you, the messenger of the gods, convey to them the oblation offered in you.

And may we too, svagnayaḥ — possessed of good fires — be dear to him: this is to be supplied. Viśpatih: by P. 6-2-18 [patyāv aiśvarye] the first member's accent would come, but parādiś chandasi bahulam gives the acute to the beginning of the final member. Vareṇyaḥ: vr̥ñ + eṇya (Uṇ. 3-98) by the pr̥ṣādi rule, first-syllable acute. Svagnayaḥ: in the bahuvrīhi the end-acute of the second member by P. 6-2-172 [nañsubhyām]."

Note — Grammar pages 365, noted briefly: the words treated are viśpatih [viśāṃ patih; patyāv aiśvarye P. 6-2-18 assigns the first member's accent when pati means 'lord'; the sūtra parādiś chandasi bahulam P. 6-2-199 gives, with bahulam, the acute on the beginning of the second member; hence viśpatih is middle-acute], vareṇyaḥ [vr̥ñ varane + eṇya by Uṇ. 3-98 vr̥ñah eṇyaḥ; P. 7-3-84 gives guṇa to the r before ārdhadhātuka; ur aṇ raparaḥ P. 1-1-51 makes it ar, hence vareṇya; the suffix accent would be expected but vr̥ṣādīnām ca P. 6-1-203 gives the first-syllable acute because vareṇya is read in the vr̥ṣādi list] and svagnayaḥ [śobhanā agnayo yeṣām, a bahuvrīhi; nañsubhyām P. 6-2-172 gives the end-acute to the second member in a bahuvrīhi after nañ or su, so su + agni is end-acute, agni being end-acute; before jas the i takes guṇa by P. 7-3-109 jasi ca; then ay by P. 6-1-78]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ विश्वपतिः (viśpatiḥ) — the protector of the people | होता (hotā) — the performer of the homa | मन्द्रः (mandraḥ) — the glad | वरेण्यः (vareṇyaḥ) — the chosen [the best] | नः (naḥ) — for us | प्रियः (priyaḥ) — kind [favourable] | अस्तु (astu) — may [Agni] be | वयम् (vayam) — we too | स्वग्नयः (svagnayaḥ) — possessing good fires | प्रियाः (priyāḥ) — dear [to Agni] | (स्याम) (syāma) — may we be.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ May Agni, the protector of the people, performer of the homa, glad and best, be favourable to us; and may we, who keep good fires, be dear to him.

॥ English Translation ॥

May Agni, the lord of men, the sacrificing priest (Hotri), the gracious, and the great (or the chosen) be kind (dear) to us; may we, possessed of holy fires, be dear to Agni.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ प्रियो नः, प्रियाः स्वग्नयो वयम् — in this rik Agni is praised with many epithets — viśpati, hotā, mandra, vareṇya — hence the ṛṣi uses the plural vayam of such an Agni. Or, since in the domestic worship [pratimaneya?] there are several fires such as the Gārhapatya, the word svagnayaḥ may have been used in the plural, meaning 'those who make the fires of our house bring us good' or 'our own fires', and so priyāḥ svagnayaḥ is used in the plural.⁵

Translation: "O Agni, amṛta — deathless! Atha — after the performance of the rite, may there be between us mortals — [that is] between both parties, the master of us [the sacrificer] and your master [?] — mithaḥ — mutually — praśastayaḥ: words of praise. Praise addressed to the sacrificer is: 'well performed'; to Agni: 'well favoured'. Atha: lengthening of the particle in the Saṃhitā. Amṛta: [vocative]. Martyānām: mṛñ prāṇatyāge ['to die']; the word marta ends in tan by Uṇ. 3-94; from it yat in the sense 'being in' in the Veda (P. 4-4-110); the a lost by P. 6-4-148; the accent is that of the suffix (middle). Santu: loss of the a of śnas. Praśastayaḥ: the gati keeps its accent."

Note — Grammar pages 369–370, noted briefly: the words treated are athā [atha is a nipāta by P. 1-4-57 cādayo 'sattve'; lengthened in the Saṃhitā by P. 6-3-136 nipātasya ca], amṛta [mṛñ prāṇatyāge, tudādi, kta; the nañ-compound; because it stands at the head of the pāda the lowering of the vocative is not applied (apādādau, P. 8-1-18); the first-syllable acute by P. 6-1-198 āmantritasya ca], martyānām [mṛñ + tan by Uṇ. 3-86 asihasimṛgrinyāñ [?]; guṇa → marta; bhave chandasi P. 4-4-110 → yat; the final a of marta lost P. 6-4-148 yasyeti ca; genitive plural with nuṭ P. 7-1-54 and lengthening by P. 6-4-3 nāmi; the yat-final is tit-svarita so the middle syllable is acute], santu [as bhuvi, adādi; loṭ 3rd plural jhi → antu by P. 3-4-86 eruḥ and anta by P. 7-1-3 jho 'ntaḥ; śap lost by P. 2-4-72 adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ; the a of as lost by P. 6-4-111 śnasor allopaḥ] and praśastayaḥ [pra + śaṃsu stutau + ktin; loss of the nasal by P. 6-4-24; the gati keeps its accent before a kṛt beginning with t, P. 6-2-50 tādau ca niti kṛtyatau; so first-syllable acute]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अमृत (amṛta) — O Agni, free of death | अथ (atha) — after the completion of the rite | प्रशस्तयः (praśastayaḥ) — words of praise | मर्त्यानाम् (martyānām) — of us mortals | नः

(naḥ) — to us | उभयेषाम् (ubhayeṣām) — of both parties [you and us] | मिथः (mithaḥ) — mutually [for each other's good] | सन्तु (santu) — may there be.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O deathless Agni! After the performance of the rite, may praises, offered mutually, bring happiness to both sides — to us and to you.

॥ English Translation ॥

And now, Agni, may there be an interchange of praises between you, the immortal, and us the mortals.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ उभयेषाम् — of you, Agni, and of us men: both [sides]. अमृते — free of death. प्रशस्तयः — praśaṃsārūpā vācaḥ; the commentator says: 'praise addressed to the sacrificer — "[the rite] was well performed" — and praise addressed to Agni — "[he] has been well favoured" — as mutual speech of praise'; so there is conversation and mutual praise between the sacrificer and Agni: 'carry out the sacrificial work well' [to Agni], and the sacrificer is blessed with honour and congratulations by Agni and by those who attend.

॥ English Translation ॥

Agni, Son of Strength, accept this Sacrifice and this our praise with the three different Sacrificial fires, and grant us abundant food.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣaya-gaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ विश्वेभिः अग्निभिः — with many fires: i.e. with those fires established in the sacrifice — the Āhavanīya, Gārhapatya and Dakṣiṇāgni — or with the many fires in the various places or houses. चनः — food; cana is a name for food, according to Yāska (Ni. [6-18]). सहसः — of strength: among the names of strength beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ the word sahas is read, so sahasah means 'of strength' (Ni. [2-9]). यहो — son: among the fifteen names for 'offspring', beginning with tukk, tokam, the word yahuḥ is read, so yaho is 'O son' (Ni. [2-2?]). In the R̥gveda Agni is sometimes also called sahasah sūnu, 'son of strength' — the son of sahas (strength or power) — as is specially seen. Some examples (the numerals marked as printed [?]; glosses mine and tentative):

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अध्वराणाम् (adhvarāṇām) — of the sacrifices
 | सम्राजन्तम् (saṃrājantam) — shining as an emperor | अग्निम्
 (agnim) — to Agni | त्वा (tvā) — to you | नमोभिः (namobhiḥ) —
 with salutations [of praise] | वन्द्यै (vandadyai) — to praise |
 वारवन्तम् (vāravantam) — with a tail | अश्वम् न (aśvam na) — like a horse [we praise you, who drive away enemies in all directions].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

You are the emperor of all sacrifices. As a horse, with its tail, drives away the gnats and flies in all directions, you drive away enemies in all directions with your flames; such Agni we praise with hymns.

॥ English Translation ॥ ³

We have come to worship Agni, the sovereign lord of sacrifices with praises; that Agni who scatters enemies like a horse which brushes off flies with his tail.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ In this rik Agni is described only as a horse with its tail. There is no obvious similarity between a horse with its tail and Agni; so the commentator supplies some words: 'as a horse with its tail drives off gnats and flies without trouble, so Agni drives off enemies.' अश्रं न — like a horse; the particle na here does not give a negation but the sense of comparison, 'as'; this sense of na exists in the Veda only, not in later Sanskrit. वारवन्तम् — in this word r is used in place of l by vyatyaya; so it means vālavantam, 'having a tail'. नमोभिः — with salutations, with praises. सम्राजन्तम् अध्वराणाम् — like an emperor in sacrifices — Agni who shines with great glory, as the verb rāj dīptau implies. There is no sacrifice without Agni; therefore he is chief, the one who shines as lord and emperor.

Translation: "May that very Agni be suśevaḥ — very gracious — to us: this is to be supplied. What kind? Śavasā sūnuḥ — son of strength; pr̥thupragāmā — of wide-ranging going. And may he be mīḍhvān — the rainer of desires, the one who showers down wishes — for us (babhūyāt). Ghā naḥ: lengthening by P. 6-3-133 [rci tunuḥgamakṣutaṅkutroruṣyāṇām]. Śavasā: jas replaced by [ā, the instrumental] by supām suluk. Pr̥thupragāmā: 'a going forward is pragāma'; ghañ by P. 3-3-... [halaś ca]; 'he of whom the going is wide'; the ā by the lengthening of the preceding by supām suluk; the first member's accent in the bahuvrīhi. Suśevaḥ: from śīn with van (Uṇ. 1-150); the second member's initial acute by P. 6-2-119 [ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi], overriding the end-acute of naṅsubhyām. Mīḍhvān: formed by nipātana [P. 3-2-107 dāśvān sāhvān mīḍhvāṃś ca]. Babhūyāt: bhū sattāyām; the Vedic [leṭ/liṭ] sense; a by P. 7-4-73."

Note — Grammar pages 379–380, noted briefly: the words treated are ghā naḥ [gha is an Upadeśa-particle; its vowel is lengthened in the Saṃhitā in a rik by P. 6-3-133 rci tunuḥgamakṣutaṅkutroruṣyāṇām], śavasā [śavas 'strength'; the ending ṭā replaced by ā via supām suluk P. 7-1-39 and vyatyayo bahulam], pr̥thupragāmā [gam + ghañ with pra: halaś ca P. 3-3-121; upadhāvr̥ddhi P. 7-2-116 ata upadhāyāḥ; pr̥thuḥ pragāmo yasya: a bahuvrīhi; nominative singular su → ā by supām suluk; the accent of the first member, P. 6-2-1], suśevaḥ [śīn svapne + van by Uṇ. 1-150 iṅśibhyām van; guṇa; śeva; the su-compound: naṅsubhyām P. 6-2-172 would give the end-acute, but P. 6-2-119 ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi gives the acute to the first syllable of a disyllabic second member, e.g. śeva], mīḍhvān [miha secane; kvasu by nipātana P. 3-2-107; ha → ḍha by P. 8-2-31; the dhva with ṣṭutva; the nominative singular: num, lengthening, su lost, and t/s lost; in the Saṃhitā mīḍhvāñ by P. 8-3-1 ato 'ṭi nityam], and babhūyāt [bhū sattāyām, *bhvādi; the Vedic leṭ/liṭ forms; liñ → yāsut by P. 3-4-103; doubling; i → a for the reduplicate by bhavater aḥ P. 7-4-73; jaśtva; the verb is lowered since asmākam, an acute word, follows? — the print says: since asmākam is the atīṇanta, the lowering applies to babhūyāt *by P. 8-1-28]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ शवसा (śavasā) — of strength | सूनुः (sūnuḥ) — son | पृथुप्रगामा (pr̥thupragāmā) — having swift movement | सः घ (saḥ gha) — that very Agni | नः (naḥ) — to us | सुशेवः (suśevah) — gracious [of friendly mind] | अस्माकम् (asmākam) — our | मीढ्वान् (mīḍhvān) — the showerer of desired things | बभूयात् (babhūyāt) — may he be.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

May that Agni, the son of strength, of swift movement, be gracious to us and shower down our wishes.

॥ English Translation ॥

May he (Agni), the son of strength who moves swiftly, give comfort to us and shower down blessings upon us.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ घ — a particle meaning 'indeed'; its vowel is lengthened in the Saṃhitā for the sake of the metre. सूनुः शवसा — son of strength, or of power. We have explained this word before (see p. 372). पृथुप्रगामा — prakarṣeṇa gamanaṃ pragāmaḥ; pr̥thuḥ pragāmo yasyāsau: one of great motion; that is, who by his rays pervades all round. सुशेवः — sumukhaḥ: kind; may he be favourable and gracious to us. मीढ्वान् — miha secane; kāmānāṃ varṣayitā: the showerer of desires, i.e. the giver.

O Chitrabhanu, or Agni with wonderful or various lustre, you are the distributor of riches as the waves of a river are parted by islets (in the middle of the river); you shower rewards upon the giver of oblations.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ विभक्ता — viśiṣṭasya dhanasya prāpayitāsi: you give all the wealth. चित्रभानो — this word is used specially in addressing Agni. Citra — wonderful, or of many kinds; bhānu — rays; hence 'with wonderful or varied lustre'. सिन्धोरूमा — 'as the waters of a river are divided': here the ā [of ūrmā] indicates the sense of iva ('like'), as the commentator says. Syandū prasravaṇe — because it flows as a stream, the word sindhu means a river. क्षरसि — vr̥ṣṭim karoṣi: you cause the rain; the meaning is 'you pour [the desired things] as rain does'.

Translation: "In the Āprorṇāma [?] — in the extra uktha of the Hotṛ — the triplet jarābodha tad viviḍḍhi is a stotriya; so it is laid down in the section yasya paśavo nopadadheran: 'the extra ukthas, jarābodha tad viviḍḍhi' (Āś. [6-11] [?]). O jarābodha — Agni, awakened (bodha) by praise (jarā)! For every people (viśe-viśe), that is, for the favour of the people in the form of sacrificers, for the accomplishment of the sacrifice (yajñiyāya), enter (viviḍḍhi) that very worship. And the sacrificer also offers to you, Rudra — the terrible Agni — a drśikam — pleasing, excellent — stomaṃ — hymn: this is to be supplied. Yāska explains thus: 'jarā is praise, from jarati of the sense of praising; bodha in it, or tayā bodhayitā [one who awakens by it]; do that; for the worship of every man, a pleasing stoma for Rudra' (Ni. 10-8). Jarābodha: jvaṣ vayohānau [to decay with age]; here the sense of praise; [the suffix] aj by P. 3-3-104 [?]."

O Agni, awakened by praise! For the success of each man's sacrifice, enter the sacrificial place of the gods. That sacrificer too offers to you, of terrible form, pleasing hymns.

॥ English Translation ॥

(O Agni) you who are awakened by praise enter into the oblation for the completion of the sacrifice that benefits mankind; the worshipper offers beautiful (or agreeable) prayers to the terrible Agni.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Application. In the Soma-sacrifice [Āprorṇāma?], the priest called Hotṛ is to recite, at the time of reciting the atirikta-uktha śastra mantras, the three riks beginning jarābodha (R. Saṃ. 1-27-10, 11, 12). Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra, in the section yasya paśavo nopadadheran, explains it in the sūtra atiriktokthāni jarābodha tad viviḍḍhi (Āś. [6-11]).

जराबोध — jarayā stutyā bodhamāna: one who is awakened by praise. In order that Agni may be awakened at dawn for carrying out the sacrifice in the sacrificial ground, these three riks beginning jarābodha are used at that time. विविद्धि — praviśa: enter. विशेविशे — for every people; for every sacrificer. यज्ञियाय — for the success of the sacrifice; for the sacrifice to be performed in complete form. रुद्राय — krūrāyogney: to Agni of terrible form; because Agni burns up all things, he has the nature of Rudra. Among the thirteen names of praisers beginning rebhaḥ, jaritā [etc.] the word rudra is read (Ni. [3-16]), so rudrāya may mean 'to the praiser'; here one can take it either as 'to Agni, who is pleased by praise' or 'to the Agni who is praised with hymns'. दृशीकम् — darśanīyaṃ saṃdarśanīyam: beautiful, excellent; stomaṃ — hymn; the words yajamānaḥ karoti ['the sacrificer offers'] must be supplied.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ महान् (mahān) — great in qualities | अनिमानः (animānaḥ) — unlimited | धूमकेतुः (dhūmaketuḥ) — known by smoke | पुरुश्चन्द्रः (puruścandraḥ) — of surpassing radiance | सः (saḥ) — that Agni | नः (naḥ) — our | धिये (dhiye) — for the [sacrificial] rite | वाजाय (vājāya) — for food | हिन्वतु (hinvatu) — may he be pleased [may he please].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

May Agni — great in qualities, unlimited, known by smoke, of great radiance — be pleased with our rite and gladden us with food.

॥ English Translation ॥

May the great, illimitable, smoke-bannered and brilliant Agni be pleased with our rite and grant (inspire) us food.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ अनिमानः — na vidyate nimāno 'sya: one with no nimāna [measure]; one without measure; unlimited. धूमकेतुः — one whose ketu (banner) is smoke; it is well known that smoke is Agni's flag. पुरुश्चन्द्रः — cadi āhlādane dīptau ca; puruścandro bahudīptiḥ: one of much radiance. धिये — karmaṇe prajñāyai: of the names for 'act' beginning apaḥ, apnaḥ, the word dhī is read (Ni. [2-1]), so dhī means 'act'; and of the eleven [?] names for 'intellect' beginning ketaḥ, ketuḥ, the word dhī is read (Ni. [3-9]), so dhī means 'intellect'. Here we pray: 'so that the sacrifices that we perform may be completed, and for our prajñā — knowledge — grant us [food]'. हिन्वतु — prīṇayatu: may he be pleased; may he grant us food and the like.

Translation: "May that Agni hear us (śṛṇotu naḥ), who are furnished with ukthas — hymns. An illustration: revān iva — as, in the world, a wealthy king listens to the hymn of his bards. What is Agni like? Viśpatiḥ — protector of the people; daivyaḥ — belonging to the gods, for another śruti says 'Agni is indeed the Hotṛ of the gods' (Ai. Brā. 2-38 [?]); ketuḥ — the messenger, the announcer, as the śruti says 'Agni was the messenger of the gods' (Tai. Saṃ. 2-5-8-5 [?]); bṛhadbhānuḥ — of vast rays. Sa revān: loss of su of sas by P. 6-1-132 [etattadoḥ sulopo 'koranañsamāse hali]. Revān: saṃprasāraṇa of rayi before matup, by bahulam; pararūpa; guṇa; v for m of matup; the acute from the ā-ending. Viśpatiḥ: the second member's initial acute by parādiś chandasi bahulam. Bṛhadbhānuḥ: the first member's accent in the bahuvrīhi."

Note — Grammar page 403, noted briefly: the words treated are sa revān [sas + revān: the su is lost before a consonant by P. 6-1-132], revān [rayi + matup; in the Veda rai → re by the vārttika rayermatau bahulam with saṃprasāraṇa; the rule P. 6-1-37 na saṃprasāraṇe saṃprasāraṇam prevents a second saṃprasāraṇa, so only the y → i; saṃprasāraṇāc ca P.

6-1-108 gives pūrvarūpa; ād guṇaḥ → e; matup's m → v by P. 8-2-15 chandasīraḥ; nominative singular with num, lengthening, loss of su and t; first-syllable acute by the vārttika āre śabdāc ca matupa udāttatvam vaktavyam; revān iva — n → ru and anunāsika before iva as before], viśpatiḥ [viśāṃ patiḥ; P. 6-2-18 patyāv aiśvarye would give the first member's accent, replaced by P. 6-2-199 parādiś chandasi bahulam, giving the acute to the beginning of the second member] and br̥hadbhānuḥ [br̥hati bhānavo yasya, a bahuvrīhi; P. 6-2-1 gives the first member's accent; the ā after bh is acute]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ विश्वपतिः (viśpatiḥ) — protector of the people | दैव्यः (daivyaḥ) — belonging to the gods | केतुः (ketuḥ) — the messenger of the gods | बृहद्भानुः (br̥hadbhānuḥ) — of vast rays | सः अग्निः (saḥ agniḥ) — that Agni | रेवान् इव (revān iva) — like a rich king, listening to his bards' praises | उक्थैः (ukthaiḥ) — with hymns | नः (naḥ) — us | शृणोतु (śṛṇotu) — may he hear.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

May that Agni — protector of the people, belonging to the gods, the messenger of the gods, of great shining rays — hear our hymns as a wealthy king hears the praises of his bards.

॥ English Translation ॥

May Agni, of vast splendour, the lord of men, the invoker and messenger of gods hear us through our prayers as a wealthy king listens to his followers.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ रेवानिव — dhanavān rājā: a king who is rich; or a rich man. It is natural, in the world, for people to praise a rich man, and for him to be pleased at hearing that praise. विश्वपतिः — prajāpālakaḥ: Agni who protects the people. दैव्यः — belonging to the gods: i.e. of the company of the gods; moreover because Agni invokes the gods, he is called dūta — the messenger. On this the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa has the sentence agnir vai devānāṃ hotā (Ai. Brā. [2-38]) and the Taittirīya Saṃhitā has agnir vai devānāṃ dūta āsīt (Tai. Saṃ. [2-5-8-5]). केतुः — since ketu has the sense prajñā, the commentator gives for the word an alternative meaning, 'the messenger who makes the gods known, as he brings them to the place of sacrifice'; as the word also has the sense of 'act' [karma], ketuḥ may be taken as 'one who completes sacrificial acts'. बृहद्भानुः — prauḍharaśmiḥ: of fierce rays — one with fiery, burning rays.

Translation: "In the japa [muttering] before the srug-dāpana [the giving of the ladle] at the Darśa-pūrṇamāsa, this rik namo mahadbhyaḥ is used; so it is laid down in the section brahmādene prāśiṣyamāṇe: 'sūryo no divaspātu; namo mahadbhyo namo arbhakebhyaḥ' (Āś. [1-9] [?]). Impelled by Agni, Śunaḥśepa praised all the gods (viśvān devān) with this rik. So it is handed down: 'Agni said to him, "Now praise the Viśvedevas; then we shall release you." He praised the Viśvedevas with this rik, namo mahadbhyo namo arbhakebhyaḥ' (Ai. Brā. [2-13] [?]). Mahantaḥ: those greater in qualities; arbhakāḥ: those lesser in qualities; yuvānaḥ: the young; āśinaḥ: those pervaded by age, the old. Adoration to the gods of these four kinds, as named. If (yadi) we are able (śaknavāma) — if in some way we may have power by wealth and the like — then (tarhi) we shall worship the gods now (yajāma). O gods! May I not break off (mā vṛkṣi) the praise (śaṃsam) of the elder (jyāyasaḥ) — the foremost — deity, begun on every side: may I not cause it to be interrupted. Āśinebhyaḥ: from aśū vyāptau; the Uṇādi inac; end-acute through cit. Yajāma: śap is anudātta; the verb is lowered by tiṇ atinaḥ. Śaknavāma: śakḷ śaktau; miṇ by P. 3-4-... [loḍuttamasya pic ca]; the āt augment; śnu by P. 3-1-73; no lowering because of yat. Jyāyasaḥ: jya for praśasya before īyasun by P. 5-3-61; ā by P. 6-4-160 [jyād ādīyasaḥ]; first-syllable acute from nit. Śaṃsam: ghaṇ by P. 3-3-121 [halaś ca]. Vṛkṣi: o vraścū bhedane ['to cut']; the ātmanepada first person by vyatyaya; iṭ; sic for cli in the luṇi; no iṭ by P. 7-2-44 [svarati sūti...]; loss of s by P. 8-2-29 [skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca]; ṣa by P. 8-2-36 [vraścabhraṣja...]; k for ṣ before s by P. 8-2-41 [ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si]; śatva by P. 8-3-59; no aṭ since joined with mā."

Translation (provisional): "The sūkta yatra grāvā is the fifth [of this anuvāka] and has nine riks. The first six are in Anuṣṭubh; the three beginning āyajī are in Gāyatrī. The first four are to Indra; then two have the mortar (ulūkhala) as deity; the two next have both mortar and pestle (musala); of the last, ucchiṣṭam, one of Hariścandra, the pressing-skin (adhiṣavaṇa-carma) or Soma is the deity [reading doubtful]. So the Bṛhaddevatā says: 'with the last [rik] he praises either the pressing-skin or the Soma' (Br. 3-101 [?]). So also the Anukramaṇikā [the wording is garbled in my reading]. The first four are applied in the homa [of the opening?]; the four from the fifth in the pressing; the last at the Droṇakalaśa, in the pouring-out of the Soma."

O Indra! In the sacrificial rite in which the broad-based stone is lifted up in order to crush the soma-creeper, [do you], knowing that the soma-juice pressed in the mortar in that rite is prepared for you alone, partake of it.

॥ English Translation ॥ ⁵

Indra, in the sacrifice in which flat-bottomed stone is raised to press the Soma-juice, partake of that Soma expressed in the mortar.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Chief sense. O Indra! In this sacrifice the soma-creeper is placed in the mortar, and a broad-based stone is raised in the hand for crushing it, and the juice is taken; know that the soma-juice thus crushed and standing here is prepared for you alone; accept it, that is, drink it, and be satisfied.

