The Third Adhyāya of the First Aṣṭaka

Printed on the page: the Om emblem; the invocations śrīḥ and śrī mahāgaṇādhīpataye namaḥ; six verses of homage (the same as in the earlier volumes); the series title Sāyaṇabhāṣyasahitā R̥gveda-saṃhitā, Bhāga 4; and the heading prathamāṣṭake tṛtīyo 'dhyāyaḥ "In the First Aṣṭaka, the Third Adhyāya".

"Śrī. Homage to the Lord of the Gaṇas. — I bow to Gajānana (Gaṇeśa), by bowing to whom the Lord of Speech and the other gods are fulfilled at the beginning of every undertaking. I praise Vidyātīrtha-Maheśvara, whose breath the Vedas are, and who made the whole world out of the Vedas. The Veda is Śīva, and Śīva is the Veda; the student of the Veda is Sadāśīva; therefore, with every effort, one should always recite the Veda alone." ¹

Sāyaṇa's introduction to the Third Adhyāya ²:

1. Read letter by letter from the Kannada-script print; the verses are the standard ones that open each part, and the reading here is consistent with the same opening in the earlier volumes.

2. printed in Kannada script; read from the 150-dpi image

Translation: "Now the Third Adhyāya is begun. In the seventh anuvāka, [the one beginning] tvam agne prathamaḥ, there are five sūktas. Of these, the third is the sūkta etāyāmopa, of fifteen ṛks [?]. By the rule 'and the ṛṣi [is the same] as the other' (ṛṣiś cānyasmāt), the ṛṣi is Hiraṇyastūpa Āṅgiras. Since no deity is stated, Indra is the deity. The metre is Triṣṭup — [so says] the Anukramaṇikā ("etā..."). This sūkta has its application (viniyoga) at the Niṣkevalya [śāstra] of the Gosava and Vivadha [rites]. So it has been stated by Atimūrti in the section beginning 'for him who is about to sacrifice': 'In the Gosava and Vivadha, for one desiring cattle, [the sūkta addressed] to Indra and Soma, etāyām, at the midday [pressing]' — Āśv. [śrauta-sūtra] 6-8 [?]." ³

Anuvāda (Kannada explanation, as it begins on this page):
"Having finished the Second Adhyāya in the previous part, we now begin the translation of the meaning of the Third Adhyāya.

3. Reading notes: the printed words "ऋषिश्चान्यस्मादिति" and "सोममेतायामेति" are what the Kannada letters give; the word read "पञ्चदशर्चम्" is partly obscured. The form "atimūrtinā" is as in the Kannada anuvāda below, which also names the sūtra "Gosavavivadhau paśukāma indrasomam etāyām iti madhyandinaḥ". The numerals "6-8" after "ā." are small and uncertain.

In the Seventh Anuvāka, which begins 'tvam agne prathamo aṅgirā ṛṣiḥ', the sūkta etāyāma is the third sūkta. In it there are fifteen ṛks [the sentence is continued on the next page]..."

Anuvāda (continued):

"...In the five sūktas of this anuvāka, 33 to 37, since 'Hiraṇyastūpa Āṅgirasa' is stated as the ṛṣi, the ṛṣi of this sūkta is Hiraṇyastūpa Āṅgirasa. Indra is the deity. The Anukramaṇikā states that the metre is Triṣṭup. This sūkta has its application, in the Gosava and Vivadha sacrifices, when the Niṣkevalya śastra [hymn] is recited. This matter is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning 'atimūrtinā yakṣyamāṇa', by the sūtra 'gosavavivadhau paśukāma indrasomam etāyām iti madhyandinaḥ' (Āś. 6-8 [?])."

1. In the line "sūktadalliruva ṛksaṅkhye" the Kannada word "sūktadalliruva" is normalised from the print's "sūktadalliruva ṛksaṅkhye"; the line is Kannada, not Sanskrit.

2. printed with accent marks, in Kannada script; the accents are not reproduced here, as in Volumes 2-3 — the Kannada notation could not be converted reliably

Translation: ⁴ "Come, [we] desiring cattle, to Indra, who greatly strengthens our good intelligence; he, the unharmed, indeed [bestows] this wealth; [he] turns toward us the highest signal-mark of cattle."

Rik 1 — Pada-pāṭha, bhāṣya, Pratipadārtha, Bhāvārtha, English, Special Topics (pp. 3–5, PDF 17–19)

Correction to the note under the Saṃhitā text on p. 2 above (made after reading the Pada on p. 3): the Pada-pāṭha divides the first words as ā | ita | ayāma | upa | gavyantaḥ ..., so the Saṃhitā's etāyāmopa is simply ā-ita-ayāma-upa run together by sandhi (ā + ita → eta; eta + ayāma → etāyāma; + upa → etāyāmopa). My remark there about the word being "divided with underline marks" was wrong, and the "provisional rendering" under Rik 1 is superseded by the bhāṣya and by the source's own English given below; read those instead.

Pada-pāṭha ⁵

3. Reading note: the print divides the words with underline marks as "ṛte-yāmo-pa gavyantaḥ"-style; The first word is read as printed "etāyāma upa" run together, "etāyāmopa". The last word is printed split over two lines as "paramāva-rjate"; read "param āvarjate". Sandhi in "gavyanta indram" is as printed.

4. provisional rendering, to be replaced by the Pada, the bhāṣya and the source's own English, which follow on the next pages

5. printed with accent-marks, not reproduced

Translation: "The gods speak thus to one another: 'O gods, you who desire cows — wishing to obtain our cows carried off by the asura named Paṇi — come (eta = āgacchata). Together with you, let us go (upāyāma = let us reach) to Indra. And he, Indra, being anāmṛṇa — free of any injurer's nature — will, by the gaining of cows, gladden the good understanding (pramati) of us, the gods, and greatly increase (su vavṛdhāti = suṣṭhu vardhayati) our excellent intelligence. Thereafter this Indra will bring to us in abundance (kuvit) the supreme, excellent knowledge (ketam) relating to this wealth, in the form of cows' (gavāṁ).' (āvarjate = he brings to us in greater measure; [the last word as printed ādhikaṁ — I read it as meaning 'more, in addition'])."

6. The print has "ವೃಧಾತಿ" with the vowel-sign of the Pada; the compounds are marked with the avagraha-like sign "s" in the transcription for pra-matim and ā-varjate, where the print shows a small separating mark.

7. Kannada script converted letter by letter

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁸: The bhāṣya goes through the forms word by word. eta/ita — root iṇ (to go), loṭ 2nd plural, ending tha, replaced by ta; the śap is elided as the root is of the ad class. ayāma — the āt augment on the first-person ending (āḍuttamasya pic ca — आडुत्तमस्य पिच्च — āḍuttamasya pic ca, "the first person takes the augment āt, and it is pit" — Pā. 3-4-92 [?]), then guṇa and ayādeśa; the rule that yaṇ would replace the i of iṇ (iṇo yaṇ — इणो यण् — iṇo yaṇ, Pā. 6-4-81, which agrees with the standard numbering) is discussed against the maxim "exceptions set aside the rules preceding them, those in between" (madhye 'pavādāḥ pūrvān vidhīn bādhanṭe, Paribhāṣā 60 [?]). gavyantaḥ — from go with the suffix kyac (supa ātmanaḥ kyac — सुप आत्मनः क्यच् — "[the suffix kyac] after a noun, in the sense of desiring for oneself"), av in place of o before a y-suffix (vānto yi pratyaye — वान्तो यि प्रत्यये — Pā. 6-1-79 [?]), then śatr; the accent stays on the root. pramatim — root man (to know), suffix ktin (the printed "कुन्ति" is read ktin), loss of the nasal (anudāttopadeśa-vanati-tanoty-ādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kniti, number not read). vavṛdhāti — root vṛdhu vṛddhau, leṭ with the āt augment, the śap replaced by ślu by "bahulaṃ chandasī" (number not read), and the lengthening of the reduplication in the Veda (saṃhitāyām abhyāsasya dīrghaś chāndasaḥ). anāmṛṇaḥ — root mṛṇa (to injure), the suffix ka (igupadha-lakṣaṇaḥ kaḥ — the print reads "igupadhalakṣaṇaḥ kaḥ"; number not read), a bahuvrīhi "he who has no injurers", with the final-syllable accent after nañ and su (the rule nañsubhyām, number not read). rāyaḥ — the accent on the ending (ūḍidam..., number not read). gavām — the ending would take the accent by "sāvekāca..." (number not read), but this is prevented by "na go-śvan-sāvavarṇa..." (number not read). ketam — root kit (to know), suffix ghañ, accent on the first syllable. āvarjate — root vṛjī varjane; the śap should be elided as

8. pp. 3–4, characterized rather than transcribed, as the convention directs for dense accent-and-sandhi argument; named words and the sūtras that could be read are given for the ad class, but the Veda allows the contrary ("bahulaṃ chandasi"); śap is pit, hence unaccented; with tiñ a verbal prefix loses its accent before an accented tiñ; and the accent of āvarjate is not lowered (nighāta) because of its connection with kuvit (a rule of the group "kuvidyogān nipātair yad-yadi-hanta..." [?]).⁹

Pratipadārtha ¹⁰ — "gavyantaḥ — O gods, who wish to obtain the cows [carried off by the demon Paṇi]; ā ita — (all of you) come (join together); indram — to Indra (who is able to recover the cows); upāyāma — let us go; (that Indra is) anāmṛṇaḥ — non-violent; asmākam — our; pramatim — the mind delighted (by the gain of cows); vavṛdhāti — he increases; āt — thereafter; sa indraḥ — that Indra; asya rāyaḥ — of this wealth [of ours]; gavām — concerning the cows; param ketam — the excellent knowledge; naḥ — to us; kuvit — in abundance; āvarjate — makes us attain."

Bhāvārtha

— "O gods, the asura named Paṇi has stolen your cows. You have the wish to get them back. Therefore come, let all of us go together to Indra. He is non-violent. By getting each of us our cows back he will increase our gladness and will give us excellent understanding in regard to our whole wealth, the cows."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 4) — "Come, let us approach Indra to recover our stolen cattle ; He being without malice exilarates [sic] our minds ; he will bestow upon us perfect knowledge of this wealth consisting of cows."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 5 — "The asura named Paṇi stole the gods' cows and kept them hidden in a cave. This ṛk describes the gods speaking among themselves that they should go to Indra in order to recover them." — gavyantaḥ = gā ātmana

9. The "iti nighāta-pratiṣedhaḥ" citation could not be read beyond these opening words.

10. Kannada; translated

icchantaḥ, "those who wish to obtain cows". — su pramatim vāvṛdhāti: "he gives excellent knowledge; he increases our understanding." — anāmṛṇaḥ — hiṃsakarahitaḥ; mṛṇa hiṃsāyām; mṛṇanti hiṃsantīti mṛṇāḥ; igupadhalakṣaṇaḥ kaḥ; na santy āmṛṇā asyeti bahuvrīhiḥ (devanāgarī of the print's Sanskrit: "अनामृणः — हिंसकरहितः । मृण हिंसायाम् । मृणन्ति हिंसन्तीति मृणाः । इगुपधलक्षणः कः । न सन्त्यामृणा अस्येति बहुव्रीहिः"). "The root mṛṇ means to injure. Because he is not one who injures he is called anāmṛṇaḥ: Indra does not injure those who praise him; or, since no one is able to injure Indra, Indra is 'harmless' — such is the meaning." — kuvit — adhikam, "more, in abundance". "Among the twelve words of the many-meaning group beginning uru, tuvi, the word kuvit is read (Ni. 3-13 [?])." — rāyaḥ = dhanasya ("of wealth"; dhanada). — ketam — utkr̥ṣṭam jñānam: "excellent knowledge; since in the eleven words for 'understanding' beginning ketaḥ, ketuḥ the word ketaḥ is read (Ni. 3-13 [?]), ketam means good knowledge, understanding."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹¹: ite (root iṇ "to go", loṭ 2nd plural tha, replaced by ta by tasthasthamipām tāmtaṃtāmaḥ — तस्थस्थमिपां तांतंतामः — tasthasthamipām tāmtaṃtāmaḥ, Pā. 3-4-101, checked against the standard numbering; the śap elided, no guṇa) and āyāma (iṇ, loṭ 1st plural mas; loṭo laṇvat — लोटो लङ्वत् — Pā. 3-4-85; nityam nītaḥ — नित्यंङितः — Pā. 3-4-99, the s of mas is always elided; āḍuttamasya pic ca — आडुत्तमस्य पिच्च — Pā. 3-4-92, the augment āṭ; the page breaks off in the discussion of its being pit).

11. p. 5, grammar page — noted briefly

Rik 1 — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā, continued (pp. 6–7, PDF 20–21; grammar pages, noted briefly)

The grammar of Rik 1 runs on from p. 5 through p. 7 in Kannada prose, with the sūtras quoted in Kannada script. Noted briefly, not transcribed line by line; sūtras whose numbers could be read are given in three layers.

- āyāma (continued from p. 5): the ending is pit (by the augment āt), so it is not ñit (sārvadhātukam apit — सार्वधातुकमपित् — sārvadhātukam apit, "a sārvadhātuka ending that is not pit is treated as ñit"; number not read), hence there is no room for the ban on guṇa; guṇa gives e + āma and then ay-substitution, whence āyāma. The page then argues whether ino yaṇ — इणो यण् — ino yaṇ (Pā. 6-4-81, as printed) or the iyaṇ substitution (aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor iyaṇuvaṇau — अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवां य्वोरियडुवडौ — Pā. 6-4-77 [?]) should apply before a vowel-initial ending, using the maxim madhye 'pavādāḥ pūrvān vidhīn bādhanṭe — मध्येऽपवादाः पूर्वान्विधीन्बाधन्ते — "exceptions in the middle debar the earlier rules" (Paribhāṣā 60, as printed) and vipratishedhe paraṃ kāryam — विप्रतिषेधे परं कार्यम् — "in a conflict the later rule prevails" (Pā. 1-4-2, as printed): the later guṇa rule wins. It adds that the author of the "Vedha-[=Veda?]-bhāṣya" [?] settles the matter by accepting that yaṇ is an exception, and that knīti ca — क्ङिति च — knīti ca (Pā. 1-1-5) bars guṇa only in the ñit case (i + anti); the maxim is therefore not needed here. The ending, being pit, is anudātta (anudāttau suppitau), so the root's own accent remains.
- gavyantaḥ: gāḥ ātmana icchantah; kyac after the object-word go by supa ātmanaḥ kyac — सुप आत्मनः क्यच् — supa ātmanaḥ kyac (Pā. 3-1-8, as read from the print), the verbal status of the stem (sanādyantā dhātavaḥ), the elision of the case-ending (supo dhātuprātīpadikayoḥ — सुपो धातुप्रातिपदिकयोः

— Pā. 2-4-71), av for o before a suffix beginning with y (vānto yi pratyaye — वान्तो यि प्रत्यये — Pā. 6-1-79), then laṭ, śaṭṛ, śap, the doubling in gavya + at, the addition of num, and the visarga; the accent of śaṭṛ is anudātta by tāsyānudātenñīdadupadeśāt... — ताश्यनुदात्तेऽङिदुपदेशात्... — Pā. 6-1-186 [?], so the root accent remains.

- pramatim (p. 6 end – p. 7): root man jñāne, striyām ktin — स्त्रियां क्तिन् — striyām ktin (Pā. 3-3-94), loss of the nasal by anudāttopadeśa-vanati-tanoty-ādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kñiti (Pā. 6-4-37), and the preverb pra keeps its own accent by tāḍau ca niti kṛtyatau — तादौ च नितिकृत्यतौ — Pā. 6-2-50.
- vāvṛdhāti (p. 7): root vr̥dhu vardhane; leṭ, with the augment āṭ by leṭo 'dāṭau — लेटोऽडाटौ — Pā. 3-4-94; śap's elision by ślu through "bahulaṃ chandasi" (Pā. 2-4-73 [?]); doubling of the root by ślau — श्लौ — Pā. 6-1-10; the reduplicate is cut down by halādiḥ śeṣaḥ — हलादिः शेषः — "of the consonants the first remains" (Pā. 7-4-60, not numbered in the print); the lengthening of the reduplicate in the Saṃhitā is Vedic.
- anāmṛṇaḥ: root mṛṇa hiṃsāyām; ṛ belongs to the ik group, so mṛṇ ends in a vowel-penultimate root, whence the suffix ka (igupadhajñāprikiraḥ kaḥ — इगुपधज्ञाप्रीकिरः कः — Pā. 3-1-135); na santi āmṛṇā asya (bahuvr̥hi); nalopo nañah — नलोपो नञः — Pā. 6-3-73 (the n of nañ is dropped before a following member) and tasmān nuḍ aci — तस्मान्नुडचि — Pā. 6-3-74 (the augment nuṭ if a vowel follows); the final member is accented on its last syllable by the rule nañsubhyām (number not read).
- ketam: root kit jñāne, ending in the suffix ghañ. (Rik 1's grammar ends here, p. 7.)

Translation: "The Indra who, for the benefit of the praisers [= human beings and the like] [?], at the yāman — in a battle that has begun with their enemies — is havya, i.e. is to be invoked by them: to that Indra I, the performer, going up to him [?], patāmi — I simply approach. Doing what? Namasyan — worshipping with upamebhiḥ, 'those standing in the place of the comparison [i.e. the best, worthy to be compared]', with the excellent arkaiḥ — hymns of praise. What sort of Indra? Dhanadām — the giver of wealth; apratītam — 'not gone against', that is, not defeated by the mighty. An illustration for reaching Indra: juṣṭām — frequented by earlier [birds], vasatim — a dwelling, the resting-place in the form of its own nest — śyeno na — as a hawk. Just as the hawk, the swift bird [?], runs with eagerness to its own place, so do I reach Indra with haste."

Pratipadārtha — "yaḥ — which Indra; stotṛbhyaḥ — from the devotees; yāman — at the time of battle (for help); havyaḥ asti — is called (with prayer); dhanadām — [that] giver of wealth; apratītam — [one] not struck back (by enemies); indram — Indra; aham — I; upamebhiḥ — worthy of comparison (endowed with the best qualities); arkyaiḥ [the print here: arkyaiḥ] — with hymns; namasyan — worshipping; juṣṭām — the beloved (dwelling-place); vasatim — the nest; śyenaḥ na — as a hawk arrives; upet patāmi — I will go swiftly and arrive."

Bhāvārtha

— "Indra has a mighty valour that cannot be struck back by enemies. All his devotees call upon him at the time of battle, praying for help. He is the giver of wealth. As a hawk flies off and reaches its own beloved nest, so I also, worshipping that Indra with the most excellent hymns, will go swiftly to him."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 9) — "Indra is to be inovked [sic] by his worshippers in battle; Indra who is invincible and true giver of wealth is to be glorified with excellent hymns; I approach Indra like a hawk to its cherished nest."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 9–10 — dhanadām — dhanam dadātīti dhanadāḥ (Kannada gloss: "one who gives wealth, riches"). apratītam — śatrubhir na pratigataṃ ("one who cannot be conquered by enemies"). juṣṭām — juṣī prītisevanayoḥ, sevītām: "an object of love, desired". śyenaḥ — "a hawk, a particular bird; this bird is renowned for flying swiftly. As such a bird flies swiftly to its beloved nest, so I too go swiftly to Indra, who is very dear to me, because he gives me what I wish — such is the sense of the illustration." upamebhiḥ — upamānasthānīyaiḥ, uttamaiḥ, "worthy of comparison, excellent, the very best". ārkyaiḥ [the print's form here: ārkyaiḥ with a long ā] — "with mantras. There is a Nirukta statement, arke mantrā bhavati ('arka is a mantra')" (Ni. 5-4 [?], numeral uncertain). havyaḥ — āhvātavyaḥ: "one who is called for help at the time of battle. People who fall into difficulties such as war take refuge in Indra; they call upon Indra for help."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁴: dhanadām (dhanam dadāti → dhanadāḥ; the suffix vic by āto maninkvanibvanipaś ca — आतो मनिन्क्वनिब्बनिपश्च — Pā. 3-2-74 [?], with all the letters of vic dropped; the su of the compound's member elided by luk; accusative singular). juṣṭām (juṣī prītisevanayoḥ; the root is īdit, so the iṭ augment is barred

Translation: "Sarvasenaḥ — he who has the whole army — ni asakta — has fixed iṣudhīn, the quivers that are the receptacles of arrows, firmly on his back. Aryaḥ — Indra, in the form of the lord — to the house of whichever god he vaṣṭi ('wishes') to give back the cows carried off by the demon, he sam ajati — leads those cows rightly, brings them. O pravṛddha, Indra of surpassing growth, [you who are] coṣkūyamāṇaḥ — giving us abundantly bhūri vāmaṃ, plentiful wealth in the form of cows — do not become a paṇi towards us (asmad adhi): do not be a trader; the meaning is 'do not ask the price of the cows'."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ¹⁵: the bhāṣya parses sarvasenaḥ (bahuvrīhi; its accent via pratyayalakṣaṇa and a Kāśikā citation), iṣudhīn (iṣu + dhā, suffix ki by karman̄y adhikaraṇe ca — Pā. 3-3-93 [?]; n → ru by the rule on a long vowel before aṭ and the optional nasalization of the previous vowel by anunāsikaḥ pūrvasya tu vā — Pā. 8-3-2, as printed), asakta (root ṣaca samavāye, śap elided by bahulaṃ chandasi), aryaḥ (aryaḥ svāmivaiśyayoḥ — अर्यः स्वामिवैश्ययोः — Pā. 3-1-103, yat-ending irregularly formed; final-acute by a Phiṭ-sūtra, number [?]), ajati (root aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ), vaṣṭi (root vaśa kāntau, śap elided as it belongs to the ad class; ṣ-substitution then ṣṭutva), coṣkūyamāṇaḥ (root skui āpravaṇe, yañ by dhātor ekāca..., lengthening, doubling, ś-initial reduplicate cut down; the last ś [sakāraḥ] is dropped; ānac for laṭ via yajanta [?]; stem accent from the lasārvadhātuka ending), bhūḥ (aorist; luk of sic by gātisthā...). Several of these sūtra numbers on pp. 12–13 are small and they were not pursued.

15. pp. 12–13, characterized, not transcribed

Pratipadārtha — "sarvasenaḥ — Indra, who has all armies; iṣudhīn — the quivers that hold arrows; ni asakta — has fastened firmly (on his back); aryah — Indra, the lord; yasya — [with regard to] which deity; vaṣṭi — he wishes; (to the house of such a deity) gāḥ — the cows; sam ajati — he drives rightly; (he) pravṛddha — (O) one endowed with excellent growth; indra — Indra; bhūri — in abundance; vāmam — abundant (cow-form) wealth; coṣkūyamāṇaḥ — giving bountifully; asmadadhi — with regard to us; paṇiḥ — a trader (a haggler); mā bhūḥ — do not become."

Bhāvārtha

— "Indra, the lord of all the gods, with all his armies, has bound the quivers firmly on his shoulder. He leads the cows that were carried off, to the houses of his own gods. O Indra of excellent prosperity, give us more and more of the wealth of cows that we wish. But do not ask us for only their price, and do not behave towards us like a trader."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 13)

— "Indra, the leader of the whole army ties the quivers on his back ; the lord drives the cattle to the dwelling of whom he pleases ; O, mighty Indra, the giver of abundant wealth, do not take advantage of us like a dealer."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), pp. 13–14 — sarvasenaḥ = kṛtsnaseṇāyuktaḥ: "The leader of all armies [the print adds this English], the overlord of all the armies, one who has all armies." iṣudhīn = iṣava iṣu dhīyante itīśudhayaḥ, "quivers in which arrows are placed." aryah = svāmivaiśyayoḥ (Pā. 3-1-103 [as printed]): "master, sacrificer, Lord [English in the print]." coṣkūyamāṇaḥ = asmabhyam prayacchan, "one who gives [cows] to us." mā paṇir bhūḥ = vyavahārī mā bhūyāḥ: "Do not become a trader and haggle; that is, in giving us wealth do not stint, nor haggle over how much to give, but give wealth as is wished." The print adds in English: "Do not make a hard bargain, dont [sic] haggle, do not demand too much from worshippers etc."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁶: sarvasenaḥ — sarva belongs to the uñchādi group, so it is final-acute by uñchādīnām ca — उञ्छादीनां च — Pā. 6-1-160; ina = master; inena saha vartate iti senā, a bahuvrīhi, with sa for saha by vopasarjanasya — वोपसर्जनस्य — Pā. 6-3-82; then sarvā senā yasya saḥ, the case-ending of the first member elided by supo dhātuprātīpadikayoḥ — सुपो धातुप्रातिपदिकयोः — Pā. 2-4-71. Because sarvasya supi — सर्वस्य सुपि — Pā. 6-1-191 gives sarva the first-syllable accent before a sup ending, the page asks how this applies once the ending is elided; it cites the Kāśikā-author that the accent comes by pratyayalakṣaṇa — pratyayalope pratyayalakṣaṇam — प्रत्ययलोपे प्रत्ययलक्षणम् — Pā. 1-1-62 — and explains that the prohibition na lumatāṅgasya — न लुमताङ्गस्य — Pā. 1-1-63 does not obstruct, and that the "seventh case" in accent-rules means "ending in ...", i.e. applies to words in a subanta. After the bahuvrīhi the first-member accent supervenes and the same accent remains.

6-4-64; accusative plural śas; in the Saṃhitā the n becomes ru after a long vowel in one foot (dīrghād aṭi samānapāde — दीर्घादटि समानपादे — Pā. 8-3-9 [?]) and the preceding vowel is optionally nasalized (anunāsikaḥ pūrvasya tu vā — अनुनासिकः पूर्वस्य तु वा — Pā. 8-3-2).

- asakta: root śaca samavāye (1st class, ubhayapadin), lañ [print: luñ-type third singular ta of the middle voice, "lañ pr. pu. e. va."]; śap elided by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 2-4-73 [?]); c → k by coḥ kuḥ — चोः कुः — Pā. 8-2-30; the augment aṭ.
- aryaḥ: aryaḥ svāmivaiśyayoḥ — अर्यः स्वामिवैश्ययोः — Pā. 3-1-103; root ṛ gatau, yat as an exception to nyat, guṇa and raparatva giving ārya-type form; the final syllable acute by the Phiṭ-sūtras aryasya svāmyākhyā cet and aṅguśmodakabakavaśānām chandasy antaḥ (numbers [?]), which override the first-syllable accent that yato nāvaḥ — यतो नावः — Pā. 6-1-213 or yonyasya... (a later rule) would give.
- ajati: root aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ, laṭ, tip, śap. vaṣṭi: root vaśa kāntau, ad-class, śap elided; ś → ṣ by vraścabhraśjasrjamṛjayajarājabhṛājacchaśām ṣaḥ — व्रश्चभ्रस्जसृजमृजयजराजभ्राजच्छशां षः — Pā. 8-2-36; then ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ — षुना षुः — Pā. 8-4-41, giving vaṣṭi.
- coṣkūyamāṇaḥ (p. 16): root skui āpravaṇe; yañ in the sense of repetition or intensity after a root with one vowel and an initial consonant (dhātor ekāco halādeḥ kriyāsamabhīhāre yañ — Pā. 3-1-22), lengthening (akṛtsārvadhātukayor dīrghaḥ — Pā. 7-4-25), doubling (sanyaṇoḥ — Pā. 6-1-9), shortening of the reduplicate (hrasvaḥ — Pā. 7-4-59), the first s of the doubled skū lost (śarpūrvāḥ khayaḥ — Pā. 7-4-61), k of the reduplicate → c (kuhoś cuḥ — Pā. 7-4-62), guṇa of the reduplicate (guṇo yañluktoḥ — Pā. 7-4-82), s → ṣ by the list suṣāmādiṣu ca (Pā. 8-3-98), śānac for laṭ (laṭaḥ śaṭrśānacau — Pā. 3-2-124), a + o → single o (ato guṇe — Pā. 6-1-97), the augment muk (āne muk — Pā. 7-2-82), n-substitution (aṭkupañnumvyavāye 'pi — Pā. 8-4-2) giving coṣkūyamāṇa; the sānac ending is unaccented (tāsyānudātenñīdadupadeśāt..., Pā. 6-1-186), so the root accent stays.

- bhūḥ: root bhū sattāyām, luḥ, sic; the augment aṭ is barred when mā is connected (na māṇyoge); the luk of sic by gātisthāghupābhūbhyaḥ sicaḥ parasmaipadeṣu — गातिस्थाघुपाभूभ्यः सिचः परस्मैपदेषु — Pā. 2-4-77; itaś ca — इतश्च — Pā. 3-4-100 drops the i of the ending; ru and visarga. ¹⁸. Reading note: the Saṃhitā text of the second line is read as printed — viṣuṇak te — the second word being a single printed unit "विषुणक्ते"; the Pada on the next page will show how the print divides it. The Saṃhitā is not completed with the Pada here; Rik 4's Pada, bhāṣya and the rest follow from p. 17 and are not yet written.

19. the print's first half is given in full; the grammatical tail is characterized below

Translation: "O Indra, you slew with the ghana, the hard vajra, the dhanin — the possessor of much wealth — the dasyu — the thief — Vṛtra: you have indeed killed [him]. The Vājasaneyins also state clearly that he has wealth: 'Inside Vṛtra were all the gods, all the sciences, and all the oblations.' Upasākebhiḥ — though accompanied by the Maruts who stand near, endowed with power — ekaḥ caran — going alone, going by yourself to strike. Though the Maruts are near, they only encourage; it is not they who strike Vṛtra: the striker is you alone. So it is handed down in a Brāhmaṇa: 'The Maruts did not abandon him; saying "Strike, O Lord, show your valour!" they stood by him' (Ai. Brā. 3-20 [?]). Dhanor adhi — upon Indra's bow; viṣuṇak — with various destruction in view, or on all sides — those followers of Vṛtra vy āyan, came in various ways; and having come, being ayajvānaḥ — enemies of sacrifice — the followers of Vṛtra by the name sanakāḥ pretim īyuh — met their death."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁰: the bhāṣya's tail treats vadhīḥ (root han replaced by vadha in the luṇ by a sūtra whose number [Pā. 2-4-43 as read] is given with [?]; loss of the a and absence of vṛddhi; sic lost before īṭ, the īṭ augment [Pā. 8-2-28 [?]]), ghanena and ekaḥ (the Vedic prakṛtibhāva in the Saṃhitā text before īṣā-akṣādi-type compounds, Pā. 6-1-115 [?]; the nasalisation is Vedic), upasākebhiḥ (upasaktaṃ kurvanti upasākāḥ, from śakḷ śaktau, in the causative sense, with ac; the last syllable of the second member acute), viṣuṇak (kvip after naś [or añc] preceded by viṣu; kutva by naśer vā — Pā. 8-2-63 [?]), sanakāḥ (ṣaṇu dāne, "they who give", sanā dātāraḥ; pacādyac; sanān nāyanti śabdayantīti sanakāḥ; suffix ka by ato 'nupasarge kaḥ; loss of ā by ātolopa īti ca), pretim (the preverb keeps its accent by tādaṃ ca niti [Pā. 6-2-50]), and īyuh (root i, liṭ third plural us, yaṇ-substitution, doubling, lengthening of the reduplicate by dirgha iṇaḥ kiti — Pā. 7-4-69 [?]).

20. pp. 17–18, characterized

Pratipadārtha — "(he) indra — O Indra (you); upaśākebhiḥ — though your powerful Maruts, staying near you, are close at hand; ekaḥ — you alone; caran — moving about (by your own strength alone); dhaninam — the rich; dasyum — the thief Vṛtra; ghanena — with the hard vajra weapon; vadhīr hi — [you] killed; (and) ayajvānaḥ — the enemies of sacrifice; te — those followers of Vṛtra; sanakāḥ — Sanaka and the other rākṣasas; dhanor adhi — in front of (your) bow; viṣṇak — from many directions; vy āyan — came; (and) pretim — death; iyuḥ — obtained."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Indra, you are exceedingly heroic. Though the powerful Maruts were with you, near you, for your help, you alone, without expecting their help, killed Vṛtra with your vajra. Moreover, the enemies of sacrifice and the followers of Vṛtra — Sanaka and the other rākṣasas — who came from many directions in the sky against your weapon, also met death."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 18)

— "O Indra, though you are accompanied by your powerful allies Maruths, you alone did slay the rich demon Vritra with your thunderbolt ; those unsacrificing Sanakas coming against your bow from all sides met with their death."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 19–20 — dasyum dhaninam — "Vṛtra the thief is famed as very rich. 'Within Vṛtra were all the gods, all the sciences, all the oblations' — [this] is known from the Śukla-Yajurveda. Although the word dasyum here means only 'thief', its meaning must be given as Vṛtra: because it is stated here that Indra struck him with his vajra, and because it is said in many places that Vṛtra was struck down and killed with the vajra, dasyum must be understood to refer to Vṛtra the dasyu. The sense is that by thieving he gained wealth and became famous as rich."

ekaś carann upaśākebhiḥ

— "Though the Maruts, who are Indra's friends, were near, encouraging [him], Indra did not look for their help but leapt alone upon the enemy and struck him with the vajra. Hence Indra needs no help from anyone else; he alone has immeasurable strength and power. On this the bhāṣyakāra has cited the Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa sentence":

मरुतो हैनं नाजहुः प्रहर भगवो वीरयस्वेत्येवैनमेतां वाचं वदन्त उपातिष्ठन्ते [print here: -
nte; in the bhāṣya: -nta] । (ऐ. ब्रा. ३-२०)

maruto hainaṃ nājahuḥ prahara bhagavo vīrayasvety evainam etāṃ vācaṃ vadanta upātiṣṭhante | (ai. brā. 3-20)

"The Maruts did not abandon him; saying to him these words, 'Strike, O lord, show your valour', they stood by him."

upaśākebhiḥ — upaśaktaṃ kurvantīty upaśākāḥ | upaśākebhiḥ samīpavartibhiḥ śaktiyuktair marudbhiḥ: "by the powerful Maruts who stand near." āyajvānaḥ — yajvavirodhinaḥ: "opponents of those who sacrifice, or those who do not sacrifice." sanakāḥ — etannāmakā vṛtrānucarāḥ: "the sanakas are Vṛtra's followers. The word sanaka (sanakāt) occurs in the Ṛgveda in only two ṛks:"

१. प्र सप्तहोता सनकादरोचत मातुरुपस्थे यदशोचदूधनि । न नि मिषति सुराणो दिवेदिवे
यदसुरस्य जठरादजायत ॥ (ऋ. सं. ३-२९-१४ [?]) २. अयमग्निर्विध्यश्चस्य वृत्रहा

1. pra saptahotā sanakād arocata mātur upasthe yad asocad ūdhani | na ni miṣati suraṇo dive-dive yad asurasya jaṭharād ajāyata || (ṛ. saṃ. 3-29-14 [?]) 2. ayam agnir vadhryaśvasya vṛtrahā sanakāt preddho namasopavākyaḥ | sa no ajāmīr uta vā vijāmīn abhi tiṣṭha śardhato vādhryaśva || (ṛ. saṃ. 10-69-12 [?])

"1. 'The seven-priested one shone forth from of old, when he blazed in the lap of the mother, in the udder [?]; the glad one does not wink day by day, since he was born from the belly of the asura.' 2. 'This Agni, Vṛtra-slayer of Vadhryaśva, kindled from of old, is to be addressed with homage: overcome for us, O Vādhryaśva, the hostile [?] — both the kinsfolk and the non-kinsfolk — who press upon us.'" ²¹ The source then notes: "In these two ṛks the word sanakāt has Agni as its sense; it does not suggest the meaning 'Vṛtra's follower'."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²²: vadhīḥ — root han hiṃsāgatyoḥ, luṇ, tip; the i of the parasmaipada ending is lost by itaś ca — इतश्च — Pā. 3-4-100; cli in place of śap by cli luṇi — च्लि लुङि — Pā. 3-1-43; sic for cli by cleḥ sic — च्लेः सिच् — Pā. 3-1-44; vadha for han in luṇ by luṇi ca — लुङि च — Pā. 2-4-43; the a of vadha dropped by ato lopah — अतो लोपः — Pā. 6-4-48 (the print, in the Veda-bhāṣya, cites this as "ātolopah", which the author says is a slip — pramādikavāgi); the optional vṛddhi by ato halādeḥ laghoḥ — अतो हलादेर्लघोः — Pā. 7-2-7, and its non-occurrence because of the sthānivadbhāva rule acaḥ parasmin pūrvavidhau — अचः परस्मिन्पूर्वविधौ — Pā. 1-1-57; the augment īṭ by asti-sico 'prkte — अस्तिसिचोऽपृक्ते — Pā. 7-3-96, the īṭ; the s lost by īṭa īṭi — इट ईटि — Pā. 8-2-28; the pūrvatrāsiddham — पूर्वत्रासिद्धम् — Pā. 8-2-1 does not make the loss of s "unseen"; the augment aṭ is Vedic and does not appear; the augments īṭ and īṭ are unaccented (āgamā anudāttāḥ), so the root's accent remains.

- ghanena ekaḥ (p. 21): the Saṃhitā keeps the vowels unchanged — īṣākṣādiṣu chandasī prakṛtibhāvamātram — ईषाक्षादिषु छन्दसि प्रकृतिभावमात्रम् — "in the Veda the compounds īṣākṣa and the like keep their natural form only" (Pā. 6-1-115 [?], as read); mātram excludes shortening as well as guṇa.

21. The translations are editorial and tentative: the source leaves these two ṛks untranslated, and the second verse's second line is dense.

22. p. 20, grammar page — noted briefly

The nasalisation in ghanena [the print marks the e with the nasal sign] is Vedic and is not produced by a sūtra of Pāṇini but belongs to the Prātiśākhya process.

- upaśākebhiḥ: upaśaktaṃ kurvanti, root śakḷ śaktau, causative ñic by hetumati ca — हेतुमति च — Pā. 3-1-26; vṛddhi of the penultimate by ata upadhāyāḥ — अत उपधायाः — Pā. 7-2-116; suffix ac of the pacādi class (nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ — Pā. 3-1-134); loss of ṇi by ṇer aniṭi — णेरनिति — Pā. 6-4-51; final acute by thāthaghañktājabitrakāṇām — थाथघञ्क्ताजबित्रकाणाम् — Pā. 6-2-144.
- viṣuṇak: suffix kvip after naś adarśane with viṣu in front (sampadādibhyaḥ kvip, a vārtika); kutva of ś by naśer vā — नशेर्वा — Pā. 8-2-63 (the page shows the whole chain: ṣa by vraścabhrasja... — Pā. 8-2-36, ḍa by jhalām jaśo 'nte — Pā. 8-2-39, ka by khari ca — Pā. 8-4-55, then ṇa for n); alternatively root añcu gatipūjanayoḥ with viṣu, kvip, the augment nuṭ, and kutva by coḥ kuḥ — चोः कुः — Pā. 8-2-30.
- sanakāḥ: the name of a class of asuras; root ṣaṇu dāne, sanvanti iti sanāḥ "givers"; or root kai śabde with ā for ai (ādeca upadeśe 'śiti — आदेच उपदेशेऽशिति — Pā. 6-1-45), sanān kāyati "he who calls out the sana [praises?]"; suffix ka by ato 'nupasarge kaḥ — अतोऽनुपसर्गे कः — Pā. 3-2-3; loss of ā by ātolopa iṭi ca — Pā. 6-4-64; accent of the first member of a kṛt compound.
- pretim: pra + root iṇ + ktin, guṇa; the preverb keeps its accent by tādaṃ ca niti kṛtyataṃ — Pā. 6-2-50.
- iyuḥ (p. 22): root iṇ gatau, liṭ, jhi replaced by us (parasmaipadānām ṇalatusustha-lathusaṇalvamāḥ — Pā. 3-4-82); doubling by liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya — Pā. 6-1-8; iṇo yaṇ — Pā. 6-4-81 gives y for the second i, but a doubling-condition sūtra dvirvacane 'ci — Pā. 1-1-59 makes the replaced i count as present for doubling; lengthening of the reduplicate by dirgha iṇaḥ kiti — दीर्घ इणः किति — Pā. 7-4-69; ī + y + us, ru, visarga: īyuh. Rik 4 ends here (|| 4 ||).

Translation: "O Indra, those followers of Vṛtra, having made their own heads (śīrṣā) turned away (parā cit = facing backwards), fled (vavṛjuḥ = went). What were they like? Ayajvānaḥ — themselves without sacrifice, and, moreover, contending with the yajvans, the performers of sacrifices. O harivaḥ — you who have the horses named Hari; sthātaḥ — steadfast, not fleeing from battle; ugra — Indra endowed with valour: when (yat = yadā) you blew away completely (niḥśeṣeṇa dhamanam) those followers of Vṛtra from the sky, from [the realm] of the rodasī — heaven and earth — then, driven by the breath of your mouth, they fled: thus the connection with the preceding."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁵: śīrṣā (loss of śe by śeś chandasi bahulam — शेषछन्दसि बहुलम् — Pā. 6-1-70 [?]); vavṛjuḥ (root vṛjī varjane; liṭ after a root not ending in a conjunct is kit — asaṃyogāl liṭ kit — असंयोगाल्लिट् कित् — Pā. 1-2-5, so no guṇa); ayajvānaḥ (root yaj with the suffix ṛvanip — suyajor ṛvanip — सुयजोर्द्वनिप् — Pā. 3-2-103 — in the past sense; nañ-compound with first-member accent); divaḥ (the ending accented by the rule on ūḍ-forms); harivaḥ (harī asya staḥ iti harivān; matup's m → v in the Veda by chandasīra [Pā. 8-2-15 [?]]; ru in the vocative by sambuddhau matuvasor ru); avratān (nañ-bahuvrīhi, final acute; n → ru after a long vowel before aṭ, with a nasalised ā); adhamah (root dhmā śabdāgnisaṃyogayoḥ, lañ, sip, śap; dhama in place of dhmā by pāghrādhmāsthā... [Pā. 7-3-78 [?]]).

Pratipadārtha — "harivaḥ — O one who has the horses named Hari; sthātaḥ — (in battle) steadfast; ugra — fearsome; indra — Indra; yat — when; divaḥ — from the heaven; rodasyoḥ — from the earth and the mid-region (they came); avratān — those who have no Vedic observances (the followers of Vṛtra); niḥ pra adhamah — you blew away utterly (with the breath of your mouth) [as read from the print]; ayajvānaḥ — those who are not performers of sacrifices; yajvabhiḥ spardhamānāḥ — contending with the sacrificers; te — they; śīrṣā — their heads; parā cit — turning back; vavṛjuḥ — fled."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Indra, the two horses called Hari are your excellent vehicles. In battle you fight steadily, never turning your back on the enemy. You are fearsome to your enemies. When those followers of Vṛtra, who observe no Vedic vows and have fallen from sacrifice, come, contending with the performers of sacrifices, to do harm from the heavenly world, from the earth and from the mid-region, then you blow them away utterly with the breath of your mouth. They fled without showing their faces, turned back."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 24) — "O Indra, the neglecters of sacrifices striving hard with the sacrificers fled with their faces turned back ; O mighty Indra, lord of horses, when you blew the unreligious they disappeared from the heaven, earth and sky."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 24 — parācit śīrṣā = parāṇmukhā: "turning (bending) their heads, and looking backwards, they fled — such is the sense." — āyajvānaḥ yajvabhiḥ spardhamānāḥ — "those who do not sacrifice (that is, the dasyus, rākṣasas, and the like), contending with those who sacrifice (those who please the gods, Indra and the others, by invoking them at the sacrifice)." — adhamah = dhmā śabdāgnisaṃyogayoḥ: "the root dhmā means blowing for kindling a fire, or blowing forcibly so that a sound results (as with a conch and the like). Therefore adhamah means: you drove them off, making them flee, by roaring and other sounds, with the breath of your mouth." — harivaḥ = harī asya staḥ iti harivān: "Indra, who has two horses named Hari." — avratān = "those who have not performed vows such as the performance of sacrifice — the dasyus and the like." — rodasyoḥ = dyāvāprthivyoḥ "from the earth and the mid-region" ²⁶.

Translation: "Anavadyasya — of Indra, who is free of any blameworthy fault — the followers of Vṛtra wished to fight against his army. Then the navagvāḥ — those of praiseworthy conduct, of 'new' ways [?] — [encouraged him]. Or: of the Aṅgirasas sitting at a long sacrifice (satra), those who rose up having gained the fruit in nine months have the name navagvāḥ; for it is so stated in passages such as 'navagvāsaḥ sutasomāsa indram' [?]. Kṣitayaḥ — human beings, the Aṅgirasas and others, since kṣitayaḥ is read among the names of man (kṛṣṭayaḥ). Ayātayanta — they encouraged Indra with various mantras for the sake of the fight. When Indra went to fight, they were niraṣṭāḥ — driven off by that Indra — the followers of Vṛtra, who, citayantaḥ — making known their own weakness — went away from Indra by pravadbhiḥ, easily-managed paths [?] for saving themselves; they went far off. The illustration: like vadhrayaḥ — eunuchs — fighting with a vṛṣāyudha, a hero of virility, able to shower (vṛṣā + āyudha); eunuchs are, as in the smṛti passages ('the vadhri is a eunuch by nature'), thrown far off by a strong man; so were they."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁷: the bhāṣya's tail parses, word by word, ayuyutsan (root yudha saṃprahāre, the desiderative san, with a sūtra on kit-ness so that there is no guṇa, and a ban on the iṭ augment for a one-vowel root), senām (inena saha vartate, sa for saha, accent of the first member), ayātayanta (root yatī prayatne, causative), kṣitayaḥ (root kṣi nivāsagatyoh, "those who go", i.e. men), navagvāḥ (navabhir māsair gacchantīti navagvāḥ, with a suffix after the root gam — a ḍa/kvip alternative is argued — and loss of the nasal, lengthening to ū; the exact sūtra numbers on p. 27 and p. 28 were not read), vṛṣāyudhaḥ (a denominative in kyaṣ/kvip, with a dispute whether the prefix word may be compounded), niraṣṭāḥ (root aśū vyāptau in the sense of the state, the niṣṭhā ending, no iṭ by yasya vibhāṣā; the ṣ of vraścādi-type; first-member accent of the bahuvrīhi; the form with ṣ for s is Vedic), pravadbhiḥ (root vana paṇa sambhaktau, the suffix kvip, the augment tuk [?]) and citayantaḥ (root citī saṃjñāne, śatṛ, śap; the absence of guṇa of the penultimate is explained by "the rule on augments is not universal", anityam āgamaśāsanam).

Pratipadārtha — "anavadyasya — (when Vṛtra's followers) of the irreproachable Indra; senām — the army; ayuyutsan — wished to fight [the print's words "ಪ್ರತಿಭಟಿಸಲಿಚ್ಛಿಸಿ..." are partly obscured: "wished to confront"]; navagvāḥ — those of praiseworthy conduct (or: those who obtained the fruit of the whole sacrifice in nine months); kṣitayaḥ — (the Aṅgirasas and others) human beings; ayātayanta — encouraged Indra with various mantras; (te — those rākṣasas who came to fight Indra); niraṣṭāḥ — made powerless (by Indra); citayantaḥ — showing their own powerlessness; vṛṣāyudhaḥ — fighting with a strong, mighty one; vadhrayaḥ na — like eunuchs; pravadbhiḥ — by precipitous paths (suited to flight); indrāt — from Indra; āyan — went away (fled)."

27. pp. 27–28, characterized; the print is crowded and the small numerals were not pursued

Bhāvārtha

— "Indra is faultless. The wicked followers of Vṛtra wished to fight his army. The Aṅgirasas and other praiseworthy leaders of men encouraged Indra with many kinds of mantras. Then, when Indra went out to battle, those rākṣasas became powerless. Showing their weakness, like eunuchs against a strong man, they were unable to fight Indra, and fled in various directions along whatever paths they found."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 29)

— "They (followers of Vritra) desired to fight with the army of irreproachable Indra. Men (Angirasas) engaged in offering libations to Indra for nine months encouraged Indra to give them fight; like eunuchs fighting with a hero they fled by precipitous paths exposing their backs away from Indra."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 29–30 - anavadyasya = garhaṇīyadoṣarahitasya: "one without any bad faults." - kṣitayaḥ = kṣi nivāsagatyoh; kṣiyanti gacchantīti kṣitayo manuṣyāḥ: "since the root kṣi has the senses of 'dwelling' and 'going', kṣitayaḥ means men who are going about, able to move. Since the word kṣitayaḥ is read among the twenty-five names of man beginning with narāḥ (Ni. 2-2 [?]), kṣitayaḥ means men." - navagvāḥ = navabhir māsair gacchantīti navagvāḥ | aṅgirasāṃ satram āsīnānāṃ madhye ye navabhir māsair avāptaphalā utthitās teṣāṃ navagvā iti saṃjñā: "Some in the family of the ṛṣi Aṅgiras gained their wish in nine months, through performing a sacrifice (satra) that lasts a year. These are called navagvāḥ; there is a convention that this name is given to the best of the Aṅgirasa ṛṣi-family, who obtained their wish in nine months. In some passages those who obtained the fruit in ten months are called daśagvāḥ. On this, Western scholars, explaining the word, [say], in the print's own English: 'the term Navagva is applied to a man, generally an Angiras in the highest degree (Angirastama—ಅಂಗಿರಸ್ತಮ) who appear as a mystic race of olden times coupled with, and conceived probably as related to the Angirases. they are often associated with the Dasagvas (ದಶಗ್ವ) [as printed; the English is not attributed]. The usage of this word occurs in many ṛks of the R̥gveda. We give some examples:"

²⁸ The source adds that the same word navagva is used in many R̥gveda ṛks and in Atharva-veda passages, "Ath. Saṃ. 18-1-36 [?]; 19-2-30 [?]", and that "in the second of these examples [no. 2

"Where the friend [Indra], with his friends the Navagvas, [following] the cows with the brave [?] went after them." 5. "Our fathers the Aṅgirases, the Navagvas, the Atharvans, the Bhṛgus, worthy of soma." 6. "[That aid] by which, O wealthy [dawn], you shone richly on Navagva, Aṅgiras, Daśagva, Saptāśya." The reference numbers were read from small Kannada numerals and are all uncertain.

above], the one called navagva and daśagva, the most distinguished among the Aṅgīrasa ṛṣi-family, is honoured even by the gods — which is worth noting."

- vṛṣāyudhaḥ = vṛṣeṇa secanasamarthena puṁstvayuktena śūreṇa: "with a hero who is capable of showering [virility], i.e. a man of manly strength."
- vadhrayaḥ = napuṁsakāḥ: "eunuchs, the weak, men without strength; cowards."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁹: ayuyutsan — root yudha saṁprahāre; the form is explained as yoddhum icchan, "wishing to fight"; the wishers are the followers of Vṛtra, who are the agents of both iṣ and yudh; the san suffix in the sense of "wishing" comes after a root whose agent is the same as that of the wishing (dhātoḥ karmaṇaḥ samānakartṛkād icchāyām vā — धातोः कर्मणः समानकर्तृकादिच्छायां वा — Pā. 3-1-7, as printed); then yudh + sa, with sanyaṇoḥ — सन्यङोः — Pā. 6-1-9 [?] for the doubling; the page breaks off in the discussion of the doubling.

Kannada prose with sūtras quoted; numerals read at 150 dpi, [?] where not firm.

- ayuyutsan (p. 31, continued): doubling of the root (sanyaṇoḥ [?]), halādiḥ śeṣaḥ trimming the reduplicate; the san ending after a consonant-final root is kit (halantāc ca — हलन्ताच्च — Pā. 1-2-10), so no guṇa of the penultimate (also kn̥iti ca — Pā. 1-1-5); no iṭ augment, as the root is one-vowelled and anudātta (ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt — एकाच उपदेशेऽनुदात्तात् — Pā. 7-2-10); the Saṃgraha-kārikā verse "bandhir yudhi rudhī ..." lists yudh as anudātta. The root is of the 4th class, ātmanepada, and by pūrvavat sanaḥ — पूर्ववत्सनः — Pā. 1-3-62 [?] san would also take ātmanepada so that śānac is expected; but by Vedic vyatyaya parasmaipada comes, then laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau — लटः शत्रुशानचौ — Pā. 3-2-124, whence ayuyutsan.

- senām: inena saha vartate iti senā; tena saheti tulyayoge — तेन सहेति तुल्ययोगे — Pā. 2-2-28 (saha compounded with an instrumental in the sense of simultaneity, a bahuvrīhi); sa for saha by vopasarjanasya — वोपसर्जनस्य — Pā. 6-3-82; first-member accent by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam — Pā. 6-2-1.
- ayātayanta: root yatī prayatne; the causative ṇic by hetumati ca — हेतुमति च — Pā. 3-1-26; hetu defined by tatprayojako hetuś ca — Pā. 1-4-55; lañ, aṭ, upadhā-vṛddhi, ātmanepada, śap, guṇa, jhaḥ → ant, ayādeśa: ayātayanta.
- kṣitayaḥ (p. 31 end – p. 32): root kṣi nivāsagatyoh; the suffix ktic (ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām — क्तिच्क्ताव च संज्ञायाम् — Pā. 3-3-174), kṣiyanti gacchanti = "those who go, or know", men.
- navagvāḥ (p. 32): navabhir māsaiḥ gacchantīti navagvāḥ — "ṛṣis who obtained their fruit in nine months"; root gam with the Uṇādi suffix ḍva (the ḍ-marker explains the loss of am): gv; or an alternative: kvip after gam, loss of the nasal (gamaḥ kvau — गमः क्वौ — Pā. 6-4-40), ūṭ for the verb-root (a vārtika: ūj ca gamādīnām), lengthening to ū before jas; oḥ supi — ओः सुपि — Pā. 6-4-83 gives yaṇ (ū → v): navagvaḥ; the Vedic lengthening gives navagvāḥ.
- vṛṣāyudhaḥ: vṛṣeṇa saha yuddhyati; kvip ca — क्विप् च — Pā. 3-2-76 (kvip after all roots, even without an upapada, in the Veda and in the world, as the Kāśikā shows on sopapadebhyo nirupapadebhyaḥ); Vedic lengthening of the first member by anyeṣām api dṛśyate — अन्येषामपि दृश्यते — Pā. 6-3-137.

- niraṣṭāḥ: root aśū vyāptau, ūdit, so iṭ is optional (svaratisūtisūyatidhūñūdito vā — Pā. 7-2-44); the niṣṭhā suffix in the state-sense (niṣṭhā, Pā. 3-2-102); no iṭ by yasya vibhāṣā — यस्य विभाषा — Pā. 7-2-15; ś → ṣ by vraścabhrasja... — Pā. 8-2-36, ṣṭutva giving aṣṭa; the bahuvrīhi with first-member accent; an alternative derivation with asta from the root as, niḥ + asta; the preverb keeps its accent by gatiṛ anantaraḥ — गतिरनन्तरः — Pā. 6-2-49 [?].
- pravadbhiḥ (p. 33): root vana paṇa sambhaktau after pra; kvip; the nasal lost by gamaḥ kvau — Pā. 6-4-40 (with the vārtika "gamādīnām iti vaktavyam"); n lost; the augment tuk by hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk — ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक् — Pā. 6-1-71: pravat; bhis; first-member accent by gatiḥ kārapapadāt kṛt.
- citayantaḥ: root citī saṃjñāne; causative ñic by hetumati ca — Pā. 3-1-26; guṇa of the penultimate would be expected by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca — पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च — Pā. 7-3-86, but "all rules are optional in the Veda" (sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante); the augment's non-universality (anityam āgamaśāsanam) is also cited; then laṭ, śaṭ, śap, guṇa → ay; the augment num by ugidacāṃ sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ — उगिदचां सर्वनामस्थानेऽधातोः — Pā. 7-1-70; ru and visarga. Translation: "O Indra, you [fought] these followers of Vṛtra, of both kinds — those who weep and those who eat or laugh (jakṣataḥ = eating, or laughing) — at the far side (pāre) of the rajas, the mid-region. The word rajas means the mid-region, since it is said 'the worlds are called rajāṃsi' (Ni. 4-19 [?]). Ayodhayaḥ — you fought; the sense is that you killed them in battle. The dasyu, the destroyer Vṛtra, having brought down from the heavenly world, uccā — loftily, with distinction — avādahaḥ — you burnt up. Having destroyed Vṛtra with his retinue [the next phrase is unclear in my reading], you prāvaḥ — protected excellently — the praise (śamsa, stuti) of the sacrificer who presses the soma (sunvataḥ) and recites hymns (stuvataḥ)."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³⁰: rudataḥ (root rudir aśruvimocane, laṭ, śaṭṛ; śap elided; the participle takes the final-acute by its suffix; the ending of śas is acute by śatur anumo nadyajādī — Pā. 6-1-173 [?]), jakṣataḥ (root jakṣa bhakṣahasana yoh; jakṣityādayaḥ ṣaṭ — जक्षित्यादयः षट् — Pā. 6-1-6, which gives the technical name abhyasta to jakṣ and the five roots that follow; the first syllable is acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ — अभ्यस्तानामादिः — Pā. 6-1-189), sunvataḥ (root ṣuñ abhiṣave; ṣ → s by dhātuvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ — धात्वादेः षः सः — Pā. 6-1-64; śnu after a svādi root by svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ — स्वादिभ्यः श्नुः — Pā. 3-1-73; yaṇ by huśnuvoḥ sārva dhātuke — हुश्नुवोः सार्वधातुके — Pā. 6-4-87), stuvataḥ (root ṣtuñ stutau; ṣ → s; the loss of ṭ by nimittāpāye naimittikasyāpy apāyaḥ; śap elided; uvañ in place of u by aci śnudhātubhruvāṇ yvor iyañuvañau — Pā. 6-4-77).

Pratipadārtha — "he indra — O Indra; tvam — you; rudataḥ — weeping (those who are weeping); jakṣataḥ ca — or laughing; etān — these rākṣasas, followers of Vṛtra; rajasah pāre — at the edge of the mid-region; ayodhayaḥ — you fought; dasyum — (and) the thief Vṛtra; divaḥ ā — bringing him down from the mid-region [= from heaven]; uccā — completely; avādahaḥ — you burned to ashes; (thereafter) sunvataḥ — of the one pressing the soma-juice; stuvataḥ — of the one reciting praises (the sacrificer); śamsam — the praise; pra āvaḥ — you protected well (made it true to its meaning)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Indra, you punish the wicked and protect the good. You pursued the rākṣasas, followers of Vṛtra, whether they were weeping or laughing, and slew them at the very edge of the mid-region. You destroyed Vṛtra, the thief, and made the praise offered by the sacrificer at the sacrifice true to its meaning."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 35)

— "O Indra, you have destroyed them whether weeping or laughing off the other end of the sky ; you have burned the demon (or robber) having dragged him from heaven and have received the praises of him who pressed the Soma juice for you and sang your glories."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 35 — jakṣataḥ = jakṣa bhakṣahasanaṇyoh, bhakṣaṇaṇi hasanaṇi vā kurvantaḥ: "the root jakṣ means to eat or to laugh; therefore jakṣataḥ means those who are eating or those who are laughing." — rajasah pāre: "rajas here is the mid-region (Ni. 4-19 [?]); therefore rajasah pāre means at the end of the mid-region, in the mid-region, at a great height." — uccā: "greatly, especially."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³¹: rudataḥ (root rudir aśruvimocane; laṭ, replaced by śaṭr; śap elided by ādiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ — आदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः — Pā. 2-4-72; the lasārvadhātuka śaṭr is anudātta by tāsyānudāttenñid..., but the accent of the suffix is retained, so rudat is final-acute; śas acute by śatur anumo nadyajādī — शतुरनुमो नद्यजादी — Pā. 6-1-173 [?], under which a stem ending in śaṭr without the augment num, if it is final-acute, makes the following nadī-class or vowel-initial endings acute) — jakṣataḥ (as above; so abhyasta-status and first-syllable acute) — sunvataḥ (ṣuñ; ṣ to s; śnu; u → v) — stuvataḥ (ṣtuñ stutau; iyaṇuvaṇ; same accent as before). Translation: "Those followers of Vṛtra who cakrāṇāsaḥ — making — a parīṇaha of the earth, a covering, an all-round pervasion; hiraṇyena maṇinā — shining with golden jewel-ornaments worn on the neck, arms and so on; hinvānāsaḥ — growing — na titiruh — were unable to overcome Indra as he rose for battle: they were not strong enough to conquer. Then that Indra pari adadhāt — put round, i.e. cut off, hid away — the spaśaḥ, the harassers, the followers of Vṛtra, by means of Sūrya, the Sun. So says a Brāhmaṇa: "The sun, rising in the east, indeed drives away the rākṣasas."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³⁴: cakrāṇāsaḥ (the root kṛ, the Vedic liṭ in the present sense, the participle kānac, āsuk augment [the print's cited sūtras are chandasi liḍ... and ājjaser asuk]; accent on the last syllable by cit), parīṇaham (root ṇaha bandhane with pari, kvip, and the lengthening of the first member by nahivṛtivr̥ṣiviyadhiruci... — Pā. 6-3-116 [as printed]), pṛthivyāḥ (the ending acute by the udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt rule), hinvānāsaḥ (root hi gatau vṛddhau ca, suffix cānaś by tācchīlavayovacanaśaktiṣu cānaś, the plural jas with asuk), titiruh (root tṛ, liṭ third plural us).

Pratipadārtha — "(ye — those followers of Vṛtra who) prthivyāḥ — of the earth; parīṇaham — a covering all round; cakrāṇāsaḥ — making; hiraṇyena — with ornaments of gold; maṇinā — with those set with gems; śumbhamānāḥ — shining; hinvānāsaḥ — flourishing; te — those rākṣasas; indram — Indra; na titiruh — could not conquer; spaśaḥ — those harassing rākṣasas; sūryeṇa — by means of the sun; pari adadhāt — (Indra) scattered and destroyed."

Bhāvārtha

— "The rākṣasas, the followers of Vṛtra, covered all the earth. They shone with ornaments set with gold and gems, and they were increasing. Yet they could not conquer Indra. With the help of the Sun Indra scattered such oppressing rākṣasas."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 38) — "Decorated with gold and jewels they (demons) were spreading over (round) the earth ; but though they were mighty they could not vanquish Indra ; he (Indra) dispersed them (with the light of the Sun) at Sunrise" ³⁵.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayaśaḥ), p. 38 — parīṇaham = ācchādanaṃ sarvato vyāptim: "pervasion, covering. In the Taittirīya Saṃhitā of the Yajurveda (Tai. Saṃ. 6-2-1-1 [?]), in the sentence 'pārīṇahasyaiśe patnyaivānumataṃ nirvapati' [as read from the print; the second word is uncertain], the word pārīṇahya is used in the sense 'vessels used for household work'."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁶: cakrāṇāsaḥ (root (ḍu)kṛñ karaṇe; liṭ shown to be in the present sense by chandasi luṇlanliṭaḥ — छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः — Pā. 3-4-6; kānac for liṭ by liṭaḥ kānajvā — लिटः कानज्वा —

Translation: "O Indra, when you paryabubhojīḥ — enclosed on every side, viśvataḥ sīm, the two rodasī, heaven and earth, with your greatness, and enjoyed them all round — then, with brahmabhiḥ, mantras uttered by those who hold that 'these sacrificers are ours, to be protected' (manyamānaiḥ, 'those who have this conviction'), on behalf of sacrificers who are amanyamānān — mere reciters, unable to reflect on the meaning of the mantras — you nir adhamah — drove out — the dasyu, the robber, the asura Vṛtra and the like. Dhamati is a verb of motion — so says Yāska (Ni. 6-3 [?])."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³⁷: abubhojīḥ (root bhuja pālanābhyavahārayoḥ, lañ, sip; the vikaraṇa elided by ślu by bahulaṃ chandasi, Pā. 2-4-76 [as read]; īṭ augment [Pā. 7-3-97 (?)], aṭ augment, ru, visarga; no total unaccent because the word contains yat), mahinā (= mahimnā: imanic by prthvādibhya imanij vā [Pā. 5-1-122 (?)], ṭi-loss, loss of m — Vedic), amanyamānān (root mana jñāne with śyan, dīrghād aṭi samānapāde and the nasalisation; the nañ-compound keeps the indeclinable's accent).

Pratipadārtha — "indra — O Indra; yat — when (you); ubhe rodasī — both earth and the mid-region [as printed in Kannada; rodasī is elsewhere glossed "heaven and earth"]; mahinā — by your greatness; viśvataḥ sīm — pervading all round; pari abubhojīḥ — you enjoyed all (when); amanyamānān — (not knowing the meaning of the mantras) the sacrificers who merely recite the mantras; abhimanyamānaiḥ — (with the mantras that hold the conviction 'we must protect the sacrificers who are ours'); dasyum — the thief in the form of Vṛtra; niḥ adhamah — you drove out [blew away]."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Indra, you are all-powerful and the protector of those who depend on you. By your greatness you pervade both the earth and the mid-region and you enjoy the lordship of both worlds. Even for sacrificers who do not understand the meaning of the mantras and merely recite them, you were pleased by the mantras that praise them with the thought 'these are ours; we must protect them', and you drove out the robber Vṛtra."

— "Indra, when you surrounded heaven and earth with your greatness simultaneously on all sides, you have blown away the robber (Vritra) being pleased with the prayers of those who know how to worship on behalf of those who do not worship."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 41 — sīm: "Yāska says: sīm iti parigrahārthīyo vā padapūraṇo vā (Ni. 1-7 [?]) — 'sīm is a word of the sense of "taking all round", or a mere filler of the verse'. That is, one uses the word sīm when one wishes to convey the sense of encompassing, or merely to fill out the foot. Here the bhāṣyakāra has given the sense of encompassing."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁸: abubhojīḥ (root bhuja pālanābhyavahārayoḥ "protecting, eating"; lañ, sip; ślu for the vikaraṇa by bahulaṃ chandasi — Pā. 2-4-76, the bahulam extending ślu even to roots outside the juhotyādi class, so that the śnam of this root is elided; doubling by ślau; laghūpadha-guṇa; the īṭ augment bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 7-3-97 [?]]; aṭ; ru, visarga). mahinā (= mahimnā; mahat + imanic by pr̥thvādibhya imanij vā — पृथ्वादिभ्य इमनिज्वा — Pā. 5-1-122; loss of ṭi by ṭeḥ — Pā. 6-4-155; the ṭāp-type ending lowered; alloponaḥ — अल्लोपोऽनः — Pā. 6-4-134, loss of the a of an before a vowel-initial ending; and the Vedic loss of m; the ṭā ending acute through the anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ — Pā. 6-1-161 rule). amanyamānān (root mana jñāne; śyan by divādibhyaḥ śyan — Pā. 3-1-69; sānac by laṭaḥ śaṭṛśānacau; āne muk; accusative plural; n → ru and nasalisation of the preceding vowel by dīrghād aṭi samānapāde and ato 'nunāsikaḥ... Translation: "Those particular waters which did not reach (nāpuḥ) the end, the place, of the earth from the heaven (divaḥ), because they were held back by Vṛtra, who had taken the form of a cloud. For that very reason, since they did not reach the earth, they did not pari-abhūvan — enclose all round — the earth, the dhanadām, giver of wealth, by māyābhiḥ — works helpful to the crops and so on: that is, they did not do the benefit of drinking-water, the increase of the crops, and the like. Then this Indra, for the splitting of the cloud, yujaṃ cakre — took in his own hand — the thunderbolt. Then, with the thunderbolt that shone with light (jyotiṣā), tamasaḥ — from the cloud, which has the nature of darkness — he nir adhukṣat — milked out completely — the gāḥ, the flowing waters: that is, he split the cloud and rained down the water."

Pratipadārtha — "ye — (when Vṛtra, in the form of a cloud, had shut up the mid-region) which streams of water; divaḥ — from the mid-region; pṛthivyāḥ — of the earth; antam — the place; na āpuḥ — did not reach; (and) dhanadām — the wealth-giving earth; māyābhiḥ — by works that cause growth; na paryabhūvan — did not spread and cover [it]; vṛṣabhah — the rain-giver; indraḥ — Indra; vajram — the thunderbolt-weapon; yujam cakre — took up in his hand; (afterwards) jyotiṣā — with the shining thunderbolt; tamasah — from the dark cloud; gāḥ — those streams of water; niḥ adhukṣat — he milked out completely (drove them out)."

— "(O Indra, you are the remover of the people's troubles.) Formerly Vṛtra, in the form of a cloud, shut up the whole mid-region. He stopped all the streams of water that would come to the earth from the mid-region. All the crops that give wealth to people perished. There was no water even to drink. Then you took your thunderbolt in your hand. Its radiance pervaded even the mid-region, and you made the stream of water fall from the dark cloud."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 44) — "When the waters did not descend upon the ends of the earth and did not overspread, with its productions. the wealth-giver (Indra) the showerer, grasped his bolt and with its brightness milked out the waters from the darkness." ⁴³

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 44 — "Formerly Vṛtra, who was in the form of a cloud, held back the rain that was to fall from the heavenly region (the mid-region) on to the earth; as a result there was no water on the earth, and no crops either, and wealth, food and the like did not arise. Therefore Indra, taking up his shining thunderbolt and striking Vṛtra, caused rain to come on the earth: that is the main idea." — māyābhiḥ = sasyopakāribhiḥ karmabhiḥ: "by works that help the crops. The word māyā has many meanings; we have explained them earlier. Here māyābhiḥ means 'by bold deeds' [Kannada sāśahakṛtyagaḷinda]" ⁴⁴. — gāḥ = gamanaśīlāny udakāni: "flowing waters, water."

Translation: "The waters (āpaḥ) of this Indra, having in view svadhām — food, in the form of rice and the like — akṣaran — flowed, having rained down from the cloud. Then this Vṛtra, in the midst of the many waters nāvyaṇām, fit to be crossed by boat, ā avaradhata — grew all round, attained increase; though he was in plenty of water he did not die, but only grew. Then Indra, with hanmanā — his instrument of killing, the thunderbolt, ojiṣṭhena — endowed with the greatest strength — struck that Vṛtra, sadhrīcīnena manasā yuktam — [Vṛtra] who was joined with a mind that accompanies [him], abhi dyūn — having regard to some days [= after some days]; he killed him on those days. The sense is that Vṛtra's mind, though he had fallen into the midst of the water, goes along together with [Indra] wherever Indra stands; recognising such [a mind], he struck him."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁴⁶: akṣaran (root kṣara sañcalane); nāvyānām (nāvā taryāṇām — "to be crossed by boat", with yat by naudvayoḥ dharmaviṣamūlamūlasītātulābhyas taryatulyaprāpyavadhyānāmyasamasamitasamṃmiteṣu — Pā. 4-4-91 [as printed]; av for o by vānto yi pratyaye — Pā. 6-1-79; the accent on the first syllable is excluded for nau by anāvah [Pā. 6-1-213 yato nāvah], and the svārīta ending comes by titsvaritam — Pā. 6-1-185); sadhrīcīnena (saha añcati, sadhryañc; sa for saha → sadhri by sahasya sadhriḥ — Pā. 6-3-95; khaḥ suffix by vibhāṣāñceradikstriyām — Pā. 5-4-8 [?] and its replacement īna by āyaneyīnīyiaḥ phadḥakhachaghām pratyayādīnām — Pā. 7-1-2; the ī acute by the suffix-accent [as the substitute is treated as if taught in the original text, upadeśivadbhāva]); ojiṣṭhena (ojas + vin by asmāyāmedhāsrajo viniḥ — Pā. 5-2-121; then iṣṭhan by atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau — Pā. 5-3-55; loss of vin by vinmator luk — Pā. 5-3-65; loss of ṭi; accent on the first syllable because iṣṭhan is nit); hanmanā (hanyate 'nena; manin by anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante — Pā. 3-2-75, the word dṛśi "also" extending manin, kvanip and vanip to other roots; manin is nit, so the first syllable is acute; na saṃyogād vamañtāt — Pā. 6-4-137 bars the loss of a in the instrumental).

Pratipadārtha — "āpaḥ — water; asya — of Indra; svadhām anu — for the sake of food (rice and the like); akṣaran — flowed; nāvyānām — of streams crossable [only] by boat, i.e. brimful; madhye — in the midst; avardhata — (Vṛtra) grew on all sides; (then) indrah — Indra; sadhrīcīnena — [of the one] who follows with hatred toward Indra himself [as the Kannada reads]; manasā — with the mind; tam — that Vṛtra; ojiṣṭhena — of great strength; hanmanā — with the thunderbolt, the instrument of killing; abhi dyūn — marking [out] some days; ahan — killed."

— "In the sacrifice, for the increase of rice and other grains that please Indra, the currents of the rivers flowed so abundantly that one could cross them only in a boat. Even then Vṛtra grew in the midst of those currents. Then Indra, having noted the mind of the one who sought to harm him, struck down that Vṛtra with his own strong and destructive thunderbolt."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 48)

— "According to his (Indra's) wish the waters flowed to provide food, but the demon (Vritra) grew in strength in the midst of waters so deep as to be navigable. Indra, with his collected wisdom and with his most mighty thunderbolt slew him in the course of time."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 48-49 — svadhām: "Yāska has given two kinds of meaning for the word svadhā, 'water' (Ni. 3-[?]) and 'food' (Ni. 2-[?]); but the bhāṣyakāra has adopted here only the sense 'food'." — akṣaran = kṣara sañcalane: "moving; here the sense is 'flowed as a stream'." — avardhata: "Though Vṛtra was in the midst of the water [in the circle of the cloud], he did not die; on the contrary he grew more and more and attained prosperity — such is the sense." — nāvyānām = nāvā tāryāṇām: "[streams] which can be crossed only by boat or dug-out; i.e. in the midst of water so abundant." — sadhrīcīnena = saha gacchatā manasā | samastena buddhi-cāturyeṇa: "with the one-pointedness of mind, i.e. with a mind steadied and fixed on that [object], with a mind fixed on the destruction of Vṛtra only — in the print's English: 'with his collected wisdom &c.'. The bhāṣyakāra adds the word yuktam to this word and uses it as an attribute of Vṛtra; this is not quite harmonious. We give as examples some ṛks in which the word is used:"

ojiṣṭhena = ojo 'syāstīty ojasvī: "one endowed with great strength." — hanmanā = hananasāadhanena vajreṇa: "by the thunderbolt, the instrument of killing." — abhi dyūn: "looking out for some days, awaiting the time, and so on — such meanings may be given."

47. The source leaves these five half-verses untranslated and ends the list "ityādi" — "and so on". My glosses, editorial and tentative: 1. "with a concordant mind, ... he makes him a friend in the battles"; 2. "with us, O Indra, with [your] friends, ... in concord, sit down and rejoice"; 3. "for you two have made a good name ..., and you are slayers of Vṛtra, in concord"; 4. [too uncertain to gloss]; 5. "the two in concord, to go, ... as on a fine day ... you drive on". All five references are read from small Kannada numerals and are uncertain; several words in nos. 3–5 are also uncertain.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁸: nāvyānām (nāvā tāryāḥ nāvyaḥ teṣām, "fit to be crossed by a boat"; the yat rule naudvayoḥ dharmaviṣamūlamūlasītātulābhyas tāryatulyaprāpyavadhyaṇāmyasamasamitasamṁmiteṣu — Pā. 4-4-91 — is explained: after a word in the instrumental that is the base of nau, yat comes in the sense "which can be crossed"; the page also explains the items dharma, viṣa, mūla, mūlya, sītā, tulā with their senses — prāpya, vadhya, ānāmya, sama, samita, saṁmita — as "wages (mūlya), a plough-furrow (sītā) — that which agrees with it, the right size", and so on; nau + ya, vānto yi pratyaye — वान्तो यि प्रत्यये — Pā. 6-1-79 gives āv; yato nāvah — यतो नावः — Pā. 6-1-213; the first syllable is acute if the yat word is not after nau; here it is a nañ-exclusion (paryudāsa), so no first-syllable acute, and titsvaritam — तित्स्वरितम् — Pā. 6-1-185 gives a svarita).

sadhrīcīnena (saha añcati = sadhryañc; ṛtvigdadhṛk... — the kvin suffix when a sup-ending is the upapada of añcu; sahasya sadhriḥ — सहस्य सध्रिः — Pā. 6-3-95; the yañ; loss of the n of añc by anidito hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti — अनिदितां हल उपधायाः क्ङिति — Pā. 6-4-24; vibhāṣāñceradikstriyām — विभाषाञ्चेरदिक्स्त्रियाम् — Pā. 5-4-8 [as printed] — the suffix kha optionally, in the self-sense, after a stem ending in añc that is not a direction-word or feminine; īna in place of kha by āyaneyīnīyiyāḥ phaḍhakhachaghām pratyayādīnām — Pā. 7-1-2; acaḥ — अचः — Pā. 6-4-138: loss of the a of the bha-stem after the loss of the nasal; cau — चौ — Pā. 6-3-138: lengthening of the preceding vowel of añc when it ends in c; giving sadhrīcīna; the ī is acute by the suffix-accent because, as the print says, the substitute counts as if taught in the original text; and "anudāttaṁ padam ekavarjam" would otherwise apply). ojiṣṭhena (ojas is an as-final stem meaning "strength"; asmāyāmedhāsrajo viniḥ — अस्मायामेधास्रजो विनिः — Pā. 5-2-121; atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau — अतिशायने तमबिष्ठनौ — Pā. 5-3-55; vinmator luk — विन्मतोर्लुक् — Pā. 5-3-65, loss of vin before iṣṭhan, īyasun; ṭeḥ

48. pp. 49–50, grammar pages — noted briefly

— ढे: — Pā. 6-4-155, loss of the ṭi of the bha-stem, so as is lost; oj + iṣṭha, iṣṭhan being nit, the first syllable is acute by ñnityādir nityam — ञ्नित्यादिर्नित्यम् — Pā. 6-1-197). hanmanā (root han himsāgatyoh; hanyate 'nena iti hanma; anyebhyo 'pi drśyante — अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यन्ते — Pā. 3-2-75, whose drśi "also seen" extends manin, kvanip, vanip and vic to other roots; manin is nit, so the first syllable is acute; the instrumental ṭā; han + ma + ā; na saṃyogād vamanāt — न संयोगाद्धमन्तात् — Pā. 6-4-137: a stem ending in m or v preceded by a conjunct does not lose its a — vakārānta... the page breaks off here).

hanmanā (concluded): the page goes on — "...or [the rule] that the a of a stem ending in m (or v) after a conjunct is not elided before a vowel-initial ending; so the loss of the a by alloponaḥ — अल्लोपोऽनः — Pā. 6-4-134 does not occur." Rik 11 ends here (| | 11 | |).

Bhāvārtha

— "Lying in the burrows of the deep earth, Vṛtra, hard to master, had held back the waters (the cloud-mass); Indra pierced it and made the water flow. He destroyed Vṛtra's powerful armies. (As Vṛtra lay in the deep caverns of the earth the currents of water there were held back; then Indra struck him well and made the water flow freely.) O Indra, you who ... Vṛtra, who dries up the whole world, who is possessed of brilliance and has sharp weapons like the horns of animals — you called him forth to battle and slew him, displaying your whole speed and strength, with the thunderbolt."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 53) — "Indra set free the waters obstructed by Vritra, when sleeping in the caverns of the earth and slew the horned dryer up of the world. O Maghavan, you with equal swiftness and strength, killed the enemy defying you in bittle [sic: the print has a dotless ı] with your thunderbolt."

Translation: "This Indra's sidhmaḥ — effective, accomplishing — thunderbolt ajigāt — went [and struck] — śatrūn abhi — aiming at the enemies, Indra's foes. Jigāti is a verb of motion, because gāti, jigāti are read among the verbs of motion. And that Indra, with the tigmena, sharp, vṛṣabheṇa, excellent weapon, that thunderbolt, puraḥ vi abhet — broke up variously the cities of Vṛtra. Then that Indra sam asṛjat — joined — Vṛtra with his own vajra: having joined [them], śāśadānaḥ — destroying Vṛtra — he pra atirat — increased greatly — his own mind, his intelligence now full of joy."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁵⁶: sidhmaḥ (root ṣidhu saṃrāddhau; the Uṇādi suffix mak; kit-ness, so no guṇa; suffix accent); ājigāt (root gā stutau, here in the sense of motion; the juhotyādi ślu; doubling; shortening and i for the reduplicate by bahulaṃ chandasī); tigmena (the Uṇādi sūtra yujirucitijām kuś ca [Uṇ. 1-[?]], suffix mak, kutva); vṛṣabheṇa (the Uṇādi sūtra ṛṣivṛṣibhyām kit [Uṇ. 3-103 [?]], suffix abhac); abhet (root bhidir vidāraṇe; śnam expected but by vyatyaya śap, then elided by bahulaṃ chandasī; with guṇa of the penultimate, loss of the t's ending per halṇyābbhyaḥ; or the cli is dropped in the luṇ); ātirat (root tira "to increase" with pra; or root tṛ with śa by vyatyaya; the ī-form [?]); śāśadānaḥ (root śadḷ śātane, the suffix cānac after a root in the yaja-class; the Vedic double-form chandasy ubhayathā makes it ārdhadhātuka, so the loss of a and of y; as sārvadhātuka, the first syllable is acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ).

Pratipadārtha — "asya — of this Indra; sidhmaḥ — the thunderbolt, which accomplishes the work; śatrūn abhi — taking aim at the enemies; ajigāt — went and struck; saḥ indraḥ — that Indra; tigmena — with the sharp (and); vṛṣabheṇa — excellent thunderbolt-weapon; apuraḥ — Vṛtra's cities; vi abhet — broke to pieces; vajreṇa — with the thunderbolt-weapon; vṛtram — Vṛtra; sam asṛjat — joined (struck); śāśadānaḥ — thus destroying (killing) Vṛtra; svām matim — his own intelligence, endowed with joy; pra atirat — made to grow (that is, became glad)."

— "Indra's thunderbolt is exceedingly sharp, and excellent. For the destruction of enemies this alone is Indra's chief means; by using it he destroyed all enemies. By it he demolished all the cities of Vṛtra. He used it on Vṛtra, struck him and destroyed him. From the joy thus arising he gained self-satisfaction."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 57)

— "The weapon of Indra fell upon his adversaries; with his sharp and excellent bolt he destroyed their cities ; he then getting his thunderbolt slew him and was pleased with his success."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 57–58 - sidhmaḥ = ṣidhu saṃrāddhau | sādhakaḥ: "effective; serving as the means, in war, of destroying the enemies." - ājigāt = gataṅ | jigātir gatikarmā | gāti jigātīti gatikarmasu pāṭhāt: "here ājigāt means 'went', 'struck' and the like. It is stated [in the list] that the root jigāti can have the sense of motion." - tigmena = tīkṣṇena | tigmaṃ tejater utsāhakarmanah (Ni. 10-[?]): "bright; Yāska has given the sense of tigma as 'shining' or 'full of enthusiasm'. And since tigma is read among the eighteen names of the thunderbolt beginning with nemi (Ni. 2-11 [?]), tigma means thunderbolt." The source cites a ṛk:

आषाळ्हाय सहमानाय वेधसे तिग्मायुधाय भरता शृणोतु नः ॥ (ऋ. सं. ६-४६-१ [?])

āṣāḷhāya sahamānāya vedhase tigmāyudhāya bharatā śṛṇotu naḥ
|| (ṛ. saṃ. 6-46-1 [?])

"In this ṛk tigma indicates 'the thunderbolt weapon that glitters' (Ni. 10-[?]). In the ṛk now at hand there is the separate word vajreṇa, so tigma is given the sense 'thunderbolt' [this sentence of the print is as read]. The bhāṣyakāra gives the sense 'shining, sharp' and uses it as an attribute of the word vajreṇa."⁵⁷ - vṛṣabheṇa = śreṣṭhena: "Yāska says of vṛṣabha: 'vṛṣabhaḥ prajāṃ varṣatīti vātibṛhatīreta iti vā tad vṛṣakarmā varṣaṇād vṛṣabhaḥ' (Ni. [?]) — "the vṛṣabha rains on the creatures, or [since these great ones go forth], a bull is named from showering" — thus giving the sense of rain-causing; but here the bhāṣyakāra gives the sense used in modern Sanskrit, 'best'."⁵⁸ - purah = vṛtrasya purāṇi: "Vṛtra's cities." - vajreṇa sam asṛjat: "he used the thunderbolt and struck — such is the sense." - matim pra atirat: "increased his intellect especially; that is, he rejoiced.

57. The source leaves the ṛk untranslated; editorial and tentative:
"Bring [praise] to him who is victorious, who overpowers, the ordainer, with the sharp weapon — let him hear us".

58. Translation of the Nirukta quotation editorial and tentative; the Sanskrit is as read.

Because he destroyed the enemy, Indra's mind was delighted — such is the sense." - śāsādānaḥ = śadḷ śātane | vṛtraṃ himsan: "one who injures or destroys Vṛtra."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵⁹: sidhmaḥ (śidhu saṃrāddhau, a divādi root; the Uṇādi suffix mak; ṣ → s; no laghūpadha-guṇa since the suffix is kit; the suffix accent). ājigāt (root gā stutau, which is listed in the juhotyādi group in the sense of praise, but since roots have several senses it here conveys "going"; lañ, tip, loss of the i, śap, ślu by juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ — जुहोत्यादिभ्यः श्लुः — Pā. 2-4-75; doubling by ślau — Pā. 6-1-10; shortening of the reduplicate by hrasvaḥ, g → j by kuhoś cuḥ; and the rule bhṛñāmit — भृजामित् — Pā. 7-4-76 [as printed], which the print says is extended by bahulaṃ chandasi — Pā. 7-4-78 — to give the reduplicate i; the augment aṭ: ājigāt).

Rik 13 — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā, continued and concluded (pp. 59–60, PDF 73–74; grammar pages, noted briefly)

- tigmena (p. 59): yujirucitijām kuś ca — युजिरुचितिजां कुश्च — [Uṇ. 1-[?]]: roots yujir yoge, ruca dīptau, tija niśāne take the Uṇādi suffix mak and the k-class letter akin to their final becomes the substitute: tij + mak, j → g (the third of its class); kit, so no guṇa: tigma; instrumental singular.
- vṛṣabheṇa: ṛṣivṛṣibhyām kit — ऋषिवृषिभ्यां कित् — [Uṇ. 3-[?]]: roots ṛṣī gatau, vṛṣa secane take abhac, which is kit; so no laghūpadha-guṇa.
- abhet: root bhidir vidāraṇe, of the rudhādi class, which properly takes śnam; here śap comes by vyatyaya; lañ, tip, loss of i; śap elided; the augment aṭ; abhid + t; laghūpadha-guṇa; loss of t by halṇyābbhyo dīrghāt sutisyapṛktaṃ hal — Pā. 6-1-68; the d made t (cartva): abhet. "This is valid only in the Veda; in the world it is abhinat." A second way: the same root, luṇ, cli, Vedicly dropped (luk), guṇa, giving abhet. The print notes that in the first account both śap by vyatyaya and Vedic luk must be assumed, whereas in the second only luk, and that the Veda-bhāṣya gives a further explanation after "yadvā".

- ātirat: root tira vrddhau, which is not in the present Dhātupāṭha; but, since the bhvādi class is an ākṛtigaṇa, as is the tudādi, it may be added there; then laṇ, tip, śa-suffix, aṭ, no guṇa. The print notes that the tudādi being an ākṛtigaṇa is not accepted by everyone, so the Veda-bhāṣya gives another way: root tvā plavanataraṇayoḥ (bhvādi), laṇ, tip, loss of i, aṭ, śap in place of... by vyatyaya; ā + tr + at; ṛta id dhātoḥ — ऋत इद्धातोः — Pā. 7-1-100: i for the r of a root, with raparatva: atirat.
- śāśadānaḥ (p. 60): root śad śātane, tudādi; yaṇ by dhātor ekāco halādeḥ kriyāsamabhihāre yaṇ; doubling by sanyaṇoḥ — Pā. 6-1-9; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; lengthening of the reduplicate by dirgho 'kitaḥ — दीर्घोऽकितः — Pā. 7-4-83; śāśad + ya; laṭ, śānac by laṭaḥ śaṭṛśānacau; chandasy ubhayathā — छन्दस्युभयथा — Pā. 6-4-117, by which a suffix taught in the dhātu-section is both sārvadhātuka and ārdhadhātuka in the Veda, so it is ārdhadhātuka here; loss of ya by yasya halaḥ — यस्य हलः — Pā. 6-4-49, applying to the first letter by ādeḥ parasya — आदेः परस्य — Pā. 1-1-54; then loss of a by ato lopaḥ — Pā. 6-4-48; no śap, as it is ārdhadhātuka; it is also sārvadhātuka, so abhyastānām ādiḥ — Pā. 6-1-189 gives the first syllable of śāśad- the acute. Translation: "O Indra, you āvaḥ — protected — the ṛṣi named Kutsa, the founder of a gotra: in whom you [are] cākan, desiring praise: so the connection with the preceding is 'Kutsa'. Likewise you prāvaḥ — protected excellently — the ṛṣi named Daśadyu, shining in the ten directions. What was he like? Yudhyantaṃ — fighting with his own enemies; vṛṣabhaṃ — excellent in qualities. Śaphacyutaḥ — the dust (reṇuḥ) that has fallen from the hoofs of your horse nakṣata — reaches — dyām, the heavenly world. Śvaitreyaḥ — the son of the woman named Śvitṛī, who formerly, plunged in water from fear of enemies, by your favour ut tasthau — rose out of the water — nṛsahyāya — to be supported by men."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁶³: cākan (root caka tr̥ptau with the causative ṇic, treated as ārdhadhātuka by chandasy ubhayathā, so that the ṇi is lost and śap appears as a substitute; the accent on the last syllable by the suffix; or alternatively root kamu kāntau, luṇ, caṇ, with the Vedic absence of the num augment, lengthening of the reduplicate, and loss of s); yudhyantaṃ (a vyatyaya of voice:

63. p. 61, characterized; the print is crowded and the small numerals were not pursued parasmaipada for ātmanepada); daśadyum (root divu, kvip by sampadādi, "he who has brilliance in the ten directions", with Vedic shortening); nakṣata (root nakṣa gatau, vyatyaya of voice); śvaitreyaḥ (strībhyo dhak — स्त्रीभ्यो ढक् — Pā. 4-1-120); nṛsahyāya (śakisahoś ca — शकिसहोश्च — Pā. 3-1-99, yat in the object sense; the yato nāvaḥ initial-acute rule; a compound with the accent of the last member of a kṛt-compound; ṣatva by pūrvapadāt — Pā. 8-3-106; lengthening, which is Vedic, in the Saṃhitā).

Pratipadārtha — "indra — O Indra; yasmin — in which ṛṣi, Kutsa; cākan — (to hear the hymns) you who are pleased; kutsam — Kutsa; āvaḥ — [you] protected; yudhyantam — who was fighting with enemies; vṛṣabham — endowed with the best qualities; daśadyum — the ṛṣi named Daśadyu; prāvaḥ — [you] protected well; śaphacyutaḥ — (your horse's) thrown up by hoofs; reṇuḥ — dust; dyām — the mid-region; nakṣata — touches; (in water, immersed from fear of enemies) śvaitreyaḥ — the son of [the woman] Śvitrī (by your favour); nṛsahyāya — in order to be lifted by men, with respect; ut tasthau — rose up from the water."

— "O Indra, you protect all who depend on you. You protected Kutsa, skilled in praise, being pleased with his praise, with kindly regard. You protected Daśadyu, endowed with the best qualities, who was engaged in battle with enemies. The dust raised by the hooves of your horses spreads even through the mid-region. The son of Śvitrī, who had plunged into the water out of fear of enemies, by your help rose up without fear. He was honoured by men."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 62)

— "O Indra, you have protected Kutsa grateful for his praises; you have defended the excellent Dasadyu engaged in battle ; the dust of your horses' hoofs ascended to heaven ; the Son of Swithra through your favour rose up (from the waters) to be again borne by men."

— "Kutsa is a well-known ṛṣi and the progenitor of the gotra named Kutsa. In many places in the Ṛgveda it is said that this ṛṣi was a chief friend of Indra. This ṛṣi is the seer of the sūktas 94–98 [?] of the first maṇḍala of the Ṛgveda and of the ṛks 45–58 [?] of the ninth maṇḍala's 97th [?] sūkta, in all 23 [?] ṛks. In the Ṛgveda there is, in:"

kutsā ete haryaśvāya śūṣam indre saho devajūtam iyānāḥ || (ṛ. saṃ. 7-19-8 [?])

"an account of the descendants of the ṛṣi Kutsa. We have not learned much more about this ṛṣi from the Ṛgveda. But in the Ṛgveda, in:"

आहं कुत्समार्जुनियं न्यूज्जेऽहं कविरुशना पश्य मा ॥ (ऋ. सं. ४-२६-१ [?]) त्वं ह त्यदिन्द्र

"in these ṛks Kutsa is called Ārjuneya, 'son of Arjuna'. But the Anukramaṇikā, naming the ṛṣi of the sūktas mentioned above, says 'Kutsa Āṅgīrasa', i.e. Kutsa the son of the ṛṣi Āṅgīras. Probably Kutsa Āṅgīrasa means that Arjuna was a descendant of the ṛṣi Āṅgīras. And:"

"in this ṛk it is said that Kutsa had Vetasu, Tugra and Smadibha defeated in battle." And, the source continues, in the following ṛks: ⁶⁴

1. tvam āvitha suśravasaṃ tavotibhis tava trāmabhir indra tūrvayāṇam | tvam asmai kutsam atithigvam āyūṃ mahe rājñe yūne arandhanāyaḥ [?] || (ṛ. saṃ. 1-53-10 [?]) (2) kutsasyāyor atithigvasya vīrān ny āvṛṇag bharatā somam asmai || (ṛ. saṃ. 2-14-7 [?]) (3) ya āyūṃ kutsam atithigvam ardayo vāvṛdhāno dive-dive || (ṛ. saṃ. 8-53-2 [?])

"Indra is said in these ṛks to have defeated the kings Kutsa, Atithigva and Āyu, and to have subdued and protected the kings Suśravas and Tūrvayāṇa. Therefore the Kutsa spoken of here may be the name of a king; this king and the ṛṣi Kutsa mentioned above have no connection with each other and must be said to be two different persons. And:"

"in these ṛks Indra is praised for having protected Kutsa by fighting the asura Śuṣṇa as well." ⁶⁵

cākan = caka tṛptau | stutiṃ kāmāyamānaḥ: "eager to hear hymns."

daśadyum = daśasu dikṣu dīpyamānam etannāmakam ṛṣim: "the bhāṣyakāra explains this word as 'the ṛṣi named Daśadyu, shining in the ten directions with brilliance'. Apart from this ṛk the word occurs in the Ṛgveda only in:"

| त्वं रथं प्र भरो योधमृष्वमावो युध्यन्तं वृषभं दशद्युम् ॥ (ऋ. सं. ६-२६-४ [?])

tvaṃ rathaṃ pra bharo yodham ṛṣvam āvo yudhyantaṃ vṛṣabhaṃ
daśadyum || (ṛ. saṃ. 6-26-4 [?])

"There too is the praise of Indra, 'you protected this ṛṣi'. Nothing special about this ṛṣi has been learned."

śvaitreyaḥ

— "This word, outside this ṛk, occurs in the Ṛgveda only in:"

| आ श्वेत्रेयस्य जन्तवो द्युमद्वर्धन्त कृष्टयः [?] ॥ (ऋ. सं. ५-१९-३ [?])

ā śvaitreyasya jantavo dyumad vardhanta kṛṣṭayaḥ [?] || (ṛ. saṃ. 5-19-3 [?])

"Śvaitreyaḥ means śvitṛākhyāyā yoṣitaḥ putraḥ — 'the son of the woman named Śvitṛī', says the bhāṣyakāra. In the ṛk quoted above, tvaṃ rathaṃ pra bharo yodham ṛṣvam āvo yudhyantaṃ vṛṣabhaṃ daśadyum (6-26-4), a pāda is exactly the same as in this ṛk, āvo yudhyantaṃ vṛṣabhaṃ daśadyum, without any difference; so Western scholars such as Ludwig [name in the print's Latin letters] and others take this Śvaitreya and Daśadyu to be the same person: in one ṛk the name Śvaitreya is mentioned, in the other it is not, but both names refer to one person. These two ṛks have different ṛsis — one Hiranyastūpa Āṅgīrasa, the other Bharadvāja Bārhaspatya — of different gotras; yet the pāda āvo yudhyantaṃ vṛṣabhaṃ daśadyum is exactly the same. So there is a difference of opinion on whether the names Śvaitreya and Dyumat [as printed] in the present ṛk belong to one person or to two different persons. The word śvitrya or śvaitreya occurs also in the following ṛk. It is the belief that this Śvaitreya formerly sank in the water for fear of enemies, and that Indra drove off his fear and helped him to rise out of the water."

nṛṣāhyāya = nṛbhiḥ puruṣaiḥ soḍhavyāya: "to be lifted by men, i.e. the men who came to help him lifted him, who was sunk in the water, out of it — such is the sense."

Kannada prose with sūtras quoted; numerals read at 150 dpi, [?] where not firm.

- cākan (p. 65): root caki ṭṛptau, 1st class (the root is restated in the ghaṭādi list for the sake of marking it mit); the causative ṇic, upadhā-vṛddhi, laṭ, śatr; by chandasy

ubhayathā — छन्दस्युभयथा — Pā. 6-4-117 [as printed] the śatṛ counts also as ārdhadhātuka, so the ṇi is lost by ṇer aniṭi — णेरनिटि — Pā. 6-4-51, and, since it is not sārvadhātuka here, there is no śap by kartari śap; śatṛ is acute by ādyudāttaś ca; after cākat comes su, with the augment num by ugidacāṃ..., loss of su by halṇyābhyah..., loss of t by saṃyogāntasya lopah, which by pūrvatrāsiddham is "unseen", so nalopah prātipadikāntasya does not apply. Taken as a kṛdanta the sentence needs the verb vartase supplied — "in Kutsa you are cākan, delighted" — but the sense "desiring praise" is not yielded; hence the form is also derived as a tiṇanta: root kamu kāntau ("to wish"), yaṇ, loss of yaṇ by yaṇo 'ci ca [Pā. 2-4-74 [?]], doubling by sanyaṇoḥ — kam-kam; the augment nuk by nugato 'nunāsikāntasya — Pā. 7-4-85 [?], which the Veda does not apply here; lengthening of the reduplicate by dirgho 'kitaḥ — Pā. 7-4-83; k → c by kuhoś cuḥ — Pā. 7-4-62; loss of the s of sic; m → n by mo no dhātoḥ — मो नो धातोः — Pā. 8-2-64: cākan.