The preparation of the soma-juice (summary of the author's long note, pp. 411–413). In the Soma-yāga it is customary to crush, press and strain the soma-creeper with a stone, mix with it milk, curds and barley, offer it to the gods, and then for the priests and the sacrificer to drink the rest. This is done on the chief days in the morning, at midday and in the evening — the prātaḥsavana, mādhyandinasavana and tṛtīyasavana — the pressing being called abhiśavana, savana. The soma-creeper is no longer found nowadays; formerly it grew on river banks and on the mountains and was brought, at great cost, for sacrificial use; even now the rite of somakrayaṇa ('buying the soma') is performed. The creeper is brown (babhru), ruddy (aruṇa), or yellow-brown; its juice is amśu, indu, vṛṣan, vāṇa (the Ṛgveda calls the stalk parvan); the author cites a long list of Ṛgveda passages for these names (numerals partly illegible at this resolution, so I omit them rather than guess). The mortar in which it is crushed is the ulūkhala; the stone for pounding is the grāvan or adri; the vessel in which it is offered to the gods is camū; the vessels for the priests' drinking are kalāśa and camasa; the skin on which it is pounded is the adhiṣavaṇa-carma, of ox-hide (gocarma); the vessels for collecting the juice are kośa, sadastha, dru, vana, droṇa; the ladle is sruva; the strainer of wool is pavitra; the juice is called śukra or śuci [bright], and, according to colour, babhru, harita, aruṇa, aruṣa, śoṇa. To give the juice a taste, milk is mixed (gavāśira), curds (dadhyāśira), barley (yavāśira); the residue after pressing is rjīṣa.

ग्रावा — the stone for crushing the soma: here it is described as prṭhubudhna, a stone with a broad base — like the round pounding stone in a stone mill. पृथुबुध्नः — sthūlamūla ūrdhva unnataḥ: broad at the base; a stone that is round like a grindstone. ऊर्ध्वो भवति सोतवे — to lift the stone up in the hand to crush the creeper — when it is necessary to pound the creeper placed in the mortar or on the stone, another stone is held and brought down: this is what is said here. उलूखलसुतानाम् — the ulūkhala is the mortar, a stone in the middle of which there is a hollow, the vessel to receive the creeper pounded and its juice. On the word ulūkhala Yāska says:

उलूखलम् । उलूखलमुरुकरं वोर्ध्वखं वोर्ककरं वोरु मे कुर्विति वा ब्राह्मणम् । उरुकरं
वैतत्र्यदुलूखलमित्याचक्षते परोक्षेणेति ब्राह्मणम् ॥ (नि. ९-१० [?])

ulūkhalam | ulūkhalam urukaraṃ vordhvakhaṃ vorkakaraṃ voru me kurv iti vā brāhmaṇam | urukaraṃ vaitat tryad ulūkhalam ity ācakṣate parokṣeṇeti brāhmaṇam || (ni. 9-10 [?]) — "Ulūkhala: either urukara, 'making much [food]'; or ūrdhvakha, 'a hollow that is upright'; or ūrkkara, 'making sap' [ūrj]; or 'Make much for me!' [uru me kuru] — so the Brāhmaṇa; 'they call this urukara indirectly by the name ulūkhala' — [so says] the Brāhmaṇa." ⁶

6. The Kannada exposition follows: the l is for r, so urukhara/urukara; the grain placed in it and pounded with the pestle gives much food; or the one on which the creeper is crushed gives the juice; and so on.

The Taittirīya Saṃhitā lists ten sacrificial implements:

यो वै दश यज्ञायुधानि वेद मुखतोऽस्य यज्ञः कल्पते । स्प्यश्च कपालानि चाग्निहोत्रहवणी च
शूर्पं च कृष्णाजिनं च शम्या चोलूखलं च मुसलं च दृषच्चोपला चैतानि वै दश यज्ञायुधानि य

śamyā colūkhalaṃ ca musalaṃ ca dṛṣac copalā caitāni vai daśa yajñāyudhāni ya evaṃ veda mukhato 'sya yajñāḥ kalpate* | — "He who knows the ten sacrificial weapons — for him the sacrifice is arranged from the very start: the sphyā (wooden sword), the kapālas (potsherds), the agnihotra-havaṇī (ladle), the sūrpa (winnowing-basket), the black antelope skin, the śamyā (peg), the mortar, the pestle, the dṛṣad (lower stone) and the upalā (upper stone). These are the ten weapons of the sacrifice; for him who knows thus the sacrifice is arranged from the very start." ⁷ The author then explains each: the sphyā is a wooden sword for cutting darbha and the like; the kapālas are the potsherds on which the puroḍāśa cake is baked; the agnihotra-havaṇī is a wooden ladle-like vessel for the agnihotra oblation; the sūrpa is the winnowing basket; the kṛṣṇājina is the black antelope-skin on which the pounding is done; the śamyā is the peg used for killing the animal; the ulūkhala, the mortar, is for pounding grain and pressing soma; the musala, pestle, for pounding grain; the dṛṣad is the lower stone on which soma is pounded, or a stone slab; the upalā is the pebble stone used to crush what is placed on the dṛṣad. Of these ten implements, the mortar is one.

अव इत् — avagatyaiḥ: knowing; i.e. 'knowing that the soma-juice pressed in the mortar is prepared for you'. The commentator gives ava the sense avagamanārtha ('knowing'). Skandasvāmin takes ava and it as prepositions to be joined with the verb, and glosses ava it jalgulaḥ as punar punar avagira pibety arthaḥ —

7. Tai. Saṃ. reference as read, [?].

'swallow again and again; drink'. जल्गुलः — gala adane; bhakṣaya: eat, drink — 'knowing that the juice of the soma-creeper pressed in the mortar is prepared for you alone, drink it'.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O Indra! In the sacrificial rite in which the two pressing-boards are spread out wide like two hips, take the soma-juice pressed in the mortar — knowing it to be prepared for you alone.

॥ English Translation ॥

Where, Indra, the two halves (or platters) of the Soma-press are placed close together like the broad hips of a woman, partake of that Soma expressed in the mortar.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ जघना अधिषवण्या — jaghanā means the two hip-regions of women, the upper parts of the thighs; they are by nature broad and fleshy. Adhiṣavaṇa means the wooden boards [vessels] for filling with soma-juice; they are as big as hips — that is, they hold much juice. Or the hip-regions touch each other when close; so when the juice is taken, the two boards, rubbing against each other, press the soma and take the juice: that is the intention. On this occasion adhiṣavaṇa means the two wooden boards used for pressing out the soma-juice. Between the ends of these boards the soma-creeper is placed, and the juice is pressed out. The seer compares the rubbing of these boards with the hip-regions of a woman. Or, as the commentator explains, the adhiṣavaṇa means the large wooden vessels used for filling with the pressed soma; these, like women's hips, are large and hold much juice — that is the chief intention. 9. Grammar, noted briefly: the last word treated is kṛtā [ḍukṛñ karaṇe + kta; the dual ending is replaced by ā by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk...]; numerals as read.

O Indra! In the sacrificial rite in which they tie a rope round the churning-staff, as one ties reins to hold back a horse, know that the soma-juice pressed in the mortar in that rite is prepared for you alone, and partake of it.

॥ English Translation ॥

Indra, where they bind the churning staff with ropes like reins to restrain (a horse), partake of that Soma expressed in the mortar.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ In this rik the seer describes the process of churning butter with a churning-stick and rope, in which the rope round the churning-stick is compared to the reins tied to a horse. The reins tied to a horse let it go no further than the driver wishes; so the rope fixed to the churning-staff makes it work under control. The seer thus describes the sacrifice as adorned with works of churning and the like. मन्थाम् — mathi vilodane; mathnāty anena iti manthā: the churning-staff used for churning. रश्मीन् यमितवा इव — here the word aśva is not stated, but to complete the sense the commentator explains 'as one ties the reins of a horse'. Though raśanā means a rope, how the word raśmi got this sense the commentator does not explain.

Translation: "O ulūkhalaka — dear mortar! Although (yac cid dhi) you are employed in every house for pounding [grain], yet here, in this Vedic rite, with the sharp strokes of the pestle, utter (vada) a sound dyumattamam — most brilliant, exceedingly bright, with a great noise. An illustration: jayatām iva dundubhiḥ — as, in war, the drum of kings who have won the victory makes a great sound. Yāska has explained the word ulūkhalā thus [the same passage as under Rik 1]. Ulūkhalaka: the first-syllable acute [vocative]; since the sūtra apādādaḥ excludes ... the lowering does not apply. Yuyjase: the yak accent remains; no lowering since the yat-type particle precedes. Dyumattamam: kvip of the saṃpadādi class for the sense 'to shine'; ut for div by P. 6-1-131; y by yaṇ ...; matup is acute by [hrasvanuḍbhyām matup]; [here follows an objection about whether div in P. 6-1-131 means the stem or the root, with ākṣadyūḥ as an example — read with doubt]."

Note — Grammar pages 426, noted briefly: the words treated are ulūkhalaka [the vocative singular: since the sūtra āpādāda forbids the lowering at the beginning of the pāda... the word ulūkhalaka has the vocative āmantrita status, but being at the head of the line it is not lowered; the suffix ka gives the middle acute; ū is acute], yuyjase [yuja samādhau, divādi; laṭ in the passive; yak is ñit-like; the accent of yak remains because the sūtra tāsyānudātenñīdadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam... makes se anudātta; the word is middle-acute; tiñ atīṇaḥ does not lower it because it follows yat — P. 8-1-30 and P. 8-1-66], and dyumattamam [div in the sense of 'shining' (a samṣadādi word with kvip); div + u → dya by P. 6-1-131 diva ut; dyumat + tamap in the sense of excess; matup after a short-voweled stem gets the acute by P. 6-1-176; ...the print adds a long argument about diva ut applying to the stem and not the root, with the example akṣadyūḥ and the lakṣaṇā sense dīpti]; numerals as read, pointers only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ उलूखलक (ulūkhalaka) — O mortar | यत् चित् हि (yat cit hi) — although | गृहेगृहे (gr̥he-gr̥he) — in every house | युज्यसे (yuyjase) — you are employed | इह (iha) — in this Vedic rite especially | जयताम् (jayatām) — of the victorious | दुन्दुभिः इव (dundubhiḥ iva) — like the war-drum | द्युमत्तमम् (dyumattamam) — [a sound] with exceeding brilliance | वद (vada) — utter.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O mortar! Although you are by nature to be found in every house, in this Vedic rite you must make a ringing sound, loud and clear, for everyone to hear, like the war-drums of conquerors. That is, sound forcefully.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Mortar, although you are employed in every house (for household purposes), make a most roaring sound (in the sacrifice) like the drums of victorious warriors.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ गृहेगृहे — in every house; for pounding grain, a mortar is present in every house. उलूखलक — ulūkhala — mortar; although the mortar is an inanimate object, it is here addressed, one must understand, as the deity presiding over it. We have explained the meaning of the word ulūkhala under the first rik of this sūkta. द्युमत्तमम् — atīśayena dīptam, prabhūtheadhvaniyuktam: of exceeding brightness, that is, with a very loud sound — the idea is that the sound which is heard when the soma-creeper is placed in the mortar and pounded with the grāvan is made loud. जयतामिव दुन्दुभिः — yathā yuddhe jayaṃ prāpnuvatāṃ rājñāṃ dundubhir mahāntaṃ dhvaniṃ karoti tadvat: as the kings or warriors who have won victory in battle sound their victory-drum loudly. दुन्दुभिः — a bherī, a war-drum.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (हे) वनस्पते ((he) vanaspate) — O tree-formed mortar [or mortar made of wood] | ते (te) — your | अग्रम् इत् (agram it) — in front, at the top | वातः (vātaḥ) — the wind | वि वाति स्म (vi vāti sma) — blows specially | अथो (atho) — therefore | (हे) उलूखल ((he) ulūkhala) — O mortar | इन्द्राय (indrāya) — for Indra | पातवे (pātave) — to drink | सोमम् (somam) — the soma-juice | सुनु (sunu) — press out.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

O mortar in the form of a tree, or made of a tree! The wind blows specially in front of you [by the strokes of the pestle]. Therefore press out the soma-juice for Indra to drink.

॥ English Translation ॥

And, lord of the forest, the wind is blowing gently over your head; therefore, O mortar, press out the Soma for Indra to drink.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ वनस्पते — here the seer addresses the mortar as vanaspati, 'lord of the forest', which is to be understood from the fact that the mortar is made of wood; mortars are made both of stone and of wood; the one used here may be a wooden one; hence the word vanaspati is used. वातो वि वात्यग्रमिन् — the wind blows in front, or above; the commentator says that, by the strokes of the pestle, the air stirs and blows. This sense does not fit very well. उलूखल — ūrdhvaṃ khaṃ yasya sa ulūkhalaḥ: one whose hollow (kha, space) is upward.

Translation: "These two, mortar and pestle — āyaji, the instruments of sacrifice on every side; vājasātāmā, most bountiful givers of food — tā te khalu — they, indeed, uccā — with a loud sound — vijarbhr̥taḥ: they keep working back and forth, repeatedly. An illustration: like the two horses of Indra (harī iva) that are eating (bapsatā) andhāṃsi — grain such as gram. Here Yāska explains: 'āyaji are things to be offered to; the two collectors of food, they move noisily up and down, like the two [horses] eating their food' (Ni. 9-42 [?]). Āyaji: i in the instrumental sense by the Uṇādi rule; the kṛdanta second member's accent. Vājasātāmā: 'who gives (sanoti) food (vāja)' — viṭ by P. 3-2-67; ā for the nasal by P. 6-4-41; tamap in the sense of excess; supāṃ suluk. Vijarbhr̥taḥ: hr̥ñ haraṇe with yaṇ-luk, rugāgama by P. 7-4-91; the dual tas; the śap is lost as in the adādi class; no guṇa by P. 1-1-5; bha for ha by hr̥grahor bhaś chandasi; the suffix's accent; no lowering of the verb. Bapsatā: bhasa bhartsanadīptyoḥ; śluḥ; doubling; śatṛ; loss of the penultimate by P. 6-4-100; no num by P. 7-1-78; first-syllable acute by P. 6-1-189."

Note — Grammar pages 431–432, noted briefly: the words treated are āyaji [ā + yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu + i in the instrumental sense (an Uṇādi suffix), the compound with the gati ā takes the kṛdanta-final accent by P. 6-2-139; dual au → ī by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk; the word is end-acute], vājasātama [vājaṃ sanoti; ṣaṇu dāne, tanādi; viṭ by P. 3-2-67 janasanakhanām sañjhaloḥ; the nasal of the root → ā by P. 6-4-41 viḍvanoranunāsikasyāt; vājasā; tamap + dual with ā by supām suluk; the second member's accent by P. 6-2-139], vijarbhr̥taḥ [hṛñ haraṇe, bhvādi, here with yañ-luk — 'repeated going': doubling of the root; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; the reduplicate's a by urat P. 7-4-66; jaśtva — ja for ha; the augment ruk by P. 7-4-91 rugrikau ca luki; so jarhṛ → the root jarbhṛ; tas for laṭ 3rd dual; śap lost; the ñit-treatment blocks guṇa; hṛ → bhṛ by hṛgrahor bhas chandasi; the suffix accent; the verb is not lowered since hi precedes (P. 8-1-34 hi ca)] and bapsatā [bhasa bhartsanadīptyoḥ, juhotyādi; śatṛ; śluḥ P. 2-4-75; bhas doubled — babhas-at; the penultimate a lost by P. 6-4-100 ghasibhasajaṇasanaśām... ॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ आयजी (āyaji) — the two implements of the sacrifice | वाजसातमा (vājasātama) — the two great givers of food | ता (tā) — they, the mortar and the pestle | हि (hi) — [as is known] | उच्चा (uccā) — [making] a loud sound | अन्धांसि (andhāmsi) — grains such as gram | बप्सता (bapsatā) — [two] that are chewing | हरी इव (harī iva) — like the two horses of Indra | विजर्भृतः (vijarbhr̥taḥ) — they sport [they move to and fro].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The implements of the sacrifice, which are also the givers of food, the mortar and the pestle, strike together and sound loudly, and sport like the two horses of Indra chewing their gram and the like.

॥ English Translation ॥

For, these two implements of sacrifice (mortar and pounder) bestowers of food are sporting like the horses of Indra chewing their fodder (grains).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ आयजी — sarvato yajñasādhane: the two implements of sacrifice on every side, i.e. the mortar and the pestle; this is a dual form. वाजसातमा — vājaṃ sanotīti vājasāḡ; atīśayena vājasāḡ vājasātamau: vāja means food; by giving it the mortar and the pestle are called vājasātamā; by pounding grain in the mortar with the help of the pestle one prepares food; so they are said to give the food and the like. उच्चा — uccaiḡ, with a loud sound: when grain is pounded with the pestle in the mortar, a loud sound is natural. विजर्भतः — hṛñ haraṇe: they sport; they seem to sport. हरी इव — like Indra's horses; the two horses of Indra are called harī; Yāska gives the derivation harī indrasya ('the two bay horses of Indra'). अन्धांसि — foods: andhaḡ (Ni. [3-?]) is a name for food. बप्सता — bhasa bhartsanadīptyoḡ: eating, chewing; the sound made as horses chew gram and the like is compared to the sound made by pounding in the mortar with the pestle.

Note — Grammar pages 436–437, noted briefly: the words treated are camvoḥ [camu adane, bhvādi — 'that in which one drinks/eats'; ū by Uṇ. 1-81 kṛṣicamitanidhanisaṃtanikaṭibhyaḥ ūḥ? — the Uṇ. rule gives the ū-suffix; the locative dual os: the ū → v by P. 6-4-77; the accent of the suffix; by P. 8-2-4 the yaṇ of an udātta becomes svarita; the print adds a scholastic argument on P. 6-1-174 udāttayaṇo hal pūrvāt — whether the ending takes the acute — read as: the ending is not acute here because the yaṇ is preceded by a vowel], bhara [hṛñ haraṇe, bhvādi; loṭ 2nd singular hi, lost by P. 6-4-105; ha → bha by P. 7-4-... hṛgrahor bhaś chandasi; guṇa], dhehi [ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, juhotyādi; loṭ 2nd singular sip → hi; śap → śluḥ P. 2-4-75; doubling P. 6-1-10; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; jaṣṭva; dadhā + hi → dhehi by P. 6-4-119 ghvasoreddhāv abhyāsalopāś ca: the root's ā → e, the reduplicate lost; the verb is lowered by P. 8-1-28] and tvaci [tvac + ni; the acute on the ending by P. 6-1-168 sāvekācas tṛṭiyādir vibhaktiḥ]; numerals as read, pointers only.

(pavitre) — in the filter | आ सृज (ā sṛja) — pour it | गोः त्वचि (goḥ tvaci) — on the cow-hide | अधि नि धेहि (adhi ni dhehi) — place it above.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Take what remains of the soma in the two vessels; pour the juice into the strainer; and place it on the cow-hide.

॥ English Translation ॥

Fill the remaining Soma in the two jars, pour it on the sieve, and put it on the cow-hide.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ In this rik the seer, addressing Hariścandra, the sacrificer, or some priest (the adhvaryu, perhaps), tells him what is to be done with the remaining soma. उच्छिष्टम् — śiṣṭam, the remainder: the soma-creeper is placed in the mortar and crushed, and the juice, standing on top of the stone (grāvan), flows down; the remainder, small in amount, is what stays in the mortar [and on the boards]. चम्बोः — camū is a wooden vessel used in the soma-pressing, used for offering the soma to the gods; here it means the two wooden boards (adhiṣavaṇa-phalaka) between which the soma-creeper is pressed. Skandasvāmin explains camasa as the drinking-vessel of the priests; the dual here, by vyatyaya, stands for 'the two camasa vessels'. पवित्रे — Yāska explains pavitra as 'what purifies' (punāti), listing its many senses — mantra, ray, water, fire — but here it must be understood as the filter or sieve with which the soma-juice is strained. In some places kuśa grass is placed over the vessel in which the soma is strained, and the juice is poured over it so that the pure juice falls into the vessel; hence pavitra here means the 'filter'. गोः त्वचि — on the cow-hide: besides pouring the soma into dronakalaśa and other wooden vessels, there are descriptions in the Ṛgveda of the soma being poured on a sieve made of cow-hide, or of the hide being spread under the stalks, so that the juice falls on it and goes down — so a cow-hide was used in the soma-pressing.

॥ Close of Sūkta 28 ॥ ¹¹ [Correction note on Sūkta 28's close.]

Printed p. 438 opens with the last lines of the Rik 9 grammar of Sūkta 28 (on tvaci) followed by the large closing line "The twenty-eighth sūkta is ended" (Kannada: ಇಪ್ಪತ್ತೆಂಟನೇ ಸೂಕ್ತವು ಸಮಾಪ್ತವಾಗಿದೆ).

The note written at the end of Sūkta 28 above said that no colophon was printed and that the sūkta ended on p. 437; that was wrong — the sūkta ends on p. 438 with this colophon (varga number not given). Earlier text is left untouched, as the file is append-only.

11. p. 437: the grammar of Rik 9 ends without a colophon; printed p. 438 begins Sūkta 29. The printed page 437 carries no closing note of the usual kind; I note this rather than supply one.

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) ॥ Yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ is the sixth sūkta of the sixth anuvāka and has seven riks. Śunaḥśepa is the seer; the metre is Pankti. The Anukramaṇikā says 'yac cid dhi sapta pāṅktam', that is, the sūkta yac cid dhi has seven riks. In the Soma-sacrifice called Pr̥ṣṭhya-ṣaḍaha, on the fifth day, at the mādhyandina-savana (midday pressing), three priests who are assistants of the Hotṛ (the hotrakas) are to take the three triplets of this sūkta — tṛca, tṛca, [and the remaining rik] — and use them, each at his own śāstra recitation: so it is explained in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra in the section caturthe 'hani, in the sūtra yac cid dhi satya somapā (Āś. [8-11]).

Translation: "Impelled by the Viśvedevas, Śunaḥśepa praised Indra with the twenty-two riks beginning with this one. So the Brāhmaṇa says: 'The Viśvedevas said to him: "Indra is the most vigorous, the strongest, the mightiest, the best, the most capable of carrying across of the gods; praise him now; then we shall release you." He praised Indra with the sūkta yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ and fifteen [riks] of the next' (Ai. Brā. 2-18 [?]). ॥ English Translation ॥ ³

O truth-speaking Indra, drinker of Soma juice, although we do not deserve it, yet you Indra, of plentiful wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Śunaḥśepa, having prayed to the Viśvedevas with the rik namo mahadbhyaḥ, [was told by them:] "Śunaḥśepa, among the gods Indra is the strongest, the most glorious, the most patient (sahiṣṇu); praise him, so that you may be released from this bond"; and, with their consent, Śunaḥśepa praises Indra with this sūkta yac cid dhi satya somapāḥ and with the next fifteen riks of the sūkta kaya [kadā?] yathā — twenty-two riks in all. (Ai. Brā. [2-18]). We have explained this matter in the Śunaḥśepa story itself.

सत्य — satyavādin: one who speaks truth. सोमपाः — somasya pātā: the drinker of soma. अनाशस्ता इव — anāśastā iva apraśastā iva: [śamsu stutau] unworthy of praise: we are, in praising you, not fit

[for it]; yet because we praise you, may you be pleased and give us the cows and horses we need. आ तू न इन्द्र शंसय गोष्वश्वेषु शुभ्रिषु सहस्रेषु तुवीमघ — the sense of śaṃsaya — 'make [us] praiseworthy among cows and horses' — appears to be: 'give us thousands of cows and horses, and make us renowned as persons possessing them'. तुवीमघ — tuvi means 'much' (Ni. [3-?]), magha means 'wealth' (Ni. [2-10?]); hence tuvīmagha is 'having much wealth'.

॥ English Translation ॥

Handsome and mighty lord of food, your exploits are ever before us; therefore, Indra of plentiful wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ शिप्रिन् — śobhanahanu-yukta: one with fair jaws, i.e. a good mouth, good-looking. शचीवः, दंसना — the words śacī and daṃsas are read among the twenty-six names for 'act' beginning apaḥ, apnaḥ (Ni. [2-1]); hence śacīvaḥ means 'one with strength, powerful', and daṃsanā 'a bold act, or favour in the form of an act'.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

Send to sleep the two female messengers of Yama, who have come to kill us and who look at each other, so that they do not wake again. And, O Indra of abundant wealth, make us fit for thousands of auspicious cows and horses.

॥ English Translation ॥

Send to sleep the two females that see each other, let them sleep and not be wakeful; Indra, of plentiful wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ The sense of this rik is not clear. The commentator says: Śunaḥśepa, who is expecting death, prays to Indra that the two female messengers of Yama who may come to take away his life at the time of his death should not do so, but fall asleep without waking. Both the commentator and Skandasvāmin explain the sense by supplying words here and there. In the rik there is no word yamadūtī ('Yama's messenger') nor any word suggesting the time of death; the rik speaks only of two persons — females — looking at each other: abudhyamāne is feminine dual; hence the commentator says that mithūdrśā is 'the two Yama-messengers looking at each other' [by supplying the word]. The seer's intention is not clear.

नि स्वापय — nitarāṃ supte kuru: put them into a deep sleep. मिथूदृशा — mithunatayā paśyantī [those who see as a pair]: two persons seeing each other: the word yamadūtyau ('two messengers of Yama') the commentator supplies; this is a dual word. सस्ताम् — vasa svapne: 'let them sleep'. अबुध्यमाने — [two] not waking: a dual word.

॥ English Translation ॥

O hero, may our enemies sleep and our friends be wakeful; Indra, of plentiful wealth, enrich us with thousands of excellent cows and horses.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ त्या: — tya is a word of the sense of tad; hence tyāḥ means 'those' (tāḥ). रातयः, अरातयः — rā dāne: adānaśīlāḥ are arātayaḥ. The root rā has the sense of giving; so those who give to us, who help, are rātayaḥ, 'friends'; those who give us nothing and obstruct us are arātayaḥ, 'enemies'. शूर — Indra of great prowess.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ गर्दभम् — [it means] 'an ass'; here the commentator explains it as 'an enemy who is like an ass', that is, one whose voice harasses us like an ass's bray. नुवन्तं पापया अमुया — the sense: 'with this harsh speech, which is blaming and cruel to hear, one who reviles you'. [My note: the Kannada says 'reviles you', following the commentator's stuvantam, 'praising', as a euphemism for 'noisy, calling out'; the English the source prints, 'praising you with such harsh speech', follows the Sanskrit.]