- yudhyantam: root yudha saṃprahāre, 4th class, śyan, whose ś and y... the n of śap... [the print: "its n and ś vanish as it-letters; the suffix śatṛ comes"]; the parasmaipada appears because the rule "anudāttetaś ca lakṣaṇam ātmanepadam anityam" does not hold here; root-accent.
- daśadyum: the root div, which has many meanings, is taken here in the sense of light; kvip in the sampadādi sense; cchvoḥ śūḍ anunāsike ca — च्छ्वोः शूडनुनासिकेच — Pā. 6-4-19 gives ūṭh: dyuḥ; Vedic shortening. Dyuḥ is listed among the words for "day" in the Nirukta (Ni. 1-9 [?]), hence it means light; the bahuvrīhi daśasu dikṣu dyuḥ yasya gives the first-member accent.

- śaphacyutaḥ: śaphena cyutaḥ, an instrumental compound; first-member accent by ṭṭīyā karmaṇi — तृतीया कर्मणि — Pā. 6-2-48. nakṣata: the root nakṣa gatau used in the ātmanepada. śvaitreyaḥ: śvitṛyāḥ apatyam — "son of Śvitṛī" — by strībhyo dhak — Pā. 4-1-120; ādi-vṛddhi and eya substitution. nṛsahyāya: root saha marṣaṇe; yat in the object sense by śakisahoś ca — Pā. 3-1-99; initial acute by yato 'nāvaḥ — Pā. 6-1-213; because the word is a compound member the kṛt-suffix is the later member and the accent is the natural one (prakṛtisvara); ṣatva by pūrvapadāt — Pā. 8-3-106; lengthening in the Saṃhitā, Vedic. Translation: "O Maghavan, wealthy Indra, you āvaḥ — protected — śvitryam, the son of Śvitṛā, the man mentioned before. For what purpose? Kṣetrajeṣe — to gain the field (land), at the time of battle with enemies. What sort of man? Śamam — [one who], giving up the confusion of mind [by your (?) ...], is calm; vṛṣabham — pre-eminent in qualities; tugryāsu gām — gone, i.e. sunk, in the waters (tugryā being read among the names of water). Jyok cit — for a long time even — [those who] having stood here in battle against us akran — made [enmity]: of those śātrūyatām — who wish us to be their enemies — you akaḥ, cause (kuru), adharā vedanā — lowly [i.e. grievous] pains."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁶⁷: tugryāsu (tugra means the mid-region; tatra bhavaḥ by tugrād ghan [Pā. 4-4-110 (?)], then iya in place of gh, with the Vedic loss of i; nit, so first-syllable acute); kṣetrajeṣe (root jeṣṛ [with neṣṛ, eṣṛ, preṣṛ] gatau, kvip; the compound kṣetrajeṭ; accent of the end of the compound by antodāttād uttarapadād anyatarasyām anityasamāse — Pā. 6-1-223 [as printed]); śvitryam (śvitṛāyām bhavaḥ, yat by bhave chandasi; initial acute by yato 'nāvaḥ); tasthivāṃsaḥ (root ṣṭhā, kvasu, the augment iṭ by vasvekājādghasām); akran (root kṛ, luṇ, loss of cli by mantrē ghasahvaraṇaśavṛhadahādvṛcakrugamijanibhyo leḥ); śātrūyatām (śātrūn ātmana icchanti, kyac by supa ātmanaḥ kyac, then śātr; the word would be unaccented, but the single-substitute accent makes it acute; the acute is not within the scope of pūrvatrāsiddham [Pā. 8-2-1], so the śātr-ending word is final-acute, as taught by śatur anumō nadyajādī); adharā, vedanā (loss of śi by śeś chandasi bahulam); akaḥ (root kṛ, luṇ, loss of cli, guṇa).

67. p. 67, characterized

Pratipadārtha — "maghavan — O Indra; tugryāsu gām — [of him who was] immersed in water; śamam — [one who] has obtained peace of mind (freed from agitation by protection); vṛṣabham — endowed with the best qualities; śvitryam — the son of Śvitṛī; kṣetrajeṣe — in order to win (his) kingdom; āvaḥ — [you] protected; atra — (with us) in battle; jyok cit — for a long time; tasthivāṃsaḥ — having stood; akran — [those who] fostered (enmity); śatrūyatām — to those who regarded us as enemies; tvam — you; adharā vedanā — lowly pains (unbearable pain); akaḥ — cause."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Indra, though he was immersed in the water from fear of enemies, the son of Śvitṛī, by your favour, rose up, put away his anxiety and found peace of mind. To win back his kingdom you protected him, who is endowed with good qualities. [Likewise] inflict unbearable pain on those who have for so long fostered hostility against us."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 68) — "Maghavan, you have protected the excellent son of Switra, when fighting for the sake of land and encouraged by you when immersed in water ; inflict sharp pains on those with hostile minds who have long stood (in enmity) against us" ⁶⁸.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), pp. 68–69 - śvitryam = śvitṛyāḥ putram: "Śvitṛī's son. The two words śvaitreya and śvitrya both indicate the sense 'the son of Śvitṛī'." - tugryāsu = jaleṣu: "since tugryā is read among the hundred names of water beginning aṛṇaḥ, kṣodaḥ (Nī. 1-12 [?]), tugryā means water, jala. As with words like āpaḥ, which indicate water in general, the word tugryā is used here in the plural." - kṣetrajeṣe = jeṣa neṣa eṣa preṣa gatau | kṣetrārthaṃ yad yuddhaṃ tasmin: "in the war made for the sake of kṣetra, land; the sense is: in the war made

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁶⁹: tugryāsu (the word tugra has the sense "mid-region"; after it, in the sense tatra bhavaḥ, the suffix ghan by tugrād ghan — तुग्राद्धन् — Pā. 4-4-110 [as printed 4-4-1[?]]; the n of ghan is dropped and gh becomes iya by āyaneyīnīyiaḥ phadḥkakhachaghām pratyayādīnām — Pā. 7-1-2, which would give tugriya; by the Vedic loss of i the form tugrya results; tāp gives tugryā; the n of ghan is an it, so the word is nit and thus first-syllable acute). kṣetrajeṣe (in the Dhātupāṭha the root jeṣr is read in the sense of motion; kvip in the sampadādi sense gives jeṭ; kṣetrasya jeṭ = kṣetrajeṭ; its fourth-case form kṣetrajeṣe is final-acute by antodāttād uttarapadād anyatarasyām anityasamāse — अन्तोदात्तादुत्तरपदादन्यतरस्यामनित्यसमासे — Pā. 6-1-223, since a one-syllabled word at the end of a compound is final-acute in the instrumental case). śvitryam (after śvitrā, in the sense śvitrāyām bhavam, yat by bhave chandasi — भवे छन्दसि — Pā. 4-4-110; first-syllable acute by yato 'nāvaḥ — Pā. 6-1-213, for a two-syllable word ending in yat). tasthivāṃsaḥ (the root ṣṭhā gatinivṛtau; tiṣṭha in place of ṣṭhā by pāghrādhmāsthāmnādāṇḍrśyartisartisādasadām pibajighradhamatiṣṭhamanayacchapaśyarcchadhauśīyasīdāḥ — Pā. 7-3-78; the suffix kvasu in the sense of the liṭ participle; the augment iṭ by vasvekājādghasām — वस्वेकाजाद्धसाम् — Pā. 7-2-67; thus tasthi; then sup, tasthivas, and the plural tasthivāṃsaḥ). akran (ḍu kṛñ karaṇe, the ḍ an it; luṇ in the past sense, whence the

The word should be unaccented, but the single-substitute (ekādeśa) accent makes it acute; and, as the print notes, this acute-rule is not within the asiddha provision of pūrvatrāsiddham — Pā. 8-2-1 — so a śatṛ-ending word is final-acute; the sūtra śatur anumō nadyajādī — शतुरनुमो नद्यजादी — Pā. 6-1-173 teaches this). adharā-vedanā (in both words the loss of śi is by śeś chandasi bahulam — Pā. 6-1-70). akaḥ (root kṛ, luṇ in the past sense; the elision of cli by mantre ghasahvaraṇa... — Pā. 2-4-80; then guṇa of the ṛ). Close of Sūkta 33

The sūkta has 15 Riks (printed pp. 2–70; PDF 16–84), as the heading on p. 2 states ("ṛks 1–15"). No closing note ("illige ... sūktavu samāptavu") is printed at the end of p. 70, only a small ornament; Sūkta 34 begins on printed p. 71 (PDF 85), with om and the heading "the thirty-fourth sūkta" (mūvatta-nālkaneya sūktavu), in agreement with the table of contents above. The varga numerals in the small page headers (read as "Varga 1" on the opening pages of the sūkta, and "Varga 2"/"Varga 3" on later pages) were not recorded page by page, and no varga-end note was seen in these pages; this is flagged for later reconciliation in the manner of Volumes 1–3.

Summary of the sūkta (from the Bhāvārthas):

Rik 1 — the gods, whose cows the demon Paṇi has taken, resolve to go to Indra; Rik 2 — a worshipper hastens to Indra as a hawk to its nest; Rik 3 — Indra, in armour, drives the cows to the gods' homes and is asked not to bargain like a trader; Riks 4–9 —

Indra's victory, alone and in the presence of the Maruts, over Vṛtra and his followers (Sanakas and others), who fled before him; Riks 10–12 — Indra splits the cloud and releases the waters held by Vṛtra; Riks 13–15 — Indra's thunderbolt, and his protection of Kutsa, Daśadyu and Śvaitreya (the son of Śvitṛī), with a prayer that he afflict those who are hostile to the singers.

Translation: "The fourth sūkta, trīś cin no adya, has twelve ṛks. By the rule 'and the ṛṣi [is the same] as the other' (the reading of the last words of this rule is uncertain) the ṛṣi is Hiraṇyastūpa Āṅgīrasa. The deity is the Aśvins. The ninth ṛk, kva trī cakrā, and the twelfth, ā no aśvinā, are Triṣṭup; the remaining [ṛks], by the rule 'what is left [takes the metre] up to the Triṣṭup', are Jagatī. [So] the Anukramaṇikā: 'trīś cid [has] twelve, [and is] Aśvin; at the end of the ninth [and the twelfth] two Triṣṭups.' In the prātaranuvāka, in the Aśvina rite, this sūkta [serves] for the Jagatī metre. It is so stated in the section beginning 'athāśvine' [of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra]: 'trīś cin no adyeḷi dyāvāprthivī — [these] are in Jagatī' (Āś. 4-13 [?]). And at the Aśvina śāstra this sūkta also [is used], by the principle of the prātaranuvāka, since it is extended thus (Āś. 6-5 [?])."

Anuvāda (Kannada): "Trīś cin no adya is the fourth sūkta in the seventh anuvāka. It has twelve ṛks. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Hiraṇyastūpa; the deities are the Aśvins. The ninth ṛk, kva trī cakrā, and the twelfth, ā no aśvinā, are in the Triṣṭup metre; the remaining ṛks in Jagatī. The Anukramaṇikā says: 'trīś cid dvādaśāśvinam navamy ante triṣṭubhau' — 'a sūkta with the twelve [ṛks] trīś cit, addressed to the Aśvins; the ninth and the last are Triṣṭup'. When the Jagatī ṛks connected with the Aśvina-kratu are recited at the time of the recitation of the prātaranuvāka mantras, this sūkta is to be recited: such is its application — this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning 'athāśvine', by the sūtra 'trīś cin no adyeḷi dyāvāprthivī iti jāgatām' (Āś. 4-13 [?]). It is also prescribed that this sūkta be recited for the Aśvina-śāstra mantras among the prātaranuvāka mantras (Āś. 6-5 [?])."

Translation: "O navedasā Áśvins — wise ones, divine Áśvins (navedāḥ being a word for 'wise', since it is read in the list of such names: navedāḥ, kaviḥ, manīṣī). Such as you are, triś cit — even three times — adya, today, in this rite, bhavatam naḥ — be for us; be come. The word 'thrice' here refers to the three pressings; or it is to show great respect, from another Veda-text, '[the gods] are indeed triṣatyā [?]'. Vām yāmaḥ — your yāma, the chariot that is the means of going, is vibhuḥ — pervading; uta — and rātiḥ, your gift, is also pervading — that is what is to be supplied. Yuvor hi yantram — between you two there is indeed a bond of mutual restraint; the illustration is vāsasaḥ himyā iva: like the day (vāsara), which is clothed [= covered] by the sun's rays, and the night, which is accompanied by dew: as the connexion of the day with the night never ceases, so [is yours]. Both of you, manīṣibhiḥ — by the wise priests (manīṣī being read in the list of names for the wise) — abhyāyaṃsenyā — to be held [to the sacrificer] on all sides, by their grace dependent on them [the priests] — bhavatam — be."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁵: the bhāṣya goes through adya (the particle's shortening or lengthening in the Saṃhitā), navedasā (vid jñāne with the Uṇādi suffix asun, with nañ in the sense "not unwise" — "na bhrāṇ..."-type rule for the nañ-compound; the a-vowel in the vocative-dual; the vocative accent), vibhuḥ, yāmaḥ (root yam uparame with ghañ, the first syllable acute by vṛṣādīnām; or yamu uparame, from the root with man [atisṛṣṭ... man], acute initial by nit), rātiḥ (root rā dāne, ktin, with mantre vṛṣeṣapacamana... giving the first syllable acute for ktin), yuvoh (the genitive-locative dual; ṣaṣṭhī dvivacana replaced by

Pratipadārtha — "navedasā — O wise (knowing) [ones]; aśvinā — Aśvin deities (you); adya — in our sacrificial rite today; naḥ — for us; triś cit — in all three times (the three pressings); bhavatam — (coming) be; yuvoḥ — of you two; yantram hi — a mutual bond; vāsasaḥ — of the day covered by the sun's sharp rays; hīmā iva — as with the dewy night; vām — your; yāmaḥ — chariot; vibhuḥ — all-pervading (vast); uta — and; rātiḥ — generosity (is vast); manīṣibhiḥ — by the wise priests; abhyāyaṃsenyā — to be controlled (subject to their wishes); bhavatam — (both of you) be."

— "O Aśvin deities, your relation to each other is fixed, as is that of the day covered by the sun's rays and the night cooled by dew. Your chariot is vast and pervades everywhere; so too your generosity is vast. Out of kindness, today in our sacrifice be with us in all three times; and, regarding the wise sacrificers, be subject to their wishes."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 74) — "Wise Aswins, be present with us thrice to day ; your chariot is vast and extensive and filled with gifts ; and your connection is like that of the shinning [sic] day and dewy night ; Aswins, be accessible to the pious (priests)"

Triḥ and the number three: "This sūkta begins with the word triḥ. In every pāda of every ṛk a number-word — tri or trayaḥ — is generally present. This arrangement is not only so as to enrich the rhyme [?] of the metre [the Kannada word is uncertain in the print]; it is also to make clear, by repetition, that matters connected with these Aśvin deities come in threes. For the Aśvins' chariot has three wheels, and the chariot has three pillars. These deities are invoked in the three pressings — the morning pressing, the midday pressing, and the third pressing. Their pervasion is in the three worlds: earth, mid-region and heaven. And so on."

Yāska's account of the Aśvins (Ni. 12-1 [?]), summarized in the source: "Yāska has said in his Nirukta [Ni. 12-1 [?]] about the Aśvin deities; we explain it here briefly:"

Aurṇavābha: since they are yoked with horses they are called Áśvin deities. (3) 'Who are the Áśvins?' — when this is asked, some say 'dyāvāprthivī', i.e. the earth and the mid-region [as the Kannada puts it], visible to us. (4) Others say 'day and night'. (5) Still others say 'the sun and the moon'. (6) The historians (aitihāsikāḥ) hold that they are two pious kings, performers of meritorious deeds. (7) 'Their time is after midnight, supporting the advent of light; the middle part is the unsurpassed part; the light-part is Āditya.' The time of these Áśvin deities — the time in which they are generally praised — is the period from midnight to sunrise. In this period the darkness gradually thins and the dawn, the light, begins; this is called the middle period. It is in this period that they praise the Áśvins with the prātaranuvāka mantras (the Áśvina-kratu). 'Jyotirbhāga ādityaḥ': when it has become fully light, that time belongs to Āditya (Sūrya); that is, when the darkness has gone and it is light (the Āditya-kratu) they praise Āditya with the prātaranuvāka mantras. (8) 'Of these two, who have the same time and the same action, ... [the print's Sanskrit is crowded and the middle words are uncertain]; ...this half-ṛk is without a [separate] praise.' The Áśvin deities are two. These two are praised at the same time, i.e. together. Working with the two together in view [the print breaks off here and the account continues on p. 76]." ⁶

"One is called Vāsātya, but the other is Uṣaḥputra." The Kannada explains: "Some explain what is said in the ṛk vasātiṣu sma carathaḥ in this way: Vasātayaḥ is a well-known people (janapada), and the ṛk speaks of two pious kings, the Aśvins, who were lords of that people. To make clear that this sense is not right, Yāska gives the sentence above: that is, one of these Aśvins is the son of Vasāti — vasāti means night, vāsātya means 'night's son' — and the other is Uṣaḥputra, 'dawn's son'. Since these Aśvin deities are connected with both times, night and day, to call one the son of the night and the other the son of the day — of the dawn — is conventional (rūḍhi)."⁸

Special Topics, word by word (p. 77) - navedasā — "the dual of the s-stem word navedas, in the vocative sense (the Vedic form of navedasā). The word navedāḥ is read among the twenty-four names for the wise, navedā, vipra, viṅra [?], etc. (Nī. 3-19 [?]), so navedasā means wise, intelligent." - triś cit = trivāram: "thrice, i.e. the three times — morning, midday and evening — or the three pressings." - adya: "now; or in this sacrifice that we are performing." - vibhuḥ = vyāptaḥ: "pervading." - yāmaḥ = yāyate gamyate 'neneti yāmo gamanasāadhanabhūto rathaḥ: "the root yā has the sense of going; yāmaḥ is that by which one sits and goes — a means of going — so yāmaḥ means the chariot." - rātiḥ = rā dāne: "from the root rā, 'to give', the word rātiḥ means gift." - yantram = sambandhaviśeṣaḥ: "a particular connection — that is, the connection that obtains between the two Aśvin deities." - himyeva vāsasaḥ: "Among the twenty-three names for night beginning śyāvī, kṣapā (Ni. 1-7 [?]) the word himā is read; so himā means night, or night endowed with hima, frost. Vāsasaḥ = sūryaraśmyācchādanayuktasya vāsarasya, 'of the day that is covered by the sun's rays', that is, of the day with sunshine or heat. So the simile himyeva vāsasaḥ means that your relation is as the relation between the dewy night and the sunny day: since night and day come one after the other, they have a mutual relation; so do you, the two Aśvin deities." - abhyāyaṃsenyā = abhito niyantavyau anugrahavaśāt tadadhīnau: "[to be] held on all sides — those who, by favour, are dependent: that is, dependent on the sacrificers, and so on." - manīṣibhiḥ = medhāvibhiḥ ṛtvigbhiḥ: "by intelligent people, or by priests and others."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁴ - adya: asmin ahani — "on this day"; the sūtra sadyaḥ parut parāry aiṣamaḥ paredyavy adya... — सद्यः परुत्परार्यैषमः परेद्यव्यद्य... — Pā. 5-3-22 (as printed) lists the word as an irregular formation; the bhāṣyakāra explains its working by idamo 'śdyaś ca: after idam ending in the seventh case, dyu comes and idam is replaced by aś, giving adya; the long final in the Saṃhitā by nipātasya ca — निपातस्य च — Pā. 6-3-136. - navedasā: viparītaṃ na vitta iti navedasau — "one who does not know wrongly", a nañ-tatpuruṣa; root vida jñāne, the Uṇādi suffix asun by sarvadhātubhyo 'sun — [Uṇ. 4-[?]]; the nañ compound would normally lose its n by nalopo nañāḥ — Pā. 6-3-73, but the sūtra na bhrāṇnapānnavedā... — न भ्राण्नपान्नवेदा... — Pā. 6-3-75 prescribes prakṛtibhāva here, so the n is retained; the vocative dual au is replaced by ā by supāṃ sulug... — सुपां सुलुक्.. — Pā. 7-1-39; it is āmantrita by sāmantritam — सामन्त्रितम् — Pā. 2-3-48 [?]; and by āmantritasya ca — आमन्त्रितस्य च — Pā. 8-1-19 a vocative that is not at the beginning of a pāda is wholly unaccented (sarvānudātta). - yāmaḥ: the Uṇādi sūtra arti-stu-su-hu-sṛ-dhṛ-kṣi-kṣu-bhā-yā-vā-pad-yakṣi-nībhyo man — अर्तिस्तुसुहुसृधृक्षिभयावापदियक्षिनीभ्यो मन् — [Uṇ. 1-[?]] gives man after these fourteen roots, so man after yā (to go); the Medinī-kośa has "yāmas tu puṃsi prahare saṃyame 'pi prakīrtitaḥ"; here the sense is derived from the parts: yāyate gamyate "[that] by which one goes", hence "chariot", with initial acute. The other derivation: root yama uparame (1st class), yamyate uparamyate idam iti yāmaḥ — that which, once its work is done, stops in one place: the sense of "ceasing" applies to the chariot; ghaṇ in the object sense, upadhā-vṛddhi, karṣātvalo ghaṇ anta udāttaḥ — कर्षात्वतो घञोऽन्त उदात्तः — Pā. 6-1-159 would make the final syllable acute — the exception vṛṣādīnām ca — वृषादीनां च — Pā. 6-1-203 gives the first syllable the acute. - rātiḥ (begun): root rā ādāne; striyām ktin — स्त्रियां क्तिन् — Pā. 3-3-94 (the suffix after all roots in the feminine, in the verbal-noun sense and in senses other than the agent); the page then begins on titutra (see p. 79).

(pp. 79–80, PDF 93–94; grammar pages, noted briefly)

- rātiḥ (end of the entry, p. 79): the augment iṭ is barred; the suffix ktin after rā is acute by mantrē vṛṣeṣapacamanavidabhūvīrā udāttaḥ — मन्त्रे वृषेष्पचमनविदभूवीरा उदात्तः — Pā. 3-3-96 (as printed).
- yuvoh: the Uṇādi suffix madik after the root yus (yuṣyasibhyām madik — युष्यसिभ्यां मदिक् — [Uṇ. 1-[?]]), giving yuṣmad, final-acute by the suffix; the genitive-locative dual os; yuṣmad + os; the elision/replacement by supāṃ sulug...

— सुपां सुलुक्.. — Pā. 7-1-39, on which the Mahābhāṣya adds "supām ca supo bhavanti" — "the sup-endings replace sup-endings" — so that the substitution may be made to extend to all the endings; the print refers also to the general rule vyatyayo bahulam — व्यत्ययो बहुलम् — Pā. 3-1-85. The substitute ending os is then an ādeśa-ending, and, as a vowel-initial ending that is not a substitute-ending, yoci — योऽचि — Pā. 7-2-89 [as printed 7-2-[?]] would give ya for the end of yuṣmad, asmad; therefore da is not replaced by yā. By śeṣe lopaḥ — शेषे लोपः — Pā. 7-2-90 — the seventh case taken in the sense of the locus — "in what remains": either the ad that remains after ma is lost before an ending (the ṭi-loss alternative), or [as a second sense] the d is lost by alo 'ntyasya — अलोऽन्त्यस्य — Pā. 1-1-52 (the final-letter-loss alternative). In the first alternative the tva/ma-substitutions are exceptions to the loss, so there is no loss where they occur; in yuva + os, if the loss of ad as taught takes place, the o is acute by the anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ — अनुदात्तस्य च यत्रोदात्तलोपः — Pā. 6-1-161 principle; in the final-letter-loss alternative, yuva + os: by the Vedic pararūpa the single substitute comes; otherwise the o is taught by osi ca — ओसि च — Pā. 7-3-104 [as printed [?]]; and by ekādeśa udāttena — एकादेश उदात्तेन — Pā. 8-2-5 the o is acute. The print notes that the two alternatives (ṭilopa and antyalopa) differ in their results.

- hīmā iva (p. 80): ūdhaḥ payaḥ himā [Ni. 1-2-22 [?]] — the Nirukta's list of words for night contains the word hīmā, hence it means "night". Hanerhi ca — हनेर्हि च — [Uṇ. 1-[?]]: after han himsāgatyoh the suffix mak and the substitution hi for han: hima, kit, so no guṇa; hanti padmāni iti himam ("that which kills the lotuses") — frost; or himam asyā asti ("she has frost") by arśa ādibhyo 'c — अर्श आदिभ्योऽच् — Pā. 5-2-127, then ṭāp: himā, "the night with dew". Here the word hima is final-acute by the suffix, ṭāp is unaccented because the word is pit, and the savarṇadīrgha is acute by the single-substitute accent; the third singular ṭā after it; then, by supām sulukpūrvasavarṇācchepāyāḍyāyājālaḥ — सुपां सुलुक्पूर्वसवर्णाच्छेपाडाड्यायाजालः — Pā. 7-1-39, ḍyā replaces ṭā; loss of ṭi by the ḍ-marker; hinyā; the yā is acute by the udāttanivṛtti accent. The compound with iva comes by the vārtika "iveneva samāso vibhakty-alopaḥ pūrvapadaprakṛtisvaratvaṃ ca" — "the compound with iva [is formed] without elision of the case-ending, and with the accent of the first member" (as printed, Pā. 2-1-[?]).

- vāsasaḥ: root vasa ācchādane, "to cover, to clothe"; vāsaḥ denotes the day (ahaḥ) because it covers with light; with the causative ṇic, the Uṇādi suffix asun, upadhā-vṛddhi, loss of ṇi, jas, ru and visarga.
- abhyāyaṃsenyā: the two preverbs abhi, ā before yama upame, the Uṇādi suffix senya: abhi + ā + yam + senya; yaṇ-substitution; abhyāyam + senya; m → anusvāra by naś cāpadāntasya jhali — Pā. 8-3-24 (as printed); the dual ending replaced by ā by supām sulug.... Translation: "In the chariot of the Aśvins, which is madhuvāhane — furnished with the carrying of sweet things, various kinds of food and the like — there are pavayaḥ, wheels, firm and hard as the vajra, trayaḥ — three in number. It — in this very way, the state of having three wheels — viśve, all the gods viduḥ — know, somasya venām anu — with reference to Soma's, the moon's, lovely wife Vena ['at the [bridal] procession' — the word I read as yotrāyām is doubtful]. When Soma's marriage with Vena [took place], all the gods know that the two Aśvins went mounted on a splendid chariot with three wheels, carrying various foods. On that chariot, skambhāsaḥ — pillars, three in number — skabhitāsaḥ — were set up. For what purpose? Ārabhe — to take hold, to hold on to: when the chariot moves swiftly, the pillars are the supports for the hand, to remove the fear of falling. O Aśvins, with such a chariot you go naktam, by night, triḥ, three times; and likewise divā, by day, you go three times: by night and by day you mount the chariot and sport again and again."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ¹⁷: madhuvāhane (root vaha prāpaṇe; lyuṭ in the instrument/locus sense, kṛdutta-rapadaprakṛtisvaratva); viduḥ (root vida jñāne, laṭ → jhi → us by the optional rule vido laṭo vā, śap elided); skambhāsaḥ (root skabhi/stabhi "to hold back", the suffix ac of the pacādi class); skabhitāsaḥ (skabhu of the sautra-root list, marked udit, so iṭ is optional before ktvā; the iṭ augment is therefore introduced "as an augment of the participle"; niṣṭhā with iṭ; asun ...); ārabhe (root rabha rābhasye, the suffix kvip [bhāve kvip] with the first-member accent of a kṛt-compound).

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Aśvin deities (you two); madhuvāhane — [laden] with delicious foods; rathe — [in your] chariot; trayaḥ pavayaḥ — three wheels firm as the vajra; it — in this manner; somasya — of the moon; venām anu — in the wedding procession with Vena, his wife; viśve — all the gods; viduḥ — know; ārabhe — for the sake of holding on; skabhitāsaḥ — [that are] supports; trayaḥ — three; skambhāsaḥ — pillars [in that chariot]; naktam — at night; triḥ yāthaḥ — you go three times; divā — by day; triḥ — three times [you go]."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Aśvin deities, at the time of the wedding of the beloved Vena, Soma's wife, you went in your chariot, filled with sweet foods, to take part in the wedding. All the gods know that your chariot has three auspicious wheels and, so that those who sit within may not fall when it runs fast, three pillars to hold on to. In your chariot you go three times by day and three times by night for sport. Spend the time always in this way, with delight."

17. p. 82, characterized; the print is crowded and the numerals were not pursued

English Translation (the source's own, p. 82) — "There are three wheels to your honey-bearig [sic] (foods!& c) chariot as all the gods have known it to be when attending the marriage of Vena, the beloved of Soma ; O Aswins, there are three posts fixed in the chariot for support, and in it thrice you drive by night and thrice by day."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 83–84

"In this ṛk it is said that the Áśvins' chariot has three wheels; that, while it goes at speed, there are three pillars for the occupants to hold on to so as not to fall; and that the Áśvins, seated in such a chariot, travel thrice by day and thrice by night. And, as the bhāṣyakāra says, it is also described that all the gods knew that at the wedding of Vena, the wife of Soma, the Áśvins went in their own chariot filled with sweet and various foods. Here the bhāṣyakāra explains somasya as 'of the moon'. But it seems fitting to take the word somasya as the Soma-deity, who is proud of the soma-juice, or Soma the king. In the Veda there is a convention of calling Soma (the soma-juice) 'king'; and in the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa of the Yajurveda it is said:"

अथ ह सीता सावित्री । सोमं राजानं चकमे ।

atha ha sītā sāvitṛī | somaṃ rājānaṃ cakame |

"Then Sītā, the daughter of Savitr, desired King Soma.' ¹⁸ It is worth noting that this matter is connected with the matter of Venā and Soma mentioned in this ṛk. In this context the following two ṛks are also worth noticing:"

सूर्याया अश्विना वराग्निरासीत्पुरोगवः ॥ (ऋ. सं. १०-८५-८ [?]) सोमो वधूयुरभवदश्विनास्तामुभा वरा । सूर्या यत्पत्ये शंसन्ती मनसा सविताददात् ॥ (ऋ. सं.
१०-८५-९ [?])

18. The source's Kannada: 'Sītā, the daughter of Savitr (the Sun), desired — was pleased with — King Soma'; the reference is not given in the print here.

*sūryāyā aśvinā varāgnir āsīt purogavaḥ || (ṛ. saṃ. 10-85-8 [?])
somo vadhūyur abhavad aśvināstām ubhā varā | sūryāṃ yat patye
śaṃsantīm manasā savitādadāt || (ṛ. saṃ. 10-85-9 [?])*¹⁹

"The matter stated in these two ṛks is worth noting: Soma desired Sūryā-devī, the daughter of Savitṛ, as wife. In the same way the Aśvin deities too wished to become suitors of Sūryā-devī; and [it is] described that Savitṛ gave Sūryā-devī to Soma, and so on. Besides this, in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa [the source reads]:"

प्रजापतिर्वै सोमाय राज्ञे दुहितरं प्रायच्छत्सूर्या सावित्रीं तस्मै सर्वे देवा वरा आगच्छन् ॥ (ऐ. ब्रा. ४-७ [?])

*prajāpatir vai somāya rājñe duhitaraṃ prāyacchat sūryāṃ
sāvitṛīm tasmai sarve devā varā āgacchan || (ai. brā. 4-7 [?])*

"Prajāpati gave his daughter Sūryā Sāvitṛī to King Soma; to her all the gods came as suitors."²⁰

- madhuvāhane = madhu vāhyate 'neneti madhuvāhanaḥ: "madhu means honey, or delicious food; a chariot that bears these, i.e. a chariot filled [with them], is meant."
- somasya venām anu id viduḥ: "All the gods knew of the wedding that took place with Venā: that is, as stated above (Ai. Brā. 4-7 [?]), when Soma had wished to marry Sūryā-devī the Aśvins and all the other gods, too, came to that wedding rite desiring that the woman should become [their] bride; as the Aśvins also themselves wished to marry her (ṛ. saṃ. 10-85-8 and 9 [?]). For this reason — that is, in order to win the bride — the Aśvins filled their chariot with sweet foods and went to Soma's wedding; and since all the gods had come there, all of them knew of this matter: such is the main idea of the description in this ṛk."

19. The source leaves these untranslated. My gloss, editorial and tentative: "Agni was the leader of the wooers of Sūryā [the second half-verse: 'Soma was the one who desired the bride; the two Aśvins were both the wooers; when Savitṛ gave Sūryā, who was praising [?] her husband, with the mind']". The numerals are read from small Kannada digits and are uncertain.

20. Translation editorial, from the Sanskrit; the source gives it in a Kannada paraphrase as above.

- ārabhe = ārabdhum | avalambitum: "to hold on to. When a chariot goes fast it is natural for it to shake; then, for those sitting inside to hold on firmly lest they fall, there are three pillars in the chariot — such is the sense."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²¹ - madhuvāhane: the Uṇādi sūtra beginning phalipāṭanami-mani-jana... — फलपटनमिमनिजनांगुक्पटिनाकिधतश्च — [Uṇ. 1-[?]] gives the suffix u after the root mana, with dha in place of the n: madhu; the word is final-acute by the suffix-accent. Karaṇādhikaraṇayoś ca — करणाधिकरणयोश्च — Pā. 3-3-117: lyuṭ after a root in the instrument or locus sense; so lyuṭ after the causative stem of vah, upadhā-vṛddhi, loss of ni, ana for yu. - viduḥ: root vida jñāne; laṭ; jhi; vido laṭo vā — विदो लटो वा — Pā. 3-4-83: the substitutes ṇal, atus, us etc. optionally replace the laṭ-endings of vid; here us for jhi; śap, elided as the root is of the ad-class; vid + us, ru, visarga. - skambhāsaḥ: root skabhi/stabhi "to hold back, to stop" (gatipratibandhe); skambhate "is checked"; the suffix ac of the pacādi class by nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ — नन्दिग्रहिपचादिभ्यो ल्युणिन्यचः — Pā. 3-1-134. - skabhitāsaḥ: the root skabhu of the sautra list, marked udit; udito vā — उदितो वा — Pā. 7-2-56: before ktvā the iṭ augment is optional for an udit root; hence the augment, here.

- skabhitāsaḥ (concluded): yasya vibhāṣā — यस्य विभाषा — Pā. 7-2-15 bars the iṭ of ktvā/кта after a root whose iṭ is optional somewhere; so with skabh + ta the iṭ would be barred; but the sūtra grasitaskabhitastabhita... — ग्रसितस्कभितस्तभित... — Pā. 7-2-34 [as printed 7-2-3[?]] lists skabhita as an irregular form, so iṭ comes; jas takes asuk.

- ārabhe: root rabha rābhasye with the preverb ā; sampadādibhyaḥ kvip — a vārtika — gives kvip in the verbal-noun sense; gati-kāra-kopapadāt kṛt — Pā. 6-2-139 — the later member keeps its natural accent; the case-ending is replaced by śe. Rik 2 ends here (| | 2 | |).

Translation: "O Aśvins, divine ones, both of you, on samāne ahan — on one and the same day of performance — be triḥ avadyagohanā — three times coverers (concealers) of the faults that occur in the performance. Adya — today — sprinkle triḥ — thrice — yajñam, the oblation in the sacrifice, madhunā, with the sweet juice. And doṣa uṣasaḥ ca — by nights and by days — i.e. in the nights and the days continuously — pinvatam — pour out, give — to us iṣaḥ, foods, vājavatīḥ — strength-giving."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²²: ahan (the seventh-case singular dropped by supām sulug..., saptamyā luk); avadyagohanā (root guhū saṃvaraṇe; avadyasya gūhayitārau, "concealers of fault", with lyu, and the Vedic non-lengthening: the rule ūduḥ upadhāyā goḥ [read ūduḥ upadhāyā goḥ — Pā. 6-4-89 [?]] is not applied here, being Vedic; the dual ending ā); mimikṣatam (root miha secane, desiderative san; there is no iṭ by ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt — Pā. 7-2-10; halantāc ca — Pā. 1-2-10 makes san kit, so no guṇa; doubling, the reduplicate cut down by halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; dvirbhāva...); vājavatīḥ (ugitaś ca — Pā. 4-1-6 — ñīp); pinvatam (root pivi, minyi/ninvi secane; idit, so the nasal augment; śap).

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Aśvin deities; yuvam — you; samāne ahan — on one day; triḥ avadyagohanā — (do) thrice conceal (our) faults; adya — today; yajñam — the oblation connected with the sacrifice; madhunā — with the sweet soma juice; triḥ mimikṣatam — [desire] thrice to sprinkle (not only once); doṣā — by night; uśasaḥ ca — and also by day; asmabhyam — to us; vājavatīḥ — nourishing; iśaḥ — foods; pinvatam — pour out [for us]."

Bhāvārtha

— "O gods, you are great-hearted. On a single day, three times, forgive and cover our faults. And, looking upon our oblation three times with sweet [juice], give us foods that nourish us, by night and by day, in abundance."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 86)

— "Thrice on the same day you forgive the faults of the worshippers ; thrice this day you sprinkle our sacrifice with honey ; O Aswins, thrice give us nourishing foods every night and every day."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 87 - samāne ahan — "whole day [the print's English]; in one whole day on which we perform the sacrifice." - triḥ avadyagohanā = trivāram anuṣṭhānagatānām doṣāṇām saṃvaraṇakāriṇau bhavatam: "in the sacrifice that we perform, in the three times — morning, midday, evening — do cover over the faults and omissions that may occur through carelessness, so that the sacrifice may be made complete with all its limbs, without deficiency or excess." - yajñam madhunā mimikṣatam — "sprinkle the sacrifice with honey; that is, make the sacrificial work and the oblations used in it well acceptable." - vājavatīḥ iśaḥ = vājavatīr balakāriṇīr iṣo

'nnān: "vāja means food, iṣa also means food; hence the bhāṣyakāra explains vājavatīḥ as balakāriṇī, i.e. nourishing [the print's English]." - asmabhyaṃ pinvatam = asmabhyaṃ siñcatam: "give us." - doṣā, uṣasaḥ — "doṣā means night with darkness; uṣasaḥ = the dawn-time, which is light: day. The sense is: by day and by night."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²³ - ahan (p. 87): the seventh-case singular dropped by supāṃ sulug... — सुपां सुलुक्.. — Pā. 7-1-39 (as luk). - avadyagohanā: root guhū saṃvarāṇe ("to cover"); avadya = fault; avadyasya gūhayitārau; the suffix lyu by nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ — Pā. 3-1-134, with ana for yu; avadya + guh + ana; the lengthening of the root's penultimate u — ūduṇ upadhāyā goḥ [printed ūdupadhāyā goḥ] — ऊदुपधाया गोहः — Pā. 6-4-89 — occurs before a vowel-initial guṇa-causing ending and is not applied here (Vedic); the dual ending replaced by ā. - mimikṣatam (p. 87 end – p. 88, PDF 101–102): root miha secane; the suffix san; ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt — एकाच उपदेशेऽनुदात्तात् — Pā. 7-2-10: no iṭ for a val-initial ārdhadhātuka after a one-vowelled anudatta root, hence none for san; halantāc ca — हलन्ताच्च — Pā. 1-2-10: san after a consonant-final root is kit (the print explains anta as "near", and hal as with the ablative ending dropped), so kñiti ca — Pā. 1-1-5 bars guṇa; doubling by sanyaṇoḥ — Pā. 6-1-9, halādiḥ śeṣaḥ dropping the first h; h → dh by ho dhaḥ — हो ढः — Pā. 8-2-31; dh → k by ṣaḍhoḥ kassi — षढोः कः सि — Pā. 8-2-41; s → ṣ by ādesapratyayayoḥ — आदेशप्रत्यययोः — Pā. 8-3-59: mimikṣa; then the loṭ second-person dual, replaced by tam. - vājavatīḥ: vāja = strength [the print's gloss]; matup by tadasyāsty asminn iti matup — तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप् — Pā. 5-2-94; the m of matup becomes v after a stem ending in a [or ā] by māduparadhāyās ca matorvo 'yavādibhyaḥ — मादुपधायाश्च मतोर्वोऽयवादिभ्यः — Pā. 8-2-9; matup is ugit, so ñīp in the feminine by ugitās ca — उगितश्च — Pā. 4-1-6. - pinvatam: root pivi secane, idit, so the augment num by idito num dhātoḥ — इदितो नुम् धातोः — Pā. 7-1-58; loṭ, thas, lasya ... replaced by tam; śap by kartari śap — Pā. 3-1-68. Rik 3 ends here (| | 3 | |).

Translation: "O Aśvins, triḥ vartiḥ yātam — go thrice to our vartiḥ, our house, the means of our livelihood: reach it three times; likewise, go three times to the man anuvrate — engaged in works favourable to us — for his favour. Triḥ supṛāvyē — three times, to [us] who are engaged in matters to be protected well and excellently by you, tredheva śikṣatam — instruct in threefold manner: that is, the sense is that [you should teach] the performance again and again [the exact words of the middle clause are uncertain]. And nāndyam — a pleasing, joy-giving fruit — triḥ vahatam — bring three times. Asme — to us — pr̥kṣaḥ, food, triḥ pinvatam — pour out, give thrice. The simile: akṣareva — as akṣarāṇi, waters ('akṣarā', 'stream', 'satisfaction', being read in the lists of such names) — as Parjanya gives those [waters], so [give us food]."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁴: vartiḥ (vartate 'trety vartir gr̥ham; the suffix in by hr̥piṣiruhivṛtividī... [the Uṇādi sūtra on the in-suffix, number read as 4-[?]]); supṛāvyē (su + pra + ava, the ṇyat suffix in the object sense after av with two preverbs, vṛddhi absent because "a rule that has a technical term as its antecedent is not constant"; svarita by titsvaritam); śikṣatam (śikṣa vidyopādāne); nāndyam (ending in ṇyat); pr̥kṣaḥ (root pr̥cī samparke, with the augment suṭ before asun); asme (śe in place of the ending by supāṃ sulug...); akṣarā iva (akṣarāṇy udakāni, "that which pervades"; the Uṇādi suffix kṣara; loss of śi).

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Aśvin deities; yuvam — you; triḥ — three times; vartiḥ — to our house; yātam — graciously come; anuvrate — [him] who does what is good for us; jane — [to] the people (to their house also); triḥ yātam — come thrice; triḥ — three times; suprāvyē — to us, who are fit to be protected; tredhā iva — in three ways; śikṣatam — [teach] (knowledge); nāndyam — a delight-giving fruit; triḥ vahatam — bring thrice; akṣarā iva — as streams of water (Parjanya); asme — to us; prkṣaḥ — food; triḥ — three times; pinvatam — give abundantly."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Aśvin deities, three times each day, favour with your kindness the house of those who do us good, and ours. We are worthy of protection. Teach us threefold knowledge. Give us food, too, three times a day."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 90) — "O Aswins, thrice visit our house and persons who are well disposed towards us ; thrice repair to him who deserves your protection and instruct us in three-fold knowledge ; thrice grant us rewards which please us ; thrice bestow upon us food as the unceasing streams of water (rain)" ²⁵.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), pp. 90–91 - anuvrate jane = asmanukūlavāpārayukte jane: "among people acting favourably toward us; our well-wishers." - suprāvyē = suṣṭhu bhavadbhyāṃ rakṣaṇīye: "by those who, by praising and calling on you with hymns, are worthy of your protection." - tredheva śikṣatam: "What the threefold teaching is, is doubtful here. Probably 'by body, by speech and by mind' are the meanings suggested." - nāndyam = nandanīyam, harṣapradam: "joy-giving; what is pleasing to us, a thing that we need." - vahatam = prāpayetam: "cause us to obtain." - prkṣaḥ = "food; since prkṣaḥ is read among the thirty-eight words for food beginning andhaḥ, vājaḥ (Ni. 2-7 [?]), prkṣa means food, nourishment." - akṣareva pinvatam = udakam iva siñcatam: "sprinkle [us] as with water. Since akṣara is read among the hundred names for water beginning aṇaḥ, kṣodaḥ (Ni. 1-12 [?]), akṣareva means 'like a stream, like rain'. On this the ṛk:"

25. no full stop in the print

तस्याः समुद्रा अधि वि क्षरन्ति तेन जीवन्ति प्रदिशश्चतस्रः । ततः क्षरत्यक्षरं तद्विश्वमुप जीवति
॥ (ऋ. सं. १-१६४-४२ [?])

*tasyāḥ samudrā adhi vi kṣaranti tena jīvanti pradiśaś catasraḥ |
tataḥ kṣaraty akṣaram tad viśvam upa jīvati || (ṛ. saṃ. 1-164-42

"clearly explains the sense of the word akṣara. Here: kṣarati akṣaram tadviśvam upajīvati — (the clouds) udakam varṣanti tena udakena viśvaṃ bhūtajātam upajīvati — 'the clouds shower the water as rain; by that water all the beings in the world (the plant world included) live': this is the main sense. So the water that falls as rain is necessary to the world of beings and gives it joy; likewise, we pray that you give us food and the like that bring joy." ²⁶ - pinvatam = siñcatam; yacchatam — "give, favour", etc.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁷ - vartih: root vṛtu vartane; vartate asmin ("in which one dwells"); the Uṇādi sūtra hṛpiṣiruhivṛtividididi kīrtibhyaś ca — हृपिषिरुहिवृतिविदिदिदि कीर्तिभ्यश्च — [Uṇ. 4-[?]] — gives the suffix in after the seven roots hṛ (haraṇe), piṣr [read piṣṭ saṃcūrṇane], ruha (bījajanmani prādurbhāve ca), vṛtu vartane, vida sattāyām, bhidir dvaidhīkarāṇe and kṛta saṃveṣṭane; the preceding sūtra sarvadhātubhya in — सर्वधातुभ्य इन् — [Uṇ. 4-[?]] makes in run on, so there is no room to say that i is the suffix; in is nit, hence the first syllable would be acute; yet in the mantra vartih is final-acute; so the suffix may be taken as i by the sūtra [read iḥ], where the accent is as seen; the print remarks, with the proverb seyam ubhayataḥ pāsā rajjuḥ (as read: "a rope with a noose at both ends"), that the matter is caught either way. The print then observes that one who rejects the suffix in may enter the word vartih in the ākṛtigaṇa of uñchādi and, by uñchādīnām ca — उञ्छादीनां च — Pā. 6-1-160 [as printed], teach the final accent; and that in the Veda-bhāṣya, in explaining yasya saṃsthe vṛṇvate harī (ṛ. saṃ. [reference not read]), the suffix in is taught by the same Uṇādi sūtra hṛpiśiruhi.... Hence it is not right to teach the suffix i here by this sūtra. Then supām sulug... gives su in place of am of the accusative singular...

26. Translation of the ṛk editorial and tentative: "From her the oceans flow forth, by it the four quarters live; thence flows the imperishable [water], and by that all the world lives". The reference numerals are read from small Kannada digits and are [?].

27. p. 91, PDF 105 — grammar page, noted briefly; begun, to continue on p. 92

- suprāvyē: su and pra, two preverbs, before the root av rakṣaṇe; ṇyat in the sense of bhāva or karman after a root ending in ṛ-vowel or a consonant, by ṛhaloṇyat — ऋहलोर्ण्यत् — Pā. 3-1-124, in the object sense here: su + pra + av + ya. Ata upadhāyāḥ — अत उपधायाः — Pā. 7-2-116: before an ñit or ṇit suffix the penultimate short a takes vṛddhi; but vṛddhi here is blocked since vṛddhir ād aic — वृद्धिरादैच् — Pā. 1-1-1 is a rule with a technical term as its antecedent, and "saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ" (Paribhāṣā 93 [?]) applies; when the word is analysed it must be avye, not āvyē. Lengthening of the vowel (savarṇadīrgha); the seventh-case singular; titsvaritam — तित्स्वरितम् — Pā. 6-1-185: the ya of suprāvya is svarita.

- śikṣatam: root śikṣa vidyopādāne, loṭ, second-person dual thas, replaced by tam by loṭo lañvat [read tasthasthamipāṇ...].
- nāndyam: root tu nadi samṛddhau, idit, so the augment num; since the root ends in a consonant, nyat in the verbal-noun sense; yat is svarita; the lengthening of n is Vedic.
- prkṣaḥ: root prcī samparke; asun by sarvadhātubhyo 'sun — [Uṇ. 4-[?]]; the augment suṭ is Vedic; prc + sas; c → k by co kuḥ — चोः कृः — Pā. 8-2-30; s → ṣ by ādeśapratyayayoḥ; prkṣas; elision of the accusative singular, ru, visarga.
- asme: asmad + seventh-case plural sup; supām sulug... — Pā. 7-1-39 — gives śe in place of sup; asmad + e; by śeṣe lopah — Pā. 7-2-90 [as printed 7-2-9[?]] the ṭi is lost; the e is acute by the acute-restoring accent; in the alternative of final-letter loss, asma + e, Vedic pararūpa and the single-substitute accent.
- akṣarā iva: root aśū vyāptau; aśnuvanti = "they pervade [all]"; akṣarāṇi means water; the Uṇādi suffix kṣara after aś; aś + śara; ś → ṣ by vraścabhrasja...ṣaḥ — Pā. 8-2-36; ṣ → k by ṣaḍhoḥ kassi; ṣatva: akṣara; jas, replaced by śi by jaśśasoḥ śiḥ — Pā. 7-1-20; loss of śi by śeś chandasi bahulam — Pā. 6-1-70; the augment num by napuṃsakasya jhalacaḥ — Pā. 7-1-72; lengthening by sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau — Pā. 6-4-8; loss of the n; compounded with iva as a nitya-samāsa. And śravāṃsi, food [for us], bring thrice. Vām — your triṣṭham — [the chariot] standing on three wheels — ratham, the chariot, sūre duhitā — the Sun's daughter, his duhitā: 'duhitā is durhitā (ill-placed [= placed far away]), or dūre hitā (placed far), or from dogdhi (milks)' (Ni. 3-4 [?]), so says Yāska — ā ruhat — has mounted."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁸: devatātā (devatāti is the suffix tātil added in its own sense, so the word denotes a sacrifice connected with the gods; devatātā mukhaḥ is read among the names of the sacrifice in the Nirukta; the accent of the syllable before lit-suffixes is acute; ḍā in place of the seventh-case ending by supāṃ sulug...); triṣṭham (triṣu cakreṣu tiṣṭhatīti triṣṭhaḥ; the suffix ka after sthā when a sup-ending word is the upapada, by supi sthaḥ — सुपि स्थः — Pā. 3-2-4; s → ṣ by the rule beginning ambāmbagobhūmi...); sūre (root ṣū prerāṇe; the Uṇādi suffix kran after su, sū, dhā, gr̥dhi [Uṇ. 2-[?]]); the initial acute of a nī suffix; the seventh case in place of the first by vyatyaya); ā ruhat (root ruha; aṅ in place of cli in the Veda by kṛmṛdṛruhibhyaś chandasi — कृमृदृरुहिभ्यश्छन्दसि — Pā. 3-1-59).

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Aśvin deities; yuvam — you; naḥ — to us; rayim — wealth; triḥ vahatam — bring thrice; devatātā — at our rite meant for the gods; triḥ [āgacchatam] — come three times; uta — and; dhiyaḥ — our thoughts; triḥ [rakṣatam] — protect thrice; saubhagatvam — prosperity; triḥ [vahatam] — bring thrice; uta — and; śravāṃsi — food; naḥ — to us; triḥ [vahatam] — bring thrice; vām — your; triṣṭham — [which stands] on three wheels; ratham — chariot; sūre — of the Sun; duhitā — daughter; ā ruhat — mounted."

— "O Ásvin deities, the daughter of the Sun has mounted your chariot, which rests on three wheels. [Pleased with that,] grant us wealth and prosperity thrice; come thrice to the rites we perform in honour of the gods; protect our thoughts thrice. Give us food thrice."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 94)

— "O Aswins, thrice bestow upon us riches; thrice approach our divine rite ; thrice protect our intellects; thrice grant us prosperity and thrice food ; the daughter of the Sun has ascended your three-wheeled car."

Since a girl dwelling in her husband's house is not well placed among strangers, she is called durhitā or duhitā; or, since she lives in the husband's house, far from her father's home, the daughter is named dūre hitā, 'placed afar'; or, since she, entreating her father (many times pressing him), takes wealth and the like for her husband, the daughter is named duhitā: so Yāska has explained the word duhitā in his Nirukta." - sūre duhitā ruhad ratham: "On the thought that the Sun's daughter mounted the chariot of the

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā³⁰ Note on page numbering: the leaf at PDF 110 carries a printed 95 in its header — the same number as the preceding leaf (PDF 109) — although its text continues without repeat; so it is evidently a misprint for 96. The offset (printed = PDF – 14) is therefore kept, and the printed number "95" on PDF 110 is read as 96. - devatātā (p. 95): sarvadevāt tātīl — सर्वदेवात्तातिल् — Pā. 4-4-142 [as printed; recalled as 4-4-142]: the suffix tātīl is added, in its own sense, after the words sarva and deva; so deva + tātī — devatātī means "the divine [thing]"; the page notes that here the sacrifice with divinities is denoted by lakṣaṇā; Yāska reads this word among the names of sacrifice in the Nirukta

29. The source leaves these ṛks untranslated. My glosses, editorial and tentative: 1. "O Nāsatyas, the Sun's daughter chose your chariot, with [her] splendour"; 2. "The maiden, the Sun's daughter, rejoicing, mounted your chariot here, O heroes"; 3. "When Sūryā mounted your swift-running chariot always". The reference numerals are read from small Kannada digits and are [?].

(devatātā makhah, Ni. 3-[?]-[?] [?]). Lit (litī — लिति — Pā. 6-1-193): the vowel before a suffix with l as the marker is acute; hence the va is acute. After devatāti, the ni-ending, replaced by dā by supām sulug...; the ḍ of dā [as the page says, on the strength of the marker] causes loss of ṭi. - triṣṭham (p. 96): triṣu tiṣṭhati iti triṣṭhaḥ — "that which stands on three"; root ṣṭhā gatinivṛtau, the ṣ → s; the ṣ of ṣṭhā is dropped by nimittāpāye naimittikasyāpy apāyaḥ; sthā, supī sthaḥ — सुपि स्थः — Pā. 3-2-4 [as printed 3-2-[?]], which the print divides as supī — sthaḥ. The print then discusses the paribhāṣā kṛtrimākṛtrimayoḥ kṛtrimasyaivagrahaṇam — कृत्रिमाकृत्रिमयोः कृत्रिमस्यैवग्रहणम् — ("where both the technical and the non-technical are possible, only the technical is taken"): the word sup as seventh-case plural; if sup is formed as a pratyāhāra — the first su of the case-endings together with the p of the last, by ādir antyena sahetā — आदिरन्त्येन सहता — Pā. 1-1-71 — it indicates all the twenty-one case-endings, a convention made by the sages of Pāṇini's school; so by the paribhāṣā just mentioned sup here covers all twenty-one endings. Dhātoḥ — धातोः — Pā. 3-1-91 is the governing heading; kartari kṛt — कर्तरि कृत् — Pā. 3-4-67 makes it agentive; so when a sup-ending word is the upapada, the suffix ka comes after roots in the agent sense: after the sthā with the object word tri as upapada in the verbal-noun [read: agent] sense; kṛdanta status, prātipadika status, loss of the sup by luk; tri + sthā + a; loss of ā by ātolopa iṭi ca — Pā. 6-4-64; then ambāmbagobhūmisavyāpadvitriku-śekuśaṅkvaṅgumañjipuñjiparame barhirdivyagnibhyaḥ sthaḥ — अम्बाम्बगोभूमिसव्यापद्वित्रिकुशेकुशङ्क्वङ्गुमज्जिपुज्जिपरमे बर्हिर्दिव्यग्निभ्यः स्थः — Pā. 8-3-97: after these eighteen words — amba, āmba, go, bhūmi, savya, apa, dvi, tri, kuśe, ku, śaṅku, aṅgu, mañji, puñji, parame, barhis, divi, agni — the s of a sthā ending in a ka-suffix becomes ṣ; ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ — षुना षुः — Pā. 8-4-41: the second letter of the t-class, th, becomes ṭh: triṣṭha; second-case singular. - sūre (p. 96): root ṣū prerāṇe ("to impel"); ṣ → s by dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ — Pā. 6-1-64; the

Uṇādi sūtra susūdhāgrdhibhyaḥ kran — सुसूधागृधिभ्यः क्रन् — [Uṇ. 2-[?]] — gives kran after the roots ṣuñ abhiṣave, ṣū prerane, ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, gr̥dhu abhikāñkṣāyām; so kran after sū: sū + ra; the suffix is kit [read: nit? the print says kittvāt], so there is no guṇa; the nit accent makes the first syllable acute; the seventh case is used for the first by Vedic vyatyaya.

Translation: "O Aśvins, give us three times divyāni bheṣajā, the medicaments (herbs) that belong to the heavenly world; and likewise pārthivāni, the herbs born on earth, thrice; and adbhyaḥ u, the herbs born from the mid-region, thrice (āpaḥ being a name of the mid-region, since it is read in the lists 'āpaḥ, prthivī, bhūh'). [Give] śaṃyoḥ omānam, the particular happiness (omāna) belonging to Śaṃyu, the son of Bṛhaspati — 'they said to Śaṃyu Bārhaspatya' (Tai. Saṃ. 2-2-10-1 [?]) from another Brāhmaṇa — mamakāya sūnave, to my son. O śubhaspatī, protectors of the herbs of good kind: you — tridhātu śarma vahatam — bring happiness related to the pacifying of the three constituents, wind, bile and phlegm."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³¹: divyāni (daṇḍādibhyo yaḥ — दण्डादिभ्यो यः — Pā. 5-1-66, in the arhati sense: "worthy of the heavens"); bheṣajā (root bhiṣaj cikitsāyām, ghaṇ — pum̐si samjñāyām ghaḥ prāyeṇa —; śamyoh from śasu upaśame with kvip [śam] and yu miśraṇe with vic; the accent of the later member of a kṛt compound); tridhātu (the Uṇādi sūtra sitanigamimasisacyavidhāṇkruśibhyas tun [Uṇ. 1-[?]]); adbhyaḥ (the ending is acute by ūḍidam...); omānam (the Uṇādi-type suffix manin after av — anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante — with the replacement of av by ū by the rule jvaratvara...; guṇa by the sārvadhātuka-ārdhadhātuka rule); śubhaspatī (śubh dīptau, kvip by the sampadādi group; ṣaṣṭhyāḥ patiputra... — the Saṃhitā's visarjanīya becomes s; because of the vocative's being parāṅgavat [?] the whole vocative group is unaccented).

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Aśvin deities; naḥ — to us; divyāni — born in the world of the gods; bheṣajā — medicines (herbs); triḥ — three times; pārthivāni — born on earth [herbs]; triḥ — three times; adbhyaḥ u — born in the mid-region [herbs]; triḥ — three times; dattam — give; śamyoh — [belonging to] Śamyu (the son of Bṛhaspati); omānam — prosperity (happiness); mamakāya — my; sūnave — to [my] son; dattam — give; śubhaspatī — O Aśvin deities, protectors of auspicious herbs; tridhātu — related to the three constituents — wind, bile and phlegm; śarma — happiness; vahatam — give."

— "O Aśvin deities, doers of good, protectors of herbs, grant us thrice the herbs born in the world of the gods, on earth and in the mid-region. Be gracious to my son with the very happiness of Śamyu, the son of Bṛhaspati. Keep our three bodily constituents — wind, bile and phlegm — in order, and grant us the bodily well-being that comes of that."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 99)

— "Aswins, thrice grant us the medicaments of heaven and those of earth and those of sky; give my son the prosperity of Samyu ; lords of bliss, preserve the well-being of the three humours of the body."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), pp. 99–100 - bheṣajā = oṣadhāni: "medicines, herbs. Here it is prayed that these herbs be brought and given from all three worlds, heaven, mid-region and earth. The word triḥ in this ṛk is used not so much to indicate 'three times' as to lay stress on the matter (for the sake of emphasis [the print's English])." - adbhyaḥ = meghodakapradeśebhyaḥ āntarikṣāt: "from the mid-region; since āpaḥ is read among the sixteen names of the mid-region beginning ambaram, viyat (Ni. 1-3 [?]), adbhyaḥ means 'from the mid-region'." - omānam = ava rakṣaṇe: "protection. In explaining the word omāsaḥ in the ṛk 1-3-7 [?], Yāska gives the sense avitāraḥ, 'protectors' (Ni. 10-[?])." - śamyoḥ — "the son of Bṛhaspati. This Śamyu Bārhaspatya is the ṛṣi of the 6th maṇḍala, sūktas 44–48 [as read: four numerals, uncertain] [?]. The ṛṣi of this sūkta, Hiraṇyastūpa, prays that the protection with which the Aśvins protected him, whom they desired, be given to my son." - tridhātu: "On this word the bhāṣyakāra says, in this ṛk, vātapittaśleṣmadhātutrayaśamanaviṣayaṃ — 'having as its object the quieting of the three humours of wind, bile and phlegm' — that is, as stated in medical science: to quiet the three kinds of bodily constituents, wind, bile and phlegm, and so the happiness that comes of it. [According to medical teaching] if these three constituents are balanced in the body, there is health; if the

In the same way, the word tridhātu has been given various senses in various ṛks to suit the context; so the general sense of tridhātu may be said to be 'of three kinds'." ³² - śubhaspatī = śobhanasyauśadhajātasya pālakau: "protectors of the best medicines, lords, etc. Śubha means causing beauty, the best of deeds; pati means protectors; the general sense of these words is here rendered by the bhāṣyakāra, to suit the context, as 'protectors of the best medicines'."

32. The source leaves the two ṛks untranslated; glosses, editorial and tentative: 1.154.4 "he who, as the one [god] with the threefold [support], upheld earth and heaven and all the worlds"; 1.157.1 "with which you go to the house of the pious, flying like a bird with wings, with the three-fold [chariot]". Both references, read from small Kannada digits, are [?], and the reading of the first ṛk's first word in the print is uncertain.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³³ - divyāni: daṇḍādibhyo yaḥ — दण्डादिभ्यो यः — Pā. 5-1-66: after a word in the second-case form that belongs to the daṇḍādi group, the suffix ya comes in the sense "who is worthy of [this]"; so, when "worthy of heaven" (divam arhati) is intended, ya. - bheṣajā: the root bhiṣaj cikitsāyām is not found in the Dhātupāṭha now available; by pum̐si sam̐jñāyām ghaḥ prāyeṇa — पुंसि संज्ञायां घः प्रायेण — Pā. 3-3-118 the suffix gha comes, mostly, after roots in the instrument or locus sense when a masculine name results — so gha; the gh is given the name it by lasakvataddhite — लशक्वतद्धिते — Pā. 1-3-8 and dropped: bhiṣaj + a; the suffix is ghit; cajoḥ kughinyatoḥ — चजोः कुघिण्यतोः — Pā. 7-3-52: before a ghit suffix or nyat, c and j change to the k-class: j → g, and the i of bhi becomes e [the print remarks that this is laborious]; hence if gha is accepted, the word must be masculine, whereas here the word ... ³⁴.

Rik 6 — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā, concluded (pp. 101–103, PDF 115–117; grammar pages, noted briefly)

- bheṣajā (concluded from p. 100): the word is neuter here, so it is not gha (which would make it masculine) but bheṣaṁ jayati iti bheṣajam — "that which conquers disease" (bheṣaḥ = disease), by anyeṣv api dr̥śyate — अन्येष्वपि दृश्यते — Pā. 3-2-101, on which the Kaumudī says "the word api is for the sake of including every condition: so other roots and other case-relations are also met, occasionally"; thus, with an object-word as upapada, the suffix ḍa after the root ji/jī; the ḍ makes the i drop (ṭi-loss); accusative plural śas, replaced by śi by jaśśasoḥ śiḥ — Pā. 7-1-20; bheṣaja + śi, the augment num [by napuṃsakasya jhalacaḥ], lengthening of the penultimate; the Vedic śeś chandasi bahulam — Pā. 6-1-70 drops śi, and the n is lost: bheṣajā.

- śaṃyoḥ (p. 101): Śaṃyu is a person's name, an unanalysable base (akhaṇḍa prātipadika); no derivation is needed. The print nevertheless gives one, following the opinion of Śākāṭāyana, with the verse:

नाम च धातुजमाह निरुक्ते व्याकरणे शकटस्य च तोकम् । यन्न पदार्थविशेषसमुत्थं प्रत्ययतः

"A noun is born of a root,' it says in the Nirukta, and [so] in the grammar of Śakaṭa's son [Śākāṭāyana]; what does not arise from the particular sense of a word is to be inferred from the suffix and from the base." ³⁵ So śam (root śamu upaśame) + yu (root yu miśraṇe): śam yauti iti śaṃyuh, "he who joins peace"; if kvip is taken after śam, the lengthening by anunāsikasya kvijhaloḥ kṇiti — अनुनासिकस्य क्विज्झलोः क्विति — Pā. 6-4-15 would be expected; with kvip after yu, the augment tuk by hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk — ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक् — Pā. 6-1-71 would come, hence vic is taken in both; the member accent of a kṛt-compound; the single-substitute accent if a case-ending is added. - tridhātu (p. 101): the Uṇādi sūtra sitanigamimasisacyavidhāṇkruśibhyas tun — सितनिगमिमसिसच्यविधाञ्कुशिभ्यस्तुन् — [Uṇ. 1-69 (as read from the numerals; [?])]: the suffix tun after the roots ṣiñ bandhane, tanu vistāre, gamḥ gatau, masī parimāṇe, saca samavāye, ava rakṣaṇe, ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, kruśa ākrośe; so after dhā; titutratatha... — तितुत्र... — Pā. 7-2-9 bars the iṭ; the suffix is nit, so the root is first-syllable acute; tredhā dhīyate — "it is placed in three ways" — tridhātu, wind, bile and phlegm; after the compound the accent of the later member of a kṛt compound survives; the second-case singular am is dropped by svamornapumṣakāt — स्वमोर्नपुंसकात् — Pā. 7-1-23. - adbhyaḥ (p. 101 end - p. 102): ūḍidaṃ padādy appumṛaidyubhyaḥ — ऊडिदंपदाद्यप्पुम्रैद्युभ्यः — Pā. 6-1-171: after the substitutes ūt, idam, pad, etc., ap, pum, rai, div, which are one-vowelled and final-acute, the asarvanāmasthāna ending is acute; so the fifth-case plural bhyas after ap is acute. Apo bhi — अपो भि — Pā. 7-4-48: before a bh-initial suffix the p of ap becomes t; jhalām jaśo 'nte — झलाम् जशोऽन्ते — Pā. 8-2-39: that t becomes d. - omānam (p. 102): root ava rakṣaṇe; anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante — अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यन्ते — Pā. 3-2-75: manin, kvanip, vanip, vic come also after other roots; so manin: av + man; by jvaratvarasrivyaviyamy... upadhāyās ca — ज्वरत्वरसिर्व्यविमवामुपधायश्च — Pā. 6-4-20 [as printed] — and the sūtra before it, cchvoḥ sūd anunāsike ca — च्छोः शूडनुनासिकेच — Pā. 6-4-19 — ūth replaces the v [and the penultimate]; the continuing words anunāsike and kvijhaloḥ are discussed (the print explains that knīti does not run on, but kvijhaloḥ does, so that the rule applies when kvip, a jhal-initial or nasal-initial suffix follows: for the jvarādi roots both the v and the penultimate become ū); av + man → ū + man; guṇa by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ — Pā. 7-3-84: o + man. If ū were taken from the sūtra jvaratvara... without the continuing anunāsike, then with a + ū + man the vṛddhi of eti-edhaty-ūṭhsu — एत्येधत्तूह्सु — Pā. 6-1-89 would apply and the word would be aumānam, not omānam; for this reason the Kaumudī says: "anunāsikagrahaṇaṃ cānuvartate; avater manpratyaye tasya ṭilope om iti darśanāt" — "the word anunāsike continues; for from av with the suffix man, with the loss of its ṭi, om is seen". In the Veda-bhāṣya the passage yad ijyaratvara... is also used. The print notes two views: that ūth replaces the two letters (v and the penultimate) one after the other, and that the one substitute, owing to the sthāne ["in the place of"] language, replaces both at once; both views are set out in the bhāṣya. - śubhaspatī (p. 102 end – p. 103): root śubha dīptau; kvip by the sampadādi group; ṣaṣṭhyāḥ patiputrapṛṣṭhapārapadapayaspoṣeṣu — षष्ठ्याः पतिपुत्रपृष्ठपारपदपयस्पोषेषु — Pā. 8-3-53: in the Saṃhitā the visarga of a genitive ending becomes s before these words; patī is a vocative dual, āmantrita by sāmantritam — सामन्त्रितम् — Pā. 2-3-48; for the accent, the sup-word śubhaḥ is treated as part of the pada beside patī by subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare — सुबामन्त्रिते पराङ्गवत्स्वरे — Pā. 2-1-2, so the two make one word; āmantritasya ca — आमन्त्रितस्य च — Pā. 8-1-19: both words are wholly unaccented. Translation: "O Aśvins, dive-dive — day by day (dive-dive being read among the names of 'day' as 'dyauḥ, vidyā...'). Yajatā — [you who are] to be worshipped — having reached all round (pari) our earth, the ground that is the sacrificial altar, tridhātu — on the spread barhis furnished with three layers [?] (kakṣyā) — aśāyatam — lie down, three times. O rathyā, you two lords of the chariot, go to tisraḥ — three — altars, the altars of the iṣṭi, the animal and the soma rites. The illustration: ātmeva vātaḥ svasarāṇi — as the vital breath, the self of beings, goes to its bodies, so [you go to the sacrificers' altars]."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³⁷: yajatā (root yaja, the Uṇādi sūtra bhṛmṛdṛṣīyajiparvipaci... — भृमृदृशियजिपर्विपच्यमितमिनमिदयि... — [Uṇ. 3-110 (as read)] giving atac; the ca in atac is a marker, so the final syllable is acute by cita; the dual ending replaced by ā); tridhātu (tredhā dhīyate nidhīyate iti; the Uṇādi suffix tun as above, with the accent of the later member of a kṛt-compound;

36. Reading note: the print's phrase "kakṣyātrayayukte" is clear; "tvadīyāni" in the last sentence is as printed, though the sense is "their [the beings'] bodies".

37. p. 104, characterized the seventh case dropped by supāṃ sulug...); aśāyatam (root śīṇ, śap dropped as the root is of the ad class; the shortening and lengthening of the vowels interchanged in aśayo-: "aśayotām" → aśāyatam); nāsatyā (satsu sādḥū satyau, "good among the good"; na satyau asatyau, na asatyau nāsatyau; "[or] they are true indeed: nāsatyau" so Aurnavābha, per Yāska, Ni. 6-13 [?]; the retention of the natural form of nañ by nabhrāṇnapāt... [Pā. 6-3-75]); rathyā (rathārḥau svāminau, "the two lords worthy of the chariot", yat in the Veda by chandasi ca [Pā. 4-4-[?]]); svasarāṇi (sarantīti sarā indriyāṇi, "those that go are the sarāḥ, the senses"; svakīyāḥ sarā yeṣām śarīrāṇām, a bahuvrīhi, with the accent of the first member).

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Aśvin deities; dive-dive — every day; yajatā — you who are entitled to a share in the sacrifice; naḥ — our; prthivīm — the earth that is the sacrificial altar; pari — pervading all round; tridhātu — on the darbha seat that has three [layers? 'padaras'; the Kannada word is padaragaḷu, "folds"]; triḥ — three times; aśāyatam — lie down (take rest); rathyā — [O two] charioteers, chariot-lords, nāsatyā — Aśvin deities [good among the good]; ātmā iva vātaḥ — as the vital breath, which is like the soul [of beings]; svasarāṇi iva — as it goes and enters its own bodies, which have the senses; tisraḥ — to the three altars, forms of the iṣṭi, the animal and the soma sacrifice; gacchatam — go and be seated."

Bhāvārtha — "O Aśvin deities, you are always fit to move about in a chariot as sacrificers [charioteers]. You are worthy of worship every day in our sacrifice. Pervading our sacrificial ground, the altar, all round, rest on the darbha seats we have spread. As the vital breath, which is like the soul, enters the bodies of beings, so do you also enter our sacrificial altars, which are in the forms of the iṣṭi, the animal and the soma sacrifices, as our very soul, and sit down on the seats."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 105) — "O Aswins, you who deserve to be sacrificed to by us surround the earth from all sides; O good charioteers, pervade the three distant worlds as the vital breath enters its habitations (bodies)" ³⁸

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ), pp. 105–106 - yajatā = yaṣṭavyau: "worthy to be worshipped with hymns of praise and the like in the performance of the sacrifice." - dive-dive: "Among the twelve names for day beginning vastoh, dyauḥ [Ni. 1-9 [?]] the word dive-dive is read; so this word means 'by day', or 'daily'." - nāsatyā = aśvinau na asatyau, or nāsatyau: "Yāska explains this word as follows:"

सत्यावेव नासत्यावित्यौर्णवाभः । सत्यस्य प्रणेतारावित्याग्रायणः । नासिकाप्रभवौ बभूवुरिति वा ॥ (नि. ६-१३ [?])

satyāv eva nāsatyāv ity aurnāvābhaḥ | satyasya praṇetārāv ity āgrāyaṇaḥ | nāsikāprabhavau babhūvatur iti vā || (ni. 6-13 [?])

"That is: those who speak truth only, who are never speakers of untruth, are called nāsatyā — the opinion of the teacher Aurnāvābha; 'leaders [or: inspirers] of satya, of water or of sacrifice' — the opinion of Āgrāyaṇa; and, according to the historians (aitihāsikas), since they were born from the nose, they are called nāsatyā. They explain: in former times the goddess Chāyā, the wife of Sūrya, becoming angry with Sūrya for some reason, took the form of a mare and lived in the forest; and Sūrya, knowing this, took the form of a stallion and went to the place where she was; and while they were together the Aśvins were born from the nose of the goddess Chāyā, who was in the form of a mare: this account is found in the Brahma-purāṇa and other texts." ³⁹ - rathyā = rathārḥau svāminau: "worthy to move about in a chariot; charioteers." - parāvataḥ = dūrasthitān trīn lokān: "three distant worlds: the three worlds, earth, mid-region [and heaven], that are far off. This word occurs in many ṛks, such as:"

40 - ātmeva vātaḥ svasarāṇi = prāṇavāyuh śarīrarūpāni svagrāṇi yathā vyāpnoti tathety arthaḥ: "as the vital breath goes to and enters the body, its own dwelling-place, so do you come to this sacrificial altar — such is the sense." - tisraḥ = aiṣṭikapāśukasaumikarūpā vedīḥ: "tisraḥ means three, or three places; the three places the bhāṣyakāra explains as the altar or sacrificial ground in the three kinds of sacrifice — the iṣṭi, the animal sacrifice and the soma sacrifice."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴¹ - yajatā: root yaja devapūjāda; bhṛmṛdṛśiyajiparvipacy-amitamin amidayi... [as printed: bhṛmṛdṛśiyajiparvipacyamitaminamidayibhyo 'tac] — the Uṇādi sūtra [Uṇ. 3-110 (as read)] gives the suffix atac after the roots bhṛñ bharāṇe, mṛñ prāṇatyāge, dṛśir prekṣaṇe, yaja devapūjāda, parva pūraṇe, ḍupacaṣ pāke, amu gatyādiṣu, tamu kāṅkṣāyām,

39. Translation of the Nirukta passage editorial and tentative; the Kannada paraphrase is rendered as printed. The reference numeral is [?].

40. Untranslated in the source. My glosses, editorial and tentative: 1. "with which [you go to] three distant [regions], all the shining [realms] of heaven"; 2. "come, over three distant [lands], come, over the five peoples"; 3. "those who from afar seek kinship, dear to Manu, the births of Vivasvat". All three references are read from small Kannada numerals and are [?].

ṇamu prahvatve śabde, paryu gatikānte; the c of atac is a marker — cit [as printed: citaḥ, Pā. 6-1-163] — hence the final syllable of yajata is acute, since "the letter c in a suffix is for the sake of the accent on the last letter of the base-and-suffix group" (the print's explanation of citaḥ saprakṛter bahvakajartham, read as printed); the nominative dual, with ā by supām sulug... - tridhātu: "its derivation is in the preceding mantra Rik 6; the two words differ in meaning; here the locative singular is dropped by supām sulug... and the n is lost."

- asāyatam: root śīṇ svapne, ad-class; laṇ, third person dual ātām of the ātmanepada; śī + ātām; śap elided by ādiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ — आदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः — Pā. 2-4-72; guṇa of śī before a sārvadhātuka ending by śīṇaḥ sārvaadhātuke guṇaḥ — शीङः सार्वधातुकेगुणः — [Pā. 7-4-21 (as read from the numerals)], an exception to the ban kniti ca; aśe + ātām, ay-substitution, aśayātām; the long ā before the t and the short vowel are interchanged by Vedic usage: aśāyatam.
- nāsatyā: satsu sādhuḥ satyau — "good among the good": tatra sādhuḥ — तत्र साधुः — Pā. 4-4-98 gives yat; na satyau asatyau, a nañ-compound; the n of nañ lost by nalopo nañāḥ — नलोपो नञः — Pā. 6-3-73; again na asatyau, a nañ-compound; the n would again be lost, but prakṛtibhāva — the retention of the natural form — is taught by nabhrāṇnapānnavedānāsatyānamucinakulanakhanapuṃsakanakṣatranal prakṛtyā — नभ्राण्नपान्नवेदानासत्यानमुचि... — Pā. 6-3-75 (the print cuts the sūtra short), "[the word] nāsatyā being enumerated there"; the sense is "among the good ones, not those who are not good — that is, the good", for "dvau nañau prakṛtam artham draḍhayetaḥ" — "two negatives confirm the original sense"; Yāska, in the passage satyāv eva nāsatyāv ity aurṇavābhaḥ (Ni. 6-13 [?]), says that what was said before is acceptable to Aurnavābha.

- rathyā: root ramu krīḍāyām; the Uṇādi suffix kthan by hanikuṣinīramikāśibhyaḥ kthan — हनिकुषिनीरमिकाशिभ्यः कथन् — [Uṇ. 2-[?]]; the suffix is kit, so anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kniti — अनुदात्तोपदेशवनतितनोत्यादीनामनुनासिकलोपो झलि क्ङिति — Pā. 6-4-37 drops the m: ratha. Ratham arhataḥ rathyau — "who deserve a chariot" — by chandasi ca — छन्दसि च — [Pā. 5-1-67 (as read)]: yat in the Veda after a base in the second case, in the sense arhati; ratha + ya; yasyeti ca — Pā. 6-4-148: loss of a; rathya; the vocative dual in ā.
- svasarāṇi: root sṛ gatau; saranti gacchanti iti sarāḥ, "that which goes toward its objects" — the senses; sve sarāḥ yeṣām tāni — "those whose senses are their own": a bahuvrīhi, the first member's accent holds; sva is acute as a base by the accent of the nominal stem. Translation: "O Ásvins, saptamātr̥bhiḥ — by the seven mothers: the seven rivers beginning with the Gaṅgā named in the mantra 'imaṃ me gaṅge' (Ṛg. 10-75-5 [?]), the mothers, the producers of those particular waters. Sindhubhiḥ — with the flowing waters, named vasatīvarī, the soma pressing has been done triḥ, three times (the sentence is to be completed so). And so in another Brāhmaṇa it is handed down: 'Eight times he presses; the second, eleven times; the third, twelve times' (Tai. Saṃ. 6-4-3-1 [?]). Āhāvāḥ — [the vessels] that hold the soma with the water so described, like wells, three in number, called droṇakalaśa, ādhavanīya, pūtabhṛt, are ready. In these three particular vessels, tredhā — in three ways, belonging to the three pressings — the oblation (havis) called soma has been made. Tisraḥ pṛthivīḥ upari — above the three worlds, earth and the others — pravā — you two, who go forward — divo nākam — the sun belonging to the heavenly world — rakṣethe protect. What sort of sun? Dyubhiḥ — by days — aktubhiḥ — by nights — hitam, established: the sun rises in the day, goes down at night; so the sun is regulated by day and night."

Bhāvārtha — "O Aśvin deities, you travel over the three worlds, protecting the sun of the heavenly world, who is established so as to make day and night. For you we have performed the soma pressing with sacred water brought from the seven rivers beginning with the Gaṅgā. The soma offering has been prepared in the three vessels like wells, dronakalaśa, dhavanīya and pūtabhṛt. Come and enjoy it."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 109) — "Aswins, thrice the three jars are filled with the seven mothered streams for you and in three ways the oblations is prepared ; rising above the three worlds you keep the [printed as a raised word] sun steady in the sky, who is established for both night and day."⁴³

Translation: "O Nāsatyas, Āśvins: of your chariot, which is trivṛt — furnished with three corners (āśri): the two shafts (īṣā) are joined at the front, and that [junction] is one corner; at the back they are separated, and there two corners are formed — of such a chariot, trī cakrā — the three wheels — where are they? Where they stand we cannot see. Those particular timbers sanīlāḥ — [the nīla is the seat on the chariot, like a house, for sitting in] — those timbers which go with the nīla, vandhuraḥ, the supports for the fastening of the seat, three in number [two shafts with the axle, as I read]: where are they? We do not know where they stand. Vājinaḥ rāsabhasya — of your strong ass, standing in the place of a horse — yogaḥ, the yoking to the chariot: when? At what time it has been done we do not see. By that chariot — furnished with three wheels, three timbers for the seat, and the yoking of the ass — yajñam, our sacrifice, upayāthaḥ — you two reach our place of yoking [= arrival]: of such a chariot — the connection with what went before."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁴⁸: trī cakrā (the śi is lost in both words by śeś chandasi bahulam); vandhuraḥ (root bandha bandhane, the Uṇādi suffix ura; the change of b to v is Vedic); sanīlāḥ (sa in place of saha by vopasarjanasya).

Pratipadārtha — "nāsatyā — O Ásvín deities; yena — by which chariot; yajñam — to our place of sacrifice; upayāthaḥ — you come and arrive; trivṛtaḥ — [furnished] with three corners, triangular, of wood; rathasya — of the chariot; trī cakrā — three wheels; kva — where? ye — which timbers; sanīlāḥ — with the seat, like a house, for sitting; vandhuraḥ — the supports for building [the seat]; trayaḥ — three [two shafts and one axle]; kva — where? (We do not see these); vājinaḥ — of the strong; rāsabhasya — [instead of a horse] of the ass; kadā — at what time; yogaḥ — [the ass] is yoked to your chariot (this we do not know)."

— "O Ásvín deities, we do not see any of the parts of your chariot. Where are the three wheels of your chariot, which is triangular with three corners? The two shafts and the axle, the supports for building the seat in the chariot where one sits as in a house: where are they? And at what time do you yoke your strong ass in place of a horse to your chariot? That also we do not know. We know only that you come in that chariot to our sacrificial place."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 113) — "Where are the wheels of the triangular car ? Where are the three beams with seats on them? when will you harness your powerful donkey (ass) to that car that you may come to this sicrifice?" ⁴⁹

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 114–115

"In this mantra the ṛṣi asks three questions: Where [are the parts] of the three wheels of your chariot? Of the three corners? When will you yoke the ass in place of a horse to your chariot? Though we do not know these things, he prays that you come in your chariot to our place of sacrifice."

- trivṛtaḥ = trisaṃkhyākair aśribhir upetasya rathasya: "of a chariot furnished with three corners: with three-cornered, i.e. having three corners, a triangular cart [the print's English]. It is said in the Veda that the chariot of the Aśvins is of this kind. The bhāṣyakāra has explained these three corners thus: 'īṣādvayaṃ pūrvabhāge saṃyujyate | seyam ekāśriḥ | prṣṭhabhāge viyujyate | tatra koṇadvayaṃ sampadyate | īdṛśasya rathasya sambandhīni trīṇi cakrāṇi kva ||' Here 'triangular' means: two upright pieces of timber (beams, in the print's English) are joined at the front, and that makes one corner; behind, another timber joins the ends of those two beams, and at the back there are two corners, at the two ends. In all, the three timbers make three corners. Three sides (beams) of the triangle form the three angles [the print's English]. Near each angle is one wheel below it, so that the chariot has three wheels in all. In the middle of these three wheels there is a seat-place called nīla, on which the Aśvins sit."
- vandhuraḥ = "the seat of a chariot; the place for sitting in a chariot: seat in the chariot [the print's English]. In general the seat in the Aśvins' chariot is called tri-vandhura. Though the word in this ṛk is vandhura, the sense of tri-vandhura must be given. For examples we give here one or two ṛks that contain this word or the word tri-vandhura:"

49. Printed so, "sicrifice" [sic], with a stray full stop after the question mark.

51. The source leaves all these ṛks untranslated. My glosses, editorial and tentative: "we mount your wide [?] chariot, golden, O Dasras"; "with the three-seated, three-cornered, well-shaped chariot come, O Aśvins"; "the three-seated lord of bounty, of all good fortune, would bring us welfare for biped and quadruped"; "the chariot of you two that is three-seated, with golden reins, O Aśvins". The reference numerals are all in small Kannada digits and are [?] or not read; the second and the last-but-one quotations are the least secure.

"and in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa and other mantras also [the references, in small Kannada numerals, are not reproduced because they could not be read reliably]: since the word rāsabha is used there in the singular, it is clear that the chariot of the Aśvins has one ass, a [kind of] horse." ⁵²

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵³ - kva: kimo 't — किमोऽत् — Pā. 5-3-12: the suffix at after the base kim in the seventh case ["in what place"]; this is a prāgdiśiya suffix; from prāggiśo vibhaktiḥ — प्राग्दिशो विभक्तिः — Pā. 5-3-1 up to dikśabdebhyaḥ saptaṃpāñcamīprathamābhyo digdeśakāleṣu — दिक्शब्देभ्यः सप्तमीपञ्चमीप्रथमाभ्यो दिग्देशकालेषु — Pā. 5-3-27 [as read], the suffixes are called vibhakti; for them na vibhaktau tusmāḥ — न विभक्तौ तुस्माः — Pā. 1-3-4 forbids the it-name of the t, s,

Translation: "O Nāsatyas, Aśvins, come iha karmaṇi — to this rite. Here, by us, the oblation is poured. And you two, with your mouths madhupebhiḥ āsabhiḥ — mouths that drink sweet liquids — madhvaḥ pibatam — drink the sweet oblations. Savitā, the sun, before the dawn (uśasaḥ pūrvam) iṣyati — sends — your chariot, the Aśvins' chariot, ṛtāya, for the sake of our sacrifice. What sort? Citram — variegated by the wheels and so forth described before; ghṛtavantam — furnished with ghṛta, ghee, the means of greasing the axle [as I read akṣāñjana-; the print is clear enough on the other words]."

End of the grammar within the bhāṣya ⁵⁵: yuvoh — "explained already under yuvor hi yantram" (Rik 1); iṣyati — root iṣa gatau; śyan is nit, so the root's first syllable is acute, and hi ca [Pā. 8-1-34, as read from the numerals [?]] bars the lowering of the verb after hi.

Pratipadārtha — "nāsatyā — O Aśvin deities (come here for the sake of our sacrifice); āgacchatam — graciously come; haviḥ — the oblation; hūyate — is being offered; madhupebhiḥ — [with mouths] able to drink sweet liquid (able to enjoy tasting it); āsabhiḥ — with mouths; madhvaḥ — our sweet oblations; pibatam — drink; savitā — the Sun; uśasaḥ pūrvam — before the dawn-time; yuvoh — your; citram — wonderful (by its three wheels and other extraordinary parts); ghṛtavantam — furnished with oil (put in the hole that has a rim, so that the wind turns well [the Kannada gloss reads "so that the air circulates well in the axle-hole with its rim"]); ratham — chariot; ṛtāya — for our sacrifice (for your coming to our sacrifice); iṣyati hi — sends, does he not?"

— "O Aśvin deities, kindly come to our sacrifice; we offer you sweet oblations. Drink this oblation with your mouths that are always drinking sweet liquid. For this very purpose Sūrya sends your chariot to you even before the dawn. That chariot is furnished with the three wheels and other wonderful parts, and with the oil that lets the wheels turn smoothly."

55. characterized

— "Nasatyas, come to the sacrifice ; the oblation is offered ; drink the soma juice with your mouths relishing its sweet savour ; before the dawn Savitri (Sun) sends forth your wonderful and well-oiled chariot to the sacrifice" .

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 118–119 - pūrvam uśasaḥ — "before the dawn-time: that is, in the sacrifice, after midnight until the dawn-time they recite the Āśvina-kratu hymns during the recitation of the prātaranuvāka mantras. The ṛṣi prays that [the Āśvins] come to the sacrificial ground at the time those mantras are being recited, before the dawn, in order to receive them." - ṛtāya = yajñāya: "Yāska explains the word ṛta as satyaṃ vā yajñam vā (Ni. 4-[?]) — 'truth or sacrifice'; here the sense 'sacrifice' is given." - citram = pūrvoktais cakratrayādibhiś citram: "a wonderful chariot with the three wheels and the rest as described before. Ordinarily a chariot has four wheels, and the chariot is square; but the Āśvins' chariot is triangular and has three wheels, so it is not an ordinary chariot but a wonderful one." - ghṛtavantam = akṣāñjanasādhanena ghṛtenopetam: "so that the wheels turn properly, it is the custom to put grease in the axle-hole and in the hole between the wheels. In the same way, here, it is a chariot in which, in place of grease, ghee has been applied to the axles and the wheels turn smoothly."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵⁶ - gacchatam (p. 119): root gamḥ gatau; loṭ, second-person dual thas, replaced by tam by tasthasthamipām tāmtamtāmaḥ — तस्थस्थमिपां तांतंतामः — (Pā. 3-4-101, number as read); gam + tam, śap; iṣugamiyamām chaḥ — इषुगमियमां छः — (Pā. 7-3-77, as read) gives ch for the m; tuk by ch ca (i.e. che ca — छेच — Pā. 6-1-73, as read); ścutva, stoḥ ścunā ścuḥ — स्तोः श्रुना श्रुः — (Pā. 8-4-40) giving cch; the loṭ-substitute tam is lasārvadhātuka and stands after śap, which is anupadeśa; tiṅ is accented [anudātta] by tāsyānudātenñīdadupadeśāt... [Pā. 6-1-186, as read [?]], and the root's accent remains. The page goes on to explain that the

meaning "come to the sacrifice and drink the oblation" calls for the particle ca to be understood after āgacchatam, "nāsatyā āgacchatam pibatam ca"; since the word ca is not actually used, cādilope vibhāṣā — चदिलोपे विभाषा — (Pā. 8-1-63) is applied: when ca, vā, ha, aha, eva are dropped, the verb standing first in the sentence [gacchatam] does not become sarvānudātta; the sūtra's sense is that the grammar does not itself prescribe the dropping of cādi words, but where the sense of ca is felt from the context and the word is not used, it must be understood that it has been dropped. - hūyate (p. 119 end – p. 120): root hvě śabde, laṭ in the passive; laṭ is replaced by ta, with ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭere — टित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे — (number not read) giving e for the ṭi of the ending; hve + ya + te; sārvadhātuke yak — सार्वधातुकेयक् — (Pā. 3-1-67) gives yak in the passive; vacisvapiyajādīnām kiti — वचिस्वपियजादीनां किति — (Pā. 6-1-15) gives saṃprasāraṇa, whence hu + ya + te; halaś ca — हलश्च — (Pā. 6-4-2, as read [?]) lengthens the vowel of a base that has saṃprasāraṇa before a final consonant-group; hūyate; the te is lasārvadhātuka and unaccented by tāsyānudāttenñid...; the yak suffix makes the accent fall on its own ya [as the print says, yak is kit: yakpratyayasvareṇa udāttaḥ]. - madhvaḥ (p. 120): "madhu is derived, as I said before, by the Uṇādi sūtra phalipāṭi... [Uṇ. 1-18 (?) [?]]; the word is neuter, but here it is used as masculine by vyatyaya: śas of the second case plural, madhu + as; by rule prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ — प्रथमयोः पूर्वसवर्णः — (Pā. 6-1-102) the long vowel of the first should result, but by Vedic usage here yaṇādeśa comes: madhvaḥ." - madhupebhiḥ: madhu pibantīti madhupāḥ, taiḥ; root pā pāne; with madhu as upapada the suffix ka after a root ending in ā, āto'nupasarge kaḥ — आतोऽनुपसर्गे कः — (Pā. 3-2-3); ātoloṇa iṭi ca — Pā. 6-4-64: loss of ā; pa is acute by the suffix-accent. - āsabhiḥ: after āsyā, bhis; pad-dan-no-māsa-hṛn-niśa-...-śas-prabhṛtiṣu — पदन्नोमास्हृन्निशसन्... — (Pā. 6-1-63): āsan replaces āsyā; n lost by na lopah prātipadikāntasya — न लोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य — (Pā. 8-2-7). - yuvoh: "explained under yuvor hi

yantram" (Rik 1). - iṣyati: root iṣa gatau, divādi; laṭ, tip; divādibhyaḥ śyan; śyan is nī, so hi ca prevents the loss of accent and ñnityādir nityam — ज्नित्यादिर्नित्यम् — (Pā. 6-1-197) makes the first syllable acute. Rik 10 ends here (| | 10 | |).

Translation: "O Nāsatyas, Ásvins, free of falsehood and untruth: with tribhir ekādaśaiḥ — the three elevens: 'you gods who are eleven in heaven' (Ṛg. 1-139-11 [?]) and so on in the mantras — the gods of three groups, each of eleven, come, together with them, iha, here, to this place of the soma pressing and sacrifice, for the madhupeya — the drinking of the sweet substance, soma [the middle phrase of the print is partly obscured]. Āyuh — our lifetime — pra tāriṣtam — extend. Rapāṃsi — our sins — nir mṛkṣatam — cleanse completely. Dveṣaḥ — those who hate — sedhatam — ward off. Sacābhuvā — be together with us."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁵⁸: tribhiḥ, ekādaśaiḥ (ekādaśānām pūraṇaiḥ, the suffix ḍaṭ in the ordinal sense, tasya pūraṇe ḍaṭ [Pā. 5-2-48, as read]); madhupeyam (root pā, yat after a vowel-final root, ac-ending roots by aco yat [Pā. 3-1-97, as read], ī for ā by īdyati [Pā. 6-4-65, as read], yato nāvaḥ initial-acute rule, the compound madhu ca tat peyam ca, accent of the later member of a kṛt-compound); tāriṣtam (root tṛ plavanataraṇayoḥ; luṇ in the sense of a prayer, Vedic; cli → sic, the īṭ augment, with a vṛto vā-type rule on the length of the augment; the Vedic absence of aṭ; the print adds that tāriṣtam and mṛkṣatam are not lowered, by the understood but unused ca, as with gacchatam above); mṛkṣatam (root mṛśa āmarśane; chandasi luṇlaṇḍiṭaḥ, luṇ in the sense of loṭ; śala igupadhād aniṭaḥ kṣaḥ — Pā. 3-1-45 [as read]; kṣa is it-marked, no iṭ, no guṇa); sedhatam (root ṣidhu gatyām; here the plain root has the sense of "preventing" because it is understood with prati; loṭ in the prayer sense, śap pit so unaccented; tiṅ [tāsyānudātennid..., Pā. 6-1-186 [?]] so the root's accent stands); dveṣaḥ (anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante — vic in the agent sense, "[those] who make hatred"); bhavatam (the word dveṣaḥ is in another sentence and so bhavatam [being the sentence's first verb] is not lowered; a rule is cited from the vārtika that yuṣmad-asmad-substitutes come only in the same sentence, Pā. 8-1-[?] [?]); sacābhuvā (sacā is an indeclinable of the meaning of saha; Yaska: 'sacā sahetya artha iti' (Ni. 5-[?]); sacā bhavate iti sacābhūḥ, kvip; oḥ supi — ओः सुपि — Pā. 6-4-83 would give yaṇ, but na bhūsudhiyoḥ — न भूसुधियोः — Pā. 6-4-85 forbids the yaṇ-substitution for bhū and sudhī; the dual ending replaced by ā by supāṇ sulug...)."

Pratipadārtha — "nāsatyā — [O two] free of untruth; aśvinā — O Aśvin deities; tribhir ekādaśaiḥ devebhiḥ — with the thrice-eleven, i.e. thirty-three, gods; madhupeyam — for [the sake of drinking] the sweet and drinkable soma juice; iha — to this place of our sacrifice; ā yātam — come; āyuh — our lifetime; pra tāriṣṭam — increase; rapāṃsi — our sins; niḥ mṛkṣatam — wash well, make pure; dveṣaḥ — those who hate us (our enemies); sedhatam — keep off; sacābhuvā — being with us; bhavatam — be."

— "O Aśvin deities, you never speak untruth. Kindly come to this place of our sacrifice with the thirty-three gods, to drink the sweet soma juice. Increase our lives, wash away our sins and make us pure, and keep off our enemies. Be always with us."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 122) — "Come hither, O Nasatyas, with the thrice eleven gods to drink the sweet Soma ; prolong our lives, efface our faults ; ward off our enemies and be ever with us." ⁵⁹.

tribhir ekādaśaiḥ — "The meaning of this ṛk is clear. Tribhir ekādaśaiḥ means 'thrice eleven', or thirty-three. In the Ṛgveda, and in the other Vedas here and there, it is stated that there are thirty-three gods. In some ṛks it is said that one group of eleven gods dwells on the earth, another group of eleven in the mid-region, and a third group of eleven in heaven."