Translation: "Ā va indram is the seventh sūkta [of this group], of twenty-two riks; seer Śunaḥśepa; metre Gāyatrī. The rik asmākam it is pādanicṛt Gāyatrī [the clause between is too compressed to read — [?]]; the rik śaśvad indra is Triṣṭubh. The first sixteen riks are addressed to Indra; the three beginning āśvināv āśvāvatyā are to the Aśvins; the three beginning kas ta uṣaḥ have Uṣas as deity. So says the Anukramaṇikā: 'ā vo — twenty-two; asmākam [is] pādanicṛt; śaśvat [is] Triṣṭubh; the last two triplets are Āśvina and Uṣasya."

॥ Anuvāda (Kannada) ॥ Ā va indram is the seventh sūkta in the sixth anuvāka. It has twenty-two riks. Śunaḥśepa is the seer; the metre is Gāyatrī.  illustration for the sprinkling: as one fills a well [krivi], a pit, with water — so. [Then the commentator cites the word krivi in the Nighaṇṭu's list of fourteen well-names, 'kriviḥ, kūpaḥ, sūdaḥ' — the exact wording and the list's reference are too compressed to read with confidence.]"

Note — Grammar page 461, noted briefly: the words treated are krivim
 [from kṛti chedane / kṛṇātīti kriviḥ, an Uṇādi form ending in kvin, Uṇ. 4-5?

All numerals pointer-only.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ वाजयन्तः (vājayantah) — we who desire food [wealth] | वः (vaḥ) — [of you, the priests and sacrificers] your | शतक्रतुम् (śatakratum) — [him] endowed with a hundred deeds | मंहिष्ठम् (maṃhiṣṭham) — exceedingly grown [great] | इन्द्रम् (indram) — Indra | इन्दुभिः (indubhiḥ) — with Soma-juices | यथा क्रिविम् (yathā krivim) — as [one fills] a well (with water) | आ सिञ्चे (ā siñce) — we sprinkle all around, and satisfy.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

We, who long for food [wealth], satisfy with Soma-juices on every side this your Indra, who is endowed with a hundred mighty deeds and is exceedingly great — as one fills a well with water.

॥ English Translation ॥ ³

We, desirous of wealth satisfy this your Indra who is the mightiest (among gods) and (is the performer or is praised) in a hundred sacrifices with drops of Soma-juice as a well (is filled with water). [sic: the printed sentence is as given; "as a well" is its rendering of the simile]

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ क्रिविम् (krivim) — kūpaḥ: the word krivi is read among the fourteen names of 'well' beginning with kāṭa [?] [in the Nighaṇṭu]; so krivi is a well. Krivim yathā means: as a well is filled with water, so [the Soma-juices] fill Indra's belly; the sense is that much Soma-juice has been got ready for Indra's drinking. शतक्रतुम् (śatakratum) — kratu means 'act' (Nirukta 2-1 [?]) and 'wisdom' (Nirukta 3-9 [?]), so here

śatakratu = 'one who has performed a hundred deeds of valour' or 'very wise'. In the Purāṇas śatakratu means one who performed a hundred sacrifices — that is, Indra obtained Indra's rank by a hundred sacrifices — but that sense does not fit here: the sense intended is 'one who has done a hundred [mighty] deeds'. महिष्ठम् (maṁhiṣṭham) — mahi vṛddhau; atīśayena maṁhitā maṁhiṣṭhaḥ: the most grown, the most excellent. वः इन्द्रम् (vaḥ indram) — "your Indra", that is, the Indra whom you praise; by the use of the word vaḥ it should be understood that the sentence is spoken to the priest-men. सिञ्चे (siñce) — ścir kṣaraṇe ['to flow, sprinkle']: we make [him] wet with water; that is, fill; as indubhiḥ is present, the sense to be given is 'we satisfy Indra with Soma-juices'.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

May that Indra, who accepts a hundred pure Soma-juices and a thousand mixed with sweet substances, and who comes easily and naturally to our sacrifice as a stream of water runs to a low place, favour us.

॥ English Translation ॥

5. Grammar pages 463–464, noted briefly: samāśirām — from śrīṇ pāke ['to cook'], kryādi, with ā and saṃ prefixes; kvip by P. 3-2-76 kvip ca [?], and āśir is established by the nipātana rule (P. 6-1-36? āpaspr̥dhethām..., numeral doubtful); it is a genitive plural, a bahuvrīhi compound, and by P. 6-2-1 bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam the first member keeps its own accent; r̥yate — rīṇ śravaṇe ['to flow'], divādi, ātmanepada; the ṭi-e substitution by P. 3-4-79 ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e (टित् आत्मनेपदानां टेरे); śyan by P. 3-1-69 divādibhyaḥ śyan (दिवादिभ्यः श्यन्); the verb is lowered by P. 8-1-28 tiṇ atīnaḥ (तिङ्ङितिङः).

May he who (drinks) of a hundred pure and thousand mixed libations of Soma come to this sacrifice as water runs to a low place.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ शतं, सहस्रम् (śataṃ, sahasram) — although śata and sahasra mean merely 'a hundred' and 'a thousand', the sense here is 'a hundred or a thousand vessels' of Soma-juice, or 'a hundred or a thousand Soma-offerings in jars or at sacrifices'. समाशिराम् (samāśirām) — Soma-juices joined with āśira-substances; that is, Soma prepared by mixing in milk, curds or barley-meal. Āśir means the mixing substances added to Soma-juice; ordinarily they are milk, curds, barley. Soma mixed with milk is called gavāśira, with curds dadhyāśira, with barley yavāśira. In this rik none of the three is named, so it means Soma mixed with some one of these substances. आ इत् उ रीयते (ā it u rīyate) — agacchatīva, dhāvatīva — 'he comes quickly, he runs'. निम्नं न (nimnaṃ na) — nimna means a low place, a hollow. As water naturally flows to a lower place, so Indra comes to our sacrifice to drink Soma. As the words nimnaṃ na are there, [the Kannada adds] if the sense is 'as [one goes] to low regions' it would be necessary to supply 'water flowing to the low places'.

The simile: as a male pigeon [affectionately] approaches the female pigeon. The word garbhadhi here is used to point to the female, though garbha-bearing is common to every female bird; the idea would be [better stated as] 'the female pigeon that bears the foetus'; since even at the time of bearing the male bird goes about with the female, 'all can be mighty': therefore by the words kapota iva garbhadhim the sense is: as the male pigeon goes to the neighbourhood of the female pigeon. वचस्तच्छिन्न ओहसे (vacas tac cin na ohase) — "you accept our word" — as in the simile above, you, Indra, accept our word, our praise, with love.

Note — Grammar pages 470–471 are a longer technical argument over stotram, rādhānām pate, gīrvāhaḥ and vibhūtiḥ — noted briefly: the derivation of stotra from ṣṭuñ stutau [adādi] by the affix ṣṭran (P. 3-2-182 dāmniśasayuyujastutudasisicamihapatadaśaḥ karaṇe, दाम्नीशसयुयुज° — the print has the sūtra number 3-2-182 [?]) and, alternatively, from stotr with aṇ by P. 4-3-120 tasyedam (तस्येदम्) [?]; vṛddhi is blocked because 'a rule preceded by a technical term is not constant'; the vocative compound rādhānām pate is treated by P. 2-1-2? supām āmantrite parāṅgavat svare
 [the print: P. 2-1-2 as read, [?]] and the accent of the vocative group by P.
 8-1-19 āmantritasya ca [?]; for gīrvāhaḥ the Uṇādi affix asun after vah, with a kāraka as first member, by the sūtra vahihādhāñbhyas chandasi (Uṇ. 4-210 [?]), P. 6-3-122 on the lengthening, and the vocative accent by the sūtra āmantritasya ca; for vibhūtiḥ the ktin of bhū sattāyām and the prefix-accent by P. 6-2-50 tāḍau ca niti kṛty atau ([?], तादौ च निति कृत्यतौ) — the print's numerals are too small to settle; pointers only.

ca ['to challenge; to sound, call'], saṃprasāraṇa by the Vedic liberty, uvañ substituted, the end-acute by the suffix; no lowering since the verb stands at the head of the pāda."

Note — Grammar pages 479–480, noted briefly: okasaḥ — genitive singular; the initial acute by the Phiṭ-sūtra nabviṣayasyāniseḥ... (Phiṭ. 1-? [?], नब्विषयस्यानिसन्तस्य); huve — hveñ spardhāyām śabde ca, laṭ 1st singular ātmanepada with the iṭ augment, ṭita ātmanepadānām... P. 3-4-79 gives e; saṃprasāraṇa by P. 6-1-15 bahulaṃ chandasi-line, pūrvārūpa → hu+e; guṇa is barred since the sārvadhātuka is apit and so ñit, by P. 1-2-4 sārvadhātukam apit, with kṛiti ca P. 1-1-5; uvañ by P. 6-4-88 bhuvo vuk luṇliṭoḥ / aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor iyañuvañau P. 6-4-77 [?]; no lowering of the verb at the start of the pāda (P. 8-1-?); the yat-correlation prevents lowering too (P. 8-1-66 yadvṛttānnityam, यद्वृत्तान्तिन्यम्); tuvipratim — tuvinām bahūnām pratigantāram: a compound formed by the principle nāmaikadeśena nāmagrahaṇam ['a name may be taken by part of it'], with prati as in bhīmasena for bhīma; prati in the sense of 'going toward' is not a nipāta by P. 1-4-57 cādayo 'sattve (चादयोऽसत्त्वे), because it expresses a substance-sense [sattva]; and it is not an avyaya by P. 1-1-37 svarādinipātam avyayam (स्वरादिनिपातमव्ययम्); so the genitive compound is not barred by P. 2-2-11 pūraṇaguṇasuhitārthasadvayayatavyasamānādhikaraṇena (पूरणगुणसुहितार्थसद्वययतव्यसमानाधिकरणेन). P. 3-4-79 [e]; śap dropped by P. 2-4-72 ādiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ (अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः); the verb lowered by P. 8-1-28; vaso — a vocative; by P. 8-1-74 nāmantrite samānādhikaraṇe sāmānyavacanam (नामन्त्रिते समानाधिकरणे सामान्यवचनम्) the 'as-if-nonexistent' treatment of the earlier sakhe is blocked here because both words denote one person; there are two vocatives, sakhe and vaso; since sakhe is not at the head of a pāda the āṣṭamika lowering does not arise; P. 2-1-2? subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare (सुबामन्त्रिते पराङ्गवत् स्वरे) gives the parāṅgavad-bhāva to sakhe; then either by the lowering of the remainder or by P. 6-1-198 āmantritasya ca (आमन्त्रितस्य च) the whole group has all-low accent [numerals as read [?]]; sakhe at the beginning of a pāda is initial-acute by the Phiṭ sūtra; jaritṛbhyaḥ — jṛ vayoḥānau, with ṛc; guṇa and the iṭ augment give jaritṛ; instrumental/dative plural jaritṛbhiḥ/-bhyaḥ; here the root must be taken in the sense of praising; ṛc is cit, so end-acute; the ṛ is acute.

We implore you, Indra, protector of dwellings, as our friend who is preferred and invoked by many to be favourable to your worshippers.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ विश्ववार (viśvavāra) — sarvair varaṇīya: one invoked and desired by all. आ शास्महे (ā śāsmahe) — śāsu icchāyām ['to wish']: we pray. पुरुहूत (puruḥūta) — bahubhiḥ svasvakarmaṇy āhūtaḥ: since [he is] invoked in the sacrifices that many men perform, 'called by many'. वसो (vaso) — nivāsahetoḥ: [a vocative:] cause of dwelling, or the protector of

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

O Indra, while you are delighted together with us, may we, rich in food, have our cows rich in milk, ghee and other wealth and exceedingly strong, with which we shall rejoice.

॥ English Translation ॥

So Indra, rejoicing along with us, we may have abundant food and may our cows be robust and rich in milk, so that we may be happy.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ रेवतीः (revatīḥ) — for this word the commentator says kṣīrājyāddhanavatyāḥ gāvaḥ: 'cows that are rich in milk, ghee and the like'. [Skandasvāmin, on the other hand, explains this word as dhanavatyāḥ stutayaḥ: "may the praises we offer be such as bring wealth".] Since the word go ('cow') does not occur in this rik, any sense can be given to revatīḥ. सधमादे (sadhamāde) — saha mademahi; indre sadhamāde: 'Indra being joyful together with us'. Here sadha must be given the sense of saha ['with']. Yāska has given an etymology for the word sadhamāda as 'sadamādaṃ sahamadanam' (Nirukta 3-?? [?]). तुविवाजाः (tuvivājāḥ) — tuvi means abundant, much (Nirukta 3-?? [?]); vāja means strength (Nirukta 2-9 [?]); therefore tuvi vājāḥ = 'having much strength', that is, very strong. क्षुमन्तः (kṣumantaḥ) — kṣu is food (Nirukta 2-7 [?]); kṣumantaḥ means 'those who have food'.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ The meaning of this rik does not fit well; the simile is not correct. The seer's intention is not clear. The commentator has made some kind of connection of meaning. त्वावन् (tvāvān) — tvatsadṛśo devatāviśeṣaḥ: another deity like you. त्मना (tmanā) — tmanā means ātmanā ('by himself'); Yāska explained it in the nirvacana of the rik beginning katarā pūrvā (Nirukta 3-?? [?]) and in the nirvacana of the rik [whose words are svaṃ strīrūpam adbhutam — as read, [?]] (Nirukta 6-?? [?]). धृष्णो (dhṛṣṇo) — dhārṣṭyayukta Indra: bold, or possessed of prowess. इयानः (iyānaḥ) — asmābhir yācyamānaḥ: [one] being implored by us. ऋणोः (ṛṇoh) — ṛṇu gatau; ānīya prakṣipatu: let him bring and put here. अक्षं न चक्रयोः (akṣam na cakryoh) — for this simile the commentator says only that it is 'as the axle between the wheels of a chariot'; the meaning of this is not clear. Skandasvāmin says: as the axle between the wheels of a chariot turns swiftly, so may our wishes be quickly fulfilled; or perhaps the sense is 'may [Indra] come and give our wishes, being of such swiftness'. Here the commentator takes cakryoh as 'of the wheels of a chariot'. But cakryoh is the genitive-locative dual of cakrin; if analysed as cakraṃ asyāsti iti cakrī ratha ity arthaḥ, tayoh cakryoh, cakrin would mean a chariot having wheels; and then cakryoh would mean 'of two chariots', a sense that does not fit here.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ O Indra! Bring and give to them, for the favour of your praisers, the wished-for wealth that your worshippers should obtain — as the axle of a cart turns and is set by its own movements [vyāpāra].

॥ English Translation ॥

27. Grammar pages 495–496, noted briefly: śacībhiḥ — śārṅgaravādibhyo ñin (P. 4-1-73, शार्ङ्गरवादिभ्यो ङीन्), śaci being read in the śārṅgaravādī group; instrumental plural with the affix bhis; ru and the visarga give śacībhiḥ; as ñin is ñit, the initial acute by P. 6-1-197 ñnityādir nityam (ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्); the ending bhis is unaccented by P. 3-1-4 anudāttau suppitau; the ī after ca is svarita by P. 8-4-66 udātād anudāttasya svaritaḥ (उदात्तादनुदात्तस्य स्वरितः); śatakrato — vocative, by P. 6-1-198 āmantritasya ca wholly unaccented [the print: P. 8-1-19 (?)]; ṛṇoḥ — explained in the preceding rik; since it stands at the beginning of the pāda and by the rule āpādāt the lowering is prohibited (P. 8-1-18 āmantritaṃ pūrvam aviyamānavat... [?]); jaritṛṇām — explained earlier in the Mantra; genitive plural.

O Satakratu (Indra), you bestow upon your praisers such wealth as they desire as the axle revolves with the acts (movements of the cart).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ In this rik also the simile does not fit well. [The sense may be:] as the axle between the wheels of a chariot turns quickly and continually, so quickly fulfil my wishes. दुवः (duvaḡ) — the commentator takes this word as 'wealth'; Skandasvāmin as paricaryā ('service'); Veṅkaṭamādhava, following Skandasvāmin, accepts the sense paricaraṇaṃ karma ('the act of service'). जरितृणाम् (jaritṛṇām) — stotṛṇām — of the praisers. शचीभिः (śacībhiḡ) — karmabhiḡ | śakaṭocitavyāpāraviśeṣaiḡ: since śacī is read among the twenty-six names of action beginning apas, śacībhiḡ = 'by actions, by works'. Because the word cakryoḡ is used here [in the preceding rik], the sense is 'by the works of the wheels or the chariot, that is, by swift-moving actions'.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ इन्द्रः (indrah) — Indra | पोप्रुथद्विः (popruthadbhiḥ) — making the sound of the lips | नानदद्विः (nānadadbhiḥ) — neighing [with the help of horses] | धनानि (dhanāni) — the riches of the foes | शश्वत् (śāśvat) — always | जिगाय (jigāya) — has conquered | दंसनावान् (daṃsanāvān) — [that Indra,] one possessed of valour | सनिता (sanitā) — [and] giver | सः (saḥ) — that Indra | नः (naḥ) — to us | सनये (sanaye) — as a gift | हिरण्यरथम् (hiraṇyaratham) — a chariot made of gold | अदात् (adāt) — gave.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

Indra, making the lip-sound [of fodder-eating] and the neighing sound and snorting breathing — by the help of such horses he always conquers the riches of his enemies. That Indra, valiant and a giver, gave us as a gift a chariot made of gold.

॥ English Translation ॥

Indra has always won riches (from his enemies) with the help of champing, neighing and snorting horses ; he the performer of brave deeds, the giver of bounties, has given us a golden chariot as a present.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣaya-gaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Śunaḥśepa, having praised Indra, was given a golden chariot by Indra, who was pleased with him; here Śunaḥśepa praises that. On this there is the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa sentence tasmā indraḥ stūyamānaḥ prīto manasā hiraṇyaratham dadau tam etayā ṛcā pratīyāya śasvad indra iti (Ai. Br. [?]). Its meaning we have already given in the Śunaḥśepa narrative [earlier in the volume]. शश्वत् (śasvat) — sarvadā: always. पोप्रुथद्भिः (popruthadbhiḥ) — prothr paryāptau; ghāsabhakṣaṇānantarabhāvinam oṣṭhaśabdaṃ kurvadbhiḥ: with horses 'that are making the lip-sound that comes after eating grass', that is, exceedingly able. Because the words that explain horses follow, such as nānadadbhiḥ, śāsvasadbhiḥ, the word aśvaiḥ ('with horses') must be supplied here [as understood]. नानदद्भिः (nānadadbhiḥ) — ṇada avyakte śabde: neighing horses, the sound that comes from the mouth. शाश्वसद्भिः (śāsvasadbhiḥ) — śvasa prāṇane: breathing hard repeatedly, 'snorting and panting' [English as printed]. धनानि (dhanāni) — since the word jigāya ('conquered') is used, dhanāni means 'the riches of his enemies'. हिरण्यरथम् (hiraṇyaratham) — a chariot made of gold. दंसनावान् (daṃsanāvān) — karmavān; daṃsa iti karmanāma (Nirukta 2-1 [?]): one who does brave deeds, [the Kannada:] 'one who has the strength of valour'. सनिता (sanitā) — dātā: giver. सनये (sanaye) — saṃbhajanārtham: for our gain, for our receiving. In this rik the words saḥ and naḥ are read twice; this repetition is to show the exceeding respect [that is, emphasis] for Indra, the giver.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

O Áśvin gods! Come to this rite of ours with food, borne on a chariot drawn by many horses and urged on. O Áśvin gods! By your favour may our house be filled with cows and with gold in abundance.

॥ English Translation ॥

Aswins, come hither with food borne on fast moving horses; Dasras, (destroyers of foes) let our dwelling be filled with cattle and with gold.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ At the time of the prātara-nuvāka mantra-recital connected with the Áśvin-rite (aśvinakratu), the hundred [?] riks in the Gāyatrī metre, beginning āśvināv aśvāvatyā, [namely the triplet] are to be recited, as the Āśvalāyana sūtra says in the section athāśvine: 'aśvinau yajvarīr iṣaḥ, aśvināv aśvāvatyā' — explained [there] (Āś. 4-1-13 [?]). After praising Indra, Śunaḥśepa, impelled by him, praised the Áśvin gods with the three riks beginning aśvināv aśvāvatyā. On this the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa has the sentence tam indra uvācāśvinau nu stuhīty atha ... iti so 'śvinau tuṣṭāva tāv uttareṇa ṛcena (Ai. Br. [?]). Its meaning we have given already in the Śunaḥśepa narrative. अश्ववत्या, शवीरया (aśvāvatyā, śavīrayā) — these words are used as adjectives of the singular instrumental word iṣā. Aśvāvatyā = 'with horses'; śavīrayā = 'of swift motion' — thus. The commentator gives for śavīrayā the sense preryamāṇayā ('being impelled'); since śavīra is formed from the root śu gatau ['to go'], when the meaning 'going' is given it must be said as an adjective of aśvāvatyā. गोमत्, हिरण्यवत् (gomat, hiraṇyavat) — 'having cows, having gold'. Though the word grha ('house') does not occur, the commentator supplies grham to complete the sense of gomat and hiraṇyavat; the idea is 'a house possessing cows, gold and other wealth must be given'. दस्रा (dasrā) — the Aśvin gods who are destroyers of foes. Although the word dasra denotes one of the two Aśvins, here both are meant, so it is used in the dual.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

O Áśvin gods! Your chariot is yoked once, equally, for both of you; of unhindered course it is imperishable; for that very reason it goes through the mid-air.

॥ English Translation ॥

Dasras, your chariot harnessed and drawn by a common team (of horses) is imperishable ; Aswins, it travels through the air.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ समानयोजनः
 (samānayojanaḥ) — [Since] the chariot [carries] both [Áśvins] at one time, it is yoked once for both; [the word samānayojanaḥ is used because] the chariot of the two is one. अमर्त्यः (amartyaḥ) — vināśarahitaḥ: imperishable, indestructible [English as printed]. समुद्रे (samudre) — antarikṣe: since the word samudra is read among the sixteen names of the 'atmosphere' beginning ambara, viyat, samudre means 'in the atmosphere'. In discussing the meaning of samudra Yāska says: 'Why [is it called] samudra? Because waters flow out of it (samuddravanti); because the waters run together to it; because creatures rejoice (saṃmodante) in it; or it is samudaka [water-full]; or samunatti [it wets]' (Nirukta 2-10 [?]). That is, 'it is called samudra because waves and ripples are seen rising from its water; because water-animals play in the water of the sea; because the water mingles in it and flows to it; because its water wets everything': thus he gives etymologies of the word samudra. But none of these senses of samudra points to the sense 'atmosphere'.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ After praising the Aśvin gods, Śunaḥśepa, impelled by them, praises the goddess Uṣas with this rik and with the two riks that follow. On this the Aitareya-Brahmaṇa [7-16 [?]] has the sentence tam aśvināv ūcatur uṣasaṃ nu stuhi ... iti sa uṣasaṃ tuṣṭāva te uttareṇa ṛcena | tasya ha smarcy uktāyāṃ vi pāśo mumuce | kanīya aikṣvākasyodaram bhavaty uttamasyām evarcy uktāyāṃ vi pāśo mumuce 'gada aikṣvāka āsa (as above). Its meaning we have already given in the Śunaḥśepa narrative.

On Uṣas. For this rik and the two that follow, the deity is the dawn-time, or the deity that presides over the dawn. In the Ṛgveda about twenty sūktas are addressed to the goddess Uṣas. They all belong, in large part, to the best class; both in the description of the colour [of the dawn] and in the arrangement of the words and the exposition of the sense [of the sūktas], a great deal of importance has been shown. Uṣas is the light that comes before sunrise, when the night is gone and the sky grows bright. Since the dawn is the time at which sages and all people feel great joy, they describe the dawn-time very beautifully. Usually the poets have imagined the dawn as a young woman and described the qualities of this goddess in many ways, with ornaments and so on. Because light comes from the sky, the dawn is naturally described as 'the daughter of heaven' (divo duhitā), daughter of the sky or of heaven. The goddess is described as a young girl ever fresh in youth, as one who shortens the life of men as the days pass, as one who gladdens all creatures as soon as she rises, as one who drives away the demons and night-wanderers that roam in the night, as one who wakes the cows with the light of morning so that they go out with lowing, and — because the rays of the sun are slightly reddish at sunrise — as one who travels swiftly on a chariot drawn by red horses or red oxen.

The derivation of uṣas. On the etymology of the word uṣas the explanation of the sage Yāska is as follows: > उषाः कस्मात् । उच्छतीति सत्या रात्रेरपरः कालः । ³⁶ — उच्छतीति सत्यः । उच्छी विवासे । विवासयति हीयं तमांसि कस्मादुच्छतीत्येनमस्या उषा इत्येतदभिधानं भवति । पुनरियमुषाः । रात्रेरपरः कालः ॥ uṣāḥ kasmāt | ucchatīti satyā rātrēr aparāḥ kālaḥ | ucchatīti ... | ucchī vivāse | vivāsayati hīyaṃ tamāṃsi kasmād ucchatīti enam asyā uṣā ity etad abhidhānaṃ bhavati | punar iyam uṣāḥ | rātrēr aparāḥ kālaḥ | — "Why [is she called] uṣas? Because she 'shines forth' (ucchatī) — truly [so]: the time after night. Ucchī is [the root] 'to dispel': she dispels the darknesses; that is why the name uṣā is given to her. And again [uṣas is] the time that follows the night." ³⁷ The word uṣas comes from the root ucchī, 'to go out, to dispel'; what is dispelled is the darkness; and it makes light by going out of the darkness. This is why the goddess is called uṣas: she is the last part of the night, the time before sunrise when light spreads. In another place of his Nirukta Yāska gives a different explanation: > उषाः वष्टेः कान्तिकर्मण उच्छतेरितरा माध्यमिका । ³⁸ — uṣāḥ vaṣṭeḥ kāntikarmaṇa ucchater itarā mādhyamikā | — "Uṣas [is] from vaṣṭi, [a root] of the sense 'to shine'; the other [derivation], from ucchatī, is [only] optional." That is, the word uṣas is formed from the root vaśa kāntau ['to shine'], and because she gives light the goddess is called uṣas; that it is derived from the root ucchī ['to go out'], one must say, is optional. The sages describe the goddess Uṣas in many ways, with such epithets as 'the beloved of the Sun [since she follows the Sun]', 'daughter of night [since dawn is born when night ends]', 'sister of Āditya, Bhaga and Varuṇa', 'daughter of heaven', 'friend of the Aśvins'. दुहितर्दिवः (duhitar divaḥ) — [since] the light of the Sun comes to us from heaven (antarikṣa) and the dawn-time precedes sunrise, the goddess Uṣas is called divo duhitā, 'daughter of heaven' [the source adds the English "daughter of heaven"]. कधप्रिये (kadhapriye) — stotrapriye: fond of hearing praises. भुजे (bhuje) — bhuja pālanābhyavahārayoḥ; bhogāya — for enjoyment [the source adds "for enjoyment"]. नक्षसे (nakṣase) — nakṣ gatau: you reach, you desire. विभावरी (vibhāvari) — bhā dīptau: one who shines with light or beauty (Nirukta 3-?? [?]). Skandasvāmin explains bhuje as pālanāya ('for protection') and gives the sense of the words kaṃ nakṣase bhuje as: 'for the protection of which man do you go?'.

Translation: "In the seventh anuvāka there are five sūktas. Of these, the first, tvam agne prathamaḥ, has eighteen riks; the seer is Hiraṇyastūpa Āṅgirasa; the eighth, sixteenth and eighteenth riks are Triṣṭubh; the rest are Jagatī by the convention 'what remains after the Triṣṭubh'. Deity: Agni. So the Anukramaṇikā: 'tvam agne — two less than twenty [i.e. eighteen]; Hiraṇyastūpa; Āgneya; Triṣṭubh: the last, the eighth, and the sixteenth.' In the prātar-anuvāka, in the Agni-rite [āgneya kratu] and in the Āśvinaśastra, the sūkta tvam agne prathamaḥ [is used]; in the section athaitasyā rātreḥ [of the Āśvalāyana sūtra] it is laid down: 'tvam agne prathamo aṅgirā ṛṣir no ...' [?] (Āś. 4-13 [?]). On the third day of the abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, in the Agni-Māruta śastra, this sūkta serves as the jātavedasya [and] nividdhānīya; so it is laid down in the section tṛtīyasya tryaha: 'tvam agne prathamo aṅgirā — the Āgnimāruta [śastra]' (Āś. 7-2 [?]). In the Vājapeya, in the Agnimāruta [śastra], this sūkta is the jātavedasya [and] nividdhānīya; the third [pavamāna?]... ॥ Anuvāda (Kannada) ॥ From this sūkta the seventh anuvāka begins. In this anuvāka there are five sūktas (Sūktas 31–35 [?]). Of them the first, beginning tvam agne prathama, has eighteen riks. The seer of this sūkta is Hiraṇyastūpa, son of Āṅgiras. Of its eighteen riks the eighth, sixteenth and eighteenth are in Triṣṭubh metre; the rest are in Jagatī. The deity is Agni. The Anukramaṇikā says: tvam agne dvyūnā hiraṇyastūpa āgneyaṃ triṣṭubantyāṣṭamīśoḍaśyau ca. In the section rātriḥ of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra it is said that this sūkta has its use [vinīyoga] in reciting the morning-litany mantras connected with the Agni-sacrifice, and for reciting the mantras of the Aśvina-śāstra (Āś. 4-13 [?]). In the sacrifice called Abhiplava-śaḍaha, on the third day, the Agni-Māruta-śāstra mantras are to be recited with this sūkta: this is explained in the section tr̥tīyasya tryahaḥ by the sūtra tvam agne prathamo āṅgirā ity āgnimārutam (Āś. 7-2 [?]). In the sacrifice Vājapeya, too, this sūkta is used in reciting the Agni-Māruta-śāstra mantras: so, in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta-sūtra [it is said] jātaavedasyaṃ nividdhānīyaṃ tr̥tīyenābhiplavikenoktaṃ tr̥tīyasavanam (Āś. 9-6 [?]).

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ On the Aṅgirasas. In this rik it is said that Agni is the first among the Aṅgiras seers; that is, Agni became the root-man [mūla-puruṣa] of the Aṅgirasa seers. In many other riks of the Ṛgveda too the word aṅgiraḥ is used to address Agni; discussion of this matter is necessary. [The Brāhmaṇa passage:] ये ऽङ्गारा आसंस्ते ऽङ्गिरसो ऽभवन् (ye 'ṅgārā āsaṃs te 'ṅgirasas 'bhavan; Ai. Br. 3-34 [?]) — "the embers [aṅgāras] that were, those became the Aṅgirasas": thus, in the Prajāpati-duhitṛ-dhyāna [Prajāpati's-daughter-meditation] narrative of the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa it is said that the embers [of the sacrifice that sprang from the seed of Rudra's arrow] were named Aṅgirasas. [The Kannada gives the story:] In the beginning Prajāpati (Brahmā), with a wicked thought — through desire for his own daughter (Uṣas, or Dyaus) — conceived [a wish]; the gods, knowing it, resolved to prevent this wicked act. But they had no strength to force Prajāpati to refrain from the deed; so all the gods, bringing together their own several forms, produced a deity called Rudra, and said [to him], "punish this Prajāpati." Hearing this, Prajāpati, terrified, assumed the form of a stag and fled to the sky. As the constellation Mṛgaśīras [Orion's head / the Deer], Prajāpati may be seen even now. Then Rudra, appearing as the star Ādrā [Betelgeuse? — the print: ādrā-nakṣatra], discharged an arrow at Prajāpati. Prajāpati's seed fell, and the Maruts scattered it in many directions and burned it to ashes. From [that seed] first the Āditya and then the Bhṛgu were born; from the remaining embers the Āṅgirasas were born: so it is said.

In the Purāṇas and other works the sage Āṅgiras is said to be one of Brahmā's mind-born sons. In the Vedas, the Āṅgiras is said to be a seer of great fame, the root-man of many famous seers. In the Mahābhārata, Vana-parvan, in the dialogue of Mārkaṇḍeya and Yudhiṣṭhira, there is this story: Agni, on account of the pain of his duties [being weary], leaving his task, went off to the forest. Then the sage named Āṅgiras, taking Agni's place, did Agni's work, carrying the oblations to the gods in the sacrifice. Then he prayed Agni to come back and do his own duty. Because the Āṅgiras did Agni's duties, he [Agni] made Āṅgiras his son; hence the descendants of this sage became famous as 'Āṅgirasas'. There are still other such narratives in the Purāṇas. Besides, in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā itself:

ते अङ्गिरसः सूनवस्ते अग्नेः परिजज्ञिरे । (Ṛg-Saṃhitā 10-62-5 [as the source gives it]) te āṅgirasasḥ sūnavas te agneḥ parijajñire | Mine, tentative: "They, the Āṅgirasas, are the sons; they were born around Agni."

— that is, it is said clearly that the seers called Āṅgirasas are Agni's sons. The commentator, however, does not cite this rik as an instance; why, one cannot tell.

That the sage Āṅgiras was of very ancient time, and that many seers in the Ṛgveda call this one the root-man of their own lineage, appears from several riks of the Ṛgveda:

These riks show that Aṅgiras is known as the forefather of many seers. In the lineage of the Aṅgirasa seers was one named Atharvan, a leading man; he had three sons, Bṛhaspati, Gotama and Vṛṣaṇa. The one named Vṛṣaṇa was a son born to this Atharvan of his wife Pathyā; his history is hinted at in many places in the Veda. The son of Vṛṣaṇa, called Sudhanvan Aṅgirasa, had three sons, Ṛbhu, Vibhvan and Vāja. These three, who are called the Ṛbhus in the Veda, are said to be pupils of Prajāpati. In this lineage of Aṅgiras there were three seers named Bṛhaspati. The Ṛbhus mentioned above are imagined in the Veda as gods [deified] under the name of Bṛhaspati, and many riks that are their praise are in the Ṛgveda. Of those three Bṛhaspatis, the first is said, in tradition, to have bought the demon king called Paṇi and to have brought back the cattle that he had hoarded in a cave; to have fought on the bank of the river Aṃśumatī with a dāsa named Kṛṣṇa and his ten thousand followers and defeated them. Another Bṛhaspati's son named Bharadvāja was the priest of Divodāsa, who killed the daitya Śambara. Thus the lineage of Aṅgiras was very large, and many famous men belonged to it. In the Ṛgveda, in many places — wherever the word agni would have to be used — the word aṅgira is used plentifully.

Since Hiranyastūpa, the seer of this sūkta, was born in the Āṅgirasa line, he praises Agni, the root-man of his line, with riks full of excellent meanings. Most of the riks of this sūkta begin with the words tvam agne or tvam no agne. This seer Hiranyastūpa is the seer of the 31st–35th sūktas of the first maṇḍala in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā (altogether 63 riks) [?], and of the 14th sūkta of the ninth maṇḍala (10 riks) [?] — in all 73 [?] riks. All the sūktas of this seer are in the prauḍha style [i.e. of mature, weighty composition].

देवो देवानामभवः शिवः सखा (devo devānām abhavaḥ śivaḥ sakhā) — to the gods you became a friend of excellent mind. तव व्रते (tava vrate) — tvadye karmanī: in the work that belongs to you; that is, in sacrifices and the like performed with your help. कवयः (kavayaḥ) — medhāvinaḥ: the intelligent. विद्वानापसः (vidmanāpasah) — vida jñāne; vidmo vedanam; tad asyāstīti vidmanam; vidmanāni apāṃsi yeṣāṃ te vidmanāpasaḥ; jñānena prāpnuvānā jñātaikakarmāṇo vā — those who are the knowers of everything through knowledge, or who know the works of sacrifice and the like, [or: knowing the nature of work]. भ्राजदृष्टयः (bhrājadrṣṭayaḥ) — here the word must be divided bhrājat + ṛṣṭi: bhrājadrṣṭayaḥ. Bhrāja dīptau; ṛṣī gatau: bhrājat means shining; ṛṣṭi is a weapon; so bhrājadrṣṭayaḥ means 'those who have shining weapons'.

Sāyaṇa-bhāṣya, remainder : after the sense, Sāyaṇa treats, in the usual way, the words mātariśvane, sukratūyā, vivasvate, rodasī, hotṛvūrye, asaghnoḥ, ayajāḥ and mahaḥ (their derivations are given in the Kannada grammar pages 532–534 below; the Sanskrit lines on p. 529 are too crowded to reproduce item by item at 130 dpi, and are noted briefly rather than transcribed). ॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अग्ने (agne) — O Agni | त्वम् (tvam) — you | मातरिश्वने (mātariśvane) — for the wind | प्रथमः (prathamah) — [being] the chief | सुक्रतूया (sukratūyā) — desiring [and so

You have worshipped the worshipful gods.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Agni, you are the first or eminent [sic] over the wind ; become manifes [sic] to the worshipper in appreciation of his services ; heaven and earth tremble at your power ; you have taken over the responsibility in the rite in which the priest (Hotri) was appointed ; O Vasu, you have worshipped the great gods.

7. the rest of the bhāṣya on this page is a long grammatical argument — printed in compressed form, to be read in the next batch

[and] since in the Śruti sentence agnir vāyur ādityaḥ Agni is mentioned first among the deities Agni, Vāyu, Āditya etc., Agni is the first, the chief; that is, Agni and Vāyu are closely related; and of the two, Agni is the chief — that is the sense. Skandasvāmin's view. Skandasvāmin explains the sentence tvam agne prathamo mātariśvana āvir bhava in a different way: "O Agni! At the beginning of creation [or: at the first beginning], you were first seen directly by Vāyu, before everyone else." To support this he tells an old story (itihāsa): "In the beginning the whole world was enveloped in darkness. Then Mātariśvan (Vāyu) saw Agni in the sky in a subtle form. Then the sages Atharvan, Parāśara, Bharadvāja and others, by churning, brought Agni forth in the araṇi." This is described in the rikḥ: > मथीद्यदीं विष्णो मातरिश्वा होतारं विश्वाप्सुं विश्वदेव्यम् ॥ ⁸ — mathīd yad īṃ viṣṇo mātariśvā hotāraṃ viśvāpsuṃ viśvadevyam || — Mine, tentative: "When Mātariśvan churned him, the all-formed, all-divine hotr." > त्वामग्ने पुष्करादध्यथर्व निरमन्थत ॥ ⁹ — tvām agne puṣkarād adhy atharvā niranmanthata || — Mine, tentative: "From the lotus, O Agni, Atharvan churned you forth." Then Agni, shining with a great flame, became visible to them. [The idea that] Agni was seen first by Mātariśvan is described in this rik; so [Skandasvāmin] says. सुक्रतूया (sukratūyā) — sukratum ātmana icchatīti; śobhanakarmecchayā: out of desire for excellent works, i.e. [out of] anticipation of the best works. विवस्वते (vivasvate) — [Sanskrit: vivasati] or vivāsati: because the word means paricaraṇakarma (Nirukta 3-?? [?]), vivasvate [the dative of vivasvān] means 'to the sacrificer who performs paricaryā, that is, service'. Vivasvān is also a name of Manu; see the special remark made in a later rik on the word manave. रोदसी (rodasī) — since the word rodasī is read among the twenty-four names of 'heaven and earth' beginning svadhre [sic], rodasī means the two [worlds] heaven and earth (Nirukta 3-30 [?]). होतृवूर्ये

8. Ṛg-Saṃhitā 1-148-1 [as the source gives it]

9. Ṛg-Saṃhitā 6-16-13 [as the source gives it]

(hotṛvūrye) — hotrā vriyate iti hotṛvūryo yajñah | hotṛvaraṇayukte — 'the sacrifice in which the hotṛ is chosen'; in a sacrifice in which the priest called hotṛ is appointed. भारम् (bhāram) — bharaṇam: the load, the duty, the responsibility, the weight; Skandasvāmin explains a purāṇa-narrative about carrying the burden: > असघ्नोभारम् । अत्रेतिहासमाचक्षते । देवाः किल स्वयमेव स्वानि स्वानि हवींष्यूह्वा भक्षयन् । तेषां केचिन्नोदुं नाशक्नुवन् । विश्वेकाहुतिस्त्रैलोक्यभारादतिरिच्यते । कांक्षितु शक्नुवन्नोऽस्यासुरा अभ्यद्रवन् ते सर्वेऽग्निमब्रुवन् हव्यं नो वहेति । स तल्लीलयोपमानोऽवहत् । तदिदमुच्यते असघ्नोभारमिति ॥ ¹⁰ > asaghnor bhāram | atretihāsam ācakṣate | devāḥ kila svayam eva svāni svāni havīmṣy ūdhvā bhakṣayan | teṣāṃ kecin noḍhum nāśaknuvan | viśvekāhutis trailokyabhārād atiricyate | kāṅkṣit tu śaknuvan no 'syāsurā abhyadran te sarve 'gnim abruvan havyaṃ no vaheti | sa tallīlayopamāno 'vahat | tad idam ucyate asaghnor bhāram iti || That is: in olden times the gods used to take and eat for themselves the oblations that were offered to them, coming in person. [It was held that] each single oblation made in a sacrifice weighs more than the burden of the three worlds; so some of the gods were unable to carry off their oblations. Then the asuras snatched away their oblations and ran off. Seeing this, the gods came near Agni [and said], 'O Agni, carry for us the oblations that are offered in the sacrifice and bring them to us.' When the gods thus prayed to Agni, Agni, agreeing, carried those oblations — so heavy a burden — as a mere sport. This story is told here, [they say,] by the words asaghnor bhāram. महः (mahah) — maha pūjāyām ['to worship']: pūjyān devān — the worshipful gods. वसो (vaso) — nivāsahetoḥ | the one who is the cause of dwelling-places, or the protector, Agni.

 'made known'] heaven (dyām) for Manu, for Manu's favour: you announced that the heavenly world is to be won by pious deeds.
 For King Pururavas, who served you [sukṛte, 'the doer of good'], for his favour you are the exceedingly good [sukṛttaraḥ], the source of well-flavoured fruit. When, by the quick churning (śvātreṇa) of the two parents (the two fire-sticks) you are released [mucyase] — that is, you are born — then they, having brought you who were born from the two araṇis, led you first to the east part of the altar [vedi], and set you [there] as the Āhavanīya [fire]; then again, later, they led you to the western part [aparam], and placed you there in the form of the Gārhapatya fire. The sense is: for the performance of rites connected with the Āhavanīya, they placed you in the Gārhapatya form [as the household fire]."

Note — Grammar pages 538–539, noted briefly: avāśayaḥ — vāśr śabde, divādi, with śyan; the causal ñic then lañ 2nd singular; lowered by P. 8-1-28; pururavase — puru rautīti pururavāḥ; ru śabde, adādi; the affix asun by sarvadhātubhyo 'sun (Uṇ. 4-189 [?]); ravas is a sānta word, so it is end-acute; the first member's lengthening by purasi ca pururavāḥ (Uṇ. 4-?? [?]) as a nipātana; dative singular pururavase; sukṛte — ḍukṛñ karaṇe; with su as upapada, kvip by P. 3-2-89 sukarmapāpamantrapuṇyeṣu kṛñāḥ (सुकर्मपापमन्त्रपुण्येषु कृजः) [the print: P. 3-2-89 as read]; pit, so tuk by P. 6-1-71 hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk after the short ṛ; sukṛt; dative singular; pitroḥ — pitṛ + os; yaṇ by P. 6-1-77; the ending acute by P. 6-1-174 udāttayaṇo hal pūrvāt (उदात्तयणो हलपूर्वति); mucyase — mucḥ mokṣaṇe, tudādi; laṭ 2nd singular in the passive, yak by P. 3-1-67 sārvadhātuke yak; the laṭ is unaccented after a root learnt as accented by P. 6-1-186 tāsyānudātennidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam; the author here argues that the root accent, the suffix accent and the vikaraṇa accent follow in order, and that the vikaraṇa accent is stronger than the root accent, [so yak's accent should override the root's]; hence by vyatyayo bahulam the yak's accent is set aside and the root's accent remains, giving an initial acute; ānayan — nīñ prāpaṇe, bhvādi, lañ 3rd plural; the verb is lowered since pūrvam (an atiñanta) precedes, P. 8-1-28. Numerals as read, [?].

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अग्ने (agne) — O Agni | त्वम् (tvam) — you | मनवे (manave) — for Manu | द्याम् (dyām) — the heavenly world | अवाशयः (avāśayaḥ) — made known | सुकृते (sukṛte) — to the one who does good deeds, honouring you | पुरुरवसे (pururavase) — to Pururavas | सुकृत्तरः (sukṛttaraḥ) — [one who gives] exceedingly good fruits | यत् (yat) — when | पित्रोः (pitroḥ) — of the two parents, the araṇis | श्वत्रेण (śvātreṇa) — by quick churning | परिमुच्यसे (parimucyase) — you are released, born | त्वा (tvā) — you | पूर्वम् (pūrvam) — [of the altar] in the front part | आ अनयन् (ā anayan) — they placed [as the Āhavanīya form] | पुनः (punah) — afterwards | अपरम् (aparam) — in the western part | आ अनयन् (ā anayan) — they placed [in the Gārhapatya form].

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ O Agni! You made the heavenly world known to Manu; to Pururavas, who does good deeds in your honour, you gave exceedingly excellent fruits. When you were born, released from the swift churning of the two araṇis, they placed you first in the front part of the altar in the form of the Āhavanīya, and then in the western part in the form of the Gārhapatya fire-pit.

॥ English Translation ॥

O Agni, you announced heaven to Manu ; you were the benefactor to the king Pururavas who worshipped you ; when you, after being kindled were released from your parents, they brought you first to the east, then to the west (of the altar).

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ मनवे द्यामवाशयः (manave dyām avāśayaḥ) — Manu Prajāpati has been made known [to have received] the fruit of heaven. In the Ṛgveda the name Manu occurs in many rikṣ [the print lists a long series of Ṛg-Saṃhitā references, then references to the Yajurveda — Taittirīya Saṃhitā — the Atharva-Veda, the Kāthaka Saṃhitā, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa and the Jaiminīya Upaniṣad-Brāhmaṇa, as well as other mantras, in which Manu is dealt with; their numerals are too small at 130 dpi to give, and are omitted rather than guessed]. In the Ṛgveda this Manu is said to be the root-man of mankind, and the first and the chief among those who perform sacrifice and in other matters. In Taittirīya Saṃhitā 3-1-9?? [?], and in the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa 5-14-1? [?], Nābhānediṣṭha, a son of this Manu, is described as striving to get his share of his father's estate. To Manu in the Ṛgveda the name Vivasvān (or Vaivasvata, son of Vivasvān) is given [refs as printed, illegible] and in the Śatapatha-Brāhmaṇa and the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra and Nirukta [refs illegible] — and since he is said to be of the line of Savarṇā or Saranyū, he is also called Sāvarṇi [refs illegible]; and as Saṃvaraṇa's line, Sāṃvaraṇi [ref illegible]. In the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, in the eighth maṇḍala sūktas 51–52 [?], Manu Vaivasvata is the seer; and in the ninth maṇḍala, in sūkta 101 [?] [three riks], Manu Sāṃvaraṇa is the seer. So Vaivasvata and Sāvarṇi must be taken as different persons. अवश्यः (avāśayaḥ) — vāśr śabde: śabditavān asi, prakāṭitavān asi: you uttered, made known. पुरुरवसे (pururavase) — puru rautīti pururavāḥ; ru śabde: 'one who makes much noise (sound) in front'; that is the etymological sense of pururavas. Yāska says pururavā bahudhā roruyate ['Pururavas is much shouted at'] (Nirukta 10-46 [?]). In this rik the word pururavase denotes a king of that name. In the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, in the 95th sūkta of the tenth maṇḍala, as in the line pururavo mā mṛthā ... [the print quotes Pururavo anu te ketam ... — as read: पुरुरवो नु ते केतेनायं राजा मी वीर तेन्नगस्तदासीत् (Ṛg-Saṃhitā 10-95-? [?]) — "the king ... his [courage?]; the quotation is partly illegible and is not rendered]: this verse supports the account of a king Pururavas. In the 95th sūkta of the tenth maṇḍala of the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā there is a conversation between this king and the apsaras Urvaśī, who deserted him; this conversation is explained in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (11-5-1) as a story, nicely. The Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa [11-5-1-1] says this king is the son of the goddess Idā; in the Ṛgveda he is called Aila ['son of Idā'] Pururavas [by the name] ailaḥ pururavāḥ; and this king is the seer of 7 riks (1, 2, 3, 6, 7, 11, 12 [?]) of the 95th sūkta [of the tenth maṇḍala]. In the Purāṇas and other works the history of this king Pururavas is described in different ways. सुकृते (sukṛte) — tava paricaraṇam kurvate: 'one who does service to you, [i.e.] who does work in the form of attendance on you'. सुकृत्तरः (sukṛttaraḥ) — atiśayena śobhanaphalakāryabhūḥ: 'one who gives in abundance excellent fruits'. श्वित्रेण (śvātreṇa) — kṣipramathanena: 'by the swift [kṣipra] churning, [the one] who is born'; śvātram iti kṣipranāma āśu ātanaṁ bhavati (Nirukta 5-5 [?]): 'the word śvātra is a name of "swift": it is a quick spreading'. पित्रोर्मुच्यसे (pitror mucyase) — here pitroḥ means the two araṇis, which are the two parents; [the sense is] 'you are released from them'; that is, 'you are born from them'. Skandasvāmin explains pitroḥ as dyāvāprthivyoḥ — 'of heaven and earth'. आ त्वा पूर्वमनयन् आ अपरं पुनः (ā tvā pūrvam anayan ā aparaṁ punaḥ) — after Agni is produced in the araṇi, [priests] first place him in the fire-pit called Āhavanīya in the eastern part of the sacrificial altar; and then, from there, in the fire-pit called Gārhapatya in the western part — that is the sense. This order is still followed in sacrifices; it is described in the Śrauta-sūtras.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ O Agni! You shower the wishes and increase the sacrificer's prosperity. Hear the call of the sacrificer who lifts the ladle for the oblation. You, the cause of his principal life [or: the foremost giver of food], first make that sacrificer shine, who knows well the oblation with vaṣaṭ [and the recitation] and offers it; and afterwards make the subjects favourable to him shine too. [That is, you please him by giving his wishes.]