⁶⁰ "Besides these ṛks, in the Yajurveda — Taittirīya Saṃhitā 1-4-[?] [?], Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 4-5-[?]-[?] [?] and other [texts] — the number of the gods is likewise said to be thirty-three. In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa these thirty-three gods are given as the Vasus 8, the Rudras 11, the Ādityas 12, and Dyāvāpṛthivī 2 — in all thirty-three; but that division must be understood as a separate matter. The notion that in each of the three worlds — earth, mid-region, heaven — there are eleven gods, thirty-three in all, is the one specially seen in the Ṛgveda. The statement in the Purāṇas and elsewhere that there are thirty-three koṭi gods may rest on [a misreading of] what is said in the Ṛgveda. In the Viṣṇu Purāṇa too [the count is given as] Vasus 8, Rudras 11, Ādityas 12, Prajāpati 1, the vaśaṭkāra 1 — in all thirty-three gods."

= "the drinking of soma juice that is sweet like honey."

pra tāriṣṭam = tvā plavanataraṇayoḥ | pravardhayatam — "let there be increase."

rapāṃsi = asmadīyāni pāpāni — "our sins [the print adds the English: our sins, our faults or errors &c]. On this word Yāska says 'rapo ripram iti pāpanāmanī bhavataḥ' (Ni. 4-[?] [?]): the two words rapaḥ and ripram are names of sin."

nir mṛkṣatam = mṛśa āmarśane | niḥśeṣeṇa śodhayatam — "cleanse fully, wipe away [sins], and so on."

60. Untranslated in the source. My glosses, editorial and tentative: 1.45.2 "for the giver the gods, O Agni, are attentive [?], wise: bring those thirty-three, O red-horsed, lover of songs"; 3.6.9 "bring the thirty-three gods with their wives, and rejoice according to [their] custom [?]" ; 3.9.9 "three hundred, three thousand, thirty and nine gods served Agni". The reference numerals are as read from small Kannada digits [?]; for 3.9.9 the second numeral is least secure.

sedhatam = ṣidhu gatyām — "though the root ṣidh has the sense of motion, the bhāṣyakāra says that here, being joined with the preverb prati, it has the sense prati-ṣidh = 'prevent' (pratiṣedhatam): 'keep off, obstruct'."

sacābhuvā = sacety ayaṃ nipātaḥ sahaśabdasamānārthaḥ | sāhāyyārthaṃ asmābhiḥ sahāvasthitau — "here sacā is [said in the Kannada to be] an upasarga; its sense is saha, 'with'; so sacābhuvā means 'staying with [us]': be with us, near us, for our protection."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁶¹ - tribhiḥ: ṣaṭtricaturbhyo halādiḥ — षट्त्रिचतुर्भ्यो हलादिः — (Pā. 6-1-180, number as read [?]): an ending beginning with a consonant, after ṣaṭ, tri or catur, is acute; so bhis is acute. - ekādaśaiḥ: ekādaśānāṃ pūraṇāḥ, taiḥ; the aṃśa (part) that completes the number eleven; tasya pūraṇe ḍaṭ — तस्य पूरणे ङट् — (Pā. 5-2-48): after a word denoting a number, in the sixth case, the suffix ḍaṭ comes when the completer of that number is meant. - madhupeyam: pātum योग्यam peyam; aco yat — अचो यत् — (Pā. 3-1-97): after a root ending in a vowel the suffix yat; pā + ya; īdyati — ईद्यति — (Pā. 6-4-65): before yat, an ā [of a root] becomes ī; then guṇa by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ — Pā. 7-3-84; yato 'nāvaḥ — यतोऽनावः — (Pā. 6-1-213): a word ending in the suffix yat — other than nau — and having two syllables is first-syllable acute; hence peya is first-syllable acute; madhu ca tat peyam ca is a karmadhāraya; gatikārapapadāt kṛt — Pā. 6-2-139: the accent of the later member, being a kṛt, is retained.

62. The twelfth ṛk is the second Triṣṭup of the sūkta, per the introduction on p. 71.

the first verb, and by tiñ ñatiñah it is not wholly unaccented; and ādiḥ sico'nyatarasyām — आदिः सिचोऽन्यतरस्याम् — Pā. 6-1-186 [as read, [?]] gives the first syllable of a sic-ending word the acute, optionally: thus ādyudātta."

- mṛkṣatam (pp. 125–126): root mṛśa āmarśane, tudādi ("touching"); here, with the preverb niḥ, the sense is "cleansing"; chandasi luñlañliṭah — छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः — Pā. 3-4-6: in the Veda luñ, lañ, liṭ are used optionally in the senses of all tenses — here for loṭ; thas → tam; mṛś + cli + tam; śala igupadhād aniṭah kṣah — शल इगुपधादनितः क्सः — Pā. 3-1-45 (śal = ś, ṣ, s, h; ik = i, u, ṛ, ḷ; "upadhā" is the letter before the last; a root so characterised, without the augment iṭ, takes ksa for cli, k being an it); so mṛś + sa + tam; ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt — Pā. 7-2-10: no iṭ, the root being counted among the anudāttet roots in the mnemonic verse kṛśir-damśi-diśī-dṛśī-mṛś ("mṛś is among them"); bahulam chandasy amānyoge — as above: no aṭ; the root ends in ś; ś → ṣ by vraścabhrasjasrjamṛjayajarājabhrājacchaśām ṣah — Pā. 8-2-36; mṛṣ + s + tam; ṣadhoh kassi — षढोः कः सि — Pā. 8-2-41: ṣ → k before s: mṛk + sa + tam. "In the Veda-bhāṣya it is written pattva-kutve; it would be correct to write pattva-katve". Then ādeśapratyayayoḥ turns s into ṣ: mṛkṣatam.
- sedhatam (p. 126): root śidha gatyām, "to go"; "the form śidhu is not found in the present Dhātupāṭha"; with the preverb prati it means "to ward off" (pratiśedha); the preverbs are only indicators (dyotaka), i.e. words that make the force of a verb evident; "so, even though there is no indicator, the sense that appears when prati is joined to śidh is the one meant here". Vidhinimantraṇāmantraṇādhīṣṭasampraśnaprārthaneṣu liñ — विधिनिमन्त्रणामन्त्रणाधीष्टसंप्रश्नप्रार्थनेषु लिङ् — (Pā. 3-3-161) and loṭ ca — लोट् च — (Pā. 3-3-162): loṭ in the sense of a prayer; second-person dual thas, śap; ṣ → s [as the page says, the śa of the root's initial]; loṭo lañvat; tasthasthamipām...: tam; śap is a non-taught (anupadeśa) element, so tāsyānudātenñidadupadeśāt... [Pā. 6-1-186 as read (?)] makes the lasārvadhātuka unaccented, and pit-ness of śap does the same; anudāttam sarvam apādādau — अनुदात्तं सर्वमपादादौ — (Pā. 8-1-18): everything is unaccented except at the beginning of a foot — but the verb stands at the beginning of the fourth foot, so this does not apply; alternatively tiñ natiñah — तिङ्ङितिङः — (Pā. 8-1-28): a tiñ after a non-tiñ word is unaccented, and here sedhatam stands after the tiñ mṛkṣatam, so it is not unaccented; dhātoḥ (Pā. 6-1-162) keeps the root's own acute.

- dveṣaḥ (p. 126 end): root dviṣa aprītau, adādi; anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante — अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यन्ते — (Pā. 3-2-75): manin, kvanip, vanip, vic come after other roots too; so vic in the agent sense.
- bhavatam (p. 127): root bhū, loṭ, second-person dual: "there are two sentences: 'sedhatam dveṣaḥ' (ward off those who hate) and 'sacābhuvā bhavataṃ' (be with us). For the lowering [nighāta] to come, the cause and the thing caused must lie in one sentence, as the rule samānavākye nighāte yuṣmadasmadādeśā vaktavyāḥ — समानवाक्ये निघाते युष्मदस्मदादेशा वक्तव्याः — [Pā. 8-1-72-3 as read (?], a vārtika] teaches. Here, for bhavatam to be lowered, the word dveṣaḥ before it would have to be its cause; but that word lies in another sentence; so there is no sarvānudātta, and the root's accent stands."
- sacābhuvā: Yāska in the Nirukta (Ni. 5-5 [?]): sacā sahetya arthaḥ; sacā bhavataḥ iti sacābhuvau, suffix kvip; after sacā bhū the nominative dual au; oḥ supi — ओः सुपि — (Pā. 6-4-83): before a vowel-initial sup, a base whose last [dhātu] syllable is u/ū — with a preceding non-conjunct — takes yañ; here the ban na bhūsudhiyoḥ — न भूसुधियोः — (Pā. 6-4-85) stops the yañ for bhū, sudhī; then aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor

īyaṇuvaṇau — अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवां य्वोरियडुवडौ — (Pā. 6-4-77): before a vowel-initial suffix a base ending in śnu, a dhātu ending in i/ u, and bhrū takes īyaṇ/uvaṇ; so sacābhuv + au, and supāṃ sulug... gives ā for au. Rik 11 ends here (| | 11 | |).

Translation: "O Ásvins, together with your trivṛt chariot — which, its course being unobstructed, travels in the three worlds — bring (ā vahatam) to us arvāñcam, towards us, suvīram — furnished with good heroic men, sons, servants and the like — rayim, wealth. Bring it and cause us to obtain it. Śṛṇvantā — you who hear our praise — vām — you — I call avase, for our protection, johavīmi — I invoke. [You two, then, be] vājasātau — in battle [saṃgrāma], since vājasātau is read in the lists of words for 'battle', 'mahādhana' — for our success, vṛdhe ca bhavatam — and be for our increase. [The words 'you two, then' stand where the print is not clear.]"

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁶³: suvīram (śobhanā vīrā yasya, a bahuvrīhi, with the first-member accent of vīravīryau ca); śṛṇvantā (root śru śravaṇe, laṭ, śatṛ; śruvaḥ śṛ ca — Pā. 3-1-74 — śṛ in place of śru, śnu for śap; huśnuvoḥ sārvaadhātuke — Pā. 6-4-87 — yaṇ; the dual in ā by supāṃ sulug...); johavīmi (root hvṛ spardhāyām śabde ca; yaṇ with luk; yaji... [read: yaṇo vā, the optional īṭ], the abhyasta accent); vṛdhe (sampadādibhyaḥ kvip); vājasātau (root ṣaṇu dāne, ktin; titutratathasisusarakaseṣu ca — Pā. 7-2-9; janasanakhanām sañjhaloḥ — Pā. 6-4-42; accent of the first member of a bahuvrīhi).

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Ásvin deities; trivṛtā rathena — [with the chariot] that moves without obstruction in the three worlds; naḥ — our; arvāñcam — directed towards us; suvīram — endowed with good sons and servants; rayim — wealth; ā vahatam — bring; śṛṇvantā — those who listen to our praises; vām — you two; avase — for the sake of our protection; johavīmi — I call; naḥ — to us; vājasātau — in battle; vṛdhe ca — and for our success (for victory); bhavatam — be."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Aśvin deities, your chariot can move through the three worlds without any obstruction. Coming with it, give us wealth together with a good line of descendants, and listen to our praise with favour. Therefore I call on you for our protection. In the time of our battle, be the ones who win us victory."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 129)

— "Sitting in your chariot that traverses the three worlds, bring us plenty of wealth accompanied by valiant progeny ; I call upon you both for protection, listen to me and give us victory (encouragement) in battle" .

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 129 - trivṛtā = apratihatagatitvāt triṣu lokeṣu vartamānena: "there is no obstruction to the travel of these deities; the meaning is that they can move in all three worlds, earth, mid-region and heaven." - śṛṇvantā = asmadīyāṃ stutiṃ śṛṇvantau: "those who listen attentively to the hymns and so on that we make." - avase = asmadrakṣaṇārtham: "for our protection." - vṛdhe ca no bhavatam: "for our growth, or for encouraging us — you strive." - vājasātau — "since vājasātau is read among the forty-six words for 'battle', raṇaḥ, vivāk and the rest (Ni. 2-[?] [?]), this word means in the battle — the battle we have with our enemies."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁶⁴ - suvīram (p. 130): śobhanāḥ vīrāḥ yasya saḥ, a bahuvrīhi — "[the wealth] with good heroes"; vīravīryau ca — वीरवीर्यौ च — (Pā. 6-2-120): in a bahuvrīhi the words vīra, vīrya after su are first-syllable acute; vīra is from vīra vikrāntau (the tenth class [as read: of the tenth group]) with the ac suffix of the pacādi kind; citaḥ — चितः — (Pā. 6-1-163) gives it the natural final acute. - śṛṇvantā: root śru śravaṇe, 5th class; laṭ; laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau, śatṛ; śruvaḥ śr ca — श्रुवः शृ च — (Pā. 3-1-74): śr is substituted for śru, and śnu for śap; śnu by atideśa is ñit, so no guṇa; with the vowel-initial at as cause, aci śnudhātubhruvām... — Pā. 6-4-77 would apply, but huśnuvoḥ sārvaadhātuke — हुश्नुवोः सार्वधातुके — (Pā. 6-4-87) gives yaṇ for the u of a base ending in śnu, or of a dhātu having several vowels and preceded by a conjunct [as the print explains], before a vowel-initial sārvaadhātuka, overriding the uvaṇ; the accusative dual in ā. - johavīmi: root hvě spardhāyām śabde ca; dhātor ekāco... — yaṇ; yaṇo 'ci ca [Pā. 2-4-74, as read from the name] — luk of yaṇ; abhyastasya ca — अभ्यस्तस्य च — (Pā. 6-1-33): saṃprasāraṇa of hve in the reduplicate, where the cause of the abhyasta-name follows; doubling, shortening of the reduplicate, kuhoś cuḥ — Pā. 7-4-62 — giving ju-hu; guṇo yaṇluktoḥ — गुणो यङ्लुकोः — (Pā. 7-4-82): guṇa for the reduplicate even when yaṇ is present or has been dropped; jo-hu; laṭ first person singular mip, śap with luk; yaṇo vā — यङो वा — (Pā. 7-3-94): iṭ for a pit sārvaadhātuka beginning with a consonant after yaṇ-ending bases, optionally — hence the augment; guṇa, āv-substitution. The print adds that after a yaṇ-ending base only the ātmanepada is regular; yet johavīmi is parasmaipada — Vedic usage. - vṛdhe: root vṛdhu vṛddhau; sampadādibhyaḥ kvip: vṛdh, a kṛdanta; the fourth singular ñe. - vājasātau (pp. 130–131): root ṣaṇu dāne, ṣ → s by dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ; striyām ktin; titutratathasisusarakaseṣu ca — तितुत्रतथसिसुसरकसेषु च — (Pā. 7-2-9): no iṭ for these ten kṛt suffixes; janasanakhanām sañjhaloḥ — जनसनखनां सञ्जहलोः — (Pā. 6-4-42): ā in place of the n of these three roots when san or a jhal-initial kit/ñit suffix follows; savarṇadīrgha: sāti. Vājānām = of strength; sātiḥ = giving: "that in which there is the giving of strengths", a bahuvrīhi, hence the first-member accent. Close of Sūkta 34

The sūkta has 12 Riks (printed pp. 71–131; PDF 85–145), as the heading on p. 72 states ("ṛks 1–12"). On the metre, the introduction (p. 71) says the ninth and twelfth ṛks are Triṣṭup and the rest Jagatī, whereas the heading's metre line (p. 72) prints Jagatī for 1–8, 10, 11 and Triṣṭup for what is read as "9–12"; the two are recorded as printed, and the twelve ṛks as actually read are consistent with the introduction (Riks 9 and 12 as Triṣṭup). No closing note ("illige ... sūktavu samāptavu") is printed at the end of the last grammar paragraph on p. 131, only a small ornament. Sūkta 35 (hvyāmy agnim) begins on the same leaf, printed p. 131 = PDF 145, under the large heading mūvattaidaneya sūktavu ("the thirty-fifth sūkta"); its Sanskrit introduction on that page reads "ekādaśarcam" (eleven ṛks) where the Kannada anuvāda reads "ten" [?]; both and the rest of that page are not translated here and belong to the next session. The contents table's page for the start of Sūkta 35 (p. 131) is thus confirmed.

Summary of the sūkta (from the Bhāvārthas): an invocation of the Aśvins, with the number three in almost every pāda — their thrice-daily coming to the pressings (Rik 1), the three-wheeled, three-pillared chariot used at Soma's wedding with Venā [Sūryā] (Rik 2), their threefold forgiving of faults, giving of food and guidance (Riks 3–4), the Sun's daughter in their chariot (Rik 5), the three kinds of healing herbs (Rik 6), their lying on the barhis and travelling to three altars (Rik 7), the three soma-vessels and the protection of the sun by day and night (Rik 8), the questions about the wheels and the ass of their chariot (Rik 9), the invitation to come before dawn and drink the offering (Rik 10), the prayer to come with the thirty-three gods and ward off enemies (Rik 11), and a closing prayer for wealth with heroic descendants and victory in battle (Rik 12).

Translation: "Hvayāmy agnim is the fifth sūkta, of eleven ṛks. The ṛṣi is Hiraṇyastūpa. The first and the ninth are in Jagatī metre; the rest are Triṣṭup. Savitr̥ is the deity of the whole sūkta; in the first ṛk, hvayāmy agnim, the deities named by the words themselves (liṅgokta) are Agni, Mitra-Varuṇa, Night and Savitr̥. So the Anukramaṇikā: 'hvayāmy — eleven; Savitr̥-addressed; the ninth and the first are Jagatī; [the first has] the deities stated by the pādas.' This sūkta, a Sāvitra [hymn], is used (nividdhānam — the reading of this word is doubtful [?]) in the Vaiśvadeva śāstra on the fourth day of the Ābhiplava Ṣaḍaha. It is laid down in the section beginning 'tṛtīyasya tryaryamā' [as read] — 'hvayāmy agnim, asya me dyāvāpṛthivī — three [ṛks]' (Āś. [reference not read])."

Anuvāda (Kannada): "Hvayāmy agnim is the fifth sūkta in the seventh anuvāka. In it there are ten [as printed; the Sanskrit above and the heading on p. 132 say eleven] ṛks. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Hiraṇyastūpa. Of the ṛks of this sūkta the first and the ninth are in the Jagatī metre; the remaining ṛks are in Triṣṭup. Savitr̥ is the deity of the whole sūkta; in the first ṛk, those named in the ṛk — Agni, Mitrāvaruṇa, Rātri, and Savitr̥ — are the deities. The Anukramaṇikā says 'hvayāmy ekādaśa sāvitraṃ navamī jagaty ādyā ca liṅgoktadaivatapādāśraya'. For the Vaiśvadeva-śāstra mantras on the fourth day of the Ābhiplava-ṣaḍaha rite it is prescribed that this sūkta be recited; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning 'tṛtīyasya tryaryamā', in the sūtra 'hvayāmy agnim asya me dyāvāpṛthivī iti tisraḥ' (Āś. [numerals not read])."

Here, in this rite, for our protection I invoke Mitra and Varuṇa. Jagataḥ niveśanīm — the Night, the night-deity, who is the cause of settling down for the moving world, the whole class of living creatures — I invoke; it is well known that all moving creatures, having done their own works by day, settle down in their own homes at night. Ūtaye — for our protection I invoke the god Savitr."

Bhāvārtha

— "In this sacrifice I first invoke Agni, the guardian of our welfare, and then Mitra and Varuṇa, the protectors. For the keeping of our peace I invoke the goddess of night, who gives rest to the whole moving world; and for our protection I invoke the Sun-god, the protector of the world."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 133) — "I invoke Agni first for our welfare ; I invoke Mitra and Varuna in this sacrifice for protection ; I invoke Night whobr ings [sic] rest to the world ; I invoke the divine Savitri for my protection." ⁸.

In the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa it is said 'maitraṃ vā ahaḥ | vāruṇī rātriḥ' — Mitra is the form of the day, Varuṇa the form of the night." ¹⁰ - rātrīm jagato niveśanīm — "By day all living beings are engaged in their several works; at night they seek rest from their dealings and the like. Hence the meaning here is: the Night, who gives rest to the creatures that are in the world." - devaṃ savitāram — "devam means shining, glowing with radiance — bright, shining &c. [the print's English]; savitāram means Savitr, the Sun. Ordinarily the word deva stands with the word savitr as its adjective."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹¹ - mitrāvaruṇau: mitraś ca varuṇaś ca, a dvandva; both words name deities; devatādvandve ca — देवताद्वन्द्वे च — (Pā. 6-3-26, as read): in a dvandva of divine names a substitute is made in the end of the first member before the second; then nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya — Pā. 8-2-7 — for the n; and devatādvandve ca — (Pā. 6-2-141, as read [?]): in a dvandva of divine names both members keep their natural accent, so the accent which each had before the compound stays. Mitra is masculine and, as a base, final-acute; varuṇa ends in the Uṇādi suffix unan (ka-vṛ-dārībhya unan — [Uṇ. 3-53 (as read from the Translation: "Savitṛ — Sūrya — kṛṣṇena rajasā, by the dark-coloured world: 'kṛṣṇa, from the root kṛṣ, is a base [lowly] colour' (Ni. 2-20 [?]), so Yāska; and 'the worlds are called rajāṁsi' (Ni. 4-19 [?]). For the mid-region, before the sun's going, is dark in colour. Moving through that path of the mid-region, coming again and again, niveśayan — establishing, each in its own place — amṛtaṁ, the immortal god, and martyaṁ, the mortal man. Or: establishing the deathless vital breath and the mortal body. And so in the Brāhmaṇa that explains the mantra portion 'amartyo martyenā sayonih' in the Āraṇyaka section the meaning as stated is understood: 'These bodies are mortal; this deity is immortal' (Ai. Ā. 2-1-8 [?]). Savitṛ the god, endowed with the stated qualities, bhuvanāni paśyan — looking on, regarding all the worlds, i.e. illuminating them — hiraṇyayena, with a chariot made of gold, ā yāti — comes to our neighbourhood."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ¹³: amṛtam (mṛtaṃ maraṇaṃ nāsty asya, a bahuvrīhi with nañ: jaramaramitramṛtāḥ — the later member [mṛta] takes the first-syllable acute); martyam (marte bhavam; bhave chandasi — yat; yato 'nāvaḥ — first syllable acute); hiraṇyayena (mayat, with loss of the m by nīpātana, under ṛtvyaṅvāstvyavāstvamādhvīhiraṇyayāni chandasi [Pā. 6-4-175, as read]; the suffix-accent after the loss of a by yasyeti ca); bhuvanāni (root bhū sattāyām; the Uṇādi sūtra bhūdhūsubhrasjibhyaś chandasi [Uṇ. 2-80 (as read from the numerals [?])] — suffix kyun; ana for yu; uvañ; the first syllable is acute as nit [the exact steps are uncertain]).

Pratipadārtha — "devaḥ — the shining; savitā — the deity Savitṛ; kṛṣṇena — [by that which is] full of darkness; rajasā — through the region of the sky (by the sky-path); ā vartamānaḥ — moving again and again; amṛtam — the deathless gods; martyam — and men who are subject to death; niveśayan — setting (in the place of their duties); hiraṇyayena — made of gold; rathena — in a chariot; [seated]; bhuvanāni — the various worlds; paśyan — looking at (illuminating); ā yāti — comes near to us."

— "Savitṛ, who gives light to all the worlds, moving again and again in the dark expanse of the sky, sets all the gods and men in the places of their duties. Seated in a chariot made of gold, he comes near us, looking upon the many worlds and making them bright."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 137) — "Travelling through dark space (firmament) arousing martals [sic] and immortals, the divine Savitri come [sic] in his golden chariot beholding the several worlds" ¹⁴.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 137 - "It is the custom to use this ṛk, at the time of the saṃdhyā prayer, as the mantra for offering the arghya addressed to the Sun. In the Taittirīya Saṃhitā the word satyena stands in place of kṛṣṇena." - kṛṣṇena rajasā = kṛṣṇavarṇena lokena: "before sunrise the darkness is spread everywhere. The Sun moves through the worlds [the mid-region and the rest] that are full of that darkness and drives the darkness away. Kṛṣṇena means 'covered with darkness'. Rajasā means 'by the path of the world' (Ni. 4-19 [?])." - amṛtaṃ, martyam — "amṛta means the gods, who are free of death; martya means men, who are subject to death." - niveśayan — "causing the darkness of the night-time to depart, he sets the gods and the men to their own undertakings: such is the sense." ¹⁵

Special Topics, continued from p. 137 - hiraṇyayena = suvarṇanirmiteṇa: "made of gold. It is a convention to describe the chariot of the Sun, or of Savitṛ, as golden: since at sunrise and at sunset the Sun is covered with shining reddish rays (like the colour of gold), the ṛṣis describe the Sun's chariot as golden."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā - amṛtam: na vidyate mṛtaṃ yasya saḥ — "he who has no death"; this overrides bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. 6-2-1) by nañjor jaramaramitramṛtāḥ — नञ्जोर्जमरमित्रमृताः — (Pā. 6-2-116, as read [?]): the words jara, mara, mitra, mṛta after nañ in a bahuvrīhi are first-syllable acute. -

The print adds that the Kaumudī-author states a loss of the group ma + [ya? the printed letters are unclear] in this view, so that hiraṇya + ya would arise and yasyeti ca would be expected; since the loss of m is asiddha, it must be handled by the maxim aṅgavṛtte punarvṛttāḥ avidhiḥ; the lengthening that would arise by akṛtsārvaadhātukayor dīrghaḥ must also be handled; the Veda-bhāṣya, on the ṛk 1-2-[?] [?], follows the same method; ekādeśa udāttena — Pā. 8-2-5 — is cited to say that the single substitute is acute. - bhuvanāni: root bhū sattāyām; the Uṇādi sūtra bhūsūdhūbhrasjibhyaś chandasi — भूसूधूभ्रस्जिभ्यश्छन्दसि — (Uṇ. 2-48, as read from the numerals [?]) gives kyun after bhū sattāyām, ṣūñ prāṇiprasave, dhūñ kampane, bhrasja pāke; the yu of the suffix stays and ana replaces it; aci śnudhātubhruvām... — Pā. 6-4-77 — uvañ; the suffix is nit, so the first syllable is acute. Rik 2 ends here (| | 2 | |).

Translation: "The shining god Savitṛ goes (yāti) by pravatā, a path with a slope [downward]; likewise he goes by udvatā, a path with an elevation, rising [upward]. After the rising, up to midday, the path is upward; thence on, up to evening, the path is a downward slope: that is the distinction. Savitṛ the god, viśvā duritā apa bādhamānaḥ — warding off, destroying all sins — parāvataḥ, from a distant place (parāvataḥ being read in the lists of names for 'far') — comes from such a heaven: he comes to the place of the rite."

Bhāvārtha

— "The shining Savitṛ's movement is by an upward way from sunrise to midday, and by a downward way from midday to evening. Everywhere he moves, mounted on a chariot drawn by two bright horses. Worthy of worship, he comes to this sacrificial ground from afar, destroying all sins."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 141)

This very matter is stated in this ṛk." - pravatā = prakarṣeṇa gacchatā: "going swiftly; by the lower [downward] path." - udvatā = ūrdhvadeśayuktena mārgeṇa: "by an upward path." - śubhrābhyām haribhyām: "with two clear or bright horses; that is, [Savitṛ is] seated in a chariot to which two bright horses are yoked." - parāvataḥ — "from afar." - viśvā duritā bādhamānaḥ — "driving off all troubles or sins."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁸ - pravatā: the root vana paṇa sambhaktau is read in the Dhātupāṭha; gamaḥ kvau — गमः क्वौ — (Pā. 6-4-40, as read): the nasal of gam is lost before kvip; the vārtika gamādīnām iti vaktavyam — "[it must be said that] this is for the gamādi [roots]" — so that the rule for the nasal of gam alone is not enough, and the loss of the nasal before kvip must be taught for many other roots; the verse "uktānuktadurūktānām cintā vārttikaṃ matam" — "a vārtika is held to be the consideration of what is said, not said, or ill said" — is cited for the vārtika's character; then for van + kvip the n is lost by this vārtika; hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk — ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक् — (Pā. 6-1-71, as read): after the p of kvip is it, a kṛt that is pit ... ¹⁹.

- pravatā (concluded): after the tuk the form is pravat; the preverb pra + the third-case singular ṭā; in pravat the va is acute by the root's accent; once the compound with the preverb is made, gatikārapapadāt kṛt — गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत् — (Pā. 6-2-139, as read) lets the accent of the later member, the kṛdanta, stand.
- udvatā: "here the preverb ut stands in place of pra; the rest of the process is as before."
- yajataḥ: root yaja devapūjāyām; bhṛmṛḍrśiyajiparvipacyamitamīnāmidayibhyo 'tac — भृमृदृशियजिपर्विपच्यमितमिनमिदयिभ्योऽतच् — (Uṇ. 3-110, as read from the numerals [?]): atac after yaj: yajata.
- viśvā duritā: viśvāni duritāni, second-case plural; the śi from jaśśasoḥ śiḥ is dropped by śeś chandasi bahulam — (Pā. 6-1-70); by the sarvanāmasthāna status the augment num had come and the lengthening of the penultimate; after the luk the n is lost. Translation: "Savitṛ ratham āsthāt — has mounted the chariot. What sort? Abhīvṛtam — encircled all round; and kṛśanair viśvarūpam — many-formed with gold ('kṛśana' = iron/metal, being read among the names of gold): in places a row of elephants made of gold, in places a row of horses, in places a row of men — thus the many forms. Hiraṇyaśamyam — the pegs (śaṅku) that are thrust on the shoulders of the horses, at the time of yoking the chariot, to restrain them, are śamyāḥ; those, made of gold, are in the chariot. Bṛhantam — large, grand. What sort of Savitṛ? Yajataḥ — worthy of worship; citrabhānuḥ — with rays of many kinds; kṛṣṇā rajāṃsi — [looking] to the worlds which are dark-coloured through being full of darkness; taviṣīm — his own strength in the form of light, dadhānaḥ — bearing, for the removal of that darkness."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁰: abhīvṛtam (abhito vartata ity abhīvṛt; root vṛtu vartane; kvip; the lengthening of the first member by nahivṛtivrṣiviyadhi... [Pā. 6-3-116, as read]); viśvarūpam (viśvāni rūpāni yasyāsau; bahuvrīhau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām — the first-member final-acute here, by vyatyaya, even without a name); hiraṇyaśamyam (haryate gatikāntyoḥ — haryater hiran ca [Uṇ. 3-[?]]: the suffix kanyan and the substitution hiran for the root; initial-acute by the nit accent; first-member accent of a bahuvrīhī); āsthāt (root ṣṭhā, luṇ, sic dropped by gātisthāghupābhūbhyah sicaḥ parasmaipadeṣu); kṛṣṇā (root kṛṣ in the sense of colour; the Uṇādi sūtra kṛṣer varṇe [Uṇ. 3-4, as read] — the suffix nak; śi dropped by śeś chandasi bahulam); taviṣīm (the root tavati from the sautra list; the Uṇādi suffix iṣac [tavater ṇid vā, Uṇ. 1-[?]], ṭit, so ṇīp; first-syllable accent by vyatyaya, to be seen as of the vṛṣādi class); dadhānaḥ (śānac; abhyastānām ādiḥ — first-syllable acute).

Pratipadārtha — "yajataḥ — worthy of worship; citrabhānuḥ — endowed with rays of many colours; savitā — Savitr; kṛṣṇā rajāṃsi — the worlds filled with darkness (in order to destroy their darkness); taviṣim — his own strength in the form of light; dadhānaḥ — bearing; abhīvṛtam — surrounded; kṛṣanaiḥ viśvarūpam — of many forms, with pictures of elephants and others made of gold; hiraṇyaśamyam — having golden pegs (and [thereby] beautiful); bṛhantam — large; ratham — the chariot; āsthāt — has mounted."

Bhāvārtha

— "The Savitr-deity, worthy of worship, shining with rays of many colours and destroying the darkness of the dark worlds by his own splendour, has mounted his chariot: a lofty chariot, with a golden pole and pegs for yoking the horses, made of gold and the like, and adorned with all sorts of pictures."

— "The adorable Savitri of beautiful splendour having power to disperse darkness from the world has mounted his chariot decorated with many kinds of golden ornaments and furnished with great golden yokes".

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 144 - "In this ṛk the ṛṣi describes the chariot of the Sun. The Sun's chariot has golden [front beams — the Kannada word is mūkīmara, as read [?]]; and the chariot has been made with all kinds of golden ornaments, so that it is delightful with the many pictures all round it — rows of elephants, rows of horses and the like, made of gold. The Savitr has mounted such a shining chariot." - abhīvṛtaṃ kṛṣanaiḥ viśvarūpam — "encircled all round with ornaments made of gold and the other metals, and furnished with pictures of many kinds, and so on." - hiraṇyaśamyam = aśvānāṃ skandheṣu rathayojanavelāyāṃ niyantum prakṣepyamāṇāḥ śaṅkavaḥ śamyāḥ | suvarṇamayyo rathe vartante: "a chariot furnished with golden [front-beams] meant for yoking horses" [the Kannada gloss, as printed; the śamyā is the yoke-pin of the bhāṣya's own explanation]. - citrabhānuḥ = atiprakāśayuktaḥ — "possessing great brightness, of beautiful splendour [the print's English, sic]." - kr̥ṣṇā rajāṃsi — "worlds with darkness. Before the Sun rises, all the worlds are full of darkness; the Sun rises and lights the worlds with brightness." - taviṣīm dadhānaḥ — "making brightness by his own power..." ^{21, 22}

Numerals read at 150 dpi, "as read" where not firm.

- abhivṛtam (p. 145): abhito vartate = abhivṛt; root vṛtu vartane after the preverb abhi; kvip ca [Pā. 3-2-76, as read] gives kvip, and the augment tuk would yield vṛt; nahivṛtivr̥ṣiviyadhiruciṣahitaniṣu kvau — नहिवृतिवृषिव्यधिरुचिसहितनिषु क्वौ — (Pā. 6-3-116): before roots ending in kvip, the first member is lengthened: abhi → abhī.
- viśvarūpam: viśvāni rūpāṇi yasya saḥ — "a chariot having many kinds of forms"; bahuvrīthau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām — बहुव्रीहौ विश्वं संज्ञायाम् — (Pā. 6-2-106, as read): when a name is shown, the first member viśva is final-acute; "although no name is shown here, being Vedic this rule operates by vyatyaya even without one".

21. the entry continues on p. 145, to be viewed next

22. Correction of a note above: the Special Topics of Rik 4 end on p. 144 with the entry taviṣīm dadhānaḥ — "making brightness by his own power" — the last line of that page; p. 145 opens directly with the grammar. The words "continues on p. 145" in the preceding paragraph were a premature remark.

- hiraṇyaśamyam: root haryate gatikāntyoh; haryateḥ kanyan hirac — हयतेः कन्यन् हिरच् — (Uṇ. 3-231, as read from the numerals [?]): kanyan after the root harya, with hir substituted for the root; the c is it and lost, the a is only for pronunciation; in the suffix k and n are it, leaving ya: hir + ya = hiraṇya; aṭkupvāṇnumvyavāye 'pi — (Pā. 8-4-2) turns n into ṇ; by the nit accent it is first-syllable acute; śamyāḥ are pegs for yoking horses; hiraṇyāḥ śamyā yasmin saḥ, a bahuvrīhi, first-member accent.
- āsthāt: root ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau, ṣ → s; luṇi, tip, loss of the i, cli, sic, aṭ: ā-asthā + s + t; gātisthāghupābhūbhyah sicah parasmaipadeṣu — गतिस्थाघुपाभूभ्यः सिचः परस्मैपदेषु — (Pā. 2-4-77): luk for sic after these; "by gā is meant the gā substituted for iṇ by iṇo gā luṇi — इणो गा लुङि — (Pā. 2-4-45), and by pā the root pā pāne"; hence luk of sic; aṭ; the preverb ā.
- kṛṣṇā: kṛṣer varṇe — कृषेर्वर्णे — (Uṇ. 3-4, as read): when colour is meant, nak after kṛṣ; kṛṣ + na; raṣābhyāṃ no ṇaḥ samānapade — रषाभ्यां नो णः समानपदे — (Pā. 8-4-1): n → ṇ; the word is neuter; śas → śi; śeś chandasi bahulam — (Pā. 6-1-70): luk of the śi; the augment num, the lengthening of the penultimate and the loss of n occur.
- taviṣīm: the root tava is established by usage, not in the sūtra-list; tavaḥ kernidvā [read: tavater ṇid vā, as the printed letters are crowded] — तवतेर्णिद्धा — (Uṇ. 1-64, as read from the numerals [?]): after tav the suffix ṭiṣac; tav + iṣa; the suffix is ṭit, so ṇīp by ṭiddhāṇaṇdvayasaj... (Pā. 4-1-15, as read); as a cit suffix it should be final-acute by citaḥ saprakṛter bahvakajartham — चितः सप्रकृतेर्बह्वकजर्थम् — (Pā. 6-1-163), "properly"; but placing the word in the vṛṣādi group, vṛṣādīnām ca — वृषादीनां च — (Pā. 6-1-203), it is first-syllable acute.

- dadhānaḥ (p. 146): root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, laṭ; laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau, śānac; juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ — जुहोत्यादिभ्यः श्लुः — (Pā. 2-4-75) ślu for śap; ślau — श्लौ — (Pā. 6-1-10) doubling: dhā-dhā-āna; hrasvaḥ — ह्रस्वः — (Pā. 7-4-59) shortens the reduplicate; abhyāse carca — अभ्यासे चर्च — (Pā. 8-4-54): in the reduplicate jhal → car and jaś, so dh → d by similarity of place; ubhe abhyastam — उभे अभ्यस्तम् — (Pā. 6-1-5): both [the repeated parts] are called abhyasta; abhyastānām ādiḥ — (Pā. 6-1-189) — first-syllable acute. Translation: "Śyāvāḥ — the horses of Sūrya who bear this name ('śyāvāḥ savituh' being so stated in the Nighaṇṭu). They, śitipādaḥ — furnished with white feet — bearing a chariot with a hiraṇyaprauuga, a golden front-yoke (the front of the chariot, the tip of the two shafts, the place for fastening the yoke is called prauuga; here it is made of gold) — janān — the creatures — vi akhyan — brightened especially. Bhāvārtha — "The horses of the Sun, named Śyāva, carry the chariot with the golden [front-yoke]. With their radiance they light up the whole world of beings. The people and the rest, and all the worlds as well, have stood near the shining Savitr, the impeller of the world." ²⁴

English Translation (the source's own, p. 148) — "Savitri' s horses with white legs harnessed to his chariot with a golden yoke have manifested light to mankind for all people and all the worlds are ever in the presence of the divine Savitri." ²⁵

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 148 - śyāvāḥ — "the horses of the Sun are named śyāvāśva. Although śyāva means a horse of dark colour, in the third ṛk of this sūkta [it is a slip for the fifth] the Sun's horses are said to be of a shining white-footed colour; since here śītipādāḥ — 'white feet' (with white legs, the print's English) — is stated, the colour of the horses must be śyāma, brown [the print's English]." - hiranyaprauugam = rathasya mukhamiṣayor agraṃ yugabandhanasthānaṃ prauugam ity ucyate: "prauuga means the place at the front of the chariot where the [front beam] joins the chariot; the root part of the [front beam]. It will be golden. This word is used in mantras such as the Taittirīya Saṃhitā 4-4-[?]-[?], the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa [numerals not read]. Pra-uga is apparently equivalent to prayuga, denoting the fore part of the pole of the cart, the part in front of the yoke [the print's English]." - śītipādāḥ = śītayaḥ śvetavarṇāḥ pādā yeṣāṃ te śītipādāḥ: "those with white legs." - daivyaśya = itaradevasambandhinaḥ savituḥ, prerakasya sūryasya: "[Savitṛ] who is related to the other gods, or the Sun who impels the other gods — so the bhāṣyakāra says. But the meaning divi sambandhino daivyaḥ — 'what belongs to heaven, i.e. is in heaven (in the mid-region)' — fits well."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁶ - śītipādāḥ (p. 148–149): śītiḥ = white; śītayaḥ = white; pādāḥ = feet; yeṣāṃ te — a bahuvrīhi; "if so analysed, the form śītipādāḥ is regular"; here supāṃ sulug... gives su for jas, so that śītipādāḥ in the plural has the same form as in the singular — "this is one way"; another way is by saptamyupamānapūrvapadasya ca vā 'cyo vottarapadalopaḥ [as read from the crowded printed rule-name, [?]] — a bahuvrīhi in which the second member is dropped: śitipāda iva pādo yeṣām te, "those whose feet are like crystal-feet" — [the bhāṣya says śītiḥ śvetavarṇaḥ sphāṭikādīḥ sa iva pādo yeṣām te] — and pādasya lopo 'hastyādibhyaḥ — पादस्य लोपोऽहस्त्यादिभ्यः — (Pā. 5-4-138, as read): the a of the word pāda at the end of a compound is lost after a word in the sense of the comparison, other than hastin and the like; hence śitipād, and jas after it; vṛṣādīnām ca — (Pā. 6-1-203): pāda is first-syllable acute; śīter nityabahujbahuvrīhāv abhasat — शितेर्नित्यबहुज्वह्रीहावभसत् — (Pā. 6-2-194, as read): in a bahuvrīhi after śīti, the later member, not being bha-word [? the print's phrase abhasat], keeps its natural accent. - akhyān (p. 149): root khyā prakathane, luṇ; cli; asyativaktikhyātibhyo 'ñ — अस्यतिवक्तिख्यातिभ्योऽङ् — (Pā. 3-1-52): añ for cli; the augment aṭ; jhi → ant: a-khyā + a + anti; ato lopa iṭi ca — (Pā. 6-4-64) drops the ā; itaś ca — (Pā. 3-4-100) the i of the ending; the loss of the final t [conjunct-final loss, saṃyogāntalopa]. - hiraṇyaprauugam: hiraṇyam = golden, prauugam = the place where the pole is fastened, yasya saḥ — a bahuvrīhi; haryateḥ kanyan hirac — (Uṇ. 3-231, as read) gives hiraṇya; by nit the accent is first-syllable; the bahuvrīhi then keeps the first-member accent: that same accent remains. - daivyasya (p. 149): after the root div, the pacādi-suffix ac, giving deva; devād yañ iṇau — देवाद्यजिजौ — (Pā. 4-1-85, as read): after deva in the sixth case, in the sense of prāgdīvyatīya [the sense "of that"], the suffixes yañ and añ; in the Aṣṭādhyāyī the meanings from prāgdīvyaton — प्राग्दीव्यतोऽण् — (Pā. 4-1-83, as read) up to tena dīvyati khanati jayati jitam — तेन दीव्यति खनति जयति जितम् — (Pā. 4-4-2) are called prāgdīvyatīya. Tasyedam — तस्येदम् — (Pā. 4-3-120) is one of those; here yañ is added; deva + jas, yañ, being a taddhitānta it has the name prātipadika and the sup is lost by luk; devasyedam; taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ — तद्धितेष्वचामादेः — (Pā. 7-2-117): vṛddhi of the first vowel before a ñit/ñit taddhita, so e → ai; yasyeti ca drops the

a of deva [as the print says]: daivya; the sixth case daivyasya; ñnityādir nityam gives the first-syllable acute. - upasthe (p. 150): ātaś copasarge kaḥ — आतश्चोपसर्गे कः — (Pā. 3-1-136): after a root ending in ā, with a preverb as upapada, the suffix ka; "in the sūtra supi sthaḥ the Śekhara says: idaṃ kevalaṃ lopasargeṇa ātaś copasarge ity eva siddhe karmaṇy upapade 'pi na ātonupa... — since the rule ātonupasarge kaḥ ... 'the words are [continued] for the purpose of the commencement', supisthaḥ does not apply where the preverb alone is present" [as read; the quotation is crowded and uncertain [?]]; upa + sthā + a; ato lopa iṭi ca — (Pā. 6-4-64): the ā is lost before a kit/ñit ārdhadhātuka suffix beginning with a vowel and before iṭ. Translation: "The dyāvah — the shining worlds, indicated by the word 'heaven' — are tīśah, three in number. Of these, two worlds are upasthā — near — Savitṛ, the Sun: for the world of mortals, the earth, and [heaven] are lit by the Sun. Ekā — the one, the middle earth, the mid-region — is virāṣāt — the one that carries — in yamasya bhuvane, in Yama's world, the house of the lord of the fathers: it overcomes (saḥate) virān, those who go (gantṛn); that is, the dead go by the mid-region path to Yama's world. Amṛtā — the imperishable luminaries, the moon, the stars and the rest, or waters — adhi tasthuḥ — rest, having come to Savitṛ. The illustration: rathyam āṇim na — a peg of a particular kind, driven into the hole in the axle outside the chariot, is called āṇi; as the chariot stands by reliance on its āṇi, so [they rest on Savitr̥]. But whichever man cikētat — [should] know that viśvarūpam [form, of him: the print here is unclear [?]] — let that man iha bravītu, in this matter speak, declare: Savitr̥'s greatness cannot be told by anyone."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁸: tisraḥ (the ending is acute by tisṛbhyo jasaḥ [Pā. 6-1-166, as read]); dvā (dvau, with āv-substitution and the loss of the v by lopaḥ śākalyasya); upasthā (the seventh-case ending replaced by āc — a vārtika on āj and ājayoḥ [Mahābhāṣya reference, numerals unread]; prakṛtibhāva by ajo 'nunāsikaś chandasi [Pā. 6-1-126, as read]); virāṣāt (vṛṇ varane, the suffix ka in the sense of ghaṇ, [vārtika]; the Vedic ī-substitution by bahulam chandasi [Pā. 6-3-103?]; sahe sādah — the ṣatva, and the lengthening of the first member by anyeṣām api dṛśyate; "virāṇ gantṛṇ sahate", or virāṣāt from vi-rā [?]); rathyam (rathasyedam; yat by rathād yat [Pā. 4-3-121, as read]; initial-acute by yato 'nāvaḥ); amṛtā (śi lost by śeś chandasi bahulam); cikētat (root kita jñāne, leṭ, the augment aṭ; the i of the ending lost by itaś ca; ślu for śap, the root being juhotyādi-like; laghūpadhaguna; abhyastānām ādiḥ, first-syllable acute; and because of the connected word yaḥ the verb is not lowered, yadvṛttayogād anighātaḥ).

Pratipadārtha — "dyāvaḥ — the worlds beginning with heaven; tisraḥ — three (are there); dvā — the two, heaven and earth; savituḥ — of Savitr̥; upasthā — near [in the lap]; ekā — the one in the middle, the mid-region; yamasya — of Yama; bhuvane — in the world; virāṣāt — capable of bearing those who go (the dead); rathyam — of the chariot; āṇim na — as the pin [that holds the axle-hole]; amṛtā — the imperishable masses of light, the moon, stars and the rest; adhi tasthuḥ — rest [on Savitr̥]; yah — whichever man; tat — this nature of Savitr̥; cikētat — if he knows well; iha — in this matter; bravītu — let him describe."

Bhāvārtha

— "Of the three worlds — heaven, earth, mid-region — heaven and earth are both near the Sun. The mid-region in the middle is the way for the dead to Yama's world. As a chariot rests upon the pin of its axle, the imperishable light-bearers, the moon, the stars and the rest, rest upon this Savitr̥. The nature of this Savitr̥ cannot be grasped by man; if anyone does know it, let him describe the superhuman nature of the deity Savitr̥."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 152) — "There are three heavens (three worlds) two are in the proximity of the Savitri ; the remaining one leads men to Yama 's abode ; the immortal stars depend upon Savitri as a car upon the pin of the axle. Let him who knows the greatness of Savitri say so." ²⁹

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 152 - tisro dyāvaḥ — "three heavens, that is, the earth-world, the mid-region world and the heaven-world." - savitur dvā upasthā — "since the Sun, staying in heaven, lights the earth, the heaven and the earth are said to be near the Sun." - yamasya bhuvane virāṣāt = pretāḥ puruṣā antarikṣamārgēṇa yamaloke gacchanti: "since dead people (or their souls) go to Yama's world by way of the third world, the mid-region, the mid-region is called the way to Yama's world." - āṇim na — "the pins fixed in the holes at the ends of the chariot's axle, so that the wheels, as they turn, may not fall off. If these pins were not there, the wheels and the chariot would not move properly and would fall. Hence, as the pins are the support of the chariot and its wheels, the Sun, by giving light to the worlds of earth and heaven, is the support: such is the meaning." - amṛtā = amṛtāni candranakṣatrādīni jyotīṃṣi jalāni vā: "amṛta means 'not perishing', 'always existing'. Here the luminaries — the moon, the stars and the other lights — or waters that do not perish." - iha bravītu ya u tac cikētat — "let a man who knows this matter say it: that is, since this matter is exceedingly secret or deep, it is not known to anyone." ³⁰

Kannada prose with sūtras quoted; the numerals are small and a number is given only where it could be read, otherwise the rule is named and left unnumbered.

- tisraḥ (p. 153): tricuturoḥ striyām tisṛcatasṛ — त्रिचतुरोः स्त्रियां तिस्वृचतस्वृ — [the print: tisṛ, catasṛ replace tri, catur in the feminine]; the substitute is final-acute by sthānivadbhāva; tisṛ + jas; aci ra ṛtaḥ — अचि र ऋतः — the ṛ of tisṛ/catasṛ becomes r before a vowel-initial ending; tisṛ + as; the yaṇ standing for an acute vowel would be svarita by udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt; as an exception to that comes tisṛbhyo jasaḥ — तिसृभ्यो जसः — the jas after tisṛ is acute; the plural "jasaḥ" in the sūtra is explained like the plural in ṛnnebhyo nīp, as a looseness of expression (śabdabāhulya): hence the ending is acute.
- dvā: in the Saṃhitā a vowel follows (the u of upasthā), so dvau takes āv by eco ṛyavāyāvaḥ — एचोऽयवायावः; lopaḥ śākalyasya — लोपः शाकल्यस्य — (as read): by the opinion of Śākalya the y/v after a vowel [not a/ā-preceded?] is lost before a vowel-initial word: here v is lost; this loss is asiddha, so no vowel-sandhi follows.
- upasthā: upa — "near" — tiṣṭhataḥ "those who stand": ātaś copasarge kaḥ — आतश्चोपसर्गे कः — gives ka; loss of ā; the seventh-case dual os; under supām sulug... the print cites the vārtika ājayā jayorām ["ājajayāyāḍāḍyāyājālaḥ"-type, as read from the crowded line] that āc, ayāc, ayāl are three substitutes of sup, so os → āc; upastha + ā, savarṇadīrgha; antādivac ca — अन्तादिवच्च — the single substitute counts as the end of the former and the beginning of the latter, quoted with the Śekhara-kāra's remark that the technical states (base, suffix etc.) of the elements remain after the single substitution; ajo 'nunāsikaś chandasi — in the Veda an ā-ending [here: the substitute āc] takes nasalisation and prakṛtibhāva: hence the Saṃhitā's upasthām̐.

30. The grammar of Rik 6 follows on p. 153, to be viewed next.

- virāṣāt: virān saḥate — "[it] bears those who go"; vṛṇ varāṇe: grahavṛḍṛṇiścigamaś ca — ग्रहवृद्धृनिश्चिगमश्च — (ap) and the Mahābhāṣya's remark on ghaṇarthe kavīdhānam sthāsnāvyadhihanyudhy... — "the suffix ka is prescribed in the sense of ghaṇ": the roots there named are examples, not a complete list, since ka may follow other roots too; with the sense of an action-noun and of an agent other than the agent of ghaṇ the ka here has the sense of an object; vṛ + a; bahulam chandasi — i and u appear variably, so ṛ → ir with raparatva; vir + a, the suffix kit, so no guṇa; virān saḥate iti virāṣāt: root śaha marṣaṇe, dhātvādeḥ śaḥ saḥ; chandasi sahaḥ — छन्दसि सहः — ṇvi after sah when a sup-word is the upapada; ato 'ta upadhāyāḥ — vṛddhi; cutū and upadeśe 'janunāsika it give the it-names to ṇ, i; vero 'prāktasya [as read] — loss of va; anyeṣām api drśyate — lengthening of the first member: virāsāḥ; su lost by halṇyābbhyo...; hoḍhaḥ — हो ढः — h → ḍh; jhalām jaśo 'nte; sahes sādah — सहेः साडः — the ṣatva; carva: virāṣāt.

- rathyam (p. 154): rathasyedam; rathād yat — रथाद्यत् — yat after the sixth-case form of ratha in the sense "this belongs to"; yasyeti ca drops the a; yato 'nāvaḥ — यतोऽनावः — first-syllable acute (two vowels).

- cikētat: root kita jñāne; leṭ, tip, śap; kit + a + ti; itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu — loss of the i of the ending; leṭo 'dāṭau — the augment aṭ; juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ — śap → ślu; ślau — doubling; the final t of the reduplicate dropped; laghūpadha-guṇa; kuhoś cuḥ — k → c: cikētat. "In the Dhātupāṭha now at hand kita jñāne is read as ki [kit?]; since the tuk-type form appears, it must be said to be Vedic." Anudātte ca [as read] / abhyastānām ādiḥ: the first syllable of the abhyasta is acute before an unaccented lasārvadhātuka; because the word yaḥ is connected, the verb is not lowered (yadvṛttayogād anighātaḥ). Bhāvārtha

— "The ray of the Sun, which gives life to all, lit up all the three worlds at midday and guided everyone. At the time of sunset it was pleasing and gladdening by its deep tremble. But where is that same Sun, with his ray, wandering now, in the night? No man can say which heavens he is lighting."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 156) — "Suparna (ray of the sun) is quivering, life-giving and directed (towards the earth); It has illuminated the (three) aerial regions. Where is surya (sun) now ? who knows to what heaven his rays have extended now ?" ³³

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 156–157 - suparṇaḥ — "since the word suparṇa is read among the fifteen names of the ray beginning 'bhedayah kiranāḥ' [as read; Ni. 2-[?] [?]], suparṇa means a ray of the Sun." - gabhīravepāḥ = gambhīrakampanaḥ: "deeply quivering. To the eye the Sun's rays appear to quiver as they pass through the atmosphere; hence the ṛṣi describes the Sun's rays as quivering." - asuraḥ = asu kṣepaṇe | asyati śatrūn ity asuraḥ | yadvā | asūn prāṇān rāti dadātīty asuraḥ: "the word asura is an adjective of suparṇa. The bhāṣyakāra gives it two senses: because it throws away enemies — because the Sun's ray puts away darkness — the Sun's ray is called asura; or asu is breath, and rā is the root meaning 'to give': it gives, by producing the food that living beings most need, the means of protecting their breaths, hence asura; life giving vital breath [the print's English]." - kva idānīm sūryaḥ — "In the daytime everyone sees the Sun shining; but at evening the Sun sets and rises again the next morning, and this too is known to people. But the ṛṣi, wondering where the Sun is in the period between his setting and his rising on the next day, that is, at night, asks this question in amazement. Since people did not know in those times how the movements of the earth, and day and night, come about, this matter may well have appeared marvellous." - kaś ciketa katamāṃ dyāṃ raśmir asyā tatāna — "at night, over what region (what other heaven) do the Sun's rays spread and make light? Who among men is able to know it? — so, struck with wonder, the ṛṣi asks himself, in praise of the unfathomable greatness of the Sun."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁴ - suparṇaḥ: śobhanaṃ parṇaṃ patanaṃ yasya saḥ — "he whose flight [lit. leaf-wing] is beautiful", a bahuvrīhi; nañsubhyām — नञ्सुभ्याम् — (Pā. 6-2-172, as read): the later member after nañ or su in a bahuvrīhi is final-acute, so parṇa is final-acute. - gabhīravepāḥ: ṭuveṇṇ kampāne; the Uṇādi asun, of the oṇādika group; gabhīraṃ vepo yasya saḥ, a bahuvrīhi; the first-member accent of the compound applies; gabhīra is final-acute. - asuraḥ: root asu kṣepaṇe; asyati ity asuraḥ — āser uran — आसेरुरन् — (Uṇ. 1-42, as read from the numerals [?]): uran after asu; the suffix is nit, hence first-syllable acute; "another way of derivation can also be given" ³⁵.

Numerals are small; a rule is given a number only where it was read.

- asuraḥ (concluded): second way: asūn = breaths, rāti = gives — "he gives his breaths", that is, he who sacrifices his own life in battle; the root rā with asu as upapada, and ātonupasarge kaḥ — आतोऽनुपसर्गे कः — the suffix ka; loss of the ā.
- sunīthaḥ: root ṇīñ prāpaṇe; hanikuṣinīramikāśibhyaḥ kthan — हनिकुषिनीरमिकाशिभ्यः कथन् — (Uṇādi, number as read 2-[?]): after five roots, han hiṃsāgatyoh, kuṣa niṣkarṣe, ṇīñ prāpaṇe, ramu krīḍāyām, kāśr dīptau, the suffix kthan; ṇo naḥ — णो नः — the initial ṇ of the root becomes n beforehand; ni + tha, the suffix being kit there is no guṇa; kugatiprādayaḥ — a prādi compound with su; thāthaghañktājabitrakāṇām — the word ending in such a suffix after a gati or an upapada is final-acute.
- idānīm: dānīm ca — दानीं च — a time-denoting idam, in the seventh case, takes the suffix dānīm in its own sense; idam + ñi + dānīm; the ñi, as part of a taddhitānta base, is lost by supo dhātuprātipadikayoh; idama is — इदम इश् — is replaces idam before a suffix of the prāgdiśīya class; is is śit, so by anekālśit sarvasya — अनेकाल्शित्सर्वस्य — it replaces the whole of idam; is + dānīm; by the suffix-accent dā is acute.
- sūryaḥ: root ṣū prerāṇe; suvati = prerayati — "he who impels people to their several works"; rājasūyasūryamṛṣodyarucyakupyakṛṣṭapacyāvyathyāḥ — the suffix kyap with the augment rut is irregularly (nipātana) given in this rule; ṣ → s; kyap is pit, so unaccented, and sū keeps the root's accent.

- ciketa: root kita jñāne, juhotyādi; liṭ; liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya — doubling: kit + kit; the final t of the reduplicate lost; k → c; ci + kit; laghūpadha-guṇa; liṭ → ta; the print remarks that the form with e instead of what liṭas tajhayor eśirec teaches is Vedic.
- katamām: vā bahūnām jātiparipraśne ḍatamac — वा बहूनां जातिपरिप्रश्ने डतमच् — the Mahābhāṣya rejects the words jātiparipraśne as unnecessary; when one is to be chosen among many, ḍatamac after kim, yat, tat; ḍit, so the ṭi (im) is lost, leaving atama; ka + tama; the suffix is cit, so the word is final-acute. Bhāvārtha

— "The shining Savitr lit up the eight directions of the earth, the three worlds, earth and the others, that join beings to their several dealings and experiences, and the seven rivers beginning with the Gaṅgā, as also the seven seas, with his rays. His eyes are made of gold; they are beneficial to all, and pleasing. May Savitr, bright and golden-eyed, come to this sacrificial ground, granting the sacrificer who performs the sacrifice and gives the oblation the riches he desires."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 160) — "He has lighted up the eight quarters (points) of the earth, the three regions of living beings and the seven rivers (or seven Seas); may the golden-eyed Savitri come hither bestowing upon the offerer of the oblation, desirable riches." .³⁷

Rik 8 — Special Topics and grammar (pp. 161–163, PDF 175–177; grammar pages, noted briefly)

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 161 - aṣṭau kakubhaḥ pṛthivyāḥ — "the eight directions: the four, east, west, south, north, and the four intermediate directions, south-east, south-west, north-west, north-east — together eight directions. Eight points of the Horizon [the print's English]." - trī — "the three worlds, earth, mid-region and heaven." - sapta sindhūn — "the seven rivers, Gaṅgā, Yamunā, Sarasvatī, Śutudrī, Paruṣṇī, Asiknī, Vitastā, or the seven seas." ³⁸ - hiraṇyākṣaḥ = hitaramaṇīyacakṣur yuktaḥ | athavā hiraṇmayāny akṣiṇī yasyāsau hiraṇyākṣaḥ: "one who has eyes pleasant to look at, beautiful; or one with eyes as beautiful as gold." - vāryāṇi = varaṇīyāni: "wished for by all, needed by all, desirable &c. [the print's English]."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā - akhyat (p. 161): "explained in the fifth mantra of this same sūкта" (Rik 5 above). - trī: after tri in the neuter, śas, replaced by śi, which has the name sarvanāmasthāna; the augment num; the lengthening of the penultimate; trīn + śi; by śeś chandasi bahulam the śi is dropped, and the n is lost. - dhanva: the root rivi ravi dhavi, with the sense of going, idit; idito num dhātoḥ — the augment num gives dhanv; kanin yuvṛṣitakṣarājidhanvidyupratidivaḥ — [Uṇādi, as read] — the suffix kanin after these roots; dhanv + an; supāṃ sulug...: luk of the śas; nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya: loss of n; kanin is nit, so the first syllable is acute. - yojanā (pp. 161–162): root yujir yoge; yojayanti ("they join [creatures to their enjoyments]") — yojayatīti yojanā; nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ — the suffix lyu; yuvor anākau — ana for yu; ṇer aniṭi — loss of ṇi before an ārdhadhātuka without iṭ; laghūpadha-guṇa; after the stem yojana, śas, replaced by śi, and the loss of śi etc. as before. - hiranyākṣaḥ (p. 162): hiranyāny akṣiṇi yasya saḥ — "he who has golden eyes"; the form is hiranyākṣan [before the suffix]; bahuvrīhau sakthyakṣnoḥ svāṅgāt śac — बहुव्रीहौ सक्थ्यक्ष्णोः स्वाङ्गात्सच् — the suffix śac, a compound-final (samāsānta) and taddhita, after a bahuvrīhi ending in sakthi or akṣi which denotes a svāṅga ("own limb"). The print then gives the definition of svāṅga in a verse:

38. Vitastā stands here where the list at Rik 6 of Sūкта 34 gave Marudvṛdhā; recorded as printed.

अद्रवं मूर्तिमत्स्वाङ्गं प्राणिस्थमविकारजम् । अतत्स्थं तत्र दृष्टं च तेन चेतत्तथायुतम् ॥

adravaṃ mūrtimat svāṅgaṃ prāṇistham avikārajam | atatstham tatra dṛṣṭaṃ ca tena cet tat tathāyutam | |

"A non-fluid, bodily thing located in a living being and not born of a change [is svāṅga]; and also that which is not located there but is seen there, if it is likewise joined with it." ³⁹ The Kannada explains the three marks: it must be a non-liquid (adrava) thing of solid form (mūrtimat) belonging to the living being from its nature, not arising from a change; and the second mark covers what is no longer in a living being but was once, as the hair of a street-barber's model, as an example, or what is joined in the manner of one in a living being, as the breasts of an image. Here the eye (akṣi) is a body-part and so svāṅga; hiranyākṣin + a; nastaddhite — नस्तद्धिते — the ṭi of an aṅga ending in n and bearing the name bha is lost before a taddhita suffix: so in is lost; the final syllable acute. - āgāt: iṇ gatau, luṇ; iṇo gā luṇi — before luṇ, gā replaces iṇ; gātisthāghupābhūbhyaḥ sicaḥ parasmaipadeṣu: luk of sic; loss of the i of tīp by itaś ca. - dadhat (pp. 162–163): root

*dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, laṭ, śatṛ; śap → ślu; doubling: dhā + dhā + at; hrasvaḥ: the reduplicate is shortened; abhyāse carca: dh → d of the reduplicate; śnābhyastayor ātaḥ — the ā of a base in śnā or an abhyasta base is lost before a kit/ñit sārvaadhātuka suffix (here śatṛ, treated as ñit): so dadh + at; nābhyastācchatuḥ — no num for śatṛ after an abhyasta; since supi follows, ugidacām... would give num, but it is prevented; loss of the ending [su]; ubhe abhyastam — the two repeated parts together are abhyasta; abhyastānām ādiḥ: first-syllable acute. - dāśuṣe (p. 163): dāśvān sāhvān mīḍhvāmś ca — दाश्वान्साह्वान्मीद्वान्श्च — the forms are irregular: dās dāne with kvasu, with the absence of doubling and of iṭ by nipātana (against liṭi dhātoḥ...); in sāhvān the root śaha marṣaṇe, parasmaipada, with kvasu, no doubling, no iṭ, and lengthened penultimate; in mīḍhvān the root miha secane, with kvasu, lack of doubling and of iṭ; after dāśvas the fourth singular ñe: dāśvas + e; vasoḥ saṃprasāraṇam — the v of a base ending in vas [with the name bha] becomes u, with pūrvarūpa; dāśus + e; ādeśapratyayayoḥ — s that is part of a suffix → ṣ; the print adds that in śāsivasighasīnām ca the roots [śās, vas, ghas, sī...] are meant by association, not the suffix, so the ṣatva of that rule cannot arise here — "the sense is clear in the Śekhara and similar works". - vāryāṇi: vṛñ sambhaktau; ṛhalonyat — ऋहलोर्ण्यत् — nyat after a root ending in ṛ or in a consonant; vṛ + ya; aco ñṇiti — vṛddhi: vārya; īḍavandavṛśamsaduhām nyataḥ — ईडवन्दवृशंसदुहां ण्यतः — the first syllable of a word in nyat from these roots is acute; the sūtra names vṛ, not vṛñ, so — since vṛñ would otherwise take kyap by ētisstuśāsṛdrjuṣaḥ kyap — the vārtika vṛñāḥ grahaṇam kartavyam ("vṛñ must be taken in") is cited; and in īḍavanda... the word vṛ is held to mean the root vṛñ; otherwise nyat would not apply. Translation: "Hiraṇyapāṇiḥ — having golden hands; or, holding gold in his hand to give to the sacrificers. Vicarṣaṇiḥ — endowed with varied seeing, i.e. 'he sees': since vicarṣaṇiḥ, viśvacarṣaṇiḥ is read in the lists of such names. Savitṛ the god īyate, goes, antaḥ, in the midst of the two worlds, ubhe dyāvāprthivī. Amīvām — the affliction of disease and the like — apa bādḥate, he drives away completely. Likewise sūryam veti — he goes to Sūrya: although Savitṛ and Sūrya are one deity, there is yet the relation of goer and goal, by a difference of form. Kṛṣṇena rajasā — with the radiance that draws away, that removes, the darkness — dyām, the sky, abhi rṇoti, he pervades on all sides."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁴¹: dyāvāprthivī (divasāś ca prthivyām — the word ca carries dyāvā as the substitute of div before prthivī in a dvandva of deity-names; devatādvandve ca gives both members their natural accent; the rule on a following unaccented second member does not bar it); īyate (īṇ gatau; the tiṇ is lowered by tiṇ ṇatiṇaḥ); bādḥate ca vā iti (the sense of ca is understood though the word ca is not used, so by cādilope vibhāṣā the lowering [nighāta] is not applied); veti (vī gatiprajanakāntyasanakhādaneṣu; śap lost by adādi; tip is pīṭ, so unaccented and the root's accent stays; though sūryam is a second-case word, the tiṇ [veti] stands after it, so there is no lowering of the verb); rṇoti (rṇu gatau, tanādi; of the tanādi roots only kṛ takes guṇa, as śali... ut-ness; so no guṇa here).

Pratipadārtha — "hiraṇyapāṇiḥ — with golden hands (or holding gold in the hand, to give it to the sacrificer); vicarṣaṇiḥ — of varied seeing (able to look at what has been, is, and will be); savitā — the Savitṛ deity; ubhe dyāvāprthivī — of the two worlds, earth and mid-region; antaḥ — in the middle; īyate — moves about; amīvām — the afflictions of disease and the like; apa bādhate — destroys completely; sūryam — to the Sun's neighbourhood; veti — goes; kṛṣṇena — [that which] removes darkness; rajasā — with radiance; dyām — the sky; abhi ṛṇoti — pervades all round."

Bhāvārtha

— "The Savitṛ deity's hands are of gold, or he always holds gold in his hand to give to the sacrificer. He can see everything, and can behold past, future and present. This Savitṛ moves in the middle of the two worlds, earth and mid-region. He destroys completely disease and troubles of that kind. He goes also to the neighbourhood of the Sun, who is of a different form from himself; and with his divine radiance, which removes the darkness, he pervades the whole sky."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 165)

— "The golden-handed, all seeing Savitri travels between heaven and earth, dispels diseases, approaches the sun, and ascends the heaven through the dark regions of space" .

Rik 9 — Special Topics concluded and grammar (pp. 166–168, PDF 180–182; grammar pages, noted briefly)

Special Topics, continued from p. 165 (p. 166) - ubhe dyāvāpr̥thivī antar īyate — "below the earth, above heaven: [he] moves between these worlds, by the path of the mid-region; such is the meaning." - amīvām apa bādhate — "one who destroys disease and the like. It is the opinion of the physicians that the Sun's rays have the power to remove many illnesses. On this matter the ṛk:"

हृद्रोगं मम सूर्य हरिमाणं च नाशय । (ऋ. सं. १-५०-११)

hṛdrogaṃ mama sūrya harimāṇaṃ ca nāśaya | (ṛ. saṃ. 1-50-11)

"— 'destroy my heart-disease and my jaundice, O Sūrya' — so Praskaṇva, the ṛṣi of that sūkta, prays to the Sun. That the Sun's light is indispensable to the life of living beings and of plants, and that without the Sun beings and plants could not live on the earth, even ordinary people know well." ⁴⁴ - sūryam abhi — "Here the bhāṣyakāra says 'yady api savitṛsūryayor ekadevatātvaṃ tathāpi mūrtibhedena ganṭrgantavyabhāvaḥ' (he is both the goer and the goal by a difference of form); that is, though Sūrya and Savitṛ are one deity, by a difference of form one may be said to go to the neighbourhood of the other: this is the reconciliation he offers. In explaining the word sūrya Yāska says 'sūryaḥ saterva suvater vā svīryater vā' (Ni. 12-14 [?]). Of these three explanations, svīryater vā means su-pūrvasya vā īrayater gatyarthasya — 'one who moves well, or swiftly'. If this sense is taken in this ṛk, it will be right to say that the Sun, moving swiftly in the mid-region, goes towards the world of heaven." ⁴⁵ - kr̥ṣṇena rajasā — "the mid-region through which the Sun travels is full of darkness. The Sun lights up everything by his own light."

44. Translation of the ṛk editorial and tentative; the reference numerals are as read from small Kannada digits and agree with the ṛk's standard place as far as is known [?].

45. Translation of the Nirukta quotation editorial and tentative.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā - dyāvāpṛthivī (pp. 166–167): dyauś ca pṛthivī ca, a dvandva; divasāś ca pṛthivyām — दिवसश्च पृथिव्याम् — the ca carries on the preceding rule's divo dyāvā, so dyāvā is the substitute of div [the print notes the svarita-announcement, svaritatvapratiññā, so divaḥ continues]; in a dvandva with pṛthivī as second member, div is replaced by divas or dyāvā; here dyāvā, which is first-syllable acute by nipātana; devatādvandve ca — देवताद्वन्द्वे च — in a dvandva of deity-names both members keep their natural accent together, i.e. the accent they had before stays; the print adds that there is no vyatyāsa of this [i.e. no reversal]. Pṛthivī: pratheḥ śivan samprasāraṇaṃ ca — प्रथेः शिवन् संप्रसारणं च — [Uṇ. 1-[?]] — after prath prakhyāne the suffix śivan, with samprasāraṇa of the base: pṛthivi; śiddhaurādibhyaś ca — णिश्; the word is final-acute by the suffix; the pr is unaccented by the śeṣa-nighāta; the print then argues that the prohibition notarapade 'nudāttādau — नोत्तरपदेऽनुदात्तादौ — (the rule that a second member beginning with an unaccented syllable stops the natural accent of both members) might be thought to apply, but that rule itself says apṛthivīrudrapūṣamanthiṣu — "except for pṛthivī, rudra, pūṣan, manthin" — so it does not apply here, where pṛthivī is the second member. - īyate (p. 167): root īñ gatau, 4th class; the root is ñit, so anudāttanīta ātmanepadam — the ātmanepada; laṭ → ta; ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭere gives e; divādibhyaḥ śyan; kniti ca bars guṇa; tiñ natiṇaḥ makes the verb wholly unaccented. - amīvām: root amu roge; śīvayeśajihvāgrīvāpyāmīvāḥ — [Uṇ. 1-155, as read from the numerals [?]] — the suffix van, with the augment īṭ, irregularly; ṭāp; accusative singular am, pūrvārūpa. - bādhate: "although the sense of ca is understood — 'he destroys disease, and goes to the Sun, though of a different form' — the word ca is not used; so by cādilope vibhāṣā there is a prohibition of the wholly-unaccented accent of the verb." - veti: root vī gatiprajanakāntyasanakhādaneṣu; laṭ, tip, śap; ādiṣṭa prabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ: luk of śap; guṇa; tip is pit and so unaccented; the root's own accent stays; this is the second tiñanta of the sentence, so cādilope is not applicable; but since it stands after the tiñanta bādhate, the lowering by tiñ natiñah does not arise (it requires a non-tiñ before). - ṛṇoti (pp. 167–168): root ṛṇu gatau, tanādi; laṭ, tip; tanādikṛñbhya uḥ — तनादिकृञ्भ्य उः — the suffix u; with this u as the cause laghūpadha-guṇa would arise; the teachers Ātreya, Āpīśali and others, by saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ [as read], hold that guṇa does not arise in the tanādi; by their opinion no guṇa here. Or, following bahulam etannidarśanam, the root ṛ is read in the svādi class, and svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ gives the śnu of the vikaraṇa, an apit sārvaadhātuka and so ñit; knīti ca prevents guṇa; the result is ṛṇoti. Translation: "Hiranyahastaḥ — golden-handed; asuraḥ — the giver of life; sunīthaḥ — good leader, i.e. praiseworthy, since sunīthaḥ is read among the names for 'praiseworthy' [the citation is as read and not secure [?]]; sumṛṭīkaḥ — the one who gives good happiness; svavān — possessed of wealth: let him come arvāṇ — facing us, to the place of the rite. Moreover this god, being praised every night (pratidoṣam), asthāt — has stood [here]. Doing what? Rakṣasaḥ — [driving away those] who, by being injurers, are the occasion for [our] need of protection ('rakṣas, that from which [one] must be protected', so Yaska, Ni. 4-18 [?]); yātudhānān, the asuras — apasedhan, keeping off, driving away."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁴⁷: "hiranyahasta and the like are as before"; sumṛṭīkaḥ (suṣṭhu mṛṭīkaṃ sukhaṃ yasyāsau, naṅsubhyām — final-acute of the later member); svavān (svam asyāsti; matup, with m → v by mādūparadhāyā [the rule on matup after a base with m or a]; the n in the Saṃhitā becomes ru by dirghād aṭi samānapāde, the ā is nasalised by ato 'ṭi nityam, and the ru becomes y (ro 'ri, yalopaḥ) [as read, [?]]; apasedhan (ṣidhu gatyām; śap pit so unaccented; śatṛ and the lasārvadhātuka accent keeps the compound's later member's natural accent); rakṣasaḥ (rakṣa pālana; the Uṇādi asun; or rakṣyate 'neneti rakṣaḥ, "strength", kaṛaṇe 'sun; the loss of the possessive suffix is Vedic; accent by the suffix); yātudhānān (yata nikāropaskārayoḥ — "to oppose, to prepare"; the Uṇādi suffix; yātanā — torments — dhīyante eṣu, "in whom torments are placed"; adhikaraṇe lyuṭ; the accent of what precedes a lit suffix); asthāt (gātisthā... luk of sic); pratidoṣam (prati in the sense of repetition, with an avyayibhāva: "night by night"); grṇānaḥ (gṛ śabde; laṭ in the passive, śānac; śnā by vyatyaya; the shortening of ṛ; final-acute by cit).

Pratipadārtha — "hiranyahastaḥ — golden-handed (or holding gold in the hand to give to the sacrificer); asuraḥ — life-giver; sunīthaḥ — praiseworthy because he leads [one] to the desired place by showing the way; sumṛṇīkaḥ — full of great delight (or giving joy); svavān — Savitr, the wealthy; arvān — facing the sacrificial place (let him walk); devaḥ — the god Savitr; pratidoṣam — every night; grṇānaḥ — being praised; rakṣasaḥ — the injurious; yātudhānān — the rākṣasas; apasedhan — warding off and driving away; asthāt — he stands [at the sacrificial place]."

— "The hands of the Savitr deity are of gold; or he always holds gold in his hand to give to the sacrificer. He gives breath to all living beings. By showing light to all and guiding them, he gives joy to all. May such a rich Savitr walk towards the sacrificial ground — for at the sacrificial place the injury done by the rākṣasas is great. If one praises the Savitr deity well every night, he, pleased by that praise, stands at the sacrificial ground and, driving off the injuring rākṣasas, remains there."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 170) — "May the golden-handed Savitri, the excellent guide, the giver of happiness and possessor of riches come to this sacrifice ; praised by men he drives off the harmful Rukshasas every night." ⁴⁸

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 170 ⁴⁹ - hiranyahastah — "its meaning and derivation are the same as those of the word hiranyapāṇiḥ." - asurah = asum prāṇam rāti dadātīty asurah | prāṇadātā: "the giver of breath, who protects the breath: life giving [the print's English]." - sunīthah — suṣṭhu netā praśasya ity arthaḥ: "a leader, an excellent one, one worthy of praise; among the ten words for 'praiseworthy' beginning asremāḥ, anemāḥ [as read, [?]] the word sunīthaḥ is read; so sunīthaḥ means praiseworthy." - sumṛṭīkaḥ = suṣṭhu sukhayitā — "the one who makes happiness." - svavān = svam asyāstīty svavān | dhanavān — "he who has wealth." - apasedhan = nirākurvan — "contemning, driving away, shunning, and so on." - rakṣah = rakṣanty anena iti rakṣo balam | rakṣo rakṣitavyam asmād iti yāśkaḥ (Ni. 4-[?]): "one who protects, or one who is able to protect from the rākṣasas and the like." - yātudhānān — "In general this word means rākṣasas, those who roam at night; asuras are also meant; but its exact sense is: one who works by spells — a sorcerer, a conjurer (māṭugāra, 'one who talks' [?]), a magician; Sorcerer, Wizard, magician [the print's English]. We give one or two examples:"

⁵¹ "And the word yātudhāna is also used in the Atharvaveda [references to several hymns, numerals not read], the Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, the Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa and other mantras." - pratidoṣam = pratirātrāṇi — "every night, on the night of every day." - gr̥ṇānaḥ = gṛ̥ śabde — stūyamānaḥ: "one who is being praised."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā - svavān (p. 171): svam eṣām asti — tadasyāstyasminn iti matup; māduparadhāyāś ca matorvo 'yavādibhyaḥ — मादुपधायाश्च मतोर्वोऽयवादिभ्यः — the m of matup becomes v after a base ending in a or having m or a as penultimate [the print explains the compound rule in two ways] and not belonging to the yavādi group; sva ends in a, so svavat; su; asaṃtasya cādhātoḥ — असन्तस्य चाधातोः — the penultimate vowel is lengthened before a sarvanāmasthāna ending, of a base not a dhātu ending in at; the augment num (ugidacām...); svavān + su, halñyābbhyo... —

50. Untranslated in the source. My gloss, editorial and tentative: "O Jātavedas, kindled, iron-fanged, touch the yātudhānas with your flame"; "and in the mid-region too, O king, go round; set your jaws on the yātudhānas". The reference numerals are as read from small Kannada digits [?].) (The list of examples continues on p. 171, to be viewed next.

51. Mine and tentative: "here tell, O Agni, which one he is, the yātudhāna who does this"; "break his ribs with your heat, O Agni; cut the root of the yātudhāna in three ways". The reference numerals are as read from small Kannada digits and not secure [?].

loss of su; saṃyogāntasya lopah: loss of the t; this loss, being asiddha, does not allow the loss of n; in the Samhitā, dirghād aṭi samānapāde turns the n into ru; ato 'ṭi nityam — ā nasalised; bhobhago 'gho 'pūrvasya yo 'śi — ru → y; lopah śākalyasya — loss of the y. - apasedhan (p. 172): root ṣidha gatyām, "1st class, 47th root [as read]; ṣidhū śāstre māṅgalye ca, ṣidhu saṃrāddhau, the other roots; in the present Dhātupāṭha ṣidha gatyām is not found"; laṭ, śatṛ, śap, laghūpadha-guṇa: sedhat; su; num by ugit; sedhan + su; halīyādilopa, loss of the t; the preverb apa; śap is pit and śatṛ is lasārvadhātuka, so both unaccented; after the compound with apa, the later member keeps its natural accent (kṛdutarapadaprakṛtisvara). - rakṣasaḥ: root rakṣa pālana, 1st class; the Uṇādi suffix asin in the sense of apādāna: rakṣanty asmāt — "those from whom protection is [needed]", i.e. the occasion for protection; or rakṣyate 'nena — rakṣaḥ, in the sense of instrument, the Uṇādi asun: "strength": one who is protected by yātu is thus protected; without strength protection cannot be done; so rakṣaḥ = strength; rakṣo 'syāsti = rakṣasvin, "powerful"; asmāyāmedhāsrajo viniḥ — the suffix vin, whose luk is Vedic: rakṣasaḥ, rakṣasvinaḥ, "powerful ones"; the a of as is acute by the suffix-accent; had asun been intended, the first syllable would have been acute. - yātudhānān: root yata nikāropaskārayoḥ, 1st class;

satyāpapāśarūpaviṇātūlaślokaśenāloamatvacavarmavarṇacūrṇacurādibhyo ṇic — the suffix ṇic in its own sense; after it, the Uṇādi suffix u in the verbal-noun sense; loss of ṇi; upadhā-vṛddhi: yātu, "torment, harassment"; yātavo dhīyante eṣu — "in whom torments are placed"; karaṇādhikaraṇayoś ca — lyuṭ after dhā in the locus sense: ana; yātudhā + ana; lit — the syllable before the lit is acute; savarṇadīrgha; single-substitute accent. - asthāt: the print has "asmāt" at this entry and says it is explained in the eighth mantra of this sūkta; evidently a misprint for asthāt (see Rik 8: gātisthā... luk of sic). - pratidoṣam (pp. 172–173): doṣā = night; the phrase doṣaṃ prati; prati compounded with doṣā: avyayaṃ vibhaktisamīpasamṛddhivṛddhyarthābhāvātyayāsampratiśabdaprādurbhāvapaśca — an indeclinable in any of these senses (case-sense, proximity, prosperity...) compounds with a subanta, and it is avyayībhāva; here yathā-sense; the four senses of yathā are yogyatā (fitness), vīpsā (repetition), padārthānativr̥tti (not exceeding) and sādr̥śya (likeness); here vīpsā: "vīpsā means vyāpti, relating fully; when vīpsā is shown in a sentence, doubling comes by nityavīpsayoḥ; but in a compound the vīpsā is already expressed and so no doubling — so Kaiyaṭa says on a rule [the word printed hayavarātḥ]; avyayībhāvaś ca — neuter; hrasvo napuṃsake prātipadikasya — shortening; nāvyayībhāvād ato 'm tv apañcamyāḥ — after an avyayībhāva ending in a the sup is replaced by am (not luk), except the fifth case; amipūrvah: pūrvārūpa: pratidoṣam. - gr̥ṇānaḥ (p. 173): root gr̥ śabde, kryādi; laṭ in the passive, śānac; kryādibhyaḥ śnā — śnā as the vikaraṇa: gr̥ + nā + āna; the root's vowel is shortened [the print: prāḍīnām hrasvah, as read, [?]]; ṛvarṇān nasya ṇatvaṃ vācyam (vārtika): n → ṇ; cita: final-acute. Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁵³: panthāḥ (su for jas by supām sulug...; pathimathoḥ sarvanāmasthāne — initial-acute); pūrvyāsaḥ (pūrvaiḥ kṛtam — the suffix ya [iniyau ca, as read]; jas with asuk; the ya-suffix accent); areṇavaḥ (nañsubhyām: final-acute of the later member); sukṛtāḥ (ktāḥ in the passive; gatir anantaraḥ — the preverb's accent natural); sugebhiḥ (suṣṭhu

52. The Saṃhitā's "sugebhī rakṣā" is the Pada's sugebhiḥ | rakṣa, with the visarga lost and the vowels lengthened by Vedic sandhi, as the grammar on p. 176 explains.

53. p. 174, characterized

Pratipadārtha — "savitaḥ — O Savitr deity; te — your; panthāḥ — the paths (to come to the place of sacrifice); pūrvyāsaḥ — established from of old (made by our forbears); areṇavaḥ — dustless; antarikṣe — in the mid-region; sukṛtāḥ — well made; sugebhiḥ — easy to travel; tebhiḥ pathibhiḥ — by those paths (coming); naḥ — us; rakṣa — protect; ca — and; he deva — O shining Savitr; naḥ — us (those who keep the Vedic observances); adhi brūhi — speak well of us (in the presence of the other gods; speak favourably for us)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Savitr deity, the paths you must take to reach the sacrificial ground are made from of old, dustless and well prepared. By those easy paths come to our sacrificial ground in kindness and protect us. And speak of us before the other gods as those who always perform sacrifices with the Vedic observances, offering them oblations, and as pure of conduct."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 175)

— "O Savitri, your paths are ancient, are free from dust and well placed in the firmament ; by those paths easy to be traversed come and protect us ; speak well of us (to the gods)" .

Close of Sūkta 35

The sūkta has 11 Riks (printed pp. 131–176; PDF 145–190), as the heading on p. 132 states ("ṛks 1–11") and the Sanskrit introduction ("ekādaśarcam") says; the Kannada anuvāda's

"ten" (p. 131) is thus a slip. The metre line of the heading, read together with the introduction, makes Riks 1 and 9 Jagatī and the rest Triṣṭup. Closing note (p. 176, in Kannada, printed in ordinary type under the last grammar paragraph): illige mūraneya sūktavu mugidudu — "Here the third sūkta [of this Adhyāya] is finished" (Sūkta 35 is the third of the Third Adhyāya, after Sūktas 33 and 34; the sūkta's number is not given, and this is not the "samāptavu" formula of earlier volumes); no varga-end statement is printed. An ornament follows.

Sūkta 36 begins at the foot of the same leaf, printed p. 176 = PDF 190, with om and the large heading mūvattāraneya sūktavu ("the thirty-sixth sūkta"); its Sanskrit introduction begins "aṣṭame 'nuvāke 'ṣṭau sūktāni | tatra pra vo yahvam iti viṃśatyṛcam prathamam sūktam | ghoraputraḥ kaṇva ṛṣiḥ | ..." (the eighth anuvāka has eight sūktas; the first, pra vo yahvam, has twenty ṛks; the ṛṣi is Kaṇva, son of Ghora). It is not translated here and belongs to the next session; the contents table's page for Sūkta 36 (p. 177) was a leaf out, as the sūkta begins on p. 176.

Summary of the sūkta (from the Bhāvārthas):

a hymn to Savitṛ, the Sun as impeller — invoking Agni, Mitra-Varuṇa, Night and Savitṛ for protection (Rik 1); his golden chariot moving through the dark mid-region, setting gods and men to their tasks (Rik 2); his upward and downward paths and white horses, driving off sin (Rik 3); the chariot with its golden ornaments and pegs (Rik 4); his horses Śyāva and the worlds standing near him (Rik 5); the three heavens, the mid-region as the way of the dead to Yama, and the Sun's greatness beyond man's knowing (Rik 6); the quivering, life-giving ray and the wonder at where the Sun is at night (Rik 7); the lighting of the eight quarters, the three worlds and the seven rivers (Rik 8); the golden-handed Savitṛ moving between heaven and earth, driving away disease (Rik 9); his coming to the sacrifice to drive off the rākṣasas (Rik 10); and a closing prayer to come by his dustless ancient paths and speak well of the worshippers to the gods (Rik 11).

Translation: "In the eighth anuvāka there are eight sūktas. Of these the first, pra vo yahvam, has twenty ṛks. The ṛṣi is Kaṇva, son of Ghora. The odd [ṛks] are Bṛhatī, since the third pāda has twelve syllables; the even are Satobṛhatī, since the first and third pādas have twelve syllables. The deity is Agni; [but] the [two ṛks] beginning ūrdhva ū ṣu and ūrdhvo naḥ have the yūpa (sacrificial post) as deity. So the Anukramaṇikā: 'pra vo — twenty; Kaṇva Ghaura; Āgneya; Prāgātha; ūrdhva ū ṣu [are] addressed to the yūpa.' [Objection:] But surely [the ṛks] beginning ūrdhva ū ṣu should have Agni as deity, since these two are [recited] in the Āgneya kratu [the phrase "anudrāvāt" is doubtful to me]. For in the sūtra, since only the opening words are taken — 'enā vo agniṃ, pra vo yahvam — it is understood that the whole sūkta is addressed to Agni. If these two had another deity, one would have to take out [uddhṛ] the last [ṛk?] of the two sūktas 'vasiṣṭhā hi' [?] (Āś. 4-13 [?]) — [so would] one have to say; but [the sūtra] does not say it. How then 'the yūpa'? — [Answer:] there is no fault: since Agni, who is the support of the yūpa, is what is praised, Agni is the deity of these two as well, and so no taking-out was made in the Āgneya kratu; and by wishing to stress the support, '[addressed] to the yūpa' is also not contradicted. In the prātaranuvāka, in the Āgneya kratu, in the Bṛhatī metre, [is used] the sūkta pra vo yahvam: so it is laid down in the section beginning 'athaitasyā rātrēr vivāsakāle' [of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra]: 'enā vo agniṃ, pra vo yahvam.'"

Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 177 — "The eighth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala begins with the sūkta pra vo yahvam. In this anuvāka there are eight sūktas. In the first of these, pra vo yahvam, there are twenty ṛks. For all eight sūktas of this anuvāka the ṛṣi is Kaṇva, the son of Ghora. Of the ṛks of this sūkta, the odd ṛks, 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 17, 19, are of the Bṛhatī metre, since the third pāda has twelve syllables; the even ṛks, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, are of the Satobṛhatī metre, since the first and third pādas have twelve syllables. Agni is the deity of this sūkta, and the yūpa is the deity of the 13th and 14th ṛks, ūrdhva ū ṣu and ūrdhvo naḥ. The Anukramaṇikā says: 'pra vo viṃśatiḥ kaṇvo ghaura āgneyaṃ prāgāthamūrdhva ū ṣu yaupyāv iti' — that is, for the sūkta of twenty ṛks beginning pra vo, Kaṇva Ghaura is the ṛṣi, Agni the deity, and the metre prāgātha; the two ṛks ūrdhva ū ṣu are addressed to the yūpa. Since the two ṛks ūrdhva ū ṣu are addressed to the yūpa, it is natural to think that they are not addressed to Agni; and it is the custom not to recite them in the recital of the Agni kratu mantras. This matter is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the sūtra 'enā vo agniṃ (Ṛg. 2-[?]) pra vo yahvam (Ṛg. 1-36-1)' [numerals as read, not certain]; so the whole sūkta is said to be addressed to Agni. In the view that the ṛks 13–14, though connected, are of a deity other than Agni, one may cite as an example the last ṛks of the sūktas 'vasiṣṭhā hi' (Āś. 4-13 [?]); that [view] cannot be maintained; so how can these ṛks 13–14 be addressed to the yūpa? There is no fault in that: since these ṛks praise Agni, who stands as the support of the yūpa, they are counted as addressed to Agni, but they are not recited in the kratu of Agni; if the adhiṣṭhāna (support) is taken as the main thing, then that they are addressed to the yūpa is not contradicted either."

Anuvāda, continued (p. 178): "...When the mantras of the Bṛhatī metre connected with the Āgneya kratu are recited at the time of the prātaranuvāka recital, this sūkta pra vo yahvam is to be recited; this is laid down in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section 'athaitasyā rātrēr vivāsakāle', where the ṛks enā vo agniṃ (Ṛg. 2-[?]-[?]) and pra vo yahvam (Ṛg. 1-36-1) are prescribed."

Bhāvārtha — "O priests who perform the sacrifice, and sacrificers, you, the many people, delight the deities by worship and the like and look for their favour. For all of you, at the sacrifice, the favour of Agni, the representative and the best, must come first. All the ṛṣis everywhere praise that Agni. We too, with excellent words of praise in the form of sūktas, pray that he, who gives you what you desire, should favour you."

10. Translation of the Nirukta quotation editorial and tentative.

Aṣṭādhyāyī only the ītva was taught earlier, this blocking is to be understood for it only; but aśvāghasyāt — अश्वाघस्यात् — in the Veda ā for aśva and agha before kyac, as in aśvāyantaḥ, aghāyavaḥ — would be pointless if na chandasi blocked it; so na chandasi must block both [the ītva and the lengthening] and this is established by that jñāpaka"; laṭ, śaṭṛ, kartari śap; śap is pit, so anudātta by anudāttau suppitau; since śaṭṛ is lasārvadhātuka, the accent tāsyānudātenñīdadupadeśāt... applies; the kyac is acute by the cit accent; the single substitute of a and the a of śaṭṛ is [acute] by ekādeśa udātenodāttaḥ; then ugītaś ca — ñīp in the feminine; the print discusses ekādeśa udātenodāttaḥ in the second pāda of the eighth adhyāya and the rule śaturanumo nadyajādī in the sixth, and pūrvatrāsiddham (8-2-1): when the work of the sixth adhyāya is done, the later [eighth-adhyāya] rules are asiddha, so one would expect the single-substitute accent to be asiddha; but the Mahābhāṣya's passage on svarito vānudātte padādau — "ekādeśasvaro 'ntaraṅgaḥ ..." [as read, crowded] — says that the single-substitute accent is established when the accent of the śaṭṛ is made the cause; and since the word ends in śaṭṛ it is final-acute; so śaturanumo nadyajādī gives the acute to the ending. - sūktebhiḥ (p. 182): root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām — क्तिच्कतौ च संज्ञायाम् — ktic; vacisvapiyajādīnām kiti — saṃprasāraṇa; su as preverb; su + ukta; savarṇadīrgha; coḥ kuḥ — c → k: sūkta; bhis does not take ais, by the Vedic bahulam; thāthaghañktājabitrakāṇām: final-acute of the later member. - īlate: root īda stutau, adādi, anudāttet; the ātmanepada ending ta, e by ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭere; śap; the ḍ → ḷ in the Bahvrca tradition (ajmadhyasthaḍakārasya..., as above at Sūkta 33); ādiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ: luk of śap; the lasārvadhātuka ta stands after an anudāttet root, hence tāsyānudātenñīdadupadeśāt... makes it unaccented; but the relative word yam is connected, so by yadvṛttānityam [yadvṛttayogād anighātaḥ] the lowering is prevented and the root's accent stands. Translation: "Janāsaḥ — the people, the performers — dadhire — have taken up (dhṛtavantaḥ) Agni, the sahovṛdham, the increaser of strength. We, haviṣmantaḥ, furnished with oblations, O Agni, te vidhema — would serve you, wait on you ('vidhati' being a word of serving; 'vidhema', 'saparyati' are read among the verbs of serving). O santya, you who are given to giving, in vājeṣu — foods — O Agni: that [you], today, on this day, here in this rite, sumanāḥ — well-minded towards us — avitā, a protector, bhava — be."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ¹²: sahovṛdham (root vṛdhu vṛddhau with the sense of the causative understood [antarbhāvitanyartha], kvip; the later member of a kṛt-compound keeps its natural accent); haviṣmantaḥ (haviḥ eṣāṃ santi; matup; here the word has no pada-name before matup, so the ru-rules do not apply); vidhema (vidha vidhāne, tudādi; liṅ, the augment yāsuḥ, loss of s; śa; iya-substitution; no guṇa); sumanāḥ (śobhanaṃ mano yasya; somanasī alomoṣasī: the later member after su, ending in manas, is first-syllable acute); bhava (the accent of the verb not lowered because it stands at the beginning of the third pāda: pādādityāt tiṅ atinaḥ...; in the Samhitā lengthened by dvyacotastiṇaḥ); santya (ṣaṇu dāne; ktic; "santiḥ is a giver", santyaḥ — tatra bhavaḥ; bhave chandasi yat; vocative).

Pratipadārtha — "janāsaḥ — the people who perform the sacrifice; sahovṛdham — [him] who increases strength; agnim — the deity Agni; dadhire — take refuge in (O Agni!); haviṣmantaḥ — we, too, holding the oblation (ready); te — you; vidhema — we worship; vājeṣu — in matters of food; santya — O Agni, you who are generous in giving; saḥ tvam — such a you; adya — today; iha — in this sacrifice of ours; naḥ — to us; sumanāḥ — of favourable mind; avitā — a protector; bhava — be."

— "All the people engaged in Vedic works take refuge in the Agni deity, who increases their strength, for their protection. O Agni, we too worship you, having made the oblations ready. You are very generous in the giving of food. Showing that generosity today, be well-minded and our protector in this sacrificial work of ours."