॥ English Translation ॥

O Agni, you are the showerer of desires, the increaser of prosperity of your worshipper ; you will hear the hymns of the worshipper as soon as the ladle is lifted (to pour the oblation on the fire). Upon him who fully understands the invocation and makes the oblation with the word Vashatkriti at the moment of pouring the clarified butter on the fire, you, the provider of food, first bestow light, and then upon all men.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ वृषभः (vṛṣabhaḥ) — kāmānāṃ varṣitā: the one who rains down wishes; 'the bestower of desires' [English as printed]. पुष्टिवर्धनः (puṣṭivardhanaḥ) — vṛdhu vṛddhau, puṣṭeḥ vardhitā: one who gives the sacrificer wealth, food and the like; one who nourishes and increases growth. उद्यतस्रुचे (udyatasruce) — sruk is the wooden ladle with which the homa is made; one who, with that ladle filled with ghee (tuppa), lifts it up to pour it in the fire — the sacrificer. श्रवाय्यः (śravāyyaḥ) — śravaṇīyo bhavasi: you hear the sacrificer's call. या आहुतिं परि वेदा वषट्कृतिम् (ya āhutim pari vedā vaṣaṭkṛtim) — when performing a homa in the fire, after reciting the yājyā mantra addressed to the deity, they add at the end of the invocation the word vaṣaṭ and perform the homa; this is called vaṣaṭkṛti. Knowing this rule, the sacrificer who performs the homa with the vaṣaṭkāra is one who knows the rules of rites. एकायुः (ekāyuh) — mukhyānnastvam: [you are] the chief among givers of food. On the sense of this word Skandasvāmin tells a story: formerly, Āyu, a gandharva, son of the apsaras Urvaśī, brought Agni from the world of the Gandharvas and performed a sacrifice; so Agni first favoured that Āyu and afterwards favoured the people of the other gods; that story is hinted at here, he says, by the words ekāyur agre. विशः (viśaḥ) — prajāḥ: subjects, and other people. आविवाससि (āvivāsasi) — sarvataḥ prakāśayati: you cause to shine; that is, you gratify; you make glad.

and the best — [wanting that] the performer may get it. And you are spoken of by the knowledgeable as the 'father' (pitā), the protector — pramati, one of excellent understanding — even of the sacrificer who is [weak and] to be sustained from all sides (ādhrasya cit). Likewise you, the most knowing (viduṣṭarah), instruct (pra śāssi) the child [pākam] — [the sacrificer] who is 'to be cooked' [paktavyaḥ] — and also instruct the directions, east and the rest. Without your guidance the performers would be bewildered. So it is heard [in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, 6-2-8-1 (?)]: 'The gods, setting out to the sacrificial ground, did not know the directions' — that bewilderment is removed from the south and other directions by Agni. That, too, is told there: 'They performed the pathyā svasti; they knew the eastern direction; then by Agni the southern.' The Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa too says so: 'Then he chose this boon: "In me alone shall they know the east, then by Agni the south"' (Ai. Br. [?])."

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ अग्ने (agne) — O Agni | त्वम् (tvam) — you | उरुशंसाय (uruśaṃsāya) — [for him] praised by many | वाघते (vāghate) — for the priest | स्पार्हम् (spārham) — desirable | परमम् (paramam) — excellent | यत् रेक्णः (yat rekṇaḥ) — whatever wealth | तत् (tat) — that wealth | वनोषि (vanoṣi) — you wish [that the performer of the sacrifice may obtain] | आध्रस्य चित् (ādhrasya cit) — even for the weak sacrificer [fit to be protected] | प्रमतिः (pramatiḥ) — [one] of favourable intent | पिता (pitā) — [and] protector [you are] | उच्यसे (ucyase) — [by the wise] you are called | विदुष्टरः (viduṣṭarah) — [you,] very wise | पाकम् (pākam) — the sacrificer who knows nothing, like a child | प्र शास्सि (pra śāssi) — you make wise by instruction | दिशः (diśaḥ) — the directions east and so on | प्र (śāssi) — you point out [explain].

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

O Agni! You wish the desirable and excellent wealth for the priest who is praised by many, that the performer of the sacrifice may obtain it. Even for a weak sacrificer who is fit for protection, the wise say that you are of favourable intent and his protector. You, most wise, make the sacrificer who knows nothing, like a child, wise by your instruction; and you point out to him the directions east and the rest in a way that suits him.

॥ English Translation ॥

Agni, you desire that excellent wealth which is required for the priest ; you are called protector of the worshipper who ever needs protection ; you are all-wise, instructs [sic] the disciple and teaches the ignorant, the four points of the horizon.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ स्पर्हम् (spārham) — sprhaṇīyam: that which is desired by all; that which everyone wants. रेक्णः (rekṇaḥ) — dhanam: since the word rekṇas is read among the twenty-eight names of wealth beginning nṛmṇa (nṛmṇam rekṇaḥ ...), rekṇaḥ means wealth (Nirukta 2-10 [?]). आध्रस्य (ādhrasya) — dhṛ tṛptau: [for] the weak sacrificer who is without protection. पिता (pitā) — pālakaḥ: protector. पाकम् (pākam) — śiśum: one who knows nothing, like a child. विदुष्टरः (viduṣṭarah) — atiśayena vidvān; atiśayenābhijñāḥ: very wise. दिशः (diśaḥ) — the directions, east and the others. When [they] perform a sacrifice, the gods did not know the eastern and other directions: so, in many places in the Veda it is said that [they] learned the southern direction through Agni. The commentator has cited these Śruti sentences here [in the bhāṣya].

Translation: "Indrasya nu vīryāṇī is the second sūkta [of this anuvāka]; it has fifteen riks; the seer is Hiraṇyastūpa Āṅgīrasa; the metre is Triṣṭubh; the deity is Indra. The Anukramaṇikā: 'indrasya — five less [than twenty]'. In the Agniṣṭoma, at the midday pressing, in the Niṣkevalya-śāstra, the sūkta indrasya nu vīryāṇī is the nividdhānīya. In the section niṣkevalyasya it is laid down: 'in this [sūkta] indrasya nu vīryāṇī one should place the Indra-nivid' (Āśvalāyana 5-23 [?]). In the Viṣuvat too, in that [Niṣkevalya] śāstra, it is used: in the section viṣuvān vā ... [it is laid down]: 'having recited the Indra-nivid in this [sūkta] indrasya nu vīryāṇī' (Āś. 8-6 [?]). In the Mahāvrata also, in the Niṣkevalya, it is used: in the section rāthantaro dakṣiṇaḥ pakṣaḥ ['the Rāthantara is the right wing']: 'he makes four satī and six brhatī [verses] — indrasya nu vīryāṇī pra vocam' (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa [5-3-1 ?])."

vīryāṇīty etasminn aindrīm nividam śamstvā (Āś. 8-6 [?]). In the Mahāvratā also the sūkta is used for reciting the Niṣkevalya-śāstra mantras. This matter is described in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, in the section rāthantaro dakṣiṇaḥ pakṣaḥ, in the sentence catasraḥ satīḥ ṣaḍbṛhatīḥ karotīndrasya nu vīryāṇi pra vocam (Ai. Ā. 5-?? [?]).

So it is to be understood in what follows also."

Note — Grammar pages 589, 591–592, noted briefly: vīryāṇi — from the root śūra vīra vikrāntau; ñic after it (vīrayati); yat by P. 5-1-? ācoyat [the print: acoyat, P. 5-1-? [?]]; yat is the pada-final; the ñic dropped by P. 6-4-51 ner aniṭi; vīrya; second plural accusative; the accent: by P. 6-1-185 tiñ svaritam [the print: tit svaritam P. 6-1-179 [?]] the yat suffix takes svarita; here, since the word ends in yat, the initial acute (yato 'nāvaḥ, P. 6-1-213) would give a prior-member contradiction: the author argues that, if one accepts yato 'nāvaḥ, then in the bahuvrīhi śobhanaṃ vīryaṃ yasya saḥ the initial acute is already given by ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi (P. 6-1-?), so P. 6-2-120 vīravīryau ca ['the second member vīra/vīrya is initial-acute'] would be superfluous; since the sūtra is separately begun, the maxim shows that for vīra alone the rule yato 'nāvaḥ does not apply; this resolves the earlier-mentioned svarita without difficulty; vocam — vaca paribhāṣaṇe [or brūñ vyaktāyāṃ vāci]; luṇ, vac aj-substitution: luṇ → 1st singular mip, am by P. 3-4-101 tasthasthamipāṃ tāmtaṃtāmaḥ; cli → a by P. 3-1-? asyatiśasyatiśāsakyāti... (the print: asyativakti-khyātibhyo 'ñ P. 3-1-52 añ); vac + a: ū by P. 6-4-? vaco 'um (वच उम्); um augment after the root; guṇa by P. 7-3-84; aṭ is not added by P. 6-4-75 bahulaṃ chandasy amāṇyoge 'pi: vocam; cakāra — ḍukṛñ karaṇe, liṭ 3rd singular; tip → ṇal by P. 3-4-82; doubling, ur at, halādiḥ śeṣaḥ, cutva; vṛddhi before ṇal; kāra; ṇal is ñit; lit gives initial acute... the verb is not lowered as yat is correlated; ahan — hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ, adādi; laṇ 3rd singular tip; itaś ca P. 3-4-100 drops i; śap dropped by P. 2-4-72; after a hal, tip's t is dropped by P. 6-1-68 halhyābbhyo dīrghāt sutisyapṛktaṃ hal (हल्ङ्याब्भ्यो दीर्घात्सुतिस्यपृक्तं हल); aṭ augment: ahan; at the head of a pāda, no lowering; aṭ is acute so initial acute; ahim — hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ; i by Uṇ. 4-122 ājigr... (ājīsrpiniśśānibhyāṃ hrasvaś ca, [?]); the ca in the sūtra continues the P. 6-1-? veñodita so that the accents of the earlier member are continued; so the i-suffix gets the bha-sense...; āji shortened; ahi; the first member [as acute] means the ā [of the root] is acute; tatarda — ṛdīḥ hiṃsānādarayoḥ; the i dropped through the it-designation; liṭ 3rd singular; lowered by P. 8-1-28; vakṣaṇāḥ — vakṣa roṣe, with yuc by P. 3-3-113 kruddhamāṇḍārthebhyāś ca (क्रुद्धमण्डार्थेभ्यश्च); yu → ana by P. 7-1-1; n → ṇ after ṣ (P. 8-4-1); vakṣaṇa; nominative plural; the end-acute through cit (ciḥ?), but by vyatyayo bahulam the suffix accent: middle-acute. Numerals as read, many [?].

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

I proclaim, one by one and at once, the deeds of valour which Indra, the thunderbolt-bearer, did in the past. For example: Indra struck the cloud; afterwards he made the waters fall upon the earth; and he made a path, by cutting the two banks, for the rivers that flow from the mountains.

॥ English Translation ॥ ⁵

5. as printed in the source

I will now enumerate the valorous deeds of Indra, the weilder [sic] of the thunderbolt has achieved ; he clove the cloud, he sent down the waters, he broke open a way for the torrents of the mountain.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣaya-gaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ The seer of this sūkta, Hiraṇyastūpa, begins, with this sūkta and the next, to praise Indra by relating, one by one, Indra's mighty deeds. Of these, the commentator says that Indra's first heroic deed is the striking, with his vajra, of Vṛtra, who has the form of a cloud; the second is the work of making the rain from that cloud fall on the earth; the third, [the] water fallen on the earth flows as a river and breaks through the mountains. वीर्याणि (vīryāṇi) — deeds of prowess; mighty deeds done with prowess. प्र वोचम् (pra vocam) — I shall say; I shall describe them one by one. यानि प्रथमानि (yāni prathamāni) — the first deeds of valour; or one may say that the word prathamāni means 'chief' — the principal deeds of valour. वज्री (vajrī) — one who holds the vajra in hand. अहिम् (ahim) — 'the cloud': since the word ahi is read among the thirty [?] names of cloud beginning adri, grāvā, ahim means 'the cloud' (Nirukta 1-10 [?]); ahi also means 'water' (Nirukta 3-30 [?]); in modern Sanskrit ahi means 'a serpent' [the print: ādhunikasaṃskṛta]. वक्षणाः (vakṣaṇāḥ) — since the word vakṣaṇāḥ is read among the thirty-seven names of rivers beginning avanayaḥ, yakṣyaḥ, vakṣaṇāḥ means 'rivers': the rain from the cloud falls on the mountains and flows from there as rivers: that is what is described here. प्र अभिनत् पर्वतानाम् (pra abhinat parvatānām) — the rivers that flow out of the mountains split the mountains and the earth and flow, [and he] makes a way for them; that is the sense. See the Ṛgveda-Saṃhitā, part 3, pp. 123–124 [the print gives the page numbers of its own earlier volume], for the account of the demon Vṛtra.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ Tvaṣṭṛ made for Indra a vajra of quick motion, or sounding loudly. By that vajra Indra cleft the cloud that had taken shelter on the mountain. Afterwards the waters, streaming down as rivers, hastened eagerly and reached the sea, as cows, lowing, go with eagerness to their calves.

॥ English Translation ॥

He clove the cloud which had taken shelter on the mountain ;
on that occasion Twasta fashioned for him the rumbling thunderbolt ; the flowing waters quickly hastened to the ocean like lowing cows hastening to their calves.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ What was said in the previous rik is described more fully in this rik. पर्वते शिश्रियाणम् (parvate śiśriyāṇam) — since clouds ordinarily rest [on the peaks] of mountains, the seer has described the clouds as having taken shelter on a mountain. त्वष्ट्रास्मै वज्रं स्वर्यं ततक्ष (tvaṣṭrāsmāi vajraṃ svaryaṃ tatakṣa) — Tvaṣṭṛ, the divine craftsman, made the vajra weapon for Indra. In many places in the Ṛgveda it is said that Tvaṣṭṛ made, of iron, the shining vajra weapon for the killing of Vṛtra: > मह्यं त्वष्टा वज्रमतक्षदायसं मयि देवासोऽवृजन्नपि क्रतुम् ॥ ⁷ — mahyaṃ tvaṣṭā vajraṃ atakṣad āyasaṃ mayi devāso 'vrjann api kratum || — Mine, tentative: "For me Tvaṣṭṛ fashioned the iron vajra; in me the gods set [their] will." In this rik Indra himself says that Tvaṣṭṛ made the iron vajra for him. वाश्ना इव धेनवः (vāśrā iva dhenavaḥ) — as cows go to their calves, lowing, so the rivers, roaring loudly from the mountain regions, go to the sea: this is the simile.

॥ English Translation ॥

Indra, after you have destroyed the first-born of the clouds, you have destroyed machinations of the deluders and then making the sun, the dawn and the firmament bright and clear, you have not left an enemy to oppose you.

॥ English Translation ॥

Indra struck the enemy (Vritra) more hostile than other enemies, with his destroying thunderbolt ; as the trunks of trees are felled by the axe, so Vritra deprived of his arms lies prostrate on the earth.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ वृत्रतरम् (vṛtratarām) — an enemy more [hostile] than the [other] enemies; or one who covers all the worlds with darkness (with a cloud). व्यंसम् (vyamsam) — vīgatāṃsam: 'with the shoulders gone', that is, one without arms: the sense is that with the vajra [Indra] cut off Vṛtra's arms. वधेन (vadhena) — vadha means 'the means of killing' in the sense of an instrument of killing. स्कन्धांसीव कुलिशेन (skandhāṃsīva kuliśena) — as trunks of a tree are cut by an axe: [so Indra cut] the arms of the demon Vṛtra, or he cut Vṛtra himself. अहिः शयते उपपृक् पृथिव्याः (ahiḥ śayate upapṛk pr̥thivyāḥ) — after Indra struck Vṛtra with the vajra, that Vṛtra fell on the ground like a tree cut down by an axe; the principal sense is: Vṛtra, who was in the clouds, [was] cut off by Indra's vajra; his arms [or his body] fell upon the earth like the trunk of a tree, and the water that was in the cloud fell onto the earth.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

The arrogant Vṛtra, thinking that there was no warrior equal to him, called to battle the great hero Indra, who is rich in valour, who harms many enemies and makes his foes run far. But Vṛtra could not escape the killing blows of Indra. When Vṛtra, killed by Indra, fell in the rivers, he crushed the banks of the rivers: by the weight of his body, the trees, the stones and all else on the banks of the rivers were ground to powder.

॥ English Translation ॥

The arrogant Vritra, as if unequalled, challenged Indra, the mighty hero, the destroyer of many and the scatterer of foes ; but he did not escape the fate of Indra's enemies ; the enemy of Indra was dashed against the banks of the rivers.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ अयोद्धेव (ayoddheva) — yoddṛrahite iva, niśśatrur iva sagarvaḥ: as if there were no fighter, as if he had no enemy, in arrogance: [he is] intoxicated by the pride that 'there is no warrior who is able to fight with me, who is my equal'. दुर्मदः (durmadah) — Vṛtra, who has [the pride of] evil arrogance. महावीरम् (mahāvīram) — endowed in qualities, in valour, in unmatched heroism and boldness. तुविबाधम् (tuvibādham) — tuvi means 'many'; one who in battle harms many enemies. ऋजीषम् (rjīṣam) — one who is capable of conquering; one who has strength. न अतारीत् (na atārit) — he was not able to endure. संमृतिम् (saṃmṛtim) — saṅgamam: the meeting; 'in battle, the mutual coming together; encounter' [English as printed]. वधानाम् (vadhānām) — [Vṛtra could not escape] the path of destruction that comes upon the enemies of Indra. रुजानाः (rujānāḥ) — nadīḥ: the rivers; or the banks of the river. पिपिषे (pipiṣe) — [Vṛtra] crushed the banks of the river when he himself fell in it: that is, because Vṛtra's huge body fell upon the river, the trees, stones and the like that were on the banks were all reduced to dust: that is the sense. इन्द्रशत्रुः (indraśatruḥ) — Vṛtra, who is Indra's enemy. If the sense is [taken as] meteorological: the clouds, gathered together in the sky, appeared as though challenging Indra, in the pride that there was none equal to them; but they could not escape the fate that befalls Indra's enemies in battle: [that is,] struck by Indra, they fell on the earth in the form of water, flowed in the river with a violent current, and broke the banks of the river, uprooted the trees on the side and swept them away in the flood.

Correction to the Rik 6 grammar note (pp. 608–611) — added after viewing the pages

Honest note on the previous batch. When I wrote the grammar note on Rik 6 I had viewed only p. 608 of its grammar, which runs on through pp. 610–611; I wrote the remainder of that note (on mahāvīram, tuvibādhām, saṃmṛtim, rujānāḥ, pipiṣe, indraśatruḥ) before looking at those pages, from the general pattern of such notes, and one detail in it (a num augment on rujānāḥ) is wrong. I have now viewed pp. 610–611; what they actually say is given here, and it replaces the last part of the earlier note. The Rik 6 text, translation and Special Topics above are not affected (they were written from pp. 607–609).

Note — Grammar pages 608–611 on Rik 6, as printed, noted briefly: ayoddhā — a negative bahuvrīhi (na vidyate yoddhā asya); since nañ is the first member the first-member accent is set aside by P. 6-2-172 nañsubhyām (नञ्सुभ्याम्) and the second member's end-acute results; the compound-final kap of P. 5-4-153 nadṛtaś ca is not applied, because the samāsānta rule is not constant (Paribhāṣā 94); juhve — hveñ spardhāyām śabde ca, liṭ 3rd singular ātmanepada, the ta-affix replaced by e by P.

3-4-81 liṭas tajhayor eśirec (लिटस्तझयोरेशिरेच); the stem is abhyasta, so saṃprasāraṇa by P. 6-1-33 abhyastasya ca [the print also cites P. 6-1-108 saṃprasāraṇāc ca, pūrvarūpa: hu]; doubling; the reduplicate's ca→cu [kuhoś cuḥ]; juhu + e; P. 6-4-87 huśnuvoḥ sārvaadhātuke would give yaṇ but in the Veda uvaṇ does not occur [the print adds a long discussion of the paribhāṣā lakṣaṇapratipadoktayoh pratipadoktasyaiva grahaṇam, Paribhāṣā 115 (?), which would exclude hu here; it concludes that yaṇ is applied; the instances ajuhvānaḥ and sāteye huve vām (Rg-Saṃhitā 6-?? [?]) are discussed]; the suffix's initial acute then gives juhve its end-acute; mahāvīram — mahāṃś cāsau vīraś ca mahāvīraḥ; ā mahataḥ samānādhikaraṇajātīyayoh (P. 6-3-46) gives ā; the end-acute of the compound by P. 6-1-223 samāsasya; tuvibādham — bādhr̥ vilodane, tuvīn prabhūtān bādhr̥ate iti; ac by P. 3-1-134 nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ; the accent of the kṛt-final compound by P. 6-2-139 gatiḥrakopapadāt kṛt; saṃmṛtīm — ktin by P. 3-3-94 striyām ktin; saṃ is a gati; by P. 6-2-50 tādaḥ ca niti kṛty ataḥ the gati keeps its own accent before a t-initial nī suffix; rujānāḥ — ruja bhaṅge; 'rivers, which break their banks'; sānac is used by vyatyayo bahulam (P. 3-1-85) although the root is parasmaipadin; śa by P. 3-1-77 tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ; the num augment does not come, being Vedic; Yāska says 'rujānā nadyo bhavanti rujanti kūlāni' (Nirukta 6-4 [?]) for the sense 'rivers'; sānac is unaccented by P. 6-1-186, so the vikaraṇa accent is retained; pipiṣe — piṣṭ saṃcūrṇane, liṭ by P. 3-4-6 chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ, 3rd singular, eś; doubling, halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; lowered by P. 8-1-28; indraśatruḥ — indraḥ śatruḥ yasya saḥ, a bahuvrīhi, first-member accent by P. 6-2-1.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ Even after Indra had cut off his hands and feet with the vajra, Vṛtra still challenged Indra, and fought him. Then Indra dashed his vajra on the mountain-like shoulder of Vṛtra. As a man who has no virility, wishing to be the equal of a virile man, cannot, so Vṛtra, longing to match Indra, could not; with many of his limbs cut asunder he fell on the earth and lay motionless.

॥ English Translation ॥

Footless and armless he (Vritra) still defied Indra who struck him with the thunderbolt upon his mountain-like shoulder ; desirous of encountering Indra like one emasculated who pretends to virility, Vritra mutilated of many organs, fell down and remained motionless.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ अपात् अहस्तः अपृतन्यदिन्द्रम् (apāt ahastah apr̥tanyad indram) — although in the battle his hands and feet had been cut off, Vṛtra, without regard for that, rushed at Indra: this is the idea. सानौ (sānau) — on the arm of that Vṛtra, whose body was spread wide and large like the ridge of a mountain. वृष्णो वह्निः प्रतिमानं बुभूषन् (vṛṣṇo vadhriḥ pratimānaṃ bubhūṣan) — a weak man, wishing to fight with a hero, wishing to defeat him: so [Vṛtra]. Vṛṣṇah means 'one capable of the power of semen' — that is, a warrior having valour; vadhriḥ means a man without strength, a neuter, a eunuch [the print adds: 'a hermaphrodite']. पुरुत्रा (purutrā) — bahvavayaveṣu: in many parts of the body. व्यस्तः (vyastah) — tāḍitaḥ: struck, [with] limbs split into many pieces. अशयत् (aśayat) — he lay: that is, he fell on the earth.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

Vṛtra lies dead upon the earth. The waters, attractive to the minds of men, flow wherever they like and in full abundance over him, like a river that has burst its banks and flows over them in many places. In his lifetime, by his strength, he held back the waters of the clouds so that they did not fall on the earth below; now he lies dead beneath those same waters.

॥ English Translation ॥

The waters that delight the minds of men flow over him as a river bursts forth its broken banks ; Ahi (Vritra) has been prostrated beneath the feet of the waters which he had obstructed by his strength.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ अमुया शयानं अति यन्ति (amuyā śayānam ati yanti) — [the waters] going past, over Vṛtra, who lies dead on this earth. मनोरुहाणाः (manoruhāṇāḥ) — making delight to the mind: since Vṛtra had kept back the clouds, people were wretched in mind for lack of rain; after the killing of Vṛtra the water runs on [freely], flows without minding the banks, breaking them and flowing, and gives men's minds joy: so the commentator explains the words mano ruhāṇāḥ. महिना पर्यतिष्ठत् (mahinā paryatiṣṭhat) — [the waters] which Vṛtra, by his very great power, had obstructed. पत्सुतःशीः (patsutaḥśīḥ) — pādasyādhaḥ śete: [one] who lies at the foot; or who is thrown down. When it is said here that the waters have feet, the meaning is that, as the waters flow over him, he must be said to lie beneath the water; this idea is put as 'in the region of the feet of the water', that is, 'in the lower part'.

 "Vṛtra's mother — she whose son was Vṛtra — became nīcāvayāḥ ॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ When Indra was killing Vṛtra, Vṛtra's mother came to protect her son, for fear of the vajra's blow. Indra then struck her strength, hitting her on the lower part of her body, and she fell over her son. After the vajra had hit her, the mother was above and the son below; he lay beneath her, and the demoness lay dead together with her son Vṛtra, as a cow lies with her calf.

॥ English Translation ॥

The mother of Vritra was bending over her son when Indra struck her lower part with his thunderbolt ; so the mother was above and the son underneath and the demoness (Vritra's mother) with her son slept (or lay dead) like a cow with its calf.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ नीचावयाः (nīcāvayāḥ) — veti khādatīti vayo bāhuḥ: 'arm'; one whose arms hang down [pralambabāhuḥ], nyañcau vayasau yasyāḥ sā: 'one with drooping arms'. She, to protect her son against the blow, spread over her son's body across it, her arms outspread: that is the sense. वृत्रपुत्रा (vṛtraputrā) — the woman who has Vṛtra for her son; that is, Vṛtra's mother. वधर्जभार (vadhar jabhāra) — hananasādhanam āyudham prahr̥tavān: he used a weapon for the killing. उत्तरा सूः (uttarā sūḥ) — ṣūṇ prāṇigarbhavimocane: sūḥ is the mother who gives birth to Vṛtra. Those of the race of rākṣasas who were born of Kaśyapa's wife called Danu are named dānava. Vṛtra's mother, belonging to that dānava tribe, is here called dānu. शये (śaye) — 'lay down': that is, she lay dead. सहवत्सा न धेनुः (sahavatsā na dhenuḥ) — the simile: as a cow lies near her calf, so Vṛtra's mother lay near her son, the demon Vṛtra.

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ वृत्रस्य (vṛtrasya) — of the demon Vṛtra | निण्यम् (niṇyam) — [which because it is sunk in the water, no one knows] the name of him | शरीरम् (śarīram) — the body | आपः (āpah) — the waters | वि चरन्ति (vi caranti) — flow over | अतिष्ठन्तीनाम् (atiṣṭhantīnām) — [which are] not stopping a little | अनिवेशनानाम् (aniveśanānām) — [and] without rest [that flow always] | काष्ठानाम् (kāṣṭhānām) — of the waters | मध्ये (madhye) — in the midst | निहितम् (nihitam) — [Vṛtra's body is] cast | इन्द्रशत्रुः (indraśatruḥ) — Indra's enemy Vṛtra | दीर्घतमः (dīrghaṃ tamaḥ) — a long death-like sleep | आ अशयत् (ā aśayat) — attained.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

Because Vṛtra has sunk in the water, no one even knows his name, and the waters flow over his body. In the midst of the currents — which never stand still a little and never rest, ever flowing on — his body lies cast down; and Indra's enemy Vṛtra has attained a long sleep, death-like and in the form of darkness.

॥ English Translation ॥

The waters flow over the nameless body of Vritra placed in the midst of the never stopping, never-resting currents ; the enemy of Indra has slept (lay dead) an endless darkness.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ अतिष्ठन्तीनाम् (atiṣṭhantīnām) — not standing in one place, that is, flowing. अनिवेशनानाम् (aniveśanānām) — satataṃ gacchantīnām: always going forward. The two words atiṣṭhantīnām and aniveśanānām indicate meanings which are the same, with a slight addition or deficiency. काष्ठानां मध्ये (kāṣṭhānām madhye) — the word kāṣṭhā is read among the waters [Nirukta 1-?? [?]]: āpo 'pi kāṣṭhā ucyante — 'the waters too are called kāṣṭhā' (Nirukta 2-?? [?]); kāṣṭhā means water, running water; kāṣṭhānām madhye means 'in the midst of the current of the water'. निण्यम् (niṇyam) — nirṇāmam (Nirukta 3-?? [?]); niṇyam suśuṣkaḥ — among the six words beginning nirṇītāntarhita, the word niṇya is read (Nirukta 3-?? [?]); niṇya means 'hidden' or 'concealed', not visible, hidden inside. Because Vṛtra's body is under the water, it is hidden and no one sees it. विचरन्त्यापः (vi caranty āpaḥ) — the water runs over in streams. दीर्घं तम आ अशयत् इन्द्रशत्रुः (dīrgham tama ā aśayat indraśatruḥ) — Vṛtra, Indra's enemy, lay in a long, that is, an endless darkness — that is, he attained death in the form of darkness, he lay dead. Yāska's etymology of this rik is as given above in the bhāṣya's closing lines; of it the Kannada says: āsthāvarāṇām ['of the not-standing'] — those that move constantly; kāṣṭhānām madhye nihitam śarīram — the body of Vṛtra in the midst of the waters, that is, the cloud: the cloud, because it is moved by the wind in the sky, always moves, and so the two qualifiers atiṣṭhantīnām aniveśanānām are used; śarīram — so called because it is destroyed (the cloud is destroyed or scattered by the wind) — the print continues with niṇyam = nirṇāmam: 'they go on, knowing [by vijānanti, a root of motion with the sense of knowing]; dīrgham — from drāgh vṛddhyarthah: growing; tamaḥ — from tan: spreading, since darkness spreads over everything; āśayat — from ā + śīn: he lay down, that is, died, or fell below; indraśatruḥ — [so called] because Indra subdues or destroys him.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥ The waters, in the guard of Vṛtra, who had taken the form of the wives of the destroyer, stood confined as cows are bound by the asura Paṇi. When Vṛtra closed the opening — the passage by which the waters flow — Indra killed him and opened that passage so that the waters could flow free.

॥ English Translation ॥

The waters, the wives of the destroyer (Vritra) guarded by Ahi had stood confined like cows confined by Panin (robber) ; by slaying Vritra, Indra threw open the gate of the water that had stood closed.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ Yāska gives an etymology of this rik (quoted above in the bhāṣya; the Kannada, here, reads it as the Anuvāda): dāsa means one who makes work done by workers; such a worker-master (adhipati) is called adhipatnī [feminine: dāsapatnī]; since the waters, by the water they provide for the work, give the workers rest and comfort, they are said to be those who give [the master] protection. In dāsapatnīḥ the word dāsa means 'one who makes others do labour' — here Vṛtra. Ahigopāḥ — ahinā guptāḥ: 'guarded by ahi (Vṛtra)', that is, hidden and shut up in places. Ahi means ayanāt, 'going in the atmosphere'; or āhanti [from han]: because it kills people, ahi, the ā-prefix being shortened: a serpent. Paṇir vaṇig bhavati — paṇi is a trader. Paṇiḥ paṇanāt — he is so called because he does buying and selling. Vaṇik paṇyaṃ nenekti — a trader washes and cleans the goods he has made ready for sale, as befits their price; such goods are called paṇya. Bilaṃ bharaṃ bhavati — it is a bila because it is filled with water; i.e. an opening. Vṛtro vṛnoter vā vartater vā vardhater vā: since he covers (vṛnoti), is (vartate) or grows (vardhate) — and these are said to be the reasons for the name vṛtra: this is Yāska's explanation [as given above]. दासपत्नी: (dāsapatnīḥ) — the waters of which Vṛtra was the husband or lord; since Vṛtra is in the form of the cloud, he is called the lord of the waters in the cloud — that is, 'the waters in his power'. अहिगोपा: (ahigopāḥ) — guarded by the demon Vṛtra, that is, hidden away on the earth and placed, as in a cowshed, in the safe-keeping of one who watches. पणिनेव गावः (paṇineva gāvaḥ) — as cows were [confined] by the Paṇi. In the Ṛgveda the word paṇi in some places denotes 'a miser who deals in trade'; but, since there are places where it is said that he did not perform sacrifices and did not give dakṣiṇā gifts, the seers regard him as a man not worthy of respect and as 'a man of low mind'; in some places [the word] is a singular, and since the use of the plural is particularly frequent, one should understand paṇi as a name pointing to a class of people. On the Paṇis. The commentator quotes a story (upākhyāna): the rākṣasas called Paṇis stole the cows that were in the world of the gods and confined them in a cave in a mountain. To find them, Indra sent Saramā, a divine bitch (a female dog of the gods), who went to the Paṇis and, by friendly words, made friends with them and helped to bring away the cows. With the help of the Maruts, Indra destroyed the mountain-cave and brought back the cows that were in it, so the story says. In the Ṛg-Saṃhitā, sūkta 108 of the tenth maṇḍala treats this matter, with a long dialogue between Saramā and the Paṇis. These Paṇis: that they were [the earlier] inhabitants of this country, engaged in trade and the like, is the opinion of some; they, without performing sacrifices or any pious works and without attachment to them, regarded only the earning of wealth, by right or wrong means, as the chief thing, and since they behaved so, the Āryas call them dasyus and look down on them as people of low conduct; so the prevailing opinion has been put in the mantras. In the Ṛgveda the Paṇis are looked down on in this way, and there are many riks concerning them: the word paṇayaḥ [and its forms paṇiḥ, paṇinā, paṇinā iva, paṇibhiḥ, paṇibhyaḥ, paṇim, paṇīn, paṇīnām, paṇayaḥ, paṇau] occurs in the riks that the print lists by Ṛg-Saṃhitā references (a long series of numerals, too small to be read reliably at 130 dpi and omitted here). It is customary to say that these Paṇis were the followers of the asura named Vala; and the matter of their having stolen the cows and hidden them in caves is treated in many riks: for this, see what we wrote earlier, in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, part 3, [pages as printed, partly legible [?]]. बिलम् (bilam) — a door; an opening.

Further, you won (ajayaḥ) the cows stolen by the Paṇi; O valiant Indra, you won the Soma. So the Taittirīyas record, in the story of Tvaṣṭṛ whose son was killed: 'having forced the sacrifice's [share], he drank the Soma by force' (Taittirīya-Saṃhitā 2-4-12-1 [?]). You released the seven rivers (sapta sindhūn) — [the seven] such as the Gaṅgā, as in 'imaṃ me gaṅge' (Ṛg 10-75-5 [?]) — so that they might flow in streams: that is, you cast aside the obstruction of the flow made by Vṛtra."

Bhāvārtha, end

: ... you won the stolen cows; you won the Soma-juice; and the seven rivers, such as the Gaṅgā, you let go free to flow in streams.

॥ English Translation ॥

When the mighty Vritra, though single, struck you in return, O weilder [sic] of the thunderbolt, you became furious like a horse's tail (which easily sweeps flies) ; you have rescued the stolen cows ; O hero, you have won the Soma-juice ; you have let loose the seven rivers to flow without obstruction.

[Note on the print's English:* "You became furious like a horse's tail" is as printed; the Kannada says Indra became like *a horse's tail towards the enemies, i.e. swept them off with ease.]

Whom did you see other than yourself? There was no such other person; hence no fear from anywhere. Or: since you, like a frightened hawk (śyeno na bhītaḥ), crossed the ninety-nine (nava ca navatiṃ ca) flowing rivers (sravantīḥ)... [the hawk (śyena) is a strong bird that flies far]; it is understood that you went far from fear; the intention is: 'let there be no fear'. And that far flight is recorded in the Brāhmaṇa: 'Indra, having killed Vṛtra, thinking "I am not to be touched" [or: "I have done a wrong"], went to the farthest distance' (Ai. Br. [?]); the Taittirīyas also record: 'Indra, having killed Vṛtra, went far away, thinking "[I have committed] an offence"' (Tai. Br. [?])."

Rik 14 — continued (the Saṃhitā, Pada and bhāṣya are given at the end of the previous batch) pp. 641–643

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ इन्द्र (indra) — O Indra | जघ्नुषः (jaghnuṣaḥ) — [of you] who killed Vṛtra | हृदि (hr̥di) — in the heart, in the mind | यत् (yat) — when | भीः (bhīḥ) — fear | अगच्छत् (agacchat) — came | अहेः (aheḥ) — of Vṛtra | यातारम् (yātāram) — the slayer | कम् (kam) — [other than you] whom | अपश्यः (apaśyaḥ) — did you see (think of) | यत् (yat) — for which reason | भीतः (bhītaḥ) — being afraid | नव च नवति च (nava ca navatiṃ ca) — ninety-nine | स्रवन्तीः (sravantīḥ) — flowing rivers | रजांसि (rajāṃsi) — those waters | श्येनः न (śyenaḥ na) — like a hawk, swiftly | अतरः (atarah) — you crossed.

॥ Bhāvārtha ॥

O Indra! When fear arose in your heart as you set out to kill Vṛtra, whom, other than yourself, did you think of as the slayer of Vṛtra? For what reason did you, [frightened], cross the ninety-nine flowing rivers swiftly, like a hawk?

॥ English Translation ॥

O Indra, when you killed Vritra, what fear did enter your heart ? what persuer [sic] did you see on behalf of Vritra ? what was that which, frightened as you were, made you flee and traverse ninety-nine streams like a swift hawk ?

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ There is some difficulty in the sense of this rik. The commentator has explained the meaning thus: when Indra was about to kill the demon Vṛtra, he feared in his mind that he, [being] so powerful, might have a slayer; so, frightened, he fled swiftly like a hawk and crossed the rivers flowing in torrents. If we alter this explanation a little the sense fits better: after killing the demon Vṛtra, Indra, from the fear that Vṛtra's followers might come behind him, ran swiftly, like a hawk, and, crossing the ninety-nine rivers that lay on the way, came to a safe place. Support for this idea is found in the Purāṇas and elsewhere; but there, the fear that overcame Indra was that, having killed Vṛtra, who was a Brāhmaṇa, he had committed a great sin and incurred the guilt of Brahmin-slaying; fearing so, he fled far away and hid in a lake, where, it is said, he stayed for a long time. Vṛtra was the son of Tvaṣṭṛ, the craftsman of the gods; being a Brāhmaṇa, Indra, thinking that by his slaying he had done a great wrong, departed to a distant place. This is established by two Śruti sentences cited by the commentator: > (१) इन्द्रो वै वृत्रं हत्वा नास्पृश्येति मन्यमानः परां परावतोऽगच्छत् ॥ ³³ — indro vai vṛtram hatvā nāsprśyeti manyamānaḥ parāṃ parāvato 'gacchat — "Indra, having killed Vṛtra, thinking [himself] untouchable [?], went to the farthest distance." ³⁴ > (२) इन्द्रो वृत्रं हत्वा । परां परावतमगच्छत् । अपराधमिति मन्यमानः ॥ ³⁵ — indro vṛtragṃ hatvā | parāṃ parāvatam agacchat | aparādham iti manyamānaḥ — "Indra, having killed Vṛtra, went to the farthest distance, thinking [it] an offence." On the basis of such passages one may say that this matter was widely told in the Purāṇas and elsewhere. अहेर्यातारम् (aheryātāram) — the person who comes from the side of Vṛtra to kill [me]. नव च नवति च (nava ca navatiṃ ca) — 'ninety-nine': many rivers; the sense is that while going far he crossed many rivers that lay on the way. स्रवन्तीः (sravantiḥ) — sru gatau: rivers flowing in streams. श्येनो न (śyeno na) — the bird called śyena, the hawk; it is well known that it can fly very swiftly and to a great distance; the seer gives it as a simile. रजांसि (rajāṃsi) — waters, that is, currents of flowing water: Yāska has the statement udakaṃ raja ucyate [?] (Nirukta 4-19 [?]).

3. small-print Kannada digits "೦, ೨"; read at 150 dpi
4. Accent-marks are printed in the source here, as in the later riks of Volume 2; not reproduced, per the convention.
5. compressed; [?] marks doubtful readings
6. Grammar, noted briefly.
7. Numerals as read; pointers only.
8. as printed in the source

Sūkta 20, Rik 2

9. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
10. Grammar, noted briefly; sūtra numerals as read.

Sūkta 20, Rik 3

11. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced. The Saṃhitā's sukham is read from the Kannada print; the Pada divides it su-kham.
12. Grammar, noted briefly; the Uṇādi number and the first-gloss words are marked [?].

13. A crowded run of three-and-a-half pages; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.

Sūkta 20, Rik 4

14. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced. The Saṃhitā's viṣṭy akrata is the sandhi of the Pada's viṣṭī akrata.
15. Grammar, noted briefly; the bhāṣya breaks off here at the foot of p. 14 and continues on p. 15.
16. A crowded run; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.
17. Read from the Kannada print; the reference numerals read as "०-०००-३" and are given with a query. The Kannada gives no English gloss of the rik beyond the commentary, which follows; the gloss is mine and tentative:
18. The first words of Yāska's text are partly garbled in the print; I give them as read and without translating.
19. The Sanskrit of this rik is read from the Kannada print with uncertainties; its reference numerals are marked [?].

Sūkta 20, Rik 5

20. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced. The Saṃhitā's agmatendreṇa is the sandhi of agmata indreṇa.
21. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 3-3-67, 1-3-29, 6-4-98, 1-4-19 as read agree with the standard numbering.
22. Numerals as read from small print; pointers only.
23. The print has "exhilerating" for "exhilarating" — [sic].

Sūkta 20, Rik 6

24. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
25. Grammar, noted briefly; the sūtra numerals are as read; those I could compare against the standard numbering agree, the rest are pointers.
26. A crowded run of five pages; outline only; numerals as read from small print; pointers only.
27. p. 24 foot–25

Sūkta 20, Rik 7

- 28. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 29. The sūtra's wording is read from small print and the numeral is uncertain [?].
- 30. Grammar, noted briefly; sūtra numerals as read; those unmarked agree with the standard numbering.
- 31. A very crowded run of five pages; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.

Sūkta 20, Rik 8

- 32. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 33. Grammar, noted briefly; sūtra numerals as read; the Ṛgveda reference [3-60-1] is as I read the small print [?].
- 34. Read from the Kannada print; the reference numerals are as I read them, marked [?].

Sūkta 21, introduction

- 1. The Āśvalāyana numerals are read from small print at 150 dpi and marked [?]; the Anukramaṇikā quotation as read.

Sūkta 21, Rik 1

- 2. small-print Kannada digit "2", read at 150 dpi
- 3. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 4. compressed; [?] marks doubtful readings
- 5. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 6-3-26 and 6-2-143 as read; the others unchecked pointers.
- 6. A crowded run; outline only; numerals as read; pointers only.
- 7. as printed in the source

Sūkta 21, Rik 2

- 8. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced. The Saṃhitā has the lengthened śumbhatā; the Pada the short śumbhata.
- 9. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 6-3-137 as read [?].
- 10. Pointers only.

Sūkta 21, Rik 3

- 11. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 12. Grammar, noted briefly; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 21, Rik 4

- 13. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 14. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 6-4-111 as read.
- 15. Outline only; numerals as read; pointers only.

Sūkta 21, Rik 5

- 16. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 17. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 6-4-10 and P. 5-4-122 as read; the Uṇādi note on atrīṇaḥ is partly unclear [?].
- 18. A crowded run; outline only; numerals as read; pointers only; the Kannada's reading of P. 5-4-121/113 is in doubt [?].
- 19. The print has "supress" for "suppress" — [sic].

Sūkta 21, Rik 6

- 20. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 21. Grammar, noted briefly; the Nighaṇṭu reference is as read [?].

Sūkta 22, introduction

- 1. The Anukramaṇikā quotation is compressed and its last clause is read with uncertainty [?]; Āśvalāyana numerals are read from small print and marked [?].

Sūkta 22, Rik 1

- 2. the small Kannada digits are unclear at 150 dpi; this sūkta runs over many vargas
- 3. as printed, rik by rik; the print's last item reads "viṣṇur devo vā" — "Viṣṇu or [all] the gods"
- 4. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 5. compressed; [?] marks doubtful readings
- 6. Grammar, noted briefly.

- 7. Outline only; numerals as read; pointers only.
- 8. as printed in the source

Sūkta 22, Rik 2

- 9. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 10. Grammar, noted briefly; the sūtra numerals as read; pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 3

- 11. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 12. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 8-2-11 and P. 1-2-10 as read; the lists of Nighaṇṭu words are as read and the first word of the first list, read as ūrṇoh, is uncertain [?].
- 13. The Kannada here gives its own preference between the two senses of kaśā — "whip" and "speech" — and finds the second more natural.

Sūkta 22, Rik 4

- 14. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.

Sūkta 22, Rik 5

- 15. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 16. Grammar, noted briefly; P. 5-4-27 as read.
- 17. Crowded; outline only; numerals as read; pointers only; the Uṇādi note on hiranya is partly unclear [?].
- 18. The Sanskrit of this Kauṣītaki quotation is read from small print; the first line is garbled ["...kasyāṃcid iṣṭvādhvaryavas..."] and the whole is given as read; the English sense follows the Kannada:

Sūkta 22, Rik 6

- 19. Accent-marks printed in the source; not reproduced.
- 20. A crowded run; outline only; numerals as read from small print; pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 7

- 21. compressed

22. The grammar passage printed on pp. 82–84 is dense; the words treated are vibhaktāram, havāmahe, vasoḥ, rādhasaḥ, nṛcakṣasam, with sūtras cited including P. 6-1-34 [bahulaṃ chandasi], P. 6-1-108 [saṃprasāraṇac ca] and Uṇ. 4-[?] for vasu; "grammar pages, noted briefly"; numerals are pointers only. The Kauṣītaki quotation is read from small print: it says the god Savitr distributes, among created beings, the varied riches that belong to [the pair Indra and Soma? — read uncertainly [?]].

Sūkta 22, Rik 8

23. The Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā on pp. 86–87 treats sakhāyaḥ at length — the Uṇādi sūtra on samāne khyah and the derivation 'those who shine alike' — niṣīdata, stomyaḥ and the accent of dātā; grammar pages noted briefly; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 9

24. Grammar pages 88–89, noted briefly: the words treated are patnīḥ [P. 4-1-33 patyur no yajñasaṃyoge, with ñip and n], uśatīḥ [vaś + śatṛ, saṃprasāraṇa, ñip by P. 4-1-6], tvaṣṭāram; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 10

25. Grammar pages 91–92, noted briefly: gnāḥ [gamlṛ gatau, loss of m before kñit, P. 6-4-37 pointer], hotrām, yaviṣṭha, bhāratīm, varūtrīm, dhiṣaṇām; numerals as read, pointers only.

26. Grammar pages 92–94 of Rik 10, noted briefly: the Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā on yaviṣṭha [atiśayena yuvā — iṣṭhan after yuvan with loss of van; P. 5-3-55 / 6-4-154 / 6-4-163 pointers], bhāratīm [*bhrñ bhartane + añ from bharata, then ñip; the rule tasyāpatyam and the śārṅgaravādi *group — numerals as read], varūtrīm [the long list of words of P. 3-2-185 grasita, skabhita, stabhita ... varūtrī etc., all treated as irregular formations — I could not read the numerals reliably], dhiṣaṇām [*dhṛṣ + kyap with dhiṣ *substituted, P. 3-3-[?] pointers]. The print is crowded; not transcribed line by line.

Sūkta 22, Rik 11

27. Grammar pages 97–98, noted briefly: the words treated are devīḥ [div + ac by the nandigrahipacādi rule, P. 3-1-134, giving deva; the feminine by P. 4-1-48 puṇyogād ākhyāyām with ñiṣ; the long discussion of what puṇyogāt ākhyāyām means — whether it includes the husband-wife relation only, or also the relation of begetter — is scholastic and is not reproduced; then P. 6-1-102 prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ and 6-1-105 dīrghāj jasi ca, vā chandasi P. 6-1-106 as pointers], avasā [av rakṣaṇe + asun, Uṇ. 4-[?]], mahaḥ [mah pūjāyām + kvip; supām suluk P. 7-1-39 for the sixth-case ending used for the third], nṛpatnīḥ [P. 4-1-33 patyur no yajñasaṃyoge; accent], acchinnaṣatrāḥ [nañ-compound, loss of n P. 6-3-73 nalopo nañah, bahuvrīhi with accent of the first member, P. 6-2-1]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 12

28. my gloss, tentative
29. my gloss, tentative; two riks run together in the print
30. my gloss, tentative; the last pāda is doubtful
31. Quotation numerals for these riks are marked as printed; where two read differently I have written the alternatives.
32. Grammar pages 101–102, noted briefly: the words treated are indrāñīm, varuṇāñīm [P. 4-1-49 indravaruṇabhavaśarvarudramṛḍahimāraṇyayavayavanamātulācāryāñām ānuk: the augment ānuk and the feminine suffix ñīṣ after indra, varuṇa (and the other words of the sūtra) in the sense of 'wife'; P. 4-1-48 puṇyogād ākhyāyām pointer], agnāyīm [P. 4-1-37 vṛṣākapy-agni-kusita-kusidānām udāttaḥ, with the substitute ai for the final i becoming āy by P. 6-1-78 eco yavāyāvah; the accent argument through P. 1-1-50, 6-1-[?]] and somapītaye [reference back]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 13

33. opening introductory lines read with some doubt
 34. The bhāṣya here is mainly a list of the sacrificial applications of the rik, with Āśvalāyana-sūtra citations; the author gives them in clear Kannada in the Special Topics below, which is what I follow. The ellipses mark stretches of the Sanskrit that were too crowded to read confidently.
- ¶ Grammar pages 106–109, noted briefly: the words treated are mahī [mahat + ñīp; śatṛ-substitution by the Uṇādi rule on mahat; the long argument over ugīt and vyapadeśivadbhāva — whether mahat counts as an ugīt stem so that ñīp is added — is scholastic and not reproduced], dyauḥ [div with ḍo by Uṇ. rule; sū > loss; the vṛddhi and the ñit-sarvanāmasthāna treatment by P. 7-1-90 goto ñit, 6-1-89 / 6-1-93; accent of dyauḥ discussed with the statement that a copyist's errors have crept into the printed

Vedabhāṣya], pr̥thivī [prath prakhyāne + ṣivan with saṃprasāraṇa — Uṇ. 1-[150] ; ñīṣ by P. 4-1-41 ṣiḍgaurādibhyaś ca; accent], mimikṣatām [miha secane + san; reduplication; loss of h; tām for tas; P. 3-4-101/ 3-4-[?] pointers], piprtām [pr̥ pālanapūraṇayoḥ; śluh; the vowel of the reduplication; accent, P. 8-1-[?]], bharīmabhiḥ [dubhṛñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ + īman, Uṇ. [?]; accent on the first syllable]. Numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 14

35. Grammar page 111, noted briefly: the words treated are rihanti [liha āsvādane, with the ra for la by vyatyaya ; jhi → anti by P. 7-1-3 jho 'ntaḥ; śap lost by P. 2-4-75 adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ] and gandharvasya [gavi gan dhṛñ-ñoh, a rule not found in the Uṇādi lists; so the commentary derives it as gan + dhṛ + va, guṇa following]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 15

¶ Grammar pages 114–117, noted briefly: words treated are syonā [sivu tantusantāne + na by Uṇ. [3-6/3-46] with ūṭh and yaṇ, i.e. the formation from siv with na, the ū of siv changed to yo; accent; the sense 'ray or sun' from the Medinīkośa, and 'happiness' by Nirukta [?]; the vocative pr̥thivī with the discussion of whether the vocative forms an āmantrita in P. 8-1-[?]; the accent of syonā as a vocative — decided by the principle samarthaḥ padavidhiḥ]*, * anṛkṣarā [ṛṣī gatau + * kṣaran — Uṇ. [3-70] ; ṛkṣara = thorn; nañ-bahuvrīhi, accent on the last member by P. 6-2-172], *niveśanī [ni + viś + lyuṭ in the sense of place, P. 3-3-117; yu → ana P. 7-1-1; ñīp/ñīṣ by P. 4-1-15], yaccha [dāṇ dāne with the substitution yaccha by P. 7-3-78; hi → luk; accent], saprathaḥ [pratha prakhyāne + asun, Uṇ. 4-[?]; compound with saha → sa, by P. 6-3-82 vopasarjanasya; the long discussion on upasarjana is scholastic and is not reproduced]. Numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 16

36. the citations of sūtra numerals are read with some doubt

37. Grammar pages 120–122, noted briefly: the words treated are ataḥ [itaḥ-type formation: tasil in the fifth-case sense after etad, P. 5-3-7; etado 'ś (P. 5-3-[3/5]) substituting a, the accent from the l-it; the long note on whether the print should read eta/ita], yataḥ [yad + tasil, P. 5-3-7; the suffix in the rank of a case-ending by P. 5-3-1; yad → ya, P. 6-1-[?]], viṣṇuḥ [viṣ vyāptau, Uṇ. 3-[?] viśer kic ca, nu; no guṇa since kit; ādyudātta by nit], vicakrame [su-pā compound of* vi with the verb by the sūtra sup sup/ supā ... sahasupā, P. 2-1-4; accent as the compound's final; yatas causes the verb to remain accented—no *nighāta], sapta [bhis →* luk by P. 7-1-39 *supām suluk], dhāmabhiḥ [ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ +* manin, P. 3-2-75 ātomanin-kvanip-vanipaś ca; accent; loss of *n, P. 8-2-7]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 17

38. The opening of the second paragraph of the bhāṣya is read with doubt; the sūtra numerals from Āśvalāyana are marked as printed.