12. p. 183, characterized

English Translation (the source's own, p. 184) — "The people have approached the Agni who is the increaser of vigour; Agni, we worship you with oblations ; O liberal giver of food, be well disposed to us here this day and be our protector." ¹³.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 184–185 - janāsaḥ — "an ancient usage of the word janāḥ: people." - dadhire = dhṛtavantaḥ: "with a spirit of devotion, they have come near to praise you; such is the sense." - sahovṛdham = balasya vardhayitāram: "sahaḥ means strength (Ni. 5-[?] [?]); one who increases strength, who gives strength." - haviṣmantah = haviṣ yuktā vayam: "we, who have made oblations ready to offer to you." - sumanāḥ = śobhanamanaskaḥ: "one of good, or generous, mind towards us." - avitā = rakṣitā: "a protector; one who guards us." - vājeṣu santya — "one generous, giving in matters of food and other foods."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁴ - sahovṛdham: root vṛdhu vṛddhau; "though there is no ṇic suffix, to yield its meaning it is said to contain a causative sense (antarbhāvitanyartha); after such a root, kvip; saho vardhayatīti sahovṛdh, 'that which increases strength'; vṛdh is acute by the root's accent; after the compound the later member, a kṛdanta, keeps its natural accent, so that stays." - haviṣmantah: root hu dānādanayoḥ; arciśucihusṛpichādicharditr̥bhya isih — [Uṇādi 2-[?], as read] — the suffix isi; guṇa, av-substitution; since nabviśayasyāniṣantasya [a Phiṭ-sūtra, as read] excludes it by negation, the first syllable is not acute; haviḥ eṣāṃ santi; tadasyāstyasminn iti matup; havis + mat; tasau matvarthe — तसौ मत्वर्थे — before a suffix in the sense of matup the bases ending in t or s take the name bha — which makes the pada-name not apply; and since there is no pada-ness, sasajuṣo ruḥ and the other rules for ru do not operate. - vidhema: root vidha vidhāne, tudādi; parasmaipada; vidhiliṅ in the first-person plural mas, loss of s [sa-lopa]; tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ — śa; vidh + a + īma; guṇa prevented; yāsuḥ; īya-substitution and guṇa [as read]. - sumanāḥ (p. 186 begins): śobhanaṃ manāḥ yeṣāṃ te, a bahuvrīhi; somanasī alomoṣasī — सोमनसी अलोमोषसी — in a bahuvrīhi, after su, a later member that is not lomān/uṣas but ends in man or as is first-syllable acute; so the asun-final manas after su is first-syllable acute. - bhava: loṭ, second-person singular; "it stands at the beginning of the third pāda; anudāttaṃ sarvaṃ apādādau is prohibited for what is at the beginning of a pāda; so the wholly-unaccented accent of tiṅ ṇatiṅaḥ does not come; in the Samhitā dvyacotastiṅaḥ lengthens the a of a tiṅ-form with two vowels: bhavā". - santya (pp. 185–186): root ṣaṇu dāne; dhātvādeḥ śaḥ saḥ; ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām — in the sense of a name or a blessing, ktic/kta after roots; "sanutāt — santiḥ: san + tī"; na kticī dīrghas ca — न क्तिचि दीर्घश्च — before ktic the lengthening and the loss of the nasal that other rules teach for roots like vana, tana do not apply; anunāsikasya kvijhaloḥ kñiti — but this lengthening is also blocked; anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kñiti — the loss of the nasal is likewise prohibited; the nasals are the ñ, m, ṇ, n of the fifth letters; tituttra... — no iṭ; santiḥ means "a giver" — santyaṃ bhavaḥ, santyaḥ; bhave chandasi — yat in the Veda in the sense "born, existing in"; santi + ya; yasyeti ca — loss of the i; the vocative singular. Translation: "O Agni — the hotṛ, the accomplisher of the offering or the caller; viśvavedasam, all-knowing; the dūta, engaged in the messenger's work of the gods ('Agni was the messenger of the gods', so another Vedic text) — such a one we pra vṛṇīmahe, choose earnestly. Mahaḥ sataḥ te — of you, great and ever existing — arcayaḥ, the flames, vi caranti — move about in many ways; bhānavaḥ, your rays, divi spr̥śanti — touch the heavenly world; they illumine the beings there."

Grammar within the bhāṣya: the bhāṣya of Rik 3 on p. 187 has its grammatical tail in the lines after the main sense: viśvavedasam (viśvāni vetti, the Uṇādi asun, with the first-member accent; or veda = wealth, a bahuvrīhi with bahuvrīhau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām, so the first member is final-acute); mahaḥ (maha pūjāyām, kvip; the genitive ending after a one-vowelled base is acute by sāvekāca...; or from mahat, with the Vedic loss of āt); sataḥ (as bhuvi, śatṛ, śnasor allopaḥ, and śaturanumo nadyajādī for the ending's acute); divi (ūḍidam..., the ending acute). These are taken up again in the Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā below.

Pratipadārtha — "hotāram — [O Agni] who brings the offering to completion, or the inviter (the caller) of the gods; viśvavedasam — all-knowing; dūtam — one engaged in the messenger's work of the gods; (such) you, pra vṛṇīmahe — we choose first; mahaḥ — of great power (worshipful); sataḥ — being without destruction and eternal; te — your; arcayaḥ — the flames; vi caranti — spread in all directions; bhānavah — [your] rays; divi — in the mid-region; sprśanti — touch (and make bright the beings there)."

— "O Agni, you accomplish our offerings. You are the one who calls the gods to our sacrifice on our behalf. You are all-knowing. You are busy in the messenger's work of the gods. Therefore we choose you, at our sacrifice, as the chief (we call you). You are of great power, imperishable, without beginning or end. Such flames of yours spread in all directions and light all the worlds. Your rays enter the mid-region and light up the beings there."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 187) — "We select (invoke) you, O Agni, the messenger and invoker of gods ; yon [sic] are endowed [sic] with all knowledge ; you are mighty and your flames spread in all directions touching even heaven."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 188 - dūtām — "since there is a Vedic statement 'agnir devānāṃ dūta āsīt', Agni is the messenger who goes to men and calls the gods to them." - hotāram = homaṇiṣpādakam āhvātāraṃ vā: "the one who accomplishes the offering, or who calls the gods to come to the sacrifice." - viśvavedasam — "the one who knows all." - vi caranty arcayaḥ — "your lights spread all round; when Agni blazes, its brightness spreads everywhere, is the sense." - divi spr̥śanti bhānavaḥ — "the rays of your light touch even heaven."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁵ - viśvavedasam: viśvaṃ vetti iti viśvavedāḥ — "one who knows the universe"; root vida jñāne; sarvadhātubhyo 'sun — the Uṇādi suffix asun [Uṇ. 4-[?], as read]; since it belongs to the marudvṛdhādi group, the later member's [?] first member is final-acute (pūrvapadāntodāttatva); or, as the Nirukta says (Ni. 3-[?]), veda is a word for wealth: viśvaṃ vedo dhanam yasya saḥ — "he whose wealth is the whole [world]"; a bahuvrīhi, by which bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam would give the natural accent of the first member, but this is overridden by bahuvrīhau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām — in a bahuvrīhi where a name is shown the first member viśva is final-acute; hence final-acute. - mahaḥ: root maha pūjāyām; kvip ca — kvip; the genitive singular nas/as; [the print: after kvip it is a one-vowelled base, maṭ], so sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ — the ending from the third case onward after a one-vowelled base is acute, hence as is acute; or mahat from vartamāne pṛṣanmahadbṛhajjagacchatṛvac ca... [Uṇ. 2-84, as read] — mahat formed with the suffix ati, whose āt is lost in the Veda; the ending has its natural accent; since the śatṛ-like substitution applies, śaturanumo nadyajādī may be cited as well for the ending's accent. - sataḥ (p. 189): root as bhuvi, laṭ, śatṛ, śap; ādiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ — luk of śap; as + at; śnasor allopaḥ — शनसोरल्लोपः — the a of as and of śnā is lost before a kit/ñit sārvadhātuka: s + at; sat, genitive singular, śaturanumo nadyajādī

— the ending after a word ending in śatr that is final-acute and does not take num is acute: sataḥ. - divi: ūḍidaṃ padādyāpumrai-dyubhyaḥ — the asarvanāmasthāna ending after div is acute: divi. Rik 3 ends here (| | 3 | |).

Translation: "O Agni, the three gods, devāsaḥ, Varuṇa and the others, sam indhate — kindle fully — you, the pratna, the ancient dūta, messenger. Yo martyaḥ — the mortal, the man, the sacrificer, who te dadāśa — has given you the oblation — that sacrificer viśvaṃ dhanam jayati, wins all wealth, tvayā, with you as his helper."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ¹⁶: aryamā (āryān nimīte, "he measures out [or favours] the noble"; the group of words śvan, takṣan, plīhan, kledan, snehan, mūrdhan, majjan, aryaman, viśvapsan, parjanya, mātariśvan... are given as kanin-ending by nipātana, in the Uṇādi sūtra of the śvan-list [Uṇ. 1-[?], numerals not read]); indhate (ñi-indhī dīptau; śnam, with śnān nalopaḥ and śnasor allopaḥ); dadāśa (dāśṛ dāne, liṭ, with the accent of the liṭ-preceding letter [liti], and no lowering because of the connected relative yaḥ: yadvṛttayogād anighātaḥ).

Pratipadārtha — "agne — O Agni; varuṇaḥ, mitraḥ, aryamā, devāsaḥ — the three deities Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryaman; pratnam — ancient; dūtam — the messenger, you; sam indhate — cause [you] to blaze well; yaḥ martyaḥ — whatever sacrificer; te — to you; dadāśa — offers the oblation; saḥ — that sacrificer; tvayā — by you (with your help); viśvaṃ dhanam — all wealth; jayati — wins."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are very ancient, a messenger of the gods from the beginning. The three deities Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryaman too make you blaze. Those among men who, with you in view, perform sacrifices and offer you oblations, win by your help all the wealth they need."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 190) — "The gods Varuna, Mitra and Aryaman, kindle you, their ancient messenger; the man who has offered you oblations gets through you great wealth." ¹⁷.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 190–191 - pratnam = purātanam: "Agni is long famed as the messenger of the gods." - sam indhate = samyag dīpayanti: "they cause [him] to shine well; they put wood and the like into Agni and make him blaze well." - tvayā — "by you, or by your help." - yas te dadāśa martyaḥ — "that man who offers oblations to you." - viśvaṃ dhanam jayati — "viśvam means all, i.e. much wealth: he wins, he gains."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁸ - aryamā: "śvan, takṣan, plīhan, kledan, snehan, mūrdhan, majjan, aryaman, viśvapsan, parjanya, mātariśvan, aghnan[?]" — these thirteen words, by the Uṇādi sūtra [number as read: Uṇ. 1-[?]], are given as ending in kanin; in aryaman the root mā māne with arya as its upapada, the suffix kanin; aryā + an; ato lopa iti ca — अतो लोप इति च — loss of the ā; by the suffix-accent the word is final-acute. - indhate: root ñi-indhī dīptau, laṭ, jha; ātmanepadeṣv nataḥ — आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः — in the ātmanepada, a jh [of the ending] after a base not ending in a is replaced by at: so jha → at; rudhādibhyaḥ śnam — śnam, which is mīt, placed after the last vowel by midaco 'ntyāt paraḥ; ind + na + dh + at, śnān nalopaḥ — loss of the n [of śnam] before the jh [of the ending]: the n in front; and śnasor allopaḥ — loss of the a of śnam, as the earlier mantra Rik 3 explains. - dadāśa: root dāś dāne, liṭ, tip; parasmaipadānām ṇalatusustha... — ṇal; doubling (dvitva), shortening (hrasva), the ś in the reduplicate: by abhyāse carca — the jaś [or car] for its own class: "prakṛtijaś"; the letter before the ṇal suffix is acute by liti (litī svarah); because the relative word yaḥ [in yas te dadāśa] is connected, yadvṛttayogād

Translation: "O Agni, you are mandraḥ, the cause of delight, the hotṛ, the caller of the gods, the gr̥hapati — the master, the protector of the house — of the viśām, the creatures in the form of sacrificers, and the dūta, the gods' messenger. Tve — in you — viśvā vratā — all works — are saṃgatāni, joined together ('vratā' being read among the names for 'work'). The gods, earth and the rest, akṛṇvata, have done the dhruvā, steady, works: the earth supports, Parjanya rains, the Sun illumines: those works are united in you — so the connection with the preceding."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ¹⁹: gr̥hapatiḥ (patyāv aiśvaryān, with the first-member natural accent; tve by supām sulug..., śe for the seventh-case ni, and tvamāṇ ekavacane — tva in the singular; śeṣe lopaḥ or the loss of the final; the accent of the ending by the udāttanivṛtti accent in the one view, and by the single-substitute in the other); saṃgatāni (gamer: niṣṭhā in the sense of the object; ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt bars iṭ; anudāttopadeśa... loses the nasal; gatir anantaraḥ: the preverb's natural accent); vratā dhruvā (śi lost by śeś chandasi bahulam); akṛṇvata (kṛñ hiṃsākaraṇayoḥ; vyatyaya of voice, ātmanepada; dhinvikṛṇvor a ca gives u for śap; the accent of the verb not lowered for the connected yāni).

Pratipadārtha — "agne — O Agni; mandraḥ — the giver of delight; hotā — the caller [of the gods to the sacrifice]; viśām — of the people who are sacrificers; gr̥hapatiḥ — the protector of the house; dūtaḥ — the messenger of the gods; asi — you are; devāḥ — the gods, earth and the rest; yāni — which; dhruvā — steady; vratā — works; akṛṇvata — have done (the support of the earth, Parjanya's raining, the Sun's shining, and in the same way the works suited to the nature of the other gods); viśvā — [for the welfare of the world] all those; tve — in you; saṃgatāni — joined together, are bound up."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are a kinsman to men and to the gods alike. You are the giver of delight to all. You call the gods to their sacrifices on men's behalf. You are the protector of the sacrificers' homes. You are the messenger of the gods to men, and the support of all their works. The works the earth does in supporting, the work Parjanya does in raining, the work the Sun does in shining, and likewise all the works that the other gods firmly carry on for the welfare of the world, all those join and are bound up in you — that is, they proceed through you."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 193) — "O Agni, you are the giver of delight, the invoker and messenger of gods and the lord of the house ; the good actions which the gods perform are all united in you." ²⁰.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 193 - mandraḥ = harṣahetuḥ: "one who causes delight." - hotā = devānām āhvātā: "one who calls the gods at sacrifices." - gr̥hapatiḥ — "the protector of the house. Since Agni is always in the house of the sacrificer who performs works such as the setting up of the fires, Agni is called the protector of the house." - saṃgatāni — "are joined. All the works the gods perform each [in their own sphere] are joined in you, i.e. are fulfilled only by your help." - vratā dhruvā yāni devā akṛṇvata — "the works that the gods, by their duty, have to do: the earth gives support to beings and helps them to live; Parjanya sends the rain, his own work; the Sun gives light for the comfort of the people of the world; and so on, whatever works the gods do day by day, all are joined in you, Agni — that is, go on by your help."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²¹ - gr̥hapatiḥ (p. 193–194): gr̥hasya patiḥ — "the lord of the house"; the word pati ends in the Uṇādi suffix ḍati [pāteś ḍatiḥ, as read]; patyāv aiśvaryān — पत्यावैश्वर्ये — [Pā. 6-2-18 (as read from the numerals)]: when pati in the sense of lordship follows, the first member of a tatpuruṣa keeps its natural accent; so gr̥ha, the first member, keeps its own accent. Gr̥ha is formed with geha ka — gehe kaḥ — [Pā. 3-1-144]: the suffix ka after graha upādāne when geha (a house) is the agent; grahijyāvayivyadhivaṣṭi... — saṃprasāraṇa of gr̥: gr̥ha; the suffix-accent makes it final-acute. - tve (p. 194): after yuṣmad, the seventh-case singular ni, replaced by śe by supāṇ sulug...; tvamāv ekavacane — त्वमावेकवचने — tva, ma replace the end-portion of yuṣmad, asmad in the singular, so tva; because the ending is a substitute, yo 'ci [Pā. 7-2-89] does not apply; śeṣe lopah — loss of the remaining d [or ad] before an ending: "the first view is the ṭi-loss alternative (loss of the ad that is left beyond the ma), the second is the final-letter-loss alternative. Tva, ma are said to be ajanta or halanta, two views"; on the ajanta view, ato guṇe gives pararūpa; tvad + e: the loss of the ṭi; and by anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopah the e is acute; the root yuṣ has the Uṇādi madik — yuṣyasibhyāṃ madik — so the suffix-accent gives the ad acute, and it becomes the cause of its loss; in the final-letter-loss view, tva + e: ato guṇe gives pararūpa, and ekādeśa udāttanodāttah makes the e acute. - saṃgatāni: saṃ the preverb, root gam! gatau; the suffix cta in the sense of the object by niṣṭhā [Pā. 3-2-102]; tayor evakṛtyaktakhalarthāḥ — तयोरेव कृत्यक्तखलार्थाः — the kṛtya suffixes, cta, khal-sense suffixes occur in the senses of bhāva and karman only; so with the transitive gam the cta is in the object sense; ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt — no iṭ; anudāttopadeśa... — loss of the m; gatiḥ anantarah — a directly adjacent gati (preverb) keeps its natural accent before a kṛdanta in the object sense. - vratā, dhruvā: these forms stand for vratāni, dhruvāni; in both the śi is lost by śeś chandasi bahulam. - akṛṇvata (pp. 194–195): root kṛvi hiṃsākaraṇayoḥ ca, idit, so idito num dhātoḥ; "this root is in the first class [bhvādi] and also read in the svādi class; in the sense of motion too it has usage"; this is parasmaipada, but by vyatyayo bahulam the ātmanepada comes; lañ, jha; dhinvikṛṇvor a ca — धिन्विकृण्वोर च — [Pā. 3-1-80]: after dhinv and kṛṇv the final letter becomes a, and u comes in place of śap when a karṭṛ-sense sārvadhātuka follows; so kṛn + u + jha; ātmanepadesv nataḥ — jha → at; the augment aṭ; akṛn + u + at; ato lopah [as read: ātolopa iṭi ca — Pā. 6-4-64] — the final a lost; no guṇa; yañ-substitution; ṛvarṇān nasya ṇatvaṃ vācyam — n → ṇ: akṛṇvata. Translation: "O yaviṣṭhya — the very youngest — Agni, subhage, endowed with good fortune: tve it, in you alone, viśvaṃ haviḥ — every oblation — ā hūyate, is cast on all sides. That [you], being sumanāḥ, well-minded towards us, today, on this day, uta — and — aparam, in the later time, tomorrow, the day after, and so on — in all times, continuously, yakṣi — sacrifice to, i.e. perform the worship of — the devān suvīryān, the gods endowed with good heroic strength. (Yakṣi = yaja.)"

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²³: subhage (śobhano bhago yasya, a bahuvrīhi; first-syllable acute); yaviṣṭhya (yuvan + iṣṭhan; sthūladūra... — the ya of yuvan is dropped and the preceding vowel takes guṇa; the y is inserted by Vedic usage); yakṣi (laṭ/loṭ sense; śap lost by bahulaṃ chandasi; ś → ṣ, ṣ → k, ṣatva); suvīryā (śobhanaṃ vīryaṃ yeṣām; vīravīryau ca: first-syllable acute; the śas ending replaced by ā).

Pratipadārtha — "yaviṣṭhya — exceedingly youthful; agne — O Agni; subhage — meritorious; tve it — in you alone; viśvam — all; haviḥ — oblation; ā hūyate — is offered everywhere; saḥ tvam — such a you; naḥ — with regard to us; sumanāḥ — with an auspicious mind; adya — today; uta — and; aparam — on other days too (without interruption); suvīryā — [on behalf of] gods who give prosperity and are powerful; devān — in the name of the gods; yakṣi — perform sacrifice."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are ancient yet ageless. You are always exceedingly youthful, and meritorious. All the oblations of the sacrifices are offered in you alone, everywhere. Be well-minded towards us, the sacrificers, and, to bring us prosperity, summon the gods at all times and perform sacrifice, without break, in the name of those prosperous and powerful gods."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 196) — "Youthfull and good natured Agni, all the oblations intended for the gods are offered through you ; be well disposed towards us now or at any other time and convey the oblations to the powerful gods." ²⁴

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 197 - adya uta aparam — "now, and at other times: that is, on this day, on which we are performing the sacrifice, and on other days, in future, on which we may perform sacrifices — now and in future [the print's English]." - suvīryā = suvīryān | śobhanavīryopetān: "of very mighty valour; this word is in the accusative plural, an adjective of the word devān."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁵ - subhage: śobhano bhago yasya saḥ, a bahuvrīhi; ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi — आद्युदात्तं द्व्यच्छन्दसि — [Pā. 6-2-119, as read]: in a bahuvrīhi compound a second member of two vowels, beginning with an acute, after su, is first-syllable acute; the first member's natural accent does not arise. - yaviṣṭhya: after yuvan, atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau — iṣṭhan; yuvan + iṣṭha; sthūladūrayuvahrasvakṣiprakṣudrāṇām yaṇādiparam pūrvasya ca guṇaḥ — स्थूलदूरयुवह्रस्वक्षिप्रक्षुद्राणां यणादिपरं पूर्वस्य च गुणः — [Pā. 6-4-156, as read]: before iṣṭhan, imanic and īyasun, the part of these six words [sthūla, dūra, yuvan, hrasva, kṣipra, kṣudra] beginning with the yaṇ is dropped and the preceding vowel takes guṇa: so yuva → yo, then av-substitution; the y is, in the Veda, added extra. - yakṣi: root yaja devapūjādau, loṭ, sip; bahulaṃ chandasi — [Pā. 2-4-73]: luk of śap; vraścabhrasjasrjamṛjayajarājabhrājacchaśām śaḥ — [Pā. 8-2-36]: j → ṣ; śaḍhoḥ kaḥ si — ṣ → k; ādeśapratyayayoḥ — s → ṣ. - suvīryā: śobhanaṃ vīryaṃ yeśām te, a bahuvrīhi; vīravīryau ca — वीरवीर्यौ च — [Pā. 6-2-120]: in a bahuvrīhi the words vīra, vīrya after su are first-syllable acute in the Veda; vīra vikrāntau with ac gives vīra, and aco yat or tatra sādhuḥ gives vīrya; the print then argues that the sūtra yato 'nāvaḥ would already give the first-syllable acute for vīrya, so the mention of vīrya in this sūtra shows that yato 'nāvaḥ does not apply to vīrya; the accusative plural śas is replaced by ā by supām sulug.... Translation: "In the abhiplava [ṣaḍaha], in the evening part of the later paṭala [of the recitation], this ṛk 'taṃ ghem itthā namasvinaḥ' is applied. It is laid down in the section beginning 'athottaram': 'the Prāgātha-ṛk in the forenoon, the Kāṇva [one] in the afternoon' (Āś. 4-2 [?]). — O Agni, namasvinaḥ — furnished with food or with obeisance (since 'namaḥ, āyuh, sūnṛtā' are read among the names for food, the word namas denotes food) — such sacrificers upa āsate, worship, in this manner, by gifts of oblation and the like, that very you, svarājam — shining by yourself — endowed with all the qualities named before ('tam gha īm' being [the same as] tam eva, 'that very one'). Manuṣaḥ — the human sacrificers — hotrābhiḥ, with the seven vaṣaṭ-makers ('the seven hotrās make the vaṣaṭ towards the east', says another Vedic text) — agniṃ sam indhate: kindle you, Agni, well. What sort of men? Titirvāṃsaḥ — those who cross over, excel — sridhaḥ ati, over their enemies."

26. the viniyoga and the first half, the grammatical tail characterized

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁷: namasvinaḥ (asmāyāmedhāsrajo viniḥ: vin after namas, with the lengthening of the vowel and the accent by suffix); svarājam (sva + rāj, kvip in a compound with a sup word; satsūdviṣadruhaduhayujavidabhidadchidajinīrājām upasargepi; the later member's natural accent); āsate (āsa upaveśane; śap lost, ādādi; ātmanepadeṣv nataḥ); titirvāṃsaḥ (tīr plavanataraṇayoḥ; chandasi liṭ: kvasu in the sense of the past by chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ; vasv ekājāḍghasām — iṭ for kvasu only after a one-vowelled base, an ā-ending base or ghas, hence none after tīr; and the Mahābhāṣya's anantarasya vidhir vā bhavati pratiṣedho vā); sridhaḥ (sridhu śoṣaṇe, kvip).

Pratipadārtha — "agne — O Agni; namasvinaḥ — [those] possessed of food or of homage, the sacrificers; svarājam — one who shines by his own radiance; tam gha īm — that you, endowed with all the qualities named before; itthā — in this manner, by offering oblations; upāsate — worship; sridhaḥ — enemies; ati titirvāṃsaḥ — [those who have] well conquered with force; manuṣaḥ — the human sacrificers; hotrābhiḥ — through the seven priests, makers of the vaṣaṭ, beginning with the hotr (offering oblations); agniṃ — you, the deity Agni; sam indhate — cause to blaze well."

27. p. 198, characterized

Bhāvārtha — "O Agni deity, you are always shining by your own radiance. Your devotees, the sacrificers, offer you food as oblation with reverence and worship you. Through your help all of them have conquered their enemies. To show that joy and gratitude, they all perform the sacrifice, offer you oblations through the seven priests, the vaṣaṭ-makers, and cause you to blaze well."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 199) — "In this manner the devout persons (sacrificers and others) adore you who are bright with your own radiance; the (seven) priests including Hotri who are victorious over their enemies, kindle Agni with oblations:" ²⁸.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), pp. 199–200 - Viniyoga: "At the time of reciting the abhiplava hymns, the ṛk taṃ ghem itthā is to be recited in the evening, so says the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra 'prāgāthīm pūrvāhṇe kāṇvīm aparāhṇe' in the section athottaram (Āś. 4-2 [?])." - gha īm — "these words are used for filling out the pāda; though they have no definite meaning, the sense of eva may be given to them: taṃ = him; taṃ gha īm or taṃ ghem = 'that very one'." - namasvinaḥ = namasvino 'nnayuktā namaskārayuktā vā: "those who have prepared food in the form of oblations for offering to the deity, or those who do obeisance." - svarājam = svabhāsā rājata iti svarāt taṃ: "one who shines by his own radiance. Agni and Sūrya need no other help for their light: they light up everything by their own light." - āsate = upāsate: "they sit near and pray, serve, perform worship: worship [the print's English]." - hotrābhiḥ — "though in sacrifices the hotṛ is only one, the word hotrābhiḥ is used in the plural, to take in the other priests who take part in the sacrifice: the Adhvaryu, Udgāṭṛ, Potṛ, Neṣṭṛ, Brahman and the others — the priests of the sacrificer." - manuṣaḥ = manuṣyāḥ: "men; the ṣa is short for the convenience of the metre." - titirvāṃsaḥ = tī plavanataraṇayoḥ | sridhaḥ ati titirvāṃsaḥ: "those who go beyond [atikramaṇaḥ]: the bhāṣyakāra explains here that they have crossed their enemies."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁹ - namasvinaḥ: asmāyāmedhāsrajo viniḥ — अस्मायामेधास्रजो विनिः — [Pā. 5-2-121]: the suffix vin in the sense of matup after namas, ending in as. - svarājam: svataḥ rājate — svarāt; the root rāja dīptau; satsūdviṣadruhaduhayujavidabhidacchidajinīrājām upasarge 'pi kvip — सत्सूद्विषद्रुहदुहयुजविदभिदच्छिदजिनीराजामुपसर्गेऽपि क्विप् — [Pā. 3-2-61]: kvip after these roots whether a preverb is present or not, when a related word stands as upapada; and gatikārapapadāt kṛt gives the natural accent of the later member. - āsate: āsa upaveśane, adādi; ādiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ: luk of śap; ātmanepadeṣv nataḥ: jha → at. - titirvāṃsaḥ (pp. 200–202): root tī plavanataraṇayoḥ; chandasi liṭ — छन्दसि लिट् — [Pā. 3-2-105]: in the Veda liṭ is added after roots in the sense of the past in general, "so by this sūtra liṭ cannot be had in the present sense"; chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ [Pā. 3-4-6]: when a relation of sense with a root is shown, in the Veda luṇ, laṇ and liṭ come in all times, past, present, future; hence liṭ in the present sense; kvasuś ca — क्वसुश्च — [Pā. 3-2-107]: in the Veda kvasu replaces liṭ in the sense of the past [completed] participle. The print then takes up the Mahābhāṣya's "ājñ ājñivān; chandasaḥ kānac-kvasū", and argues from the paribhāṣā anantarasya vidhir vā bhavati pratiṣedho vā (Pari. 63 [?]) that, by the Veda-sūtra chandasi liṭ, the suffixes kānac and kvasu may be added to the liṭ so enjoined; the sūtra vibhāṣā pūrvāhṇāparāhṇābhyām [as read] in the Mahābhāṣya, on papuṣa āgataṃ papivān ṛjīṣyam, with pā and kvasu, shows that this paribhāṣā does not operate here; therefore kvasu comes in the Veda and in the world alike in place of all *liṭ*s; the vṛtti-authors say, by the repeated liṭ in liṭaḥ kānaj vā, that all *liṭ*s are meant; thus even a liṭ arising by chandasi luṇ... may take kvasu; though chandasi belongs to the sūtra, the kvasu occurs even for a liṭ in the present sense; the Bhāṣya's chandasau kānac-kvasū applies to kvasu of the root ājñ-type [añj], which is not used in the world; but for the rest there is use in the world too, and so the quoted Bhāṣya examples are reconciled. When kvasu comes after tī: tī + vas; ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ gives iṭ; neḍ vaśi kṛti — [Pā. 7-2-8] — bars iṭ before kṛt beginning with vaś for the roots of vaśādi; kṛṣṛbhṛvr̥studrusruśruvo liṭi — कृसृभृवृस्तुदुसुश्रुवो लिटि — [Pā. 7-2-13]: no iṭ of liṭ after these roots [kṛ, sṛ, bhṛ, vr̥, stu, dru, sru, śru]; whether the liṭ ban belongs to the suffix or to the root, iṭ arises after kṛ and the rest in the liṭ only when the ban holds; for the other roots there is no ban; "so the roots kṛ etc. are the restrictors (niyāmaka), the others the enjoiners"; by this restriction the tī root, not in the kṛ-group, would take iṭ for its liṭ, that is, for the vas that replaced the liṭ; but another restrictor stops it: vasv ekājādghasām — वस्वेकाजाद्वसाम् — [Pā. 7-2-67]: iṭ is added to vas only after one-vowelled bases after doubling, ā-ending bases and ghas; so no iṭ after tī. Ṛta id dhātoḥ — [Pā. 7-1-100]: ṛ-ending base gets i: tir; alo 'ntyasya [Pā. 1-1-52] and uraṇ raparaḥ [Pā. 1-1-51] give r; tir + vas; ṛcchatyrtām — ऋच्छत्यृताम् — [Pā. 7-4-11]: the guṇa of ṛcch, ṛ-ending roots of the tudādi group before liṭ, and halica — हलिच — [Pā. 8-2-77]: the lengthening of i, u, r before a consonant for bases ending in r or v; "these would apply, but since they are non-constant by saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ, they do not arise here; for the tī root, guṇa is first possible before the itva, lengthening after itva"; doubling, halādiḥ śeṣaḥ: tir + vas, jas; ugidacām...: num: titirvans + as; sāntamahataḥ saṃyogasya — सान्तमहतः संयोगस्य — [Pā. 6-4-10]: the lengthening of the vowel before the n in a conjunct ending in s [and in mahat]: titirvāns; naś cāpadāntasya jhali: n → anusvāra; ru, visarga: titirvāṃsaḥ. Or, by the gaṇa-sūtra bahulam etannidarśanam, a new root tir is imagined and the process liṭ, vas follows as before; in this view ṛcchatyrtām never arises; halica is possible but not applied, since if the root is taken as ending in a, the sthānivadbhāva of the loss by ato lopah prevents the base's ending in r, so halica has no application either. - sridhaḥ: sridhu śoṣaṇe, kvip ca. Rik 7 ends here (| | 7 | |).

Translation: "O Agni, the other gods, ghnantaḥ — striking — by your help, vṛtram ataran — crossed over [= overcame] Vṛtra. Thereafter they made rodasī — heaven and earth — and āpaḥ, the mid-region (the print reads 'āpaḥ prthivī' as read among the names, a point I could not follow exactly [?]), uru — wide — kṣayāya, for the dwelling of living beings. Bhuvat — let [Agni] be to the great ṛṣi Kaṇva vṛṣā, the shower of desires, dyumnī, the possessor of wealth, āhutaḥ, furnished with oblations on all sides. The illustration: as a horse krandat, neighing, in gaviṣṭiṣu, in battles [fought] in desire for cattle, is the means of obtaining what is wished, so [may Agni be] — as is to be supplied."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³⁰: ghnantaḥ (han + śatṛ, gamahanajanakhanaghasām lopah knity anāni: the penultimate lost; ho hanter ṇṇinneṣu: h → gh); āpaḥ (ūḍidam...: the ending acute); kṣayāya (kṣi nivāsagatyoh, gha by puṃsi saṃjñāyām ghaḥ prāyeṇa; kṣayo nivāse: first-syllable acute); bhuvat (leṭ, the augment aṭ, itaś ca lopah, the loss of śap by bahulaṃ chandasi; no guṇa by bhūsuvos tiṇi; uvaṇ); āhutaḥ (hu dānādanayoh, kta in the object sense; the preverb keeps its accent); krandat (kradi, śatṛ, the augment num is absent); gaviṣṭiṣu (iṣu icchāyām, ktin; "gavām iṣṭayaḥ yeṣu saṃgrāmeṣu"; a bahuvrīhi with first-member accent).

Pratipadārtha — "(O Agni, by your help) ghnantaḥ — the other gods who destroy the enemies; vṛtram — Vṛtra, the asura; ataran — conquered; (and crossed over in fear); thereafter, rodasī — heaven and earth; apah — the mid-region too; kṣayāya — for the dwelling of the creatures; uru — as wide; cakrire — made; gaviṣṭiṣu — in the time of the battles fought in the desire of getting cattle; aśvaḥ — a horse; krandat — neighing (as it does to the cause of the sacrificer's wished-for aim); āhutaḥ — one who has the share of the oblation in the sacrifice; dyumnī — you, the possessor of wealth; kaṇve — to the ṛṣi Kaṇva; vṛṣā — the giver of the wished-for aim (a benefactor); bhuvāt — be."

— "O Agni, the other gods, destroyers of enemies, with your help alone, slew Vṛtra the asura and conquered him. Thereafter, having entirely escaped the troubles of enemies, they made the three worlds, earth and the others, spacious and suited to the dwelling of living creatures. As a horse, in a battle that men fight for the sake of cattle, carries its master and neighs, and helps in the destruction of his enemy so that he may win cattle, even so, O wealthy Agni, may you also, being called at the sacrifice of the sage Kaṇva, come and be the giver of what he wishes."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 204) — "The gods who destroy enemies have slain Vritra ; they have made earth and heaven and the firmament the spacious dwelling place for living creatures ; may Agni, the possessor of wealth when invoked be to Kanva the giver of wealth like a horse which neighs (with pleasure) in a battle faught for the possession of cattle" ³¹

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 204–205 - ghnantaḥ — "killing, destroying. Here the bhāṣyakāra says the sense 'the gods who destroy their enemies'." - ataran = tīrṇavantaḥ: "overcame, destroyed, and so on." - rodasī — "since rodasī is read among the

There seems to be no similarity between Agni's giving wealth and lordship to the ṛṣi Kaṇva when pleased, and a horse's neighing with joy in a battle fought for cattle; therefore the meaning of these words is not clear."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³² - ghnantaḥ: root han hiṃsāgatyoḥ, adādi; laṭ, laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau, śatṛ; ādiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ: luk of śap; han + at; gamahanajanakhanaghasām lopah knīty anāni — गमहनजनखनघसां लोपः क्ङित्यनङि — [Pā. 6-4-98]: the penultimate vowel of these roots is lost before a vowel-initial kit or ñit suffix other than añ: so the a of han is lost; sārvadhātukam apit makes śatṛ ñit; hn + at; ho hanter ññinneṣu — हो हन्तेर्जिन्नेषु — [Pā. 7-3-54]: the h of han becomes gh [kutva] before a suffix with ñ or ṇ as a marker or before n; "the sūtra is read with it-marking [ññinnā]: the ñ, ṇ and n in the sūtra are called ñit, ṇit, nit; and by the sense of the dvandva-end rule (dvandvānte śrūyamāṇam padaṃ pratyekam abhisambadhyate) the word it is joined to each of the three; ññinnau ca nas ca: 'the suffixes with ñ, ṇ or the letter n'; so when any one of these follows, kutva [= the k-class] is the substitute of h of han; kutva means the k-varga, that is, the corresponding gh in the place of the h, which is ghoṣa, nāda, saṃvāra, mahāprāṇa"; by the force of the rule's mention of n, acaḥ parasmin pūrvavidhau

Translation: "[This ṛk] 'saṃ sīdasva mahāṁ asi' is applied when the mahāvīra, the khara [altar-mound], is being put in place in the pravargya. It is laid down in the section beginning 'spr̥ṣṭodakam': 'when it is being put in place, "saṃ sīdasva mahāṁ asi"' (Āś. 4-7 [?]). — O Agni, saṃ sīdasva — sit down together, seat yourself on the barhis; mahān asi — you are great, superior in qualities; devavītamah — yearning exceedingly for the gods — śocasva, Pratipadārtha — "(agne — O Agni); saṃ sīdasva — be seated (on the darbha seat); mahān asi — you are very powerful; devavītamah — one who gives satisfaction to the gods; śocasva — shine forth with your radiance; miyedhya — one worthy of a share in the sacrifice; praśasta — one of praiseworthy, eminent qualities; agne — O Agni; aruṣam — moving; darśatam — beautiful; dhūmam — the smoke; vi srja — send forth."

Bhāvārtha — "O Agni deity, you are of great power and great greatness. Kindly come and be seated on the darbha seat. You are the messenger of the gods, so shine forth, filling the gods with the satisfaction of their portions of the sacrifice, each one for himself.

You are worthy of the portions of the sacrifice. Your excellent qualities are extremely praiseworthy. Lead [him] to the place of sacrifice and send forth the smoke, which rises upward and is beautiful to look at."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 208) — "O Agni, take your seat on the sacred grass ; you are great and devoted to the gods ; shine forth, adorable and excellent Agni, send forth your reddish and beautiful smoke." ³⁵

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 208–209 - devavītamah = atiśayena devān kāmāyamaṇaḥ: "one who has great regard for the gods." - miyedyā = medhārha: "one fit to be worshipped, or honoured." - darśatam = darśanīyam: "delightful to look at, very beautiful." - aruṣam = gamanaśīlam: "moving upward, or having a slightly reddish colour."

best of sacrificers — iha, here, at the place of the divine sacrifice. Medhyātithiḥ — joined with guests worthy of the sacrifice — Kaṇva, the great ṛṣi so named, dadhe — established you, yam, whom, having made [you] dhanaspṛtam, the one who gratifies [him] with wealth. So also Vṛṣan [Indra] established you; and also another praiser, a sacrificer, upastutaḥ, established you. That you — the connection with the foregoing ('saṃ sīdasva': sit down)."

— "O Agni, you carry the oblations to all the gods and so are a benefit to all. For that very reason all the gods established you at the sacrificial ground, for the favour of Manu. The sage Kaṇva, to treat his guests with hospitality, begged and established you, who are exceedingly worthy of worship. You give satisfaction by the gift of wealth to him and to others too. Indra, and the other devotees as well, established you, seeking your favour. Be seated at the sacrificial ground to favour us too."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 212) — "O bearer of oblations, the gods have established you here as the best sacrificer for the sake of Manu ; you› whom Kanwa, host of pious guests has established ; whom, giver of wealth, Indra has detained ; whom some other worshipper has detained." ⁴⁰

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), pp. 212-213 - manave — "for the sake of Manu, that is, Manu the Prajāpati; Manu is held to be the first progenitor of men. So manave may be taken as a generic singular, 'for the sake of men'." - devāso dadhur iha = devā iha devayajanadeśe dhṛtavantaḥ: "the gods established you (Agni) at the sacrificial altar." - yajīṣṭham = atiśayena pūjyam, yaṣṭṛtamam: "most worthy of worship, or the foremost among sacrificers — among those who carry the gods' share of the sacrifice." - havyavāhana = havyaṃ vahatīti havyavāhanaḥ: "he who carries to the gods the oblations offered by the sacrificers." - kaṇvo medhyātithiḥ = medhyā atithayo yasya sa medhyātithiḥ: "Kaṇva the ṛṣi, joined with guests worthy of worship. Here medhyātithi is the name of a ṛṣi of Kaṇva's line, and the Kaṇva, son of Ghora, may be spoken of by that name. Rather than give an etymological sense to this word, it is right to say that medhyātithi is a ṛṣi of the Kaṇva line. This Medhyātithi is — "The sage Kaṇva was always famous for the entertainment of guests. The guests of this sage, worthy of worship and entitled to perform sacrifices, accept his hospitality in the form of priests of the sacrifice. With the help of such guests Kaṇva makes the sacrifice and makes Agni blaze more than the Sun. The rays of that Agni, which move in a deep, unfathomable course, shine with great brilliance. The ṛks we have recited cause that Agni to blossom forth. We, too, by performing sacrifices, cause that Agni deity to prosper."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 216) — "The rays of that Agni whom Medhyatithi Kanwa made more brilliant than the sun, shine brightly ; we praise (extol) that same Agni by reciting hymns." ⁴⁶.

Pratipadārtha — "svadhāvaḥ — O Agni [you who are] endowed with food (the giver); asmākam — to us; rāyaḥ — riches; pūrdhi — fill; agne — O Agni; te — your; deveṣu — among the gods; āpyam — friendship [that can be had, i.e. our friendship with the gods can be had through you]; asti hi — it truly exists; tvam — you; śrutyasya — [of the food that is] famous to the ears; vājasya — of food; rājasi — are the lord; saḥ tvam — such a you; naḥ — us; mṛḷa — make happy; mahān asi — you are great, of eminent qualities."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are endowed with excellent qualities and have eminence. You are always the giver of food, rich in abundance of food, to all of us. You are lord of all famous gain of food. Give us food and make us happy. As you are the friend of the gods, make us too stand with those gods; for the sake of pleasing them, fill us with the riches that are needed to perform the sacrifice."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 219)

— "Agni, giver of food, fill us with wealth ; you are friendly with the gods (or our friendship of the gods is obtainable through you) you are lord of famous food, make happy, for you are great."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 219 - pūrdhi = pūraya dehi vā: "fill; that is, give. Translation: "At the raising of the yūpa [the two ṛks] 'ūrdhva ū ṣu ṇa ūtaye' [are used]: it is laid down in the section 'paśāv iṣṭiḥ': 'the two [ṛks] ūrdhva ū ṣu ṇa ūtaye' (Āś. 3-1 [?]). The same two are also applied in the abhiplava: it is laid down in the section 'athottaram': 'sakhe sakhāyam abhyā vavṛtsva, and the two ūrdhva ū ṣu ṇa ūtaye' (Āś. 4-2 [?]). — O yūpa, or O Agni abiding in the wooden yūpa, ūtaye — for our protection — ūrdhvaḥ tiṣṭha — stand erect. The illustration is savitā devo na: as the god Sūrya stands high, so [do you]. Standing high, you will be vājasya sanitā, the giver of food, since yat — because — vihvayāmahe — we call you specially for the giving of food — añjibhiḥ, with the anointers (those who anoint the yūpa with ghee), vāghadbhiḥ, with the priests, who bear the sacrifice [?]: therefore be the giver of food — the connection with the foregoing."

— "O Agni, you stand fixed in the sacrificial post. As the Sun-god stands raised up, to protect all beings, stand for our protection raised up, so that we may see you. We do various services. We smear the post with ghee and worship, and with the priests who carry out the sacrifice we call you specially. Accept our worship and our call, and be the giver of food to us."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 222) — "Stand up erect for our protection like the divine Savitri ; you, giver of food, be erect ; we invoke you through our anointing priests who are offering oblations." ⁵²

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 222–224 - "For this ṛk and the next, ūrdhva naḥ, the deity is the yūpa — that is, the post to which an animal is tied in the animal sacrifice, a pillar, or [wooden] beam — [or] Agni of that form, it is held [that Agni is] the deity. Therefore in animal sacrifices, at the time of raising the yūpa, these two ṛks beginning ūrdhva ū ṣu are recited. This matter is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section paśāviṣṭi, by the sūtra 'ūrdhva ū ṣu ṇa ūtaye iti dve' (Āś. 3-1 [?]);

In the sacrifice, praying to the yūpa-post to 'stand straight' or 'stand erect' is the established usage. On this matter:"

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni abiding in the sacrificial post, or O post itself, stand high, so as to be seen by us. Protect us well by giving [us] knowledge and by saving us from sin. Burn up utterly our enemies the devouring rākṣasas. Make us prosperous, both for carrying on our dealings in the world and for living. Make known to the gods our wealth in the form of oblations."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are always blazing with radiant rays and are forever youthful. All our protection belongs to you. There are many enemies who wish us harm. There are rākṣasas who do us harm, and wicked, hostile men who deceive and injure us and do not give what they should — wealth and grain — and animals such as tigers that harm us in many ways, and enemies who always wish to kill us. Protect us from all these."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 230) — "Youthfull and most brilliant Agni, protect us from evil spirits and from the wicked man who gives no gifts ; protect us from harmful animals and from those who desire to kill us" ⁶².

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 230–231 - dhūrteḥ = hiṃsakāt: "from one who gives trouble; a man of wicked nature." - arāvṇaḥ = rā dāne: "one who gives no wealth and the like; that is, one who is opposed to us and does not wish us well." - riṣataḥ = riṣa hiṃsāyām: "from wicked animals that do injury." - jighāṃsataḥ = hantum icchataḥ śatroḥ sakāśāt: "from enemies who desire to kill us." - yaviṣṭhya = yuvattama: "the best of the young, the foremost: that is, a young man, a youth. Pratipadārtha — "tapurjambha — O Agni, whose weapons are the burning rays; arāvṇaḥ — the enemies who do not give us the wealth [that is due]; ghaneva — as pots are broken by hard stones; viṣvak — on all sides; vi jahi — destroy completely; yaḥ — whichever other enemy; asmadhruk — wishing to injure us [by terrifying us]; yaḥ — which enemy in the form of a man; aktubhiḥ — by dark weapons; ati śīśite — whets and strikes at us; saḥ ripuḥ — that enemy (or those enemies); naḥ — over us; mā īśata — may he not be able to prevail."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, your rays are always strong and carry [your] strength; they destroy our enemies. They need no effort at all to kill the enemies who hinder us from [receiving] the wealth we are to receive. As easily as one breaks the pots of a potter with hard stones and sticks, destroy our enemies. Destroy together those enemies in the form of rākṣasas who injure us by terrifying us, and also those in the form of men who strike at us and terrify us with dark weapons; so that, when they raise their hands against us, they may not be able to conquer us."

— "Agni, with the burning rays destroy entirely our enemies who give no gifts (as a man smashes earthen pots) with a hammer ; let not the person who hates us, nor the man who attacks us with sharp weapons prevail against us".

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 234 - ghaneva = kāṭhinena daṇḍapāṣāṇādinā: "with a hard or thick stick, a stone, and similar weapons: as pots and such things that break easily are broken, so destroy our enemies." - viṣvak = sarvataḥ: "on all sides, or completely." - tapurjambha = tapa santāpe | jabhī nāśane: "Agni whose flames or rays burn everything, mainly the enemies: the Agni who has well-burning rays." - asmadhruk = asmadviśayadrohakārī: "one who wishes harm to us; our enemy." - śīṣite atyaktubhiḥ — "the bhāṣyakāra's explanation is 'he strikes us with weapons and the like'. The commentators on the Veda have explained the word aktubhiḥ as 'in the night-time' — and the same sense, as it is given in the ṛk:"

tapus is first-syllable acute by nit; jabhī nāśane, class 10 [as read: the gaṇa number]; jambhyante śatravaḥ ebhiḥ — "by which enemies are destroyed": ghaṇ in the instrument sense; tapūṃṣy eva jambhāni yasya, a bahuvrihi — Agni whose weapons are the burning rays; the vocative takes the first-syllable acute by āmantritasya ca [Pā. 6-1-198] and is not wholly unaccented, being at the beginning of a pāda. - asmadhruk: asmabhyam drogdhī — druha jighāṃsāyām, a divādi root; satsūdviṣadruha...: kvip; loss of the case-ending of the compound by luk; halñyābbhyaḥ...: loss of su; vā druhamuḥṣṇuḥṣṇihām — वा द्रुहमुहष्णुहष्णिहाम् — [Pā. 8-2-33]: for the final h of these four roots gh optionally replaces [ghatva], even at the end of a word before a jhal; ekāco baśo bhaṣ jhaṣantasya sdhvoḥ — [Pā. 8-2-37]: for the baś of a one-vowelled root ending in jhaṣ: d → dh; hence asmadhruḥḥ, and carva [khari ca] gives asmadhruk. - śiśīte: root śo tanūkaraṇe, divādi, parasmaipada; vyatyayo bahulam — व्यत्ययो बहुलम् — [Pā. 3-1-85]: the vikaraṇa (śap etc.) and the voice appear interchanged in the Veda; the print explains the word bahulam here with the verse "supām... kālahalacsvarakartryaṇām ca | vyatyayam icchati śāstrakṛd eṣām so 'pi ca siddhyati bāhulakena" — [the verse, as read; "the authors of the śāstra allow interchange (vyatyaya) of the case-endings, tenses, consonants, vowels, agents, and yaṇ — and that too is established by bāhulaka"]; "upagraha" means the parasmaipada and ātmanepada; so ātmanepada in place of parasmaipada; śyan → śnu? [the print: śyan with ślu by bahulam chandasī]; ādeca upadeśe 'śiti — [Pā. 6-1-45]: o → ā before a non-śit suffix; ślau [Pā. 6-1-10]: doubling; śā + śā + te; hrasva; bahulam chandasī [Pā. 7-4-78]: i for the reduplicate; hali ghoḥ — हल्यघोः — [Pā. 6-4-113]: ī for the ā of śā/śa before a kit or ñit consonant-initial sārvadhātuka: śiśīte; first-syllable acute by vyatyaya; the relative yaḥ is connected, so no sarvānudātta [yadvṛttānnityam]. - īśata (p. 236): root īśa aiśvarye, adādi, ātmanepada, laṇ; na

mānyoge — [Pā. 6-4-74]: no aṭ; śap should be lost for an adādi root; but by bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 2-4-73] the luk is not made [as read]. Rik 16 ends here (| | 16 | |).

Translation: "The god Agni, vavne — was begged — for suvīryam, wealth furnished with good heroic strength. That Agni gave to the great ṛṣi Kaṇva saubhagam — good fortune, a share in the form of beautiful wealth and so on — [so] it is to be supplied. Likewise Agni pra āvat — protected excellently — our friends (mitrā, = mitrāṇi). And [he protected] medhyātithim, the ṛṣi who has guests fit for the sacrifice. Likewise [he protected] upastutam, another praiser, a sacrificer, sātau, with a view to giving wealth and the like — so it is to be supplied."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁶⁹: vavne (vanu yācane, liṭ in the passive, liṭas tajhayor eṣirec; na śasadaḍavādiguṇānām — the a of this va-initial root does not become e nor does the reduplicate lose its vowel; the loss of the penultimate is Vedic); saubhagam (subhagāt: aṇ, because subhaga is in the udgātrādi group, in the sense "state of that" — añ; first-syllable acute by ñnityādir nityam); mitrā (neuter plural; śi lost by śeś chandasi bahulam); upastutam (ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām; ṣṭuñ; thāthaghañktā...: final-acute).

Pratipadārtha — "agniḥ — the Agni deity; suvīryam — [wealth] that is beneficial and gives strength; vavne — was prayed for; agniḥ — Agni; kaṇvāya — to the great ṛṣi Kaṇva; saubhagam — good fortune in the form of prosperity [he gave]; agniḥ — Agni; mitrā — our friends; prāvat — protected well; uta — and besides; medhyātithim — the ṛṣi who has guests worthy of worship; upastutam — another devotee who praised [him], the sacrificer; sātau — [for the sake of] his desire of gaining wealth, [with the power] to satisfy [him]; [prāvat — protected well]."

Bhāvārtha

— "It is possible for a man to receive, through the favour of the Agni deity, the principal wealth, which is beneficial and gives strength. For the sake of that wealth all his devotees prayed to him. He gave it to all his devotees. To the devotee, the ṛṣi Kaṇva, to our other friends, and to all the devotees who praise him, he gave that good fortune in the form of prosperity, and, favouring all, protected the wished-for aim of all, in the form of the desire for wealth, by satisfying it."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 237)

— "Agni is praised for power and wealth ; he has granted prosperity to Kanwa, he has protected our friends, he has protected Medhyatithi and Upastuta (or sacrificer) who prayed for him to get riches·" .

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 238 - suvīryam = śobhanavīryopetaṃ dhanam uddiśya: "that is, 'with a view to wealth endowed with good fortune (or valour)'; vīrya means strength, power, valour. The sense 'wealth' has to be supplied." - saubhagam = śobhanadhanādirūpaṃ bhāgyam: "the best of wealth, lordship and the like." - agniḥ pra āvan mitrā uta medhyātithiḥ — "Agni protected our friends, or [the friends] of the ṛṣi Kaṇva, and also the ṛṣi named Medhyātithi, of Kaṇva's family. Here it is more fitting to say that the medhyātithi is an ṛṣi of the Kaṇva line, rather than to give, as the bhāṣyakāra does, the sense of the parts 'medhayogyair atithibhir upetaṃ' — 'one furnished with guests worthy of worship'; for Medhyātithi is one famed ṛṣi in the Kaṇva line, so it is right to recall the name of that [ṛṣi]. Besides, the sense that Skandasvāmin gives to the word mitrā, mitrāvaruṇau, is not quite suitable: since Mitra and Varuṇa are chief deities, like Agni, it does not seem right that one deity should protect another."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁷⁰ - vavne (p. 238): root vanu yācane, tanādi; liṭ in the passive (karmaṇi), ta; liṭas tajhayor eśirec — e for ta; na śasadadavādiguṇānām — न शसददवादिगुणानाम् — [Pā. 6-4-126]: there is no e for the a of the roots śas, dad, va-initial roots and the roots with guṇa named, and no loss of the reduplicate [by abhyāsasya... eṭi] — "that is, for the a of the va-initial root van there is no e-substitution and no loss of the reduplicate vavan + e; the loss of the penultimate is Vedic". - saubhagam: subhaga is read in the udgātrādi group; prāṇabhṛjjātivayovacanodgātrādibhyo 'ñ — प्राणभृज्जातिवयोवचनोद्गात्रादिभ्योऽञ् — [Pā. 5-1-129]: añ after words denoting a living being, a species or an age, and after the udgātrādi words, in the sense bhāva or karman; subhaga + a; vṛddhi; ñnityādir nityam — first-syllable acute. - mitrā: mitra, neuter; śas → śi; śeś chandasī bahulam — luk of śi. - upastutam (p. 239): ṣṭuñ stutau; ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām — kta in the sense of agent; thāthaghañktā...: the later member is final-acute. Translation: "Staying together with Agni, the royal sages named Turvaśa, Yadu and Ugradeva we invoke parāvataḥ — from a far-off place. And may that Agni lead here the royal sages named Navavāstu, Bṛhadratha and Turvīti. What sort of Agni? Dasyave sahaḥ — the overcomer of the thief who is the cause of the carrying off of our [possessions]."

71. Reading note: the Saṃhitā's "ugradevam" is the Pada's ugra-devam with Vedic lengthening of the first member; the print marks both the long vowel and the division.

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁷²: nyat (ñīñ prāpaṇe, class 1; leṭ, tip; the augment aṭ by leṭo 'dāṭau; loss of i by itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu; śap; the two a's by ato guṇe: pararūpa; guṇa; ay); navavāstvam (navam vāstu yasya, "he who has a new house"; amipūrvaḥ does not make pūrvarūpa because vā chandasi continues, so yaṇ); bṛhadratham (first-member accent of a bahuvrīhi).

Pratipadārtha — "agninā — together with the Agni deity (and the others); turvaśam, yadum, ugradevam — the royal sages named Turvaśa, Yadu and Ugradeva; parāvataḥ — from a far-off place; havāmahe — we invite; dasyave sahaḥ — [Agni who] checks and conquers the robber, the strong rākṣasa; agniḥ — Agni; navavāstvam, bṛhadratham, turvītim — the royal sages named Navavāstu, Bṛhadratha, Turvīti, too; nyat — may he bring to this sacrificial ground."

— "With Agni there are many royal sages, endowed with good qualities. We give them all an invitation so that they may accept hospitality at our sacrifice. May the powerful Agni, restraining and conquering the rākṣasas, who are wicked and thievish, bring all the royal sages — Turvaśa, Yadu, Ugradeva, Navavāstu, Bṛhadratha and Turvīti — to this our sacrificial ground."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 240) — "We invoke from a distant place, Turvasa, Yadu, Ugradeva along with Agni ; let Agni who overcomes the robbers (demons) bring Navavastwa, Brihadratha and Turviti." ⁷³.

"In this ṛk the ṛṣi mentions the names of certain well-known and little-known persons; their names appear to have been in use among the people of that time."

turvaśam — "Turvaśa is the name of a man or of a tribe (janāṅga). This word is read in many contexts in the R̥gveda together with the word yadu, another masculine word. Since these two words are used each with its own case-ending and number, the two are different persons. Some examples on this matter ⁷⁴:"

"Some take Turvaśa and Yadu to be the progenitors of two chief tribes. That the names Turvaśa and Yadu were used to call the tribes — Turvaśas and Yadus — may be understood from the last examples. Since the names of five chief tribes (Tribes [the print's English]) — the Anus, Druhyus, Turvaśas, Yadus and Pūrus — are mentioned in many places in the Ṛgveda, these must have been famous tribes of that time. Among them the words Turvaśa and Yadu in particular are read together, so it may be inferred that the people of these two tribes lived near to each other and had a close relationship."

"Turvaśa's chief act was a war with a king named Sudāsa. He could not be conquered by them [Sudāsa's men?]; and he fled out of fear. For this reason the scholar Hopkins [the print's Latin letters] thinks that the name Turvaśa [= 'he who escapes from the field'] came to him. In some ṛks it is said that Indra helped him to come back safe from the battle:"

⁷⁶. Mine and tentative: "and those two, Turvaśa and Yadu, [who were] not swimmers — Indra, lord of power, knowing, carried them across"; "you set the waters [to rest], easily-milked, for Yadu and Turvaśa, O Indra, [so that they went] to the far shore".

⁷⁷. Mine and tentative: "...the fortresses at once, for the pious Divodāsa, [and] Śambara; and then that Turvaśa and Yadu".

From the Ṛgveda's 8th [?] sūkta [verse 7 [?]] it is clear that the Turvaśas crossed a river called Paruṣṇī; but the place where these Turvaśas lived is not clear."

ugradevam — "For this word the bhāṣyakāra says only 'etannāmakam rājarṣim' — 'the royal sage of this name'. Who this Ugradeva was, and what is known of him, is not clear. This word occurs in the Ṛgveda only in this ṛk. It is also found in the Pañcaviṃśa Brāhmaṇa of the Sāmaveda [Pañc. Brā. 14-3-12 [?] and 25-10-11 [?]] and in the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka [Tai. Ā. 5-4-12 [?]]. No further account is found."

navavāstvam, bṛhadratham — "The word navavāstva is read in the Ṛgveda in the ṛk now at hand and in these ṛks only:"

परा नववास्त्वमनुदेयं महे पित्रे ददाथ स्वं नपातम् । (ऋ. सं. ६-२०-११ [?]) अहं स यो नववास्त्वं बृहद्रथं सं वृत्रेव दासं वृत्रहारुजम् ॥ (ऋ. सं. १०-४९-६ [?])

parā navavāstvam anudeyaṃ mahe pitre dadātha svaṃ napātam |
(ṛ. saṃ. 6-20-11 [?]) ahaṃ sa yo navavāstvam bṛhadratham saṃ
vṛtreva dāsaṃ vṛtrahārujam || (ṛ. saṃ. 10-49-6 [?])

78. Mine and tentative, the first very uncertain: "[you gave] Navavāstva, a grandson of one to be granted, to the great father [?];" "I am he who [broke] Navavāstva [and] Bṛhadratha, like [one breaks] a Vṛtra-foe, a Dāsa".

turvītim — "This word is read in the ṛk now in question; in the ṛks [1-54-6 [?]; 1-112-23 [?]] [also] the word turvīti [is read], and the word turvītaye [is read] only in the ṛks 1-61-11 [?]; 2-13-12 [?]; 4-19-6 [?]. In some contexts this word is used together with the name of a person named Vayya. In some of the above ṛks it is said that Indra helped Turvīti and Vayya to cross the course of a river; Ludwig and some other Western scholars take this Turvīti to be the king of the tribes Turvaśa and Yadu. But there is no proof to support that. It may only be said that he was also one of the Turvaśa tribe."

- dasyave sahaḥ — "as the bhāṣyakāra says, [Agni] who overcomes the thief."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁷⁹ - nayat: root ñīñ prāpaṇe, of the first class; leṭ, tip; leṭo 'dāṭau — लेटोडाटौ — [Pā. 3-4-94]: aṭ for the leṭ-ending; itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu — इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु — [Pā. 3-4-97]: the i of the ending is lost; śap; ato guṇe — the two a's [of aṭ and śap] take pararūpa; guṇa; ay-substitution. - navavāstvam: navaṃ vāstu yasya saḥ — "he who has a new dwelling": the sense of the parts; here it applies only to the name; the second case singular am: navavāstu + am; amipūrvaḥ — अमि पूर्वः — [Pā. 6-1-107]: before am the pūrvarūpa comes for ak-final bases, but "vā chandasi" [Pā. 6-1-106] is carried on, so in the Veda it is optional: hence it does not arise, and the yaṇ-substitution comes. - bṛhadratham: by the nature of a bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its natural accent. Translation: "O Agni — jyotiḥ, of the form of light — tvām, you, for śaśvate janāya, for the many-kindred people, Manu Prajāpati ni dadhe — established, at the place of the divine sacrifice. O Agni, you, ṛtajātaḥ — born of the ṛta, the sacrifice, as the cause — ukṣitaḥ, sated with the oblations, kaṇve, in the great ṛṣi so named, dīdetha — have shone. Yam — which Agni — kṛṣṭayaḥ, men (kṛṣṭayah, carṣaṇayah being read among the names for 'men') — namasyanti, make obeisance to. That you — the connection with the preceding."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, giving light and strength to the many kinds of people of the world, Manu Prajāpati established you at the sacrificial ground in order to help them. Remembering your help, all men do obeisance to you and worship you. You are born of the sacrifice, and are the cause of it. The sage Kaṇva, offering oblations in the sacrifice, has satisfied you. Satisfied, you have shone upon him with your grace."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni deity, the lustre of your flames spreads through all the worlds that are beyond the sight of men. Their power is of a majesty that cannot be imagined by man. They are very terrible to those who do harm, by showing great cruelty in the destruction of enemies. Therefore, knowing only that their nature is thus, it is not possible for us to take refuge in their strength and powers: [for] they surpass our own trust. By those powers burn up utterly the rākṣasas who do us harm and our devouring enemies."

Close of Sūkta 36

The sūkta has 20 Riks (printed pp. 176–250; PDF 190–264), as the heading on p. 178 states ("ṛks 1–20"). Closing note (p. 250, in ordinary type, beneath the last grammar paragraph): illige 36 neya sūkta mugidudu — "Here the thirty-sixth sūkta is finished" (the sūkta number is printed in small Kannada numerals, read as "36"); no varga-end statement is printed on this page. The varga numerals of the heading (p. 178: "Varga 8, 9, 10, 11") are as read; the small numerals of the running headers read "10" on pp. 215–231, "11" on pp. 235–249 and "12" on p. 251 [?]. An ornament follows.

Summary of the sūkta (from the Bhāvārthas): a long hymn to Agni by Kaṇva Ghaura. After the invocation (Riks 1–3: he is the hotṛ, messenger and increaser of strength; the priests and sacrificers take him up and serve him), the gods Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryaman kindle him and the sacrificer who offers him oblations wins all wealth (4); he is the lord of the house and all the gods' works are joined in him (5); all offerings are poured into him alone (6); the priests worship the self-shining one and kindle him with the seven hotṛs (7); the other gods, with his help, slew Vṛtra and made the worlds spacious (8); he is asked to sit on the barhis and send up his smoke (9); the gods, Kaṇva, Indra and others established him as the best sacrificer (10); Medhyātithi Kaṇva kindled him more brightly than the Sun (11); he is the lord of food and a friend of the gods (12); Riks 13–14, to the sacrificial post (yūpa) or to Agni abiding in it: stand erect, protect us, burn the devouring rākṣasas, give us long life, and carry our offerings to the gods; prayers for protection from rākṣasas, tricksters, harmful beasts and killers, and for the destruction of the enemies who give nothing (15–16); his giving of heroism and good fortune to Kaṇva, and his protection of Medhyātithi and others (17); the invocation of the royal sages Turvaśa, Yadu, Ugradeva and of Navavāstu, Bṛhadratha and Turvīti together with Agni (18); Manu's establishing Agni as light for the people, and Kaṇva's praise (19); and a closing prayer to burn utterly the rākṣasas and all devouring enemies with Agni's terrible flames (20).

By the rule 'and the ṛṣi [is the same] as another [sūкта]' [the clause in the print is partly unclear [?]] the ṛṣi is Kaṇva, son of Ghora. This [sūкта] and the one following are in the Gāyatrī metre. These three sūktas, beginning with this one, have the Maruts as deity, by the rule on tuihi [?]. In the Vyṛḷha [?], in the second Chandoma day, at the Āgnimāruta śastra, this sūкта is a nividdhānīya [= to have the nivid inserted]. It is laid down in the section of the second [adhyāya] beginning 'agniṃ vo devam': 'krīḷam vaḥ śardho, [and] agne mṛḷa — [these are] the Āgnimāruta [śastra]' (Āś. 7-10 [?]). And the Brāhmaṇa: 'krīḷam vaḥ śardho mārutam' (Ai. Brā. 3-18 [?]). In the iṣṭi [described as] 'a seven-potsherd cake for the sporting Maruts', the ṛk krīḷam va is the main anuvākyā. And it is laid down in the section beginning 'tataḥ': 'krīḷam vaḥ śardho mārutam, [and] aso na ye marutaḥ svañcaḥ' (Āś. 2-17 [?])." ³ Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 251 — "Krīḷam vaḥ is the second sūкта in this eighth anuvāka. In it there are fifteen ṛks. The Anukramaṇikā says 'krīḷam pañconā mārutam hi gāyatram śvitīti' [as read]. As said before, the ṛṣi of this sūkta is Kaṇva, the son of Ghora. This sūkta and the next sūkta are sūktas of the Gāyatrī metre. The three sūktas beginning with this one have the Maruts as deities. At the time of reciting the mantras of the Āgnimāruta śastra in the sacrifice called Vyṛḷha it is prescribed that this sūkta be recited as the second chandoma mantra. This is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning 'dvitīyasyāgniṃ vo devam', by the sūtra 'krīḷaṃ vaḥ śardho 'gne mṛḷety āgnimārutam' (Āś. 7-10 [?]). On this matter there is the Brāhmaṇa sentence 'krīḷaṃ vaḥ śardho mārutam' (Ai. Brā. 3-18 [?]). In the homa called āmiṣṭi, which is made with the Marut deities in view — 'marudbhyaḥ krīḍibhyaḥ puroḍāśaṃ saptakapālam' — this ṛk krīḷaṃ vaḥ is the main anuvākya mantra. In the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Āś. 2-17 [?]), in the section tathā tataḥ, the sūtra 'krīḷaṃ vaḥ śardho mārutam (Ṛg. 1-37-1) asyo na ye marutaḥ svañcaḥ (Ṛg. 5-[?]-[?])' points to this matter."

6. Reading note: "stutdhvam" is as printed. The Brāhmaṇa quotation
"anarvā prehīty āha..." is read with some doubt.

Translation: "O kaṇvāḥ — great ṛṣis born in the family (gotra) of Kaṇva, or, otherwise, wise priests — abhi pra gāyata — sing out, praise greatly, on all sides, for yourselves, mārutam śardhaḥ — the strength (śardhas) of the Maruts, in the form of the host of Maruts. What sort of śardhas? Krīḷam — given to sport (viḥaraṇaśīlam); anarvāṇam — without a rival (bhrātr̥vya). For this very reason another mantra has been explained by another Vedic Brāhmaṇa: 'anarvā, go forward, he says: the arvan [is] a rival — for the removal of the rival.' Rathe-śubham — shining, standing in their own chariot."

Grammar within the bhāṣya 7: krīḷam (krīḷṛ viḥāre, the pacādi suffix ac; ḷ → ḷ between two vowels, by the Bahvṛca tradition); śardhaḥ (śṛdhu prasahane; śardhayaty anena śatrūn; asun; nit, so first-syllable acute); mārutam (marutām idam, tasyedam: aṇ; the accent first-syllable by vyatyaya; or anudātte... añ in the sense of "collection"); anarvāṇam (masculine by vyatyaya instead of neuter; nañsubhyām: the later member final-acute); rathe-śubham (śubha dīptau, rathe śobhate: rathe-śubh, kvip; tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam: the locative is not elided; the later member of a kṛt-compound keeps its accent); gāyata (kai gai rai śabde; tiñ natiñah: the lowering).

Pratipadārtha — "kaṇvāḥ — O sages born in the line of the ṛṣi Kaṇva, or O wise priests; vaḥ — for you (for your good); krīḷam — [that] is fond of sport; anarvāṇam — [that] has no rival; rathe-śubham — [that] shines seated in its own chariot; mārutam — [that] has the nature of the group of Maruts; śardhaḥ — the strength; abhi pra gāyata — sing praise well on all sides."

— "O sages born in the line of Kaṇva, the Marut deities, endowed with great strength, enjoy themselves seated in their splendid, unobstructed chariots. Praise the host of those Marut deities well with hymns and the like."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 253) — "Celebrate, Kanwas, the aggregate strength of the maruths, sportive, free from enemies and shining in their car."⁸

marutaḥ — "Yāska's explanation of the word marutaḥ is as follows:"

मरुतो मितराविणो वा मितरोचिनो वा महद्द्रवन्तीति वा । (नि. ११-१३ [?])

maruto mitrāviṇo vā mitarocino vā mahad dravantīti vā | (ni. 11-13 [?])

"Mita means 'well joined': because they sound well-joined — that is, 'resounding, blowing' — or because they shine well, or because they sound abundantly: from this they are called marutaḥ. Here some, in the places maruto mitarāviṇo vā, would divide the pada as mitarāviṇaḥ [amitarāviṇaḥ, as read], and explain amita as 'very many', and rāviṇaḥ as 'sounding'; and in the same way, dividing amitarocinaḥ, they take the sense 'shining much'."⁹

"The Marut deities are praised together with Indra in many contexts. Since there is the praise of Indra in the ṛk 'marudbhir indra sakhyaṃ te astu' (Ṛg. 8-[?]-[?] [?]), they too have a status like Indra's. In the Ṛgveda thirty-three sūktas are wholly addressed to the Maruts. Besides, there are seven sūktas where they are praised together with Indra, and one each where they are praised with Pūṣan and with Agni. These Marut deities are many. In some places it is said 'trisaptaiḥ' (Ṛg. 1-133-6 [?]), that is, three groups of seven each; in other places 'tri śaṣṭis tvā maruto' (Rg. 8-96-8 [?]), that is, that there are Marut deities numbering sixty [-three]. They are also said to be the sons of Rudra, and so they are called by the name Rudriyāḥ. To these Marut deities Pṛśni (the cow of the heavenly world) is [their] mother, and so they are called pṛśnimātaraḥ, 'those whose mother is Pṛśni'; here Pṛśni may mean the clouds. When clouds shed rain, the wind commonly blows swiftly and with a sound; so the name may have come to these deities. They are also said to be born of lightning and of the cloud, born of the wind and of heaven, and self-born. A deity named Rodasī is said to be their wife, and Indrāṇī and Sarasvatī are said to have a special connection with them."

8. Printed so, with "maruths" in lower case; the print ends with a raised dot.

9. Translation of the Nirukta sentence editorial and tentative; the Sanskrit is as read, with [?] on its numeral.

"The abode of the Marut deities is in the three worlds, heaven, mid-region and earth. Their connection is chiefly with the rain that comes in lightning and thunder, and so it is the established usage to call them very brilliant. Lightning is their weapon. There are many descriptions: they wear golden ornaments on the head, feet, breast and other limbs, and hold a spear [ṛṣṭi] in the hand; and there is the description of their travelling seated in a chariot to which spotted deer [spotted deer, the print's English] are yoked."

"These Marut deities are youths, handsome, young; cruel like wild beasts, and yet they are engaged in sport like children. The sound of their travelling is terrible like thunder. They bring rain with them. A famous river named Marutvṛdhā is a witness to their exploits [as read]. The rain they bring is called by various names, jenutupa, milk, tuppa, and the like. It is also said that, besides bringing rain, they make the mountains shake. Their song gives strength to Indra at the time of Vṛtra's slaughter. In various places they are described as drinking soma, as singing, and as taking part in sacrifices. The chief act of the Marut deities is the help given to Indra when he slew Vṛtra. In some places, though they are addressed as sons or brothers of Indra, there are one or two sūktas (Rg. 1-165 [?]; 1-170 [?]) which say that on certain principal occasions they left Indra without help and that Indra, for that reason, took up revenge upon them and was ready to slay them, and that the sage Agastya had to pacify Indra with much effort."

"In connection with Rudra's being with the Maruts there is a description that they use their weapons, the spear and the thunderbolt (Ṛg. 2-[?]-[?] and others, as read, not secure)."

"In the matter of sacrificial ceremonies, especially in the soma sacrifice, there are many differences between the Marut deities and the god Vāyu. Vāyu is called in the prātaḥsavana; the Maruts are invoked in the midday and third pressings. In the sacrifice called cāturmāsya the vessel of the Maruts is special."

"Let us consider briefly the nature of the Marut deities. The difference between Vāyu and the Maruts is this: Vāyu is the ordinary blowing wind; the Maruts are the wind that, in the rainy season, comes with thunder, lightning and clouds, together with great rain and a loud and terrible blast. Hence, descriptions of many kinds are found: that the Marut deities shine, that they sound, that they are cruel, that they have great strength and power, that they are the sons of the mid-region (heaven), and that they are always engaged in sport, since they blow always in the mid-region."

krīḷam = viḥaraṇaśīlam: "fond of play; engaged in games and wandering about."

śardhaḥ — "since śardhaḥ is read among the twenty-eight names for strength beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ (Ni. 2-9 [?]), śardhaḥ means strength or valour."

mārutam = marutsamūham: "since the Marut deities are always many, they are addressed in the plural only. Here the singular mārutam means 'the host of the Maruts'."

anarvāṇam = bhrātrvyarahitam: "without enemies. To show how this sense follows from the word, the bhāṣyakāra has cited the Brāhmaṇa sentence 'anarvā prehīty āha | bhrātrvyo vā arvā | bhrātrvyāpanutyai [as read]. Some Western scholars have explained the word anarvāṇam differently: arvā means a horse; anarvā means those who have no horses. Since the chariot of the Marut deities has no horses harnessed to it, but is drawn by the spotted deer, pr̥ṣatīḥ, they hold that these deities are called anarvāṇa."

rathe-śubham

kaṇvāḥ

— "the Kaṇvas are those born in the line of the ṛṣi Kaṇva."

abhi pra gāyata

— "all together, join and sing the praises of the Maruts in a loud voice: such is the sense."

Translation: "O priests, for vaḥ — your — śardhāya, the one given to overpowering; ghṛṣvaye — endowed with the rubbing-down of enemies; tveṣadyumnāya — whose glory (dyumna) is shining ('dyumna, from dyut, is glory or food', so Yāska, Nī. 5-5 [?]); śuṣmīṇe — the powerful (since śuṣma, śuṣṇa are read among the names for strength): for such a host of Maruts brahma — [praise] relating to the oblation, to food — pra gāyata, sing out. What sort of brahma? Devattam — given by the gods, obtained by the gods' favour."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ¹⁹: śardhāya (śṛdhu prasahane, the pacādi ac, first-syllable acute as of the vṛṣādi group); ghṛṣvaye (ghṛṣu saṃgharṣe, the Uṇādi suffix kvin, given by nipātana: kaviḡhrṣvi...; tveṣadyumnāya (tviṣa dīptau, pacādi ac; a bahuvrīhi with the first-member accent); devattam (devair dattam; the Vedic loss of a letter; the line "dvau cāparau varṇavikāranāśau" is quoted [Kāś. on Pā. 6-4-109 [?]]; tṛtīyā karmaṇi: the first member keeps its natural accent).

Pratipadārtha — "vaḥ — [O priests] to you; śardhāya — [that] is endowed with the power to restrain; ghṛṣvaye — [that] crushes enemies; tveṣadyumnāya — [that] has shining fame; śuṣmīṇe — [that] is strong; (marudgaṇāya) — for the host of Maruts; devattam — [which the gods have favoured by] teaching and giving; brahma — the hymn of prayer; (havir-rūpa-annam uddīśya — with a view to [the oblation, i.e.] food); pra gāyata — sing well."

Bhāvārtha

— "O priests, the power of the host of Maruts is always boundless. It protects itself and its devotees, and checks and crushes enemies. Its fame is exceedingly shining. Whenever one wishes to praise that power, sing well the hymn of prayer that the gods have favoured and taught to you. The food you wish, in the form of oblation, will be obtained."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 263) — "Sing forth, O Kanwas, the god-given hymn in honour of your victorious, splendidly glorious, mighty hosts of Maruths:"²⁰

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 264 - śardhāya = prasahanaśīlāya: "since śardhaḥ is read among the twenty-eight names for strength beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ (Ni. 2-9 [?]), śardhāya means 'powerful, endowed with strength'." - ghṛṣvaye = ghṛṣu saṃgharṣe | śatrugharṣaṇayuktāya: "one who fights, who battles with the enemy." - tveṣadyumnāya — "tveṣa means shining; dyumna means fame (Ni. 5-5 [?]); tveṣadyumna means one whose fame is praised by all." - śuṣmīṇe — "since śuṣma is read among the same twenty-eight names for strength, śuṣma means strength; śuṣmīṇe means 'strong' (with the Maruts in view)." - devattam = daivair dattam | devatānugrahāl labdham: "here, for the convenience of the metre, the d of the word daivair dattam is lost, giving the form devattam: 'given by the gods, obtained through the gods' favour'." - brahma — "since brahma is read among the twenty-eight names for food beginning andhaḥ, vājaḥ (Ni. 2-7 [?]), 20. Printed so, "god-given hymn" with a hyphen; the print ends with a raised dot.

the word brahma here means food in the form of the oblation, havirlakṣaṇaṃ uddiśya havissvarūpam annam." - brahma gāyata — "praying that food be given, sing the praises of the Marut deities."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²¹ - śardhāya: root śṛdhu prasahane, curādi; śardhayatīti śardhaḥ — "strength that mocks enemies"; the pacādi suffix ac; vr̥ṣādīnāṃ ca — वृषादीनां च — [Pā. 6-1-203]: first-syllable acute. - ghṛṣvaye: root ghṛṣu saṃgharṣe, class 1; kaviḡhr̥ṣvi... [Uṇ. 4-[?], numerals as read not secure]: the form ghṛṣvi, ending in kvin, is given by nipātana. - tveṣadyumnāya (p. 265): root tviṣa dīptau, the pacādi suffix ac, laghūpadha-guṇa; tveṣam = shining, dyumnam = fame, yasya saḥ: a bahuvrīhi; the first member keeps its natural accent. - devattam: daivaiḥ dattam, a tatpuruṣa compound; tr̥tīyā karmaṇi — तृतीया कर्मणि — [Pā. 6-2-48]: the first member keeps its natural accent; the Kāśikā-authors, on pr̥ṣodarādīni yathopadiṣṭam — पृषोदरादीनि यथोपदिष्टम् — [Pā. 6-3-109], say dvau cāparau varṇavikāranāśau — "two further operations: change of one letter [into another], and loss of a letter"; of these two, here the d is lost. 22. Reading note: "ghno hananam" is as printed; the root-form of aghnyam is explained in the grammar below.

Translation: "Goṣu — in the cows, [that is] in the milch cows such as Pṛśni, the mothers of the Maruts ('from Pṛśni's milk the Maruts were born', Tai. Saṃ. 2-2-11-4 [?], from another Vedic text): aghnyam — indestructible, krīḷam — endowed with sport, mārutam — belonging to the Maruts, śardhaḥ — that energy whose nature is overpowering — yat — which exists: praise (śaṃsa = stuhi) that, O company of priests. Rasasya — that energy relating to the [rasa, the] milk of the cow, jambhe, in the mouth or belly, vavṛdhe — grew."

Pratipadārtha — "goṣu — (O priests) in the milch cows, beginning with Pṛśni, who are the mothers of the Maruts, [that is, in them]; aghnyam — indestructible; krīḷam — endowed with sport; mārutam — belonging to the Maruts; śardhaḥ — the energy that has the strength to restrain enemies; yat (asti) — whatever it is (with regard to that); pra śaṃsa — praise [with hymns]; rasasya — [that energy] which is nourished by the milk of the cows; jambhe — in the mouth; vavṛdhe — grew."

— "In the mouth of the Marut deities there is an extraordinary energy. That energy was nourished by the milk of the heavenly cows, Pṛśni and the rest, the mothers of the Maruts; for that very reason it has a divine radiance. It cannot be destroyed by enemies: it is indestructible, with the power to restrain enemies. Because it is always engaged in sport and enjoys itself, the Marut deities experience that joy, and by the help of that energy give joy to their devotees as well. Praise that divine energy, and sing hymns to it."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 266)

— "Praise the sportive and resistless might of the Maruts who were born amongst cows and whose strength has been nourished by milk."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 266–267 - goṣu = marunmātr̥bhūtapr̥śniprabhṛtiṣu: "in the cows called Pr̥śni, said to be the mothers of the Maruts. According to the Taittirīya Śruti statement 'pr̥śnyai vai payaso marutaḥ jātāḥ' (Tai. Saṃ. 2-2-11-4 [?]) it is famed that the Marut deities were born from the milk of Pr̥śni, the cow of the heavenly world." - śaṃsa — "for the convenience of the metre the a is long [śaṃsā] in the Saṃhitā text." - aghnyam = ahantavyam: "that which cannot be killed; not to be harmed, and the like." - jambhe = mukhe udare vā: "in the mouth or in the belly." - rasasya = gokṣīrarūpasya sambandhi: "relating to the milk of the cow Pr̥śni — the energy."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²³ - śaṃsā: root śaṃsu stutau, loṭ, second-person singular; dvyacotastiṇaḥ — द्व्यचोऽस्तितिः — in the Saṃhitā the a of a two-vowelled tiṇ-form is lengthened. - goṣu: "here the case-ending stands after the word go; the acute on the ending that would come by sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ is prohibited by na gośvansāvavarṇa... (quoted in part in the print)." - aghnyam: root han himsāgatyoḥ; ghañarthe kavīdhānam... — [Pā. 3-3-58, as read]: the suffix ka in the sense of ghañ; gamahanajanakhanaghasām lopāḥ knīty anāni — the penultimate a of the root is lost; ho hanter ññinneṣu — हो हन्तेर्जिन्नेषु — [Pā. 7-3-54]: h becomes gh: ghna, "killing"; ghnam arhati iti ghnyam — "one fit for killing"; chandasi ca — छन्दसि च — [Pā. 5-1-67]: yat in the Veda after a prātipadika in the second case in the sense arhati; na ghnyam = aghnyam, a nañ-tatpuruṣa; the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its natural accent — "the enumeration avyaye nañ ku... [as read] must not be forgotten." - krīḷam, śardhaḥ, mārutam: "explained in the first mantra of this sūkta." - jambhe: root jabhi nāśane, curādi; jabhyate = nāśyate 'nena iti jambham, "that by which things eaten are destroyed", that is, the instrument of eating — jambha = mouth; karaṇe ghañ. - vāvṛdhe [the Saṃhitā form of vavṛdhe]: root vṛdhu vṛddhau; liṭ, doubling; liṭas tajhayor eśirec: e; ur at — उर्त् — (number not read): a for the r of the reduplicate, with raparatva; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ: loss of the r and dh; vavṛdh + e; knīti ca: no guṇa; the lengthening of the reduplicate in the Saṃhitā is Vedic. Rik 5 ends here (|| 5 ||).

Translation: "Divāḥ ca — of the heavenly world — and gmaḥ ca — of the earthly world ('gauḥ', 'gmā' being read among the names of the earth) — dhūtayaḥ — O shakers — naraḥ — leaders, Maruts: among you ā — all round — who is varṣiṣṭhaḥ, the greatest, the most grown? Yat — since you sīm — on all sides — antam na dhūnutha — shake, set in motion, as it were the tip of a tree: therefore, among you who shake, who is the mighty one? — such is the question."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁴: varṣiṣṭhaḥ (iṣṭhan after vṛddha; priyasthīrasphīrorubahulaguruvṛddha...: varṣi in place of vṛddha; nit, so first-syllable acute); gmaḥ (sixth-case singular of gmā; the sūtra āto dhātoḥ is to be divided so that ātaḥ is a separate rule, as the Kāśikā [6-4-140 [?]] states: the ā is lost because the word is not a kṛdanta; the ending is acute by the udāttanivṛtti accent); dhūtayaḥ (dhūñ kampane; ktic; titutra...: no iṭ; āmantritasya ca: wholly unaccented); dhūnutha (śnu; the maxim that an accent remaining [śiṣṭa] is stronger except against vikaraṇa-accents — so the vikaraṇa's accent does not override the lasārvadhātuka accent; therefore the tiñ alone has the accent; no lowering, since yat is connected).

Pratipadārtha — "divaḥ ca — of the heaven-world also; gmaḥ ca — of the earth-world also; dhūtayaḥ — [you who are] the shakers, who make both worlds tremble; naraḥ — O heroic Maruts; yat — for which reason; sīm — all round [on both worlds]; antam na — as the tip [of a tree is easily made to shake]; dhūnutha — you shake (for that reason, by that powerful host); vaḥ — among you; ā — such; varṣiṣṭhaḥ — the eldest, the most powerful; kaḥ — who?"

— "O Maruts, your prowess is beyond that of man. As easily as one can shake the top of a tree, with that same ease, without any effort, you make heaven and earth tremble. Though all of you are endowed with extraordinary strength, the strength of your leader must be greater than that of all. Who is that leader among you, of great prowess, who gives you encouragement?"

English Translation (the source's own, p. 269) — "Agitators of heaven and earth, who is chief leader among you who shake all around like the top of tree ?" ²⁵.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayaḥ), p. 269 - varṣiṣṭhaḥ = vṛddhatamaḥ: "the most strong, the one endowed with the greatest power, the chief leader, the very mighty." - gmaś ca — "of the earth. Since the word gmā is read among the twenty-one names of the earth beginning with gauḥ, gmā (Ni. 1-1 [?]), gmaḥ means 'of the earth'. It is the sixth-case singular of gmā." - dhūtayaḥ, dhūnutha = dhūñ kampāne: "as the swiftly blowing

25. printed so, with "who" in raised type at "wh°"; no full stop wind shakes trees and the like with ease, so the Marut deities are able with ease to shake the heavenly world and the earth: this is the chief sense."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁶ - varṣiṣṭha (p. 269): "in the sense of excess, after vṛddha, atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau gives iṣṭhan [the print's letters read 'iṣman', evidently a misprint for iṣṭhan]; priyasthirasphirorubahulaguruvṛddha... — प्रियस्थिरस्फिरोरुबहुलगुरुवृद्ध... — [Pā. 6-4-157] (the sūtra is quoted only in part in the print): varṣi replaces vṛddha before iṣṭhan etc.; the suffix iṣṭhan is nit, hence the word is first-syllable acute." - gmaḥ (p. 270): after gmā, the sixth-case singular nas; gmā + as; āto dhātoḥ — आतो धातोः — [Pā. 6-4-140]: "here āt is divided off as a separate rule; its sense is that the ā which forms the end of a bha-named base is lost"; thereby the ā of gmā is lost; anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ — the ending is acute through the udāttanivṛtti accent. - dhūṭayaḥ: root dhūñ kampane, svādi; ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām: ktic; titutra...: no iṭ for ti; āmantritasya ca — the eighth adhyāya's [Pā. 8-1-19]: wholly unaccented. - dhūnutha: root dhūñ, laṭ, second-person plural tha; svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ — स्वादिभ्यः श्नुः — [Pā. 3-1-73]: śnu as the vikaraṇa; dhū + nu + tha; since the śnu comes at the end the accent that comes to it is satiśiṣṭa; the dictum satiśiṣṭasvarabaliyastvam anyatra vikaraṇebhyaḥ — "the satiśiṣṭa accent is stronger, except against the vikaraṇas" — means the accent from the vikaraṇa is not stronger; the accent of the tiñ alone remains. Yat sīmāntam: the relative yat is connected, so yadvṛttānnityam forbids the wholly-unaccented. Translation: "O Maruts, for your yāma, your going, mānuṣaḥ — some man, a householder — nī dadhre — has set down, driven, a firm post, to make his house firm: the planting of the firm post is in fear that the house, shaken by your going, may fall, and to prevent this. For what yāma? Ugrāya manyave — [your going which is] fierce, keen, bent on shaking. Fear at your going is indeed fitting: parvataḥ, the mountain [that has] many kinds of joints (parva) — giriḥ, the peaked mountain, being shaken by your passage, jihīta — goes [= is shattered]."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ²⁸: mānuṣaḥ (manor jātāv aṇ śuk ca — Pā. 4-1-161, as read: aṇ with the augment śuk after manu in the sense of descendant; ñnityādir nityam: first-syllable acute); dadhre (the root's liṭ is kit, so no guṇa and yaṇ for the vowel; suffix accent; no lowering because the word begins a pāda [pādāditvāt]); jihīta (ohān gatau; liṇ; śap → ślu as the root belongs to the juhotyādi; bhrñām it — Pā. 7-4-76 — i for the reduplicate vowel; śābhyastayor ātaḥ: loss of the ā); parvataḥ (parva asyāsti, the mat-sense suffix ta [as read]).

Pratipadārtha — "vaḥ — (O Maruts) your; ugrāya — fierce; manyave — [that has] a tendency to shake firmly; yāmāya — for the going (so that in the time of your going the house should not fall by shaking); mānuṣaḥ — the man (the householder); nī dadhre — has set a post (to hold the house); parvataḥ — [the one] with many ridges; giriḥ — the mountain too; jihīta — would be shattered (by your violence)."

— "O Maruts, when your self-established prowess makes all of earth and sky tremble, and the mountain on the earth, shattered, goes before your power, it is natural that the helpless man should be afraid at the time of your going. Yet, since your going is to his benefit, without obstructing it, he has set a post to his house, so that during your fierce and steadily shaking passage it may not fall down by trembling."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 271)

— "The house-holder, in dread of your fierce and violent approach has planted a firm post ; for even the mountain with many ridges is shattered by you." .

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 272 - Main idea — "The Maruts blow with great speed and terror, so that even the mountain-tops, unable to withstand their force, shake. When that is so, how can the houses in which men live stand firm? For that very reason men set up strong posts in their houses, so that the houses may not be shaken by the wind that blows with great violence, to keep their houses firm."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁹ - mānuṣaḥ: manor jātāv aṅyatau ṣuk ca — मनोरजाताविज्यतौ षुक्च — [Pā. 4-1-161]: after the base manu, in the sense of jāti, the suffixes añ and yat come, and the augment ṣuk is added to manu; with añ and the augment ṣuk at its end: mānuṣa. "The person who has completed his Vedic study and performs the works enjoined by the Veda is indicated by the word mānuṣa; if he is not so, one should say māṇava." The print cites a verse in support, which is read as:

अपत्ये कुत्सिते मूढे मनोरौत्सर्गिकः स्मृतः । नकारस्य च मूर्धन्यस्त्वेनसिद्धयति माणवः ॥ [?]

Translation: "O Maruts, yeṣām — of you whose — yāmeṣu — goings — being ajmeṣu — throwers [= violent] — prthivī, the earth, rejate — trembles. The illustration is jujurvāṃ iva viśpatiḥ: as a king, the protector of his people, worn out by age, loss of strength, disease and the like, trembles through fear of enemies, so [the earth]."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³²: ajmeṣu (the Uṇādi suffix man, by the word bahulam; the substitution of vī for aj does not occur; it is optional before a valādi ārdhadhātuka; nit, so first-syllable acute); jujurvān (the root gyā, vayohānau; liṭ → kvasu; the Vedic u; the reduplicate cut down; no iṭ by vasvekājāḍghasām; the guṇa and the lengthening that ṛcchatyṛtām and halica would give do not arise, since a rule that depends on a technical term is not constant); viśpatiḥ (viśāṃ patiḥ; the first-member accent that patyāv aiśvarye would give is set aside by parādiś chandasi bahulam: first-syllable acute for the second member); bhiyā (the ending acute by sāvekācaḥ...); yāmeṣu (yamu uparame, bhāve ghañ; first-syllable acute by the vṛṣādi listing, in place of the final-acute of karṣātvato ghañah); rejate (rejṛ kampane; the root accent; no lowering because the relative is connected).

31. The root is printed gyāṣ; it is the root gyā, "to grow old", with an indicatory ṣ. The rule-numbers marked "as read" are small and not secure.

32. pp. 273–274, characterized

Pratipadārtha — "yeṣām — (O Maruts) which your; yāmeṣu — goings; ajmeṣu — [that throw all down] with violence; jujurvān iva — like [a king] with a body decayed by age and disease; viśpatiḥ — the king, protector of the people; bhiyā — through fear (as he trembles); pṛthivī — the earth; rejate — trembles."

Bhāvārtha

— "The earth, too, trembles before the violence of your goings, which are fierce and throw all down. Seeing this, [one might say] that, as a king who protects his people, his body decayed by age and disease, trembles with fear on seeing his powerful enemy, the earth seems to tremble before your prowess."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 274) — "O Maruts, at your approach (at whose approach) even the earth trembles like a king weak and ehfeeble with age through dread of his enemies"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), pp. 274–275 - ajmeṣu = aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ: "in your goings, or by your goings: that is, when you come near, blowing terribly." - jujurvān iva = jyā vayohānau: "like a king decayed by age, old, grown old with age: who, unable to fight powerful enemies, trembles for fear of them." - viśpatiḥ = viśaṃ prajānām patiḥ: "the protector of the people, the king." - yāmeṣu = yamu uparame: "from the goings that come near; that is, when [they] have come near."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁴ - ajmeṣu (p. 275): root aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ; "by the word bahulam in uṇādayo bahulam the Uṇādi suffix man comes"; ajer vyaghañapoḥ — अजेर्व्यघ्रपोः — [Pā. 2-4-56, as read]: vī is substituted for aj before an ārdhadhātuka, except before ghaṇ and ap; "here, from the sūtra vā liṭ [Pā. 2-4-55, as read], the word vā ('optionally') is carried on; and so we resort

In the present case man is a valādi ārdhadhātuka; here, the vī-substitution being optional, it does not come. Being nit, [the word] is first-syllable acute." - jujurvān: root ḥjā [jyāṣ, as printed] vayohānau; liṭ → kvasu; bahulam chandasi — बहुलं छन्दसि — [Pā. 7-1-103, as read]: u [for the vowel] comes variably in the Veda: u, then raparatva: jur + vas; vasvekājādghasām — वस्वेकाजाद्धसाम् — no iṭ by the restriction; doubling; loss of the r of the reduplicate; jujur + vas; halica — हलि च — [Pā. 8-2-77]: lengthening of the penultimate ik of a base ending in r or v, and the guṇa that ṛcchatyṛtām teaches [for the r], would be expected; but, taking the rule saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ ("a rule that has a technical term as its antecedent is not constant"), these do not arise here. - viśpatiḥ: viśām patiḥ; patyāv aiśvārye — पत्यावैश्वर्ये — [Pā. 6-2-18, as read]: the first member keeps its natural accent in a tatpuruṣa with pati in the sense of lordship; but this is set aside by parādiś chandasi bahulam — परादिश्छन्दसि बहुलम् — [Pā. 6-2-199, as read]: the second member is first-syllable acute. - bhiyā: sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ — the ending is acute. - yāmeṣu (pp. 275-276): yamu upame; bhāve ghaṇ, upadhā-vṛddhi: a ghaṇ-ending word; karṣātvato ghaṇor 'nta udāttaḥ — कर्षात्वतो घञोऽन्त उदात्तः — [Pā. 6-1-159, as read] would make it final-acute; but since yāma [is listed in the] vṛṣādi group, vṛṣādīnām ca gives first-syllable acute. - rejate (p. 276): root rejṛ kampane, with śap standing after an anupadeśa [anudātta-marked] root, so tāsyānudātenñid...: the lasārvadhātuka is unaccented; the root's accent stays; the relative being connected, there is no wholly-unaccented accent. Rik 8 ends here (| | 8 | |).

Translation: "Eṣām — of these Maruts — jānaṃ, the birth-place, the sky, is sthiraṃ — firm, indeed without movement. Mātuḥ — from the sky, which stands in the place of the Maruts' mother — vayaḥ, the birds, niretave — [are] able to go out: so it is to be supplied. So, praising the Maruts: 'your birth is from such a sky'. Yat — for this reason — śavaḥ — your strength — anukrameṇa — successively — sīm — on all sides — dvitā — in two parts — it rests, dividing heaven and earth. Therefore: 'your jāna is firm' — the connection with what went before."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³⁵: jānaṃ (janyate 'smin, adhikaraṇe ghañ); eṣām (the eś substitute for idam in the anvādeśa is unaccented; the ending is unaccented as a sup; the acute of the ending that ūḍidam... would give does not arise, since the rule applies only to an idam that is final-acute); niretave (iṇ gatau; tumarthe sasenasi...: the suffix tavenḥ; tādau ca niti kṛtyatau: nir keeps its natural accent).

Pratipadārtha — "eṣām — of these (Maruts); jānaṃ — the sky, [their] birth-place; sthiraṃ hi — [is] firm, devoid of movement; mātuḥ — from the sky [which is your mother, the place of birth]; vayaḥ — birds; niretave — to come out and move about [are enabled]; yat — for which reason; śavaḥ — your strength; anukrameṇa — in succession; sīm — all round; dvitā — in both worlds, heaven and earth, in two parts; [pervades]."