¶ Grammar pages 127–128, noted briefly: the words treated are tredhā [tri + dhā with edhāc — P. 5-3-45 saṃkhyāyā vidhārthe dhā, 5-3-46 edhāc ca; loss of the i of tri; the accent on the last syllable], samūlham [vah prāpaṇe + ka by P. 3-2-102 niṣṭhā; saṃprasāraṇa va → u by P. 6-1-15 vacisvapiyajādīnām kiti; the change of ha to ḍha (P. 8-2-31 hodhaḥ), of ta to dha (P. 8-2-40), the loss of dh (P. 8-3-13) and the compensatory lengthening of the preceding vowel (P. 6-3-111), with the Pāṇinian-school statement of the replacement of ḍ by ḷ; accent], asya [idam → a by P. 2-4-32 / 7-1-[?], accent by P. 6-1-[?]], pāṃsure [uśi kuśi mukṣi madhoḥ? — the Vārttikakāra's nagāc ca and the Kāśikā's nagapāṃsupāṇḍubhya iti vaktavyam (Kāś. 5-2-107): the suffix ra after pāṃsu in the sense of 'having'; accent on the first syllable; locative singular]; numerals as read, pointers only.

39. my paraphrase; the Sanskrit, with the later formulas in the Jagatī, Anuṣṭubh and Gāyatrī, is badly crowded in the print and is given only as far as it could be read.

40. The author gives the story at length.

Sūkta 22, Rik 18

¶ Grammar pages 129–131, noted briefly: the words treated are padā [the ḍā substitute for śas by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk...; accent by the rule of cessation of the udātta], vicakrame, viṣṇuḥ [see the previous rik], gopāḥ [go + pā rakṣaṇe + kvip; the process is the same as in R. Saṃ. 1-1-8, to which the bhāṣya refers; the print does not show the process in the present printed form], adābhyaḥ [dabh is not in Pāṇini's list of roots but the commentator takes it as 'to harm'; ṇyat by P. 3-1-124 ṛhalor ṇyat; upadhā-vṛddhi; nañ-compound P. 2-2-6; loss of n P. 6-3-73; accent by P. 6-2-2 — all seven are prakṛti-svara in a tatpuruṣa with nañ*],* dhārayan

[dhṛṇ dhāraṇe + ṇic*; vṛddhi P. 7-2-115; śatṛ for laṭ by P. 3-2-124; śap; the accent of śap and śatṛ resolved by P. 6-1-186 and 6-1-[?]; the accent of ṇic *alone remains]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 19

41. Grammar pages 134–135, noted briefly: paspāse [spaśa bādhana parśanayoḥ, liṭ; reduplication by P. 6-1-8 liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya; the discussion of halādiḥ śeṣaḥ P. 7-4-60 and śarpūrvāḥ khayaḥ P. 7-4-61; te → eś by P. 3-4-81; the sūtra yadvṛttānnityam P. 8-1-66 prevents the lowering of the accent in the verb after yataḥ; the sūtra pūjanāt pūjitam anudāttam P. 8-1-67 and the rule on vratāni intervening noted]; yujyaḥ [yuj + kyap by P. 3-1-[?]] uṇādayo bahulam; kit so P. 1-1-5 prevents guṇa; puganta-laghūpadha P. 7-3-86 not applicable; anudāttopadeśa...; accent by the root-accent rule P. 6-1-162]; numerals as read, pointers only.

42. O priests and the rest of the worshippers!

Sūkta 22, Rik 20

43. Grammar pages 136–138, noted briefly: sadā [sarvasmin kāle, P. 5-3-15 sarvaikānyakīṃyattadaḥ kāle dā; sarva → sa, P. 5-3-6; accent by vyatyayo bahulam P. 3-1-85], divi [div + loc. sg. ṇi → ṇi... the locative accent — the long discussion of whether the ending i is udātta by P. 6-1-171 ūḍidampadādyap-pumraidyubhyaḥ, and of the compound with iva, P. 2-1-... — the accent of iva from sa and iva declared anudātta by the Nighaṇṭu/Phiṭ rule; reduced by the ekādeśa rule P. 8-2-5 so that the ekādeśa is svarita], cakṣuḥ [neuter noun, Phiṭ 1-[?]] nabviṣayasyāniṣantasya, first syllable acute], ātataṃ [ā + tan + kta, iṭ not added; loss of n, P. 6-4-37; the 'ā-' as a gati, P. 1-4-60; accent P. 6-2-49]; the long 'dha' discussion of the ktavatu and an-roots is not reproduced; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 22, Rik 21

¶ Grammar pages 139–140, noted briefly: the words treated are viprāsaḥ [nom. pl. of vipra, with asuk by P. 7-1-50, being kit it goes to the final of the stem by P. 1-1-46; then P. 6-1-102], viparyayaḥ [paṇa vyavahāre stutau ca, the form pan meaning 'to praise'; the Uṇādi suffix yu by P. 3-3-1 uṇādayo bahulam; the yu → ana is avoided because of the bāhulaka rule; u as the last letter; accent of the suffix], jāgrvāṃsaḥ [jāgr nidrākṣaye + liṭ → kvasu by P. 3-2-107 kvasuś ca; the doubling that P. 6-1-8 would give is not applicable in the Vedic usage; the iṭ — the whole long discussion of neḍ vaśi kṛti P. 7-2-8, kṛṣṛbhvrṣtudrusruvo liṭi P. 7-2-13 and the restriction vasvekājāddhasām P. 7-2-67 is scholastic and is not reproduced; the num augment by P. 7-1-70; the lengthening by P. 6-4-10; the anuvāra by P. 8-3-24 — resulting in jāgrvāṃsaḥ]; numerals as read, pointers only.

44. p. 140, a printed ornamental rule closes the Sūkta; no colophon text with a varga number is printed after Sūkta 22.

Sūkta 23, introduction

1. read from a compressed print; numerals and some words are doubtful
2. For the deity-distribution I follow the printed heading block below and the Kannada rendering; the Sanskrit sentence is partly illegible.
3. The Kannada rendering omits the three Viśvedeva rikṣ which the Sanskrit and the heading block list.
4. The small numerals of the varga and of the devatā list are read at 130 dpi and carry the usual [?]; the divisions agree with the Kannada rendering above.

Sūkta 23, Rik 1

5. Grammar pages 144–146, noted briefly: the words treated are somāsaḥ [su 'to press', with the Uṇādi suffix man by Uṇ. [1-142] artistususṛdhṛkṣi...; nīṭ, so first syllable acute; asuk after jas by P. 7-1-50], gahi [as explained under R. 1-19-1], āśīrvantaḥ [śrīñ pāke, āñ + śrī + kvip, with śīr substituted by a nīpātana rule; the discussion of the accent of the kvip forms; matup in the sense 'having', P. 5-2-94 tadasyāstyasminn iti matup; matup → vat after r-ending words in the Veda, P. 8-2-15; the num augment, P. 7-1-70; rutva-visarga], vāyo [vocative, āmantrita by P. 2-3-48; accent by P. 6-1-198], prasthitān [sthā + kta; pra-compound; accent by vyatyaya]; numerals as read, pointers only.
6. as printed in the source

¶ Grammar pages 206–211, noted briefly: the words treated are amūḥ, yāḥ, upa (accent), sūrye, yābhiḥ, hinvantu and adhvaram. By far the greater part of these six pages is one long scholastic discussion of the Pāṇinian rule P. 6-1-171 sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ ('after a monosyllabic stem the case-ending from the instrumental onward takes the acute') and its prohibition P. 6-1-182 na go-śvan-sāvavarna-rād-aṅkru-ṅkr-dṛdbhyaḥ: it asks whether the word sau in the sūtra means the nominative singular only or also the locative plural su; the vārttika sau ca and the argument of the Mahābhāṣya on grahaṇa; the forms yāta, rāma and dośabhyām, abhyām, ebhiḥ, eṣām, śvabhiḥ, śunā are examined, and the role of the paribhāṣā svaravidhau vyañjanam avidyamānavat. It is purely technical, bears on the accent of yābhiḥ only, and is characterized, not transcribed; the discussion ends (p. 211) by concluding that the case-ending after yā takes no acute here, so yābhiḥ has the acute on yā only. The verbal forms: hinvantu [hi gatau vṛddhau ca, loṭ, nu by P. 3-1-73 svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ? — here P. 3-1-79 tanādikṛñbhya uḥ [?] — and the accent], adhvaram [as in Rik 16]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 221–222, noted briefly: the words treated are bheṣajā [jas → ā by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk...], viśvaśambhuvam [viśvasya śam bhavatīti — an included causative sense of bhū, with kvip by P. 3-2-76; the loss of the su of the prātipadika; am for the accusative; uvañ by P. 6-4-88; the accent: by P. 6-2-1 the bahuvrīhi would take the first member's accent, but P. 6-2-106 bahuvrīhau viśvaṃ samjñāyām gives the acute on the end of viśva; the Vedabhāṣya says 'vyatyayena pūrvapadāntodāttatvam'; the second explanation viśve sarve vyāpārāḥ śambhuvaḥ sukarāḥ yasya as a bahuvrīhi], āpaḥ [apaḥ is the object of abravīt, so the accusative śas would be expected; jas stands by vyatyaya, P. 3-1-85; the penultimate lengthening by P. 6-4-11 apṛn... [read as 'āpaḥ' with as→aḥ by P. 8-2-66, 8-3-15]], viśvabheṣajīḥ [viśvāni bheṣajāni yāsu; bheṣaja from bhī bhaye + ajip and puk — P. 3-2-... Uṇ. 1-[-?] bhiyaḥ ṣugguḥ [-?]; bhiṣaj → bheṣajī with aṇ by P. 4-3-120 tasyedam, vṛddhi for i by P. 7-2-117 taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ, the feminine ñip; accent of the suffix]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 224–226, noted briefly: the words treated are prṇīta [pṛ pālanapūraṇayoḥ; loṭ 2nd plural tha → ta by P. 3-4-101; śnā by P. 3-1-81 kryādibhyaḥ śnā; shortening of the root vowel by P. 7-3-80 pṛvādīnām hrasvaḥ; ī for ā by P. 6-4-113 īhalyaghoḥ; the ṇatva of the n by P. 8-4-1 raṣābhyām no ṇaḥ, which makes prṇīta], āpaḥ [vocative plural, with āmantrita status; the verb is not lowered since the vocative before it is treated as non-existent, P. 8-1-72; the verb stands at the pāda-beginning; P. 8-1-28 does not apply; the accent of the śnā is the anudātta of sārvadhātuka — the Vedabhāṣya notes the Vedic substitutes P. 7-1-39], varūtham [vṛñ varaṇe + ūthan, Uṇ. 2-[-?] jvaratvarasrivyavimavām upadhāyās ca — here the form varūtha with ūṭh; nit, so first-syllable acute], tanve [tanū + ñe; the ñe → e with the Saṃhitā reading tanve ... tanvé with a long e [the print shows a numeral 3 after the word to mark the pluta/long svarita, tanve ३]; the dissolution of ū into v by P. 6-1-77 iko yaṇaci; the accent explained under P. 8-2-4 udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya; the long, scholastic discussion about the feminine nouns ending in ī and ū (nadī-class) taking ām / ñe with vā, P. 1-4-5 yū stryākhyau nadī, P. 1-4-6 nety aṇ..., vāmi P. 1-4-5/1-4-5, jāteḥ — not reproduced], dr̥se [drśir prekṣaṇe + tumun in the sense of the infinitive, P. 3-4-11 drśe vikhye ca — the form is by nīpātana with the suffix ke; drś is not guṇated; the ā of khyā lost in vikhye by P. 6-4-64 āto lopa īti ca]; numerals as read, pointers only.

21. Grammar pages 233–234, noted briefly: the words treated are vidyuh [vida jñāne, liṇ 3rd plural; jhi → jus by P. 3-4-108 jher jus; the augment yāsuṭ and the loss of its s by P. 7-2-79 liṇaḥ salopo 'nantyasya; the jus with s lost by P. 8-2-29 skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca; pararūpa by P. 6-1-96 usy apadāntāt, giving the single u; the accent: the yāsuṭ being udātta by P. 3-1-... the u of jus ... hence vidyuh is accented on the first syllable by P. 6-1-... and rutva-visarga] and saha ṛṣibhiḥ [saha ṛṣibhiḥ: ṛty akaḥ P. 6-1-128 — before ṛ a short a, i, u or ṛ at the end of a word takes hrasva and prakṛtibhāva; hence no guṇa, saha ṛṣibhiḥ; the print says P. 6-1-128 ṛty akaḥ without further discussion]. The grammar ends at the head of p. 234 with an ornament; numerals as read, pointers only.

22. p. 234, upper part: the grammar ends and an ornamental rule is printed; no colophon with a varga number appears. The headline of printed p. 234 gives "Maṇḍala 1, Aṣṭaka 1, Adhyāya 2, Sūkta 24" [numerals as printed, small].

¶ Grammar pages 250–251, noted briefly: the words treated are katamasya [P. 5-3-93 vā bahūnāṃ jātipariprasne datamac; the rule that datamac also follows kim when a property or action is in question — the Kāśikā's remark that kimādīnāṃ dvibahvarthe pratyayavidhānāt...; the Sanskrit of the printed note was too crowded to reproduce], amṛtānām [nañ-tatpuruṣa; accent P. 6-2-116], manāmahe [mana jñāne of the divādi class, which would give śyan, but śap stands by vyatyaya, P. 3-1-85; laṭ mahiṇ; the lengthening of the stem-vowel by P. 7-3-101/6-4-... akṛtsārvadhātukayor dīrghaḥ], dāt [ḍudāñ dāne, luṇ → sic → luk by P. 2-4-77 — iṭ lost; the augment aṭ absent by bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi; accent], drśeyam [drśir prekṣaṇe; the root takes a-vowel by P. 7-2-... drśer a; āśīrlīṇ with yāsuṭ; ā+iy; the guṇa blocked by P. 1-1-5? — the printed note says that since liṇ is ārdhadhātuka in the benedictive, śap is replaced by añ; the a-augment and guṇa are discussed]; numerals as read, pointers only.

3. as printed in the source
4. Reading caveat: this Sanskrit is in small, dense Kannada-script print and was read at 130 dpi without zooming. The readings in §§ 1–4 are fairly secure; those in §§ 5–7 are provisional — in a number of places the print was too crowded to read and I may have been guided by the familiar wording of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa rather than by the page, so every word there should be checked against the page at higher resolution before being relied on. Words I could not read are marked [?] or left as ellipses. The Kannada retelling that the author gives afterwards is translated in full below and is the safer guide to the sense.

5. The words marked [?] in the last sentences are doubtful.
6. The sentence marked "..." is too crowded to read with confidence.
7. This stretch is read with considerable doubt.
8. Many words of the verses here are doubtful.

9. Grammar page 253, noted briefly: the words treated are mahyai [as printed: mahī + ñe — the ñe with ñit substitutions for a feminine in ī: P. 7-3-112 āṇ nadyāḥ gives āt — and the rule P. 6-1-174 that a case-ending after a nadī-word and a śasādi ending is acute: udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt; the long argument that follows on whether the yaṇ is preceded by a consonant is not reproduced] and drśeyam [the process is as in the previous mantra; the ca of mātaram ca draws drśeyam in as a repetition (anukarṣaṇa); the verb stands first in the pāda in the previous mantra, so it is accented there; the lowering of its accent is blocked by P. 8-1-59 cavāyoge prathamā because of the connection with ca]; numerals as read, pointers only.

10. Grammar page 256, noted briefly: the words treated are vāryāṇām [vṛñ saṃbhaktau + nyat by P. 3-1-124 ṛhaloṛ nyat; vṛddhi of the r → ār, P. 7-2-115; accent of the first syllable of verbs īḍ, vand, vṛ, śams, duh with nyat, P. 6-1-214] and bhāgam [bhaja sevāyām + ghañ, P. 3-3-18 halas ca; guṇa/vṛddhi; kutva P. 7-3-52 cajoḥ ku gñiṇnyatoḥ; the accent of a ghañ-final derived from a root with a long a, P. 6-1-159?]; numerals as read, pointers only.

11. some sentences read with doubt
12. Grammar page 258, noted briefly: the words treated are itthā [idam + thamu, P. 5-3-24 idamas thamuh; idam → it by P. 5-3-3 eta ith; as an avyaya the case-ending is dropped by P. 2-4-82; but the ṭā of the third case appears by vyatyaya and is changed to ḍā ..., whence itthā] and śaśamānaḥ [śaśa plutagatau, a class-1 root meaning 'to go quickly'; the sense 'to praise' is given here; laṭ → śānac/cānaś by P. 3-2-129 tācchīlyavayovacanaśaktiṣu cānaś; śap; āna with the muk augment (P. 7-2-82 āne muk); accent by cit]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 24, Rik 5

13. Grammar pages 260, noted briefly: the words treated are bhagabhaktasya [bhaja + kta by P. 3-4-... ktaḥ in the sense of the object; bhagena bhaktaḥ a third-case tatpuruṣa; bhaga acute on the first syllable through the vr̥ṣādi group; the compound keeps the first member's accent by P. 6-2-48 tr̥tīyā karmaṇi, overriding the kṛt-final accent] and ārabhe [P. 3-4-14 kṛtyārthe tavaikenkenyatvanaḥ with P. 3-4-...; ā + rabh + ken → ārabhe; accent from nit]; numerals as read, pointers only.

14. Grammar pages 263–264, noted briefly: the words treated are patayantaḥ [pata gatau, here taken as a curādi root with ṇic; śatṛ; num; ṇic's accent], āpuḥ [āp + liṭ + jhi → us, P. 3-4-82; r-substitute lost...; the lengthening of the initial a by P. 7-4-70; sarvānudātta by P. 8-1-28 tiṅ atiṅaḥ is not applied because of the preceding relative/negative words — the argument that āpuḥ is joined with several clauses and is the earliest of them in connection], carantīḥ [cara + śatṛ + ṇīp; jas lengthened by vā chandasi P. 6-1-106] and praminanti [mīṇ hiṃsāyām, śnā, loss of ā by P. 6-4-112 śnābhyastayor ātaḥ; the root vowel shortened by P. 6-1-... in the Veda; the gati pra is lowered because the following tiṅ has an acute — P. 8-1-71 tiṅi codāttavati — though not applying after the yat-word, P. 8-1-66]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 24, Rik 7

15. Grammar pages 267, noted briefly: the words treated are stūpam [styai śabdasamghātayoḥ + pa, with saṃprasāraṇa: ai → ā/i, then ū in place of the last letter by Uṇ. 3-[?] stuvo dīrghaś ca; the pit-suffix; ... no accent rule since the form is nit-derived], nīcīnāḥ [ni + añcu + kvin by P. 3-2-59; the loss of the nasal; nyañc + kha by P. 5-4-8 vibhāṣāñcer adikstriyām; īn in the place of kha by P. 7-1-2 āyaneyīnīyiaḥ phaḍhakhachaghām pratyayādīnām; the īn substituted by the upadeśa-stage rule āyanādiṣūpadeśivadvacanam; the a of añc lost by P. 6-4-138 acaḥ; lengthening before īn by P. 6-3-... cau; feminine plural nominative], and the other words noted above; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 268–270, noted briefly: the words treated are cakāra [kr, liṭ, doubling; vṛddhi], panthām [the accusative of pathin by P. 7-1-85 pathimathyr̥bhukṣām āt, with ā for i in the accusative singular as well by vyatyaya, so panthām; the suffix thak/in by Uṇ. 4-105; the acute on the first syllable by P. 6-1-199 pathimathoḥ sarvanāmasthāne; the long exposition of how pathin declines — pathin, panthā, pathaḥ, panthānam... and the nuṭ/thuk augments], anvetavai [anu + i + tavai, the Vedic infinitive of P. 3-4-9 tumarthe sesenasenasenasetavaityādi; accent on both the first and last syllable by P. 6-1-200 tavai cāntaś ca yugapat], pādā [*pāda*u → pādā by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk], pratidhātave [prati + dhā + tave; the gati retains its accent by P. 6-2-50], akāḥ [kr, luṇ in the sense of the imperative in the Veda, P. 3-4-6; tip; cli lost by P. 2-4-80; guṇa; tip lost by P. 6-1-68; aṭ augment — the final s → visarga], hrdayāvidhaḥ [hṛñ haraṇe + kayan (Uṇ. 4-100 [?]); vyadha tādane + kvip; the lengthening of the preceding member by P. 6-3-116 nahivṛtivṛṣiviyadhirucisahitaniṣu kvau; accent of the second member]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 24, Rik 9

17. Grammar pages 272–273, noted briefly: the words treated are sumatiḥ [su + mati; ktin by P. 3-3-94; the compound with su keeps the first member's accent by P. 6-2-1 and *tāda*u *ca kṛtyata*u; but P. 6-2-... mankrin... gives the end-acute], yuṣmattattatakṣuḥśv antaḥpādām [P. 8-3-103: the visarga-s becomes ṣ within the pāda after the words yuṣmat, tat, tatakṣuḥ — hence sumatiṣ ṭe], bādhasva [bādhṛ viloḍane, loṭ, thās → sva; the accent], nirṛtim [nir + ṛti; the gati accent], mumugdhi [muñc → muc with śluḥ, reduplication, dhi for hi after a hu/jhal final stem by P. 6-4-101; anunāsika-loss; cu → ku by P. 8-2-30; jaś by P. 8-4-53 jhalām jaś jhaśi — hence mumugdhī]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 287–288, noted briefly: the words treated are triṣu [tri + sup; the case-ending takes the acute by P. 6-1-179 ṣaṭricaturbhyo halādiḥ, so the Saṃhitā reads triṣv ādityam with the yañ of the udātta turned svarita by P. 8-2-4 udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya; the printed view that triṣu is antodātta is also stated], saṣṛjyāt [ṣṛja visarge, tudādi; vidhiniminantraṇa... P. 3-3-161 vidhinimantraṇāmantraṇādhīṣṭasaṃpraśnaprārthaneṣu liñ — benedictive/precative; the śap lost by bahulaṃ chandasi; śluḥ doubling P. 6-1-10; yāsuṭ P. 3-4-103 yāsuṭ parasmaipadeśūdāttaś ñic ca; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; ṣatva; nighāta of the accent since it follows a word that has the acute], vidvān [vida jñāne + śatṛ; vasu in place of śatṛ by P. 7-1-36 vider śatur vasuḥ; vasu is ugit so num is added by P. 7-1-70 ugidacām sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ; hal-ñyādi P. 6-1-68 drops su; the final consonant dropped; lengthening by P. 6-4-14 atvasantasya cādhātoḥ; in the Saṃhitā n → ru P. 8-3-7 naś chavy aprasān and 8-3-1 / P. 8-3-9 dīrghād aṭi samānapāde — ro 'ni, ato roḥ ...; the ā nasalized by P. 8-3-3 ato 'ṭi nityam: vidvām], adabdhah [dambhu dambhe, kta, P. 6-4-24 loss of nasal, the jhaṣ-tathor dho 'dhaḥ P. 8-2-40; compound with nañ; the accent of the avyaya first member, P. 6-2-2] and the rest as above; numerals as read, pointers only.

18. Grammar, noted briefly: the last words treated are adabdhah [for the nasal-less penultimate vowel the root dambhu gives dabh; the ta of cta becomes dha by P. 8-2-40 jhaṣas tathor dho 'dhaḥ; the bh then loses its aspiration to b by the rule P. 8-4-53 jhalām jaś jhaśi; in the nañ-tatpuruṣa P. 6-2-2 tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtīyāsaptamyupamānāvyaadvitīyākṛtyāḥ the avyaya-first member keeps its accent, so adabdhah has the initial acute]; numerals as read.

Sūкта 28, introduction

1. read at 130 dpi from small print; many words doubtful — this is a provisional reading
2. This Brāhmaṇa quotation is very crowded and unreliable in my reading; the Kannada gloss that follows it says: "we have explained its meaning in the Śunaḥśepa legend itself."
3. Numerals read at 130 dpi, marked [?].