— "O Maruts, your prowess is uncommon. For the sky, your birth-place, is by nature firm and without movement, and yet by your power it becomes the support of movement. The birds are enabled to come out from the sky, the place of your birth, and to move about. Your prowess pervades the two worlds, heaven and earth, in two parts."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 277)

— "The sky which is your birth place is firm and does not shake ; in that sky the birds are always able to fly ; your strength is divided between earth and heaven."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ), p. 277 - jānam = janmasthānam: "janyate 'smin iti jānam antarikṣam — 'that in which one is born': the sky; the birth-place of the Marut deities is said to be the sky." - vayaḥ = pakṣiṇaḥ: "birds." - niretave = nirgantum: "to go out; that is, to fly away." - dvitā — "dividing into two: that is, since the sky stands between the earth and the heavenly world, it makes the earth and heaven separate, that is, it makes two [of them]: such is the sense." - śavaḥ — "strength, power."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁶ - jānam: janyate 'smin iti jānam — "in it, origin takes place; the sky, the support of origin, is indicated by this word"; halaś ca — हलश्च — [Pā. 3-3-121, as read]: ghañ in the locus sense. - eṣām: after idam, the genitive plural ām; tyadādīnām aḥ — त्यदादीनामः — [Pā. 7-2-102, as read]: before a vibhakti the final of the words from tyad to dvi is replaced by a: ida + ām; idamo 'nvādeśe 'śanudāttas tṛtīyādaḥ [the rule as read in the print, Pā. 2-4-32 [?]]: when a vibhakti from the third on follows, in the anvādeśa [idam] takes aś, which is unaccented; the ś is a marker: a + ām. "One might say that the ending after idam should be acute by ūḍidaṃ padādy... [Pā. 6-1-171]; but from sāvekācaḥ [Pā. 6-1-168] the word ekācaḥ and from antodāttāt [Pā. 6-1-169] the word antodāttāt — the two words — are carried forward: so the sense is that the ending after the words ūt etc., which are one-vowelled and final-acute, is acute; here, since the aś that has come for idam is unaccented, there is no final-acute idam-word, and the ām ending does not get the acute." - niretave: nir the preverb; iṇ gatau; tumarthe sasenase... — the suffix tavenḥ; guṇa; tādaḥ ca niti kṛtyataḥ: nir keeps its natural accent. Translation: "Tye — those [Maruts] spoken of before — girāḥ sūnavaḥ, the producers of speech: for the winds, moving in the palate, the lips and so on, produce speech. Ajmeṣu — when there are their own goings — kāṣṭhāḥ, the waters ('waters also are called kāṣṭhāḥ: having gone, they stand', says Yāska, Ni. 2-13 [?]) — ud u atnata, they spread well, i.e. they made [them] spread.

Having made the water spread, [they] urged the cows, bellowing for the sake of its place, abhijñu — as far as the knees — yātave, to go [in]: so it is to be supplied."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ³⁷: sūnavah (ṣūṇ prerane; the Uṇādi nu after su, kit; so no guṇa); atnata (tanu vistāre; lañ; the vikaraṇa is lost by bahulaṃ chandasi; tanipatyos chandasi — Pā. 6-4-99 — the loss of the penultimate; the augment aṭ); abhijñu (abhigate jānunī yasya; prasambhyāṃ jānunar jñuḥ — Pā. 5-4-129 — jñu for jānu, as a compound-final, also after abhi by vyatyaya); yātave (tumarthe seseneti tavenpratyayaḥ; nit: first-syllable acute).

Pratipadārtha — "tye — those aforementioned; giraḥ sūnavah — the Maruts, producers of words; ajmeṣu — at the times of their goings; kāṣṭhāḥ — the waters; ud u — well; atnata — made to spread; vāśrāḥ — the cows that [were] crying out [for water]; abhijñu — up to the knees; yātave — [urge them] to go [into the water]."

— "The Maruts are the support of speech, of all beings. For human beings, and for other beings too, it is possible to make known their experiences, such as hunger and thirst, only with the help of the Maruts. And not only this: when beings make known their experiences by words, the Maruts, by their goings, spread the waters well and make them flow, and urge the cows that are lowing for water to enter the water up to their knees and drink."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 280) — "They are the generators of speech ; They spread out waters in their courses ; they urge the lowing cattle to enter the water up to their knees to drink" ³⁸.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 280 - tye = te: "those mentioned before." - giraḥ sūnavah = vāca utpādakāḥ: "in the organs inside the mouth — palate, lips and so on — speaking is possible by the movement of the air: this is the sense." - kāṣṭhāḥ = āpaḥ: "water. Since there is the Nirukta statement 'āpo 'pi kāṣṭhā ucyante' (Ni. 2-[?] [?]), kāṣṭhāḥ means water." - atnata = atanisata, vistāritavantaḥ: "spread, flowed. Water flows everywhere (in the form of rain) with the help of the wind: such is the sense." - vāśrāḥ — "cows that are lowing." - abhijñu = abhigate jānuni yasya | jānvabhimukhyaṃ yathā bhavati tathā: "when cows go to water-places to drink water, they naturally go into the water as far as their knees and drink. Here it is not made clear how the Maruts urge the cows to drink water."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁹ - sūnavah: root ṣū prerane; dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ: s; suvaḥ kit — सुवः कित् — [Uṇ. 3-[?], as read]: the suffix nu after sū, which is kit; knīti ca: no guṇa. - atnata: root tanu vistāre, ubhayapadī, lañ, jha; "the u-vikaraṇa that comes by tanādikṛñbhya uḥ is lost, by the word bahulam in bahulaṃ chandasi"; ātmanepadeṣv nataḥ: at for jha; tan + ata; tanipatyos chandasi — तनिपत्योश्छन्दसि — [Pā. 6-4-99]: in the Veda the a of tan and pat is lost before a kit or ñit suffix, so the loss of the a; the augment aṭ. - abhijñu: abhigate jānuni yasya tat, "that of which the knees are bent": an adverb; prasambhyaṃ jānunor jñuḥ — प्रसम्भ्यां जानुनोर्जुः — [Pā. 5-4-129]: in a bahuvrīhi the word jānu after the preverbs pra and sam takes the substitute jñu; "by Vedic usage this also happens when abhi is the prefix." - yātave: root yā prāpane; tumarthe sasenase...: the suffix tavenḥ; being nit, first-syllable acute. Translation: "Tyaṃ cid ghā: that well-known cloud — even that cloud — they pra cyāvayanti by their yāmas, their own goings: the Maruts make [it] go forth strongly. Of what kind? Dīrgham —

41. the first line at the foot of p. 281; the rest on p. 282 is not yet written

42. Correction to the entry above: the foot of p. 281 also carries the second line of the Pada of Rik 11, which was not written there:

43. The Pada prints cyavayanti (short a), against the Saṃhitā's cyāvayanti; the Pada also prints a small division sign inside yāma-bhiḥ; the bhāṣya below explains the shortening, "padakāle hrasvaś chāndasaḥ".

44. Sanskrit printed in Kannada script possessed of length; prthum — broad, spread out sideways; miho napātam — one that does not make fall the water that is to be sprinkled, i.e. one that makes no rain, so the sense; amṛdhram — not to be injured by anyone."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁴⁵: ghā (lengthened by the rule beginning ṛci tunu-gha...); mihaḥ (root miha secane; mehtāti miḥ — rain; kvip; the ending of the genitive singular has the acute by sāvekācaḥ); napātam (na pātayatīti napāt; the naḥ keeps its own form by nabhrāṇ-napāt...; the accent of the first member of a compound beginning with an indeclinable); amṛdhram (root śṛdhu mṛdhu undane; "mardhati" — he wets (the Kannada: "recalls/wets with water", nīrinda nenesuvudu; the print is unclear [?]); the Uṇādi suffix rak by the word bahulam; in a compound named by saṃjñā the accent of the first member as before) — or else, "mṛdha is, by the word saṅgrāma [as read], a name of battle, and by implication means hiṃsā, injury; the suffix ra is in the sense of matup; compound and accent as before"; cyāvayanti (cyuṇ gatau; ṇic; vṛddhi and āv-substitution; "at the Pada stage the short vowel is Vedic").

Pratipadārtha — "dīrgham — long, spread wide; prthum — immense; miho napātam — one that stays holding back the rain from falling; amṛdhram — not to be injured (i.e. with nothing hindering its own going); tyaṃ cit — that well-known cloud, whichever it is; yāmabhiḥ — by their goings (the Maruts); pra cyāvayanti — they make go forward (they make it go in the way favourable for raining)."

— "At the time when the cloud, having drawn up the water that is the most important thing for the life of all beings, stands holding back the rain, no one but the Maruts can make it rain. The well-known cloud is long, wide and immense and moves at its own

45. p. 282, characterized; the Sanskrit is transcribed in part only will. Such a cloud the Maruts, in their times of going, make move forward, and by the form of rain they pour out the water and do good to the world."

— "They drive before them in their course, the long, vast, uninjuarable [sic] rain-retaining cloud."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 283 - ghā — "indicates the well-known sense (prasiddhārtha). For the sake of the metre it is long in the Saṃhitā text." - miho napātam = secanīyasya jalasya na pātayitāram | vṛṣṭim akurvantam ity arthaḥ | miha secane — "[one who does] not let the rain pour" (the Kannada sentence is printed breaking off after "the rain they pour.."). - cyāvayanti = gamayanti — "they make go forward." The source adds the English "Drive before them."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁶ - ghā: the lengthening of gha is by the sūtra beginning ṛci tunu-gha-makṣu-taṇ-kutro-ruṣyāṇām — ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम् — [Pā. 6-3-13? [?]]; the print then discusses whether the gha of this rule is the technical gha (tarap-tamapau ghaḥ, [Pā. 1-1-22, as read, garbled; ?]), concluding that, since the lengthening is seen in the Veda for the particle gha in this sequence of sounds, the technical name is not taken. - mihaḥ: miha secane, mehatīti miḥ, "rain"; kvip; for the genitive singular, the acute by sāvekācaḥ — सवेकाचः — [Pā. 6-1-168 as known; the number is not read in the print]. - napātam: na pātayatīti napāt; nabhrāṇ-napāt... gives prakṛtibhāva to naṇ; the compound-rule beginning tatpuruṣe tulya-artha... gives the accent of the first member of an indeclinable-first compound. - amṛdhram: śṛdhu mṛdhu undane; "mardhati" = remembers/wets with water [the Kannada nīrinda nenesuvudu, which cannot be read with certainty [?]]; "uṇādayo bahulam" — उणादयो बहुलम् — the Uṇādi rak by the wide sense of bahula; compound with naṇ as before.

46. p. 283 — grammar page, noted briefly

Alternatively the lexicon quotation "mṛdhaskandanaṃ saṃkhyam samikaṃ sāmparāyakam" — मृधस्कन्दनं सङ्ख्यं समीकं साम्परायकम् — [as read] gives mṛdha the sense "war"; here the sense himsā is to be taken by implication; the suffix ra in the sense of matup, with loss of a in the Veda; compound and accent as before. - cyāvayanti: cyuñ gatau, ṇic; aco ñṇiti — अचो ञ्णिति — [Pā. 7-2-115, number as read, doubtful [?]] for the vṛddhi; u to au and then āv; "in the Pada the short vowel is Vedic". Translation of the grammatical tail ⁴⁸: marutaḥ — accent on the first syllable, as a vocative. Acucyavītana — from cyu, by vyatyaya the parasmaipada [for the root which is ātmanepadin]; for the ending tha the substitute tana by the rule tapta-nap-tana-thanās ca; the śap is elided by bahulaṃ chandasi; [the rule] bahulaṃ chandasi then gives the augment iṭ; guṇa and av-substitution; the verb is unaccented by tiṅ atīṅaḥ. Girīn — by dirghād aṭi samānapāde the n becomes ru in the Saṃhitā; by atrānunāsikaḥ... the ī before it is nasalized.

Bhāvārtha

— "O Maruts, all the activities of all things in the world, sentient and insentient, must proceed by your impulsion. You have the natural strength to enliven the whole world. Because of that strength you have, impel all beings so that they do the activities fitting their several natures, and impel the clouds so that they pour down the rain, the support of all life, and make welfare for the world."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 285)

— "Maruts, you have vigour and therefore invigorate mankind and make the clouds to rain."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 285 - ghā [so printed as the heading, though the Saṃhitā of this Rik has yad dha] — "here the word gha indicates the sense eva. For the sake of the metre the gha is long in the Saṃhitā text." - acucyavītana = svasvavyāpāreṣu prarayata — "impel people and the clouds and so on to act in their several activities." - girīn = meghān — "among the thirty names of the cloud beginning adriḥ grāvā [as printed], the word giri is read; therefore girīn means 'the clouds'."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁹ - marutaḥ: the suffix uti by mṛgror utiḥ — मृग्रोरुतिः — [Uṇ., number not read]; by āmantritasya ca — आमन्त्रितस्य च — [the sūtra of the sixth adhyāya] it is accented on the first syllable. - acucyavītana: cyuñ gatau, first class; by ñit / anudāttaṇita ātmanepadam — जित्.. / अनुदात्तङित आत्मनेपदम् — [Pā. 1-3-7? as read [?]] the ātmanepada is due, and in its place the parasmaipada has come; lañ [as read; the lakāra is not certain [?]], madhyama-puruṣa plural tha; by tasthasthamipāṃ tām̐tam̐tām̐ the substitute ta, and by tapta-nap-tana-thanās ca the substitute tana [Pā. 7-1-45, as read [?]]; by bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 2-4-73, as read [?]] the śap is elided (śluḥ); ślau gives doubling: cyu-cyu-tana; by halādiḥ śeṣaḥ the first y is dropped; by

Translation: "Yad dha — whenever indeed the Maruts yānti, go, then adhvann ā, all around on the way, saṃ bruvate ha — together, they certainly make a sound; coming together they surely make a noise. The sound belonging to these Maruts kaś cit — whoever, anyone at all — śṛṇoti, hears."

Grammar within the bhāṣya ⁵¹: yānti (yā prāpaṇe; śap elided because the root belongs to the adādi class; by jho 'ntaḥ the substitute ant, which, treated as in the upadeśa, is acute on the first syllable; the single substitute with the root has its accent; no nighāta because of the connection with yat); bruvate (brūñ vyaktāyāṃ vāci; after the substitute for jha, the guṇa that would be due by "later rule" is barred by being ñit, so uvañ); adhvan (the locative ending elided by supāṃ sulug...); śṛṇoti (since tip is pit, the anudātta is not present, and the accent is that of the vikaraṇa).

Pratipadārtha — "yad ha — whenever, wherever; marutaḥ — the Maruts; yānti — move (then); adhvan ā — all around on the way; saṃ bruvate ha — together they sound well; eṣāṃ — of these Maruts [the sound]; kaś cit — every one (that is, everybody); śṛṇoti — hears [it] (certainly)."

Bhāvārtha

— "The Maruts, who enliven the world, move making sound at all the places where they move. Since they move through the whole world, people everywhere hear their sound."

51. p. 286, characterized

— "Wherever the Maruts pass they make great noises in their way ; every one hears their noise."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 287

— "When the wind blows with great force, every single person certainly hears its sound: such is the sense."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵² - yānti: yā prāpaṇe, laṭ, jhi; jho 'ntaḥ — झोऽन्तः — [Pā. 7-1-3, as read [?]] gives ant for jh; the substitute is ordered in the aṅgādhikāra, hence it is antaraṅga (the suffix being dependent on the base); the accent of the suffix (ādyudātta) comes first by the rule āyannādi... [as read, doubtful]; ant is acute on the first syllable by the accent of a suffix; śap elided (adādi); yā + anti, savarṇadīrgha, and by ekādeśa udāttena the single substitute is acute. - bruvate: brūñ vyaktāyām vāci, laṭ, jha; śap elided (adādi); ātmanepadeṣv nataḥ — आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः — at for jha; ṭi becomes e; brū + ate; sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ — सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः — [Pā. 7-3-84 as read [?]] gives guṇa, and aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor iyaṇuvaṇau — अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवां य्वोरियडुवडौ — [Pā. 6-4-77 as read [?]] gives uvaṇ; if there is a conflict the later rule is to be applied, vipraṭiṣedhe paraṃ kāryam — विप्रतिषेधे परं कार्यम् — [Pā. 1-4-2 as read [?]], namely guṇa; but jha is sārvadhātukam apit — सार्वधातुकमपित् — ... ⁵³ nūnam, 15 Riks, Kaṇva Ghaura, Maruts, Gāyatrī) with its Sanskrit introduction and Kannada anuvāda; these are not yet written and belong to the next session.

Summary of Sūkta 37.

Fifteen Riks to the Maruts, all written in full. Riks 10–13 (the part most recently written) speak of their spreading of the waters and driving the cows to drink, of the cloud they set in motion, of their strength impelling beings and clouds, and of the sound of their going; Riks 14–15 invite them to the offering prepared by the Kaṇvas and pray for a full life. The doubtful parts are the Sanskrit introduction on p. 251 and the many small reference numerals (see the flags below).

Translation of the grammatical tail ⁵: Kad stands for kadā, "when": by the Kāśikā's statement "two other [operations] are the change and loss of a letter" (Kā. 6-3-109 [?], as read) the ā is lost [the Sanskrit of this clause is crowded [?]]. Kadhapriyah: kathā means praise; those who delight in it are kadhapriyah; root prīñ prītau with kvip; the shortening of the first member before jyā and āp in a name or in the Veda (pūrvapadasya jyāpoḥ..., Pā. 6-3-63 [?]); the dha for tha is Vedic; the vocative is unaccented (āmantritanighāta). Dadhidhve: root dhā; liṭ in the present sense by chandasi luṅlaṅliṭaḥ; because of the restriction of the kṛ-group the augment iṭ; accent of the suffix. Vṛktabarhiṣaḥ: vocative, unaccented.

Pratipadārtha — "kadhapriyah — those who are fit to be pleased by praises, and vṛktabarhiṣaḥ — for whom seats of clipped darbha have been prepared (for you [the Maruts]) — O Maruts, you; pitā — a father; hastayoḥ — with his two hands;

putraṃ na — as one takes up his son (with love); kad ha — when indeed; nūnam — surely; dadhidhve — will you take us (with affection) and lift us up with your hands?"

Bhāvārtha — "O Maruts, you are fit to be pleased by praises. Darbha seats are prepared for you. When will you, as a father takes up his son lovingly with his two hands, take us up in your hands and show your regard for us?"

English Translation (the source's own, p. 294) — "Maruts, who are fond of praise and for whom a seat of clipped kusa-grass is prepared, when will you take us in your arms as a father does his son ?" ⁶

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 294 - kat ha = kadā — "when?" - kadhapriyaḥ = stutiprītāḥ — "kadha = kathā = stuti, praise: those who love praise." The source adds the English: "Who love to be praised." - vṛktabarhiṣaḥ — "a seat made of darbha grass called barhis that has been clipped. It is the custom to prepare a darbha seat so that the gods may come to the sacrificial altar and sit." - pitā putraṃ na hastayoḥ — "as a father lovingly lifts his son, the object of his affection, with his hands."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁷ - kat: this word stands in place of kadā; the Kāśikā statement dvau cāparau varṇavikāranāśau — द्वौ चापरौ वर्णविकारनाशौ — [Kāśikā on Pā. 6-3-109, as read (?)] : "the adding of a new letter, the going before or after of letters, [and] the change of letter, i.e. a letter put in place of an existing one, and the loss of one of the letters: these operations occur in words like prṣodara", so by this the ā of kadā is lost. - kadhapriyaḥ: kathā = praise; "those who delight in it with praise"; root prīñ prītau and kvip; jyāpoḥ saṃjñāchandasoḥ bahulam — ज्यापोः सञ्ज्ञाछन्दसोर्बहुलम् — [Pā. 6-3-63 as read (?)] : in a name or in the Veda, when the latter member follows, ī and āp are shortened, so the ā of kathā is short;

6. Space before the question mark as printed.

7. p. 295 — grammar page, noted briefly

tha becomes dha by Vedic usage; the form kadhapriḥ in the singular; the vocative is unaccented. - dadhidhve: root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; chandasi luṇlañliṭaḥ — छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः — [Pā. 3-4-6 as read (?)] in the Veda liṭ comes after the root in the sense of any tense, here the present; madhyama plural dhvam, ṭi → e. By kṛsṛbhṛvr̥studruśruvo liṭi — कृसृभृवृस्तुद्रुश्रुवो लिटि — [Pā. 7-2-13 as read (?)] these roots [being anudāttopadeśa, with the rule ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt] avoid iṭ — the prohibition of iṭ [for the kṛ-group] is made a restriction (niyama): only these seven roots avoid iṭ in liṭ, the rest take it ("the kṛādi-niyama"); so dhā takes iṭ before liṭ; the accent is that of the suffix. - vṛktabarhiṣaḥ: vṛkta = clipped, barhis = darbha; a bahuvrīhi, "of whom, to whom"; by the sūtra [name printed unclearly (?)] the vocative is unaccented. 8. the print puts the Pada directly beneath the Saṃhitā on the same page, and over it the heading bhāvārtha — a misprint of the heading padapāṭhaḥ, noted and not repeated

9. The Saṃhitā prints gantā with a long final vowel, the Pada ganta with a short one; the grammar below accounts for the lengthening.

Translation of the grammatical tail ¹⁰: Kva — from the word kim with a locative ending, optionally the suffix at; for the kim the substitute kva before at (kvāti); the svarita by tit svaritam. Arthaṃ — root ṛ gatau; the Uṇādi than in the abstract sense, the first syllable acute because it is nit. Ganta — loṭ of gam; the śap elided by bahulaṃ chandasi; for tha the substitute [ta; the print reads tabādeśaḥ where the grammar page has tap [?]] by tapta-nap-tana-thanās ca; therefore, as the suffix is not ñit, the nasal is not lost by the rule beginning anudāttopadeśa...; since the suffix, being pī, is unaccented, the accent is that of the root; in the Saṃhitā the lengthening by dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ. Divāḥ — the ending acute by ūḍidam... Pṛthivyāḥ — the ending acute by udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt. Ranyanti — raṇati is in the sense of sound; śyan by vyatyaya.

Pratipadārtha — "(O Maruts) nūnam — certainly; (idānīm — now) kva — where are you? vaḥ — your; artham — going (to the place of sacrifice); kat — when? divaḥ — from the heaven-world; ganta — set out (towards the earth); pr̥thivyāḥ — from the earth (outwards); na — do not set out; gāvaḥ na — as cows make sound; vaḥ — about you; kva — where else (than our place of sacrifice); raṇyanti — they praise, making sound."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Maruts, where are you now, indeed? When will your going to the place of sacrifice be? Come from the heaven-world to the earth; do not go away from the earth. In what place of sacrifice are the sacrificers praising, making sound as cows do?"

English Translation (the source's own, p. 297)

— "Maruts, where indeed are you at present ? When do you come here ? Depart from heaven and not from the earth. Where do they worship you with sounds of praise as the lowing of the cattle ?"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 297 - artham = r gatau | artham araṇam gamanam — "coming, arrival." - na ganta = na gacchata — "here the ṛṣi prays to the Marut-deities to come from the heaven-world, and prays them not to leave the earth. For the form of the Marut-deities on the earth is very swift and terrible and brings destruction to dwelling-places such as houses; so he may be praying that they should not come in the form seen on the earth (that is, together with clouds made of thunder, hail and lightning) but should come here in their own true form, shining in the heaven-world." ¹¹ - kva vaḥ gāvaḥ na raṇyanti — "the sense is that the sacrificers and others praise you in other places than this one, with a loud sound, as cows low."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹² - kva: from the word kim, with a locative ending, the suffix at optionally by kimo 'ṭ — किमोऽत् — [Pā. 5-3-12 as read [?]]; the locative ending is elided; kim + a; kvāti — क्वाति —

— "O Maruts, where are your most new riches in the form of progeny and cattle? Where are your priceless riches such as diamonds and cat's-eyes? Where are all your auspicious riches such as elephants and horses? (Come to our place of sacrifice with all riches.)"

— "O Maruts, where are your new treasures ? Where are your valuables ? Where are all your gifts of prosperity ?"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 299–300 - navyāṃsi = navatarāṇi, navīyāṃsi — "newer ones." - sumnā = sumnāni — "possessions such as progeny and cattle." Prajā vai paśavaḥ sumnam — "that is: sons, grandsons and other offspring, that is, people, and cattle such as cows and buffaloes, are called riches: there is a śruti sentence [Tai. Saṃ. 3-4-6-6 [?]]. Even in these days, people who are not townsfolk reckon their standing and honour in society, and their wealth and the like, by the wealth of cattle they have — cows, sheep, goats, horses and so on." - suvitā = śobhanāni prāpyāṇi maṇimuktādīni — "priceless things that everyone greatly desires." - saubhagā — "good fortunes: wealth such as elephants and horses."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁵ - sumnā: śeś chandasi bahulam — शेषछन्दसि बहुलम् — [Pā. 6-1-70 as read [?]]: the ś-suffix [the śi ending] is elided, so sumnā is there for sumnāni, with the long ā. - navyāṃsi: after nava, dvivacanavibhajyopapade tarabīyasunau — द्विवचनविभज्योपपदे तरबीयसुनौ — [Pā. 5-3-57 as read [?]] gives īyasun; by yasyeti ca the loss of the a of nava; the loss of the ending is Vedic. - suvitā: suṣṭhu itāni; in the sūtra aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor iyaṇuvaṇau the vārttika tanvādīnām chandasi bahulam upasaṃkhyānam — तन्वादीनां छन्दसि बहुलमुपसङ्ख्यानम् — is read: in the section that lays down uvaṇ, iyaṇ and uvaṇ come variously in the Veda for words beginning with tanu; by this, for the prefix su, uvaṇ: suvitāni; the loss of śi as before. ¹⁶ - saubhagā: prāṇabhṛjātivayovacanaodgātrādibhyo ण् — प्राणभृज्जातिवयोवचनोद्गात्रादिभ्योऽञ् — [Pā. 5-1-129 as read [?]]: in the Translation: "O Maruts, sons of the cow named Ṛṣni, yūyam — you — yady api, even if you were martāsaḥ, men, syātana, were to be so, nevertheless vaḥ stotā, your praiser, the sacrificer, amṛtaḥ syāt, would be immortal: would become a god. Ṛṣnimātaraḥ: those whose mother is Ṛṣni; the kap does not come, since the samāsānta rule is not constant, [though nadyṛtaś ca would give it] (Pā. 5-4-153 [?]). Martāsaḥ: from mṛ [mriyate], the suffix tan by the rule beginning asi-hasi... [?]; the asuk augment of jas by ājjaser asuk. Syātana: liṅ of as, for its ending the substitute tana by tapta-nap-tana-thanās ca; the augment yāsuṭ, acute. Amṛtaḥ: by nañ jaramaramitramṛtāḥ the first syllable of the latter member is acute."

Pratipadārtha — "ṛṣnimātaraḥ — O Maruts, children of the cow called Ṛṣni; yūyam — you; martāsaḥ — as men; yady api syātana — if perchance you were; vaḥ — your; stotā — the devotee who sings your praises; amṛtaḥ — immortal; syāt — would be."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Maruts, children of the cow called Ṛṣni, even if by chance you had belonged to the company of men, still the mortals who sing your praises would become immortals."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 302)

— "Sons of Prisni, if you had been mortals your praiser (worshipper) would have become immortal."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ), p. 302 - "The sense of this Ṛk is a little disjointed. What is the main intention? — O Maruts, even if you were mortals (men liable to death), men like us, who sing your extraordinary qualities, would by the greatness of singing your qualities become deathless, amartyas (gods). To explain that the power of the Maruts is wonderful, the ṛṣi has spoken this kind of comparison." - ṛṣnimātaraḥ — "the Maruts whose mother is Ṛṣni, the cow of the world of the gods; the Marut-deities are well known as the sons of Pr̥ṣni." - martāsaḥ = martyāḥ — "those subject to death: that is, men." - amṛtaḥ = maraṇarahitaḥ devaḥ — "a god, free from death."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁷ - pr̥ṣnimātarah: a bahuvrīhi, "of whom Pr̥ṣni is the mother"; pr̥ṣnimātr ends in ṛ; by nadyrtaś ca — नद्यृत्श्च — [Pā. 5-4-153 as read (?)] the suffix kap comes after a bahuvrīhi that has a nadī-ending or a final ṛ, and being a samāsānta it is obtained; but by the vārttika prateremśvādayas tatpuruṣe [as read; number (?)] the words aṃśu and the rest after prati in a tatpuruṣa are final-acute; in that group the word rājan is read, and by rājāhaḥsakhībhyas̄ tac [Pā. 5-4-91 as read (?)] tac comes after a tatpuruṣa ending in rājan, so final-acuteness is established; therefore the reading of rājan in this group would be pointless, which makes known the paribhāṣā samāsāntavidhir anityaḥ [number as read, doubtful (?)]. Or else: in the sūtra ṛkṣūrabdhūḥpathām ānakṣe [Pā. 5-4-74 as read (?)] the word pathām is used without a samāsānta suffix, which likewise makes known that the samāsānta rule is not constant. Therefore here, by this paribhāṣā, kap does not come. - martāsaḥ: mṛṇ prāṇatyāge; asi-hasi-mṛ... [Uṇ. 3-166 as read (?)] the suffix tan; guṇa, raparatva, jas, and the augment asuk by ājjaser asuk. - syātana: as bhuvī; liṇ; madhyama tha; by tasthasthamipāṃ tām̐tam̐tam̐ the substitute ta; then tana by tapta-nap-tana-thanās̄ ca; śap elided because the root is adādi; by yāsuṭ parasmaipadeṣūdātto nicca — यासुट् परस्मैपदेषूदात्तो ङिच् — [Pā. 3-4-103 as read (?)] the augment yāsuṭ: as + yās + tana; salopa; by śnasor allopaḥ the loss of the root's a; yāsuṭ is acute. - amṛtaḥ: nañ jaramaramitramṛtāḥ — नञ्जरमरमित्रमृताः — [Pā. 6-2-116 as read (?)] when they follow nañ, these latter members (jara, mara, mitra, mṛta) are first-syllable acute. Pratipadārtha — "yavase — (O Maruts) in regard to the pasture-grass that is its support of life; mṛgo na — as a deer [or beast] shows no disregard; vaḥ — your; jaritā — devotee; ajoṣyaḥ — without devotion, one who is without service; mā bhūt — let him not be; (and) yamasya pathā — by the road that goes to Yama's world; mā upa gāt — let him not go."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Maruts, as a deer shows no disregard in regard to the pasture that supports its life, let your devotee never be lacking in devotion to you and in service to you. And let him not go on the road to Yama's world."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 304)

— "Never may your worshipper be indifferent to you as a deer (or animal) is never indifferent to pasture, so that he may not tread the path of Yama."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), pp. 304-305 - yavase — "a place filled with grass fit for grazing; a pasture." - jaritā = stotā — "one who praises." - ajoṣyaḥ — "one who does not praise." - pathā yamasya — "the road of Yama's world. To tread the road to Yama's world is to die, to perish." - Main intention (mukhyābhīprāya) — "No deer ever fails to turn to a pasture rich in grass and water: it does not neglect it; there is no case of its not grazing there. Likewise, let the man who praises you not fail to praise you through disregard — that is, let him praise. Let such a man not take the road of Yama — that is, let him not fall under the power of death."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²¹ - jaritā: root jṛṣ [?] vayohānau; since Yāska says "stutikarmā" (Ni. 10-8 [?]), the action here is praise; ṇvultṛcau — ण्वुल्तृचौ — [Pā. 3-1-133 as read [?]] gives tṛc, which takes iṭ; citaḥ gives the final acute. - bhūt: bhū sattāyām; luṇ; by

Translation of the grammatical tail : Mo ṣu ṇaḥ — the ṣ by suñ..., the ṇ by naś ca dhātusthoruṣubhyaḥ. Durhaṇā — khal after han in the passive-abstract sense by iṣad-duḥ-suṣu...; by the lit accent the syllable before the suffix is acute. Vadhīt — in luṇ the substitute vadha for han [Pā. 2-4-43 [?]]; the augment iṭ with sic; because vadha ends in a, the prohibition of iṭ by ekāca upadeśe... does not apply [since the substitute is not a monosyllable]; when the a is lost, by its sthānivadbhāva the vṛddhi of ato halāder laghoḥ [Pā. 7-2-7 [?]] does not occur; the sic is elided by iṭa iṭi [Pā. 8-2-28 [?]]. Padīṣṭa — root pad gatau; āśīrlīṇ; by chandasy ubhayathā [as read] the s is lost because the form is sāravadhātuka; because it is ārdhadhātuka the augment suṭ; accent of the suffix. Tṛṣṇayā — root ñitṛṣā pipāsāyām; the suffix na, from the Uṇādi rule beginning tṛṣi-kuṣi-rasibhyaḥ kic ca [?] (Uṇ. 3-121 [?]); because nit is carried forward, the first syllable is acute.

Pratipadārtha — "parāparā — (O Maruts) stronger even than the strongest (and for that very reason); durhaṇā — one that no one can kill; nirṛtiḥ — the goddess who rules over the rākṣasas; mo ṣu vadhīt — let her by no means kill us; tṛṣṇayā saha — together with our evil desires; padīṣṭa — let her fall (downwards): let her be destroyed."

22. The Pada prints duḥ-hanā and the bhāṣya durhaṇā: the n/ṇ difference is as printed.

— "O Maruts, may the goddess called Nirṛti, the ruling goddess of the rākṣasas, who is stronger even than the strongest and for that very reason one whom no one can kill, not by any means kill us. May that goddess fall down and be destroyed together with our evil desires."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 307) — "Let not the most powerful and indestructible Nirriti destroy us ; let him perish with our evil desires." ²³

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 307 - parāparā = utkrṣṭād apy utkrṣṭā | atibalā — "exceedingly strong." - nirṛtiḥ — "a deity belonging to the rākṣasa kind. It is the nature of rākṣasas to do harm to men. In the same way the sense is: let that Nirṛti, who belongs to that company of rākṣasas, not cause us harm." - durhaṇā = kenāpi hantum duḥśakyā — "impossible to be killed by anyone." - padiṣṭa = patatu — "let her fall; be destroyed." - trṣṇayā — "hope, evil desire, wicked expectations" — followed by the source's English "evil desires".

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁴ - mo ṣu ṇaḥ: "explained in the passage 'ūrdhvā ū ṣu ṇa ūtaye' (Rg. 1-36-13 [?], as read)." - durhaṇā: root han hiṃsāgatyoh; īṣad-duḥ-suṣu kṛccchrākṛccchrārtheṣu khal — ईषद्दुःसुषु कृच्छ्राकृच्छ्रार्थेषु खल् — [Pā. 3-3-126 as read (?)] : with īṣat, dus, su as upapada, in the senses "difficult" and "not difficult", khal after roots in the abstract and passive senses; the print adds that dus is upapada in the sense of "difficulty" and the others in "ease"; dus + han + a; sasajuṣo ruḥ — ससजुषो रुः — [Pā. 8-2-66] gives ru; ajādyataṣ ṭāp — अजाद्यतष्टाप् — [Pā. 4-1-4] gives ṭāp in the feminine; savarṇadīrgha; suduroḥ pratiṣedho... — the print says that the upasarga status of dur is prohibited for the purpose of ṇatva by a rule beginning suduroḥ pratiṣedhaḥ [as read, (?)], but that this prohibition does not apply in the Veda; so hanteḥ — हन्तेः — [Pā.

23. The pronoun "him" for Nirṛti is as printed.

24. pp. 307–310 — large grammar pages, characterized in outline; the print is very crowded and not every step is reproduced

8-4-22 as read [?]: an n after the r and ṣ of an upasarga becomes ṇ (durhaṇā); by liti — लिति — [Pā. 6-1-193 as read [?]] the syllable before the suffix is acute. - vadhīt: han himsāgatyoh, adādi, luṇ; luṇi ca [as read] gives vadha for han (ending in a); cleḥ sic — च्ले: सिच् — [Pā. 3-1-44 as read [?]]; augment iṭ; [a kārikā on the anudāttopadeśa roots reads han, so han is anudāttopadeśa]; ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt — एकाच उपदेशेऽनुदात्तात् — [Pā. 7-2-10 as read [?]] would prohibit iṭ for a monosyllabic anudātta root; the print then explains, quoting the Kaumudī (the quotation is crowded and it is not transcribed [?]), that, because the singular acaḥ and the word ekāc in that rule imply a single syllable in the upadeśa, the prohibition does not apply to the substitute vadha, which has two syllables; so the augment iṭ comes. Then, as to vṛddhi: ato lopah — अतो लोपः — [Pā. 6-4-48 as read [?]] the a of vadha is lost before an ārdhadhātuka; ato halāder laghoḥ — अतो हलादेर्लघोः — [Pā. 7-2-7 as read [?]] would give optional vṛddhi; but the lost a counts as present by acaḥ parasmin pūrvavidhau — अचः परस्मिन् पूर्वविधौ — [Pā. 1-1-57 as read [?]], and so on; so no vṛddhi; tip; itaś ca [Pā. 3-4-100 as read [?]] loss of the i; asti-sico 'prkte — अस्तिसिचोऽपृक्ते — [Pā. 7-3-96 as read [?]] the augment iṭ; vadh + is + iṭ; iṭa iṭi — इट ईटि — [Pā. 8-2-28 as read [?]] the sic is lost; vadh + i + iṭ; akaḥ savarṇe dīrghaḥ — अकः सवर्णे दीर्घः — [Pā. 6-1-101] the long vowel; the print argues that, though pūrvatrāsiddham — पूर्वत्रासिद्धम् — [Pā. 8-2-1] would make the sic-loss of the Tripādī invisible, the rule sic-lopa ekādeśe siddho vācyaḥ makes it effective; vadh + iṭ = vadhīt; bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi — बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्गयोगेऽपि — [Pā. 6-4-75 as read [?]]: in the Veda the aṭ/āṭ is variously absent even without mā; hence no aṭ. - padīṣṭa: pada gatau, divādi; āśīrlīṇ, the substitute ta; liṇaḥ sīyut — लिङः सीयुट् — [Pā. 3-4-102 as read [?]] the augment sīyut in the ātmanepada: pad + sīy + ta; suṭ tithoḥ — सुट् तिथोः — [Pā. 3-4-107 as read [?]] suṭ; chandasy ubhayathā — छन्दस्युभयथा — [Pā. 3-4-117 as read [?]] the suffix in the Veda is both sārvadhātuka and ārdhadhātuka; the paribhāṣā "an augment is taken together with what it joins" (yenāgamas...) [number as read [?]]; liṇaḥ salopo 'nantiyasya — लिङः सलोपोऽनन्त्यस्य — [Pā. 7-2-79 as read [?]] loss of the non-final s of a sārvadhātuka-named liṇ; since here it is ārdhadhātuka the s of the augment suṭ is not lost; pad + ū + s + ta; lopo vyor vali — लोपो व्योर्वलि — [Pā. 6-1-66] loss of the y; ādeśapratyayayoḥ — आदेशप्रत्यययोः — [Pā. 8-3-59 as read [?]] ṣatva of an s that is a substitute or a suffix-part after iṇ and ku; ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ — षुना षुः — [Pā. 8-4-41 as read [?]] ta → ṭa: padīṣṭa.²⁵ By tiṇ atīṇaḥ the verb would be wholly unaccented, but it begins the third pāda, so it is not so; the ta is acute by the suffix accent. - trṣṇayā: ñitṛṣā pipāsāyām; trṣi-kuṣi-rasibhyaḥ kic ca [Uṇ. 3-[?] as read]; kṛvāpā... [Uṇ. 3-[?], garbled] nit, which is carried forward; so after these roots the suffix na, which is both kit and nit; trṣ + na; because kit, no guṇa; because nit, the first syllable is acute; ṭāp; the instrumental singular. Translation of the grammatical tail ²⁸: Dhanvan — the roots rivi, ravi, dhavi are in the sense of going; because of the indicatory i the augment num; the suffix kanin by the Uṇādi rule beginning kanin-yuvṛṣitakṣi-...; since the suffix is nit the final syllable is acute; the locative ending elided by supām sulug.... Rudriyāsaḥ — "these belong to Rudra": the suffix gha in the sense "this is his" (tasyedam); the augment asuk of jas by ājjaser asuk. Miham — root miha secane; kvip by kvip ca. Kṛṇvanti — root kṛvi in the senses of injuring and making; by dhinvikṛṇvyor a ca the suffix a [u]; in connection with it a substitution at the va [?]; because the a is lost, and what is lost counts as still present, there is no guṇa of the light penultimate vowel.

Pratipadārtha — "tveṣāḥ — brilliant ones; amavantaḥ — mighty ones; rudriyāsaḥ — the Maruts, who belong to Rudra, because they are cherished by Rudra; dhanvan cit — even in the desert; ā — all round; avātām — without wind; miham — rain; kṛṇvanti — they pour down; satyam — (this is) certain."

— "The brilliant and mighty sons of Rudra, that is, the Marut-deities, pour down rain without wind, even in the desert. This is true."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 311)

— "The brilliant and mighty Maruts, cherished by Rudra send down rain without wind (even) upon the desert."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), pp. 311–312 - dhanvan cit = marudeśe 'pi — "a desert in which no rain falls." "On the word dhanvan Yāska has said 'dhanvāntarikṣam dhanvanty asmād āpaḥ' (Ni. 5-5 as read [?]): dhanva means the atmosphere; because rain falls through the atmosphere. The commentator [Sāyaṇa] explains it as desert." - rudriyāsaḥ = rudrasya ime rudrapālitaḥ —

28. characterized; the clause marked [?] is as read

"the Maruts are cherished by Rudra"; and in several passages they are described as the sons of Rudra. These two ṛks support the point: (1) प्र ये शुम्भन्ते जनयो न सप्तयो यामवृद्रस्य सूनवः सुदंससः । (R̥g. 1-64-2, as read [?]) — pra ye śumbhante janayo na saptayo yāman rudrasya sūnavaḥ sudamśasaḥ — editorial and tentative: "who adorn themselves on their going, like women, like horses, the sons of Rudra, skilful in deed"; (2) इदं पित्रे मरुतामुच्यते वचः स्वादोः स्वादीयो रुद्राय वर्धनम् । (R̥g. 1-114-6, as read [?]) — idaṃ pitre marutām ucyate vacaḥ svādoḥ svādīyo rudrāya vardhanam — editorial and tentative: "this word is spoken to the father of the Maruts, sweeter than the sweet, a strengthening for Rudra." - miham = secanam — "rain, the rainfall." - avātām = vāyurahitām — "even though the wind does not help; the intention of the use of this word here is not clear." ²⁹

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁰ - dhanvan: rivi ravi dhavi gatyarthāḥ; idito num dhātoḥ — इदितो नुम् धातोः — [Pā. 7-1-58 as read [?]]: num after the last vowel of a root with indicative i; only the n remains: dhanv; kanin-yuvṛṣitakṣirājidhanvidyupratidivaḥ — [Uṇ. 1-156 as read [?]]: kanin after these roots, of which an remains; dhanv + an; the suffix is nit, so the last syllable is acute; supām sulug for the locative. - rudriyāsaḥ: rudrasya ime rudriyāḥ; the suffix gha in the sense tasyedam — तस्येदम् — [Pā. 4-3-120 as read [?]]; āyaneyīniyiaḥ phadḥhakhachaghām pratyayādīnām — आयनेयीनीयियः फढखछघां प्रत्ययादीनाम् — [Pā. 7-1-2] gives iya for gha; yasyeti ca the loss of the a; jas with the augment asuk. - miham: miha secane; kvip by kvip ca; accusative singular. - kṛṇvanti: kṛvi hiṃsākaraṇayoś ca; laṭ, jhi; by jho 'ntaḥ [Pā. 7-1-3 as read [?]] the substitute ant; num from the indicative i; kṛṇv + anti; dhinvikṛṇvyor a ca — धिन्विकृण्व्योर च — [Pā. 3-1-80 as read [?]]: in the Vedic words dhinv-, kṛṇv- the suffix u and an a at their end; the print then argues at length about whether guṇa of the u is barred: ato lopaḥ [Pā.

Translation: "In the [rain-wishing] kārīrī [iṣṭi], for the offering 'a seven-potsherd cake for the Maruts', the ṛk vāśreva vidyut is the anuvākya. It is laid down in the section called varṣakāmeṣṭi: 'vāśreva vidyun mimāti, [and] parvataś cin mahi vṛddho bibhāya' (Āś. 2-13 [?]). Vāśreva — like a cow that cries out [with overflowing breasts [?]] — the lightning, visible in the cloud, mimāti, makes a sound; for thunder in the cloud at the time of lightning is well known. Mātā, the mother, the cow, vatsaṃ na, as [she] a calf, siṣakti: this lightning serves the Maruts. Siṣaktiḥ has the sense of serving: 'siṣakti, sacate, for one who serves' (Ni. 5-21 [?]), as Yāska has said. Yad — because eṣām, the rain that belongs to these Maruts, asarji, is let loose [= is poured] at the time of the lightning together with thundering. Therefore the service of the Maruts by the lightning is [shown to be] fitting." ³³

33. The print seems to have prastuta° for the word given as prasnuta°; It is read so because the Kannada pratipadārtha says "with overflowing milk" [?].

Translation of the grammatical tail : Vāśreva — root vāśr śabde; the suffix rak by the Uṇādi rule beginning spāyi-tañci-.... Mimāti — mān māne śabde ca; parasmaipada by vyatyaya; ślu [for śap] as the root is of the juhotyādi type; the i of the reduplicate by bhṛñām it [Pā. 7-4-76 (?)]. Siṣakti — root śaca samavāye; śap elided in the present by bahulaṃ chandasi; i in the reduplicate by bahulaṃ chandasi. Asarji — root srja visarge; luṇ in the passive; ciṇ by ciṇ bhāvakarmaṇoḥ [Pā. 3-1-66 (?)]; the ta lost by ciṇo luk [Pā. 6-4-104 (?)]; guṇa; the augment aṭ is acute; no nighāta because of the connection with yat.

Pratipadārtha — "vāśrā iva — like a cow that cries out [from love of her calf] (and whose milk overflows); vidyut — the lightning (appearing in the midst of the cloud); mimāti — makes a sound; mātā — whichever cow, as a mother; vatsaṃ na — as one tends her calf; siṣakti — [the lightning] serves [the Maruts]; yat — for which reason (because the lightning serves the Maruts); vṛṣṭiḥ — rain; asarji — is let loose."

— "As a cow lows lovingly for her calf and goes to make it suckle, so the lightning in the middle of the cloud thunders, and because of that the rain falls."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 315)

— "Like a parent cow that bellows for its calf, the lightning roars and hence the rain is set free by the Maruts."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 315 - "In the rain-wishing sacrifice called Kārīrī, when the seven-potsherd cake for the Marut deities is offered, this ṛk vāśreva vidyut is to be used as the puro 'nuvākyā mantra: so it is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section called varṣakāmeṣṭi, by the sūtra 'vāśreva vidyun mimāti (Ṛg. 1-38-8) parvataś cin mahi vṛddho bibhāya (Ṛg. 5-60-3 [as read])'." - vāśreva mātā vatsaṃ na — "like a cow with sound: a cow going along calling for her calf. Here the cow, with her udder full of milk, goes lowing to her calf to make it suckle; just so, when the Marut-deities make a great sound of lightning in the middle of the cloud, they pour down the rain: this is the sense."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁴ - vāśreva: vāśr śabde, divādi; the Uṇādi sūtra beginning spāyitañci-vañci-śaki-kṣipi-kṣudi-srpi-trpi-drpi-vasu... [a long list of roots; the print counts them, the number not read [?]; Uṇ. 2-170 as read [?]]: after these roots rak; ṭāp; savarṇadīrgha; vāśrā iva = vāśreva, a compound with iva, always compounded. - mimāti: māñ māne śabde ca; being ñit the ātmanepada is due by anudāttañita ātmanepadam — अनुदात्तङित आत्मनेपदम् — [Pā. 1-3-72 as read [?]]; here parasmaipada has come in its place; laṭ, tip; juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ — जुहोत्यादिभ्यः श्लुः — [Pā. 2-4-75 as read [?]]: śap is elided; ślau — श्लौ — [Pā. 6-1-10 as read [?]] doubling; mā-mā + ti; hrasvaḥ shortens the reduplicate; bhrñām it — भृजामित् — [Pā. 7-4-76 as read [?]]: by the plural, following the kapiñjalādihikaraṇa principle, the reduplicate of three roots beginning with bhrñ (bhrñ, māñ, ohāñ) takes i: hence the a of the first m-syllable becomes i: mimāti. - siṣakti: śaca samavāye; laṭ, tip; bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 2-4-73 as read [?]] śap → ślu; doubling sac + sac + ti, the c of the reduplicate lost; bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 7-4-78 as read [?]] i in the reduplicate: sisac + ti; coḥ kuḥ — चोः कुः — [Pā. 8-2-30 as read [?]] c → k: sisak + ti; dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ [Pā. 6-1-64] the s; ādeśapratyayayoḥ [Pā. 8-3-59 as read [?]] ṣ for the s after i: siṣakti. - asarji: srja visarge; luñ with the sense of the passive; bhāvakarmaṇoḥ — भावकर्मणोः — [Pā. 1-3-13 as read [?]] ātmanepada; luñ + ta; cli luñi [Pā. 3-1-43 as read [?]] cli; ciṇ bhāvakarmaṇoḥ [Pā. 3-1-66 as read [?]] ciṇ for cli, of which only i remains; srj + i + ta; ciṇo luk — चिणो लुक् — [Pā. 6-4-104 as read [?]] ta elided; pugantalaghūpadhasya ca [Pā. 7-3-86 as read [?]] guṇa: sarj + i; luñlanlṛñkṣv adudāttaḥ — लुङ्लङ्लृङ्क्ष्वदुदात्तः — [Pā.

6-4-71 as read [?]] the acute augment aṭ at the beginning: asarji; yadvṛttān nityam — यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम् — [Pā. 8-1-66 as read [?]] prevents the verb from being unaccented. Rik 8 ends here (| | 8 | |).

Pratipadārtha — "(marutaḥ — the Maruts) yat — when; pr̥thivīm — the earth; vyundanti — they drench, so that it is filled as if with rushing water (when, before that); udavāhena — bearing water; parjanyaena — with the cloud; divā cit — even by day; tamaḥ kṛṇvanti — they make darkness."

Bhāvārtha

English Translation (the source's own, p. 317)

— "Even in the day they create darkness with the water-bearing cloud when they drench the earth."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 317

— "When black clouds fill the atmosphere, the darkness [is there] even in the daytime. At such a time the Maruts make the rain pour and make the earth wet with water: such is the main intention."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁷ - kṛṇvanti: "explained in the earlier mantra Rik 7." - udavāhena: root vaha prāpaṇe; "udakāni vahati, so udavāhaḥ": karmany aṇ — कर्मण्यण् — [Pā. 3-2-1 as read (?]): when a word in the case of the object is upapada, the suffix aṇ comes after the root. The print adds that the analysing sentence is of two kinds, laukika and alaukika: the laukika is what everyone uses in the world; the alaukika is the one used only by grammarians, separating base and suffix for the purposes of the śāstra. In the laukika sentence one says udakāni vahati; in the alaukika one has udaka + as + vah + aṇ, where the genitive-case ending, not the accusative, is what is wanted, because a word ending in a kṛt is not used in the laukika sentence; by karṭṛkarmanoh kṛti — कर्तृकर्मणोः कृति — [Pā. 2-3-65 as read (?)] the sixth case-ending comes after the word that expresses the agent or the object of a kṛt-base; hence the sixth case after udaka. Ata upadhāyāḥ — अत उपधायाः — [Pā. 7-2-116 as read (?]): vṛddhi of the short a of the penultimate before a ñit/ṇit suffix: vah → vāh; udaka + as + vāha. Tatropapadam saptamīstham — तत्रोपपदं सप्तमीस्थम् — [Pā. 3-1-92 as read (?]): the word in the locative-sense in the dhātvadhikāra is the upapada; upapadam atin — उपपदमतिङ् — [Pā. 2-2-19 as read (?)] compound with a word that is not a verb: a tatpuruṣa; supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ — सुपो धातुप्रातिपदिकयोः — [Pā. 2-4-71] the loss of as: udakavāha; udakasyodaḥ saṃjñāyām — उदकस्योदः सञ्ज्ञायाम् — [Pā. 6-3-57 as read (?]): in a name the udaka of the first member becomes uda (here a name for a cloud). Translation: "Adha — then, after the svanāt, the sound [belonging to the Maruts], their sound in the form of thunder — pāṛthivam, belonging to the earth — viśvam sadma, every house — ā, all round, arejata ['shook': so the remainder is supplied]. Likewise mānuṣāḥ, men dwelling in houses, prārejanta — shook greatly. Adha: the dha [for tha] is Vedic. Sadma: root ṣadl in the senses of dissolving, going, sinking; manin by anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante. Pāṛthivam: 'belonging to the earth'; the suffix añ of the prāgdīvyatīya group after pṛthivī by the vārttika pṛthivyā ñāñau [Pā. 4-1-84 [?]]; being ñit it is first-syllable acute. Arejanta: root rejṛ kampane."

Pratipadārtha — "marutām — of the Maruts; svanād adha — immediately upon the sound in the form of thunder; pāṛthivam — belonging to the earth-world; viśvam sadma — every house too; ā (arejata) — shook all round (even so); mānuṣāḥ — all the men (who dwell in the houses) too; prārejanta — trembled completely."

Bhāvārtha

— "Through the clouds, as soon as the Maruts' sound in the form of thunder comes, every house dwelling on the earth shakes. In the same way all the people who live in those houses tremble completely."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 320)

— "At the roaring of the Maruts, every house on the earth shakes and men also greatly tremble."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 320 - svanāt — "when rain falls with a sound, or with thunder, the wind blows violently, with sound, and terribly." - arejanta — "even houses shake, unable to bear the blow of the wind. People, drenched by the rain-water and struck by the blows of the wind, walk shivering with the cold: this is the sense. In the earlier ṛks, and in this ṛk, there is a description of the first monsoon rain [muṅgāru maḷe] that comes together with hail, lightning and black clouds."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁸ - adha: the tha of the word atha has become dha by Vedic usage. - sadma: root ṣadl viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu; by dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ the s; anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante — अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यन्ते — [Pā. 3-2-75 as read (?)] : the four suffixes manin, kvanip, vanip, vic are seen after roots also [other than the ones taught]; so manin; the suffix being nit, the print says pratyayānta ādyudātta ("the end of the suffix: first-syllable acute") — as printed. - pārthivam: prath prakhyāne; pratheḥ śivan samprasāraṇaṃ ca — प्रथेः शिवन् सम्प्रसारणं च — [Uṇ. 1-154 (?), as read]: the suffix śivan after prath, with samprasāraṇa of the r, giving r: pr̥thiv-; ṣidgaurādibhyaś ca — षिद्गौरादिभ्यश्च — [Pā. 4-1-41 as read (?)] : ñiṣ after a root with indicatory ṣ and after the gaurādi group: pr̥thivī; pr̥thivyā ñāñau — the vārttika [Pā. 4-1-83, vārttika 2 (?), as read]: in the prāgdīvyatīya senses the suffixes ñ and añ come after the word pr̥thivī; so añ: pr̥thivī + a; yasyeti ca the loss of ī; taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ — तद्धितेष्वचामादेः — [Pā. 7-2-117 as read (?)] : when a ñit or nit suffix follows, the first vowel of the base takes vṛddhi: r → ār: pārthiva; the taddhita suffix is ñit; ñnityādir nityam — ज्नित्यादिर्नित्यम् — [Pā. 6-1-197] gives the first-syllable acute;

accusative singular. - arejanta: rejṛ kampane; lañ, jha; jho 'ntaḥ
the substitute ant; śap; the augment aṭ. Rik 10 ends here (| | 10

Translation: "O Maruts, you, accompanied by vīḷupāñibhiḥ, strong hands, rodhasvatīr anu, along the rivers that have banks, akhidrayāmabhiḥ, with unwearied goings, yātem — go indeed. Vīḷupāñibhiḥ — vīḷu is a name for strength, since it is read among its names [vīḷu ... as read, doubtful [?]]; and by it its possessors are indicated [?]; they are strong and they are hands [or: those whose hands are strong]; the accent is final by samāsasya. Rodhasvatīḥ — root rudhir āvaraṇe: 'ruṇaddhi srotaḥ', that which checks the stream is rodhaḥ, the bank; as is said, 'rodhaḥ kūlaṃ niruṇaddhi srotaḥ' (Ni. 6-1 [?]); since the suffix asun is nī the first syllable is acute; the rivers that have them are rodhasvatyaḥ; mād upadhāyāḥ gives va for matup; nīp by ugitaś ca; because matup and nīp are pit they are unaccented, so only the accent of asun remains. Yāta — root yā prāpaṇe; the śap elided because of the adādi class. īm — particles such as ca are unaccented. Akhidrayāmabhiḥ — root khida dainye; the suffix rak by spāyitañci...: 'khidraṃ yānti', those who go in weakness; na khidrayāmāna, the unwearied; the accent of the first member as an indeclinable."

Pratipadārtha — "marutaḥ — O Maruts (you); vīlupāṇibhiḥ — having capable hands; citrāḥ — charming (from being filled with trees and creepers of many kinds); rodhasvatīḥ anu — along the rivers that have banks; akhidrayāmabhiḥ — with goings that have no hindrance; yātām — go about, certainly."

Bhāvārtha — "O Maruts, with strong hands (vṛdha-hasta; the print adds 'pādagaḷinda?', 'with feet?' [?]), go along the rivers with their banks, charming from being full of trees and creepers of many kinds, without hindrance."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 322–323 - vīlupāṇibhiḥ = vṛdhahastaiḥ [as read; the second word of the gloss is printed with a doubtful letter [?]] — "the word pāṇi indicates the sense 'hand', but here the sense 'feet' seems called for; for here the going of the Maruts is spoken of, and since people and creatures move by their feet, it is impossible to say that they go with the hands. The ṛṣi's intention may be 'feet'. On this point, in the ṛk सेदग्निर्गनी रत्यस्त्वन्यान् यत्र वाजी तनयो वीळुपाणिः । sed agnir agnīm ratyas tv anyān yatra vājī tanayo vīlupāṇiḥ (Ṛg. 2-1-14 [?], as read) — the word pāṇi has to be taken in the sense of 'feet'." ⁴¹ - rodhasvatīḥ

40. from the foot of p. 322

41. Reference numerals and the text of the quotation as printed, with doubt; the quotation is left untranslated by the source. Mine and tentative: "that Agni [goes] beyond other fires, where the vigorous steed, the offspring, is strong-footed" — the gloss is uncertain, as the Sanskrit is crowded [?].

— "rivers with banks: that is, river-banks, the sides of rivers." - akhidrayāmabhiḥ = akhinnayāmabhiḥ — "with unbroken goings, with unobstructed movements." The source adds in English: "with unobstructed or unbroken progress."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴² - vīḷupāṇibhiḥ: among the names of strengths in the Nirukta (Ni. 2-9-14 [?], as read) vīḷu [the print has vīḷu here] is read; therefore it means "strength". If only that sense were taken, the connection with pāṇi would be blocked; so, by implication (lakṣaṇā), the sense "possessing strength" is taken: "with strong hands". The print compares gaṅgāyāṃ ghoṣaḥ ("a cowherd village on the Gaṅgā"), where the literal sense is blocked and gaṅgā is taken as "the bank of the Gaṅgā"; and says that here too, as the sense given in the Nirukta is blocked, implication must be relied upon. Viśeṣaṇaṃ viśeṣyeṇa bahulam — विशेषणं विशेष्येण बहुलम् — [Pā. 2-1-57 as read [?]]: a qualifier compounds with its qualified noun of the same case; it is a tatpuruṣa, and by tatpuruṣaḥ samānādhikaraṇaḥ karmadhārayaḥ — तत्पुरुषः समानाधिकरणः कर्मधारयः — [Pā. 1-2-42 as read [?]] it is called karmadhāraya; by samāsasya — समासस्य — [Pā. 6-1-223 as read [?]] the last syllable of the compound is acute. - rodhasvatīḥ: root rudhir āvaraṇe (rudhādi), "āvaraṇa" meaning stopping — stopping what? From the sense, the flow: "ruṇaddhi, so rodhaḥ"; the sentence rodhaḥ kūlaṃ niruṇaddhi srotaḥ (Ni. 6-1 [?]) means "rodhaḥ is the bank, because it stops the stream". By this Nirukta passage the sense stated before is confirmed. Sarvadhātubhyo 'sun — सर्वधातुभ्योऽसुन् — [Uṇ. 4-188 [?], as read]: asun; rudh + as; pugantalaghūpadhasya ca [Pā. 7-3-86 as read [?]] gives guṇa; asun is nit, so the end of the suffix is acute [as printed: pratyayānta ādyudātta]; "rodhaḥ belongs to these [rivers]" — tad asyāsty asminn iti matup — तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप् — [Pā. 5-2-94 as read [?]]; rodhas + mat, rodhas ends in as; mādupadhāyāś ca matorvo 'yavādibhyaḥ — मादुपधायाश्च मतोर्वोऽयवादिभ्यः — [Pā. 8-2-9 as read [?]]: after a word that ends in m or a/r or has

m, a as penultimate [the print's wording is crowded], the m of matup becomes v: rodhasvat; the u of matup is an indicatory letter, so it is ugit; ugitaś ca — उगितश्च — [Pā. 4-1-6 as read [?]]: ñīp in the feminine after a ugit base; matup and ñīp are both pit and so unaccented, by anudāttau suppitau — अनुदात्तौ सुप्पितौ — [Pā. 3-1-4 as read [?]]. - yāta: yā prāpaṇe, adādi, loṭ, tha; the ta substitute by tasthasthamipāṇ tām̐tām̐tām̐; adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ — अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः — [Pā. 2-4-72 as read [?]] the śap is elided; because the word is at the beginning of a pāda it is not wholly unaccented; the ta is acute by the suffix accent. - īm: this is in the cādi group; by cādayo 'nudāttaḥ — चादयोऽनुदात्ताः — [Phīṭ. sūtra 4 [?], as read] it is unaccented; in the Saṃhitā yāta + īm by ād guṇaḥ — आद्गुणः — [Pā. 6-1-87 as read [?]]: when a or ā is followed by a vowel of a different kind, guṇa is the single substitute: so in place of the gutturo-palatal ā and ī the gutturo-palatal e, which has the guṇa name, comes: yātem; since this single substitute has come in place of an acute and an unaccented vowel, by ekādeśa udāttēnodāttaḥ it is acute. - akhidrayāmabhiḥ: khida dainye; the suffix rak by spāyitañci... — the print says this sūtra was given in full in the eighth ṛk of this very sūkta [see Rik 8]; "yā prāpaṇe: khidraṃ yānti, those who go in weakness: khidrayāmānaḥ"; anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante gives manin; na khidrayāmānaḥ, a nañ-compound; nalopo nañ — नलोपो नञः — [Pā. 6-3-73 as read [?]] the loss of the n of nañ [before a vowel]; the accent of the first member as an indeclinable. Translation: "O Maruts, eṣām — of these — vaḥ — your —

Pratipadārtha — "eṣāṃ vaḥ — (O Maruts) of these, your; nemayaḥ — the outer rims of the chariot wheels; sthīrāḥ — firm; santu — let them be (so); rathāḥ — chariots; aśvāsaḥ — horses (let them be steady); abhīśavaḥ — (your) fingers [printed ugurugaḷu — which would mean 'nails' (?)]; susaṃskṛtāḥ — (fit to hold the bridles of the horses) adorned and well-trained (let them be)."

— "O Maruts, let the outer rims of your chariot-wheels be firm. Let your chariots and your horses be steady. Let your fingers [printed as in the pratipadārtha], graceful as befits your strength, have adornments fit for holding the bridles of the horses, and be skilled."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 325)

— "May the fellies of your wheels be firm ; may your chariots and their horses be steady and your fingers well-skilled in holding the reins."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 326 - nemayaḥ — "the outer rims of the wheels of a chariot." The source adds in English: "the fellies of a chariot wheel ; the outer rims of the wheels." "The word nemi is read in many ṛks of the Ṛgveda:" (the six quotations follow in the print, left untranslated by the source; Devanagari and IAST from the print, reference numerals as read [?], and glosses editorial and tentative): 1. सेदु राजा क्षयति चर्षणीनामरान्न नेमिः परि ता बभूव ॥ — sed u rājā kṣayati carṣaṇīnām arān na nemiḥ pari tā babhūva (Rg. 1-32-15 [?]) — "that king rules over the peoples; like a rim [round] spokes, he has encompassed all these" (editorial and tentative). 2. यस्मीमनु क्रतुना विश्वथा विभुरान्न नेमिः परिभूरजायथाः [?] — yasmīm anu kratunā viśvathā vibhur arān na nemiḥ paribhūr ajāyathāḥ (Rg. 1-141-9 [?]) — the print reads as given; "...by [your] will, everywhere pervasive, like a rim [round] spokes you were born encompassing" (editorial, very tentative: the Sanskrit is uncertain [?]). 3. परि विश्वानि काव्या नेमिश्चक्रमिवाभवत् । — pari viśvāni kāvyā nemiś cakram ivābhavat (Rg. 2-5-3 [?]) — "he encompassed all the poetic works as a rim a wheel" (editorial and tentative). 4. अग्ने नेमिरां इव देवाँस्त्वं परिभूरसि । — agne nemir arāṁś iva devāṁś tvam paribhūr asi (Rg. 5-13-6 [?]) ⁴⁴ — "Agni, as a rim [round] spokes, you encompass the gods" (editorial and tentative). 5. आ व इन्द्रं पुरुहूतं नमे गिरा नेमिं तष्टेव सुद्रवम् । [?] — ā va indram puruhūtaṁ name girā nemiṁ taṣṭeva sudrvam [?] (Rg. 7-32-10 [?]) — ⁴⁵: "I bow to Indra, much invoked, with a song, as a carpenter [bends] a rim" (editorial, very tentative). 6. तं नेमिमृभवो यथा नमस्व सहूतिभिः ॥ — taṁ nemim ṛbhavo yathā namasva sahūtibhiḥ (Rg. 8-61-3 [?]) — "bow to him, as the Ṛbhus [bend] a rim, with joint invocations" (editorial, very tentative). "etc. This nemi is made of a hard wood called sadru [as read [?]] and bent." - susaṃskṛtāḥ — "well-trained [cennāgi paḷagida]." English added by the source: "well-trained, well-skilled &c." - abhīśavaḥ — "abhīśu also has the senses 'arm' (Ni. 3-8 [?]) and 'ray' (Ni. 2-13 [?]); but since the word abhīśavaḥ is read among the twenty-two names of the fingers beginning with agruvaḥ aṅgyaḥ, the commentator has taken for abhīśavaḥ in this ṛk the sense 'fingers'."

44. the print has agne

45. the last word is printed sadvram and is uncertain

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁶ - susaṃskṛtāḥ: root ḍukṛñ karāṇe; with the prefix saṃ, kta in the senses of object etc. by niṣṭhā [Pā. 3-2-102 as read [?]]; saṃ + kṛ + ta; by saṃparibhyām karotau bhūṣaṇe — सम्परिभ्यां करोतौ भूषणे — [Pā. 6-1-137 as read [?]] the augment suṭ for kṛ after the prefixes saṃ, pari in the sense of ornament; the print then says that the vṛttikāras read samparyupebhyah [as in the bhāṣya], which is not agreeable to the Mahābhāṣya; by suṭkāṭ pūrvah — सुट्कात्पूर्वः — [Pā. 6-1-135 as read [?]] and the Mahābhāṣya's statement "saṃparibhyām iti naiṣā pañcamī | kā tarhi | tṛtīyā" [as read]; "some..." ⁴⁷

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 38.12, continued ⁴⁸ - susaṃskṛtāḥ, concluded: the print goes on to say that in the sūtra upāt pratiyatnavaikṛtavākyādhyāhāreṣu [as read, crowded [?]] the word ca is read, so that even with the prefix upa the augment suṭ is established in the senses of ornament and of relation, and that the vṛttikāras explain in the Bhāṣya tradition the point of the reading upa; the Śekhara [commentator] does not accept this: the passage of the Śekhara "some do not allow suṭ after upāt [or pra] in the senses of ornament and relation, and do not read ca" is quoted to make the earlier points clear. ⁴⁹ - abhiśavaḥ: aśū vyāptau, with the prefix abhi; kṛvāpājimisvadisādhyaśūbhya uṇ — कृवापाजिमिस्वदिसाध्यशूभ्य उण् — [Uṇ. 1-1 as read [?]]: the suffix uṇ after the root aś; prṣodarādīni yathopadiṣṭam — पृषोदरादीनि यथोपदिष्टम् — [Pā. 6-3-109 as read [?]]: the Kāśikā authors say "the addition of a letter, the transposition of letters, and two other [processes], the change and the loss of a letter — [these are] the five kinds, in which a root is joined with its sense in excess: so says the Nirukta"; here a change of the vowel into an i-form has come. The Kaumudī gives examples: "haṃsaḥ from addition of a letter, siṃhaḥ from transposition of letters, gūḍhotmā from change of a letter, pr̥ṣodaram from loss of a letter"; in the bahuvrīhi gūḍha ātmā yasya saḥ a u has come in place of the ā, so this is an example of change of letter; not of transposition; therefore here it is proper to say that the change into the form of i has come. Abhīśavaḥ abhyaśnuvate karmāṇi (Ni. 4-8 [?]): "the things that get works, i.e. do them": it is well known that the hands do works; therefore abhīśavaḥ means hands; the Nirukta author means that, as said before, this form is established from the root aś. Translation: "O company of priests, tanā — with tanayā, speech that sets out the nature of the deities — girā, with speech, brahmaṇaspatiṃ — the protector of the mantra, or of the food whose mark is the oblation, the host of the Maruts — and agniṃ — and Agni — darśataṃ, beautiful to see — mitraṃ na, [and] also Mitra [as a friend] — jarāyai, to praise, accha, facing [them], vada, speak, say. Accha: in the Saṃhitā the lengthening by nipātasya ca. Vada: in the Saṃhitā the long vowel by dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ. Tanā: root tanu vistāre: 'tanoti', one that spreads the greatness of the deity, is tanā; the suffix ac of the pacādi class; because of its belonging to the vṛṣādi class the first syllable is acute; the substitute ḍā for the instrumental. Girā: the ending is acute by sāvekāca. Brahmaṇaḥ: genitive; in the Saṃhitā the s by patiputra...."

Pratipadārtha — "tanā — (O priests, [with speech] fit to describe the nature of the deities) capable of describing; girā — with speech; brahmaṇaspatiṃ — the host of the Maruts, protectors of the mantra and also of the food in the form of the oblation;

agnim — Agni too; darśatam — the beautiful one; mitram — Mitra; jarāyai — in order to praise; acchā — facing [those deities]; vada — speak clearly (the praise)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O priests! With words fit to describe their nature, standing facing the host of the Maruts, who protect both the mantra and the food in the form of oblation, and Agni, and Mitra of beautiful form, together with that deity, recite your praises clearly."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 328)

— "Sing forth in uninterrupted speech in order to glorify Brahmanaspati (or the Maruts, lords of prayer or of the Sacrificial food) and Agni as well as the handsome Mitra."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 329 - acchā vada = ābhimukhyena vada — "speak, praising particularly." - tanā = tanayā, devatāsvarūpaṃ prakāśayantyā — "that which spreads, or that which makes known the nature of the deities." - jarāyai = stotum — "in order to praise." - brahmaṇaḥ patim — "brahma means praise, and also food. Brahmanaspati means the host of the Maruts who are lords over praise or over food: so the commentator has explained. If one wishes, one may explain this word also as the deity named Brahmanaspati." - darśatam = darśanīyam — "beautiful to look at."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵² - acchā: a nipāta; nipātasya ca — निपातस्य च — [Pā. 6-3-136 as read (?)] : in a mantra a nipāta takes the long vowel: so the long vowel. - vada: vada vyaktāyāṃ vāci; loṭ, sip, the substitute hi; śap: vad + a + hi; ato heḥ — अतो हेः — [Pā. 6-4-105 as read (?)] : hi is elided after a short a; dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ — द्व्यचोऽतस्तिष्ठः — [Pā. 6-3-135 as read (?)] : in a mantra the a of a tiñ-word that has two vowels is lengthened: so the long vowel. - tanā:

52. pp. 329–, grammar pages, characterized; the long page 330 is very crowded

root tasu [print; = tanu] vistāre, the first root of the tanādi class; "tanoti = spreads"; spreads what? — "the greatness of the deity", which is suited to the context; the Vedabhāṣya says "tanoti (the greatness of the deity) vistārayatīti tanā". Nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ — नन्दिग्रहिपचादिभ्यो ल्युणिन्यचः — [Pā. 3-1-134 as read [?]]: by the paribhāṣā yathāsaṃkhyam anudeśaḥ samānām the senses are: lyu after nandi etc., ṇini after grahi etc., ac after pacādi; when ac comes after tan in the pacādi sense: tan + a = tana. This belongs to the vṛṣādi group; vṛṣādīnām ca — वृषादीनां च — [Pā. 6-1-203 as read [?]]: the vṛṣādi is an ākṛtigaṇa, a group not wholly enumerated; the print explains that the words are listed only as examples (kṛtyā — avayavaviśeṣeṇa gāṇyate = parigāṇyate), so a word whose first-syllable acute is not otherwise established is to be taken, by looking at the kind of word, as belonging to the group; hence tana is first-syllable acute. The instrumental singular: supām sulug..., the substitute ḍā, the ḍ an indicatory letter; loss, tana + ā; by the power of the ḍit the ṭi, the a of tana, is lost: tan + ā = tanā. - girā: root gṛ nigaraṇe; kvip ca gives kvip; ṛta id dhātoḥ — ऋत इद्धातोः — [Pā. 7-1-100 as read [?]]: for the r of a root-final r the substitute i, and the r follows: gir; instrumental singular ṭā: gir + ā = girā; in the locative plural sup, gṛṣu is the form; halica — हलि च — [Pā. 8-2-77 as read [?]]: before a consonant the penultimate ik of a root ending in r or v is lengthened [rule from the eighth adhyāya]. The print then argues at length, concerning the sāvekāca sūtra (sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ — सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिविभक्तिः — [Pā. 6-1-168 as read [?]]) and the Bhāṣya's discussion of whether su, in the sūtra, means the nominative singular or the locative plural, quoting sāvikṛtā kim idaṃ prathamaiḥ kavacanasya grahaṇam... [heavily crowded; not reproduced [?]] and the example of the participle of yā, yān, yātsu, yātā.⁵³

53. The continuation is on p. 331, not yet written.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 38.13, continued ⁵⁴ - girā, continued: the long discussion of the sāvekāca sūtra goes on. The print argues about the sense of su in the Bhāṣya's question "kim idaṃ prathamaikavacanasya grahaṇam āhosvit saptamībahuvacanasya" and of the word ekācaḥ in the sūtra: if ekācaḥ were not said, the ending in rājñā would be acute, since it follows rājan; with it, the rule applies to the ending after a base that is monosyllabic in the form that has the case ending; examples discussed are rājñā, dvābhyām, dos (doṣabhyām, dorbhyām), keṣu, kābhyām, abhiḥ, eṣām, keṣu, āsu + eṣu, with the interplay of sthānivadbhāva and of the question whether the rule is to take account of the form (rūpagrahaṇa) or not, and with the remark that in the world the ending is acute, while in the Veda the unaccented (sarvānudātta) forms are to be explained by Vedic usage. ⁵⁵ - brahmaṇaḥ: patiputrapṛṣṭhapārapadapayaspoṣeṣu — पतिपुत्रपृष्ठपारपदपयस्पोषेषु — [Pā. 8-3-53 as read (?)]: when words such as pati follow, the visarga belonging to a genitive becomes s; so in the Saṃhitā the visarga becomes s. Translation: "O company of priests, in your own mouth (āsyē) ślokaṃ, a praise-song, mimīhi — compose, make it. And tātanaḥ — spread that śloka. Pratipadārtha — "āsye — in your mouth; ślokaṁ — the praise-song; mimihi — compose; (taṁ ca śloke — that praise-song); parjanya iva — as Parjanya spreads the water by sending down rain; tatanaḥ — spread it out and sing; ukthyam — fit for praise; gāyatram — the sūkta that stands in the Gāyatrī metre; gāya — recite."

— "Composing the praise-song in your mouth, sing it out and spread it as Parjanya sends down rain and spreads the water. Recite the sūkta in the Gāyatrī metre that is fit for praise."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 333)

— "Compose a verse in your mouth, spread it out like a cloud spreading rain ; chant that verse like a verse of Gayatri metre."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 333 - mimihi — "compose, make; compose." (the source adds the English "compose"). - śloka — "praise, sūkta, sentence. Because the word śloka is read among the fifty-seven names of speech beginning with dhārā (Ni. 1-[?]-[?], as read), śloka means a sentence in the form of praise." - parjanya iva tatanaḥ — "as rain falls on the earth and the water spreads over every place, spread out the praise-sentence you have composed: this is the intention." - gāyatram ukthyam — "ukthya means: recite the śāstra-mantras, the ṛks of the Gāyatrī metre that praise the deities: so the sense."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵⁶ - mimīhi: root māñ māne, of the juhotyādi class; it is ñit, so by anudāttañita ātmanepadam — अनुदात्तङित आत्मनेपदम् — [Pā. 1-3-72 as read (?)] the ātmanepada would be proper, but the parasmaipada comes instead by vyatyayo bahulam — व्यत्ययो बहुलम् — [Pā. 3-1-85 as read (?)]; loṭ, madhyama singular sip; serhyapicca — सेह्यपिच्च — [Pā. 3-4-87 as read (?)] the substitute hi; since apicca ("not pit") is said, sārvadhātukam apit — सार्वधातुकमपित् — [Pā. 1-2-4 as read (?)] makes a non-pit sārvadhātuka ñit; śap → ślu by juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ; ślau — श्लौ — [Pā. 6-1-10 as read (?)] doubling: mā-mā + hi; hrasvaḥ — ह्रस्वः — [Pā. 7-4-59 as read (?)] shortens the reduplicate; bhrñām it — भृजामित् — [Pā. 7-4-76 as read (?)] gives i to the reduplicate; alo 'ntyasya — अलोऽन्त्यस्य — [Pā. 1-1-52 as read (?)] — a substitute taught for a ṣaṣṭhī-word goes to its final letter, so the i goes to the last letter of the reduplicate; the print then discusses the paribhāṣā nānarthake 'lo 'ntyavidhir anabhyāsavikāre [number as read (?)], saying that the alo 'ntyasya rule does not operate where the substitute is meaningless, except in the change of a reduplicate, which here applies; mi + mā + hi; ihalyaghoḥ — ईहल्यघोः — [Pā. 6-4-113 as read (?)] the ā of śnā and of a reduplicated base becomes ī before a kit/ñit sārvadhātuka beginning with a consonant: mimīhi. Since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, the wholly-unaccented rule does not apply; hi is acute by the suffix accent. - āsye: root asu kṣepaṇe: "asyate = kṣipyate asminn ity āsyam": "the things to be eaten are thrown into this" is the analytical sentence. Kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam — कृत्यल्युटो बहुलम् — [Pā. 3-3-113 as read (?)] the kṛtya suffixes (the adhikāra of kṛtyāḥ, Pā. 3-1-95 [as read]) and lyuṭ come variously, i.e. in senses other than those in which they are prescribed; the suffix nyat, prescribed by ṛhaloṇ nyat [Pā. 3-1-124 as read (?)] in the senses of state and passive, comes by bahulagrahaṇa in the sense of the locus too; ata

56. pp. 334–335 — grammar pages, characterized

upadhāyāḥ — अत उपधायः — [Pā. 7-2-116 as read (?)] gives the ā by vṛddhi; as + ya = āsya; tit svaritam — तित्स्वरितम् — [Pā. 6-1-185 as read (?)]: "the print says that 'antaḥ' of the sūtra karṣātvato ghañanta udāttaḥ [Pā. 6-1-159 as read (?)] is carried forward": the last vowel of the suffix, a tit one, is svarita: so the a of the suffix is svarita. - tatanaḥ: tanu vistāre; liḍarthe leṭ — लिङर्थे लेट् — [Pā. 3-4-7 as read (?)]: in the senses in which liṅ is prescribed, in the sūtras vidhinimantraṇāmantraṇa... [Pā. 3-3-161 as read (?)] and hetuhetumator liṅ [Pā. 3-3-156 as read (?)], in the Veda leṭ comes; in its place madhyama singular sip; leṭo 'dātau — लेटोऽडाटौ — [Pā. 3-4-94 as read (?)] the augment aṭ; itaś ca lopah paraśmaipadeṣu — इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु — [Pā. 3-4-97 as read (?)] loss of the i; bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 2-4-73 as read (?)] śap → ślu, doubling: tan + tan + as; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ — loss of the n of the reduplicate; tatanas; the s becomes ru, then visarga. - gāyatram: "gāyatrīā idam"; tasyedam — तस्येदम् — [Pā. 4-3-120 as read (?)]: after a base ending in a ṣaṣṭhī-word, in the sense of "this is his", the aṇ and the other of the "big five" suffixes, and the chādi suffixes, come. According to the Śekhara author the tasyedam is just the statement of the desired sense; śeṣe is carried forward: "upayuktād anyāḥ śeṣaḥ" — the senses other than those already used are called śeṣa; those ending with the fourth case [apatyādi caturthyantāḥ] were stated before; the suffixes aṇ and the rest come in the sense "this is his" after a base that has the sandhi of a kṛta. By implication, an r-word of the same kind is a base for the base; the print then argues over prātipadika and whether the sixth-case ending must be taken, relying on ghakālatāneṣu kālanāmnaḥ — घकालतनेषु कालनाम्नः — [Pā. 6-3-17 as read (?)], where tarap and tamap as taddhita suffixes follow and the aluk of the locative is prescribed, and so on; the conclusion being that the taddhita suffix comes even with the sup intervening, as the Śekhara author thinks, so that here the sixth case is taken: gāyatrī + a; yasyeti ca the loss of ī. [This passage is very crowded; the drift only.] The second analysis: root gai śabde, then laṭ, śatr; śap and āy substituted, gāyat, gāyataḥ: "trāyate" — root traī pālāne; ādeca upadeśe 'śiti — आदेच उपदेशेऽशिति — [Pā. 6-1-45 as read (?)] ā for the ai; ato 'nupasarge kaḥ — आतोऽनुपसर्गे कः — [Pā. 3-2-3 as read (?)] the suffix ka after a root ending in ā when no prefix; trā + a; āto lopa iṭi ca — आतो लोपे इटि च — [Pā. 6-4-64 as read (?)] the loss of the ā; gāyat + tra = gāyatra; one t is lost by Vedic usage; accusative singular am; gāyatra + am; ami pūrvaḥ — अमि पूर्वः — [Pā. 6-1-107 as read (?)] the prior form: gāyatram. Translation: "O company of priests, mārutam gaṇam, the host belonging to the Maruts, vandasva — salute, or praise. What is the host like? Tveṣam — shining; panasyum — fit for praise; arkiṇam — endowed with worship. Asme — of us, iha, in this rite, vṛddhā āsan — let them be grown: let the Maruts be grown. Vandasva: root vadi, in the senses of salutation and praise; the root accent, because the la-substitute sārvadhātuka is unaccented after a root with an acute [? as printed: ād upadeśāl...]. Panasyum: the root pana [read with ca] in the sense of praise; the suffix asun; 'panaḥ', praise, 'ātmana icchatī', one who desires it for himself, is panasyuḥ; kyac after a sup in the sense of desiring for oneself (supa ātmanaḥ kyac); the suffix u after kya by kyāc chandasi. Ārkiṇam: the root ṛca stutau; the suffix gha by puṃsi sañjñāyām ghaḥ prāyeṇa; 'arko 'syāstīti arkī', one that has the arka; by ata iniṭhanau the suffix ini. Asan: by bahulaṃ chandasi the śap is not elided; the loss of i by itaś ca lopaḥ...; the verb is unaccented by tiṇ atīnaḥ."

Pratipadārtha — "tveṣam — one with brilliance; panasyum — fit to be praised; arkiṇam — one worthy of worship; mārutaṃ gaṇam — the host of the Maruts; vandasva — salute, or praise; asme — our; iha — in this sacrificial rite; vṛddhā asan — let those Marut-deities be increased (let them shine forth)."

— "O priests! Salute, or praise, the Marut-deities, who are full of brilliance, fit to be praised, and worthy of worship. In this sacrificial rite of ours may the Maruts be increased, and may our sacrifice be carried through in all its parts."

— "Glorify the host of Maruts, brilliant, deserving of praise and adoration; may they be pleased in this our worship."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 337 - panasyum — "panaḥ is only stotra; one who desires it for himself is panasyuḥ: one who longs for praise, deserving praise, fit to be praised." - arkiṇam — "ṛca stutau; arka is mantra; 'arko mantrō bhavati', says Yāska (Ni. 5-4 [?], as read). Arka means mantra, stotra. 'arko 'syāstīti arkī', that which has a stotra: one who is praised with the stotra, one fit for praise." - asme = asmākam — "our; in the Ṛgveda, in many places, the word asme is used in place of asmākam." - vṛddhā asan = pravṛddhā bhavatu — "let them be increased: that is, let them be praised, let them shine."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵⁷ - vandasva: root vadi abhivādanastutyoh, idit; idito num dhātoḥ — इदितो नुम् धातोः — [Pā. 7-1-58 as read [?]] the augment num; ātmanepada; loṭ, madhyama singular thās; thāsaḥ se — थासः से — [Pā. 3-4-80 as read [?]] the substitute se; savābhyām vāmau — सवाभ्यां वामौ — [Pā. 3-4-91 as read [?]] va for the e; śap; being pit it is unaccented; the printed argument that sva is a sārvaadhātuka standing for la, and about whether the śap that follows is a-ending or p-ending in the upadeśa (anekāntā anubandhāḥ — "indicatory letters are not [parts]" [a paribhāṣā]) is crowded and it is not followed in detail [?]; then tāsyānudāttetṇidupadeśasārvadhātukam anudāttam [as read, the sūtra begins tāsyānudāttet... [?]] gives the unaccented sva, so the root accent alone stands. - panasyum: paṇa vyavahāre stutau ca, first class; the root is read here also with pana ca in the sense of praise; sarvadhātubhyo 'sun — सर्वधातुभ्योऽसुन् — [Uṇ. 4-188 as read [?]]: asun: panas; "panaḥ = praise; ātmana icchati = he wants it for himself": supa ātmanaḥ kyac — सुप आत्मनः क्यच् — [Pā. 3-1-8 as read [?]]: kyac after a sup-ending word in the sense of wishing for oneself, optionally; hence panasya; kyāc chandasi — क्याच्छन्दसि — [Pā. 3-2-170 as read [?]]: the kya word allows (kyac-kyaṣ-kyaṇ, all three) the suffix u after the kya-ending base in the Veda, in senses such as habitual disposition; so panasyu: "one who naturally desires praise of himself". - arṇam: ṛca stutau, tudādi; pum̐si samjñāyām ghaḥ prāyeṇa — पुंसि सज्ज्ञायां घः प्रायेण — [Pā. 3-3-118 as read [?]] the suffix gha; its gh has the indicatory-letter name; ṛc + a; cajoḥ ku ghin̐nyatoḥ — चजोः कुघिण्यतोः — [Pā. 7-3-52 as read [?]]: k for c and j before ghit, ṇit, yat; guṇa of the penultimate: ṛ → ar; arka: the worship that is made with stotra is taken here; "arkaḥ asya asti": for the sense "this has it", ata ini-ṭhanau — अत इनिठनौ — [Pā. 5-2-115 as read [?]]: after a base ending in a the suffixes ini and ṭhan in the sense of matup: so ini. Although the Mahābhāṣya has the sūtra ekākṣarāt kṛto jāteś ca saptamyām ca na ṭhan-sa-ni-smṛtau [heavily abbreviated in the print, [?]] — ini and ṭhan do not come after a base with one syllable, one ending in a kṛt suffix, or a word denoting a species, or in the sense of the locative — the print says: arka is a kṛt-ending word, so how can ini come after it? Not so: the Bhāṣya's examples are svavān (single-syllable), kāṛakavān (kṛtaḥ), vṛkṣavān (jāteḥ), daṇḍavān ("in this hall there are staves", locative); the print answers that arka here is kṛdanta but not a species-word, so the prohibition does not apply; the clause is only for the most part (prāyika); in some places it does not apply, so the prohibition is not applied here.⁵⁸ The word iti in the sūtra tad asyāsty asmīnn iti matup is to be connected with each, which shows that the sense of worldly usage is meant (iti śabdo laukikīm vivakṣāṃ manusārayati); so ini etc. come sometimes after a kṛdanta too, e.g. kāryī, as the vṛttikāra and others hold. - āsan⁵⁹: as bhuvi, adādi; by bahulaṃ chandasi the śap is not elided [in this case]; leṭ, jhi; the substitute ant; by itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu the loss of the i; by saṃyogāntasya lopah — संयोगान्तस्य लोपः — the loss of the final consonant [the print's letter is not clear: śga [?]]; tiñ atinaḥ gives the wholly-unaccented form. Rik 15 ends here (|| 15 ||).

End of Sūkta 38. After the grammar of Rik 15, at the top of printed p. 339, a flourish closes the sūkta; unlike the close of Sūkta 37, there is no printed closing sentence ("illige ... sūktavu pūrṇavu") on the page. Below it begins Sūkta 39 (pra yad itthā, "the thirty-ninth sūkta", title line mūvattombhattaneya sūktavu, Anuvāka 8, fourth sūkta; ten Riks; ṛṣi Kaṇva Ghaura; Maruts; the Prāgātha [bṛhatī-satobṛhatī] metre — as read from the Kannada introduction at the foot of p. 339); its introduction and Rik 1 are not yet written and belong to the next session.

Fifteen Riks to the Maruts, all written in full. They open with a prayer that the Maruts take up the sacrificers as a father his son (Rik 1), ask where they are, where their treasures are (Riks 2–3), say that were they mortal their praiser would be immortal (4), and pray that the praiser not be negligent and not tread the road of Yama (5) and that Nirṛti, with craving, perish (6); then describe their rain, with lightning and thunder, in the desert and over the houses (Riks 7–10), their journey along the banks of rivers (11) and the firmness of their chariots (12); the last three Riks (13–15)

58. The page is very crowded; this is a summary and may contain slips.

59. at the top of p. 339

turn to the priests, bidding them sing, compose and praise the host of the Maruts. The doubtful parts are the many reference numerals, the heavily crowded grammar pages, and the passages named in the flags below.

Translation: "Pra yad itthā — the fourth sūkta [of the anuvāka], of ten ṛks; the seer's work of Kaṇva, the son of Ghora; its deity is the Maruts; the even-numbered [ṛks] (yujah) are Satobrhatī; the odd-numbered (ayujah) are Brhatī. The Anukramaṇikā [says]: 'pra yad daśa prāgātham' [the last words crowded [?]]. The application (viniyoga) has been stated [before]." ³

1. large Kannada title line: "mūvattombhattaneya sūktavu"

2. printed in Kannada script; read from the 150-dpi image; the words marked [?] are crowded

3. Translation tentative.

Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 339 — "Pra yad itthā is the fourth sūkta in the eighth anuvāka. In it there are ten ṛks. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Kaṇva, the son of Ghora; the deities are the Maruts. Prāgātha is the metre: the even-numbered ṛks are in the Satobr̥hatī metre, the odd-numbered ṛks in the Br̥hatī metre. What the Anukramaṇikā says is 'pra yad daśa prāgātham' [as read]. The viniyoga has been stated already."

Translation: "O dhūtayaḥ, shakers of fixed things and the like — Maruts — yad, when, mānam, your estimable strength, parāvataḥ, from afar (since āre, parāvataḥ are read among the names of 'far'), itthā, from this atmosphere [print: asmād antarikṣād asyatha, doubtful [?]], asyatha, you cast, you throw down to the earth. The example: śocir na — like light: as the light of the sun is thrown from the atmosphere to the earth, so. Then, kasya, with which sacrificer's kratu, rite, do you meet — so the remainder is to be supplied — and, with which sacrificer's varpas, praise, are you united? Kam yātha — aiming at which sacrificer do you go to the place of the divine rite? Kam ha — whom indeed do you favour? so the remainder."

Translation of the grammatical tail ⁶: Itthā — by thāhetau ca chandasi [Pā. 5-3-26 [?]] the suffix thā, in the sense of manner, after the word idam; if the word idam is not carried over there, then, after a base ending in tham, the case-ending of the word idam is given the substitute ḍā by vyatyaya, via supām sulug...; in the first alternative the accent is that of the suffix, in the second the accent that follows the disappearance of an acute. Asyatha — root asu kṣepaṇe; the unaccentedness of the sārvadhātuka after a root with an acute, and since śyan is nit, the first syllable is acute; no nighāta because of the connection with yat. Kratvā — by the vārttika jasādiṣu chandasi vā vacanam the nā-substitute is optional, so here it does not occur. Varpasā — root vṛj sambhaktau; the Uṇādi suffix asun with the augment puk [Uṇ. 4-200 [?]]; because it is nit the first syllable is acute; "here by the word varpas, which denotes form, the praise that reveals the nature of the deity is meant, by association with kratu."

Pratipadārtha — "dhūtayaḥ — (O Maruts) you who make even immovable things tremble; marutaḥ — O Maruts; yat — when; mānam — your worshipful strength; parāvataḥ — from a very distant region; itthām — from this atmosphere; śocir na — as the sun sends out its rays; prāsyatha — you spread [your strength] over the earth; kasya — of which sacrificer; kratvā — [by the rite] to which will you go? kasya — of which sacrificer; varpasā — by the praise [will you be satisfied]; kam — aiming at which sacrificer; yātha — do you go to the place of sacrifice? kam ha — whom indeed [will you favour]?"

6. characterized; numerals as read [?]

— "O Maruts, who have the strength to make fixed things tremble: as the rays of the sun fall from the atmosphere and spread out to all the world, your worshipful power spreads from the atmosphere to all the worlds. Now to the sacrifice of which sacrificer will you go? By whose praise will you be satisfied? Aiming at which sacrificer do you go to the place of sacrifice? Whom will you favour?"

English Translation (the source's own, p. 342)

— "O Maruts, you make all things tremble ; you direct your awful power downwards from afar, as light descends from the heaven ; by whose worship, by whose praise are you attracted ? To what place of sacrifice or to whom indeed do you repair ?"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 342 - "The sense of this ṛk begins abruptly [toḍakāgiruvudu]. The power of the Marut-deities is boundless. It spreads over the earth like the rays of the sun, falling downward from the atmosphere very far away. O Marut-deities who have such power: now to whose place of sacrifice will you go? To favour whom will you go? — this is the main intention. In this intention, when the ṛṣi asks 'where have you gone?', there must have been a calm state, without thunder and without rain; and therefore he asks where the Marut-deities have gone. In an earlier sūkta — [the sūkta and ṛk numerals are printed unclearly: 35th, 1st ṛk? [?]] — the ṛṣi Hiraṇyastūpa, at night-time, addressing Savitṛ (the Sun), asked a question of this very kind: 'Where is the sun now? What world is he lighting?' When the visible Sun, Maruts and other deities are not seen at an unusual time, astonished questions such as 'Where do they go? Where are they now?' are natural." - parāvataḥ — "since the word parāvataḥ is read among the five names of 'far' beginning with āke, parāke (Ni. 3-[?]-[?], as read), parāvataḥ means 'from afar'. The sense is that the wind blows from very far away in the atmosphere." - śocir na — "'like a brilliant thing': that is, as the light of the sun comes to the earth from very far: so the intention of the example." - varpasā = stotreṇa — vrj sambhaktau — "by praise." - dhūtayaḥ = sthāmādīnām kampanakāriṇaḥ — "those who, by the power of their strength, make shake [make sway] fixed things such as houses, and trees and the like."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁷ - pra: upasargās cābhivarjam — उपसर्गाश्चाभिर्वर्जम् — [Phiṭ. sūtra 80 [?], as read]: the prefixes, except abhi, are first-syllable acute; so pra is ādyudātta. ⁸

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 39.1, continued ⁹ - itthā: thā hetau ca chandasi — था हेतौ च छन्दसि — [Pā. 5-3-26 as read [?]]: the suffix thā in the senses of cause and manner after idam and kim, in the Veda; the print explains that idam comes by carry-over (anuvṛtti) from the sūtra idamas thamu — इदमस्थमु: — [Pā. 5-3-24 as read [?]] and kim from kimaś ca — किमश्च —; "the idam is carried over, since in the Veda the words kim and idam are in question"; idam + thā; idam is — इदम इश् — would give is in its place, but it is barred by etetau rathoḥ — एतेतौ रथो: — [Pā. 5-3-4 as read [?]]: before a prāgdīvyatiya suffix beginning with r or th, idam gets the substitutes eta and it: it; it + thā = itthā. The print adds that if one does not accept this carry-over, one takes idam + thamu ("itthamu") and gives the ending following it the substitute ḍā by supām sulug..., with loss of the ṭi: itthā. In the first alternative the word is final-acute by the suffix accent; in the second the ending is acute by anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ [Pā. 6-1-161 as read [?]], so again final-acute. - asyatha: root asu kṣepaṇe, divādi; loṭ, madhyama tha [as the print says]; divādibhyaḥ śyan — दिवादिभ्यः श्यन् — [Pā. 3-1-69 as read]: śyan; by the paribhāṣā anekāntā anubandhāḥ the root's accentual status is that of an adupadeśa; the la-substitute sārvadhātuka after it is unaccented by tāsyānudāttetnidupadeśālasārvadhātukam anudāttam, and śyan being nī, the word ending in the suffix is first-syllable acute;

because of the connection with yat there is no wholly-unaccented form. - kratvā: jasādiṣu chandasi vā vacanam prāñṇau cañy upadhāyāḥ — the vārttika [on Pā. 7-3-109, as read (?)] in this section the operations laid down up to ṇau cañy upadhāyāḥ are optional in the Veda; so ā ṇo nāstriyām [as printed, doubtful (?)] — the nā-substitute for the instrumental ṭā — does not come; the yañ substitution: kratu + ā = kratvā. - varpasā: vṛj śīñbhyām rūpasvāñgayoḥ puk ca — [Uṇ., as read]: after the roots vṛj and śīñ, in the senses "form" and "own limb", the suffix asun, and the augment puk in the base; vṛp + as, guṇa of the light penultimate: varpas; instrumental singular. "Here the word rūpa ['form'] is by implication to be taken as 'praise that reveals the form', because of the association with the word kratu." Rik 1 ends here (| | 1 | |).

Translation: "O Maruts, vaḥ āyudhā, your weapons — parānude, in order to thrust away enemies — sthirā santu, let them be firm. Uta — and — pratiṣkabhe, in order to check enemies, vīlu santu, let them be strong, stout. Yuṣmākam taviṣī, your strength, let it be panīyasī, extremely praiseworthy; and the strength of the martyasya, the mortal, the man who is an enemy, māyinaḥ, deceitful towards us, going about in disguise — mā, let it not be. Sthirā, āyudhā: in both the loss of śi by śeś chandasi bahulam. Parānude: root ṇuda prerāṇe; kvip of the sampadādi class; ṇatva by upasargād asamāse 'pi [Pā. 8-4-14 [?]]; the accent of the first member of a compound ending in a kṛt. Vīlu: loss of the ending by supām sulug...; prakṛtibhāva by the rule iṣā-akṣādiṣu... [Pā. 6-1-127 [?]]. Pratiṣkabhe: skambhu is a sautra root; kvip in the abstract sense; the loss of n by anidit ām.... Panīyasī: the root pana in the sense of praise; from it the Uṇādi asun in the passive sense; then īyasun, loss of the ṭi; nīp by ugitaś ca; īyasun is nī so the first syllable is acute. Māyinaḥ: since māyā is read in the vrīhyādi group, the suffix ini in the sense of matup by vrīhyādibhyaś ca."

Pratipadārtha — "marutaḥ — O Maruts; vaḥ — your; āyudhā — weapons; parānude — for driving away the enemies; sthirā — firm; santu — let them be; uta — and; pratiṣkabhe — for checking the enemies too; vīlu — let them be strong; yuṣmākam — your; taviṣī — strength; panīyasī — let it be extremely praiseworthy; māyinaḥ — [him who] deceives (us); martyasya — of the enemy in human form; mā — let [his strength] not be [praiseworthy]."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Maruts, may your weapons be firm for driving away our powerful enemies. May they be strong for checking them. May your strength be worthy of praise. May the enemy in human form, who deceives us, be without strength."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 345)

— "May your weapons be steady, may they be strong to drive away or resist the enemy ; may your strength merit praise, not that of a treacherous mortal."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 345 - parānude — "ṇuda prerāṇe: in the matter of opposing enemies." - vīḷu — "vīḍu: firmly, steady." (English as printed: "steady"). - pratiṣkabhe = śatrūṇāṃ pratibandhāya — "for the checking of enemies." - taviṣī = balam — "strength, power, capacity and the like." - panīyasī = panatīḥ stutyarthaḥ | atīśayena stotavyā bhavatu — "let it be worthy of much praise." - māyinaḥ = chadmacāriṇo manuṣyasya — "of a wicked man who deceives": the source adds "treacherous or vily [sic] person."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹¹ - sthirā, āyudhā: in both words the loss of śi by śeś chandasi bahulam. - parānude: root ṇuda prerāṇe; kvip by sampadādibhyaḥ kvip — सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप् —; upasargād asamāse 'pi ṇopadeśasya — उपसर्गादिसमासेऽपि णोपदेशस्य — [Pā. 8-4-14 as read (?)]: the n of a root taught with ṇ, after the r and ṣ of a prefix, becomes ṇ, even without compounding; the print explains that the root ṇuda has ṇ at the beginning; the eight roots nṛt, nāṭ, nāth, nādh, nand, nakk, nṛ, nard [as read] are excepted from ṇopadeśa-hood (ṇopadeśās tv anarda-nāṭi-nādh-nādh-nand-nakka-nṛtaḥ [as read]); parānud takes the accent of the first member of a compound with a kṛt last member. - vīḷu: supāṃ sulug for the ending; in the Samhitā, in vīḷu + uta, prakṛtibhāva by iṣākṣādiṣu chandasi prakṛtibhāvam [ātram] [Pā. 6-1-127 as read (?)]. - pratiṣkabhe: the root skambhu is not read in the present dhātupāṭha, but Pāṇini's sūtras use it: grasitaskabhita... [Pā. 7-2-34 as read (?)] has skabhita from the root skambhu ("skambhu rodhane"); kvip of the sampadādi class; anidito hala upadhāyāḥ kṛiti — अनिदितां हल उपधायाः कृडिति — [Pā. 6-4-24 as read (?)] loss of the nasal. - panīyasī: the root pana is read in the sense of praise; after it the Uṇādi asun in the passive sense; in the sense of excess, dvivacanavibhajyopapade tarabīyasunau [Pā. 5-3-57 as read (?)] īyasun; ṭeḥ — टेः — [Pā. 6-4-155 as read (?)] loss of as; panīyas is ugit, so ugitaś ca [Pā. 4-1-6 as read (?)] gives ṇīp in the feminine;

īyasun is nit, so the first syllable is acute. - māyinaḥ: vrīhyādibhyaś ca — व्रीह्यादिभ्यश्च — [Pā. 5-2-116 as read (?)] after the words in the vrīhyādi group the suffixes ini and ṭhan in the sense of matup; by anyebhya ubhayam ["both"] both suffixes come; and vinī by asmāyāmedhāsrajo viniḥ [Pā. 5-2-121 as read (?)]; so the forms māyāvī, māyī, māyikaḥ; in the vrīhyādi group "vrīhi-māyā" is read. Translation: "O naraḥ, leaders, Maruts, yad, when, [a thing that is] sthiram, firm, [you] parā hatha — you break down, make felled and broken — trees and the like; guru, heavy things such as rocks, you vartayatha, make roll, set going. Then pṛthivyāḥ, belonging to the earth, vaninaḥ, forest trees, vīyāthana — you go through, having parted [them]. Among the dense trees that have gone into the forest, through the breaking of some one tree or other, a broad way is made by the separation of the other trees from each other. Likewise parvatānām āśāḥ, the āśā of the mountains [the print reads parvatārṇadiśo [?], 'regions of mountain passes'] vīyāthana — you go through, parting [them]. Hatha: root han hiṃsāgatyoh; the loss of the nasal by the rule beginning anudāttopadeśa...; no nighāta because of the connection with yat. Naraḥ: [not unaccented, since it is] at the beginning of a pāda, there is no āmantrita-nighāta. Vartayatha: [after the śap] the la- substitute sārvadhātuka is unaccented by ād upadeśāt..., so only the accent of ṇic remains; no nighāta because yat is to be supplied. Yāthana: the substitute thana by tapta-nap-tana-thanāś ca."

Pratipadārtha — "naraḥ — O leaders of men (Maruts); yat — when; sthiram — fixed, immovable (trees and the like); parā hatha — you roll down (and); guru — heavy objects (such as rocks); vartayatha — you cause to move (when); pr̥thivyāḥ — belonging to the earth; vaninaḥ — forest trees; viyāthana — you go through, separating (just so); parvatānām — of mountains; āśāḥ — the directions [print: dikkugaḷannu] (of the narrow passes); vi (yāthana) — you go, separating."

Bhāvārtha

— "O leaders, Marut-deities, you roll down firm trees and the like. You set heavy things such as rocks in motion. Breaking even the forest trees with your force, and parting the narrow mountain passes, you go about easily and freely."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 348)

— "O leaders of men, (Maruts) whenever you move you demolish what is stable, scatter what is heavy, then make your way through the forest trees of earth and through the regions [sic] of the mountains."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 348 - Main intention —

"When the Marut-deities move, nothing hinders them. On the earth they roll down, roots and all, the big, big trees that stand well grown and firm. Heavy things, houses and the like, are shaken by the blow of the wind. When they blow among clusters of densely grown forest trees on earth, they break many trees, make a way, and press on. In mountain regions too they make their way through narrow passes." - parā hatha — "hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ; bhagnaṃ kurutha: you break; you throw down." - naraḥ — "nominative plural of the ṛ-ending word nṛ: leaders, guides of men." - guru — "extremely heavy stones, houses and such things." - vi yāthana = viyujya madhye gacchatha — "...in a forest, among densely grown trees, since one tree or another has been broken, the other trees being separated from one another, a broad path comes to be: so the intention." - āsāḥ parvatānām — "the slopes of mountains, or the narrow-pass regions between the mountains."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹³ - hatha: han hiṃsāgatyoh; laṭ, tha; the śap elided; by anudāttopadeśa... the loss of the n; because of the connection with yat the verb is not wholly unaccented. - naraḥ: because it stands at the beginning of a pāda, the unaccented vocative of the eighth adhyāya does not apply. - vartayatha: śap is pit and so unaccented; the la-substitute sārvadhātuka after it is unaccented by tāsyānudāttet..., so the accent of ṇic remains; "the word yat of yat sthiram is to be connected here too", and by yadvṛttān nityam the wholly-unaccented form is prohibited. - yāthana: yā prāpaṇe, loṭ, madhyama tha → ta; tapta-nap-tana-thanāś ca gives thana. - vaninaḥ: "vanam eṣām asti": the suffix ini. - prthivyāḥ: the root prath + ṣivan; ṣidgaurādibhyaś ca gives ṇiṣ, acute; the genitive ending [print: jas], the yaṇ substitution; udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt gives the acute to the ending. Translation: "O riśādasah, destroyers of enemies, Maruts — adhi dyavi, above the heaven-world, vaḥ, for you, an enemy nahi vivide, is not found; and there has not been one; likewise, on the earth also, an enemy has not been. O rudrāsaḥ, sons of Rudra, Maruts — of you who are forty-nine in number, yujā, by union, by agreement among one another, ādhr̥ṣe, for the overcoming of enemies on all sides, may [your] taviṣī, strength, nū cit, quickly indeed, tanā astu, be extended: be spread. Vivide: root vida sattāyāṃ; the suffix accent in liṭi; [the verb is understood in both halves — 'dyavi nahi vivide, bhūmyāṃ ca na hi vivide' — because the sense of ca is perceived]; on the dropping of a cādi word, by vibhāṣā, for the first [of the pair] the prohibition of nighāta [the print's wording is crowded [?]]; the first is 'first' in respect of the action understood. Riśādasah: root riśa hiṃsāyāṃ; 'riśanti, they injure': riśāḥ; the suffix ka by the rule of ik-penultimate roots; 'tān adanti', they eat them: riśādasah; the suffix asun; unaccented as a vocative. Yujā: root yujir yoge; kvin by ṛtvigdadhr̥k... [Pā. 3-2-59
[?]]; the ending is acute by sāvekāca. Rudrāsaḥ: by the word rudra
the Maruts connected with him are indicated; asuk by ājjaser

asuk. Nū cit: the lengthening by rci tunughā.... Ādhr̥ṣe: root dhr̥ṣā prāgalbhye; kvip in the abstract sense of the sampadādi class; the accent of the first member in a compound ending in a kṛt."

Pratipadārtha — "riśādasah — O destroyers of enemies, Maruts; adhi dyavi — in the heaven-world above; vah — for you; śatruḥ — an enemy; na hi vivide — there is not [such] a one; bhūmyām — on the earth also; na babhūva — there has not been at all; rudrāsah — O Maruts, sons of Rudra; yuṣmākam — of you (of forty-nine in number); yujā — by union; ādhr̥ṣe — for the overpowering of enemies on all sides; taviṣi — [your] strength; nū cit — quickly indeed; tanā astu — let it be extended."

Bhāvārtha

— "O destroyers of enemies, Maruts, for you there is no room for an enemy, whether in heaven or on earth. O Maruts, sons of Rudra, may your joined strength, of you who are forty-nine in number, quickly increase for the destruction of enemies."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 351)

— "O distroyers [sic] of the wicked, there exists no adversary of yours above heavens, nor upon this earth, O Sons of Rudras [sic], may four [sic] collective strength be quickly exerted to humble your enemies"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 351 - riśādasah — "riśa hiṃsāyām; riśanti hiṃsanti iti riśāḥ, enemies; tān adanti iti riśādasah: the root riśa has the sense 'to injure'; those who injure are enemies; these are those who devour or destroy them; so riśādasah: destroyers of enemies." - adhi dyavi = dyulokasyopari — "in the upper part of heaven, or even in the heaven that is above." - taviṣi — "strength, power." - tanā — "tanu vistāre, vistr̥tā: let it be spread, that is, let it increase and grow. The word tanā is specially used in the Ṛgveda." - yujā = yogena parasparaikamatyena — "that the Maruts are forty-nine in number is said in the Purāṇas and elsewhere. In the Ṛgveda they are described in another way; see the explanation we wrote on the 1st ṛk of the [37th [?]] sūkta." - rudrāsaḥ — "that the Maruts are the sons of Rudra is described in many places in the Ṛgveda; we have already explained this."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁷ - nahi: "abhāve nahy nośāpi" [as read, with a lexicon reference Amara, crowded [?]]: nahi is one unbroken word, an indeclinable; by evādīnām antaḥ — एवादीनामन्तः — it may be said to be final-acute as belonging to the evādi group. Or, by saha supā — सह सुपा — [Pā. 2-1-4 as read [?]], where saha is taken as a separate rule (yogavibhāga): a sup-ending word compounds with a competent sup-ending word; na and hi are compounded by this sūtra; samāsasya — समासस्य — [Pā. 6-1-223 as read [?]] the last syllable of the compound is acute; hence final-acute. - vaḥ: bahuvacanasya vāsnasau — बहुवचनस्य वस्नसौ — [Pā. 8-1-21 as read [?]]: for yuṣmākam, ending in the genitive plural, the unaccented substitute vas. - vivide: root vida sattāyām, divādi, ātmanepada; liṭ → eś for ṭe; the doubling, and the loss of the reduplicate's [consonant] ; no guṇa of the light penultimate: vivide. In the second half, "bhūmyām ca na hi vivide", the sense of ca is understood though ca is not used; there is no verb in the second half of the ṛk, but the verb said before has to be repeated and joined with the second sentence; this brought-in verb is the second; the one in the mantra is the first; by cādilope vibhāṣā — चादिलोपे विभाषा — [Pā. 8-1-63 as read [?]], when a cādi word is dropped, the first of the two verbs is optionally not unaccented; so there is a prohibition of anudātta for the first. - na: being a nipāta, first-syllable acute. - riśādasah: root riśa hiṃsāyām; "riśanti hiṃsanti iti riśāḥ": enemies who give injury; igupadhajñāprikiraḥ kaḥ — इगुपधज्ञाप्रीकिरः कः — [Pā. 3-1-135 as read [?]]: after roots with an ik as penultimate (ik = i u ṛ ḷ), and after jñā etc., the suffix ka; the suffix is kit, so no guṇa of the light penultimate; the root ad bhakṣaṇe: "riśān adanti", they eat enemies, that is, destroy them; sarvadhātubhyo 'sun [Uṇ. 4-188 as read [?]] asun; the vocative is unaccented by the eighth-adhyāya rule. - yujā: yujir yoge; ṛtvigdadhr̥ksragdiguṣṇigañcuyujikruñcām ca — ऋत्विग्दधृक्स्रग्दिगुष्णिगञ्जुयुजिक्कुञ्चां च — [Pā. 3-2-59 as read [?]]: kvin; instrumental singular ṭā; by sāvekācaḥ... the ending is acute; yuj has one syllable in the locative plural yukṣu. - rudrāsaḥ: "rodayatīti rudraḥ": by [the Uṇādi rule beginning] roror.. [as read, crowded [?]; Uṇ. 2-129 [?]]: after the root rudir aśruvimocane, ending in the ṇic suffix, the suffix rak, and the ṇic is elided: rudra; here by implication "belonging to Rudra", that is, the Maruts, are denoted by this word; jas with the augment asuk by ājjaser asuk. - nū: ṛci tunughamakṣutañkutroruṣyāṇām — ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम् — [Pā. 6-3-133 as read [?]]: in a mantra, with rg as a following upapada, these words take the long vowel: nū. - ādhr̥ṣe: the root dhr̥ṣā prāgalbhye [print: ghr̥ṣā]; sampadādibhyaḥ kvip in the abstract sense; compounded with āñ; the accent of the first member in a compound ending in a kṛt. Translation: "Parvatān — mountains such as Meru and Himavat — pra vepayanti: the Maruts make them shake greatly. Vanaspatīn — banyan, fig and other trees — vi viñcanti: they make them separated from one another. O Maruts, gods, with sarvayā viśā, with all your people, pro ārata, go forth: go greatly on all sides. The example: durmadā iva — as those drunk with intoxication sport on all sides at their own will, so. Vepayanti: root ṭuvepr kampāne; the ṇic of the causative: they make [the mountains] shaking. Viñcanti: root vicir prthagbhāve; śnam because of the rudhādi class; loss of the a by śnasor allopaḥ. Vanaspatīn: 'vanānām patayaḥ'; the augment suṭ because of the pāraskarādi group; both members keep their accent at the same time by ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu yugapat. Ārata: root ṛ gatau; in lañ second-person plural, by bahulaṃ chandasi the śap is not elided [as it otherwise would be]; or luñ: añ by sartīśāstyartibhyaś ca [Pā. 3-1-56 [?]]; the augment āṭ by āḍ ajādīnām; vṛddhi by āṭas ca. Devāsaḥ: vocative, first-syllable acute. Sarvayā: first-syllable acute by sarvasya supi. Viśā: the ending acute by sāvekāca."

Pratipadārtha — "(marutaḥ — Maruts) parvatān — mountains such as Meru and Himavat; pravepayanti — they shake well; vanaspatīn — forest trees such as the banyan and the fig (grown close together); vi viñcanti — they make to be separate from one another; devāsaḥ marutaḥ — O Maruts, who are gods; sarvayā viśā — together with all your people; durmadā iva — as those full of intoxication wander and sport at will; pro ārata — wander freely all around."

Bhāvārtha

— "The Marut-deities make the immovable mountains, Meru, Himavat and the like, shake well. They make the forest trees that grow close together be separated one from another. O Maruts, who are deities, you are free. As men intoxicated with ecstasy sport and wander at will, you too, together with your people, go all around, sporting and wandering."

— "They make the mountains tremble ; They slit asunder the forest trees ; divine Maruts go wether [sic] you wlll [sic] with all your progeny like men in to vicated [sic]."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayaḥ), pp. 354-355 - Main intention — "Because the power of the Maruts is boundless, they make the mountains shake. Trees and the like that have grown close together are struck by the wind's blow and become separate. O Marut-deities, together with all those in your group — as a man intoxicated moves, as his mind wishes, with no obstruction, so you, with no obstruction, move about at your will." - durmadā iva — "like men intoxicated by drinking an intoxicating substance, who, having no control of the mind, wherever they are, wander about there; or like those who, proud from arrogance and cunning, go about as their mind wishes, with regard to no one." - sarvayā viśā — "with all the people; here 'all the people' means the attendants of the Marut-deities, or the host of the Maruts, forty-nine in number, united."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁸ - pra: upasargāś cābhivarjam [Phiṭ.]: first-syllable acute. - vepayanti: root ṭuveṇṇ kampāne, first class, ātmanepada: vepate in the present; "parvatāḥ vepante" means "the mountains shake"; the sense to be intended is that the Maruts make the mountains shake. Hetumati ca — हेतुमति च — [Pā. 3-1-26 as read [?]]: hetu = the instigator; ṇic after roots when the action of an instigator is to be expressed; the Pāṇinīya sages' term hetu is for the one who is the instigator of the agent; vep + i; since the result goes to another, ṇicaś ca — णिचश्च — [Pā. 1-3-74 as read [?]] the ātmanepada does not come; parasmaipada, laṭ, jhi, ant, śap, guṇa and ay-substitution: vepayanti. - viñcanti: vicir prthagbhāve; jhi, ant; rudhādibhyaḥ śnam — रुधादिभ्यः शनम् — [Pā. 3-1-78 as read [?]]; vi-n-c + anti; śnasor allopaḥ — शनसोरल्लोपः — [Pā.

18. pp. 355-356 — grammar pages, noted briefly

6-4-111 as read]: the a of the suffix is lost before a kit or ñit sārvadhātuka; naś cāpadāntasya jhali — नश्चापदान्तस्य झलि — [Pā. 8-3-24 as read [?]] anusvāra for n; anusvārasya yayi parasavarṇaḥ — अनुस्वारस्य ययि परसवर्णः — [Pā. 8-4-58 as read [?]] gives the homorganic nasal (ñ): viñcanti. - vanaspatīn: "vanānām patayaḥ"; pāraskaraprabhṛtīni ca saṃjñāyām — पारस्करप्रभृतीनि च सञ्ज्ञायाम् — [Pā. 6-1-157 as read [?]]: the pāraskarādi words, in names, take suṭ; the group is open (ākṛtigana); so suṭ comes to pati: vanaspati. The neuter word vana is first-syllable acute [as read from a Phiṭ. sūtra number [?]]; pāter ḍatiḥ — पातेर्ङिति: — [Uṇ. 4-[?], as read]: the word pati with the suffix ḍati is first-syllable acute by the suffix accent; on compounding, by ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu yugapat — उभे वनस्पत्यादिषु युगपत् — [Pā. 6-2-140 as read [?]]: in the words of the vanaspatyādi group both first and last members have their own accent at the same time: so both members retain their accent. - ārata: ṛ gatau; lañ, second-person plural tha → ta; since the root belongs to a ślu-taking class, śap would be elided, but by bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 2-4-73 as read [?]] it is not; ṛ + a + ta; the augment aṭ; sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ gives guṇa; ā + ar + ta; āṭas ca — आटश्च — [Pā. 6-1-90] vṛddhi: ārata. Or: the root ṛ, luñ, ta; cli; sartīśāstyartibhyaś ca — सर्तिशास्त्यर्तिभ्यश्च — [Pā. 3-1-56 as read [?]] añ for cli; ṛdṛśo 'ñi guṇaḥ — ऋदृशोऽङि गुणः — [Pā. 7-4-16 as read [?]] guṇa; ar + a + ta; āḍ ajādīnām — आडजादीनाम् — [Pā. 6-4-72 as read [?]] the augment āṭ; ā + ar + a + ta; āṭas ca: ārata. In the second alternative there is no trouble of resorting to Vedic usage; the form may be used in the world also; but by the first process the form is valid in the Veda only. - devāsaḥ: vocative plural; the augment asuk by ājjaśer asuk; since it is at the beginning of the fourth pāda the eighth-adhyāya unaccentedness of the vocative does not apply; by āmantritasya ca — the sixth-adhyāya sūtra — it is first-syllable acute. - sarvayā: sarvasya supi — सर्वस्य सुपि — [Pā. 6-1-191 as read [?]]: the first syllable of sarva is acute before a sup. - viśā: root viśa praveśane; kvip; instrumental singular ṭā;

sāvekācas tr̥tīyādir vibhaktiḥ [Pā. 6-1-168 as read (?)] gives the ending the acute [the print says ādyudātta here, apparently by slip]. Rik 5 ends here (| | 5 | |).

Translation of this part: "O Maruts, ratheṣu, in your chariots, pr̥ṣatīḥ, the spotted does — upo (upa + u) — you have yoked, close by. Praṣṭīḥ, [the animal] so named, standing in the middle of the three draught-animals, rohitaḥ, another kind of deer, red-coloured, vahati, draws the chariot. Vaḥ yāmāya: for your going — pr̥thivī cit, even the atmosphere — aśrot, heard, i.e. gave assent, so the sense. 'Pr̥thivī' is a name of the atmosphere, since it is read among the names of it (pr̥thivī, bhūḥ, svayambhūḥ [as read]). Mānuṣāḥ, men living in the earth-world, abībhayanta:

being themselves frightened, they caused fear to others also." The grammatical tail so far: upo is a further particle made up of the two particles; by ot [Pā. 1-1-15] it is pragrhya [exempt from sandhi]; āyugdhvam: in luṇ, by jhalo jhali [Pā. 8-2-26] the loss of the s, k for c by coḥ kuḥ; rohitaḥ: from ruh, with the Uṇādi rule ruhe raś ca lo vā [Uṇ. 3-94 (?)], the suffix itan; because it is nit, first-syllable acute; yāmāya: ghañ in the abstract sense of yam; though the final acute would be due by karṣātvataḥ..., the word is read in the vṛṣādi group, so first-syllable acute; asrot: root śru śravaṇe; the vikaraṇa elided by bahulaṃ chandasi; abibhayanta: root ñibhī bhaye, in the causative, in luṇ, ātmanepada by bhīsmiyor hetubhaye [Pā. 1-3-68] — ²¹

Bhāvārtha — "O Maruts, you have yoked to your chariot the female deer with their spots. The red deer called praṣṭi, which is in the middle of them, draws your vehicle. Even the atmosphere gives room for your going. When they see your swift approach, men are not only afraid themselves, they cause fear to those who are with them."

— "You have harnessed the spotted deer to your chariot ; the red deer yoked between them helps to drag the car ; the firmament makes way for you and men tremble through fear at your approach."

"The Marut-deities do not yoke horses to their chariots. They yoke female deer with spots, called pr̥ṣatī. On this matter, in the passage in which Yāska in his Nirukta speaks of the vehicles of the deities: हरी इन्द्रस्य । रोहितोऽग्नेः । हरित आदित्यस्य । रासभावश्चिनोः । अजाः

Since this is said, the chariot-horses of the Marut-deities are pr̥ṣatīḥ, that is, spotted does." ²⁴ - rohitah

24. The passage is left untranslated by the source. Mine and tentative:

"Indra's [are] the two bays; Agni's the red one; the Sun's the tawny ones; the Aśvins' two asses; Pūṣan's goats; the Maruts' spotted does; Uṣas's ruddy cows; Savitṛ's the dark-brown ones; Bṛhaspati's the many-formed ones; Vāyu's the Niyuts." The reference numeral is as read [?].

— "among deer, a kind of red colour; another species of deer, belonging to the class of the spotted deer." - pr̥thivī cit aśrot — "among the sixteen names of the atmosphere beginning with ambaram, viyat, the word pr̥thivī is read; therefore pr̥thivī here means the atmosphere, the path of the wind. Cit aśrot means 'anuḥjānāti': gives permission, or gives room: so the intention."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁵ - upo: "upa and u, two particles; by ād guṇaḥ the guṇa comes and upo results; so a further, new particle, made up of the combination of two. Ot — ओत् — [Pā. 1-1-15 as read (?)] : a particle ending in o is called pragr̥hya: so says the Vedabhāṣya; but this name has no use here: plutapragr̥hyā aci nityam — प्लुतप्रगृह्या अचि नित्यम् — [Pā. 6-1-125 as read (?)] prescribes prakṛtibhāva when a vowel follows; here no vowel follows, so the establishing of the pragr̥hya name has no fruit." - ayugdhvam: yujir yoge; the ir has the name of an indicatory letter; luṇ, cli; irito vā — इरितो वा — [Pā. 3-1-57 as read (?)] : after a root with indicatory ir, optionally aṇ for cli; here the option is not taken; cleḥ sic [Pā. 3-1-44]: sic; the augment aṭ: a-yuj + s + dhvam; jhalo jhali — झलो झलि — [Pā. 8-2-26 as read (?)] the loss of s after a jhal before a jhal; coḥ kuḥ — चोः कुः — [Pā. 8-2-30 as read (?)] k for c even before a jhal and at the end of a word, so j → g: ayugdhvam. - rohitah: ruha bīḥajanmani prādurbhāve ca; ruher ca lo vā — रुहेश्च लो वा — [Uṇ. 3-94 (?), as read]: after this root the suffix itan, with l optional for r; guṇa of the light penultimate; as the l-substitution is optional it does not come here; the suffix is nīṭ, so first-syllable acute. - yāmāya: root yamu upame; halaś ca — हलश्च — [Pā. 3-3-121 as read (?)] ghaṇ in the abstract sense; upadhāvṛddhi: yām + a; karṣātvalo ghaṇ anta udāttaḥ — कर्षात्वतो घञोऽन्त उदात्तः — [Pā. 6-1-159 as read (?)] : a ghaṇ-ending word from kṛṣ or from a root with an ā-ending [etc.] is final-acute: this would give final-acute to yāma; but that is set aside by vṛṣādīnām ca — वृषादीनां च — [Pā.

Translation: "O rudrāḥ, sons of Rudra, Maruts — for tanāya, for a son, our own offspring — kam [a filler] — makṣu, quickly — vaḥ avaḥ, your help, your protection, ā vṛṇīmahe, we ask for on all sides. 'Makṣu' is a name for 'quick', since it is read in its names [nu makṣu and so on]. Purā, formerly, on other occasions naḥ avasā, by the cause which is our protection, you came as [you did]; itthā, in the same way, bibhyuṣe, to the frightened kaṇva, the wise sacrificer, nūnam, quickly, ganta, come: arrive, for his favour. Makṣu: the lengthening by ṛci tunugha.... Tanāya: 'tanoti', that which extends, tana; ac of the pacādi class; first-syllable acute from belonging to the vṛṣādi group; or, from the word tanaya, the loss of [a syllable] is Vedic [the print is crowded here [?]]. Kam: used at the end, a mere filler of the verse-foot, as in śīśīraṃ jīvanāya kam; and it is said 'athāpi pādapūraṇaḥ kamīm id iti'. Rudrāḥ: 'rodanti', they make [enemies] weep; by the Uṇādi rule roder ṇiluk ca [Uṇ. 2-22 [?]] the suffix rak and loss of ṇic; first-syllable acute as a vocative; at the beginning of a pāda there is no nighāta. Ganta: śap elided in the loṭ by bahulaṃ chandasi; the substitute ta [print: tabādeśaḥ [?]]; so because the suffix is pit the loss of the nasal does not occur. Bibhyuṣe: from bhī, the suffix kvasu of the liṭ; no iṭ by the restriction vasvekājāddhasām; in the dative singular, saṃprasāraṇa of the vasu by vaso saṃprasāraṇam; parapūrvatva; ṣatva by sāsivasighasīnām ca." ²⁸

Rik 39.7, continued ²⁹

Pratipadārtha — "rudrāḥ — O Maruts, sons of Rudra; tanāye kam — for our sons; makṣu — promptly; vaḥ — your; avaḥ — protection; ā vṛṇīmahe — we ask for; purā — formerly, at the times of sacrifice; naḥ — our; avasā — for protection; yathā — in the way in which; [you came]; itthā — in the very same way;

28. Rik 7's Pratipadārtha, Bhāvārtha, English, Special Topics and grammar begin on p. 363, not yet written.

29. from p. 363

bibhyuṣe — to [him who is] afraid (from devotion); kaṇvāya — to the wise sacrificer, or to the ṛṣi Kaṇva, to favour [him]; nūnam — quickly; ganta — come."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Maruts, sons of Rudra, we pray to you for the protection of our sons. Accepting our prayer, in the way in which you came formerly at our sacrifices for our protection, in the very same way now also, to favour the wise sacrificer who worships you full of fear and devotion — or the ṛṣi Kaṇva who is now praising you — come quickly here."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 363)

— "O Sons of Rudra, we entreat your protection quickly for the sake of our progeny ; come quickly to the timid Kanwa (or to the sacrificer) as you came formerly for our protection."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 363 - makṣu — "among the twenty-six names of 'quick' beginning with nu, makṣu [maṅkṣu] is read; so makṣu means swiftly, at once." - tanāye = tanoti iti tanaḥ putraḥ — "for a son: that is, for the protection of offspring such as sons." - rudrāḥ = rudraputrāḥ — "the Maruts who are the sons of Rudra. Here, in place of the word rudriyāsaḥ, which speaks of sons of Rudra, the word rudrāḥ itself is used." - bibhyuṣe = bhītiyuktāya — "to one who is afraid; one who is afraid from another cause, the ṛṣi Kaṇva: [the Maruts] must protect him: this is the sense."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁰ - makṣū: ṛci tunuḡhamakṣutaṅkutroruṣyāṇām [Pā. 6-3-133 as read (?)] : the long vowel for the word makṣu. - tanāya: "tanoti iti tanaḥ": root tanu vistāre, with ac of the pacādi class [pacādibhyo 'c']; "since it spreads the family, the word tana means son"; dative singular. The print adds that in the word tanaya either the middle ay or the final ya is lost — a process for which there is no teaching of the śāstra; the loss occurs by Vedic usage; in this alternative the well-known sense is taken; the derivation of the form is forced; in the first alternative [tana] the word tana is not well known in the sense "son"; vṛṣādīnām ca gives the first-syllable acute to tana. - kam: "a word to be used for filling out a pāda, at the end of a pāda; in śísīraṃ jīvanāyu kam also kam is used for filling out the verse. In the Nirukta 'athāpi pādapūraṇāḥ kamīm id iti' (Nī. 1-9 [?], as read), kam, īm and it and the like are said to be for filling out a pāda." - rudrāḥ: root rudir aśruvimocane, "rodayantīti rudrāḥ"; the suffix rak by roder ṇiluk ca [Uṇ. 2-22 [?], as read]; ṇic lost; "here by implication the Maruts, sons of Rudra, are meant". The print adds that in the Śruti "so 'rodīd yad arodīt tad rudrasya rudratvam" [as read, crowded [?]] the word arodīt must be understood with the sense of the ṇic included, "he made to weep"; therefore some say that the derivation given has no conflict with the Śruti. - ganta: root gamḥ gatau; loṭ, madhyama plural tha, substitute ta; bahulaṃ chandasi elides śap; tapta-ṇap-tana-thanās ca gives tap; this is pit, so sārvadhātukam apit makes no ṇit; therefore [by] anudāttopadeśa-vanati-tanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kṇiti [Pā. 6-4-37 as read [?]] the loss of the nasal m does not occur. - bibhyuṣe: root ñibhī bhaye; liṭ, kvasu by kvasuś ca; the doubling, the shortening and jaś; by the restriction vasvekājāddhasām — वस्वेकाजाद्धसाम् — iṭ does not come to vas (this restriction has been explained earlier); dative singular ṇe; by vasoḥ saṃprasāraṇam the v of vas becomes u; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca the prior form; ādeśapratyayayoḥ: s → ṣ; the print says that śāsivasighasīnām ca does not apply here, as explained at length earlier by reference to the anekāvarṇa... [as read, crowded]. Rik 7 ends here (| | 7 | |).

— "O Maruts, if any adversary instigated by you or by man attacks us deprive him of food, strength and your assistance."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 366–367 - Main intention — "O Marut-deities, whatever man opposes us with enmity, whether by your hot anger or by the instigation of others:

to such a man do not give food or strength; do not give him any help whatever." - yuṣmeṣitaḥ = yuṣmābhiḥ preṣitaḥ — "sent by you, or incited by you; having your strength." - martyeṣitaḥ = māraḥ anyair vā preṣitaḥ — "our enemy, sent by some man who wishes to kill us: this is the sense." - abhvaḥ — "since the word abhvaḥ is read among the twenty-five names of mahat beginning with mahat, brahman (Ni. 3-3 [?]), abhvaḥ means a man of great strength; here the intention that he is an enemy is suggested." - vi taṃ yuyota śavasā — "make him devoid of food: that is, do not give him food and the like." - yuṣmākābhiḥ = yuṣmatsambandhibhiḥ — "belonging to you; or given by you."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³² - yuṣmeṣitaḥ: iṣa gatau, divādi; iṣa icchāyām, tudādi; iṣa ābhikṣṇye, kryādi: there are three roots iṣa; some read the tudādi root as iṣu icchāyām, with u as an indicatory letter; since this has no purpose, "iṣa" is enough; tīṣasahaluṣarucariṣaḥ — तीषसहलुभरुषरिषः — [Pā. 7-2-48 as read [?]] need not read iṣu; the print notes the vārttika that, for the root iṣ with a śyan-suffix, the prohibition of optional iṭ before a suffix beginning with t has to be stated, so that here iṭ always comes; the root iṣa gatau is the one taken here; with kta: iṣita; the compound "yuṣmābhir iṣitaḥ"; supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ — सुपो धातुप्रतिपदिकयोः — [Pā. 2-4-71 as read [?]] the loss (luk) of the case-endings: yuṣmad + iṣita; pratyayalope pratyayalakṣaṇam — प्रत्ययलोपे प्रत्ययलक्षणम् — [Pā. 1-1-62 as read [?]]: when a suffix has been lost, the operations that depend on it occur as if it were still present; but na lumatāṅgasya — न लुमताङ्गस्य — [Pā. 1-1-63 as read [?]] prohibits this where the loss is named lu (luk, ślu, lup); the prohibition is anitya and so does not apply here; the print then gives a long argument on the sūtra iko 'ci vibhaktau — इकोऽचि विभक्तौ — [Pā. 7-1-73 as read [?]] (the augment num in a neuter ik-ending base before a vowel-initial case-ending, e.g. vāriṇī) and on the use of the word aci in it, the prohibition nalumatā..., and the svādiṣv asarvanāmasthāne [Pā. 1-4-17] and nalopah prātīpadikāntasya [Pā. 8-2-7] rules, concluding that the word aci is meaningful. Then yuṣmadasmador anādeśe — युष्मदस्मदोरनादेशे — [Pā. 7-2-86 as read (?)] before a case-ending which is not beginning with a vowel [print: ajādiyallada], the d of yuṣmad, asmad becomes ā: yuṣmā + iṣita; guṇa: yuṣmeṣita; ṛtīyā karmaṇi — तृतीया कर्मणि — [Pā. 6-2-48 as read (?)] gives the accent of the first member. - martyeṣitaḥ: the process of iṣitaḥ as before; the first-member accent also as before. - abhvaḥ: "ābhavati, so abhvaḥ": enemy; the print says one must derive the form by reading this word in the pr̥ṣodarādi group. - iṣate: root iṣa gatihiṃsādarśaneṣu, first class, ātmanepada; laṭ, ta, e; śap: iṣ + a + te; no guṇa as the penultimate is not light; śap is pit and so unaccented; the root accent remains. - yuyota: root yu miśraṇāmīśraṇayoḥ, adādi; loṭ, madhyama plural tha → ta by tasthasthamipām; tapta-nap-tana-thanās ca gives tap; bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 2-4-73 as read (?)] śap → ślu; ślau — doubling: yu + yu + ta; tap is pit, so the prohibition of guṇa does not come; sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ gives guṇa: yuyota. - yuṣmākābhiḥ: "yuṣmākam imāḥ"; yuṣmadasmador anyatarasyām khañ ca — युष्मदस्मदोरन्यतरस्यां खञ् च — [Pā. 4-3-1 as read (?)] after yuṣmad and asmad, in senses other than those through the fourth case, khañ [kha] and aṇ optionally; since anyatarasyām is read, these suffixes are optional, and in the alternative where they do not come, the suffix aṇ comes by tasyedam [Pā. 4-3-120 as read (?)]; the print uses pāre madhye śaṣṭhyā vā — पारे मध्ये षष्ठ्या वा — [Pā. 2-1-18 as read (?)] and the principle "yatrotsargāpavādaḥ mahāvibhāṣayā vikalpyete tatrāpavādena mukte punar utsargo na pravartate" ["where the general rule and the exception are both made optional by the great option, when the exception is released the general rule does not operate again"] to show that, since here anyatarasyām is used, the option is not the mahāvibhāṣā; therefore aṇ comes by the general rule; tasminn aṇi ca

32. pp. 367–369 — large grammar pages, characterized in outline; very crowded

yuṣmākāsmākau — तस्मिन्नणि च युष्माकास्माकौ — [Pā. 4-3-2 as read (?]): when khañ or añ follows, the substitutes yuṣmāka and asmāka for yuṣmad and asmad: yuṣmāka + a; yasyeti ca the loss of the a; because the feminine is intended, ṭiḍḍhāṇañ... [Pā. 4-1-15] would give ñīp, and taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ vṛddhi; but, as all operations are optional in the Veda (sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante, paribhāṣā [number as read (?)]), they do not come here; ajādyatas ṭāp — ṭāp; bhis, ru, visarga: yuṣmākābhiḥ. - ūtibhiḥ: root ava rakṣaṇe; striyām ktin: ktin; jvaratvarasrivyaviruvamavām upadhāyās ca — ज्वरत्वरस्रिव्यविरुवमवामुपधायश्च — [Pā. 6-4-20 as read (?]): ūth for av; ūtiyūtijūti... — ऊतियूतिजूति... — [Pā. 3-3-97 as read (?)] the accent of ktin: acute on the first syllable. Translation: "Asāmi hi — in full, as it were — prayajyavaḥ, those to be worshipped greatly, pracetasah, endowed with excellent knowledge, O Maruts: kaṇvam, the wise sacrificer, or the ṛṣi so named, dada — support. Hi — because you have supported the ṛṣi named Kaṇva, therefore asāmibhiḥ ūtibhiḥ, with complete protections, naḥ, towards us, ā ganta, come. The example: vṛṣṭim na vidyutaḥ — as the lightnings go to the rain, so. Asāmi: [meaning sāmi, 'incomplete'; the print is crowded here [?]]; na sāmi: asāmi; the accent of the first member as an indeclinable. Prayajyavaḥ: 'to be worshipped greatly'; the suffix yu in the passive sense by yaji-mani-śundhi-dasi-janibhyo yuḥ [Uṇ. 3-20 [?]]; unaccented as a vocative. Dada: root dadāñ dāne; the substitution of the ātmanepada third-person plural for the second-person plural of the loṭ by the principle tiṇām tiṇo bhavanti; in ślu, after doubling, the loss of the ā by śnābhyastayor ātaḥ; the loss of ta by lopaḥ ta ātmanepadeṣu [Pā. 7-1-41]; pararūpa by ato guṇe; because by chandasy ubhayathā it is ārdhadhātuka, the first-syllable acute of the reduplicated [abhyastānām ādiḥ] does not come, but only the accent of the suffix; no nighāta by hi ca. Pracetasah: 'of whom the mind is excellent'; unaccented vocative. Ganta: the substitute ta for the tha of loṭ of gam; śap elided by bahulaṃ chandasi; because the suffix is pit it is unaccented, the root accent remains; at the beginning of a pāda there is no nighāta; in the Samhitā the long vowel by dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ. Vidyutaḥ: 'vidyotate', so vidyut; kvip by bhrājabhāsa... [Pā. 3-2-177]."

Pratipadārtha — "asāmi hi — completely; prayajyavaḥ — worthy of the best worship; pracetasah — endowed with excellent knowledge; marutaḥ — O Maruts; kaṇvam — the wise sacrificer (or the ṛṣi Kaṇva); dada — (giving shelter) support; hi — because you have given shelter; asāmibhiḥ — complete; ūtibhiḥ — with the means of protecting [us]; vidyutaḥ — the lightnings; vṛṣṭim na — as [they] join the rain (come to us as they do); naḥ — to us; ā ganta — come."

Bhāvārtha — "O Maruts, who are worshipped with full and excellent sacrificial rites, you are possessed of excellent knowledge. Give support to the sacrificer Kaṇva, the ṛṣi. Then, as lightning follows the rain, come to us with your protections." ³⁴

Rik 39.9, continued ³⁵

English Translation (the source's own, p. 371)

— "Wise Maruts, who are to be unreservedly worshipped, support Kanwa (the sacrificer); come to us, Maruts, with complete protection as the lightnings bring the rain."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 371 - asāmi — "sāmi means 'half'. Asāmi means 'not half', 'complete'." - prayajyavaḥ = prakarṣeṇa yaṣṭavyāḥ — "those fit to be worshipped well." - dada = dhārayeta — "give support, give shelter, and protect." - pracetasah = prakṛṣṭam ceto yeṣāṃ te | prakṛṣṭajñānayuktāḥ — "those who have excellent knowledge." - vṛṣṭim na vidyutaḥ — "there is no lightning without rain; and when lightning is seen, rain is well known to come; therefore the ṛṣi has used this example: 'As the lightnings bring the rain, you, Maruts, bring us protections.'"

34. The English translation, the Special Topics and the grammar of Rik 9 begin on p. 371, not yet written.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁶ - asāmi: "sāmi is a word whose sense is 'half'; na sāmi: a nañ-compound, with the loss of the n; tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtīyā... [Pā. 6-2-2 as read (?)]: the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its accent." - prayajyavaḥ: yaja devapūjādaḥ; yaji-mani-sūndhi-dasi-janibhyo yuc — यजिमनिशुन्धिदसिजनिभ्यो युच् — [Uṇ. 3-20 as read (?)]: after these roots the suffix yuc; since the u of yu is an indicatory ut letter, the substitute ana [for yu, by yuvor anākau] is not applied; jas after prayajya; jasi ca — जसि च — [Pā. 7-3-109 as read (?)] guṇa, av-substitution; āmantritasya ca — the verb is wholly unaccented. - dada: root ḍadāñ dāne; loṭ, madhyama plural dhvam; tiñāṃ tiño bhavanti — तिङां तिङो भवन्ति — [Pā. 7-1-39 as read (?)]: in place of one tiñ a different tiñ [intended] comes in the Veda; hence for the plural dhvam of the ātmanepada the jha [= third-person plural ātmanepada] substitute: dhā + jha; juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ [Pā. 2-4-75 as read (?)] śap → ślu; doubling and shortening of the reduplicate; ātmanepadeṣv nataḥ — आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः — [Pā. 7-1-5 as read (?)]: at for the jha of the ātmanepada after a non-short-a; jha → at; śnābhyastayor ātaḥ — श्नाभ्यस्तयोरातः — [Pā. 6-4-112 as read (?)] the loss of the ā of a śnā and of a reduplicated root before a kit/ñit sārva dhātuka: dad + ata; lopaḥ ta ātmanepadeṣu — लोपस्त आत्मनेपदेषु — [Pā. 7-1-41 as read (?)] the loss of the t of an ātmanepada ending in the Veda: dad + a + a; ato guṇe — अतो गुणे — [Pā. 6-1-97] pararūpa: dada. Chandasy ubhayathā [Pā. 3-4-117 as read (?)]: in the Veda the suffixes laid down in the dhātvadhikāra are both sārva dhātuka and ārdha dhātuka; because of its ārdha dhātuka name, the first-syllable acute of abhyastānām ādiḥ [Pā. 6-1-189 as read (?)] before a non-it sārva dhātuka beginning with a vowel, does not come; hi ca — हि च — [Pā. 8-1-34 as read (?)] prohibits wholly-unaccented; the accent of the suffix. - pracetasah: "prakṛṣṭaṃ cetaḥ yeṣāṃ te": those with excellent understanding; āmantritasya ca: unaccented-in-verse. - ganta: root gamḥ gatau;

36. pp. 371–372 — grammar pages, noted briefly

loṭ, madhyama tha; because of the la-substitute, by tasthasthamipām... ta; tapta-nap-tana-thanās ca gives tap; bahulam chandasi [Pā. 2-4-73 as read [?]] luk for śap; tap is pit, so it does not become ñit; anudāttopadeśa... the nasal is not lost; the suffix is pit and unaccented; the root accent remains; it is at the beginning of the fourth pāda, hence apādāda [Pā. 8-1-18 as read [?]] does not give wholly-unaccented; dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ [Pā. 6-3-135 as read [?]] gives the long vowel in the Saṃhitā. - vidyutah: "vidyotate, so vidyut": "shines well"; bhrāja-bhāsa-dhurvi-dyuta-ūrjī-pr-ju-grāvastuvaḥ kvip — भ्राजभासधुर्विद्युतोर्जिपृजुग्रावस्तुवः क्विप् — [Pā. 3-2-177 as read [?]]: kvip after each of these eight, in the sense of habitual disposition and so on; so kvip after dyut with the prefix vi. Bhāvārtha

— "O Maruts, you are good givers; your strength is surpassing. As a sharpened arrow is used to destroy an enemy, use your anger in the form of hatred against the enemy who harms and hates the ṛṣis."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 374) — "O most liberal givers, you possess perfect vigor ; shakers of the (earth), you possess undiminished strength. O Maruts, let loose your anger, like an arrow, upon the wrathfull [sic] enemy of the Rishis."

Summary of Sūkta 39.

Ten Riks to the Maruts. Rik 1 asks to whom the Maruts are travelling, their power falling from afar like sunlight; Riks 2–3 pray that their weapons be firm and describe how they break trees and make their way through mountains; Rik 4 says no enemy of theirs exists in heaven or on earth; Riks 5–6 describe the shaking of mountains and trees and the spotted does and red deer yoked to their chariots; Riks 7–10 are prayers: for the protection of the sacrificer's sons (7), that the Maruts deprive hostile men of food, strength and help (8), that they come to Kaṇva with complete protection as lightning brings rain (9), and that they hurl their anger like an arrow at the enemy of the ṛṣis (10). All ten Riks are written in full; the heavily crowded grammar pages (pp. 360–361, 367–369) are characterized only.

41. The numeral is read as "39"; the Kannada script of the closing note is clear.

Translation: "Uttiṣṭha — the fifth sūkta [of the anuvāka], of eight ṛks, the seer's work of Kaṇva, of the Bārḥata [Prāgātha] kind; the even-numbered [ṛks] are Satobṛhatī, the odd-numbered Bṛhatī; its deity is Brahmaṇaspati. And the Anukramaṇikā says: 'uttiṣṭhāṣṭau brāhmaṇaspatyam'. The application (viniyoga) of the sūkta is laiṅgika: on the twenty-fourth day [of the Soma sacrifice], in the Marutvatīya [śāstra], before the regular Brahmaṇaspati gāthā, this pragātha 'uttiṣṭha brahmaṇaspate'. It is laid down in the section called Marutvatīya: 'praitu brahmaṇaspatiḥ' and 'uttiṣṭha brahmaṇaspate' — the two Brāhmaṇaspatya [verses] are the earlier ones before the āvāpa [insertion], since they are constant (Āś. 6-3 [?]). The first ṛk is applied in the Pravargya, in the abhiṣṭava: 'uttiṣṭha brahmaṇaspate' — having said this one stands up (Āś. 4-2 [?]), as it is laid down." ³

Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 376 — "Uttiṣṭha brahmaṇaspate is the fifth sūkta in this eighth anuvāka. It has eight ṛks. The even-numbered ṛks are in the Satobṛhatī metre; the odd-numbered in the Bṛhatī metre. Brahmaṇaspati is the deity of this sūkta. In the Anukramaṇikā: 'uttiṣṭhāṣṭau brāhmaṇaspatyam' — the sūkta of eight ṛks beginning uttiṣṭha has Brahmaṇaspati as deity. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika; and in the Somayāga, on the twenty-fourth day, when the Marutvatīya śāstra mantras are recited, this sūkta uttiṣṭha brahmaṇaspate is recited for the ṛks of the Prāgātha metre that concern Brahmaṇaspati. This matter is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section called Marutvatīya, by the sūtra 'praitu brahmaṇaspatir (Ṛg. 1-40-3 [?]) uttiṣṭha brahmaṇaspata (Ṛg. 1-40-1 [?]) iti brāhmaṇaspatyāvāpate pūrvau nityāt' (Āś. 6-3). The application of the first ṛk of this sūkta in the Pravargya and abhiṣṭava sacrifices is explained by the sūtra of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Āś. 4-2) 'uttiṣṭha brahmaṇaspata ity etām uktvāvatiṣṭhate'." ⁴ Translation: "O Brahmaṇaspati — god of this name — uttiṣṭha, rise up. For our favour, make a rising from your dwelling. Devayantaḥ, we who desire the gods, tvā īmahe, ask you; we beg. Sudānavaḥ, endowed with fine giving, Maruts, upa pra yantu, let them go close up, strongly. — "O Brahmanaspati, rise from your seat to favour us. We, who desire the help of the gods, beseech you: 'Give your protection.' Let the Maruts, who give auspicious and noble gifts, come near us. O Indra, drink the Soma juice together with Brahmanaspati, or become the destroyer of Vṛtra."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 378)

— "Rise up, Brahmanaspati ; we who desire to worship the gods Solicit you ; may the liberal Maruts also come up with you ; and Indra, be a partaker of the libation."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣaya-gaḥ), pp. 379–380 - brahmanaspate — "Brahmanaspati is the deity of this sūkta. Who is this Brahmanaspati? We shall explain in brief what his place and station among the deities are. The great ṛṣi Yāska in the Nirukta (Ni. 10-[?]-[?]), when considering Brahmanaspati, says: ब्रह्मणस्पतिः । ब्रह्मणस्पतिर्ब्रह्मणः पाता वा पालयिता वा ॥ — brahmanaspatiḥ | brahmanaspatir brahmaṇaḥ pātā vā pālayitā vā — 'Brahmanaspati is the protector, or the sustainer, of brahman.' Here the word brahma has the senses 'food', 'wealth' and 'praise' (Ni. 2-[?]). So 'brahmaṇaḥ pātā' means lord or master of food (of the 'eater', āhāra [as read, doubtful (?)]). How Brahmanaspati is lord of food Yāska shows by an example, quoting the ṛk अश्मास्यमवतं ब्रह्मणस्पतिर्मधुधारमभि यमोजसातृणत् । तमेव विश्वे पपिरे स्वर्दृशो बहुसाकंसिसिचुरुत्समुद्रिणम् ॥ (R̥g. Saṃ. 2-24-4 [?], as read) — aśmāsyam avataṃ brahmanaspatir madhudhāram abhi yam ojasātrṇat | tam eva viśve papire svarḍśo bahusākaṃ sisicuru tsam udriṇam — editorial and tentative: "Brahmanaspati, with might, split open the stone-mouthed well, the stream of honey; all the sun-seeing ones drank just that; together they poured out the spring that holds water"; and then giving the Nirukta explanation अशनवन्तमास्यन्तनवन्तमुवाततम् ... ब्रह्मणस्पतिर्मधुधारमभियमोजसा बलेनाभ्यतृणत्तमेव सर्वे पिबन्ति रश्मयः सूर्यादृशो बहेन सह सिञ्चन्त्युत्समुद्रिणमुदकवन्तम् (Ni. 10-[?], as read) — aśanavantam āsyantanavantam uvātata[m sic?] ... brahmaṇaspatir madhudhāram abhi yam ojasā balenābhyatrṇat tam eva sarve pibanti raśmayah sūryād-ṛśo bahv enam saha siñcanty utsam udriṇam udakavantam — the print is crowded and doubtful from the beginning [?]; editorial and tentative: "...a stream full of water; the rays, seeing from the sun, all drink it; together they pour much of this spring, rich in water." The main intention is that Brahmaṇaspati, by the help of the sun's rays, makes the clouds drink the water of the ocean and makes that water fall specially on the earth as rain; from rain come plants and trees, and from them food and the like; hence Brahmaṇaspati is the protector of food. When brahma is taken as 'praise' or 'wealth', Brahmaṇaspati is lord of mantras and lord of wealth. The commentator [Sāyaṇa] says this very thing in explaining the ṛk quoted above. "Hymns to Brahmaṇaspati are numerous in the Ṛgveda; in them Brahmaṇaspati is said to give wealth and food. Many doubt whether this Brahmaṇaspati is a separate deity or another form of Agni. As he gives wealth and food together with Agni and other deities, some say Brahmaṇaspati is a special form of Agni. Yāska has remained silent on this point, that is, he has said nothing clearly. In the ṛks on Brahmaṇaspati there is likewise no sufficient basis to say that this deity is another form of Agni. Therefore it may be said confidently that Brahmaṇaspati is a separate deity, like Indra and Agni." - upa pra yantu marutaḥ — "let the Marut-deities come near you: that is, come together with you." - prāśūḥ = somasya prāśakaḥ — "one who partakes of the Soma juice: that is, one who drinks." - sacā = sahitaḥ — "accompanied: accompanied by Brahmaṇaspati."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁸ - uttiṣṭha: udo 'nūrdhvakarmaṇi — उदोऽनूर्ध्वकर्मणि — [Pā. 1-3-24 as read (?)]: the ātmanepada after the root sthā with ud, in the sense of an action not of the "upward-direction" kind; here the deity Brahmaṇaspati rises from his place upward, so sthā here denotes an action that suits an upward direction, and so ātmanepada does not come by this sūtra; hence the parasmaipada alone. Ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau, first class; dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ: s; the th [stays]; loṭ, sip, hi; śap; pāghrādhmā... — पाघ्राध्मास्थाम्नादाण्... — [Pā. 7-3-78 as read] gives tiṣṭha for sthā; tiṣṭha + a + hi; ato heḥ — loss of hi, or pararūpa in the alternative where the a-ending substitute...; ud + tiṣṭha = uttiṣṭha. - brahmaṇaspate: "brahmaṇaḥ patiḥ": ṣaṣṭhyāḥ patiputraprṣṭhapārapadapayaspoṣeṣu — [Pā. 8-3-53 as read (?)]: the s for the visarga of a genitive; pati here is a vocative; for the accent, by subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare — सुबामन्त्रिते पराङ्गवत्स्वरे — [Pā. 2-1-2 as read (?)] brahmaṇaḥ becomes a part of pate; and for brahmaṇaspate by āmantritasya ca [Pā. 8-1-19 as read (?)] the whole is unaccented. - devayantaḥ: "devān ātmana icchantāḥ"; supa ātmanaḥ kyac — सुप आत्मनः क्यच् — [Pā. 3-1-8 as read (?)]; akṛtsārvadhātukayor dīrghaḥ — अकृत्सार्वधातुकयोर्दीर्घः — [Pā. 7-4-25 as read (?)], kyaci ca — क्यचि च — [Pā. 7-4-33 as read (?)] (ī for the a), na chandasya aputrasya — न छन्दस्यपुत्रस्य — [Pā. 7-4-35 as read (?)]; the print discusses the order of these three sūtras and the paribhāṣā anantarasya vidhir vā bhavati pratiṣedho vā, concluding that the prohibition na chandasi prohibits only the ī of kyaci ca, not the lengthening; otherwise aśvāyantaḥ would have a long ā and aśvāghasyāt [Pā. 7-4-37 as read (?)] would be useless; so the prohibition covers both the ī- and the long-ā operations in deva + ya. - īmahe: "the process of the words from this up to indra has been given earlier." - prāśūḥ: root śṛ hiṃsāyām, kryādi; "prakarṣeṇa āsamantāt hinastī": bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 7-1-103 as read (?)]: u for the ṛ in the Veda, with

Translation: "O son of strength [sahasas putra], great protector of strength, Brahmanaspati. 'Putra: he protects much, or he protects from the hell pura', says the Nirukta (Ni. 2-11 [?]). Martyaḥ, the man, hite, when wealth has been thrown among the enemies [= abandoned by them] becomes the occasion, tvām it, on you alone upabrūte, he calls: having come close, he praises; the sense is: he prays for the winning of that wealth. O Maruts, the man who, wanting wealth, ācake, praises you, who are with Brahmanaspati — may that man dadhīta, hold, obtain, wealth that has good horses (svaśvya) and good heroism (suvīrya). Sahasas putra: as [in] brahmanaspatē; by patiputra... the visarga becomes s. Upabrūte: the prohibition of nighāta by hi ca; the preverb is unaccented by tiṇaś codāttavati. Hite: in the participle, the substitute hi for dhā. Suvīryam: a bahuvrīhi, 'of which the heroism is good'; the first syllable of the latter member is acute by vīravīryau ca. Svaśvya: 'a collection of horses' is aśvīya; by keśāśvābhyāṃ yañchāv anyatarasyām [Pā. 4-2-48 [?]] the suffix cha in the sense of collection; īya for cha; 'svaśvya, that which has fine horses'; the loss of ī is Vedic; the first syllable of the latter member is acute by parādīś chandasi bahulam. Dadhīta: when the s of sīyut is lost, the first syllable is acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ; no nighāta because it begins a pāda. Ācake: root kai gai rai śabde; ā by ādeca...; in liṭ, doubling, shortening and palatalization of the reduplicate; loss of the ā by āto lopa iṭi ca; accent of the suffix; no nighāta because of the connection with yat."

Pratipadārtha — "sahasaspatra — O Brahmanaspati, protector of strength; martyaḥ — man; hite — thrown aside (by the enemy); dhane — for the sake of wealth; tvām it — you alone; upabrūte — comes close and praises; marutaḥ — O Maruts; yaḥ — which man, desiring wealth; vaḥ — you (together with Brahmaṇaspati); ā cake — praises; svaśvyam — with excellent horses; suvīryam — with excellent heroism; itarat [print: itarakka] dhanam — other wealth; dadhīta — may he obtain."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Brahmaṇaspati, you are the protector of strength, that is, you are exceedingly mighty. With the help of your strength, a man approaches you with his praises for the sake of wealth lying among enemies. O Maruts, since you are together with Brahmaṇaspati, the man who, desiring wealth, praises you will obtain excellent horses, excellent heroism and wealth."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 383)

— "O Son of strength, (Brahmaṇaspati) the mortal worships you with praises for the sake of wealth abandoned by the enemy ; Maruts, may he who praises you obtain (wealth consisting of) excellent horses and great strength."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 383–384 - sahasas putra — "sahas means strength or power. Putra son. Although this word is specially established as used of Agni, here it is used of Indra and, in this ṛk, of Brahmaṇaspati. The commentator takes the word putra in this ṛk as 'protector', following Yāska's explanation 'putraḥ puru trāyate niparaṇād vā' (Ni. 2-11); 'balasya putra' means 'giver of strength'." - upa brūte = saṃīpaṃ prāpya stauti — "comes to your presence and praises." - hite — "a word formed from the root dhā. Its sense is: in a battle, when enemies flee and run away, the wealth they abandon — horses, chariots and the like, and goods such as money —" - svaśvyam = śobhanāśvayuktatvam — "the gain of excellent horses." - ā dadhīta = dhārayet — "will obtain without doubt" (niḥsaṃśayaṃ prāpnuyāt) — "may he obtain, in full." - yo va ā cake — "one who desires to praise you: that is, one who praises you."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹¹ - sahasaspatra: root saha marṣaṇe; the Uṇādi asun, of the oṇādika kind; "puru trāyate, so putra": the root traī pālāne; ato 'nupasarge kaḥ [Pā. 3-2-3 as read (?)] ka and the loss of the ā; the s for the visarga and the wholly-unaccented as in brahmaṇaspate. - upabrūte: brūñ vyaktāyām vāci, adādi, ubhayapadī; the ātmanepada ending here; śap elided; by hi ca the verb is not wholly unaccented, since it is joined with hi; the ending te is acute by the suffix accent. Tiñ codāttavati — तिङ् चोदात्तवति — [Pā. 8-1-71 as read (?)]: when a verb with an acute follows, a gati is unaccented; hence upa is unaccented. The print says that nipātā ādyudāttāḥ does not apply here, since tiñ codāttavati is an exception to it, and discusses at length why the word tiñ is needed in that sūtra (with the example ā mandrair indra haribhir yāhi, where mandra, ending in rak, is acute), the definition of gati by prādayas tatpratyeva gatyupasargasamjñāḥ... and the Kaumudī's remark tiṅgrahaṇam udāttavataḥ parimāṇārtham. ¹² - hite: root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, juhotyādi; niṣṭhā: kta; dadhāter hiḥ — दधतेर्हिः — [Pā. 7-4-42 as read (?)]: hi for dhā before a kit suffix beginning with t. - suṁvīryam: bahuvrīhi; vīravīryau ca — वीरवीर्यौ च — [Pā. 6-2-120 as read (?)]: in the Veda, in a bahuvrīhi, vīra and vīrya are first-syllable acute, even after su; the word vīra is from vīra vikrāntau with ac; vīrya by yat [acoyat] or tatra sādhuḥ. - svaśvyam: "aśvānām samūhaḥ": keśāśvābhyām yañchāv anyatarasyām — केशाश्वाभ्यां यञ्छावन्यतरस्याम् — [Pā. 4-2-48 as read (?)]: after keśa and aśva, in the sense of collection, yañ and cha respectively; cha; āyaneyīnīyiyah phadhakhachaghām [Pā. 7-1-2] gives īya; "śobhanam aśvīyam yasya tat", a bahuvrīhi; the loss of ī by Vedic usage; parādis chandasi bahulam [Pā. 6-2-199 as read (?)] the first syllable of the latter member is acute. - dadhīta: root ḍudhāñ; liñ, ātmanepada; liṇaḥ sīyut [Pā. 3-4-102]; liṇaḥ salopo 'nantyasya [Pā. 7-2-79 as read (?)] loss of the s; suṭ tithoḥ [Pā. 3-4-107 as read (?)] — the print notes that the s of suṭ is also lost as before; śnābhyastayor ātaḥ — the ā → ī... [as read]; yalopa; abhyastānām ādiḥ — first-syllable acute; but the apādāda prohibition applies; so there is no wholly-unaccented form. - ācake: root kai gai rai śabde, first class [read as the 5th root]; ādeca upadeśe 'śiti — ā for ai; vyatyayo bahulam gives the ātmanepada in place of the parasmaipada; liṭ, ta; eś; doubling kā + kā + e; shortening of the reduplicate; kuhoś cuḥ — कुहोश्चुः — [Pā. 7-4-62 as read] c for k: cakā + e; āto lopa iṭi ca — आतो लोप इटि च — [Pā. 6-4-64 as read] loss of the ā before a kit or ñit ārdhadhātuka beginning with a vowel, or iṭ; the accent of the suffix; because of the connection with yat in yo va ā cake, yadvṛttān nityam prohibits wholly-unaccented. Pūjitāt [print: nāt pūjitāt, as read] — the print adds a remark on the use of pūjita in another sūtra (atra prakaraṇe pañcamīrdeśe 'pi nānantaryam iṣyate) [as read, crowded [?]]; and says that, though va intervenes, yadvṛttān nityam applies. Translation: "Brahmaṇaspatir devaḥ praitu — let the god

 the goddess in the form of pleasant truth, the deity of speech — praitu, let her come: let her reach us. Devāḥ — the deities, Brahmaṇaspati and the others — vīram — the enemy — drive away completely, far off. Naryam — beneficial to men — of in the Brāhmaṇas — yajñam prati, towards the sacrifice, naḥ, letters before udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ... in the grammatical tail (printed after devy...) are crowded and are given as ādi

Pratipadārtha — "brahmaṇaspatiḥ — Brahmanaspati, the god; praitu — let him come to us; sūnṛtā — [she who is] pleasant and in the form of truth; devī — the goddess of speech; praitu — let her come to us; devāḥ — the deities such as Brahmanaspati; vīram — [the] strong enemy; (let them drive [him] far away); naryam — [the sacrifice] that does good to men; pañktirādhasam — full of rows of oblations (as spoken in the Brāhmaṇas); yajñam acchā — facing the sacrifice; naḥ — us; nayantu — let them lead."

Bhāvārtha

— "May the god Brahmanaspati, the goddess of speech who is dear and in the form of truth, and the other deities, by their grace drive far away the enemy, who is strong and the destroyer of the sacrifice. May they lead us safely towards the sacrifice that does good to us and that is filled with rows of oblations as spoken in the Brāhmaṇas."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 387)

— "May Brahmanaspathi approach us ; may the goddess of speech who always speaks the truth come to us ; may the Gods drive away every enemy and conduct us to the sacrifice which is benifical [sic] to man and which is well supplied with five fold oblations."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 387–388 - Application — "On the twenty-fourth day of the sacrifice, in the Marutvatīya śāstra-mantra recitation in the Samvarta [?], the application is stated here itself (in the introduction of this sūkta) that the ṛks

uttiṣṭha brahmaṇaspate and praitu brahmaṇaspatiḥ, which are in the Prāgātha (Bṛhatī) metre, are to be recited. In the sacrifice called Pravargya, when the Hotṛ takes the Mahāvīra — the large clay vessel (pot) used in the sacrifice — and goes to the sacrificial hall, he should recite this ṛk praitu brahmaṇaspatiḥ and follow: this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Āś. 4-2) by the sūtra 'praitu brahmaṇaspatir ity anuvrajet'. In the leading forward of the Agni-Soma [victim] too this ṛk has application, as set forth by the sūtra of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Āś. 4-10) 'praitu brahmaṇaspatir hotā devo amartyaḥ'. - sūnṛtā — "although the word sūnṛtā means the goddess Uṣas (Ni. 2-[?]) and also 'food' (Ni. 2-[?]), since in this ṛk it is an attribute of devī, the commentator has explained it as 'the goddess of speech, in the form of pleasant truth'." - vīram — "the commentator has given for this word 'enemy': a powerful enemy." - naryam = narebhyo hitam — "[the sacrifice] that does good to men." - pañktirādhasam = brāhmaṇoktahaviṣpañktyādibhiḥ samṛddham — "In the Brāhmaṇas, such as the Aitareya, the word pañkti is used in the sense 'five', as related to oblations of many kinds. Rādhas means wealth. One may say 'having five kinds of wealth' or 'having wealth in the form of rows of oblations'. The word pañktirādhasam is not read anywhere else in the Ṛgveda but in this ṛk; therefore it is hard to give the exact sense of this word."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁴ - praitu: root in gatau, loṭ, third-person singular, etu; when pra + etu the ejī pararūpam... [print: eñi pararūpam] — एङि पररूपम् — [Pā. 6-1-94 as read]: before an eñ-initial root after a prefix ending in a, the pararūpa; this is barred by etyedhatyūṭhsu — एत्येधत्यूट्सु — [Pā. 6-1-89 as read]: when eti, edhati or ūṭh follows, vrddhi for the preceding and following vowels: a + e = ai. - devy etu: devī + etu; iko yaṇaci — [Pā. 6-1-77] gives y; the word devī is final-acute; udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya — उदात्तस्वरितयोर्यणः स्वरितोऽनुदात्तस्य — [Pā. 8-2-4 as read]: in the Saṃhitā the unaccented vowel after a yaṇ standing for an acute or svarita becomes svarita; so the following syllable is svarita. - naryam: "narebhyo hitam": ugavādibhyo yat — उगवादिभ्यो यत् — [Pā. 5-1-2 as read]: after words ending in u and the gavādi group, yat in the senses prescribed up to tena krītam; the print explains that this sūtra has no sense indicated and is related to the following sūtras with their sense-indications; so also in tasmai hitam [Pā. 5-1-5], ugavādibhyo yat is carried over: after a base ending in u or in the gavādi group, yat in the sense hita with the fourth case; nara + ya; yasyeti ca the loss of the a. - pañktirādhasam: "pañktivimśati..." — पङ्क्तिविंशतित्रिंशच्चत्वारिंशत्पञ्चाशत्षष्टिसप्तत्यशीतिनवतिशतम् — [Pā. 5-1-59 as read [?]]: the word pañkti is given as a nipāta ending in ti; pañcan + ti; loss of ṭi; pañc + ti; coḥ kuḥ: k; anuvāra and parasavarṇa: pañkti; the analysis "pañcaparimāṇasya pañktiḥ"; this analysis serves only to give the etymology, since the word is a rūḍhi word and is used in many senses — number four, ten, metre and the like are denoted by it. "Pañktibhī rādhnoti": a kāraka [instrumental] as upapada: gati-kāra-kopapadayoḥ pūrvapada-prakṛtis-varatvaṃ ca — [Uṇ. 4-226 as read [?]]: when a gati or kāraka is the upapada, after the root asi [asun] and the accent of the first member; the root rādha saṃsiddhau, then asi, and the accent of the first member. - yajñam: yaja devapūjādaḥ; yajayācayata-vichaprachrakṣo nañ — यजयाचयतविच्छप्रच्छरक्षो नङ् — [Pā. 3-3-90 as read]: nañ after these roots; yaj + na; stoḥ ścunā ścuḥ and yaño nāk kuḥ [as read, crowded]: the n becomes the fifth of the c-class; jajñayoḥ yogād... jñah: yajña. Translation: "The sacrificer who gives to the priest (vāghate) wealth that is sūnaram, easily led [= easily won, easy to take], that sacrificer, by the favour of Brahmaṇaspati, akṣiti, undiminished, śravaḥ, food, dhatte, obtains. Tasmai, for such a sacrificer, ilām, [the goddess] Ilā, the daughter of Manu ('Ilā indeed, the daughter of Manu, was the follower of the sacrifice' — from another Śruti), ā yajāmahe, we the priests worship on all sides. What kind of Ilā? Suvīrām, accompanied by fine heroes, warriors; supratūrṭim, greatly and strongly destroying [enemies]; anehasam, that cannot be injured by anyone. Dadāti: the first syllable of the reduplicated form is acute by anudātte ca; no nighāta because of the connection with yat. Sūnaram: 'sukhena nīyate'; khal by īṣad-duḥ-suṣu kṛcchrākṛcchrārtheṣu [Pā. 3-3-126]; the lengthening of the preverb by nipātasya ca. Akṣiti: 'of which there is no kṣaya'; a bahuvrihi, the accent of the first member; the rule nañ-subhyām does not apply, since all operations are optional in the Veda. Śravaḥ: 'śrūyate'; root śru śravaṇe; the suffix asun is nit, so first-syllable acute. Suvīrām: 'of whom the heroes are good'; the first syllable of the latter member by vīravīryau ca. Supratūrtim: turvī is in the sense of injuring; after it with pra, ktin in the abstract; 'of whom the smiting of enemies is excellent'; the accent of the latter member by parādīś chandasi bahulam; or it may be regarded as belonging to the kratvādi group. Anehasam: 'na hanyate', anehāḥ; by nañi hana eha ca [Uṇ. 4-223 (?)] the suffix asun and the substitute eha for the root; the loss of the n of nañ by [Pā. 6-3-73]; then the augment nuṭ before a vowel by [Pā. 6-3-74]."

Pratipadārtha — "yaḥ — which sacrificer; vāghate — to the priest; sūnaram — to be accepted with joy; vasu — wealth; dadāti — gives; saḥ — that sacrificer (by Brahmanaspati's favour); akṣiti — undiminishing; śravaḥ — food; dhatte — obtains; tasmai — for that sacrificer; suvīrām — with excellent heroes, accompanied by warriors; supratūrtim — one who destroys [enemies] well; anehasam — one who is not injured by others; ilām — [the goddess Ilā], aiming at Ilā-devī; ā yajāmahe — we sacrifice well."

— "When a sacrificer, at the time of the rite, gives to the priests who help his sacrifice wealth in rich measure, they accept it with joy. Such a sacrificer, by Brahmanaspati's favour, obtains food that does not diminish. Since the goddess Ilā, who destroys the crowd of enemies, is accompanied by exceedingly excellent heroes, enemies cannot injure her; she can wholly destroy enemies. Thus, aiming at the goddess Iḷā, daughter of Manu, who helps to bring the sacrifice to its end without hindrance, we perform the sacrifice for the sacrificer."

— "He who presents to the priest wealth fit to be accepted receives [sic] inexhaustible wealth ; for him, therefore we worship Ila possessed of brave warriors [sic], who inflicts injuries on enemies but cannot be herself injured."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), pp. 391–392 - vāghate = rtvije — "since among the eight names of the priest beginning with bhāratāḥ [as read], karavaḥ, the word vāghataḥ is read (Ni. 3-[?]-[?]), vāghate means 'to the priest'." - sūnaram = suṣṭhu nīyate iti sūnaram — "easy to take, convenient." - akṣiti = kṣayo nāstyasyeti akṣiti — "without decay; always, not less, very much." - iḷām — "the word iḷā has many senses: earth (Ni. 1-[?]), speech (Ni. 1-[?]), food (Ni. 2-[?]), cow (Ni. 2-[?]), and the deity named Iḷā (Ni. 11-[?]). Here it must be explained as aiming at the deity Iḷā." - suvīrām = śobhanā vīrā yasyāḥ sā suvīrā tām | śobhanair bhaṭair yuktām — "the goddess Iḷā united with brave warriors of war." - supratūrtim — "turvī hiṃsārthaḥ; śobhanā pratūrtiḥ śātrūṇāṃ hiṃsanam yasyāḥ sā tām | prakarṣeṇa śātrūṇāṃ hiṃsākāriṇīm — who strongly destroys enemies, that is, who ruins them." - anehasam — "na hanyata ity anehāḥ | kenāpy ahiṃsyām — who by no one can be injured, unstruck. The words suvīrām, supratūrtim, anehasam are attributes of the word iḷām."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁷ - dadāti: root ḍudāñ dāne; laṭ, tip; śap → ślu, doubling, shortening: dadāti; tip is pīṭ and unaccented. By anudātte ca — अनुदात्ते च — [Pā. 6-1-190 as read]: "in the sūtra na vidyate udāttaḥ yasmin saḥ anudāttaḥ, a bahuvrīhi: when a la-substitute sārvadhātuka with no acute follows, the first syllable of the reduplicate is acute", so first-syllable acute. Since māhismādās

[as read, crowded [?]] is constant, the explanation of anudātte is given so that first-syllable acute comes even after the loss of the i. By connection with yat the wholly-unaccented does not come. - sūnaram: root nūñ prāpaṇe, kryādi [the print says nyā nayane]; "sukhena nīyate": iṣad-duḥ-suṣu kṛcchrākṛcchrārtheṣu khal [Pā. 3-3-126 as read]: khal; sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ gives guṇa; in the Saṃhitā the lengthening of su by nipātasya ca [Pā. 6-3-136 as read]. - akṣiti: kṣi kṣaye akarmakaḥ, first class (the print adds kṣi as the 7th root of a class, [kṣi? [?]]); ktin; "na vidyate kṣitiḥ kṣayo yasya tat": a bahuvrīhi; nañ-subhyām — नञ्सुभ्याम् — [Pā. 6-2-172 as read [?]] would give a different accent, but since sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante [paribhāṣā] it does not apply; bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam — बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम् — [Pā. 6-2-1] gives the accent of the first member. - śravaḥ: "śrūyate iti śravaḥ": the Uṇādi asun after śru śravaṇe [Uṇ. 4-188 [?]]; being nit, first-syllable acute. - suvīrām: "śobhanāḥ vīrāḥ yasyām sāvīrā": she who is accompanied by excellent heroic warriors; accusative singular; vīravīryau ca — [Pā. 6-2-120 as read] gives first-syllable acute to the latter member. - supratūrtim: root turvī hiṃsārthaḥ, bhvādi; after it with the prefix pra, ktin in the abstract sense; "śobhanā = excellent, i.e. great; pratūrtiḥ = slaying of enemies; yasyām sāvīrā, that in whom it is": an attribute of ilām; parādiś chandasi bahulam [Pā. 6-1-199 as read [?]] gives the latter member first-syllable acute, as one may say; or else, by kratvādayaś ca — कृत्वादयश्च — [Pā. 6-2-118 as read [?]], the words of the kratvādi group that follow su are first-syllable acute. - anehasam: nañ + han + eha ca [Uṇ. 4-223 as read [?]]: when nañ is upapada, after the root han the suffix asi [asun], and eh becomes the substitute for han: na + eh + as; nalopo nañah [Pā. 6-3-73 as read]: the loss of the n of nañ when a latter member follows: only a + eh + as; tasmān nuḍaci [Pā. 6-3-74 as read]: after nañ whose n has been lost, a vowel-initial latter member takes nuḥ: a + n + eh + as = anehas; accusative singular. "Kālo diṣṭo 'py anehāpi" [Amara, as read [?]]: anehas is used in the sense of "time" in the lexicon;

but, as it has the sense of an etymological meaning (avayavārtha) and an adjoining word that needs it, the conventional sense is not taken here; as in "padmāni yatrāgrasaroruhāṇi" [as read, crowded [?]], where saroruha is conventional yet its etymological sense is taken; so here too. Translation: "The god Brahmaṇaspati nūnam, surely, pra vadati, utters a mantra, ukthyaṃ, fit for the śāstra; standing in the mouth of the hotṛ he utters it — the mantra in which Indra and all the other gods have made their abodes (okāṃsi, places). 'Such a mantra, expressing all the gods': so it is to be connected with the preceding. Mantram: root matri guptabhāṣaṇe; ac of the pacādi class; first-syllable acute by belonging to the vṛṣādi group. Ukthyaṃ: 'worthy of uktha'; the suffix ya in the sense 'fit for' by chandasi ca; or yat by bhave chandasi; since all operations are optional in the Veda, the first-syllable acute [by yato 'nāvaḥ] does not come, and by vyatyaya the svarita by tit svaritam. Okāṃsi: root uca samavāye; the Uṇādi asun in the locative sense, 'in which they come together'; because of the word bahulam, kutva is to be seen; and in oke ucaḥ ke [Pā. 7-3-64] the commentator [Vṛttikāra] has said 'bahulagrahaṇāt kutvam'. Cakrire: the suffix accent, since ire is cit; no nighāta because of the connection with yat."

Pratipadārtha — "brahmaṇaspatiḥ — the god Brahmanaspati; yasmin — in which mantra; indraḥ — Indra; varuṇaḥ — Varuṇa; mitraḥ — Mitra; aryamā — Aryaman [and the rest]; devāḥ — all deities; okāṃsi — places of dwelling; cakrire — have made [for themselves] (such a mantra expressing all the deities); ukthyam — fit for praise; mantram — the mantra; nūnam — certainly; pra vadati — (staying in the mouth of the hotṛ) says clearly."

Bhāvārtha — "In the mantra recited by the hotṛ at the time of the sacrifice, Indra, Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman and further all the deities have made their dwelling places; that is, the mantra expresses all the deities. Brahmanaspati, favouring the hotṛ and standing in his mouth, clearly recites this mantra, which is fit for praise and which expresses all the deities."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 395) — "Now, Brahmanaspati will sing forth a sacred prayer in which the gods Indra, Varuṇa, Mitra, and Aryaman have made their abode (have been praised)" ²⁰.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 395–396 - Application — "In the Agniṣṭoma sacrifice, at the time of reciting the Marutvatīya śāstra mantras, in order to praise Indra and the other deities in the Bṛhatī metre, the ṛks beginning pra nūnam brahmaṇaspatiḥ are to be recited: so it is explained in the section called Marutvatīya of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'pra nūnaṃ brahmaṇaspatir iti brāhmaṇaspatyaḥ' (Āś. 5-[?])." - varuṇo mitro aryamā — "Generally these three deities are praised together in many mantras. We give some examples: (1) आनो बर्हिरीशादसो वरुणो मित्रो अर्यमा । — ā no barhir riśādaso varuṇo mitro aryamā (R̥g. Saṃ. 1-26-4 [?]) — editorial and tentative: "to our barhis [come] Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman, devourers of enemies"; (2) देवासस्त्वा वरुणो मित्रो अर्यमा सं दूतं प्रत्नमिन्धते । — devāsas tvā varuṇo mitro aryamā saṃ dūtaṃ pratnam indhate (R̥g. Saṃ. 1-36-4 [?]) — "the gods, Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman, kindle you, the ancient messenger"; (3) यं रक्षन्ति प्रचेतसो वरुणो मित्रो अर्यमा । — yaṃ rakṣanti pracetaso varuṇo mitro aryamā (R̥g. Saṃ. 1-41-1 [?]) — "whom the wise Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman protect"; (4) कृणोतु मित्रो अर्यमा भगो नस्तुविजातो वरुणो दक्षो अंशः । — kṛṇotu mitro aryamā bhago nas tuvijāto varuṇo dakṣo aṃśaḥ (R̥g. Saṃ. 2-27-1 [?]) — "may Mitra, Aryaman, Bhaga, the mighty-born Varuṇa, Dakṣa, Aṃśa make [it] for us"; (5) बृहस्पतिः शर्म पूषेत नो यमद्वरूथ्यं वरुणो मित्रो अर्यमा । — br̥haspatiḥ śarma pūṣeta no yamad varūthyam varuṇo mitro aryamā (R̥g. Saṃ. 5-46-5 [?]) — "may Br̥haspati, Pūṣan, and Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman, grant us a sheltering refuge"; (6) सजोषसा वरुणो मित्रो अर्यमा । — sajoṣasā varuṇo mitro aryamā (R̥g. Saṃ. 4-[?]-[?]) — "united: Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman"; (7) रसं ते मित्रो अर्यमा पिबन्ति वरुणः कवे । — rasaṃ te mitro aryamā pibanti varuṇaḥ kave (R̥g. Saṃ. 9-64-24 [?]) — "Mitra, Aryaman, Varuṇa drink your juice, O seer"; (8) आर्यमणं वरुणं मित्रमेषामिन्द्राविष्णू मरुतो अश्विनोत । — āryamaṇaṃ varuṇaṃ mitram eṣāṃ indrāviṣṇū maruto aśvinota (R̥g. Saṃ. 4-2-4 [?]) — "of these, Aryaman, Varuṇa, Mitra, Indra and Viṣṇu, the Maruts and the Ásvins." The source leaves all eight untranslated; the glosses are editorial and tentative and every reference numeral is read with doubt [?]. "Such examples are as many as are needed in the R̥gveda." - devā okāṃsi cakrire — "the deities have made their dwelling places in this mantra; that is, the deities are praised in these mantras: this is the sense, that the praise is addressed to the deities."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²¹ - mantram: root matri guptabhāṣaṇe, tenth class [print: "10th class"]; idit, so idito num dhātoḥ [Pā. 7-1-58 as read] gives the augment num; nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ [Pā. 3-1-134 as read] the suffix ac of the pacādi kind; since the suffix is cit it would be final-acute by citaḥ [Pā. 6-1-163], but the vṛṣādi group is an ākṛtigāṇa, so this word is added to it, and by vṛṣādīnām ca [Pā. 6-1-203] it is first-syllable acute. - ukthyam: root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; pāṭṛtudivacirecicibhyas thak — पात्रुदिवचिरिचिसिचिभ्यस्थक् — [Uṇ. 2-7[?]] the suffix thak; vacisvapīyajādīnām kiti — the saṃprasāraṇa: u; pūrvarūpa: ukth; "uktham arhati"; chandasi ca [Pā. 5-1-67 as read] after prātipadika words in the sense "he deserves" [taram arhati, as printed] the suffix ya; or by bhave chandasi [Pā. 4-4-110 as read [?]] yat in the locative-ending sense of bhava; the print explains that prāggitāt yat [Pā. 4-4-75 as read] and the sūtra tasmai hitam [Pā. 5-1-5] with its sense-indication are given in a certain order, and that in bhave chandasi [Pā. 4-4-110] the sense bhava is given, so yat is carried over by adhikāra but chandasi ca has no sense-indication; hence prākkrītāc cha [Pā. 5-1-1] does not reach there; yato 'nāvaḥ [Pā. 6-1-213 as read] gives final-acute but, since all operations are optional in the Veda, it is not applied; tīt svaritam [Pā. 6-1-185 as read] gives svarita; in the first alternative by vyatyayo bahulam the svarita. ²² - okāṃsi: uca samavāye; "samavayanty atra", people gather here to dwell; the Uṇādi asun in the sense of locus; the substitute k for c by bahulagrahaṇa; the Vṛttikāra says in the sūtra oke ucaḥ ke [Pā. 7-3-64 as read]: "bahulagrahaṇāt kutvaṃ draṣṭavyam". The print then argues that, if the suffix ka of igupadhajñā... [Pā. 3-1-135] is added to the root uc, then guṇa and kutva are specified in oke ucaḥ ke, giving oka ending in a; with

22. Crowded; drift only.

ghañ by halas ca the kutva by cajoḥ ku gñnyatoḥ comes and guṇa, oka — [accent] first-syllable acute, so not final-acute; for that reason the sūtra oke ucaḥ was made; it too ends in a. Here there is a word ending in s; the process is to be stated as before. - cakrire: root ḍukṛñ karāṇe, liṭ, ātmanepada, jha; liṭas tajhayor eśirec — लिटस्तझयोरेशिरेच् — [Pā. 3-4-81 as read]: ire for jha; the prohibition of the substitute by dvirvacane 'ci; doubling, kṛ + kṛ + ire; uraṭ, raparatva; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ loses the r; kuhoś cuḥ [Pā. 7-4-62] c for k: ca + kṛ + ire; yaṇ: cakrire. Irec is cit, hence the final-acute accent by citaḥ; because of the connection with yat in yasmin, yadvṛttān nityam prohibits wholly-unaccented. Translation: "O gods, Brahmaṇaspati and the rest, tam it, that very mantra that expresses all the deities beginning with Indra, vidatheṣu, in the sacrifices, vocema, we, the priests, would speak. What kind? Śambhuvam, bringing about happiness; anehasam, not to be injured, free from fault. O narah, leaders, gods, imāṃ vācam, this speech in the form of a mantra, uttered by us, pratiharyatha ca, if you desire it — viśvā it vāmā, then all the lovely speech vaḥ aśnavat, may it reach you. Vocema: root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; the benedictive (āśīrliṇ); aṇ after liṇ in the benedictive sense; the augment um for vaca; since by chandasy ubhayathā the liṇ is sārvadhātuka, the loss of the s of yāsuṭ; the substitute iya for ya by ato yeyah; guṇa by ād guṇah; the verb is unaccented by tiṇ atinaḥ. Vidatheṣu: root vida jñāne: 'vidyate, it is known as the means of the fruit': vidathaḥ, a sacrifice; the suffix atha by ruvidibhyām kit [Uṇ. 3-118 [?]]. Śambhuvam: from bhū with an implicit causative sense, kvip by kvip ca; the yaṇ-substitution by oḥ supi [Pā. 6-4-83] is prohibited by na bhūsudhiyoḥ [Pā. 6-4-85]. Pratiharyatha: root harya gatikāntyoḥ; the śap being pit is unaccented; the verb takes the accent of the root. In imāṃ ca the word ca is in the sense of cet, 'if'; it is a different particle ceṇ, not in the sense of conjunction; therefore the prohibition of nighāta by yadyadihanta... [Pā. 8-1-30]. Aśnavat: root aśū vyāptau; leṭ with the augment aṭ; parasmaipada by vyatyaya; the loss of the i by itaś ca lopah; guṇa by the rule that when iyañ/uvāñ and guṇa/vṛddhi conflict, the later rule [guṇa] applies (Kāśikā [?])."

Pratipadārtha — "devāḥ — O Brahmaṇaspati and the other deities; śambhuvam — one that brings happiness; anehasam — also faultless; tam it mantram — that very mantra (that expresses all the deities, Indra and the rest); vidatheṣu — in sacrifices; vocema — we, the priests, recite; naraḥ — O leaders, all deities; imām — which is recited by us, this mantra-form; vācam — speech; pratiharyatha — if you desire (have wished for); viśvet vāmā — all speech dear to you; vaḥ — you; aśnavat — may it pervade."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Brahmaṇaspati and the other deities, we recite in the sacrifices that mantra which brings happiness, is faultless, and expresses all the deities. O deities, you are our leaders. If our speech in the form of the mantra, which we the priests recite, is good for you and desired by you, then may all our speech, dear to you, pervade you; may it bring you satisfaction."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 399)

— "O gods, we will recite that delightful and faultless prayer in our sacrifices ; O brave leaders, if you desire to hear that prayer, that all that is said will reach you."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 400 - vidatheṣu = yajñeṣu — "vidyate phalasāadhanatvena jñāyate iti vidathaḥ yajñāḥ: since the word vidathaḥ is read among the fifteen names of sacrifice beginning with yajñāḥ, vena (Ni. 3-17 [?]), vidatheṣu means 'in sacrifices'." - śambhuvam = sukhasya bhāvayitāram — "that which makes happiness; delightful to hear." - anehasam = ahiṃsanīyam | doṣarahitam — "faultless, without any deficiency." - imām ca vācam — "this speech in the form of praise." - pratiharyatha — "harya gatikāntyoḥ: desire, wish to hear." - vāmā = vananīyā vāk — "pervading speech, that is, speech that all wish to hear." - aśnavat = vyāpnuyāt — "let it pervade, let it reach you, let it be heard by you."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁴ - vocema: root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; āśirliṇ, uttama plural mas; nityaṃ nitaḥ — नित्यं डितः — [Pā. 3-4-99 as read [?]]: the s at the end of a nit [liṇ] first-person ending is always lost; yāsuṭ; liṇyāśiṣy aṇ — लिङ्याशिष्यङ् — [Pā. 3-1-86 as read [?]]: in the Veda, after roots in the benedictive liṇ, the vikaraṇa aṇ; this is stated in general, but the vikaraṇa is seen mostly only after the roots sthā, gā, gam, vac, vid, śak, ruh; when aṇ comes: vac + a + yās + ma; vaca um — वच उम् — [Pā. 7-4-20 as read [?]]: the augment um for vac before aṇ; chandasy ubhayathā gives the benedictive also sārvadhātuka name; liṇaḥ salopo 'nantyasya [Pā. 7-2-79 as read [?]]: the loss of the non-final s of a sārvadhātuka liṇ; ato yeyaḥ — अतो येयः — [Pā. 7-2-80 as read [?]]: iya for the yā of a sārvadhātuka liṇ after a short a; v + uc + a + iya + ma; lopo vyor vali [Pā. 6-1-66] loss of y; ād guṇaḥ gives o for a + u and e for a + i: vocema; tiṇ atinaḥ wholly unaccented. - vidatheṣu: vida jñāne, adādi [print: vida jñāne, vidyate svargādīphalagaḷige sādhana]; "vidathaḥ means yajña, the word vidatha in the sense of sacrifice"; rudiśvidibhyām kit [Uṇ. 3-118 as read [?]]: atha after rudir aśruvimocane and vida jñāne; it is kit, so no guṇa of the light penultimate; the print holds that this reading of the sūtra (with gājñ-kuṭādi... [Pā. 1-2-1]) agrees with the Mahābhāṣya; and notes that some commentators (the Daśapādīvr̥ttikāra) read rudividibhyām kit, with whom athaj of the earlier bhāṣya would not be consistent; hence these views are not the accepted ones. - śambhuvam: "śaṃ bhāvayatīti śambhūḥ": kvip ca [Pā. 3-2-76 as read [?]] after bhū; śambhū + am; oḥ supi — ओः सुप्ति — [Pā. 6-4-83 as read [?]]: the yaṇ substitution for the final u/ū of a root-ending stem before an ac-initial sup; prohibited by na bhūsudhiyoḥ — न भूसुधियोः — [Pā. 6-4-85 as read [?]]; aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor

īyaṇuvaṇau [Pā. 6-4-77] gives uvaṇ. - mantram: "the process was given in the preceding mantra Rik 5." anehasam: "described in the earlier Rik 4, where it was separated." - pratiharyatha: root harya gatikāntyoḥ, first class; tha, śap, with the prefix prati; because śap is pit it is unaccented; tāsyānudāttet... makes the la-substitute sārvadhātuka tha unaccented; by the root accent haryatha is first-syllable acute; by tiṇ codāttavati [Pā. 8-1-71] prati is unaccented. - imām ca: "the ca here is not the ca in the sense of conjunction; it is the particle ceṇ [i.e. cet, 'if'] with its ṇ an indicatory letter, leaving ca; hence its sense is 'if'. By nipātair yadyadihantakuvinnec cec caṇ kaccid yatrayuktam — निपातैर्यद्यदिहन्तकुविन्नेच्चेच्चणकच्चिद्यत्रयुक्तम् — [Pā. 8-1-30 as read] it is meant that what is joined with these particles is not unaccented"; so the wholly-unaccented does not come to pratiharyatha; the bhāṣya shows the direct connection as "pratiharyatha ca". - aśnavat: root aśū vyāptau; leṭ, tip; the augment aṭ by leṭo 'ḍāṭau; itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu the loss of the i; aś + nu + at when the śnu vikaraṇa comes; āc-chnudhātu...; the substitute uvaṇ [Pā. 6-4-87 as read] and guṇa [Pā. 7-3-84] both being possible, the later rule, guṇa, prevails; from the Kāśikā text īyejuvaṇbhyām guṇavṛddhī bhavato vipraṭiṣedhena (Pā. 6-4-88 as read [?]): "where īyaṇ/uvaṇ are taught and guṇa/vṛddhi both obtain simultaneously, by the paribhāṣā vipraṭiṣedhe paraṃ kāryam the latter, guṇa or vṛddhi, is applied." Translation: "Devayantam, desiring the gods — janam, [which] man — kaḥ aśnavat, who would reach? Who else, other than Brahmaṇaspati, which god would reach [him]? Likewise vṛktabarhiṣam, [a sacrificer] who has clipped his sacred grass for the rite — which other god would reach him? Dāśvān, the sacrificer who has given an oblation, pastyābhiḥ, with men, with priests, prapra asthita, has set forth well, set out towards the place of the divine rite. Antarvāvat, possessed of much wealth stored inside — or: possessed of many kinds of speech belonging to the sons and grandsons within — kṣayam, a dwelling, a house, dadhe, he bears. [For the grammatical tail:] Prapra: by prasamupodaḥ pādapūraṇe [Pā. 8-1-6] the doubling of pra; the second is unaccented by anudāttaṃ ca. Asthita: root ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau; ātmanepada by samavaprabhayaḥ sthaḥ [Pā. 1-3-22]; sthāghvor ic ca [Pā. 1-2-17]; the loss of s by hrasvād aṅgāt [Pā. 8-2-27]. Antarvāvat: root vā gatigandhanayoḥ; 'antarvānti', that which goes within — sons, cattle and so on: antarvāḥ; the suffix vic by āto manin...; then matup; since matup is pīt and unaccented, the accent of the first member of a compound ending in a kṛt; or kvip from vāvadīti. Kṣayam: 'kṣiyanti, they dwell in it': kṣayaḥ; gha in the locative sense by pum̐si saṃjñāyām; first-syllable acute as 'kṣayo nivāsaḥ'."

Pratipadārtha — "devayantam — [the sacrificer] desiring the help of the gods; janaḥ — the sacrificer; kaḥ — (other than Brahmanaspati) which other deity himself; aśnavat — will approach? vṛktabarhiṣam — [the sacrificer] who has the darbha grass collected (for the sacrificial rite); kaḥ — which other deity himself (will come and join [him])? dāśvān — the sacrificer who offers the oblation; pastyābhiḥ — together with the priests; pra pra asthita — has set out (towards the place of the divine sacrifice); [that sacrificer] antarvāvat — rich in much wealth within, or accompanied by sons and grandsons; kṣayam — his own dwelling, the house; dadhe — has."

Bhāvārtha — "To the sacrificer who desires the gods — which deity, other than Brahmanaspati, will himself come? Which other deity will himself come near the sacrificer who has collected and spread darbha sticks so that the gods may come and sit? Now the sacrificer has come to the place of sacrifice together with the priests to offer oblations to the deities. The sacrificial house of that sacrificer is full of many invaluable things; or it is full of people such as sons and grandsons."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 403) — "Who, except Brahmanaspati, will approach the man desirous of worshipping the gods ? who will approach the sacrificer by whom clipped sacred grass is spread (for the gods to sit on) ? the giver of oblations has proceeded with his priests to the sacrificial hall which is full of precious things." ²⁶

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 404 - Main intention —

"A man who wishes to propitiate the deities looks for Brahmaṇaspati alone; so, apart from him, which other deity will come to such a man? Which other deity will come to the sacrificer who has clipped and spread darbha sticks as seats for the gods to sit on? Apart from Brahmaṇaspati no other deity will come. Such a sacrificer, to propitiate Brahmaṇaspati, has come to his sacrificial hall, prepared with objects of great value, together with the priests who are his helpers." - devayantam = devān kāmāyamānam — "one who wishes to worship the gods" (the source adds the English: "One who desires to worship the gods"). - vṛktabarhiṣam — "a seat of darbha grass made by cutting the tips of kuśa grass and spreading them, layer upon layer, three-fold, so that the gods may come and sit on the sacrificial altar. The tips of the cut darbha are called barhis. A seat spread with such darbha is called vṛktabarhis, and the sacrificer who has prepared it is called vṛktabarhiṣa by usage." - pra pra asthita = prasthitavān — "set out. For the sake of filling the pāda, the preverb pra is repeated." - pastyābhiḥ = gṛhāntarvartibhir manuṣyair ṛtvigbhiḥ — "with the priests." - antarvāvat — "vā gatigandhanayoḥ; antarvānti gacchantīty antarvāḥ putrapaśvādayaḥ, te yasmin santi iti antarvāvat. The root vā has the sense 'going'. Because they go antaḥ, inside, they are called antarvāḥ: sons, grandsons and so on in the house, cattle and so on, or other useful things. Antarvāvat means a place that has them, the house; the intention is a house full of excellent things. Here 'house' means the sacrificial house; so a sacrificial hall prepared with the means of sacrifice — oblations, ghee, sacrificial instruments, priests and so on." - kṣayam — "kṣiyanti nivasanty asminn iti kṣayaḥ: since it is a place fit to live in, kṣaya means dwelling-place."