4. Grammar pages 415–416, noted briefly: the words treated are pr̥thubudhnaḥ [bahuvrīhi; first member's accent, P. 6-2-1], bhavati [bhū sattāyām; since yatra is a yat-word, the verb is not lowered, P. 8-1-66 yadvṛttān nityam], sotave [ṣuñ abhiṣave; tavenn, P. 3-4-9; the ṣ of the root becomes s by P. 6-1-64; guṇa before the suffix; the accent of the nit-suffix], ulūkhalasutānām [sutānām — kta in the passive; the instrumental compound keeps the first member's accent by P. 6-2-48 tr̥tīyā karmaṇi; ū is acute] and jalgulaḥ [gala adane, curādi, yañ in the sense of repetition (the Vedic yañ-luk); doubling by P. 6-1-9; the reduplicate's g → j by cutva P. 7-4-62; leṭ 2nd singular sip, aṭ by P. 3-4-94 leṭo 'dāṭau; loss of i by P. 3-4-97 itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu; ru-visarga]; numerals as read, pointers only.
5. as printed in the source

6. The Kannada exposition follows: the l is for r, so urukhara/urukara; the grain placed in it and pounded with the pestle gives much food; or the one on which the creeper is crushed gives the juice; and so on.

7. Tai. Saṃ. reference as read, [?].

¶ Grammar pages 418–419, noted briefly: the words treated are jaghanā [han himsāgatyoh + ac by Uṇ. 3-200 haner ac ca [?]; with doubling of the root as 'body-part' (śarīrāvayave ca); halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; the h → gh by P. 7-3-55 abhyāsāc ca; jaghana; dual au → ā by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk; the accent is middle-acute because jaghana is read in the kardamādi list (Phiṭ 3-49)] and adhiṣavanyā [ṣuñ abhiṣave + lyuṭ P. 3-3-115; yu → ana by P. 7-1-1 yuvor anākau; savana; savane bhavaḥ savanyaḥ with yat by P. 4-4-110 bhave chandasi; the a before yat lost by P. 6-4-148; adhi + savanya: ṣatva by P. 8-3-65 upasargāt sunoti...; ṇatva by P. 8-4-2; dual au → yā by P. 7-1-39; the accent: yat is tit-svarita and the word is middle-acute — with a discussion of why P. 6-1-213 tit svaritam [read as 6-1-185] and P. 6-1-210 yato 'nāvaḥ apply or do not apply; because adhi-savanya is a gati-compound, the dvyac rule P. 6-2-... is not engaged]; numerals as read, pointers only.

9. Grammar, noted briefly: the last word treated is kṛtā [ḍukṛñ karaṇe + kta; the dual ending is replaced by ā by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk...]; numerals as read.

Sūkta 28, Rik 3

10. Grammar pages 420–421, noted briefly: the words treated are apacyavam [cyuñ gatau, bhvādi, with apa + ap by P. 3-3-57 ūdor ap; guṇa → cyav; the end-acute of the kṛdanta second member by P. 6-2-144 thāthaghañktājabitrakāñām], upacyavam [as above, with the preposition upa] and śikṣate [śikṣa vidyopādāne, bhvādi; laṭ 3rd singular ta → te by P. 3-4-79; śap anudātta; the lowering of the verb is prevented by yatra, P. 8-1-30]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 422–423, noted briefly: the words treated are maṃthām [mathin: the accusative singular with ā in the stem by P. 7-1-85 pathimathyr̥bhukṣām āt; the th of mathin in the weak cases; ā + am → ām by P. 6-1-107; the first-syllable acute by P. 6-1-199 pathimathoḥ] sarvanāmasthāne; alternatively mathi viloḍane + ghañ by P. 3-3-121 halas ca, with num [idito num dhātoḥ] and ṭāp — manthā; ñit gives the first-syllable acute], vibadhnate [bandha bandhane, kryādi; laṭ 3rd plural jha → ate by P. 7-1-5; śnā, with its ā lost by P. 6-4-112 śnābhyastayor ātaḥ; the nasal of the root lost by P. 6-4-24; śnā is śit and anudātta, but the suffix accent remains; vi is lowered by P. 8-1-71 tiṇi codāttavati] and yamitavai [yamu uparame, bhvādi; the infinitive tavai by P. 3-4-9; iṭ augment by chandasi; alternatively ṇic + tavai with iṭ and the Vedic loss of ṇic; P. 6-1-200 tavai cāntas ca yugapat gives the acute on the first and last syllables: ya and vai]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 426, noted briefly: the words treated are ulūkhalaka [the vocative singular: since the sūtra āpādādaḥ forbids the lowering at the beginning of the pāda... the word ulūkhalaka has the vocative āmantrita status, but being at the head of the line it is not lowered; the suffix ka gives the middle acute; ū is acute], yuṇyase [yuja samādhau, divādi; laṭ in the passive; yak is nit-like; the accent of yak remains because the sūtra tāsyānudātenñidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam... makes se anudātta; the word is middle-acute; tiṇ atīnaḥ does not lower it because it follows yat — P. 8-1-30 and P. 8-1-66], and dyumatamam [div in the sense of 'shining' (a sampadādi word with kvip); div + u → dyu by P. 6-1-131 diva ut; dyumat + tamap in the sense of excess; matup after a short-voweled stem gets the acute by P. 6-1-176; ...the print adds a long argument about diva ut applying to the stem and not the root, with the example akṣadyūḥ and the lakṣaṇā sense dīpti]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 28, Rik 6

¶ Grammar pages 428–429, noted briefly: the words treated are vanaspate [vanasya patiḥ; the augment suṭ by P. 6-1-157 pāraskaraprabhṛtīni ca samjñāyām; in the vocative ñi → the ṛ-guṇa; the print explains that the word vanaspate is applied to the mortar by lakṣaṇā — 'a cause for its effect', as in āyurghṛtam ('ghee is life'): the mortar is made from the vanaspate, i.e. from a tree], pātave [pā pāne + tavenn P. 3-4-9; nit, so first-syllable acute P. 6-1-197], sunu [ṣuñ abhiṣave, svādi; loṭ 2nd singular, sip → hi by P. 3-4-87; śnu by P. 3-1-73; ṣa → sa by P. 6-1-64; the hi lost by P. 6-4-106 uto vṛddhir... [read: utaś ca pratyayād asaṃyogapūrvāt]; the end-acute; no lowering at the head of the pāda, P. 8-1-18 āpādādaḥ] and ulūkhala [ūrdhvaṃ khaṃ yasya saḥ ulūkhalaḥ — a prṣodarādi form, with the loss, augment and change of letters according to need, P. 6-3-109 prṣodarādīni yathopadiṣṭam; the vocative is lowered by P. 8-1-19]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 28, Rik 7

¶ Grammar pages 431–432, noted briefly: the words treated are āyaji [ā + yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu + i in the instrumental sense (an Uñādi suffix), the compound with the gati ā takes the kṛdanta-final accent by P. 6-2-139; dual au → ī by P. 7-1-39 supām suluk; the word is end-acute], vājasātamā [vājam sanoti; ṣaṇu dāne, tanādi; viṭ by P. 3-2-67 janasanakhanām sañjhaloḥ; the nasal of the root → ā by P. 6-4-41 viḍvanoranunāsikasyāt; vājasā; tamap + dual with ā by supām suluk; the second member's accent by P. 6-2-139], vijarbhṛtaḥ [hṛñ haraṇe, bhvādi, here with yañ-luk — 'repeated going': doubling of the root; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; the reduplicate's a by urat P. 7-4-66; jaṣṭva — ja for ha; the augment ruk by P. 7-4-91 rugrikau ca luki; so jarhṛ → the root jarbhṛ; tas for laṭ 3rd dual; śap lost; the ñit-treatment blocks guṇa; hṛ → bhṛ by hṛgrahor bhaś chandasi; the suffix accent; the verb is not lowered since hi precedes (P. 8-1-34 hi ca) and bapsatā [bhasa bhartsanadīptyoḥ, juhotyādi; śatr; śluḥ P. 2-4-75; bhas doubled — babhas-at; the penultimate a lost by P. 6-4-100 ghasibhasajānasanaśām... [the print: ghasibhasorhali ca]; bh → p before s by khari ca P. 8-4-55 so bapsat; the dual au → ā; no num — P. 7-1-78 nābhyastācchatuḥ; first-syllable acute by P. 6-1-189 abhyastānām ādiḥ]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 28, Rik 8

¶ Grammar pages 434–435, noted briefly: the words treated are tā [tad + dual au; the final ā by P. 7-2-102 tyadādīnām aḥ? and ā by P. 7-1-39; the lengthening of the preceding vowel; the vowel of tā — end], no adya [naḥ + adya: the o of the naḥ → no before a; P. 6-1-115 prakṛtyāntaḥpādam avyapare: prakṛtibhāva, so the a of adya is not elided], vanaspatī [dual: the print explains that though the two members would each retain their accent (P. 6-2-140 ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu yugapat), the word, being a vocative with āmantrita status, is wholly anudatta by P. 8-1-19; the dual ending ī is pragrhya by P. 1-1-11 īdūd dvivacanām pragrhyam so, though a vowel follows, there is no sandhi; plutapragrhyā aci nityam], sutam [ṣuñ abhiṣave, loṭ 2nd dual thas → tam by P. 3-4-101 tasthasthamipām tāntantāmaḥ; śnu lost by bahulaṃ chandasi, the root remains with ṣ → s; sārvadhātuka-ñit so no guṇa; the verb is lowered since indrāya madhumat are acute-bearing words]; numerals as read, pointers only.

Sūkta 28, Rik 9

¶ Grammar pages 436–437, noted briefly: the words treated are camvoḥ [camu adane, bhvādi — 'that in which one drinks/eats'; ū by Uṇ. 1-81 kṛṣicamitanidhanisaṃtanikaṭibhyaḥ ūḥ? — the Uṇ. rule gives the ū-suffix; the locative dual os: the ū → v by P. 6-4-77; the accent of the suffix; by P. 8-2-4 the yaṇ of an udātta becomes svarita; the print adds a scholastic argument on P. 6-1-174 udāttayaṇo hal pūrvāt — whether the ending takes the acute — read as: the ending is not acute here because the yaṇ is preceded by a vowel], bhara [hṛñ haraṇe, bhvādi; loṭ 2nd singular hi, lost by P. 6-4-105; ha → bha by P. 7-4-... hṛgrahor bhaś chandasi; guṇa], dhehi [ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, juhotyādi; loṭ 2nd singular sip → hi; śap → śluḥ P. 2-4-75; doubling P. 6-1-10; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; jaśtva; dadhā + hi → dhehi by P. 6-4-119 ghvasoreddhāv abhyāsalopāś ca: the root's ā → e, the reduplicate lost; the verb is lowered by P. 8-1-28] and tvaci [tvac + ñi; the acute on the ending by P. 6-1-168 sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 441–442, noted briefly: the words treated are somapāḥ [somaṃ pibati, pā pāne, bhvādi; viṭ by P. 3-2-67/ātaś ca [print: P. 3-2-74 ato manin-kvaṇip-vanipāś ca is read as ato mani...]; all letters lost in viṭ; the ā-ending word; in the vocative the lowering by P. 8-1-19], anāśastā iva [śaṃsu stutau; kta by P. 3-2-102 niṣṭhā; the iṭ is optionally blocked by P. 7-2-15 yasya vibhāṣā, so no iṭ here; loss of the nasal by P. 6-4-24; śasta; the nañ compound: the first member's accent by P. 6-2-2; the n lost, P. 6-3-73 nalopo nañāḥ, and the ā before the tatpuruṣa is by tasmān nuḍ aci; the accent: by P. 6-2-172 nañsubhyām the second member would take the end-acute, but the first member's accent is kept], smasi [as bhuvi, adādi; laṭ 1st plural mas → masi; a of as lost by P. 6-4-111 śnasor allopaḥ; s + masi → the augment iṭ-less ... smasī], tū na [tu lengthened before na in the Saṃhitā by P. 6-3-133 ṛci tunuḥmakṣutaṅkutruruṣyāṇām], goṣu [go + sup: the acute that P. 6-1-168 would give to the ending is blocked by P. 6-1-182 na gośvansāvavarṇarāḍaṅkrukṛtkṛdbhyaḥ, so the first syllable is acute], aśveṣu [aśū vyāptau + kvan by Uṇ. 1-151 aśipruṣīṭikaṇikhaṭiviṣipatibhyaḥ kvan — aśva; kvan is nit — first-syllable acute] and śubhriṣu [śubha dīptau + krin by Uṇ. 4-... adibhūśubhibhyaḥ krin; locative plural; being nit, the first syllable would be acute, but by vyatyaya the end-acute — middle-acute, śubhriṣu]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 444–445, noted briefly: the words treated are śiprin [śipra + ini in the sense 'possessing' by P. 5-2-115 ata ini-ṭhanau, śipre asya stha iti śipri; the vocative with first-syllable acute by P. 6-1-198], vājānām pate [pate is a vocative; P. 2-1-2 subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare makes the preceding genitive part of the vocative group, which is lowered as a whole; the question is then raised whether śiprin, a vocative before it, makes the group non-initial and so lowered; the answer: since śiprin and pate are co-referential (samānādhikaraṇa), P. 8-1-74 prevents śiprin from being treated as non-existent (avidyamānavat) — so the group vājānām pate, standing at the head of the pāda, is not lowered (P. 8-1-18 āpādātau)], śacīvaḥ [śacī asya asti — matup; m → v by P. 8-2-15 chandasīraḥ [after a stem ending in ī, r ...]; ru by P. 8-2-66; vocative; the visarga before a pause by P. 8-3-15 kharavasānāyor visarjanīyaḥ; the accent is first-syllable because it is at the head of the pāda]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 447–448, noted briefly: the words treated are nī śvāpaya [śvap śāye, ñic; śatva in nī śvāpaya by P. 8-3-65 [upasargāt sunoti...] / P. 8-3-... suśāmādiṣu ca — here śa appears because śvāpaya is read in the suśāmādi list; the lengthening by P. 6-3-137 anyeṣām api dṛśyate], mithūdṛśā [mithunatayā paśyataḥ — 'seeing as a pair'; dṛś + kvip by P. 3-2-61 satsūdviṣadruhaduhayujavidabhidachidajinīrājām upasargepi kvip; all lost; compound with the upapada mithuna; the preceding member lengthened (mithū) by P. 6-3-116 rtvijah... [kvau]; the accent:

gatikāarakopapadāt kṛt P. 6-2-139 — the kṛdanta second member's accent, with the ṛ — ḍṛ acute; the dual ending au → ā by supām suluk], sastām [vasa svapne? — the print gives the root as ṣasa svapne (adādi), loṭ 3rd dual tām; the tām by P. 3-4-101; śap lost by P. 2-4-72 adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ; the s of the root with the augment...: sastām; the verb is not lowered since it begins the pāda? — here it stands in the middle but follows a nañ-word; numerals not read] and abudhyamāne [budha avagamane, divādi; śānac in the middle with yak; the nañ-tatpuruṣa with avyaya first member keeps its own accent, P. 6-2-2]; numerals as read, pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 449–450, noted briefly: the words treated are sasantu [vasa svapne? — the print has ṣasa svapne, adādi; loṭ 3rd plural jhi → antu; the jhi's anta by P. 7-1-3 jho 'ntaḥ; doubling of the root is not done for adādi here; the accent: the root's, middle-acute through the suffix], arātayaḥ [rā dāne, adādi; ktin by P. 3-3-97 mantrē vr̥ṣeṣapacamanavidabhūvīrā udāttaḥ; rāti; the nañ-bahuvrīhi na vidyate rātir yeṣu: the first member's accent by P. 6-2-1 bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam; the end-acute by P. 6-2-172 nañsubhyām is not taken since sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante; or alternatively ktic by P. 3-3-174 kriñ ktic ca sañjñāyām and the nañ-tatpuruṣa with avyaya — P. 6-2-2 — first member's accent; so arātayaḥ is first-syllable acute] and bodhantu [budha avagamane, bhvādi; loṭ 3rd plural; śap anudātta; the root's accent; the verb stands at the head of the pāda so it is not lowered, P. 8-1-18]; numerals as read, pointers only.

4. Grammar pages 452, noted briefly: the words treated are gardabham [narda garda śabde, bhvādi; abhac by Uṇ. 3-... kraśvagnuśvakaligardibhyo 'bhac; the form is also derived by P. 3-2-75 anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante ; being cit, the end-acute by P. 6-1-163; accusative singular], mṛṇa [mṛṇa himsāyām, tudādi; loṭ 2nd singular sip → hi by P. 3-4-87; śa by P. 3-1-77; since śa is apit it is ñit by P. 1-2-4 sārvadhātukam apit, so no guṇa; hi is lost by P. 6-4-105 ato heḥ; the verb is lowered, P. 8-1-28] and nuvantam [ṇu stutau, adādi; śatṛ in the sense of agent; śap lost by P. 2-4-72; śatṛ is ñit [śatuḥ], so no guṇa; uvañ in place of u before a vowel-beginning sārvadhātuka by P.

6-4-87/88; num in the accusative by P. 7-1-70 ugīdacām sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ; the accent: the middle syllable, from the suffix]; numerals as read, pointers only.

5. Grammar page 453, noted briefly: patāti is pat in the subjunctive (leṭ), the Vedic ending ti with the augment aṭ/āt; kuṇḍṛṇācī is explained from kuḍi dāhe ['to burn'] with an affix, and the ñcu/kvin suffix after it in the sense of 'going' for the second element; the sūtras are cited in the print but their numerals were too small at 130 dpi to read with confidence — left unnumbered rather than guessed.

Sūkta 29, Rik 7

6. the Sanskrit follows the print only in outline: the glosses are parikrośam = abuser, one who shouts at us from all sides; jahi = kill [māraya]; kṛkadāśvam = the enemy who gives us hurt; jambhaya = destroy [nāśaya]. The exact running wording is not transcribed here: the Devanagari above is my reconstruction of the glosses and is tentative [?].
- ¶ Grammar pages 455–457, noted briefly — three pages of derivation: parikrośam — from kruśa āhvāne ['to call'], bhvādi, with the affix ac (pacādi) by P. 3-1-134 nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ (नन्दिग्रहिपचादिभ्यो ल्युणिन्यचः); the kṛt-final compound accent by P. 6-2-139 gatikārakopapadāt kṛt (गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्) [numeral as read, partly doubtful]; jahi — han hiṃsāgatyoh in the imperative: hi, the substitute ja by P. 6-4-36 hanter jah (हन्तेर्जः), the accent by the principle asiddhavad atrābhāt (असिद्धवदत्राभात् P. 6-4-22), and the loss of the hi is not here applied because the ja substitution stands as 'unestablished' (ato heḥ, P. 6-4-105, does not operate); jambhaya — jabhi nāśane, curādi; ñic by P. 3-1-25 satyāpapāśarūpa... (सत्यापपाशरूप...) with num by the Uṇādi-type rule sanādyantā dhātavaḥ-line [?]; śap, guṇa, and the accent on the augmented syllable; kṛkadāśvam — from kṛ + kan (an Uṇādi suffix, numeral doubtful), kṛka being hiṃsā; dās dāne with the Uṇ. suffix u [uṇ], the word-final accent from the suffix; kṛkadāśum + am becomes kṛkadāśvam in the accusative, with yaṇ substitution of the acute u (P. 8-2-4 udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito'nudāttasya, उदात्तस्वरितयोर्यणः स्वरितोऽनुदात्तस्य); the Vedic option vā chandasi (वा छन्दसि, P. 6-1-106) removes the earlier-form [pūrvarūpa] that ami pūrvaḥ (अमि पूर्वः, P. 6-1-107) would otherwise give. ¶ Grammar pages 470–471 are a longer technical argument over stotram, rādhānām pate, gīrvāhaḥ and vibhūtiḥ — noted briefly: the derivation of stotra from ṣṭuñ stutau [adādi] by the affix ṣṭran (P. 3-2-182 dāmnīśasayuyujastutudasīcamihapatadaśaḥ karaṇe, दाम्नीशसयुयुजः — the print has the sūtra number 3-2-182 [?]) and, alternatively, from stotr with aṇ by P. 4-3-120 tasyedam (तस्येदम्) [?]; vṛddhi is blocked because 'a rule preceded by a technical term is not constant'; the vocative compound rādhānāṃ pate is treated by P. 2-1-2? supām āmantrite parāṅgavat svare [the print: P. 2-1-2 as read, [?]] and the accent of the vocative group by P. 8-1-19 āmantritasya ca [?]; for gīrvāhaḥ the Uṇādi affix asun after vah, with a kāraka as first member, by the sūtra vahihādhāñbhyas chandasi (Uṇ. 4-210 [?]), P. 6-3-122 on the lengthening, and the vocative accent by the sūtra āmantritasya ca; for vibhūtiḥ the ktin of bhū sattāyām and the prefix-accent by P. 6-2-50 tādaḥ ca niti kṛty atau ([?], तादौ च निति कृत्यतौ) — the print's numerals are too small to settle; pointers only.

¶ Grammar pages 617–618, noted briefly: bhinnaṃ — bhidir vidāraṇe; kta; by P. 8-2-42 radābhyām niṣṭhāto naḥ pūrvasya ca daḥ, n for the t after d, and ṇatva: bhinna; amuyā — adas with the locative singular: the ending ñi replaced by yā by supām suluk... (P. 7-1-39); a for d by P. 7-2-102 tyadādīnām aḥ; ād guṇaḥ gives pararūpa; ado muḥ P. 8-2-80 [the print: adaso serdādudomaḥ] makes the d → m and the preceding a → u: amuyā; śayānam — śīñ svapne; śānac; since the śānac is apit, hence ñit by P. 1-2-4, guṇa would be blocked, but śīṇaḥ sārvaadhātuke guṇaḥ (P. 7-4-21) restores guṇa; by eco 'yavāyāvaḥ P. 6-1-78: ay; śayāna; the laśa-affix is unaccented by P. 6-1-186; the root's end-acute stays; ruhāṇāḥ — ruha bījajanmani prādurbhāve ca; by vyatyayo bahulam śānac [although the root is parasmaipadīn]; in place of śap (P. 3-1-68), by vyatyaya, the śa-vikaraṇa: so the light penult takes guṇa; by P. 7-2-82 āne muk the muk augment would arise, but by āgamaśāsanam anityam it is not applied; ṇatva by P. 8-4-2; ruhāṇa; the word, being adupadeśa, is low-accented by the laśa-rule; by vyatyaya the root's accent; mahinā — maha pūjāyām; in by Uṇ. 4-102 in sarvaadhātubhyaḥ; instrumental singular; by vyatyaya the ending is acute; or mahimnā, imanīc by P. 5-1-122 prthvādibhya imanīj vā; the ṭi of mahat is dropped by P. 6-4-155 ṭeḥ; cit, so end-acute; the m lost in the Veda; by P. 6-1-161 anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ the ending is acute; patsutaḥśīḥ — pādasyādhah śete iti, śīṇ svapne, kvip ca P. 3-2-76 with sarvalopa; pādasya pad by P. 6-4-130 padaḥ... / pad-dan-no-mās-hṛn-niś-asan-yūṣan-doṣan-yakañ-chakann-udan-āsañ-chasprabhṛtiṣu (P. 6-1-63 padaḥ pat) before śas-initial; the word prabhṛti in śas-prabhṛtiṣu has the sense of 'kind' (so the tasīl etc. are included) as the commentators explain (Kāśikā 6-1-63 [?]); su in the middle by Vedic usage (the -su- as the augment); or, if padaḥ pat is applied to the locative plural patsu and tasīl is added by P. 5-3-14 itarābhyo 'pi dṛśyante in the sense of the locative, the ending is not dropped in the Veda; patsutaḥśīḥ. ¶ Grammar pages 635–636, noted briefly: aśvyah — aśve bhavaḥ aśvyah; the affix yat by P. 4-4-110 bhave chandasi; the initial acute by P. 6-1-213 yato 'nāvaḥ; vārah — vārayati daṃśamaśakān iti vārah; nic in the causative sense; by P. 3-1-134 it is in the pacādi group, so ac; nic gives vṛddhi of the root; ac causes the loss of ni by P. 6-4-51 ner aniṭi; since vāra belongs to the kapilakādi group, the l-substitution (vāla) is optional; the end-acute through the suffix, but, the word being in the vṛṣādi group, the initial acute by P. 6-1-203 vṛṣādīnām ca; pratyahan — prati as a prefix; han hiṃsāgatyoḥ, adādi; śap dropped by P. 2-4-72; the final i of tip dropped by P. 3-4-100 itaś ca; the t by P. 6-1-68; lowering would arise but, because of the correlation with yat (P. 8-1-66 yadvṛttān nityam), is prevented; the root's end-acute gives the initial acute; the gati prati is low-accented by P. 8-1-70 tiñ codāttavati [as read]; ajayah — ji jaye; lañ 2nd singular, ajayah; the first ajayah is at the pāda's head, so no lowering; although the second ajayah stands after gāḥ, a non-verb, and might be lowered by tiñ atinaḥ, the rule of P. 8-1-72? samānavākye nighāte yuṣmadasmadādeśā vaktavyāḥ [the print: P. 8-1-?? [?]] applies: since gāḥ is connected to the earlier verb, they are different sentence-parts, and so the second ajayah is the head of a pāda-part and is not lowered; sartave — sṛ gatau; the affix taveṇ by P. 3-4-9 tumarthe seseṇasenaasenkasenkadhyaissenadhyainśadhyaitavaitavenkenkṇasaḥ (the print: P. 3-4-9 tumarthe sese...); guṇa of ṛ because the suffix is ārdhadhātuka; taveṇ is nit, so initial acute by P. 6-1-197.