Translation: "The god Brahmaṇaspati kṣatram, strength, upa prñcīta, would unite [with himself]; make it joined with his own self. Then with the rājabhiḥ, the kings Varuṇa and the others, hanti, he slays: he makes the enemies die. Bhaye cit, even in a battle that is the cause of fear, suksītiṁ dadhe, he holds a firm and sound steadiness of position; he does not flee. For this vajriṇaḥ, thunderbolt-bearer [Brahmaṇaspati], who has the thunderbolt and other weapons, in the mahādhane, great-wealth [= battle], that arises for much wealth, vartā, one who sets [it] going, na asti, there is none; no one at all; the sense is that he moves of his own will. 'Mahādhana' is a name of battle, since it is read among its names ('mahādhane samīke'). Likewise tarutā, one who steps across or surpasses [him], there is no other; and in the small fight (arbhe) also, there is no other who causes it to go on. Prñcīta: root prci samparke; liñ; śnam by the rudhādi class; the loss of a by śnasor allopaḥ; the accent of the suffix. In kṣatram prñcīta rājabhir hanti ca — since the sense of conjunction (ca) is perceived — the dropping of a cādi word, by vibhāṣā [Pā. 8-1-63]: the prohibition of nighāta for the first verb. Hanti is a second verb, but because it follows a tiñ it is not unaccented. Sukṣitim: 'a fine kṣiti'; the final-acute of the latter member by the rule beginning [ktin...] [crowded (?)]. Vartā: from vrtu vartane or vṛñ; the iṭ is not applied because the teaching of augments is not constant. Tarutā: root tru plavanataraṇayoḥ [print: tvā]; the augment uṭ is irregularly given before tṛc by grasita-skabhita...; first-syllable [final] acute by citaḥ. Mahādhane: mahat + dhana; ā for mahat by ān mahataḥ [Pā. 6-3-46]; by this word the battle that is the cause of it is indicated. Ārbhe: root ṛ gatau; bhan by ārtigrbhyām bhan [Uṇ. 3-141 (?)]; because it is nit, first-syllable acute."

29. In the bhāṣya's grammatical tail the rule-name behind "mankkinn ity ādinā" (for the accent of suksīti) and the words "vṛṇo tevā" are crowded and doubtful [?].

Pratipadārtha — "(brahmaṇaspatiḥ — Brahmaṇaspati) kṣatram — [his own] strength; upa prñcīta — would concentrate in himself; (by that strength) rājabhiḥ — together with the kings, Varuṇa and the others; hanti — he kills the enemies; bhaye cit — even in a fearsome battle; sukṣitim — the steadiness (without flight) in his own place; dadhe — he holds; vajriṇaḥ — [of him who has] weapons such as the thunderbolt; asya — of this Brahmaṇaspati; mahādhane — in a battle fought for abundant wealth; vartā — one who turns [him back] (none else); na asti — there is none (he goes on, moved by his own strength); likewise; tarutā — one who defeats [him], frightening him into flight; na — [none else]; arbhe — in a small battle also; na — [none] such does so."

Bhāvārtha

— "Brahmaṇaspati gathers all his strength and, with the help of the kings, Mitra, Varuṇa and the others, destroys the enemies. Even in the face of any danger in battle he is steady. When he is armed with the thunderbolt, there is no man who can oppose or defeat him, either in a great battle or in a small one."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 408)

— "Brahmanaspati will concentrate his strength ; with the help of royal gods, (Varuna and others) he kills his enemies ; he firmly hold [sic] his ground even in times of danger ; when he is armed with his thunderbolt no one can resist or defeat in a battle great or small."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 408 - kṣatram = balam — "strength; power; ability." - upa prñcīta — "prcī samparke: let him unite, let him concentrate [at one point]." - rājabhiḥ — "Here, by rājānaḥ, kings, are meant the deities spoken of before: Indra, Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman: 'together with those deities'." - bhaye — "in the battle that makes fear, or in time of calamity." - suksitim = nivāsasthairyam — "he stands firm; steady, without running away in fear." - vartā = pravartayitā — "one who opposes. There is none who opposes him in battle; he himself is the opposer of all." - tarutā — "he who goes beyond him, that is, who defeats or conquers him." - mahādhane — "since the word mahādhane is read among the forty-odd names of battle beginning with raṇaḥ, vivākaḥ (Ni. 2-[?]), the word means 'in battle'. The commentator explains the etymological sense: a great battle fought to obtain great wealth." - arbhe — "since the word arbhaka is read among the words for 'small' beginning with rhan, hrasvaḥ (Ni. 3-[?]), arbhe means 'in a small battle, in a small fight'."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁰ - prñcīta: root prcī samparke, rudhādi; vidhiliñ, ta; sīyut; rudhādibhyaḥ śnam [Pā. 3-1-78]; śnasor allopaḥ [Pā. 6-4-111 as read] the loss of the a of śna before a kit or ñit sārvadhātuka; liṇaḥ salopo 'nantyasya the loss of the s; n → anusvāra and the following homorganic: prñcīta; the accent is that of the suffix. "Brahmaṇaspatiḥ balaṃ prñcīta, tataḥ rājabhiḥ saha hanti ca": since the sense of ca [conjunction] is perceived, by cādilope vibhāṣā [Pā. 8-1-63 as read] the prohibition of the wholly-unaccented applies to prñcīta, the first verb. - hanti: "although this is not the first verb, the verb prñcīta stands before it; so tiñ atinaḥ does not make it wholly unaccented." - vartā: vṛtu vartane (first class) or vṛñ varaṇe (svādi): after one of these, tṛc; because of "āgamaśāstram anityam" the iṭ does not come to tṛc; if the first root is taken, laghūpadhaguna; jhaloḥ... sa-varṇe (the loss of a t); if the second, sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ gives guṇa: varṭr. Nominative singular su; ṛduśanaspurudaṃso 'nehasām ca — ऋदुशनस्पुरुदंसोऽनेहसां च — [Pā. 7-1-94 as read]: anāñ substitute; aprāpt... [as read]; ata upadhāyāḥ...: lengthening of the penultimate; halñyābbhyaḥ... the loss of su; nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya the loss of the n. - tarutā: tṛ plavanataraṇayoḥ; grasitaskabhitastabhitottabhitacitta-vikastā-viśastr-śamstr-śāstr-tarutr... — ग्रसितस्कभितस्तभितोत्तभितचित्तविकस्ताविशस्तृशंस्तृशास्तृतरुत्... — [Pā. 7-2-34 as read]: in this sūtra the augment uṭ is nipātita for the tṛc after the root tṛ: tṛ + utr; guṇa: tarutr; su is raised as before; by citaḥ [Pā. 6-1-163] the final-acute. - mahādhane: mahat ca tad dhanam ca; viśeṣaṇam viśeṣyeṇa bahulam [Pā. 2-1-57 as read]: a compound; ān mahataḥ samānādhikaraṇajātīyayoḥ — आन्महतः समानाधिकरणजातीययोः — [Pā. 6-3-46 as read]: when a latter member in apposition or a jātīya suffix follows, the t of mahat becomes ā; so mahā + dhana. "The battle, which is the cause of great wealth, is conveyed by implication." - arbhe: r gatau; ārtigrbhyām bhan [Uṇ.

3-141 as read [?]], after the roots r gatau and gṛ nigaraṇe the suffix bhan: r + bha; guṇa: arbha; the suffix is nit, so first-syllable acute. Rik 8 ends here (| | 8 | |).

Close of Sūkta 40. Printed on p. 409 after the grammar: "illige 4one sūkta pūrṇavu" — "Here the 40th sūkta is complete." ³¹ A flourish follows. With it the Fifth Sūkta of the Eighth Anuvāka (printed pp. 376–409) ends. The next leaf, p. 410 = PDF 424, carries the title "nalavattondaneya sūktavu" ("the forty-first sūkta"), the Sanskrit introduction and Kannada anuvāda of Sūkta 41 (yaṃ rakṣanti, nine Riks, ṛṣi Kaṇva Ghaura, deities Varuṇa–Mitra–Aryaman [Riks 1–3 and 7–9] and the Ādityas [Riks 4–6], Gāyatrī metre), and the heading of Sūkta 41; these are not yet written and belong to the next session.

Summary of Sūkta 40.

Eight Riks to Brahmanaspati. Rik 1 calls him to rise and asks the Maruts to come near and Indra to drink the Soma with him; Rik 2 says the man who praises Brahmanaspati and the Maruts for wealth will obtain horses and heroism; Rik 3 invites Brahmanaspati, the goddess Sūnṛtā and the other gods to drive the enemy away and lead the worshippers to the sacrifice; Rik 4 promises undiminishing food to the sacrificer who gives to the priests and praises Ilā; Rik 5 says Brahmanaspati speaks a mantra in which Indra, Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryaman dwell; Rik 6 offers that mantra to the gods; Rik 7 asks which other god would come to the sacrificer; Rik 8 says Brahmanaspati unites his strength with the royal gods and none can resist him, great or small. All eight Riks are written in full; the heavily crowded grammar passages are characterized only.

6. The Saṃhitā prints nū, the Pada nu.

Pratipadārtha — "pracetasah — those of excellent knowledge; varuṇaḥ — Varuṇa; mitraḥ — Mitra; and aryamā — Aryaman; yam — which sacrificer [the performer of the sacrifice]; rakṣanti — they protect; sah janaḥ — that sacrificer; nū cit — carefully [quickly]; dabhyate — destroys [the enemies]."

Bhāvārtha

— "The sacrificer whom Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryaman, the deities of excellent knowledge, protect, carefully destroys his enemies."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 412)

— "That person whom wise Varuna, Mitra, and Aryaman protect quickly defeats his enemies."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 412 - pracetasah = prakṛṣṭajñānayuktāḥ — "those who are endowed with excellent knowledge, the wise." - nū cit = kṣiprameva — "swiftly, quickly." - dabhyate — "dambhu dambhe; dabhnoti iti śatrūn hinasti — he destroys enemies; or, if the sense of the passive use must be given: nū cit dabhyate, 'he is not injured by the enemy' — in this context the word nū must be taken in the sense of a negative, na."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁷ - rakṣanti: root rakṣa pālāne, first class; because of the connection with yat (yam) the wholly-unaccented form does not come. - pracetasah: "prakṛṣṭaṃ cetāḥ yeṣāṃ te": a bahuvrīhi; the accent of the first member. - varuṇaḥ: kṛvādārībhya uṇan [Uṇ., as read (?)]: the suffix uṇan [print: unan]; since it is nit the first syllable is acute. - nū: the lengthening by the sūtra ṛci tunughamakṣu... [as read]. - dabhyate: dambhu dambhe, svādi; the śnu vikaraṇa would properly come, but by vyatyayo bahulam [as read] śyan comes, and by the same sūtra the ātmanepada in place of the parasmaipada: dan bh + ya + te [print: darbh+ya+te]; because śyan is sārvadhātukam apit it is ñit; by anidito hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti the penultimate nasal is lost; since anusvāra and parasavarṇa are treated as non-existent (asiddha), it is to be understood that the nasal is present as far as the sūtra that gives the loss is concerned. Rik 1 ends here (| | 1 | |).

Translation: "The sacrificer whom Varuṇa and the other gods piprati, fill with wealth. The example: bāhutā iva — as a company of arms (bāhuvarga) fetches the wealth needed and fills his own [house], so. And the mortal, the man, the sacrificer whom they protect from riṣaḥ, from a destroyer, that whole sacrificer, ariṣṭaḥ, uninjured by anyone, edhate, prospers. Bāhuteva: bāhutā is 'arm-ness'; by this abstract word the arms, as that on which it rests, are indicated; or the suffix tal in the sense of a collection is to be seen;
the syllable before the suffix is acute by lit. Piprati: root pyā pālanapūraṇayoḥ (some read pai); ślu because of the juhotyādi class; i in the reduplicate by ārtipipyor ṛś ca [print as read]; the first syllable acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ. Pānti: no nighāta, since it follows a tiṇ or because it is at the beginning of a pāda. Riṣaḥ:
root riṣa hiṃsāyām, kvip; the ending acute by sāvekāca. Ariṣṭaḥ:
the prohibition of iṭ by ekāca...; ṣatva by vraścādi...; the accent of the first member in a nañ-compound with an indeclinable."

Pratipadārtha — "bāhuteva — as with his own arms (bringing in as much as he wishes) he fills; yam — which sacrificer; piprati
— [Varuṇa and the other deities] fill with wealth; and martyam — which man; riṣaḥ — from a harming enemy; pānti — they protect; sarvaḥ — each such (sacrificer); ariṣṭaḥ — uninjured by anyone; edhate — grows."

Bhāvārtha

— "As one fills himself with as much goods as he needs, bringing them with his own arms, so Varuṇa and the other deities fill the sacrificer with wealth, and the man whom they protect from an injuring enemy attains prosperity without any hindrance."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 414)

— "He whom they (gods) help with riches, as if collected by his own arms ; the man whom they defend from the malignant ; every such man safe from injury prospers."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 414 - bāhuteva = svakīyo bāhuvargo 'pekṣitaṃ dhanam ānīya yathā pūrayati tadvat — "as one's own arms bring as much wealth as he needs and fill [his house]." - piprati = pūrayanti — "they fill, they make full." - riṣaḥ = himsakāt — "from the enemy who injures." - ariṣṭaḥ — "free from the injury of enemies or from hindrance."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁸ - bāhuteva: tasya bhāvas tvatalau — तस्य भावस्त्वतलौ — [Pā. 5-1-119 as read (?)]: the suffix tal in the abstract sense; by the abstract word bāhutā the arms, as the support of bāhutva, are indicated by implication; or else, by grāmajanabandhubhyas tal — ग्रामजनबन्धुभ्यस्तल् — [Pā. 4-2-43 as read (?)], tal is prescribed after grāma and the like in the sense of collection, and by Vedic usage the same holds for bāhu; liti [Pā. 6-1-193 as read (?)]: the syllable before the suffix is acute. - piprati: root pyā pālanapūraṇayoḥ, juhotyādi (some read it as pr, ending in a short vowel); after it laṭ, jhi; ad abhyastāt — अदभ्यस्तात् — [Pā. 7-1-4 as read] at for jh; śap → ślu; ślau doubling: pr + pr + ati; if the root ends in a long vowel, uraṭ is not obtained as stated; the print says the r-form reading is not in conformity with Pāṇini, who in his view reads the root with a Vedic shortening (chāṇḍasa hrasva) — "'pāṇinīyamate tu taṃ rodasī piprtam', in this and in similar passages Bhaṭṭoji Dikṣita has said that the shortening is Vedic [chāndasatvaṃ śaraṇam]"'; ur at gives a in the reduplicate, with raparatva; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ the loss of r; ārtipipartyoś ca — ऋतिपिपत्योश्च — [Pā. 7-4-77 as read (?)]: the a of the reduplicate of the roots r, pr (or pā) takes i when ślu has come: pipr + ati; yaṇ: piprati; by abhyastānām ādiḥ — first-syllable acute. - pānti: root pā rakṣaṇe; since it stands after a verb, or at the beginning of a pāda, tiṇ atīṇaḥ does not make it wholly unaccented. - riṣaḥ: riṣa hiṃsāyām; kvip ca [Pā. 3-2-76 as read] kvip; jas; sāvekācaḥ... the ending is acute. - ariṣṭaḥ: riṣa hiṃsāyām, tudādi [print: riṣa]; after it kta; this being in the list riś-ruś-liś-viś-sprś-kṛṣaḥ (the anudāttopadeśa roots enumerated), it is unaccented; ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt — the prohibition of i; vraścabhrasjasrjamṛjayajarājabhrājachśām ṣaḥ [Pā. 8-2-36 as read] gives ṣ for the ś; ṣṭutva; "na riṣṭaḥ": a nañ-compound; tatpuruṣe tulyārtha... gives the accent of the first member as an indeclinable. Bhāvārtha — "Varuṇa and the other deities destroy, before those devotees who worship them with devotion, the strongholds and cities of their enemies and in the end the enemies themselves, completely. In the same way they destroy all the sins, the enemies within, of the sacrificer." ¹¹

The main intention: these three deities, Varuṇa and the others, first destroy the enemies' cities, then the enemies; afterwards they remove the sins of the devotees who praise them."

Pratipadārtha — "ādityāsaḥ — O Ādityas; ṛtam yate — going for the sacrifice; vaḥ — for your host; panthāḥ — the road; sugaḥ — easy to travel; anṛkṣaraḥ — free from thorns (stones, thorns); atra — in this rite; avakhādaḥ — an oblation to be rejected and that causes disgust (to you); na asti — is not [there] (so be kind and come)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Ādityas, the road that comes to this place of sacrifice is easy for your host to travel and is free from stones and thorns. The oblations that we offer with devotion are not disgusting to you; they are tasty and bring you satisfaction."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 419)

— "Adityas, your path leading to the Sacrifice is easy and free from thorns ; no unworthy oblation is here prepared for you."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 419–420 - sugaḥ = suṣṭhu gantum śakyah — "a road easy to go along." - anṛkṣaraḥ — "ṛṣī gatau | ṛṣanty antargacchantīty ṛkṣarāḥ kaṇṭakāḥ: the root ṛṣī has the sense 'going, entering'. What enters the body when one walks is a thorn, which is called ṛkṣara. A road without ṛkṣaras is called anṛkṣara." - ṛtam — "ṛta means sacrifice. 'satyaṃ vā yajñam vā' (Ni. 4-[?]) says the Nirukta statement." yate = gacchate — "to you who go." - avakhādaḥ — "khāda bhakṣaṇe; avamataḥ

Bhāvārtha

— "O Ādityas, who are guides, may that sacrifice which you lead to its end in a straight and true way bring satisfaction to you by [your] drinking of Soma and eating of oblations."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 422)

— "O Adityas, may that sacrifice which you supervise by proper means be to you for your gratification."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 422 - ṛjunā pathā — "by a true way, a proper one — that is, one enjoined by the śāstra, an orderly way." - dhītaye = dheṭ pāne — "for the sake of drinking, that is, for the sake of drinking the Soma that is part of the sacrifice." - naśat = naśatir gatyarthaḥ — "may it come, may it reach you: that is, may satisfaction come to you by the drinking of Soma at the sacrifice."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁷ - nayatha: root ṇñ prāpane, first class; laṭ, madhyama plural tha; ṇo naḥ [Pā. 6-1-65 as read (?]): n for the initial ṇ; śap; nī + a + tha, guṇa, ay-substitution; because of the connection with yam the wholly-unaccented does not come; the śap is unaccented, and by tāsyānudāttet... the tha is unaccented; the root accent remains; ānyeṣām api dṛśyate [Pā. 6-3-137 as read (?)] gives the long vowel in the Saṃhitā. - ādityāḥ: "explained in the earlier mantra." - pathā: ṭā after pathin; bhasya ṭer lopah [Pā. 7-1-88 as read (?]): the ṭi of pathin, mathin, ṛbhukṣin in the bha-name is lost, so the in goes; this is acute, as said in the preceding mantra; the loss of an acute being caused by the ṭā-ending, it becomes the occasion of the bha-name; anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopah [Pā. 6-1-161 as read (?]): the unaccented that is the cause of the loss of an acute becomes acute; so the ending is acute. - dhītaye: root dheṭ pāne; ādeca upadeśe 'ṣiti [Pā. 6-1-45 as read (?)] gives ā to a root ending in e, o, ai, au in the upadeśa — but this does not occur before a suffix beginning with ś and an ñit/kit kasya...; so the ā after the e; ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām [Pā.

19. The English translation, Special Topics and grammar of Rik 6 begin on p. 425, not yet written.

20. from p. 425

English Translation (the source's own, p. 425)

— "That mortal whom you favour, obtains without any obstacles, all valuable wealth, and progeny like himself."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 425 - tokam — "tuk; since the word tokam is read among the fifteen names of offspring beginning with tokam [as read, crowded [?]], tokam means offspring, progeny of sons — 'progeny, offspring'" (the source adds the English words). - astr̥taḥ = str̥ñ h̥iṃsāyām — "without obstacles, without trouble: 'without obstacles, without any hindrance'" (the English words are the source's).

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²¹ - ratnam: sabbiṣayaś syāni saṃtasya [as read, crowded [?]; Phiṭ. sūtra number as read [?]]: first-syllable acute. - tmanā: mantr̥eṣv ānyāder ātmanaḥ — मन्त्रेष्वान्याद्रेऽत्मनः — [Pā. 6-4-141 as read]: āñ means the third-case singular ending of the ancients' technical term (prācīnaśaṃjñā); when āñ follows, the first letter of ātman is lost in the Veda, so the ā is lost. - acchā: nīpātasya ca [Pā. 6-3-136 as read]: a particle in a mantra takes the long vowel; acchā gatyarthavadeṣu — अच्छ गत्यर्थवदेषु — [Pā. 1-4-69 as read]: when the roots of going and the root vad are used with it, the indeclinable accha takes the gati name and the nīpāta name; hence the long vowel in the Saṃhitā. - astr̥taḥ: str̥ñ h̥iṃsāyām, svādi (short-ending) or kryādi (long-ending), and in the sense of covering str̥ is read; the commentators of the Veda (vedabhāṣyakāra) take it also in the sense of injury; kta; this is an ajanta root; ūdr̥dantaiḥ [as read, crowded [?]] does not include it, so it is unaccented; ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt — the prohibition of iṭ; or tituttra... [Pā. 7-2-9 as read] the prohibition of iṭ; "na str̥taḥ": a nañ-compound; tatpuruṣe tulyārtha... gives the first-member accent as an indeclinable. Rik 6 ends here (| | 6 | |).

— "My friends, how shall we recite the praise worthy of the great glory of Mitra, Varuna, and Aryaman?"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 427 - kathā = kena prakāreṇa — "in what manner." - rādhāma — "rādha sādha saṃsiddhau: let us accomplish; let us bring it to completion." -

Since in the third saṃhitā of the Yajurveda [?] there is a statement 'rtviḥ vā asya sakhāyaḥ' [as read [?]], the priests are called friends of the sacrificer." - mahi = maha pūjāyām | mahat | śreṣṭhaṃ pūjyam — "great; excellent; worthy of worship." - psaraḥ — "psā bhakṣaṇe; 'psāti bhakṣayatīti psaro rūpam': the form of glory, greatness, 'glory'" (the English word is the source's).

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²² - kathā: thā hetau ca chandasi — था हेतौ च छन्दसि — [Pā. 5-3-26 as read]: thā after kim both in the sense of cause and manner; prāgdiśo vibhaktiḥ — प्रागिश्चो विभक्तिः — [Pā. 5-3-1 as read] gives thā the name vibhakti; kimaḥ kaḥ — किमः कः — [Pā. 7-2-103 as read]: ka for kim before a vibhakti; the accent of the suffix. - rādhāma: rādha sādha saṃsiddhau; leṭ, first-person plural; mas, sa uttamasya — स उत्तमस्य — [Pā. 3-4-98 as read]: the s of the leṭ first-person ending is optionally lost; so the loss of s [s of mas]; bahulaṃ chandasi gives luk to the vikaraṇa; leṭo 'ḍāṭau the aṭ augment; tiṅ atīnaḥ wholly unaccented. - stomam: ṣṭuñ stutau; dhātuvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ the s; ārtistuśū... — आर्तिस्तुसुहुसृष्टृभ्याजिभ्यो मन् — [Uṇ., as read [?]]: the suffix man in the abstract; guṇa: o; the suffix being nit, the word is first-syllable [final] acute. - āryamṇaḥ: after aryaman, the genitive singular nas; alopo 'naḥ — अल्लोपोऽनः — [Pā. 6-4-134 as read]: the loss of the a of a stem ending in an when it is a bha, before an ac-initial ending; the print argues at length that the rule's aṅga is the an-ending aṅga in the bha sense, and not merely the a after t in takṣṇaḥ; āryamṇaḥ: aryam + n + as; aṭkuvān... gives ṇ; the ending is acute by the udāttanivṛtti rule. - mahi: maha pūjāyām; the Uṇādi in. - psaraḥ: psā bhakṣaṇe, adādi; "psāti bhakṣayatīti, so psaraḥ, form, i.e. form"; the Uṇādi suffix dara; in the suffix the ḍ [as ḍit] gives the ṭi-loss: the ā of the root is lost; first-syllable acute by the suffix accent. Translation: "O Mitra and the other gods, the enemy who ghnantam, kills, the sacrificer devayantam, who desires the gods — such an enemy [by name] vaḥ, to you, mā prati voce, I do not tell: out of fear of speaking ill words I do not tell. Likewise the enemy who curses (śapati) the sacrificer, that curser mā prati voce: [I do not tell; it is meant that] you should yourselves consider and instruct him. Aham tu, I, however, sumnaiḥ it, with riches alone, vaḥ, you, ā vivāse, I serve on all sides. Ghnantam: 'hanti'; the loss of the penultimate by gamahana...; ku by ho hanteḥ; accent of the suffix. Śapantam: root śapa ākrośe; the root accent. Voce: root brūñ vyaktāyām vāci; vaci for brū [Pā. 3-4-53 [?]]; añ for cli by asyativaktī...; um augment for vac; no aṭ in connection with mā. Devayantam: kyac; the prohibition of ī by na chandasy aputrasya. Sumnaiḥ: root mnā abhyāse; 'suṣṭhu mnāyate'; the suffix ka by ātaś copasarge; loss of ā. Vivāse: vivāsatī is a verb of serving."

Pratipadārtha — "(O Mitra and the other deities,) devayantam — the devotee who desires [the help of] the gods; ghnantam — the enemy who injures [him] (his name); mā prati voce — I do not speak [out of fear of the fault of reviling others]; śapantam — the enemy who reviles [the sacrificer]; mā (prati voce) — I do not name him; sumnaiḥ it — only with riches; vaḥ — you; ā vivāse — I serve and honour from all sides."

Bhāvārtha

— "O deities, Mitra and the others, I do not complain to you about the enemy who injures the sacrificer who praises you, nor about the enemy who reviles him. Rather I serve you with wealth and other offerings."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 429)

— "I do not complain against any man who injures or reviles the man devoted to the gods ; I rather serve you with wealth."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 430 - ghnantam = hantīti ghnantam — "one who injures, kills, harms." - śapantam — "śapa ākrośe: one who reviles, who speaks bad words." - devayantam = devān kāmāyamānam — "[the sacrificer] who wishes to praise the gods." - sumnaiḥ — "mnā abhyāse; suṣṭhu mnāyate 'bhyasyate iti sumnam"; the word sumnam is read among the names of happiness (Ni. 3-[?])." - vivāse = vivāsatiḥ paricaranaḥ karmā — "I shall serve."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁴ - ghnantam: root han hiṃsāgatyoḥ, laṭ; laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau... [Pā. 3-2-124 as read] gives śatṛ; śap elided; han + at; sārvadhātukam apit: the śatṛ is ñit; gamahana... gives loss of the penultimate a; ho hanter ññinneṣu [Pā. 7-3-54 as read] makes h into gh (kutva) because of the n; in place of h, which is voiced and mahāprāṇa, a gh of the same kind comes; ghnat; accusative singular am; ugīdacām sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ [Pā. 7-1-70 as read]: the augment num; anusvāra and parasavarṇa. - śapantam: root śapa ākrośe, divādi; instead of śyan the śap vikaraṇa [by Vedic usage], which is pit and unaccented; tāsyānudāttet... makes the śatṛ unaccented; the rest of the process

Translation: "What was said — 'I do not tell [the Maruts?] of the one who kills, nor of the one who curses' — the reason for it is now given. Duruktāya na spr̥hayet: one should not desire an evil word; rather one should fear evil speech. The whole remaining part of the mantra is the example. Cit is in the sense of comparison. As between two persons playing at dice, the man [fears] the other who holds four dice (caturaḥ) — four cowries — in his hand, ā nidhātoḥ, until the fall of the cowries — [thinking] 'will victory be mine or not?' the other feels fear. Here, as there is fear, so one should fear evil speech: this is the secret of right conduct. Therefore the sense is: 'I do not tell of the one who kills, nor of the one who curses.' The Nirukta here: 'caturo 'kṣān smārayeta'; 'as one would fear a gambler, so one should fear evil speech and not desire an evil word' (Ni. 3-16 [?]). Caturaḥ: by catuḥ śasi [Pā. 6-1-167 [?]] the syllable before the ending is acute. Dadamānāt: root dada dāne; here it means holding; the śap being pit is unaccented; the śānac, unaccented by the rule on the la-substitute after a root with an acute, so only the root accent remains. Bibhīyāt: root ñibhī bhaye; śap → ślu of the juhotyādi class; yāsuḥ acute; no nighāta since it begins a pāda. Nidhātoḥ: from dhā with nī, the suffix tun in the abstract sense [Uṇ. 1-69 [?]]; first-syllable acute by vyatyaya; the gati accent by tādau ca does not come, since tāv is excluded. Duruktāya: dative by sampradāne [Pā. 2-3-13] after spr̥he īpsitaḥ. Spr̥hayet: root spr̥ha īpsāyām, of the curādi class, ending in a; since the lost a counts as present, no guṇa of the light penultimate."

Pratipadārtha — "duruktāya — for reviling others; na sprhayet — one should not desire; caturah — four cowries (or dice); dadamānāt — from the man who holds them in his hand; ā nidhātoḥ cit — as [the gambler] fears (about the defeat for himself) until the [cowries] fall down; bibhīyāt — one should fear."

Bhāvārtha

— "One should not desire to speak ill of others; for many harms arise from it. As the gamester fears, while the opponent still holds the dice or cowries in his hand and until they fall to the ground, whether defeat will come to him, so one who speaks ill of others should likewise fear what trouble will come to him."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 432) — "A man should be afraid to speak evil of any one as a gamester fears his opponent holding the four dice in his hand until they are thrown." ²⁵

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 433 - Main intention — "The point made in the previous ṛk, that we do not speak ill of the enemy of the sacrificer, is explained here. The main intention is: we shall not speak ill words about anyone, nor desire to speak them; if we speak evil we must be afraid of it. When two are playing dice, one person fears, in his mind, where the disaster that will turn against himself will fall, so long as the four dice (or cowries) are in the hand of the opponent, till they fall below; so must we be afraid in our minds of the matter of evil speech. Therefore we should not wish to speak evil words about that." - caturah = catuḥsaṃkhyākān kapardān — "four cowries; or dice, as one wishes to say. In the ṛk only the word caturah — 'four' — occurs; the word 'cowries' or 'dice' is to be supplied. In this matter Yāska says: चतुरोऽक्षान् धारयते इति तद्यथा कित्वाद्विभीयादेवमेव दुरुक्ताद्विभीयान्

25. The source's heading reads "English Translaion" — a printed misprint [sic].

दुरुक्ताय स्पृहयेत्कदाचित् (Ni. 3-[?]-[?], as read) — caturō 'kṣān dhārayate iti | tad yathā kitavād bibhīyād evam eva duruktād bibhīyān na duruktāya sprhayet kadācit — editorial and tentative: 'he holds four dice; as one would fear the gambler, so one should fear evil speech and never desire it'. That is: a man playing dice, with the four dice in the hand of his opponent, fears where the unfavourable throw will fall; so we should never wish to speak evil of others." ²⁶ - caturaḥ — "four; here four means four cowries or dice." - cit — "the word cit here must be taken in the sense of iva [as], a particle of comparison." - dadamānāt — "dada dāne; here the sense of holding; hasto dhārayataḥ puruṣāt: from the man who holds the dice in his hand." - ā nidhātoḥ — "until [they] are thrown down, until they fall."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁷ - caturaḥ: cati yācane; catir uran — चतेरुन् — [Uṇ. 5-[?] as read [?]]: the suffix uran after the root cati; it is nit, so the final syllable would be acute; but catura śasi — चतुरः शसि — [Pā. 6-1-167 as read [?]]: when śas follows, the last letter of the word catur is acute [by the pre-ending rule], so the u is acute. - dadamānāt: dada dāne, first class, ātmanepada; for laṭ, laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau... gives śānac; śap; dad + a + āna; āner muk — आनेमुक् — [Pā. 7-2-82 as read]: the augment muk; because śap is pit it is unaccented; tāsyānudāttet... makes the śānac unaccented; the root accent stands; ablative singular. - bibhīyāt: root ñibhī bhaye; vidhiliṇ, śap → ślu; doubling, shortening, jaś; yāsuṭparasmaipadeṣūdātto nicca [Pā. 3-4-103 as read] gives the acute augment yāsuṭ; suṭ; liṇaḥ sa-lopo 'nantyasya [Pā. 7-2-79 as read] the loss of both s; since it begins a pāda it is not wholly unaccented. - nidhātoḥ: ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ with ni; sitanigamimasisacyavidhāñkuśibhyas tun — सितनिगमिमसिसच्यविधाञ्कुशिभ्यस्तुन् — [Uṇ. 1-69 as read [?]]: the suffix tun

26. The print gives the Nirukta in a form slightly different from the bhāṣya's quotation [smārayeta against dhārayate]; Both are given as printed.

27. pp. 433-434 — grammar pages, noted briefly

Close of Sūkta 41. Printed on p. 434 after the grammar: "illige 41neya sūkta mugidudu" — "Here the 41st sūkta has ended." ²⁸ With it the Sixth Sūkta of the Eighth Anuvāka (printed pp. 410–434) ends. The next leaf, p. 435 = PDF 449, carries the title "nalavattaraḍaneyā sūktavu" ("the forty-second sūkta"), the Sanskrit introduction and Kannada anuvāda of Sūkta 42 (saṃ pūṣan, ten Riks, Kaṇva Ghaura, Pūṣan, Gāyatrī — to be recited when setting out on a journey) and its heading; these are not yet written and belong to the next session. ²⁹

Summary of Sūkta 41.

Nine Riks to Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryaman (Riks 1–3, 7–9) and the Ādityas (Riks 4–6). Rik 1: the man they protect defeats his enemies. Rik 2: he is filled with riches and prospers unhurt. Rik 3:

they destroy the enemies' strongholds, then the enemies, then the sacrificer's sins. Rik 4: the Ādityas' road to the sacrifice is smooth and free of thorns, and no unworthy oblation is prepared. Rik 5: may the sacrifice they lead by the straight way reach them. Rik 6: the man they favour gains wealth and offspring. Rik 7: how shall the priests praise the glory of the three? Rik 8: the poet will not complain about his enemies but will serve the gods with wealth. Rik 9: one should fear evil speech as a gambler fears the opponent holding the dice. All nine Riks are written in full; the heavily crowded grammar passages are characterized only.

Translation: "Saṃ pūṣan — the seventh sūkta [of the anuvāka], of ten ṛks, by Kaṇva's family, in the Gāyatrī metre, with Pūṣan as deity. It is listed in the Anukramaṇikā as 'saṃ pūṣann adhvanaḥ [and as Pauṣṇa — the second clause is read with doubt [?]]. In the Smārta [domestic] rite, one about to set out on a long journey should mutter (japet) this sūkta: since it is laid down 'saṃ pūṣann adhvana iti, one about to go on a long journey, or [when there is] danger' (Āś. Gṛ. 3-8-10 [?]); 'japet' is carried over there." ³

Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 435 — "Saṃ pūṣan is the seventh sūkta in this eighth anuvāka. It has ten ṛks. The ṛṣi is Kaṇva, the son of Ghora; the deity is Pūṣan; the metre is Gāyatrī. In the Anukramaṇikā: 'saṃ pūṣan daśa pauṣṇam'. In the Smārta practice, or in worldly custom, when going on a long journey or when one has to travel far, this sūkta is to be recited; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Gṛhya-sūtra by the sūtra 'saṃ pūṣann adhvana iti mahāntam adhvānam eṣyan pratibhayaṃ vā' (Āś. Gṛ. 3-2-10 [?]). Therefore this sūkta is to be recited on the occasions mentioned above." ⁴

 presides over the earth — adhvanaḥ, from the road, tira, bring [us] across: bring us well to the place we wish. Aṃhaḥ, sin, the cause of obstacle, the sinful one, vi tira: destroy. Pūṣā is further described: vimuco napāt, son of the cloud, the cause of releasing water. 'Napāt' is a name for son, as it is read among its names

8. The print is crowded in the middle of this bhāṣya. Doubtful stretches: the letters "dbhyaḥ pṛthivīti" (probably adbhyaḥ pṛthivī), "napātraje[ti]", the clause "pūṣādhvanaḥ pākṣityārheyaṃ vai pūṣeti", the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa numeral, and "anudātteṭtvād", all read with doubt [?].

('napātrajā' and so on [?]). In another Śruti: 'the earth [arose] from the waters' (adbhyaḥ pr̥thivī) — the origin of the earth from water is heard; likewise elsewhere the earth's being the essence of water is heard: 'the essence of the waters that there was was gathered together; it became the earth.' Since the cloud holds the water, the son of water is the son of the cloud. And it should not be said, 'what has the son-hood of the earth to the cloud to do with Pūṣan?' — because the earth itself is Pūṣan. And so, in another Śruti, the Brāhmaṇa on a certain mantra [...] reads thus: 'pūṣādhvanaḥ pākṣityārheyaṃ vai pūṣā' [crowded [?]]; and its explanation is read elsewhere thus: 'this [earth] is Pūṣan, for this [earth] nourishes all this, whatever there is' (Śat. Brā. 14-4-2-33 [?]). O god Pūṣan, naḥ puraḥ, before us, pra sakṣva, attach yourself: go in front: so the sense. Vimuco napāt: 'udakaṃ vimuñcati', the cloud is vimuk; kvip by kvip ca; 'na pātayati kulam', one who does not cause the family to fall: napāt, a son; kvip after pātayati with nañ; the nañ keeps its natural form by nabhrāṇ napāt...; the whole vocative group is unaccented [crowded [?]]. Sakṣva: root ṣaca sevane; ātmanepada; śap elided by bahulaṃ chandasi; the root accent. Pra naḥ: ṇatva of nas after a preverb by upasargād bahulam. Puraḥ: already explained."

Pratipadārtha — "pūṣan — O Pūṣan, nourisher of the world and the deity who presides over the earth; adhvanaḥ — from the proper road; saṃ tira — taking us to our desired destination, bring us there; aṃhaḥ — the sinful one who obstructs [us] on the way; vi tira — drive [him] away from the road and destroy [him]; vimucaḥ — of the cloud that sheds rain; napāt — son, O god Pūṣan; naḥ puraḥ — in front of us; pra sakṣva — go on (with attachment to us)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Pūṣan, you are the son of the king of the clouds, who sheds rain and causes the world to flourish. Take us by the right road to our desired destination; on the way destroy the sinful enemy who would injure us. Have kindly regard for us and go in front of us as our guide."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 437) — "O Pushan, lead us over the road, remove the wicked obstructor of the way ; son of the cloud, go before us. (as a guide)" ⁹

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 437–440 ¹⁰

"On the deity Pūṣan in this ṛk the commentator has explained some points. This deity Pūṣan is the lord of roads. It is said that when one sets out on a long journey, if one recites the mantra belonging to this deity, one can reach the destination comfortably, without trouble on the way. On this matter there is a Śruti sentence: 'pūṣādhvanah pākṣityāha | iyaṃ vai pūṣā' [as read, crowded [?]].

Vimucaḥ napāt — 'udakaṃ vimuñcatīti vimuk meghaḥ | na pātayati kulam iti napāt putraḥ | napād iti putranāma': since it sheds water, clouds are called vimuc; since he does not cause the family to fall but makes it grow and go forward, a son is called napāt. Here vimuco napāt means the son of the cloud. Besides, according to the Śruti statement beginning 'adbhyaḥ prthivī', the earth arose from the waters, and in the Śruti 'tad yad apāṃ sāra āsīt tat samahanyata sā prthivy abhavat' ['whatever was the essence of the waters was gathered together; it became the earth'] there is the statement that she became the earth to gather together everything that was essence in the water. Among the twenty-one names of the earth, gauḥ, gmā and so on, the word

9. The print has the bracket "(as a guide)".

10. a long essay by the Kannada author on the deity Pūṣan; translated in full, with its quotations in three layers pūṣā is read; so pūṣā also means the earth. Therefore, by the statement 'pr̥thivyā eva pūṣatvāt', Pūṣan is said to be the deity who presides over the earth.

Yāska the great ṛṣi on this word: 'पूषा । यदश्मिपोषं पुष्यति तत्पूषा भवति' (Ni. 12-[?]-[?] as read [?]) — pūṣā | yad aśmipoṣaṃ puṣyati tat pūṣā bhavati — editorial and tentative: 'Pūṣan: because he nourishes with rays [or: because he nourishes the nourishment], therefore he is Pūṣan' — that is, since he is the one who nourishes with rays, this god is called Pūṣan. In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa also: 'इयं वै पूषा पूषेयं हीदं सर्वं पुष्यति यदिदं किं च' (Śat. Brā. 14-[?]-[?]-[?]) — iyam vai pūṣā pūṣeyaṃ hīdaṃ sarvaṃ puṣyati yad idaṃ kiṃ ca — 'this [earth] indeed is Pūṣan, for she nourishes all this, whatever there is' — it is said that this deity is called Pūṣan because he nourishes everyone. Such a meaning supports the view that Pūṣan is one of the twelve Ādityas.

The qualities of the god Pūṣan are of many kinds, and as they all show his different forms, it is difficult to say clearly what his original nature is. For the modern critics this is a complicated question. Before learning the diversity of these opinions, it is necessary to know what pre-eminence this deity has in the Saṃhitā.

The main portion of the hymns to the deity Pūṣan is contained in the sixth maṇḍala of the Ṛgveda, in the sūktas 53 to 58 [?]. It appears that the ṛṣis of the Bharadvāja family had Pūṣan as their chief deity. Some scholars call this portion the Pūṣa-saṃhitā. Besides, in other parts of the Saṃhitā also Pūṣan is invoked along with other deities such as Indra and Soma. For example:

रथीतमं कपर्दिनमीशानं राधसो महः । (Ṛg. Saṃ. 6-55-2 [?]) rathītaṃ kapardinam īśānaṃ rādhaso mahaḥ | editorial and tentative: "the best of charioteers, the one with braided hair, the lord of great bounty";

या ते अष्ट्रा गोओपशाघृणे पशुसाधनी । (R̥g. Saṃ. 6-53-9 [?]) yā te aṣṭrā goopaśāghṛṇe paśusādhanī | "the goad that you have, O radiant one, which drives and tends cattle" [the print's first words of the second pāda are crowded [?]];

ये एनमादिदेशति करम्भादिति पूषणम् । (R̥g. Saṃ. 6-56-1 [?]) ye enam ādideśati karambhād iti pūṣaṇam | "who point him out [saying], 'Pūṣan [feeds] on porridge'" [crowded [?]];

रायो धारास्याघृणे वसो राशिरजाश्च । (R̥g. Saṃ. 6-55-3 [?]) rāyo dhārāsyāghṛṇe vaso rāśir ajāśva | "you are a stream of riches, O radiant one, a heap of wealth, O lord of goat-steeds."

In these ṛks the descriptions kapardī (with braided hair), paśusādhanī (the goad that drives cattle), aṣṭrā (the goad), karambhād (eating porridge), ajāśva (with goat-steeds) and so on all give us a certain clear picture of Pūṣan. Along with the general qualities shared with other deities, in this sixth maṇḍala it appears that Pūṣan has a prominence in one special respect: it is clearly stated that he is the deity who tends cattle; that with his favour the cattle-wealth of his worshippers must grow; and that he is the protector of cows and the like that have strayed. For example:

पूषा गा अन्वेतु नः पूषा रक्षत्वर्वतः । पूषा वाजं सनोतु नः ॥ (R̥g. Saṃ. 6-54-5 [?]) pūṣā gā anv etu naḥ pūṣā rakṣatv arvataḥ | pūṣā vājaṃ sanotu naḥ || "may Pūṣan follow the cows for us; may Pūṣan guard our horses; may Pūṣan win us [vigorous] strength";

माकिर्नेशन्माकीं रिषन्माकीं सं शारि केवटे । (R̥g. Saṃ. 6-54-7 [?]) mākir neśan mākīm riṣan mākīm saṃ śāri kevaṭe | "let none be lost, let none be harmed, let none be broken in a pit."

In this manner they pray in various ways that their cattle-wealth be increased. Modern critics conjecture that the Bharadvāja family wandered from place to place, never settling in one place, and in their wanderings thought of Pūṣan as guide and protector.

Because in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd ṛks of the sūkta in question Pūṣan is invoked as protector of the roads, and because the adjective pathaspati ['lord of the path'] is used as chief, there is room for this conjecture. They say that, since in this respect Pūṣan has a distinction above other deities, he holds a distinct place of his own and does not belong to the group of other deities.

But the Vedic tradition is opposed to this view. Yāska counts Pūṣan as one of the twelve Ādityas. The same view is seen in the Bṛhaddevatā. The view of scholars such as Max Müller agrees with this. The scholar Bloomfield, however, on the basis of the single word āghṛṇi in the three ṛks (Ṛg. 6-48-[?]; 6-53-[?]; 6-55-[?]) [numerals read with doubt [?]], holds that Pūṣan is a solar deity who spreads light. The way of reasoning of those who oppose this view is this: the word āghṛṇi relates only to brilliance, so it may belong to any deity made of brilliance; there is no insistence that it must be the Sun; for example, this adjective is applied to Agni also (Ṛg. Saṃ. 8-[?]-[?] [?]); therefore, from this one adjective one cannot establish that Pūṣan is a solar deity. In the same way, they argue that whatever other adjectives the Vedic and other scholars take to prove that Pūṣan is a solar deity, none of those adjectives need apply to the Sun alone; they can be applied to all deities.

But even those who suggest this opposition show some grounds and put forward their own side. For example:

ताभिर्याति दूत्यां सूर्यस्य कामेन कृतश्रव इच्छमानः ॥ (Ṛg. Saṃ. 6-58-3 [?]) tābhir yāti dūtyāṃ sūryasya kāmēna kṛtaśrava icchamānaḥ | | editorial and tentative: "with those [golden ships] he goes on the Sun's embassy, wishing [it], of famed renown, by [his own] desire";

and, citing examples from many places, they show clearly the difference between the Sun and Pūṣan. Moreover, in describing the nature of the Viśvedevas (Ṛg. Saṃ. 8-[?]), there is no description of any solar quality attached to Pūṣan. (Ṛg. Saṃ. 6-[?]-6.) Thus they reckon [him] as against the traditional view, argue that Pūṣan is not a solar deity and show that he, being a

'cattle-tending' deity, has obtained a distinction of his own. We shall discuss elsewhere, in detail, which of these differing views is more consistent.

In the sūkta before us it is explained in detail that Pūṣan is pathaspati. He is the protector of the roads; he is one who destroys the thieves and robbers on the way and protects his devotees; the giver of abundant food-wealth to the devotees; and one who takes them to a place of prosperity and brings them to it. In this and other ways his various natures and powers are described. He is also described as a gentle (saumya) deity, with power and beauty in harmony."¹¹

- saṃ tira = asmān abhīṣṭasthānaṃ samyak prāpaya — "make us reach, safely, the place we must go to."
- pra sakṣva puraḥ — "śaca sevane; prasakto bhava; purato gaccheti: go in front of us, as a guide."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā¹² - vimuco napāt: root muñç mokṣaṇe (with vi): kvip ca [Pā. 3-2-76 as read] kvip; vimuc; genitive singular vimucaḥ. "Vimuñcatīti vimuk" — that which sheds water abundantly, i.e. a cloud. "Na pātayati kulam": the one who does not make the family fall: napāt, meaning son (Yāska: 'na pātā prajā' as printed [?]); kvip after the root pata in the causative with nañ; ñic-loss, upadhāvṛddhi; nabhrāṇnapān... [Pā. 6-3-75 as read]: nañ keeps its form (prakṛtibhāva); subāmantrite parāṅgavat svare [Pā. 2-1-2 as read] makes vimucaḥ a part of the vocative napāt; so by āmantritasya ca [Pā. 8-1-19 as read] the group is wholly unaccented. - sakṣva: root śaca sevane; since it is anudāttet, the ātmanepada by anudāttaṇita ātmanepadam; loṭ, bahulaṃ chandasi [as read] elides śap; thās → se [print: sa]; savābhyāṃ

11. All Ṛgveda references in this essay are read from small print with doubt; the quotations are given as printed, and the glosses are editorial and tentative. The source leaves the quotations untranslated.

vāmau gives va; sac + sva; coḥ kuḥ gives k: sak + sva; ādeśapratyayayoḥ gives ṣ; tāsyanudāttet... makes sva unaccented. - pra ṇaḥ: upasargād bahulam — उपसर्गाद्बहुलम् — [Pā. 8-4-28 as read]: the n of nas after the r or ṣ of a preverb optionally becomes ṇ. "Although Pāṇini reads upasargād anotparaḥ [as read], this would give no ṇatva in praṇonaya, and would give it in pra ṇaḥ pūṣā wrongly; so, by this reasoning, the Mahābhāṣyakāra removed anotparaḥ and put bahulam in the sūtra; with this ṇatva pra ṇaḥ results." - purah: "explained in [Rg. 1-41-3 as read (?)]." Translation: "O Pūṣan, whichever pratipakṣī, rival, naḥ, to us, ādideśati, commands, 'you must go by this road' — what kind? Aghaḥ, a striker, vṛkaḥ, a wolf, a taker of our wealth: the sense is a robber; duḥśevaḥ, hard to approach or of evil comfort. Such a rival, pathaḥ, from the road, apa jahi sma, drive off: certainly remove. Vṛkaḥ: root kuka vṛka ādāne; 'vartate', it exists; the suffix ka of the ik-penultimate rule; first-syllable acute from the vṛṣādi group. Duḥśevaḥ: 'whose śeva, comfort, is bad'; the first syllable of the latter member by parādiś chandasi bahulam; or, 'served with difficulty': duḥśevaḥ; t for s by varṇavyatyaya; khal by īśad-duḥ- suṣu...; the syllable before the suffix is acute by the lit accent; the accent of the first member of a compound ending in a kṛt. Ādideśati: root diśa atisarjane; leṭ with the augment aṭ; because of the statement 'bahulaṃ chandasi' [Pā. 6-4-75 (?)] there is no non-occurrence of the prohibition of guṇa of the light penultimate for a reduplicated stem before a vowel. Pathaḥ: the ending acute by the accent that follows loss of an acute."

Pratipadārtha — "pūṣan — O Pūṣan; aghaḥ — sinful; vṛkaḥ — a thief who steals our wealth; duḥśevaḥ — one who delights in evil work; yaḥ — whichever enemy; naḥ — us; ādideśati — compels (showing a dangerous road, saying 'go by this one'); tam — such an opponent; pathaḥ — from our right road; apa jahi sma — surely drive far away."

Bhāvārtha — "O Pūṣan, drive far away to a distant place that enemy of ours who is sinful, a thief who steals our wealth, one who delights in evil work, and who insists that we go along a dangerous road." ¹⁵

English Translation (the source's own, p. 443) — "O Pushan, if a wicked person, a robber or one who delights in evil deeds directs us to a wrong way, drive him away to a place far off." ¹⁷

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 443 - aghaḥ = āhantā | durjātaḥ — "a bad man; a wicked person." - vṛkaḥ — "vṛka ādāne; vartate iti vṛkaḥ | asmākaṃ dhanasyāpahartā: a thief who steals our wealth." - ādideśati — "one who commands [that we go by such a road]; who 'directs, points out'" (the English words are the source's). - duḥśevaḥ — "duṣṭaṃ śevaṃ yasyāsau duḥśevaḥ |

sevitum duḥśako duṣṭasukho vā: one who is attached to doing bad deeds, or one who delights in them; a promoter of evil ways." - apa jahi sma = apākuru — "drive far away."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁸ - vṛkaḥ: the root kuka vṛka ādāne; the suffix ka by igupadhajñāprikiraḥ kaḥ [Pā. 3-1-135 as read]; since the suffix is kit there is no guṇa of the light penultimate. "Vartaśe iti vṛkaḥ": one who takes or receives; first-syllable acute by vṛṣādīnām ca. - duḥśevaḥ: dur is a preverb; after the root śīṇ [print: śīḍ] the suffix vaṇ... [as read, crowded (?): iñjśīṇbhyām veṇ, Uṇ. as read]: guṇa; "duṣṭam śevam yasya saḥ", a bahuvrīhi; parādiś chandasi bahulam gives the latter member first-syllable acute. "If one explains it thus the etymology does not fit the sense; so another process may be stated: duḥkhena sevyate iti duḥśevaḥ, from the root sev sevane; iṣad-duḥ-suṣu kṛcchrākṛcchrārtheṣu khal; t for s [by varṇavyatyaya]; the e before the suffix is acute by the lit accent; after the compound is made the accent of the first member of a kṛt-ending latter member comes by gatikārapapadāt kṛt." - ādideśati: root diśa atisarjane; leṭ, tip; the augment aṭ; bahulam chandasi [as read] śap → ślu; doubling, loss of ś of the reduplicate; di + diś + ati; guṇa of the light penultimate. Although sārvadhātuke ca / abhyastasya aci piti sārvadhātuke [Pā. 6-4-... as read] would prohibit the guṇa of a light penultimate in a reduplicated stem before a pī sārvadhātuka beginning with a vowel (the name abhyasta for a doubled word is laid down by ubhe abhyastam), by bahulam chandasīti vaktavyam [vārttika, as read (?)] the prohibition is only variously applied in the Veda; hence here the prohibition does not occur. - pathaḥ: patheś ṣṭhaś ca — पतेः ष च — [Uṇ. 4-?], as read]: after the root patlṛ the suffix ini with th for t: pathin; the suffix accent makes the in acute; bhasya ṭer lopah [Pā. 6-4-143 as read]: when the ablative-genitive singular ñas follows, the in is

Translation: "You, such a one — [him] endowed with the qualities spoken of before — sruteḥ adhi, from the road, dūram, to a very far place, apa aja, drive off: make go away. What kind? Paripanthinam, one who obstructs the road; muṣīvāṇam, of the nature of a thief ('muṣīvā' is a name for a thief, since it is read among the names of thief: 'muṣīvān, malimlu' [and so on]); huraścitaṃ, a gatherer of crookednesses. Paripanthinam: by chandasi paripanthi-paripariṇau paryavasthātari [Pā. 5-2-89] the form ending in ini is irregularly given in the sense of enemy. Muṣīvāṇam: root muṣa steye; 'moṣaṇam' is muṣiḥ, the Uṇādi ki in the abstract; 'muṣiṃ vanati', one who shares in theft: muṣīvā; vic by anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante; the lengthening by sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau [Pā. 6-4-8]; the lengthening of the first member by anyeṣām api dṛśyate. Huraścitam: root hurchā kauṭilye; kvip of the sampadādi class in the abstract sense; the loss of s ... [crowded]; 'huraś cinoti', he gathers crookedness: huraściti; the augment tuk with kvip after ci; aluk by tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam; the accent of the first member of a compound ending in a kṛt. Sruteḥ: root sru gatau; ktic by ktickktau ca saṃjñāyām; final-acute by citaḥ. Aja: root aja gatikṣepaṇayoh."

Pratipadārtha — "paripanthinam — one who makes obstruction on our way; muṣivāṇam — [of] the form of a thief; huraścitam — one who deceives; tyam — [with other bad qualities mentioned before] that enemy of ours; sruteḥ — from the road; adhi dūram — to a very distant region; apa aja — drive away."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Pūṣan, drive far away from our way our enemy who makes obstruction to our straight way and hinders our journey, who is a thief and a deceiver."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 445) — "Drive him far away from the road, the hinderer of our journey, a thief a deceiver."²⁰

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), pp. 445–446 - tyam — "the word tya has the sense of tat; tyam means 'such a one'." - paripanthinam = mārgapratibandhakam — "one who obstructs people travelling on the road; a road-obstructor: 'hinderer, obstructor'" (the English words are the source's). - huraścitam, muṣivāṇam — "muṣa steye; moṣaṇaṃ muṣiḥ | muṣiṃ vanati sambhajata iti muṣivā taṃ | taskararūpaṃ puruṣam: a thief, a robber. Since the words muṣivān and huraściti are read among the fourteen names of thief beginning with trpuḥ, takvā [as read],

20. The comma is missing between "thief" and "a deceiver" in the print.

muṣīvān huraścīt means a thief, a robber. As the word huraścīt is formed from the root hurchā kauṭīlye, the sense 'one who deceives' may be given: huraś cinotīti huraścīt, one who commits fraud." - sruteḥ = sru gatau — "sruti means a way along which one goes or travels; sruteḥ: from the road." - aja = aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ — "drive [away]."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²¹ - paripanthinam: chandasi paripanthiparipariṇau paryavasthātari — छन्दसि परिपन्थिपरिपरिणौ पर्यवस्थातरि — [Pā. 5-2-89 as read]: in the Veda the words paripanthin and paripariṇ, in the sense paryavasthātr (enemy), are irregularly formed; the suffix ini in its own sense after the word paryavasthātr, and panthi, pari as substitutes for avasthātr, are irregularly given. - muṣīvāṇam: muṣa steye; kiḥ in the abstract by the Uṇādi; since the suffix is kit there is no guṇa; "moṣaṇam muṣiḥ"; "muṣiṇ vanati, one who obtains theft"; anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante [Pā. 3-2-75 as read]: manin, kvanip, vanip and vic come after roots as well; the suffix vic: muṣivan, then am; sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau — सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ — [Pā. 6-4-8 as read]: the lengthening of the penultimate vowel of an n-ending word before a non-vocative sarvanāmasthāna suffix; muṣivān + am; anyeṣām api dṛśyate gives the lengthening of muṣi. - huraścītam: hurchā kauṭīlye; sampadādibhyaḥ kvip; rāllopaḥ — रात्सस्य — [Pā. 8-2-24 as read]: the kvip suffix [print: kvip pratyaya]; before suffixes beginning with jh or a nasal, the ch or v after r are lost; so the ch after the r is lost: hur; "huraḥ ciraṇoti iti huraścīt"; ci ṣ cayane, the root; hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk — ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक् — the augment tuk; tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam — तत्पुरुषे कृति बहुलम् — [Pā. 6-3-14 as read]: in a tatpuruṣa whose latter member ends in a kṛt, aluk of the locative is variously found; so by the word bahula the aluk also of the genitive-case ending is understood; the layman's analysis "huraḥ cinoti" ends in the accusative plural; but in the technical analysis it is hur + am + cit; since there is a kṛt-ending word, the sixth case by kartṛkarmanoh kṛti; cit is acute by the root accent; after the compound is made, by gatiḥkārakopapadāt kṛt the kṛt-ending latter member keeps its own accent, so the original accent remains. - sruteḥ: ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām — क्तिच्क्तौ च सञ्ज्ञायाम् — [Pā. 3-3-174 as read]: ktic after sru gatau; prohibition of guṇa; final-acute by citaḥ. - aja: root aja gatiḥsepaṇayoh, first class; loṭ, madhyama, sip → hi, śap; ato heḥ [Pā. 6-4-105] elides hi; wholly unaccented. Translation: "O Pūṣan, you, that thief's — tapuṣim, the body that torments others — padā abhi tiṣṭha, stand upon it, treading [it] with your foot. Whose? Dvayāvinaḥ, [of him] possessed of the pair of [things] — theft done openly and theft done secretly; aghaśaṃsasya, who wishes evil to us ('aghaśaṃsa' is a name for thief, as in the list tṛpsuḥ, takvā ...); kasya cit, of whomever, without any particular specification. Dvayāvinaḥ: 'dvayam asyāsti'; vini in the sense of matup by bahulam chandasi; the lengthening by anyeṣām api dṛśyate. Aghaśaṃsasya: 'he whose śaṃsa, desire of mind, is for agha, evil': a bahuvrīhi with the accent of the first member. Tapuṣim: 'tāpayaty anenānyam', that by which another is tormented: tapuṣiḥ; the Uṇādi suffix uṣin; by the word bahula the i takes the name of an it-letter; because it is nit, first-syllable acute."

22. In the line "tṛpsuḥ takvā ... iti", where the bhāṣya refers to the list of thief-names, the print has an abbreviated, crowded clause [?]. The bhāṣya's final clause on the ikāra as an it is read in drift.

Pratipadārtha — "(pūṣan — O Pūṣan) tvam — you; dvayāvinaḥ — [one who is] possessed of two kinds of thievery, that which steals openly and that which steals secretly; aghaśaṃsasya — [of one who] desires evil for us; kasya cit — of whichever one; tasya — of that thief; tapuṣim — the body that causes distress to others; padā tiṣṭha — stand upon with your foot."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Pūṣan, whoever the thief may be, who robs our possessions openly in our presence and secretly behind our back when we are not there — who does both these kinds of theft, who wishes evil for others and causes distress to the world — trample the body of such a thief under your foot."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 448) — "Trample with your feet, the body of that deceitful and evil-minded thief (who both steals and robs) whoever he may be." ²³

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 448–449 - dvayāvinaḥ — "pratyakṣāpahāraḥ parokṣāpahāraś ceti yad dvayaṃ cauryaṃ tadyuktasya: of one who has two kinds of theft: one who snatches by force, as if seen, and one who steals secretly, as if unseen: in the stealing there are two kinds; it is meant that he does both these kinds of theft" (the source adds: "one who steals and robs"). - aghaśaṃsasya — "one who wishes us evil. Since the word aghaśaṃsaḥ is read among the fourteen names of thief beginning with ṭṛpuḥ, takvā, this word means a thief."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁴ - tapuṣim: "paraṃ saṃtāpakaṃ deham: a body that torments others." The same as in the bhāṣya. - dvayāvinaḥ: "dve avayave asya": saṃkhyāyā avayave tayap — संख्याया अवयवे तयप् — [Pā. 5-2-42 as read]: after a numeral, in the sense of 'part', tayap; dvitribhyāṃ tayasyāyaj vā — द्वित्रिभ्यां तयस्यायज्वा

23. In the print the word "steals" is overprinted/struck through and "both steals" is garbled — "both stens" — a scan defect; The words are given as best read.

— [Pā. 5-2-43 as read]: ayac as substitute for tayap after dvi and tri: dvi + aya; yasyeti ca the loss of the i; "dvayam asyāsti": bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 5-2-122 as read] gives vinī in the sense of matup; dvaya + vin; anyeṣām api dṛśyate the lengthening of the dvaya: dvayāvin; am [print: avan] suffix. - aghaśaṃsasya: "aghe [in sin] śaṃsaḥ [desire in the mind] yasya saḥ": a bahuvrīhi; the accent of the first member. - tapuṣim: root tapa santāpe; "tāpayaty anenānyam"; hence 'one who torments'. In the sense of the instrument the Uṇādi suffix uṣin comes; tap + uṣi, then am: tapuṣim; since the suffix is nit, first-syllable acute at the end of the suffix [as printed: pratyayāntaḥ ādyudāttaḥ].  saṃcodane | caurādikaḥ || 5 ||* ²⁶

Translation: "O mantumaḥ, possessing knowledge; dasra, beautiful to see, or, one who causes the decay of enemies; Pūṣan — te, your, tat, that [kind of] avaḥ, protection, ā vṛṇīmahe, we ask for on all sides: that protection by which you acodayaḥ, urged on, pitṛn, the forefathers beginning with Aṅgiras [the word after it is doubtful [?]]. We pray for that: so it is connected with what precedes. Dasra: root dasi daṃsanadarśanayoḥ; rak by spāyitañci...; because the teaching of augments is not constant, no num; or from the root dasu upakṣaye with an implicit causative sense, rak as before. Mantumaḥ: root mana jñāne; the abstract tu by kamimanijanī... [Uṇ. 1-73 [?]]; 'manturjñānam asyāstī', one who has knowledge: mantumān; in the vocative the ru by matuvaso ruḥ. Acodayaḥ: root cuda saṃcodane, of the curādi class."

26. The word "stvadevān" after "aṅgiraḥprabhṛtīn" is crowded and doubtful [?]; the translation leaves it out.

Pratipadārtha — "mantumaḥ — one who has subtle knowledge; dasra — one of beautiful form, or one who destroys enemies; pūṣan — O Pūṣan; te — your; yena — by which protection; pitṛn — the forefathers (Aṅgiras and others); acodayaḥ — you encouraged and caused to prosper; tat — that (your) protection; ā vr̥ṇīmahe — we ask for on all sides."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Pūṣan, you are of subtle knowledge, of beautiful form, and a destroyer of enemies. Formerly, favouring them with your protection, you gave encouragement to Aṅgiras and the others, and through them you made the world prosper. Even now we ask for that protection of yours on all sides."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 450, begun) — "O wise and handsome Pushan, we entreat you that protection which you extended to our ancestors" ²⁷.

Bhāvārtha

— "O Pūṣan, you are possessed of all wealth, and you bear weapons made of gold. Now that we have prayed to you, give us wealth in the form of gold, diamonds and so on, and other things that we need, as much as we wish."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 453) — "O Pushan, you are possessed of all prosperity and well equipped with golden weapons ; bestow upon us riches that may be accepted." ³²

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 453 - adhā — "in place of the word atha the word adha is used, for the convenience of the Veda: dha for tha; and in the Saṃhitā text dha may also be long." - viśvasaubhaga = viśvāni saubhagāni yasyāsau viśvasaubhagaḥ — "possessed of all wealth, or of all good fortune." - hiraṇyavāśīmattama — "hiraṇyamayī vāśī | tad eṣām astīti hiraṇyavāśīmantaḥ | atīsayena hiraṇyavāśīmān hiraṇyavāśīmattamaḥ: vāśī is a weapon of golden make; exceedingly well adorned with golden weapons." - suṣaṇā = vana ṣaṇa sambhaktau | sukheṇa sambhajyante iti suṣaṇāni — "things pleasant to enjoy, objects of enjoyment, means to happiness."

Translation: "The enemies who saścataḥ, come on to harass us, ati naya, pass beyond [them] and lead us — take us elsewhere. Naḥ sugā supathā kṛṇu: make us travellers by a good road, one easy to go by. O Pūṣan, iha, on this road, kratum, [the] knowledge, in the form of protecting us, vidaḥ, know. Saścataḥ: root śaśca [?] gatau; some read saści also, as said in the Dhātuvṛtti; from it śatṛ for laṭ; śap elided by bahulaṃ chandasi; the accent of śatṛ by the suffix accent; the non-acuteness of the ending by śatur anumāḥ is Vedic. Sugā: 'suṣṭhu gacchanty atra', sugaḥ; ḍa after gam by sudurorādhikaraṇe; ā for the instrumental by supāṃ sulug.... Supathā: 'by a good path'; the samāsānta is prohibited by na pūjanāt [Pā. 5-4-69]; the first syllable of the latter member by parādiś chandasi bahulam; the first-syllable accent of kratvādi does not occur since it is not a bahuvrīhi (that rule is governed by bahuvrīhau). Kṛṇu: root kṛvi hiṃsākaraṇayoḥ; the suffix u by dhinvikṛṇvyor a ca; the loss of hi by utaś ca pratyayāt. Vidaḥ: root vida jñāne; leṭ with augment aṭ; loss of the i by itaś ca lopaḥ."

Pratipadārtha — "saścataḥ — enemies who come to cause trouble to us; naḥ — to us; ati naya — send far away; naḥ — us; sugā — [make us] travellers by a way easy to go; supathā — by an excellent road; kṛṇu — make; pūṣan — O Pūṣan; iha — in this journey; kratum — [the] knowledge needed to protect us; vidaḥ — know."

34. In the grammatical tail the root-name "śvaśca" (read as śaśca "going") and the phrase "saścim apy eke paṭhanti" are crowded and doubtful [?].

— "O Pūṣan, send the many enemies who come to give us trouble far away from us. Make our road free from obstacles and our travelling easy. Know well the way in which you must protect us on this journey. Make us walkers by an excellent road."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 456)

— "Lead the enemies away from us ; make the path good and safe for us ; O Pushan, know how to protect us on this journey."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 456 - saścataḥ — "śaśca gatau; asmadbādhānāya prāpnuvataḥ: [the enemies] who come to give us trouble." - sugā = suṣṭhu gacchanty atreti sugaḥ — "good for travelling." - supathā — "by a good road; by a road free from enemies' ambush; by a road with security." - kratum — "knowledge; understanding. Since the word kratu is read among the eleven names of knowledge beginning with ketaḥ, keśaḥ [as read], kratum means knowledge, understanding."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁵ - saścataḥ: the root śaśca gatau (the print's first letters are crowded [?]), the first class: "some read here the root saśca as well", as said in the Dhātuvṛtti; from it laṭ, śatṛ; bahulaṃ chandasi [Pā. 2-4-73 as read] elides śap; the suffix accent comes; if śap were not elided, ato guṇe would give pararūpa and the form would be saścat; but in that case tāsyānudāttet... would make the sārvadhātuka unaccented; since the śap has been elided, it is not later than upadeśa, so the unaccented does not come; śatur anumō nadyajādī — शतुरुनुमो नद्यजादी — [Pā. 6-1-173 as read]: the ending of an ajādī after a śatṛ without num, and the nadī name, is acute with it; so śas after [śatṛ] should be acute; but by sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante [paribhāṣā, number as read [?]] it does not occur here. - sugā: "suṣṭhu gacchanty atra": sudurorādhikaraṇe: ḍa after gam with su; ṭi lost; supām sulug... [Pā. 7-1-39 as read]: ḍā for the instrumental singular: suga + ā; ṭi lost; the ending acute by the accent that follows loss of an acute. - supathā: śobhanaś cāsau panthās ca: ṛkpūrabdhūḥpathām ānakṣe — ऋक्पूरब्धूःपथामानक्षे — [Pā. 5-4-74 as read]: the samāsānta suffix a (ac) comes at the end of compounds ending in ṛk, pur, ap, dhur, pathin; but in compounds ending in dhur in connection with the axle (akṣa) the a does not come; if the a were obtained, na pūjanāt — न पूजनात् — [Pā. 5-4-69 as read] prohibits the samāsānta after words denoting honour; "here the vārttikakāra says this prohibition holds only where su and ati are used"; kratvādayaś ca — कृत्वादयश्च — [Pā. 6-2-118 as read] applies only in a bahuvrīhi, so it gives no first-syllable acute here to the latter member; by parādiś chandasi bahulam the first-syllable acute for the latter member comes. - kṛṇu: kṛvi himsākaraṇayoś ca; loṭ, sip, hi; dhinvikṛṇvyor a ca — [Pā. 3-1-80 as read]: u [print: upratyaya] and an a-substitute for v; kṛṇ + u + hi; ato lopah the loss of the a; ṛvarṇān nasya ṇatvaṃ vācyam the ṇ for the n; utaś ca pratyayād asaṃyogapūrvāt — उतश्च प्रत्ययादसंयोगपूर्वात् — [Pā. 6-4-106 as read]: the loss of hi after a suffix with u not preceded by a conjunct. - vidaḥ: root vida jñāne; leṭ, sip, the augment aṭ; itaś ca lopah the loss of the i; śap elided because of the adādi class; no laghūpadhagaṇa; ru, visarga. Translation: "O Pūṣan, suyavasam, a place marked by good grass, provided with all herbs — abhi naya, lead us to it, take us there on all sides. Adhvane, for the road, navajvārah, a new heat or affliction, na [bhavati], let there not be: so the remainder is to be supplied. The sense: for us who go on the road let no new trouble of the moment arise. The rest has been explained. Sūyavasam: 'a place where there is good fodder'; the lengthening of the first member by nipātasya ca; the first syllable of the latter member by parādiś chandasi bahulam, or it may be seen as belonging to the kratvādi group. Navajvārah: root jvara roge; ghañ in the abstract; 'a new jvara': navajvārah; final-acute of the latter member by thāthādi...."

Pratipadārtha — "pūṣan — O Pūṣan; sūyavasam — [to the place] filled with excellent green grass and medicinal herbs; abhinaya — lead [us] and bring us there; adhvane — on the road; navajvāraḥ — a new heat [of the sun]; na — let there not be; iha — in this journey; kratum — the way of protecting [us]; vidah — know."

— "O Pūṣan, lead us to a place filled with excellent green grass and the best herbs. See that no new affliction comes to us on the road. Know well the way of protecting us on this journey."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 458) — "Lead us where there is abundant grass ; let there be no extreme heat on our way ; Pushan, know how to protect us on this journey." ³⁷

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 459 - sūyavasam = śobhanaṃ yavaśaṃ yasmin deśe sa sūyavaso deśaḥ — "a place that has excellent grass; a country rich in fodder, where cattle can graze." - navajvāraḥ — "jvara roge; jvara eva jvāraḥ; navaś cāsau jvāraś ca navajvāraḥ: a new, or an excessive, heat; a burning, a scorching with the heat of the sun."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁹ - sūyavasam: "yavasa means grass; here herbs are also meant. Śobhanaḥ = good; yavaśaḥ = herbs: 'in which country that is'. The long vowel of the first member by nipātasya ca; by kratvādayaś ca [Pā. 6-2-118 as read] the first-syllable acute of the latter member may be said." - navajvāraḥ: jvara roge; ghañ in the abstract; upadhāvṛddhi; 'navaś cāsau jvāraś ca'; by thāthaghañktājabitrakāṇām [Pā. 6-2-144 as read] the latter member is final-acute. Translation of the grammatical tail ⁴¹: Śagdhi — root śakla śaktau; the substitute hi for loṭ; śnu from the svādi class; elided by bahulaṃ chandasi; dhi for hi by hujhalbhyo her dhiḥ [Pā. 6-4-101 [?]]; since hi is not pit the root accent remains. Pūrdhi — root pyā pālanapūraṇayoḥ; dhi by śruśṛṇupṛkṛvṛbhyaś chandasi; the vikaraṇa elided as before; u for the r after a labial by udoṣṭhyapūrvasya [Pā. 7-1-102]; lengthening by hali ca [Pā. 8-2-77]; no nighāta since it follows a tiṇ. Yaṃsi — root yama uparame; leṭ in the sense of loṭ; vikaraṇa elided as before; unaccented. Śīśīhi — root śo tanūkaraṇe; i in the reduplicate by bahulaṃ chandasi; ī by īhalyaghoḥ [Pā. 6-4-113]; the accent of the suffix. Prāsi — root prā pūraṇe; śap elided because of the adādi class; since sip is pit the root accent remains.

Pratipadārtha — "pūṣan — O Pūṣan; śagdhi — be able to favour us; pūrdhi — fill our house with abundant wealth; pra yaṃsi — give well the good things that we wish; śīśiḥi — make us full of vigour in the midst of all; udaram — our belly; prāsi — fill with delicious food; iha — on this road; kratum — the way of protecting [us]; vidah — know."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Pūṣan, be able to favour us. Fill our house with abundant wealth. Provide for us the good things that we wish. Make us full of vigour in the midst of all. Fill our belly with delicious food and give us satisfaction. Know how to protect us on this road, and protect us."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 460)

— "Be favourable to us, fill us with [sic] plenty, give us all good things, make us robust and fill our stomachs ; O Pusham [sic], know how to protect us on this journey."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 461 — "In this ṛk the ṛṣi prays that wealth, food and desired things be given to him. Although only the verbs śagdhi, pūrdhi, yaṃsi, śīśiḥi and prāsi, which suggest this sense, are used, one must supply in thought the nouns suited to them."

Close of Sūkta 42. Printed on p. 464 after the grammar: "illige 42ne sūkta mugidudu" — "Here the 42nd sūkta has ended." ⁴⁴ With it the Seventh Sūkta of the Eighth Anuvāka (printed pp. 435–464) ends. On the same leaf, p. 464 foot = PDF 478, follows the large title "nalavattamūraneya sūktavu" ("the forty-third sūkta") with the Sanskrit introduction beginning "kadrudrāya...", which runs over to p. 465 (PDF 479) together with the Kannada anuvāda and the heading of Sūkta 43 (kad rudrāya, nine Riks, ṛṣi Kaṇva Ghaura; deity Rudra for Riks 1, 3, 4, 6, Mitra–Varuṇa for Rik 5 [as read], Soma for 7–9; metre Gāyatrī for Riks 1–8 and Anuṣṭubh for Rik 9). These are not yet written and belong to the next session.

44. Numeral read as "42".

45. The 43rd sūkta thus begins at the foot of p. 464, not at p. 465 as the old contents table says.

Summary of Sūkta 42.

Ten Riks to Pūṣan, the lord of roads and protector of travellers, to be recited when setting out on a long journey. Rik 1 asks him to bring the travellers across the road, destroy the obstructing sin and go before them; Riks 2–4 ask him to drive away and trample the hostile robber and deceiver who points the wrong road; Rik 5 recalls his past protection of the ancestors; Rik 6 asks for gold and other wealth; Riks 7–8 ask for a safe road, leading to good grass and without new heat or trouble; Rik 9 asks for favour, plenty and food; Rik 10 says the singers do not reproach him but praise him and beg for wealth. All ten Riks are written in full; the long Special Topics essay on Pūṣan (Rik 1) and the crowded grammar pages are characterized only where stated.

Translation: "Kad rudrāya — the eighth sūkta [of the anuvāka], of nine ṛks. The Anukramaṇikā says here: 'kad rudrāya nava raudraṃ tṛtīyā maitrāvaruṇī cāntyas tṛcaḥ saumyo 'ntyānuṣṭub' — nine [ṛks] to Rudra; [one] to Mitra–Varuṇa; the last tṛca to Soma; the last [ṛk] Anuṣṭubh. Kaṇva, son of Ghora, is the ṛṣi; the metre is Gāyatrī; the last ṛk, yās te prajāḥ, is Anuṣṭubh. The deity is Rudra; and the ṛk yathā no mitra has Mitra–Varuṇa as its deity; while the last tṛca, beginning asme soma, is of Soma. In all rites with Rudra as deity the worship of the quarters (digupasthāna) is to be made with this [sūkta]. And it is so laid down: 'kad rudrāya, imā rudrāya taviṣāya [print: te pitar], imā rudrāya sthiradhanvane' — the worship of the directions in all Rudra sacrifices (Āś. Gr. 4-9-10 [?])." ⁴

Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 465 — "Kad rudrāya is the eighth sūkta in this eighth anuvāka. It has nine ṛks. In the Anukramaṇikā: 'kad rudrāya nava raudraṃ tṛtīyā maitrāvaruṇī cāntyas tṛcaḥ saumyo 'ntyānuṣṭub'. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Kaṇva, the son of Ghora. The metre is Gāyatrī; the last ṛk, yās te prajāḥ, is in Anuṣṭubh. The deity of this sūkta is Rudra; but the ṛk yathā no mitra has Mitra–Varuṇa as deity; the last three ṛks, beginning asme soma, have Soma as deity. In all rites that have Rudra as deity, the worship of the quarters is to be made with this sūkta: in the Āśvalāyana Gṛhya-sūtra it is prescribed that the quarters be worshipped with the sūktas 'kad rudrāya' (Ṛg. Saṃ. 1-43), 'imā rudrāya' (Ṛg. Saṃ.

3. In the Anukramaṇikā quotation the word "tṛtīyā" before "maitrāvaruṇī" is as read and is crowded; the anuvāda below gives the Mitra–Varuṇa ṛk as the one beginning yathā no mitra, which is Rik 5 [?].

4. Translation editorial; the Gṛhya-sūtra quotation is as printed, the names of its second and third verses are crowded [?].

1-114), 'ā te pitaḥ' (Ṛg. Saṃ. 2-33) and 'imā rudrāya sthiradhanvane' (Ṛg. Saṃ. 2-33 [?]; the numeral is read with doubt) (Āś. Gr. 4-9-10 [?])."

Translation of the grammatical tail ⁹: Kat — for kadā, the loss of the final [ā] is Vedic. Rudrāya — 'rodayati', he makes all weep at the end of time: rudraḥ; the suffix rak with loss of ṇic by roder ṇiluk ca [Uṇ. 2-22 [?]]. Pracetase — root citī samjñāne; 'prakṛṣṭam cetayati': pracetāḥ; the suffix asun by the rule that a gati or kāraka keeps the accent of the first member. Mīlhuṣṭamāya — 'mīdhvān' in the superlative; the kvasu-ending word is irregularly given in the dāśvān sāvān mīdhvāṃś ca [rule]; samprasāraṇa of vas as a bha word [crowded [?]]; ṣatva by śāsivasighasīnām ca. Tavyase — the root tava in the sense of growth, a sautra root; the superlative-comparative 'tavitā tavīyān'; īyasun in the Veda; loss of tṛ by turiṣṭhemeyassu; loss of the ī of īyasun is Vedic; since it is nī it is first-syllable acute. Vocema — root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; aṅ

8. The print of "tamupyayasmayādittvena" and "tuś chandasīti" is crowded and read with doubt [?]; the translation of that stretch is characterized below.

9. characterized

by liṅyāśiṣy aṅ; the augment um; the e is acute by the accent of yāsuṭ. Hṛde — hṛd as the substitute for hṛdaya by paddannomāsa-hṛt...; the ending acute by ūdidam...."

Pratipadārtha — "pracetase — [Rudra] endowed with excellent knowledge; mīlhuṣṭamāya — who gives our wished-for things most abundantly; tavyase — who is exceedingly mighty; hṛde — who is always held in our heart; rudrāya — to the god Rudra; śantamam — the most pleasing; stotram — hymn; kat — when; vocema — shall we recite?"

Bhāvārtha

— "When shall we recite a very pleasing hymn to the god Rudra, who is endowed with excellent knowledge, who is exceedingly mighty, who most kindly fulfils our wishes, and who is always held in esteem in our hearts?"

English Translation (the source's own, p. 467)

— "When shall we recite a pleasing hymn to the wise, the most liberal and mighty Rudra whom we cherish [sic] in our hearts?"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 467–468 - kat = kadā — "when." - rudrāya — "for the god named Rudra; on the derivation of the word rudra Yāska explains as follows: रुद्रः । रुद्रो रौतीति सतः । रोरूयमाणो द्रवतीति वा । रोदयतेर्वा । यदरुदत्तद्रुद्रस्य रुद्रत्वमिति काठकं । यदरोदीत्तद्रुद्रस्य रुद्रत्वमिति हारिद्रविकं । (Ni. 10-[?], as read [?]) rudraḥ | rudro rautīti sataḥ | rorūyamāṇo dravatīti vā | rodayater vā | yad arudat tad rudrasya rudratvam iti kāṭhakam | yad arodīt tad rudrasya rudratvam iti hāridravikam — editorial and tentative: 'Rudra: [from] "he roars"; or "roaring he runs"; or from "he makes [others] weep". "Because he wept, that is Rudra's Rudra-hood": so the Kāṭhaka; "because he wept [or: made weep], that is Rudra's Rudra-hood": so the Hāridravika.' That is, because this god makes a sound like a thunder-cloud, he is called Rudra; or, standing in the middle of clouds and roaring, because he makes the drava, the water, flow, he is called Rudra; or, because he makes enemies weep he is called Rudra. The statement of the Kāṭhaka śākhā, that Rudra's rudratva came from his weeping, and the statement of the Hāridravika śākhā (a branch of the Maitrāyaṇīya school of the Kṛṣṇa Yajurveda) that Rudra's rudratva came when he made Prajāpati weep by piercing him with an arrow, are, the historians say, [given as] statements of difference. Thus the Nirukta explains the etymological sense." - pracetase — "citī saṃjñāne; prakṛṣṭajñānayuktāya: very wise, of excellent knowledge."

Special Topics (concluded, p. 468), and Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 1 ¹⁰ - mīlhuṣṭamāya — "atiśayena mīḍhvān mīlhuṣṭamaḥ | tasmai | abhiṣṭakāmavarṣāya: one who gives the most abundantly what is wished for." - tavyase — "tavatir vṛddhyarthaḥ | atiśayena tavitā tavīyān | atiśayena pravṛddhāya: one who gives growth, increase, abundantly." - śantamam — "causing happiness, delighting, giving satisfaction." - hr̥de = asmadyahṛnniṣṭhāya — "who is always meditated upon, remembered, in our heart." - kat: "the loss of the ā of kadā has come by Vedic usage." - rudrāya: "rodayati sarvam antakāle iti rudraḥ: at the time of dissolution, or at the end, he makes all weep"; roder ṇiluk ca [Uṇ. 2-[?] as read]: after rud [print: rudir aśruvimocane] with ṇic: the suffix rak and loss of ṇic, so rudra. - pracetase: "prakṛṣṭam cetayati iti pracetāḥ": root citī saṃjñāne; gatikārapapadāyoraḥ api pūrvapadaprakṛtisvaratvaṃ ca [Uṇ. 4-[?] as read]: the suffix asi [asun]; the first member keeps its accent by mīthuneṣv... [as read, crowded [?]], carried over; therefore, asun coming, the accent of the first member prevails over the latter-member accent given by gaticārapapadāt kṛt; upasargāś cābhivarjam [Phiṭ. as read] gives pra the first-syllable acute; this stays after compounding. - mīlhuṣṭamāya: dāśvān sāhvān mīḍhvāṃś ca [Pā. 6-1-12 as read]: these are irregularly given as kvasu-ending words; root mihaṃ secane; liṭ → kvasu; doubling and iṭ do not come here, since they are made irregular

(nipātita) in this sūtra; mīḍhvāṃś ca by the vārttika miherḍhatvaṃ ca: ḍh for h, and a long ī by the same irregular formation: mīḍhvas; superlative: atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau gives tamap: mīḍhvas + tamap; ghakālataneṣu kālanāmnaḥ [as read], which indicates that the taddhita suffixes come after a subanta, so even with the loss of su the pada status arises by pratyayalakṣaṇa; supti nantaṃ padam [Pā. 1-4-14 as read] gives the name pada; hence nalumatāṅgasya [as read] prohibits pratyayalakṣaṇa... "but this pada name is barred by the bha name through āyasmayādīni chandasi [Pā. 1-4-20 as read]: in the Veda the words of this group take the bha name"; the vārttika ubhayasaṃjñā cāpīti vaktavyam [as read] gives both names; vasoḥ saṃprasāraṇam [Pā. 6-4-131 as read]: saṃprasāraṇa; pūrvārūpa; mīḍhus + tama; ādeśapratyayayoḥ gives ś; śāsivasighasīnām ca does not apply to a root vas [print] without the vasu suffix; ṣṭutva; mīḍhuṣṭama; by the Ṛgveda-Prātiśākhya tradition ("aḍhyadhya... ḍhakāram..." as read, crowded [?]) the ḍh becomes ḷh: mīḷhuṣṭama. - tavyase: "the root tava is not in the dhātupāṭha; it is authoritative because it is used in the sūtras. Its sense is growth. The suffix ṭrc; if the superlative-comparative sense is intended — 'atiśayena tavitā' — then tuś chandasi [Pā. 5-3-59 as read]: in the Veda, after ṭṛn and ṭrc-ending words the suffixes iṣṭhan and īyasun come; turiṣṭhemeyassu [Pā. 6-4-154 as read]: before iṣṭhan, īmanic and īyasun the ṭṛ is lost; the ī of īyasun is lost by Vedic usage; first-syllable acute, being nit; dative singular." ¹¹ - vocema: "the process is given at [Ṛg. 1-40-6 as read] (Sūkta 40 Rik 6 above). Here it begins a pāda, so tiñ atīnaḥ does not give the wholly-unaccented; the e is acute because yāsuṭ is acute." - hr̥de: the dative singular after hr̥daya; pad dan no mās hr̥n niśasan... [Pā. 6-1-63 as read]: hr̥d is the substitute for hr̥daya; ūdidampadādyappumrainrbhyaḥ [Pā. 6-1-171 as read] the ending is acute. Rik 1 ends here (| | 1 | |).

Translation: "May Aditi, the earth, karat — make — for us the rudriyam, the remedy that belongs to Rudra, in the way in which it succeeds; do so. And moreover: as the remedy of Rudra succeeds paśve, for our cattle — horses, buffaloes and the rest — nṛbhyaḥ, for our men, and specially gave, for the cow-kind, for their good, so may she do. And moreover, as the remedy of Rudra succeeds tokāya, for our offspring, so may she do. That the remedy belongs to Rudra is handed down in another mantra: 'yā te rudra śivā tanūḥ śivā viśvāhabheṣajī | śivā rudrasya bheṣajī' (Tai. Saṃ. 4-5-1-1 [?]); and elsewhere the remedy for cows and the like is clearly handed down: 'bheṣajam gave 'śvāya puruṣāya bheṣajam atho asmabhyam bheṣajam subheṣajam' (Tai. Saṃ. 1-8-6-1 [?]). Karat: root ḍukṛñ karane; leṭ with the augment aṭ; loss of the i by itaś ca lopah; or [it is luñ]: añ for cli by luñah kṛmrḍṛruhibhyaś chandasi; guṇa by ṛdṛśo 'ñi guṇah; in the first two views the suffix, being pit, is unaccented and the root accent remains; in the third, by vyatyaya; no nighāta because of the connection with yat. Paśve: since a rule that depends on a name is not constant, there is no guṇa by ghor jñati [Pā. 6-3-100 [?]]; yañ-substitution. Nṛbhyaḥ: by nṛ cānyatarasyām [Pā. 6-1-184] the ending is optionally not acute. Gave: the acuteness of the ending obtained by sāvekāca is prohibited by na goścansāvavarṇa.... Rudriyam: the suffix gha after rudra in the sense 'belonging to him' (tasyedam)."

Pratipadārtha — "aditiḥ — the earth; naḥ — to us; rudriyam — the medicine that belongs to Rudra; yathā — in the way in which [it is to be obtained]; karat — let her make it obtainable; yathā — in the way [in which]; paśve — to [our] horses, buffaloes and other cattle; nṛbhyaḥ — to [our] men; gave — to [our] herd of cows [they must be brought within reach, and not only that]; tokāya — to our children; yathā — [let her make] it obtainable. Or, 'what hymn shall we recite for it to be obtained by us all?'"

— "As the earth must supply us the medicine that belongs to Rudra, so may she supply it. May that medicine be obtainable for our horses, cows and other cattle, for men, and for our sons and grandsons. (In order that this may be favourable to us, with what hymn shall we praise [him]?)"

English Translation (the source's own, p. 471) — "(What hymn shall we recite) that Aditi (earth) may obtain for us for our cattle, men, our children, the medicament of Rudra ?" ¹⁴

14. Printed "hymn" as "hymnn".

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 471, begun — "The main intention: [we ask] how we should praise Rudra, in order that the medicines and so on that belong to Rudra and are necessary for us, for our cows and horses and so on, and for our sons, grandsons and other offspring, may be obtained from the earth. This must be connected with the sense of the previous ṛk. What connection Rudra has with medicines, the commentator [Sāyaṇa] has shown by the two Taittirīya passages: 'या ते रुद्र शिवा तनूः शिवा विश्वाहभेषजी । शिवा रुद्रस्य भेषजी तया नो मृड जीवसे ॥ ' (Tai. Saṃ. 4-5-1-1 [?]) — yā te rudra śivā tanūḥ śivā viśvāhabheṣajī | śivā rudrasya bheṣajī tayā no mṛḍa jīvase — editorial and tentative: 'that auspicious body of yours, O Rudra, auspicious, the daily healer; auspicious [is] Rudra's remedy: with it be gracious to us, that we may live'; and 'भेषजं गवेऽश्वाय पुरुषाय भेषजमथो अस्मभ्यं भेषजं सुभेषजं यथासति ॥ ' (Tai. Saṃ. 1-8-6-1 [?]) — bheṣajam gave 'śvāya puruṣāya bheṣajam atho asmabhyam bheṣajam subheṣajam yathāsati — 'a remedy for the cow, for the horse, for the man; also for us a remedy, a good remedy, as it may be'." ¹⁵ ¹⁶

Rik 43.2, concluded ¹⁷

15. The source leaves both passages untranslated; the glosses are editorial and tentative; the reference numerals, small, are read with doubt [?]. The remainder of the Special Topics, if any, and the grammar of Rik 2 begin on p. 472 and are not yet written.

16. Correction to the heading of Sūkta 43 above (made now that Riks 3 and 5 have been read). The ṛk yathā no mitro varuṇaḥ (whose deity the anuvāda calls Mitra-Varuṇa) is Rik 3, not Rik 5; this agrees with the Anukramaṇikā's "ṛtīyā maitrāvaruṇī" (the third ṛk is Mitra-Varuṇa). So the deity line of the heading, which was given as "1, [2?], 4, 6 Rudra; 5 Mitra-Varuṇa", is to be read as Rudra for Riks 1, 2, 4, 5, 6; Mitra-Varuṇa for Rik 3; Soma for Riks 7–9. The numerals in the print's deity line remain small and doubtful [?]. The statement "Mitra-Varuṇa for Rik 5" in the earlier progress notes was a slip.

— "... [the Kannada sentence begins mid-clause at the top of the page]: the sentences of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā of the Kṛṣṇa-Yajurveda have been quoted as examples. Of these, the second example states the sense of this ṛk itself clearly."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁸ - karat: root ḍukṛñ karaṇe, luñ. By tanādikṛñbhya uḥ the u-vikaraṇa ought to come, but śap comes in its place [by Vedic usage]; by bahulam chandasy amāṇyogepi the augment aṭ is prohibited; by itaś ca lopah the loss of i; guṇa, raparatva: this is one process. Another: the root kṛ, leṭ, tip, the augment aṭ for leṭ; śap; the loss of i by itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu; guṇa, raparatva: kar + a + at; pararūpa: this is another process. In both of these śap is pit and unaccented; the augment aṭ in the second, by leṭo 'dātau, is likewise unaccented since pit; the single substitute that arises is unaccented by sthāneṇ... [as read]; so only the root accent remains. Or from the root kṛ with luñ, cli: by kṛmṛdṛruhibhyaś chandasi [Pā. 3-1-59 as read] añ optionally for cli; ṛdṛśo 'ñi guṇaḥ [Pā. 7-4-16 as read] guṇa of a root ending in r and of dṛś before añ; raparatva; the loss of the i; by vyatyayo bahulam the root accent; because of yat [in yathā] the wholly-unaccented does not come. - paśve: ñe after paśu; ghor jñati [Pā. 7-3-111 as read (?)]: guṇa for a stem with the ghi name before a ñit sup; the print explains ghi as stems in i and u other than sakhi (śeṣo ghy asakhi, Pā. 1-4-7); paśu has the ghi name so guṇa is obtained, but "saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ" makes it not occur; iko yaṇaci gives yaṇ. - nṛbhyaḥ: nṛ cānyatarasyām — नृ चान्यतरस्याम् — [Pā. 6-1-184 as read]: the jhalādi ending after nṛ is optionally acute; since it is optional, no acute comes here; this is an exception to sāvekācaḥ.... - gave: "in the locative plural goṣu the form is go; here gav is the substitute for go; by the sthānivadbhāva whatever form occurs in the locative plural occurs here; hence sāvekācaḥ [Pā. 6-1-168] would give the ending an acute, which is prohibited by na goścansāvavarṇarāḍaṅkrutkṛtkṛdbhyaḥ [Pā. 6-1-182 as read]." - rudriyam: the suffix gha after rudra in the sense tasyedam; āyaneyīnīyiaḥ... gives iya; yasyeti ca the loss of a. Rik 2 ends here (| | 2 | |).

Translation: "As mitraḥ varuṇaḥ — Mitra and Varuṇa — naḥ, us, yathā, in whatever way, cīketati, take note of [as to be favoured]; as Rudra also takes note; as viśve sajoṣasaḥ, all the gods who are united in pleasure, take note — so let it be: so the remainder. Or, [the two ṛks that contain yathā] are to be connected with the preceding: 'in that way, when shall we recite?' Cīketati: root kita jñāne; leṭ with the augment aṭ; the prohibition of guṇa by nābhyastasyāci... does not apply, because of the statement bahulaṃ chandasīti vaktavyam; because it is sārvaadhātuka, first-syllable acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ. Sajoṣasaḥ: root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ; 'samānaṃ juṣante': sajoṣasaḥ; sa for samāna by samānasya chandasi; because asun is nit, the first syllable of the latter member is acute; this is then laid down as the accent of the first member of a kṛt-ending compound."

Pratipadārtha — "mitraḥ — Mitra; varuṇaḥ — Varuṇa; naḥ — us; yathā — in whatever way; cīketati — [they will consider us as fit to be favoured]; rudraḥ — Rudra also; yathā — in whatever way [he knows us]; sajoṣasaḥ — those who have equal satisfaction; viśve — all gods; yathā — in whatever way [they know]; or, 'when shall we recite that hymn through which we may obtain those favours?'"

19. The word given as "cīketanti" in the first sentence of the bhāṣya is printed cīketanti, doubtful [?].

— "By what hymn and mantra will Mitra, Varuṇa and Rudra, and likewise all other deities who share in equal satisfaction (or who long for satisfaction), come to know us as fit; or by reciting what hymn shall we obtain their favours — when shall we recite that hymn?"

English Translation (the source's own, p. 474)

— "(What hyman [sic] shall we recite to Rudra) by which Mitra, Varuna and Rudra and all the gods being gratified, confer favours upon us ?"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 474 - cīketati = kita jñāne | anugrāhyatvena jñāti — "he comes to know the hymn we are making and favours us." - sajośasaḥ = juṣī prītisevanayoḥ | samānaṃ juṣantīti sajośasaḥ | samānaprīteyaḥ — "those who are equal in affection, or satisfied with equal service."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁰ - cīketati: kita nivāse rogāpanayane ca, first class; kita jñāne, juhotyādi: the root kita jñāne is not found in the present dhātupāṭhas; it makes no difference whether one takes the unaccompanied root kita in the juhotyādi; or, with the sense of knowing, the root of the first class, with śap → ślu by bahulagrahaṇa; or the augment tuk by Vedic usage for the root kita. After the root, leṭ, tip, the augment aṭ; śap → ślu, doubling: kit + kit + ati; kuhoś cuḥ gives c; nābhyastasyāci piti sārvaadhātuke — नाभ्यस्तस्याचि पिति सार्वधातुके — [Pā. 7-3-87 as read]: the prohibition of guṇa of the light penultimate of a reduplicated stem before a vowel-initial pit sārvaadhātuka would apply; but the vārttikakāra says bahulaṃ chandasīti vaktavyam, so the prohibition comes only variously in the Veda; here it does not come. Since ati is sārvaadhātuka, abhyastānām ādiḥ gives first-syllable acute. - viśve: aśūpruṣīlaṭikanikhaṭivisibhyaḥ kvan [Uṇ. 1-[?] as read]: after the root viśa praveśane the suffix kvan. - sajośasaḥ: root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ; "samānaṃ juṣante": after juṣ, with samāna as Translation: "Aiming at Rudra, we ask — īmahe — tat, that renowned sumnaṃ, happiness, śaṃyoḥ, belonging to Śaṃyu the son of Bṛhaspati, that is beneficial to all creatures. What kind of Rudra? Gāthapatiṃ, the protector of praise; medhapatiṃ, the protector of sacrifice; jalāṣabheṣajaṃ, possessed of a medicine that is of the nature of pleasure; or, possessed of a medicine in the form of water: for water, consecrated with the names of Rudra, becomes a medicine. Gāthapatim: 'gāthā' is a name for speech, as it is read among its names ('gāthā, gaṇaḥ' ...); 'gāthāyāḥ patiḥ', lord of the praise that has the form of speech; root kai gai rai śabde; ā by ādeca...; the suffix than by uṣikuṣigārtibhyas than; first-syllable acute as nī; the shortening of the first member by jyāpoḥ saṃjñāchandasor bahulam; where the first-member accent would come by patyāv aiśvarye, the first member is acute at its end by the vārttika marudvṛdhādīnām chandasy upasaṃkhyānam. Jalāṣabheṣajam: root janī prādurbhāve; 'jāyante', they are born: jāḥ; by anyeṣv api drśyate [Pā. 3-2-101] ḍa also after the bare root (from the word drśī); lāṣaḥ: root laṣa kāntau, 'desire'; ghaṇ in the abstract; 'the pleasure in which the desire of the born is': jalāṣam, happiness; 'in which Rudra the medicine is in the form of jalāṣa': jalāṣabheṣajaḥ; the accent of the first member in the bahuvrīhi. Śaṃyoḥ: from kaṃ and śaṃ, by kaṃśaṃbhyām... [Pā. 5-2-138] the suffix yus in the sense of matup; anusvāra and parasavarṇa by the pada name through siti ca [Pā. 1-4-16]; accent of the suffix."

Pratipadārtha — "gāthapatim — the protector of praise; medhapatim — the protector of sacrifices; jalāṣabheṣajam — having medicines that give happiness, or having medicines in the form of water; rudram — Rudra; śaṃyoḥ — the happiness that is enjoyed by Śaṃyu, the son of Bṛhaspati; tat — that renowned one, beneficial to all creatures; sumnam — happiness; [for it] īmahe — we pray."

Bhāvārtha

— "We pray to Rudra, who is the protector of praise, the protector of sacrifices, and who has medicines that give happiness, or medicines in the form of water, in order that he may give the well-known happiness that the [ṛṣi] Śaṃyu, the son of Bṛhaspati, enjoyed."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 477)

— "So we pray to Rudra, the lord of hymns, the protector of sacrifices possessed of medicament that give delight, for such happiness as shown to Saṃyu."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 477 - gāthapatim — "since the word gāthā is read among the thirty-three [?] names of speech beginning with śloka, dhārā [as read], gāthā means speech in the form of praise; gāthapati is the lord of hymns, i.e. one who is praised with hymns." - medhapatim = yajñapālakam — "protector of sacrifices." - jalāṣabheṣajam — "janī prādurbhāve | jāyante iti jāḥ | laṣa kāntau | kāntir abhilāṣaḥ | jānām lāṣo yasmimś taj jalāṣam sukham | jalāṣarūpaṃ bheṣajam yasmin rudre sa jalāṣabheṣajaḥ: laṣa needs a desire, and janī means arising; so the pleasure that fulfils our desire is called sukha. Rudra who has such a remedy of the nature of happiness is called jalāṣabheṣaja. Or one may say [Sāyaṇa's second sense] 'he who is joined with remedies in the form of water'; for it is well known that water consecrated with mantras to Rudra has the medicinal power of preventing diseases." - śaṃyoh — "Śaṃyu is the name of Bṛhaspati's son. This Śaṃyu is the ṛṣi of altogether [63? the numeral is read with doubt [?]] ṛks in the sūktas [Ṛg. Saṃ. 6-44, 6-45, 6-46 [?]] of the sixth maṇḍala of the Ṛgveda. It is well known that the ṛṣi obtained excellent happiness by the grace of Rudra and the other deities. The ṛṣi prays that such well-known happiness be given. In many śruti sentences such as 'tac chaṃyor āvṛṇīmahe' [as read, [?]] there are many occasions in which deities are prayed to for the very happiness that Śaṃyu obtained; therefore it is well known that the happiness of Śaṃyu is of an exalted kind." ²¹

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²² - gāthapatim: "on gāthā — in the Nirukta (Ni. 1-11-[?], as read [?]) Yāska reads the word gāthā among the names of speech; so gāthā means vāk; here praise in the form of

Translation of the end: "... [iṣṭhan], śra is the substitute for praśasya [Pā. 5-3-60 [?]]; since it is nit, first-syllable acute. Vasuḥ: 'vāsayati sarvam', he makes all dwell; root vasa nivāse, with an implicit causative sense; the suffix u by the rule beginning śrsvasnihi...; since nit is carried forward, first-syllable acute."

Pratipadārtha — "yaḥ — which Rudra; sūrya iva — like the Sun; śukraḥ — shining; hiranyam iva — like gold [pleasing to all beings]; rocate — shines [we pray to that Rudra: saḥ — he]; devānām — among all the gods; śreṣṭhaḥ — the best; vasuḥ — the giver of a dwelling-place."

Bhāvārtha

— "The god Rudra, shining like the Sun, is a benefactor to the world; like gold, he is pleasing and attracts the world. Among all the gods he holds a most excellent position."

— "(Rudra) who shines like the brilliant sun, shines, like gold ; the highest and best of the gods."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 480 - śukraḥ = dīptimān — "very bright." - hiraṇyam iva — "who shines brilliantly like gold, or who is dear to all like gold." - vasuḥ — "vasa nivāse | vāsayati sarvam iti vasuḥ | nivāsahetuḥ: the cause of the dwelling-places of all, i.e. the giver of dwelling-places. Or the words śreṣṭho devānāṃ vasuḥ may be taken as devānāṃ śreṣṭho vasuḥ: the sense 'the very best among the gods' may also be given."

Translation: "[This is] the dhāyyā verse of the Āgṇimāruta [śāstra]: 'śaṃ naḥ karoti'. It is laid down in the section beginning atha yathetam: 'vaiśvānarāya prthupājase, [and] śaṃ naḥ karaty arvate' (Āś. 3-10 [?]). Śaṃ, happiness, easy to travel [sugam, easy to go to], karati, may the god make, naḥ, for those who belong to us, arvate, for the horse ('arvan' is a name for horse, since 'arvā, vājī' are read among its names), meṣāya, for the ram, the male of the sheep kind, meṣye, for the ewe, a female of that kind, nṛbhyaḥ, for men, nāribhyaḥ, for women, gave, for the cow kind. Karati: root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; śap by vyatyaya. Arvate: 'arti gacchati', one who goes: arvā; vanip by anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante'; in the dative singular tr for the n [of arvan] by rvaṇas trasāv ananaḥ; vanip and pus being pit are unaccented, and the root accent remains. Meṣāya: root miṣa spardhāyām; ac of the pacādi class, since 'devasena, meṣa and the like are to be seen in the pacādi'. Meṣyai: ñiṣ by jāter astrīviṣayād ayopadhāt [Pā. 4-1-63]; accent of the suffix; in the dative singular no augment āt, because the teaching of augments is not constant; the svarita by udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya; udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt does not apply, since all operations are optional in the Veda. Nṛbhyaḥ: the ending's acuteness, obtained by sāvekāca, is prohibited by nṛ cānyatarasyām. Nāribhyaḥ: by nṛnarayor vṛddhiś ca, since [nṛ] is read in the śārṅgaravādi group, ñin; since nīt, first-syllable acute. Gave: the acuteness of the ending is prohibited by na goścansāvavarṇa...."

Pratipadārtha — "(rudraḥ — the god Rudra) naḥ — for those who belong to us; arvate — for horses; meṣāya — for rams; meṣye — for ewes; nṛbhyaḥ — for men; nāribhyaḥ — for women; gave — for the race of cattle; sugam — which is easy to obtain (by his favour); śam — happiness; karati — makes."

29. In the bhāṣya the Āśvalāyana reference "ā. 3-10" is as read [?]; the number of the Pāṇini rule on nṛnarayor vṛddhiś ca is crowded and left as [?]; the rule-name "rvaṇastrasāvananaḥ" is as read, crowded [?].

Bhāvārtha

— "The god Rudra makes happiness for our horses, for our sheep (ewes), for men and women and for cows."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 483)

— "(Rudra) bestows happiness (or does good to) on our horses, rams, ewes, men, women and cows."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 483 - arvate — "since the word arvā is read among the twenty-six names of the horse beginning with aśvaḥ, hayaḥ, arvate (the dative singular of arvan) means 'for the horse'." - karati = karoti — "makes." - sugam = suṣṭhu gamyam — "that which is easy to get; [happiness] easily obtained." - meṣye — "here meṣī means a female sheep; meṣye: to a ewe. The commentator gives this word the sense 'a female of the sheep kind'. This is not entirely suitable: for the words nṛbhyaḥ and nāribhyaḥ used here denote men and women; so it is proper to say that likewise the words meṣāya and meṣye denote just the male sheep and the female sheep. And since in this ṛk the ṛṣi prays that happiness be made for men, women and the animals — horses, cows and sheep — it is proper to say that [the sheep are] both kinds of sheep, the female and the male."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁰ - karati: root ḍukṛñ karāṇe, laṭ, tip; in place of the u of tanādikṛñbhya uḥ, śap comes by Vedic usage. - arvate: "ṛti gacchatīty arvā": the root ṛ gatau; anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante: vanip; guṇa, raparatva: arvan; dative singular; ñe [print: je]; arvaṇas tṛ... sāvanañāḥ [Pā. 6-4-127 as read]: for an aṅga ending in arvan with no nañ before it, when no su follows, tṛ is the substitute for the final [n]: arvat + e = arvate; anudāttau suppitau: vanip and the ñe ending are both unaccented; the root accent stays. - meṣāya: root miṣa spardhāyām, tudādi; nandigrahīpacādibhyo lyuṇinyacaḥ [Pā. 3-1-134 as read]: ac of the pacādi kind. - meṣyai: "meṣasya strī meṣī": jāter astrīviṣayād ayopadhāt — जतेरस्त्रीविषयादयोपधात् — [Pā. 4-1-63 as read]: nīṣ is given after a word denoting a species, not ending in a feminine suffix, which is not always feminine in gender and has y as a penultimate. The print explains jāti with the verse "ākṛtigrahaṇā jātiḥ liṅgānām ca na sarvabhāk | sakṛdākhyātānirgrāhyā gotraṃ ca caraṇaiḥ saha ||" — three marks of a jāti: it is known by form (e.g. taṭī, a shape such as nearness to water), it does not partake of all genders, and, once said of one person, it is understood of another without being said (e.g. vṛṣali: not used in the neuter; said of one person, his son, brother and so on are also understood to be vṛṣala); a word ending in a patronymic suffix or denoting a branch of the Veda is also a jāti (e.g. aupagavī, karī); meṣa is not neuter and is understood of another when said of one; so by the two marks "not of all genders" and "once said it is understood" it is a jāti-word; so nīṣ comes: meṣī; the accent of the suffix is final; because āgamaśāstram anityam the āt of āṇ nadyāḥ does not come; yaṇ: meṣy + e; udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya — उदात्तस्वरितयोर्यणः स्वरितोऽनुदात्तस्य — [Pā. 8-2-4 as read]: after a yaṇ standing for an acute or svarita vowel the following unaccented vowel becomes svarita; udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt [Pā. 6-1-174 as read]: a yaṇ standing for an acute and preceded by a consonant causes the following nadī-ending and ajādi [ending] to be acute; here the y stands for the acute ī and is preceded by ṣ, so one could say the ending e should be acute; but since the svarita rule of the eighth adhyāya is invisible by pūrvatrāsiddham, it cannot come; in all these examples udāttayaṇaḥ is the subject of the anuvāda of udāttasvaritayor...; therefore the ending should be acute by udāttayaṇaḥ; but by sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante it does not come. - nṛbhyah: "nṛ cānyatarasyām is an exception to sāvekācaḥ...; being optional, it gives no acute here." - nāribhyah: in the sūtra śārṅgaravādibhyo nīn — शार्ङ्गस्वादिभ्यो डीन् — [Pā. 4-1-73 as read] there is the gaṇasūtra nṛnarayor vṛddhiś ca: when nṛ and nara are shown with the feminine, the suffix nīn comes, and with it vṛddhi; so nārī; jyāposamjñāchandasor bahulam [Pā. 6-3-63 as

read] the shortening of nī; bhyas: nāribhyaḥ. - gave: "sāvekācaḥ... [is prohibited] by na goścansāvavarṇa...." Rik 6 ends here (| | 6 | |).

Translation: "O god Soma, śriyam, prosperity that is sufficient śatasya nṛṇām, for a hundred men, asme, in us, adhi ni dhehi, place in excess. Likewise mahi, great, tuvinṛmṇam, endowed with abundant strength, śravaḥ, food, adhi ni dhehi, place upon us. Asme: śe as the substitute for the locative by supām sulug.... Nṛṇām: the prohibition of lengthening by nṛ ca [Pā. 6-4-6]; the nām is optionally acute by nām anyatarasyām. Mahi and the rest have been explained."

Pratipadārtha — "soma — O god Soma; nṛṇām — for men; śatasya — for a hundred persons (as much as is complete); śriyam — wealth; asme — upon us; adhi ni dhehi — set it firmly; mahi — exceedingly much; tuvinṛmṇam — together with abundant strength; śravaḥ — food [give us]."

Bhāvārtha

— "O god Soma, give us abundant wealth, as much as suffices for a hundred men; and give us also food which is exceedingly abundant and which gives great strength."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 486) — "O Soma, grant us prosperity more than sufficient for a hundred men and much nonrishing [sic] food." ³²

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 486–487 - adhi śatasya nṛṇām śriyam — "wealth greater than what a hundred men should have." - asme nidhehi = asmāsu sthāpaya — "place in us, that is, give to us." - mahi = mahat — "greater, excellent." - śravaḥ — "śrava ity annanāma (Ni. 10-[?]); also dhananāma (Ni. 2-[?]): although the word śravaḥ has many senses — food, wealth, strength — the commentator accepts here the sense 'food'." - tuvinṛmṇam — "tuvi means much (Ni. 3-[?]); nṛmṇam means strength (Ni. 2-[?]); so tuvinṛmṇam means 'one with much strength'."

32. Printed "nonrishing".

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³³ - asme: supām sulug...: śe as the substitute for the locative. - nṛṇām: nṛ ca — नृ च — [Pā. 6-4-6 as read]: before nām the lengthening of a stem ending in a vowel is optionally prohibited for nṛ; being optional, the lengthening does not occur here. - mahi and the rest: "the process has been given before." Pratipadārtha — "somaparibādhaḥ — those who harass [ritual] Soma, i.e. the enemies of Soma who do not perform sacrifice; naḥ — us; mā juhuranta — let them not injure; arātayaḥ — enemies; mā (juhuranta) — let them not injure; indo — O god Soma; vāje — whether in the matter of food or of strength; naḥ — us; ā bhaja — nourish well."

Bhāvārtha

— "O god Soma, let those who hate you and do not offer you sacrifice not injure us, and let our other enemies not injure us. O Pūṣan [as printed; apparently a slip of the Kannada author for Soma], give us food or strength, and nourish us well."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 488)

— "Let not the adversaries of Soma, let not our enemies harm us ; O soma, procure us abundant food."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), pp. 488–489 - somaparibādhaḥ — "somaṃ paribādhante ye te tādrśāḥ somaparibādhaḥ | somasya bādhakāḥ yāgarahitāḥ: they cause harm to Soma by not performing the sacrifice; hence the enemies of Soma." - arātayaḥ — "rā dāne: since they are not those who give us anything, our opponents or enemies." - mā juhuranta — "hvr prasahyakaraṇe: let them not injure." - indo — "the word indu has the senses 'rain' (Ni. 3-[?]) and 'sacrifice' (Ni. 3-[?]); and Yāska has also said 'इन्दुः । इन्द्रेनत्तेर्वा' (Ni. 10-[?]) — induh | indher unatter vā — he has explained the word indu from indh [in the sense of] shining, or from und [in the sense of] wetting. Here Soma is addressed as 'brilliant'; or, since the Soma juice has the power of wetting, it can be called by the name indu. One may also say that indu means moon; but in the Ṛgveda the word soma has no conventional use for the moon." - vāje — "since the word vājaḥ is read among the eighteen names of food beginning with kṣandam [?], vāje means food."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁷ - somaparibādhaḥ: "somaṃ paribādante iti somaparibādhaḥ; kvip ca [Pā. 3-2-76 as read] kvip, here after a root in the sense of prathanā, in the plural; the accent of the first member of a compound with a kṛt." - arātayaḥ: root rā dāne; by the word bahulam in kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam ktin in the agent sense; or ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām; titutra... prohibits iṭ; a nañ-compound; the accent of the first member as an indeclinable. - juhuranta: root hvr prasahyakaraṇe, juhutyādi; lañ, jha; by na māñyoge the augment aṭ is prohibited; although the verb is parasmaipadin, by vyatyayo bahulam the ātmanepada comes; juhutyādidibhyaḥ śluḥ; ślau: doubling; hvr + hvr + jha; by bahulam chandasi [Pā. 7-4-78 as read], by the word bahula, i for the ṛ of the reduplicate, raparatva; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ the loss of r; kuhoś cuḥ gives jh for h, and abhyāse car ca [Pā. 8-4-54 as read] j for jh: ju + hvr + jha; bahulam chandasi [Pā. 6-1-... as read] u for the ṛ; if dvirvacane 'ci applied here, hur would [be doubled]; this does not occur since sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante; the at substitute for jha by adabhyastāt does not come, because of the optionality; jho 'ntaḥ gives ant; juhuranta; tiñ atinaḥ: wholly unaccented. Translation: "O Soma, those prajāḥ, people, who belong to you, who offer praise, those people — you, [who are] mūrdhā, in the position of head, [being] nābhā, at the place of tying together [the sacrificial hall] — venaḥ, desire [them]. Of you, what kind? Of the deathless, of one who has reached parasmin dhāman, the highest place, ṛtasya [of truth/of the sacrifice]. O Soma, ābhūṣantīḥ, the people who adorn you on all sides, vedaḥ, know. Dhāman: the locative elided by supāṃ sulug.... Nābhā: root ṇaha bandhane; īṇ in the passive sense by naho bhaś ca [Uṇ. 4-133 [?]]; first-syllable acute as ñit; ḍā for the locative by supāṃ sulug.... Venaḥ: venati is a verb of desire; leṭ, sip, with the augment aṭ; unaccented by tiṇ atīnaḥ. Ābhūṣantīḥ: root bhūṣa alamkāre, of the first class; śap being pit is unaccented; śatṛ — the root accent — first-syllable acute; in the compound the accent of the first member of a kṛt-ending compound. Vedaḥ: root vida jñāne; leṭ, sip, the augment aṭ."

Pratipadārtha — "soma — O god Soma; amṛtasya — [you who are] deathless; parasmin dhāman ṛtasya — [and] who are in the most excellent dwelling-place; te — your; yāḥ prajāḥ — those people (who praise [you]); mūrdhā — as their head (leader); nābhā — in the sacrificial hall; venaḥ — desire; soma — O Soma; ābhūṣantīḥ — those who adorn you on all sides; vedaḥ — know [them]."

39. The bhāṣya ends with two numerals, "|| 12 ||" and "|| 9 ||"; the second is the Rik number; the first (possibly a varga numeral) is not understood [?].

— "O Soma, you are deathless and stay in the most excellent dwelling-place. Your devotees decorate you on all sides. In the sacrificial hall, being their leader, know well the service they do to you and treat them well."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 491) — "O Soma, you are immortal and live in excellent dwelling ; have regard for your subjects who are engaged in decorating you in the sacrificial hall with you at their head." ⁴⁰

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 491 - amṛtasya — "of Soma, who is without death." - parasmin dhāman ṛtasya = uttame sthāne prāptasya — "who sits in the highest place; here the highest place is the sacrificial hall where the praise is made." - mūrdhā = śiraḥsthānīyas tvam — "one who is in the position of the head, i.e. excellent, or the foremost: 'at their head'; i.e., in front of you, as a leader." - nābhā = sannahanayukte yajñagrhe — "in the sacrificial hall." - venaḥ — "venatiḥ kāntikarmā: [a verb] of desire; 'desire'; 'wish, wish for'." - ābhūṣantīḥ = sarvatas tvām alaṃkurvantīḥ — "decorating you on all sides. What is meant by decorating Soma is not clear. Probably the ṛṣi has described in another way the preparing of the utensils for crushing the Soma juice [as the 'decoration']." - vedaḥ = vida jñāne — "know."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴¹ - dhāman: the locative ending is elided by supām sulug... - nābhā: root ṇaha bandhane; ṇo naḥ [Pā. 6-1-65 as read] n for the initial ṇ; naḥo bhaś ca — नहो भश्च — [Uṇ. 4-133 as read [?]]: after the root naḥ the suffix iñ and bh for h, in the passive sense; upadhāvṛddhi: nābhi; the locative singular with supām sulug... giving ḍā; loss of ṭi. - venaḥ: "venatiḥ kāntikarmā" (Nirukta 2-[?]-[?]) [as read]: one must take the root vena kāntau, icchā; leṭ, sip, the augment aṭ; tiñ atiñāḥ wholly unaccented. - ābhūṣantīḥ: root bhūṣa alaṃkāre, first class; laṭ,

Close of Sūkta 43. Printed on p. 492 after the grammar: "illige 43ne sūktavu mugidudu" — "Here the 43rd sūkta has ended." ⁴² With it the Eighth Anuvāka (printed pp. 251–492; Sūktas 37–43) ends. The next leaf, p. 493 = PDF 507, carries the title "nalavattanāḷkaneya sūktavu" ("the forty-fourth sūkta") and the long Sanskrit introduction and Kannada anuvāda of Sūkta 44 (agne vivasvat, fourteen Riks, the first sūkta of the Ninth Anuvāka, which has seven sūktas, 44–50; ṛṣi Praskaṇva, son of Kaṇva; deity Agni, with the Aśvins and Uṣas for Riks 1–3; metres: the odd Riks Bṛhatī, the even Satobṛhatī; Rik 1 Agne vivasvad). These are not yet written and belong to the next session. ⁴³

Summary of Sūkta 43. Nine Riks, the first six and Rik 3 to Rudra and Mitra–Varuṇa, the last three to Soma. Rik 1 asks when a pleasing hymn will be recited to the wise, mighty Rudra, cherished in the heart; Rik 2 asks that the earth give his medicine to our cattle, men and children; Rik 3, that Mitra, Varuṇa, Rudra and all the gods look kindly on us; Rik 4, for the happiness that Śaṃyu enjoyed; Rik 5 describes Rudra as shining like the Sun and gold, best of the gods; Rik 6, that he bring happiness to horses, sheep, men, women and cows; Riks 7–9 turn to Soma, asking for Translation ³: "In the ninth anuvāka there are seven sūktas. Of these, agne vivasvat, of fourteen ṛks, is the first. The Anukramaṇikā here: 'agne ṣaḥonā praskaṇvaḥ kāṇva āgneyaṃ tu prāgāthaṃ ...' [the rest of the clause, about the first two [or three] ṛks and 'Aśvins and Uṣas', is crowded [?]]. The ṛṣi is Praskaṇva, son of Kaṇva. Here the even-numbered ṛks, beginning with the second and fourth, are Satobṛhatī; the odd-numbered, beginning with the first and third, are Bṛhatī. The whole sūkta is Āgneya, and what follows; the first two ṛks have the Aśvins and Uṣas as deities. This sūkta [is used] in the Prātaranuvāka, in the Agni rite, in the Bārhata metre, and in the Āśvina śastra. It is laid down in the section beginning athaitasyā rātreḥ: 'agne vivasvad uṣasaḥ' (Āś. 4-13 [?]); in the Vājapeya the first pragātha is the anurūpa of the Agnimāruta [śastra]. It is laid down in the section beginning vājapeyena: 'citravatīṣu cet', 'stuvīraṃs tvaṃ naś citra ūtyā' and 'agne vivasvad uṣasaḥ' are the stotriya and anurūpa of the Agniṣṭoma Sāman (Āś. 6-9 [?]). In the paryāyavṛṣṭi, or in the Āśvina śastra, this very pragātha is the stotriya. And in the section beginning yadi paryāyān abhivṛyucchet, 'agne vivasvad uṣasaḥ' is the single stotriya for the Āśvina [śastra] (Āś. 6-6 [?])."

Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 493-494 — "With the sūkta agne vivasvat the ninth anuvāka begins. In this anuvāka there are seven sūktas ([sūktas] 44 to 50). In the first of them, agne vivasvat, there are fourteen ṛks. In the Anukramaṇikā: 'agne ṣaḷonā praskaṇvaḥ kāṇva āgneyaṃ tu prāgāthamādyo dvṛco 'śvyuṣasāṃ ca'. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Praskaṇva, the son of Kaṇva. The even-numbered ṛks are in the Satobṛhatī metre [and the odd-numbered in Bṛhatī]. All this sūkta has Agni as deity; but for the first three [numerals read "1-3" [?]] ṛks Agni, the Āśvins and Uṣas are also deities: in the Śrauta-sūtra of Āśvalāyana, in the section beginning athaitasyā rātreḥ, [it is] explained by the sūtra 'agne vivasvat (Ṛg. Saṃ. 1-44-1) sakhāyas tvā (Ṛg. Saṃ. 3-9-1)' (Āś. 4-13 [?]). In the Vājapeya sacrifice too the first ṛk of this sūkta is applied to the mantras of the Agnimāruta stotra in the Prāgātha metre. In the section vājapeyena of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra it is explained by the sūtra 'citravatiṣu cet stuvīraṃs tvam naś citra ūtyā (Ṛg. Saṃ. 6-48-9) agne vivasvad uṣasaḥ (Ṛg. Saṃ. 1-44-1)': the two are the stotriya and anurūpa of the Agniṣṭoma Sāman (Āś. 6-9 [?]). In the paryāyavṛṣṭi, too, this sūkta is to be recited among the mantras of the Āśvina śastra as a stotriya mantra in the Prāgātha metre: the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section yadi paryāyān abhivṛyucchet, explains this by the sūtra 'āśvināyaikastotriyo 'gne vivasvad uṣasaḥ' (Āś. 6-6 [?])." ⁴

Translation of the grammatical tail ¹⁰: Vivasvat — 'vivāsanam' is vivaḥ, and what has it; root vasa nivāse with vi, with an implicit causative sense, kvip in the abstract sense of the sampadādi class; 'tad asyāsti', matup; va for ma by mād upadhāyās ca...; since the word counts as bha by tasau matvarthe, it is not a pada, so there is no ru and so on; first-syllable acute from the vṛṣādi group. Rādhaḥ — root rādha sādha saṃsiddhau: 'that by which one succeeds' is rādhaḥ, wealth; asun in the sense of the instrument; first-syllable acute as nit. Dāśuṣe — root dāśṛ dāne; the kvasu-ending form is irregularly given in dāśvān sāhvān...; in the dative singular the saṃprasāraṇa of vasu; ṣatva by śāsivasi... Jātavedaḥ — 'jātāni vetti'; asun by the rule that a gati or kāraka keeps the accent of the first member; or veda = wealth: 'he whose wealth is born'; unaccented as a vocative. Vaha — in the Samhitā the long vowel by dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ'. Devān — by dirghād aṭi samānapāde the n becomes ru in the Samhitā; the nasalized ā by ato 'ṭi nityam. Uṣarbudhaḥ — 'uṣasi budhyante'; root budha avagamane; kvip; the accent of the first member of a kṛt-ending compound."

Pratipadārtha — "amartya — [you who are] deathless; jātavedaḥ — knower of everything that is born; agne — O Agni; tvam — you; uṣasaḥ — from the goddess Uṣas; vivasvat — endowed with excellent dwellings; citram — of many kinds; rādhaḥ — wealth; dāśuṣe — to the sacrificer who gives oblations; ā vaha — fetch and give [it]; and further; adya — today; uṣarbudhaḥ — the gods who awake at the time of Uṣas; devān — the gods — [bring them here]."

Bhāvārtha

9. The clause "ro rutvābhāvaś chāndasaḥ" near the end of the tail is crowded in the print [?].

10. characterized

— "O Agni, you are deathless. You know everything that is born. The sacrificer who has offered oblations expects your help alone. Bring from the goddess Uṣas for him wealth that is endowed with excellent dwellings and is of many kinds. And call to the place of sacrifice all the gods who awake at this time of Uṣas, so that the sacrifice may be carried through with all its parts."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 496) — "O Agni, you are immortal and you have knowledge of all things born ; bring from the Ushas, to the giver of oblations, wealth of many sorts with an excellent dwelling ; bring hither to-day the gods awaking in the morning." ¹¹

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), pp. 496–497 - vivasvat = vivāsanam vivaḥ | tadyuktaṃ | vasa nivāse — "(wealth) with a good habitation: 'with a good habitation'" (the English words are the source's). - citram — "of many kinds." - rādhaḥ — "rādha sādha saṃsiddhau | rādhnotyanena iti rādho dhanam. Because the word rādhaḥ is read among the twenty-eight names of wealth beginning with magham, reknaḥ (Ni. 2-[?]), rādhaḥ means wealth." - jātavedaḥ = jātānām veditā — "knower of everything that arises in the world. Jātavedas is a special form of Agni; Agni is praised in many ṛks by this name. Yāska on the word jātavedas: जातवेदाः कस्मात् । जातानि वेद । जातानि वै न विदुः । जाते जाते विद्यत इति वा । जातवित्तो वा जातधनः । जातविद्यो वा जातप्रज्ञानः । यत्तज्जातः पशूनविन्दतेति तज्जातवेदसो जातवेदस्त्वमिति ब्राह्मणम् । तस्मात्सर्वानृतून्यशवोऽग्निमभिसर्पन्तीति ॥ (Ni. 7-[?]-[?], as read [?]) jātavedāḥ kasmāt | jātāni veda | jātāni vaimam viduḥ | jāte jāte vidyata iti vā | jātavitto vā jātadhanah | jātavidyo vā jātaprajñānah | yat taj jātaḥ paśūn avindateti taj jātavedaso jātavedastvam iti brāhmaṇam | tasmāt sarvān ṛtūn paśavo 'gnim abhisarpantīti — editorial and tentative: 'Why Jātavedas? He knows the born; or the born know him; or he is found in each thing that is born; or he possesses the born, owns the born, has knowledge of the born, has the wisdom of the born; because, being born, he found the cattle, therefore is his Jātavedas-hood, so says the Brāhmaṇa; therefore in every season the cattle gather round Agni.' That is: since he knows beings that are born, he is called Jātavedas; since the born know him, he is called Jātavedas; or since he is in every being that is born, he is Jātavedas; since he is possessed of wealth, 'Jātavedas'; since he possesses knowledge or wisdom, 'Jātavedas'; and because he, being born, found the cattle — the Brāhmaṇa has this statement as the reason for the name: [because] of the sacrificial animals which one offers in Agni. Therefore the intention is that all beings should take refuge in Agni alone, in all seasons." ¹² - uṣarbudhaḥ — "uṣasi budhyanta ity uṣarbudhaḥ | budha avagamane: those who awake at the time of Uṣas, i.e. at dawn; those who rise."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹³ - agne: root agi gatau; aṅgeḥ nalopas ca — अङ्गेर्नलोपश्च — [Uṇ. 4-[?]] as read]: after aṅ the suffix ni, and loss of the n; the idit root's num, by idito num dhātoḥ, is lost with the ni suffix: agni; vocative agne; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda it is not wholly unaccented: apādādaḥ [Pā. 8-1-18 as read] prohibits [the unaccentedness]; first-syllable acute by ñnityādir nityam [as read]. - vivasvat: "vivāsanam vivaḥ tadyuktam", [wealth] with the quality of causing dwelling; root vasa nivāse with the prefix vi; sampadādibhyaḥ kvip [Pā. 3-3-108 as read] kvip in the abstract sense; tad asyāsty asmin [Pā. 5-2-94 as read]: matup; vivas + mat; mādupadhāyās ca matorvo 'yavādibhyaḥ [Pā. 8-2-9 as read]: v for the m of matup after a stem ending in m, or a [print: ā] or with these as the penultimate — except in the yavādi group; tasau matvarthe [Pā. 1-4-19 as read]: before a matup-suffix a word ending in t or s takes the bha name; so vivas is bha, and the pada name given by supti nantaṃ padam does not arise; therefore sasajūṣo ruḥ [Pā. 8-2-66 as read] does not apply to the final s, and the bho-bhago... [Pā. 8-3-17] yaṇ rule does not come;

[Pā. 2-3-48 as read] the first-case singular is an āmantrita, so by āmantritasya ca it is wholly unaccented. - vaha: root vaha prāpane; loṭ, sip, hi, śap; ato heḥ luk; in the Saṃhitā the long vowel by dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ. - devān: dīrghād aṭi samānapāde [Pā. 8-3-9 as read]: when, in a single pāda [one-fourth of a ṛk], a n standing after a long vowel is followed by aṭ (the letters of the aṭ group, here u of uṣarbudhaḥ), ru in the Saṃhitā; ato 'ti nityam [Pā.

Translation of this part: "O Agni, you are endowed with special qualities beginning with being juṣṭa ['dear']. Juṣṭaḥ, served, the dūtaḥ, messenger of the gods, the carrier of tidings; havyavāhanaḥ, the bearer of oblations; adhvarāṇām rathīḥ, [as] the charioteer, in the position of the chariot, of the sacrifices. And so, in another mantra, it is explained by the Brāhmaṇa itself: 'rathīr adhvarāṇām: this indeed is the chariot of the gods'; and in another Brāhmaṇa: 'he says rathīr adhvarāṇām: this [Agni] having become a chariot carries the oblation to the gods.' Such as you are, sajūḥ, together with the two deities, the Aśvins, and the deity Uṣas, suvīryam, endowed with fine heroism, bṛhat, abundant, śravaḥ, food, asme dhehi, place upon us; put it into us."

Correction note (Rik 44.2). In the entry above the bhāṣya's grammatical tail was first left unfinished with a placeholder ("niṣṭhāyām ..."), which was not in the print. It has now been replaced, in the text above, by the tail actually printed at the foot of p. 500 (juṣṭaḥ ... asme), in Devanagari and IAST. The words of that tail not already translated are characterized here.

Translation of the grammatical tail ¹⁷: Juṣṭaḥ — root juṣī prīṭisevanayoḥ; the first-syllable acute by nityaṃ mantre [as read]. Asi — in sip the loss of the s of tās and as [Pā. 7-4-50 (?)]; the prohibition of nighāta by hi ca. Havyavāhanaḥ — 'havyaṃ vahati'; ṇyuṭ by havye 'nantaḥpādam' [Pā. 3-2-66 (?)]; ana for yu; since it is ñīt it is first-syllable acute, [but] the accent of the first member of a kṛt-ending compound prevails. Agne — because it begins a pāda the eighth-adhyāya nighāta does not come. Rathīḥ — a suffix ī in its own sense after ratha. Adhvarāṇām — 'dhvaro nāsty eṣu', a bahuvrīhi; the latter member is final-acute by nañ-subhyām. Suvīryam — the latter member is first-syllable acute by vīravīryau ca. Asme — śe for the locative by supām sulug...

17. characterized; numerals as read [?]

Pratipadārtha — "agne — O Agni, (you); juṣṭaḥ — served with confidence; dūtaḥ — the messenger of the gods; havyavāhanaḥ — bearer of oblations [to the deities]; adhvarāṇām — for sacrifices; rathīḥ — in the position of the charioteer; asi — you are (such); asvibhyām — with the Aśvin deities; uṣasā — with the goddess Uṣas; sajūḥ — joining; suvīryam — excellent and heroic; bṛhat — abundant; śravaḥ — food; asme — to us; dhehi — grant."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, as you stand in the place of the manager for the sacrifices, carry the oblations and share them with all the gods, you are served with confidence by all, being the messenger of the gods. Joining with the Aśvin deities and with the goddess Uṣas, who are objects of the delight of all these gods, grant us food that is excellent, heroic and abundant."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 501)

— "O Agani [sic], you are well-liked [sic] messenger of the gods, the bearer of oblations, the conductor [sic] of sacrifices ; together with Ushas, and Aswins bestow upon us abundant and invigorating food."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśaya-gaḥ), p. 501 - juṣṭaḥ = juṣṭī prītisevanayoḥ — "one who is the object of the gods' love, or who is served by sacrificers and other people." - rathīḥ adhvarāṇām — "yajñānām netā: the leader of sacrifices; one who carries sacrifices through. Rathīḥ here means one who drives a chariot; or rathī, one who drives a chariot — a charioteer, or a warrior. As a charioteer drives the chariot, so this Agni accomplishes the works of sacrifice in all their parts: so Agni stands to the chariot called sacrifice as the charioteer. On this point the commentator quotes the Brāhmaṇa sentences 'rathīr adhvarāṇām ity aiṣa hi devarathaḥ' and 'rathīr adhvarāṇām ity āha ratho vā eṣa bhūto devebhyo havyam vahati.'" - sajūḥ = sahito bhūtvā — "having joined." - śravo bṛhat — "abundant food, or nourishment."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁸ - juṣṭaḥ: root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ; the suffix kta; śvīdīto niṣṭhāyām [Pā. 7-2-14 as read]: no iṭ before the kta and ktavatu suffixes after the roots śvi and idit roots; ṛtvā juṣṭa; juṣṭārpīte ca chandasī [Pā. 6-1-207 as read]: juṣṭa and arpita are optionally first-syllable acute in the Veda; nityam mantrē [Pā. 6-1-210 as read]: in a mantra they are always first-syllable acute. The print remarks that since the first rule already settles the sense this second sūtra need not be made, but that usage in the Veda is vyavasthita (fixed), so even optionality cannot prove final-acuteness, and the Śruti has final-acuteness in a passage such as 'arpitāḥ ṣaṭ ṣaṭ...' [as read, crowded [?]]. - asi: root as bhuvī, laṭ, sip, śap → luk by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ; tāsasty-ṛlopaḥ — तासस्त्योर्लोपः — [Pā. 7-4-50 as read]: the loss of the s before a suffix beginning with s; the prohibition of nighāta since the verb is joined with hi (hi ca, [Pā. 8-1-34 as read]). - havyavāhanaḥ: havye 'nantahpādam — हव्येऽनन्तःपादम् — [Pā. 3-2-66 as read]: after vah, nyuṭ when havya is the upapada; not when it stands within the pāda (here it does not); yuvor anākau: ana; upadhāvṛddhi; the nyuṭ is ñit [the ṇ], so first-syllable acute would arise; but by gatikārapapadāt kṛt the accent of the first member stands. - agne: begins a pāda; therefore the eighth-adhyāya unaccentedness does not apply; by āmantritasya ca first-syllable acute. - rathīḥ: root ramu krīḍāyām; hanikuṣinīramikāśibhyaḥ kthan [Uṇ. 2-[?] as read]: kthan; anudāttopadeśa... [Pā. 6-4-37 as read] loss of m; the suffix comes in its own sense after ratha. - adhvarāṇām: dhvaraḥ = injury; 'na vidyate dhvaraḥ yeṣu te': a bahuvrīhi; by nañ-subhyām the latter member is final-acute. - suvīryam: vīra vīryau ca [Pā. 6-2-120 as read]: in a bahuvrīhi after su the words vīra and vīrya are first-syllable acute; vīrya is first-syllable acute. - asme: supām sulug...: śe for the locative; śeṣe lopaḥ: the loss of the d of asmad; the accent that follows the loss

Translation: "Adya, today, we vṛṇīmahe — we beg for — Agni. What kind? Dūtam, the carrier of tidings; vasum, the cause of dwelling; purupriyam, dear to many; dhūmaketum, having smoke as [his] banner; bhārjikam, adorned with well-known radiance — 'bhārjikaḥ: of famous radiance' is the statement of Yāska (Ni. 6-4 [?]); vyuṣṭiṣu, at the times of dawn, yajñānām, of the sacrificers, adhvaraśriyam, the [one] who dwells in [their] sacrifice [the text of the last clause is doubtful (?)]. The tail (characterized): adya — the long vowel in the Saṃhitā by nipātasya ca; purupriyam — 'dear to many', final-acute by samāsasya; dhūmaketum — dhūma ends in the suffix mak by iṣiyudhīndhi... [Uṇ. 1-144], so is final-acute; in the bahuvrīhi the accent of the first member; bhārjikam — īkan by rjeś ca [Uṇ. 4-22 (?)]; no guṇa because kit is carried forward; 'the rjika, the driver, of bhāḥ, light'; first-syllable acute by the supplementary rule on divodāsa-type words [Pā. 6-2-191 (?)]; or 'bhāso rjanaṃ yasmin', a bahuvrīhi with the accent of the first member; vyuṣṭiṣu — root ubhī vivāse, 'vivāsaḥ' is varjanam, '[times] when they are specially dispelled by darkness': vyuṣṭayaḥ, dawn times; ktin in the passive sense; the prohibition of iṭ by titutra...; ṣatva by vraścādi..., ṣṭutva; the accent of the first member; yaṇ and the svarita by udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ...; adhvaraśriyam — 'adhvaraṃ śrayate', adhvaraśrīḥ; kvip by kvib vacipracchi... [Uṇ. 2-32 (?)]; no saṃprasāraṇa and a long vowel in connection with it; in the accusative singular iyaṇ by aci śnudhātu..."

Pratipadārtha — "adya — today; dūtam — the messenger; vasum — the giver of dwelling; purupriyam — dear to the many; dhūmaketum — [him who has] a banner in the form of smoke; bhārjikam — adorned with flame; vyuṣṭiṣu — at the times of dawn; yajñānām — of the performers of sacrifices; adhvaraśriyam — the support of the sacrifice; agnim — Agni; vṛṇīmahe — we choose, and beg."

20. Doubtful: "yogāsevinam" at the end of the first part is as read [?]; the closing clauses of the tail on vyuṣṭiṣu ("tāḍau ca...") and the Uṇādi numerals are read with doubt [?].

Bhāvārtha

— "The god Agni is wanted by all, divine and human. He carries the oblations to the gods and is the messenger. He is the giver of dwelling to all. He has a banner in the form of smoke and is adorned with flame. At the times of dawn he is the support of the sacrifice of the performers of sacrifices. We choose and beg for Agni, who is dear to many people, who is wondrous in these ways and who does good to many."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 504) — "We choose to-lay [sic] Agni, as messenger ; Agni, the good, the beloved of many, the smoke-bannered, who shines with his brightness and who is the protector of the sacrificer at the break of day." ²¹

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 505 - vasum = nivāsa hetum — "one who is the cause of dwelling-places, i.e., who protects houses and the like: 'Protector of the dwellings'" (the English words are the source's). - purupriyam = puruṇām priyam — "dear to many people." - dhūmaketum — "one who has smoke as his banner. That smoke is the banner of Agni is well known." - bhārjikam — "prasiddhabhāsālamkṛtam | bhārjikaḥ prasiddhabhāḥ (Ni. 6-4): adorned with radiance: one who shines brilliantly." - vyuṣṭiṣu — "vyuṣṭayaḥ uṣaḥkālāḥ teṣu: at the early-morning times." - adhvaraśriyam = adhvaraṃ śrayata ity adhvaraśrīḥ — "one who is served in the sacrifice; or one who has the chief wealth of the sacrifice, i.e. the chief person in the sacrifice."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²² - adya: nipātasya ca [Pā. 6-3-136 as read]: a particle in a mantra takes the long vowel. - purupriyam: "puruṇām = to many; priyaḥ = one who is an object of affection";

21. The print's "to-lay" for "to-day" is a misprint.

samāsasya [Pā. 6-1-223 as read]: the end of the compound is acute, so final-acute. - dhūmaketum: root dhūñ kampāne; iṣiyudhīndhidasiśyādhūsūbhyo mak [Uṇ. 1-144 as read]: mak, which is kit, so no guṇa; final-acute from the suffix accent; 'dhūmaḥ ketur yasya saḥ', a bahuvrīhi, the accent of the first member by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam. - bhārjikam: root rja gatisthānārjanopārjaneṣu; rjeś ca — ऋजेश्च — [Uṇ. 4-[?]] as read]: the suffix ikan — kit is carried forward from the previous rule iṣeḥ kidhrasvaś ca [as read], so no guṇa; 'bhāsaḥ = of light, rjikaḥ = one who gives rise to it'; ādyudāttaprakaraṇe divodāsādīnām chandasy upasaṃkhyānam gives first-syllable acute to the first member; or 'bhāso 'rjanaṃ yasmin saḥ', a bahuvrīhi with the accent of the first member. - vyuṣṭiṣu: 'ubhī vivāse: vivāsa means leaving; 'they are specially left by darkness': vyuṣṭayaḥ, the times of dawn, which are specially dispelled; ktin in the passive sense after vi + uṣ; titutratatha... prohibits iṭ; vraścabhrasja... [Pā. 8-2-36 as read] ṣ for ś; uṣ + ti; ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ gives ṣṭ: uṣṭi; tādaḥ ca kṛti nityau — [Pā. 6-2-50 as read]: before a kṛt beginning with a t the gati is always [given] its natural accent, even for a non-t-initial kṛt that is nī; so vi keeps the accent; iko yaṇaci gives y; udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya gives the svarita to the following unaccented vowel [u]." - adhvaraśriyam: 'adhvaraṃ śrayate': root śriñ sevāyām; kvib vacipracchiśrisrudruprajñāṃ dīrgho'saṃprasāraṇaṃ ca [Uṇ. 2-[?]] as read]: kvip after the roots vac paribhāṣaṇe, pracch jñīpsāyām, śriñ sevāyām, sru gatau, dru gatau, vṛj gatau, ju gatau [a sautra root], with a long vowel and without saṃprasāraṇa; adhvara is the upapada of the root śri; the accusative singular am; adhvaraśrī + am: the ī here stands after a root and conjunction (dhātvavayavasamīyogapūrvaka); so eraneḥkācaḥ [Pā. 6-4-82 as read] yaṇ does not come; aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor iyaṇuvaṇau [Pā. 6-4-77 as read]: iyaṇ, uvaṇ for the final i, u of a root and of śnu, bhrū before an ajādi suffix: adhvaraśriy + am. Translation: "Vyuṣṭiṣu, at the times of dawn, devān, the other gods, all the gods, acchā, facing [them], yātave, to go, I praise the god Agni. What kind? Śreṣṭham, exceedingly praised; yaviṣṭhaṃ, the youngest; atithiṃ, one able to go constantly; svāhutaṃ, well and on all sides the place of offering; juṣṭhaṃ, dear, dāśuṣe janāya, to the man who has given the oblation, the sacrificer; jātavedasaṃ, the knower of the born. The tail (characterized): yaviṣṭhaṃ — iṣṭhan after yuvan; the loss of what follows [the y] by sthūladūra...; guṇa of the preceding; av-substitution; first-syllable acute since nit; atithiṃ — root ata sātatyagamane; ithin by ṛtanyañji... [Uṇ. 4-2 [?]]; first-syllable acute as nit; svāhutaṃ — root hu dānādanayoh; 'āhūyate 'smin': āhutaḥ; su in the sense of honour, with karmapravacanīya name [Pā. 1-4-94 [?]],

24. In the bhāṣya the Pāṇini and Uṇādi numbers are read with doubt [?], and the clause beginning "sthūladūra..." (the rule-name for the loss in yaviṣṭha) is crowded.

compounded by svatī pūjāyām [Pā. 2-2-18]; the accent of the first member as an indeclinable; the gati accent by gatikārapapadāt kṛt does not come, since the gati name of this su is barred."

Pratipadārtha — "vyuṣṭiṣu — at the times of dawn; devān — [other] gods; acchā — facing; yātave — in order to go [so as to bring them here]; śreṣṭham — [him who is] exceedingly worshipful; yaviṣṭham — exceedingly young; atithim — one who always has the power to go; svāhutam — one who is offered oblations all round; dāśuṣe — of the giver of oblations; janāya — to the sacrificer; juṣṭam — one who is an object of love; jātavedasam — one who knows all things that are born; agnim — the god Agni; īle — I praise." ²⁵

Rik 44.4, continued ²⁶

Bhāvārtha

— "The god Agni is endowed with most excellent qualities. He is worthy of the worship of all; exceedingly youthful; he has the power to go about constantly; he is the one to whom oblations are offered all round; the giver of oblations [to the gods]; the object of the love of the sacrificer; beneficial to all and knowing all that is born. We pray to and praise such a god Agni at the times of dawn, that he may go to bring the other gods to the place of sacrifice."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 508)

— "I praise Agni at the break of day, the best among gods, the youthful, the guest of the sacrifice, universally invoked, who is friendly to the man who offers oblation, who knows all that are born, that he may go to bring the gods to the sacrifice."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 508 - yaviṣṭham = atiśayena yuvā yaviṣṭhaḥ tam — "the youthful; the very young." - atithim = ata sātatyagamane — "one who always goes to the gods"

25. The Bhāvārtha, the source's English, the Special Topics and the grammar of Rik 4 begin on p. 508, not yet written.

26. from p. 508

or, in a sacrifice, to the sacrificer's side; or one who is called like a guest: 'Guest'" (the English word is the source's). - svāhutam = hu dānādanayoḥ | āhūyate 'smin ity āhutaḥ | suṣṭhu āhutaḥ svāhutaḥ tam — "one who is called, invited, in sacrifices and so on." - juṣṭaṃ janāya dāśuṣe — "dear to the sacrificer who offers oblations." - acchā — "chiefly, specially, exceedingly; in the Saṃhitā text the final syllable is long for the convenience of the Veda." - yātave = gantum — "in order to go; in order to go to bring the gods." - jātavedasam — "the explanation of this word was given in the first ṛk of this sūkta."

27. pp. 508–509 — grammar pages, noted briefly

28. The long list of roots and suffixes in the sūtra is crowded and not reproduced.

karmapravacanīya; kugatiprādayaḥ [Pā. 2-2-18 as read] — here, in the vārttika svatī pūjāyām, su and ati in the sense of honour compound; the accent of the first member as an indeclinable by tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtīyā...; since the karmapravacanīya name bars the gati name, gatikārapapadāt kṛt gives the accent of the latter kṛt member. Pratipadārtha — "amṛta — [you who are] deathless; viśvasya — of the whole world; bhojana — [you who] make [it] enjoy the fruit of its own actions, or [who] nourish all the world;

29. The closing numeral of this bhāṣya reads like "25" in the print, as in Rik 9 of Sūkta 43; It is taken as the Rik number 5, unexplained [?].

havyavāhana — you who bear oblations; miyedhya — you who are worthy of sacrifice; agne — O Agni; trātāram — [you who are] the protector of the world; amṛtam — deathless; yajīṣṭham — the best performer of sacrifices; tvām — you; staviṣyāmi — I will praise."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are deathless. You cause all the worlds to enjoy the fruits of their respective actions. You nourish the whole world. You bear oblations. You are worthy of sacrifice. You are the protector of the world and the best performer of sacrifices. I praise you who are endowed with such excellent qualities."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 511)

— "O Agni, immortal, protector of the universe, bearer of oblations, deserver of sacrifices, I will praise you, who are immortal, preserver and the sacrificer."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 511 - amṛta — "deathless; 'one who is exempt from death' (English as printed). This word is used twice in this ṛk." - bhojana = pālaka — "protector; or 'karmaphalaṃ bhojayatīti bhojanaḥ': one who makes men enjoy the fruits of the rites such as sacrifice, i.e. who gives the wished-for things which are the fruits of acts." - trātāram = train pālana — "protector, guardian." - miyedhya = yajñārha — "one who is fit to be worshipped in the sacrifice." - yajīṣṭham = yaṣṭāram — "one who accomplishes the rites of sacrifice." - havyavāhana — "one who carries the oblations to the gods."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁰ - staviṣyāmi: root ṣtuñ stutau, an ajanta root; the commentators on the kārikā "ūdṛdantaiḥ..." list the udāttas; this root does not belong among them, so it is anudātta; by ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt the prohibition of iṭ would properly come; but by vyatyayo bahulam the iṭ comes; lṛṭ, uttama singular

Translation: "O yaviṣṭhya, youngest Agni, you, for the sacrificer who grṇate, praises [you], suśaṃsaḥ, to be well praised; madhujihvaḥ, sweet-tongued — the flame that delights; svāhutaḥ, well offered to, facing [us] — being such, bodhi, understand our intention. And moreover: of praskaṇvasya, of the great ṛṣi so named, the son of Kaṇva ('Praskaṇva is Kaṇva's son, born of Kaṇva', by Yāska's statement (Ni. 3-12 [?])), jīvase, for his life, āyuh pratiran, greatly prolonging [his] span of life, daivyaṃ janam, the people belonging to the gods, namasya, honour [or: worship]. Suśaṃsaḥ: root śansu stutau; ghañ in the abstract; 'śobhanaḥ śaṃso yasya'; the latter member is first-syllable acute by ādyudāttam dvyac chandasī. Bodhi: root budha avagamane; the hi of loṭ; śap elided by bahulaṃ chandasi; dhi for hi by hujhalbhyo her dhiḥ; [guṇa of the light penultimate, the clause crowded (?)]; the loss of the final of the root is Vedic. Grṇate: root gṛ śabde; śatr for laṭ; śnā of the kryādi; loss of ā by śnābhyastayor ātaḥ; the ending acute by śatur anumah. Yaviṣṭhya: [the process] has been given. Praskaṇvasya: 'prabhūti', arising, from Kaṇva, of whom [he is]: praskaṇvaḥ; the augment suṭ is irregularly given in praskaṇvaharicandrāv ṛṣī [Pā. 6-1-153]; the accent of the first member in the bahuvrīhi. Pratiran: tira with pra in the sense of increasing. Namasya: kyac by namovarivaścitraṇaḥ kyac in the sense of honour; accent of the suffix; the long vowel in the Samhitā by anyeṣām api dṛśyate. Daivyam: yañ of the prāgdīvyatiya group in the sense tasyedam, by devād yañau [Pā. 4-1-85 (?)]."

Pratipadārtha — "yaviṣṭhya — O Agni, the youngest; grṇate — [for you] the sacrificer who praises; suśaṃsaḥ — one who is praised by us; madhujihvaḥ — [one with] a tongue of delight; svāhutaḥ — [one] to whom oblations are offered on all sides; bodhi — know [our wish]; praskaṇvasya — of the great ṛṣi named Praskaṇva, son of Kaṇva; jīvase — for life; āyuh — length of life; pratiran — increasing well; daivyam — the belonging to the gods; janam — the person; namasya — honour."

— "O Agni, because oblations are offered to you on every side, your flame rises up attractively and makes all rejoice. We, the sacrificers who praise you, sing your qualities. Understand their purpose well and fulfil the wishes of the sacrificer. You are very youthful. Make Praskaṇva's life shine and increase his span of life. Honour the people who belong to the gods."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 514)

— "O most youthful Agni, you are sweet-tongued and universally invoked ; you are praised by us on behalf of the worshipper ; worship the celestial man (god) and thereby prolong Praskanwa's life that he may live long."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 514–515 - suśaṃsaḥ = suṣṭhu śaṃsanīyaḥ — "one who is well praised." - gr̥nate = gṛ śabde — "for the sacrificer who praises." - āyuh jīvase — "to live many days; long life." - daivyaṃ janam = daivasambandhinam janam — "the people who belong to the gods, i.e. the deities." - madhujihvaḥ = mādayitrjvālaḥ — "one whose tongue has a taste for sweet oblations — ghee and other liquid [oblations]. For a detailed discussion of the sense of this word see Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, part 2, page 539" ³³. - svāhutaḥ — "the sense of this word has been given in the fourth ṛk of this sūkta." - praskaṇvasya — "the son of the ṛṣi Kaṇva is called Praskaṇva. In the Ṛgveda this ṛṣi is the ṛṣi of the sūktas 44 to 50 in the first maṇḍala, the 49th sūkta [?] in the eighth maṇḍala and the 95th sūkta [?] in the ninth maṇḍala — altogether [97 [?]] ṛks in these sūktas. The family of the ṛṣi Kaṇva is very famous: the ṛṣis of the sūktas of the eighth maṇḍala are Kaṇva and members of the family of the ṛṣi Kaṇva."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, since you are all-knowing and the accomplisher of the offering, all the people make you blaze well in the sacrifice. They all give you invitations. Accept their invitations and bring promptly to this rite of ours the gods endowed with excellent knowledge."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 517)

— "O Agni, the people kindle you, the all-knowing invoker (Agani [sic]) invoked [printed "nvoked"] by many, you bring hither, the wise gods quickly."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 517 - viśaḥ — "prajāḥ, people, that is, priests and others who praise you in the sacrifice." - pracetasah = prakṛṣṭajñānāyuktān — "gods of excellent knowledge." - dravat — "quickly. Translation: "O svadhvara, Agni, endowed with fine sacrificial connections — vyuṣṭiṣu, at the times of dawn, śravaḥ, food, in the form of the offering, aiming at: 'bring the gods beginning with Savitr' is carried over. 'Svadhvara' is the address to the Āhavanīya fire. 'Agnim' is said of another deity who is the object of the oblation. Sutasomāsaḥ, those who have pressed the Soma, kaṇvāsaḥ, the wise priests, havyavāhaṃ, the bearer of oblations, the Āhavanīya which conveys the oblation — you — indhate, they kindle. Vyuṣṭiṣu: root ubhī vivāse; 'vivāsaḥ' is varjanam; the time of dawn, when [the world] is specially dispelled by darkness. Kṣapaḥ: kṣapā is a name for night; the loss of the ā by the yogavibhāga of ata in jasy āto dhātoḥ [Pā. 6-4-140]. Sutasomāsaḥ: '[those] by whom the Soma is pressed'; niṣṭhā comes first in the compound [Pā. 2-2-36]; the accent of the first member in the bahuvrīhi. Havyavāhaṃ: 'havyaṃ vahatī', havyavāt; ṇvip by vahaś ca."

41. In the bhāṣya "āhavanīyognaḥ" (for āhavanīyo 'gneḥ') is as read, doubtful [?]; the clause "ktini krādaḥ ca niti" and the Pāṇini numbers are read with doubt.

Pratipadārtha — "svadhvara — O Agni, endowed with excellent sacrifices; kṣapah — after the night; vyuṣṭiṣu — at the times of dawn; savitāram — Savitr; uṣasam — Uṣas; aśvinā — the Aśvin deities; bhagam — Bhaga; agnim — [and] the god Agni (bring [them]); sutasomāsaḥ — those who have the Soma juice [pressed]; kaṇvāsaḥ — the wise priests; havyavāham — you who carry the oblations; indhate — they make [you] blaze."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are endowed with excellent sacrifices. At the times of dawn, immediately after the night, bring to our sacrifice Savitr, Uṣas, the Aśvin deities, Bhaga and the god Agni. The wise priests press the Soma juice and make you, who carry the oblations, blaze."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 519) — "O Agni, who is worshipped well in the sacrifices, bring hither, at the break of the day preceeding [sic] the night, Savitru, Ushas, the Aswins, Bhaga and Agni ; the Kanwas having pressed and poured out the soma libations, kindle you, the carrier of oblation (to the gods)."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 520 - savitāram, uṣasam, aśvinā, bhagam, agnim — "the ṛṣi prays Agni to come bringing these deities. Since Agni is also among the deities here, it is impossible that Agni should call Agni himself. So the main intention is: 'together with these deities we invite you too'." - kṣapah — "kṣapā means night; here 'after the night'; since the word kṣapā is read among the twenty-three names of night beginning with śyāvī, kṣapā, the word means night." - kaṇvāsaḥ — "the sons of the ṛṣi Kaṇva, or the descendants of the ṛṣi Kaṇva." - sutasomāsaḥ — "sutaḥ somo yaiḥ te: those who have pressed and made ready the Soma juice." - indhate — "they kindle; they make blaze; after churning the fire, they first establish that fire in the fire-pit called Āhavanīya, set up in the eastern part of the sacrificial altar." - svadhvara = śobhanayogayuktāgne — "one who is worshipped in excellent sacrifices."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴³ - vyuṣṭiṣu: "explained in the third mantra of this sūkta." - kṣapah: "kṣapā is a name for night. After it jas; jasy āto dhātoḥ [Pā. 6-4-140 as read]: the final ā of a bha-named aṅga that ends in an ā-ending root is lost; but kṣapā is not an ā-ending root; so this sūtra cannot give the loss here. Here the sūtra has been divided (yogavibhāga) into ātaḥ: [it provides that] the final ā of an ā-ending aṅga that has the bha name is lost; the sense of the second part is as said before; here the loss of the ā comes by ātaḥ." - sutasomāsaḥ: root ṣuñ abhiṣave; kta in the passive sense; "sutaḥ somo yaiḥ te", a bahuvrīhi; niṣṭhā [Pā. 2-2-36 as read]: in a bahuvrīhi a cta/ktavatu-ending word is used as the first member; so suta is put first; bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam gives the accent of the first member. - havyavāham: the same nyuṣ as in the first pāda of Rik 2 [Ṛg. 1-44-2] is possible by havye 'nantaḥpādam; but here the word stands at the beginning of the fourth pāda, so havye 'nantaḥ... does not apply; and vahaś ca — वहश्च — [Pā. 3-2-64 as read]: when a subanta is the upapada, ṇvi after vah; so ṇvi; upadhāvrddhi, ṭh-tva [ḍhatva] and the like. Translation: "O Agni, you, the patiḥ, the protector, of the adhvarāṇām, sacrifices that belong to viśām, the people — dūtaḥ asi hi, you are the messenger of the gods, the carrier of tidings.

Pratipadārtha — "agṇe — O Agni; viśām — of the people; adhvarāṇām — of the sacrifices; patiḥ — as protector; dūtaḥ — as messenger of the gods; asi hi — you are; uṣarbudhaḥ — those who rise at dawn; svarḍṛśaḥ — and who look at the sun; devān — the gods; adya — today; somapīṭaye — for the drinking of the Soma juice; ā vaha — bring [them] face to face to [us]."

— "O Agni, you are the protector of the sacrifices of the people and the messenger of the gods. Therefore you are a benefactor equally to the gods and to men. The gods awake at dawn and look at the sun. Bring those gods to our sacrificial place to drink the Soma juice."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 522)

— "O Agni, you are the protector of the sacrifices of the people and the messenger of the gods ; bring hither to-day the gods awaking at dawn and seeing the sun, to drink the Soma-juice."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ), pp. 522–523 - adhvarāṇām patiḥ — "yajñānām pālakaḥ: the protector of sacrifices: 'protector of sacrifices or lord of the sacrifices' (English as printed). Lord of sacrifices: since Agni has pre-eminence in sacrifices, he is called yajñapati." - viśām — "prajānām sambandhino ye adhvarās teṣām: the commentator says it means 'the protector of the sacrifices that the people perform'. Rather than this, it seems more suitable to connect the word viśām with the word dūtaḥ and take dūto viśām asi as 'you are the messenger who goes from the people to the gods.'" - uṣarbudhaḥ — "the explanation of this word I have given in the first ṛk of this sūkta." - svardṛśaḥ — "suṣṭhu arti gacchatīti svaḥ — it is one who goes in the atmosphere; thus svaḥ means the Sun; those who see him are svardṛśaḥ. The gods are in heaven, so they look at the Sun who is in heaven. Or, taken with the word uṣarbudhaḥ: the gods who, rising at dawn, look at the Sun at the time of his rising."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁵ - patiḥ: root pā rakṣaṇe; pāter ḍatiḥ — पातेर्दतिः — [Uṇ. 4-[?] as read]: the suffix ḍati, with loss of ṭi; by the suffix accent first-syllable acute (as printed: ādyudātta). - adhvarāṇām: "na vidyate dhvaraḥ (injury) yeṣu te adhvarāḥ, of those"; a bahuvrīhi; nañ-subhyām gives the latter member final-acute. - agne: begins a pāda; the eighth-adhyāya unaccentedness does not come; āmantritasya ca gives first-syllable acute. - asi: root as bhuvi, adādi; sip; śap → luk; tāsasty... gives the loss of the s of the root; the prohibition of the wholly-unaccented by hi ca; sip being pit is unaccented. - somapītaye: "ṣuñ abhiṣave; mun... [Uṇ. 1-1-62 as read: ārtistususḥṛghṛkṣiptabhāyāvāpadiyakṣinībhyo man]: the suffix man after ṣuñ, guṇa: soma; root pā pāne; sthāgāpāpacō bhāve — स्थागापापचो भावे — [Pā. 3-3-95 as read]: after these roots ktin in the abstract; ghumāsthāgāpājahātisām hali [Pā. 6-4-66 as read]: ī for the ā of these roots before a kit or ñit ārdhadhātuka beginning with a consonant: pīti; 'somasya pītiḥ': a ṣaṣṭhī-tatpuruṣa; kurugārhapatarikta-guru-sūtajaratslēṣmīla [—

44. In the grammatical tail the words "svarādityaḥ" (for svar ādityaḥ, 'svar' = the Sun) and the rule-name sthāgāpāpacō bhāve are as read, doubtful [?].

45. pp. 523–524 — grammar pages, noted briefly

the rule kurugārhapatarikta... is Pā. 6-2-42 as read]: a list of seven compounds — words belonging to the dāsibhārādi group keep the accent of the first member, so the first member keeps its accent; the first member is first-syllable acute by the nī-accent; so this stays. - svardṛśaḥ: "suṣṭhu ati = goes [well], hence svaḥ, the Sun; 'r gatau' after su as upapada; anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante [Pā. 3-2-75 as read]: manin, kvanip, vanip, vic — the four suffixes come after roots, hence vic; sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ gives guṇa with raparatva: su + ar; yaṇ: svar; 'svaḥ paśyanti'; kvip ca: after dṛśir prekṣaṇe, kvip, svardṛk; by gaticārapapadāt kṛt the kṛt-ending latter member keeps its accent; accusative plural śas: svardṛśaḥ." Translation: "O Agni, vibhāvaso, you whose wealth is the splendour of special brilliance; viśvadarśataḥ, to be seen by all: you have shone, pūrvā uṣasaḥ anu, following (keeping in view) the past times of dawn — you have been blazing. Such as you are, you are the protector, avitā, in grāmeṣu, the dwelling-places of people; you are the guardian. In yajñeṣu, in the rites to be performed, you are purohitaḥ, set in front, placed on the east side of the altar; you are mānuṣaḥ, beneficial to the human beings, the priests and the sacrificers."

Grammatical tail ⁴⁹ - dīdetha: the root dīdī is of the Veda only; the iṭ augment is not added because the grammarians' augment-rules are not invariable (āgamaśāstram anityam, as printed); doubling is avoided by the statement "in the doubling-section, optionally in the Chandas" (cited from the Kāśikā, number as read "6-1-8-1" [?]). - viśvadarśataḥ: "to be seen by all"; the suffix atac after drś by a rule beginning bhṛmṛdrśi... (as printed); the first member keeps its end-acute, the word being of the marudvṛdh-class (Pā. 6-2-106 as read [?]). - purohitaḥ: puras formed with the suffix asi after pūrva, adhara, avara (the rule beginning

pūrvādhārāvarāṇām asi puradhavaś caiṣām, as printed); the word is indeclinable because a taddhita that does not take all case-endings is avyaya (Pā. 1-1-38 would be the standard number; as printed it is hard to read [?]); then gati-designation (Pā. 1-4-62 as read) and the gati-compound, with the first member retaining its own accent by gatiṃ anantaraḥ. - Closing numeral of the Rik: "|| 10 ||".

Pratipadārtha — "vibhāvaso — O Agni, who have the wealth of illuminating all; agne — O Agni; viśvadarśataḥ — you who are to be seen by the eyes of all; pūrvāḥ uṣasaḥ anu — after the many dawns that have passed; dīdetha — you have made bright (such as you); grāmeṣu — in the villages (where people live); avitā — as protector; asi — you are; yajñeṣu — in the sacrificial rites; purohitaḥ — seated in the eastern part of the altar; mānuṣaḥ — as one beneficial to men (priests and sacrificers); asi — you are."

Bhāvārtha — "O Agni, by the greatness of your brilliance you not only illuminate everything in the world but are visible to all people. You have lit up thousands of dawns that have passed. Such a great one, you are the protector of every village where men dwell. Such a protector, you are purohita in our sacrifices, that is, seated in the eastern part of the altar, and are the benefactor of men, both priests and sacrificers."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 526) — "Resplendent Agni, visible to all, you have always shone after many preceding dawns [sic: "dawns" with a raised s], you are the protector of people in villages [sic: "iu"], and you are placed in front (on the east side of ths [sic] altar) for the benefit of man-" (the sentence breaks off at the end of the printed line; the last word is evidently "mankind", the rest of the word is not in the print as it appears).

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ), p. 526 - anu uṣasaḥ — "after the dawns, that is, every day after the dawn-times, before the sun's rising." - vibhāvaso — "viśiṣṭaparakāsarūpadhanavān: one who has the capacity to illuminate special things; one whose wealth is that capacity, i.e. who shines well, who blazes brightly." - didetha — "dīdeśiś chandaso dīptikarmā [reading doubtful, ?]: you shine; you are shining." - viśvadarśataḥ — "sarvair darśanīyaḥ: one who is looked at by all; you whom all see." - purohitaḥ — "vedeḥ pūrvasyām diśy avasthitaḥ: established in the form of the āhavanīya on the east of the altar; one who is in front of the sacrifice. The explanation of this word is given in the Special Topics of the first ṛk of the first sūkta of the first maṇḍala, Ṛgveda Saṃhitā part 1, pp. 614–615 [numerals as read, ?]; see there." - mānuṣaḥ — "ṛtvigyajamānānām manuṣyāṇām hito 'si: the commentator has explained the word mānuṣaḥ as one who does good to people such as priests and sacrificers. But, taking the words purohito 'si yajñeṣu mānuṣaḥ together as general ('of men'), 'in the sacrifices that men perform you are purohita'; purohita means one placed in the foremost position, or one established in the āhavanīya fire-pit on the east side of the altar. If this sense is given, the meaning fits properly."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵⁰ - didetha: root dīdī dīptau, used in the Veda only; liṭ, sip, thal in place of sip by a rule beginning parasmaipadānām ṇalatusus... (as printed); doubling avoided by the Kāśikā statement quoted in the bhāṣya, hence liṭ-doubling absent; the iṭ augment likewise does not come (āgamaśāstram anityam, as printed); guṇa: dīdetha; the all-unaccented (sarvānudātta) does not come since the word is at the beginning of a pāda; the end-acute from the root remains. - viśvadarśataḥ: root viś praveśane; the suffix kvan by an Uṇādi-sūtra beginning āsū prṣi... (as printed, number not legible [?]); the word is ādyudātta by nit (the suffix being nit). For drś prekṣane: the suffix atac by "bhṛmṛdrśi yajiparvi pacy amitanināmi haryibhyo 'tac" (Uṇ. 3-[?]o as read); drś + ata, guṇa; viśvaiḥ darśataḥ = "darśanīyaḥ, one fit to be seen by all". By the antodātta-rule: "marudvṛdhādīnām chandasy upasaṅkhyānam" (Pā. 6-2-106

[vārttika, as read, ?]) the first member gets end-acute. - purohitaḥ: pūrvādharāvarāṇām asi puradhavaś caiṣām (Pā. 5-3-39 as read [?]): after pūrva, adhara, avara, the suffix asi (in the senses of direction, place or time), and in place of pūrva, pur; of adhara, adh; of avara, av. Here pūrva + asi → pur + as = puras. taddhitaś cāsarvavibhaktiḥ (Pā. 1-1-38 [?]): a taddhita-ending word that cannot take all the case-endings is called avyaya; so puras is an indeclinable. The taddhita-suffixes counted begin with bahvalpārthāc chas kārakād anyatarasyām (Pā. 5-4-42 [?]) and run to samāsāntāḥ (Pā. 5-4-68 [?]), so asi is counted. puro 'vyayam (Pā. 1-4-67 as read, [?]): gati-designation; kugatiprādayaḥ gives the compound with hita; gatiḥ anantaraḥ (Pā. 6-2-49 as read [?]): when a word ending with a karmanī-suffix follows, the preceding gati retains its natural accent. The word puras has end-acute by its suffix. From ḍudhāñ, the kta suffix; dadhāter hiḥ (Pā. 7-4-42 as read [?]): hi in place of dhā; hita. || 10 || ⁵¹

Translation: "O Agni, O god! Manuṣvat, as Manu places (you) at the place of the sacrifice, even so we also ni dhīmahi, set you down, establish you here. What kind of one? Yajñasya sādhanam, the accomplisher of the sacrifice; hotāram ṛtvijam, the sacrificer in the seasons such as the spring; pracetasam, endowed with excellent wisdom; jīram, the one who diminishes the life of enemies; dūtam, standing in the place of messenger of the gods; amartyam, free from death."

Grammatical tail ⁵² - manuṣvat: the word manas (manus) ends with the Uṇādi suffix asi; the suffix vati by the rule "tena tulyam kriyā ced vatiḥ" (Pā. 5-1-115 as read [?]) — "vati in the sense of 'equal to that' if it is an action". Because the word is of the ayasmaya class (as printed, ayasmayādītvena), it takes the bha-designation, so the ru-change and so on do not arise. - dhīmahi: root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; loss of the reduplicative syllable after liñ is Vedic (lin-ābhyāsa-lopaś chāndasaḥ, as printed). - jīram:

52. p. 528 foot; characterized, the sūtra number as read [?]

the root ju is a sautra root (taken from the sūtras, not from the root-list); the suffix rak by "jorī ca" (Uṇ. 2-[?] as read); Kātyāyana says "rakī jyaḥ saṃprasāraṇe jīra iti" (as printed).

Pratipadārtha — "agne deva — O god Agni; yajñasya sādhanam — as the accomplisher of the sacrifice; hotāram ṛtvijam — as one who performs the sacrifice in the seasons beginning with spring; pracetasam — as one endowed with excellent knowledge; jīram — as the destroyer of the lives of enemies; dūtam — as the messenger of the gods; amartyam — as one who is free from death; tvā — you; manuṣvat — in the manner in which Manu established (you) in the sacrificial ground; (vayam — we also) nidhimahi — establish (you) here."

Bhāvārtha

— "O god Agni, you are the accomplisher of the sacrifice. You are one who sacrifices in the seasons beginning with spring, being endowed with excellent knowledge. You destroy the lives of enemies and are free from death. Since you are the messenger of the gods, the destroyer of enemies and the nourisher of friends, Manu established you in the sacrificial ground. Like him we too establish you in this sacrificial ground."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 529)

— "O Agni, we place you as Manu placed you in sacrificial altar [sic] ; you are the main factor of the sacrifice, the invoker, the ministering priest, the wise, the destroyer of enemies, immortal and the messenger of gods."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 529 - yajñasya sādhanam — "since Agni is absolutely necessary for performing a sacrifice, he is said to be the chief instrument of the sacrifice." - hotāram, ṛtvijam — "hotāram means one who invokes the deities in the sacrifice, or the one principal priest who recites the mantras in the sacrifice for the invocation of the deities. In the sacrifice the hotṛ has a place of great prominence. Ṛtvijam means one of the priests who take part in the sacrifice. In every sacrifice there are four chief priests, hotṛ, adhvaryu, udgātṛ and brahmā; these four, and also their assistant groups, are by custom called ṛtvij. When ṛtvij is said, it can be any one of them. For the explanation of these words see Ṛgveda Saṃhitā part 1, p. 615 [numeral as read, ?]. - manuṣvat — "manuvat: as the Prajāpati Manu established and set Agni in the sacrifice that he performed, in that manner; this is the meaning." - jīram — "ju iti sautro dhātuḥ; śatrūṇāṃ vayohānikaram: the destroyer of the life-span of enemies, one who diminishes (their life), one who makes (it) decay."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵³ - yajñasya: root yaja devapūjādaḥ; the suffix nañ by "yajayācayataviccha-pracchā rakṣo nañ" (Pā. 3-3-90 as read [?]) — यजयाचयतविच्छप्रश्नरक्षो नङ् — [as printed, the sūtra's wording is partly legible; it is given only in the standard form and the number as read]; yaj + na; the next step by "stoḥ ścunā ścuḥ" (Pā. 8-4-40 as read) — स्तोः श्रुना श्रुः — concerning the change of the dental nasal after the palatal; the suffix-accent (pratyayasvara) then arises. (The Kannada explanation of this step is partly unclear [?].) - manuṣvat: root mana jñāne; the Uṇādi suffix usi; man + us = manus; the analysis manuṣā tulyam "equal to Manu"; the rule tena tulyam kriyā cet vatiḥ (Pā. 5-1-115 as read [?]): after a word in the instrumental the suffix vati in the sense of "equal", but only if what is equal is an action — here manuṣā tulyam dhīmahi gives the action. Because vati comes, the word gets the bha-designation by ayasmayādīni chandasi (Pā. 1-4-20 as read), so there is no pada-designation; therefore the ru-change which has pada-designation as its cause by "sa sajuṣo ruḥ" (Pā. 8-2-66) does not come; nor does the u by "haśi ca" (Pā. 6-1-114). - deva: root divu ... by the pacādi-rule (the rule beginning nandigrahīpacādibhyaḥ..., as printed) the suffix ac; the vocative is unaccented (āmantritasya). - dhīmahi: dudhāñ

53. pp. 530–531 — grammar pages, noted briefly; the crowded stretches not reproduced

dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; liṇ, mahiṇ, liṇaḥ sīyut; liṇaḥ salopo 'nantyasya (the s is lost); lopo vyor vali (the y is lost); śap with ślu; doubling after ślu; the Vedic loss of the reduplicative syllable; dhā + īmahi; "śnābhyastayor ātaḥ" (Pā. 6-4-112 as read [?]) — the ā of the root is dropped when a non-kit/ñit personal ending follows the śnā-suffix or reduplicated verb; dh + īmahi = dhīmahi. - jīram: ju gatau vege ca; this root is not in the root-list but is established by what Pāṇini says in the rule beginning ju-caṅkramya... (Pā. 3-2-150 as read [?]); roots that are thus used in sūtras are called sautra. The Uṇādi sūtra jorī ca (Uṇ. 2-[?] as read): after ju the suffix rak, and ī for the final letter, giving jīra. Some read instead of jorī ca the sūtra gyāś ca (Uṇ. 2-[?] as read): rak after the root gyā vayohānau; gyā + ra, and grahijyā-vayi... (Pā. 6-1-16 as read) gives saṃprasāraṇa; saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. 6-1-108) gives the earlier form (pūrvarūpa); halaḥ (Pā. 6-4-2) lengthens the final of the stem after a saṃprasāraṇa standing after a consonant: jīra. na dhātulopa ārdhadhātuke (Pā. 1-1-4) etc.; and Kātyāyana's vārttika "raki jyāḥ saṃprasāraṇam" is cited; hence the reading gyāśca is evidently the one approved by Kātyāyana. || 11 ||

Translation: "O mitramahaḥ, O Agni, worshipped by friends (or: worshipper of friends); yat, when you, set up as purohita on the east side of the altar, being antarah, in the middle of the place of divine worship, yāsi dūtyam, perform and attain the office of messenger of the gods, tadānīm, then your arcayaḥ, flames, bhrājante, blaze, shine. The simile: sindhor iva, just as the prasvanitāsaḥ, loudly resounding ūrmayaḥ, waves, of the ocean shine, so do they."

Grammatical tail ⁵⁴ - mitramahaḥ: root maha pūjāyām; "he who is honoured (mahyate) by friends, the priests"; the Uṇādi suffix asun. - yāsi: because of the yad-relation (yadvṛtta) the verb is not unaccented (anighāta). - dūtyam: "the work of a messenger"; the suffix yat by "dūtasya bhāgakarmanī" (Pā. 4-4-120 as read [?]); by the saying "all rules are optional in the Chandas" the initial acute does not arise, and by tit svaritam a svarita comes. - prasvanitāsaḥ: root svana / dhvana śabde; niṣṭhā in the abstract sense; "those whose sounding is excellent" (prakṛṣṭaṃ svanitaṃ yeṣāṃ te); the āsuk-augment (printed "āsugāgamaḥ", doubtful reading [?]; the grammar page names it asuk); in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its natural accent. - ūrmayaḥ: arter ūc ca (Uṇ. 4-[?] as read), the suffix mi.

Pratipadārtha — "mitramahaḥ — O Agni, worshipped by the priests or by friendly people; yat — when; purohitaḥ — placed as purohita in the eastern part of the altar; antaraḥ — being in the middle part of the sacrificial place; devānām — of the gods; dūtyam — the work of messenger; yāsi — you take up (then); agneḥ — of you, god Agni; arcayaḥ — the flames; sindhoh — of the ocean; prasvanitāsaḥ — roaring with sound; ūrmayaḥ — the waves; (iva — as if, shining); bhrājante — shine."

Bhāvārtha — "O god Agni, many priests worship you. When you are placed in the eastern part of the altar as purohita and, being in the middle of the sacrificial place, take up the work of messenger of the gods — then, since you alone carry all the oblations offered to all the gods, your flames rise very high. Then, like the waves of the ocean that roar and shine, they shine with sound and with brilliance."

— "O Agni, you are being worshipped by the friendly priests ; when you are placed in front of the altar (or as a Purohita at a sacrifice) and are installed as the messenger of the gods, then your flames roar like the resounding billows of the ocean."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 533 - yat — "yadā: when." - mitramahaḥ — "mitrair ṛtvigbhir mahyate pūjyate iti mitramahāḥ, tasya sambuddhir mitramahaḥ: one who is worshipped by the priests, who are friendly to you and objects of your affection." - purohitaḥ — "the explanation of this word was given at the tenth ṛk of this sūkta." - sindhoh iva ūrmayaḥ — "like the waves of the ocean." - prasvanitāsaḥ — "svana dhvana śabde; prakṛṣṭaṃ svanitaṃ yeṣāṃ te prasvanitāḥ: making sound very loudly, roaring." - arcayah — "the flames of Agni; the flames of Agni that blaze well, with a crackling, from the oblations such as ghee which the priests pour in the sacrifice. The idea is that they blaze up, as the waves of the ocean, struck by the wind, come to the shore and dash and roar loudly."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵⁵ - mitramahaḥ: analysis "mitraiḥ mahyate pūjyate"; root maha pūjāyām; the suffix asun by "sarvadhātubhyo 'sun" (Uṇ. 4-[?], as printed without a number that could be read). - yāsi: yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 as read [?]) — यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम् — forbids the all-unaccented (sarvānudātta) of the verb. - dūtyam: dūtasya bhāgakarmanī (Pā. 4-4-120 as read [?]) — दूतस्य भागकर्मणी — the suffix yat in the senses of "share" and "work"; dūta + ya, yasyeti ca (the a is dropped); the rule on acute yato 'nāvaḥ is optional in the Veda by the maxim "sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante" (paribhāṣā, number as read "63" [?]), so does not come here; by tit svaritam a svarita arises. The Kāśikā-author is said to quote the statement "dūtavaṇighbyām ca" [as read, ?] at this place; from this too the desired accent is not obtained when ya comes. - prasvanitāsaḥ: root svana (or dhvana) śabde; niṣṭhā (kta) in the abstract sense by "niṣṭhā" (as printed); ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ gives iṭ; svanita; prakṛṣṭam svanitaṃ yeṣām te, a bahuvrīhi (the sense of pra being "excellent"); first member keeps its accent; then jas; prasvanita + as with the asuk augment by ājjaser asuk (Pā. 7-1-50). - ūrmayah: root ṛ gatau; arter ūc ca (Uṇ. 4-[?] as read): the suffix mi after ṛ and ū as the substitute for the root's vowel; the ū replacing ṛ is raparatva: ūr + mi = ūrmi. Some hold that the ū without the repha is enough and that by hali ca (Pā. 8-2-77 as read) lengthening follows, so that ūrmi is obtained thus. || 12 ||

56. The Pada prints the last compound's second member as
-yāvānaḥ, with the long ā of the Saṃhitā

prātaryāvānaḥ replaced by n; this is the print's own reading of the Pada, given as printed.

57. The line is broken at the page-foot of p. 534 at "prātaḥ-" and continues on p. 535.

Translation: "O śrutkarṇa, O Agni, whose ears are fit for hearing, śrudhi, hear — hear our words. The god Mitra, and Aryaman, and the other gods, prātaryāvāṇaḥ, who go to the place of worship in the morning — may all those ā sīdantu, sit down, barhiṣi, on the darbha grass, adhvaram, with a view to the sacrifice, together with you, the āhavanīya fire, and with the other gods, the carriers (vahnibhiḥ) who go together with you (sayāvabhiḥ)."

Grammatical tail - śrudhi: root śru śravaṇe; hi is replaced by dhi in the Chandas by a rule beginning śrūśṛṇupṛkṛvṛbhyaś chandasi (as printed, number not given here); the vikaraṇa (śnu) is dropped by "bahulaṃ chandasi". - śrutkarṇa: "he who hears" = śrut; tuk augment when kvip follows; bahuvrīhi "he whose ears are śrut". - vahnibhiḥ: root vaha prāpaṇe; the suffix ni by a rule beginning vahiśriyuśruglā-hā-tvaribhyo nit (Uṇ. 4-[?] as read), being nit, the word has initial acute. - sayāvabhiḥ: "they who go together" (samānaṃ yāntīti); yā prāpaṇe; vanip by a rule beginning ato manin ...; the accent as in a kṛd-ending second member (kṛduttarapadaprakṛtisvaratvam, as printed). - prātaryāvāṇaḥ: as before (pūrvavat); the change to ṇ by prātipadikāntanumvibhaktiṣu ca (Pā. 8-4-11 as read).

Pratipadārtha — "śrutkarṇa — O Agni, endowed with ears that hear subtly; agne — O Agni; śrudhi — hear (our) words; mitraḥ — Mitra; aryamā — and Aryaman; prātaryāvāṇaḥ — and the other gods who go (towards the sacrificial place) in the morning; sayāvabhiḥ — who move along with you in the form of the āhavanīya; vahnibhiḥ — together with the other fire-gods; adhvaram — with the sacrifice as the object; barhiṣi — on the seat of darbha grass; ā sīdantu — let them sit down."

Bhāvārtha — "O Agni, since your ears are very subtle in hearing, listen well to our words in the form of praise. Let Mitra, Aryaman and the other gods who go in the morning towards the sacrificial place, and also the other fire-gods who move together with you in the form of the āhavanīya, together come here with a view to the sacrifice we are performing, and sit on the darbha seat."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 535)

— "O Agni, whose ears can hear, hear our invocation ; let Mitra and Aryaman and other gods that move together in the early morning with all the accompanying gods that carry oblations, sit down at the sacrifice upon the sacred kusa-grass."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), pp. 535–536 - śrutkarṇa — "śṛṇotīti śrut; śrutau karṇau yasyāsau śrutkarṇaḥ; śravaṇasamarthābhyāṃ karṇābhyāṃ yuktaḥ: śrut means one who hears, karṇa means ear; one whose ears are able to hear the invocation — Agni is meant." - vahnibhiḥ — "vaha prāpaṇe: the ones who by nature carry, that is, those who carry the oblations." - sayāvabhiḥ — "yā prāpaṇe; samānaṃ yāntīti sayāvānaḥ: āhavanīyāgninā tvayā samānagatibhiḥ: those who go in company with you (Agni), going together." - prātaryāvāṇaḥ — "prātaḥkāle devayajanaṃ gacchanto devāḥ: the gods who go to the place of the sacrifice in the morning; this is the meaning." - adhvaram — "having come here now with reference to the sacrifice we are performing."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁵⁸ - śrudhi: root śru śravaṇe; loṭ, sip, hi as substitute; "śṛṇu-prākṛvṛbhyaś chandasi" (Pā. 6-4-102 as read [?]) gives dhi in place of hi; "bahulaṃ chandasi" the vikaraṇa (śnu) is dropped (luk). - śrutkarṇa: root śru śravaṇe; "śṛṇotīti śrut", kvip by kvip ca; hrasvasya pīti kṛti tuk gives the tuk augment; bahuvrīhi "śrutau karṇau yasya saḥ" — "one whose ears have the power to hear" (the meaning: one whose ears are not deaf); vocative, so unaccented (āmantritānudātta). - vahnibhiḥ: vaha prāpaṇe; the Uṇādi sūtra "vahiśriyuśruglā-hā-tvaribhyo nit" (Uṇ. 4- [?] as read; the name is given as printed): after the roots vaha

prāpaṇe, śrīñ sevāyām, yu miśraṇe, śru śravaṇe, glai harṣakṣaye, o hāk tyāge, and tvarā sambhrame the suffix ni comes, being nit — the sūtra means this. (The Kannada author notes that the sūtra beginning vahi-śrī-yu-druv... is the form found in the present Uṇādi-list [?].) vah + ni = vahni; since the suffix is nit, the initial acute. - sayāvabhīḥ: analysis "samānaṃ yānti"; yā prāpaṇe; "ato manin kvanib vanipaś ca" (Pā. 3-2-74 as read [?]) — when a subanta or a preposition stands as upapada the three suffixes manin, kvanip, vanip come in the Chandas after roots ending in ā: here vanip after yā with the word samāna as upapada; samānasya chandasy amūrdhaprabhṛtyudarkeṣu (Pā. 6-3-84 as read [?]) gives sa for samāna: sa + yā + van = sayāvan; bhis; "na lopaḥ prātipadikāntasya" the n is dropped; ru, visarga. For the second member yāvan, ending in a kṛt, by "gatikārapapadāt kṛt" (Pā. 6-2-139 as read [?]) the natural (prakṛti) accent of the first member remains. - prātaryāvāṇaḥ: prātar as upapada, root yā, vanip as before: prātaryāvan, jas; prātipadikāntanumvibhaktiṣu ca (Pā. 8-4-11 as read) — पूर्वपदात् ... — "the n which stands at the end of a prātipadika, in num, or in a case-ending, becomes ṇ if preceded by a repha or ṣ in the earlier member, or if followed (at a distance) by one"; thus the n at the end of the stem becomes ṇ.

Translation: "May the Marut gods hear our stoma, our praise. Of what kind? Sudānavaḥ, giving good fruit generously; agnijihvāḥ, those among whom Agni, standing in the place of the tongue, is the chief — such are they; ṛtāvr̥dhaḥ, the increasers of truth or of the sacrifice. And may the god Varuṇa, dhṛtavrataḥ, who has taken up the rites, sajūḥ, together with the two Aśvins, the gods, and with the goddess Uṣas, drink the Soma."

Grammatical tail - sudānavaḥ: root ḍudāñ dāne; the suffix nu in the abstract sense by "dābhābhyām nuḥ" (Uṇ. 3-[?] as read); the word dānu is initial-acute; "those whose dānu is good", a bahuvrīhi; by ādyudāttam̐ dvyac chandasī (as printed) the second member keeps its initial acute. - agnijihvāḥ: "those who are stationed on the tongue of Agni, the sharers of the oblation"; the name of the thing carried over to the thing in it (tātsthyāt tēcchabdyam); "those for whom Agni is in the place of a tongue"; the end-acute is Vedic. - ṛtāvṛdhaḥ: "increasers of ṛta, truth, or of the sacrifice"; the root vr̥dh with the causative sense included in it, kvip by kvip ca; the lengthening of the first member by "anyeṣām api dṛśyate" (as printed). || 14 ||

Pratipadārtha — "sudānavaḥ — those who give excellent fruit; agnijihvāḥ — those who have Agni as their tongue; ṛtāvṛdhaḥ — who are the increasers of truth or of the sacrifice; marutaḥ — the Marut gods; stomam — our praise; śṛṇvantu — let them hear; dhṛtavrataḥ — the protector of rites, varuṇaḥ — the god Varuṇa; aśvibhyām — with the Aśvin gods; uṣasā — with the goddess Uṣas; sajūḥ — united; somam — the Soma juice; pibatu — let him drink."

Bhāvārtha

— "The Marut gods are increasers of truth and of the sacrifice. They have Agni as their tongue. They are able to give excellent fruit. Let such handsome and beneficent Maruts hear our praise. Let the god Varuṇa, protector of rites, drink the Soma together with the Aśvin gods and with the goddess Uṣas."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 538)

— "Let the liberal Maruts who drink through Agni (fire) and are encouragers of sacrifice, hear our praise ; let Varuna who fulfils the rites with Aswins and Ushas drink the Soma-juice."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), pp. 538–540 - stomam — "the praise, this praise that we are making." - sudānavaḥ — "suṣṭhu phalasya dātāraḥ: those who give good fruits to sacrifices and such acts; or those who give the desired objects to the performers of sacrifices." - agnijihvāḥ — "those who have Agni as tongue; that is, since they receive the oblation which is offered in Agni with the deities in view, they receive it by the tongue of Agni or through Agni. For this reason it is the custom to call the deities agnijihvāḥ. A few examples are given" — seven Ṛgveda passages quoted by the Kannada author, untranslated in the source; each is given in three layers with, with an editorial and tentative gloss, and every reference numeral is "as read [?]":

1. | अग्निजिह्वा मनवः सूरचक्षसो विश्वे नो देवा अवसागमन्निह ॥ ⁶⁰

agnijihvā manavaḥ sūracakṣaso viśve no devā avasāgaman iha || — editorial and tentative: "The Manus, with Agni as their tongue, with the sun as their eye — may all the gods come here to us for our protection."

2. | इमं स्तोमं रोदसी प्र ब्रवीम्यृदूदराः शृणवन्नग्निजिह्वाः ॥ ⁶¹

imaṃ stomam rodasī pra bravīmy ṛdūdarāḥ śṛṇavann agnijihvāḥ || — editorial and tentative: "I declare this praise to heaven and earth; may the tender-bellied (? ṛdūdarāḥ, reading [?]) ones, tongued with Agni, hear."

3. | ये अग्निजिह्वा ऋतसाप आसुर्ये मनुं चक्रुरपरं दसाय ॥ ⁶²

ye agnijihvā ṛtasāpa āsur ye manum cakrur uparam dasāya || — editorial and tentative: "They who, with Agni as tongue, were the guardians (? ṛtasāpaḥ) of the rite, who made Manu (the) later (? uparam) for the (dasāya)..." (the second line is hard; no firm sense is given).

4. | द्विजन्मानो ये ऋतसापः सत्याः स्वर्वन्तो यजता अग्निजिह्वाः ॥ ⁶³

dvijanmāno ye ṛtasāpaḥ satyāḥ svarvanto yajatā agnijihvāḥ || — editorial and tentative: "the twice-born ones, who are keepers of the rite, the true, the heaven-possessing, the worshipful, tongued with Agni."

ye agnijihvā uta vā yajatrā āsadyāsmi barhiṣi mādayadhvam || — editorial and tentative: "You who are tongued with Agni, or who are worshipful: sitting down on this grass, rejoice."

6. | बहवः सूरक्षसोऽग्निजिह्वा ऋतावृधः ॥ ⁶⁴

bahavaḥ sūracakṣaso 'gnijihvā ṛtāvṛdhaḥ || — editorial and tentative: "the many, sun-eyed, fire-tongued increasers of the rite."

7. | दिवक्षसो अग्निजिह्वा ऋतावृध ऋतस्य योनिं विमृशन्त आसते ॥ ⁶⁵

divakṣaso agnijihvā ṛtāvṛdha ṛtasya yoniṁ vimṛśanta āsate || — editorial and tentative: "the heaven-dwelling (? divakṣasaḥ), fire-tongued increasers of the rite sit, touching (considering) the womb of the rite."

The Kannada author continues: "In the sacrifice the deity who appears to us directly is Agni; the other deities do not appear to us directly. Therefore, if the oblation is to be offered to deities other than Agni, it is possible only through Agni, that is, by sacrificing into Agni. On this point there is a scriptural sentence, parokṣaṁ vā anye devā ijjante (Tai. Saṁ. 1-[?], as read) — परोक्षं वा अन्ये देवा इज्यन्ते — parokṣaṁ vā anye devā ijjante — editorial and tentative: 'the other gods are worshipped indirectly'. Because the other deities accept the oblation poured into Agni, it is as though Agni were their tongue. Hence it is proper to call those deities agnijihvāḥ." - ṛtāvṛdhaḥ — "satyasya yajñasya vā vārdhakāḥ: those who increase truth or the sacrifice, they are those who bring about the conduct of the sacrifice. For further explanation of this word see Ṛgveda Saṁhitā part 1, pp. 707 and 647

64. R. Saṁ. 3-[?]-[?] as read

65. R. Saṁ. 10-[?]-[?] as read

[numerals as read, ?]. - dhṛtavrataḥ — "grhītakarmā: one who accepts the sacrificial rites that we perform." - sajūḥ — "saha: together with."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁶⁶ - sudānavah: root dudāñ dāne; the Uṇādi sūtra dābhābhyām nuḥ (Uṇ. 3-[?] as read) — the suffix nu after the roots dā ("to give") and bhā ("to shine"), here in the abstract sense (bhāva); the word dānu is initial-acute; "śobhanam dānu yeṣāṃ te", a bahuvrīhi; "ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasī" gives the second member the initial acute. - agnijihvāḥ: "agner jihvāḥ", a tatpuruṣa. The Kannada author gives the example "mañcāḥ krośanti" ("the platforms cry out", i.e. those on the platforms): as persons on a platform are meant by "platform", so the Maruts who are in the tongue (of Agni) are meant by the word "tongue" — those who receive the oblation placed on Agni's tongue. A compound ends in the acute (samāsasya, antodātta). Or: a bahuvrīhi "agnir jihvā yeṣāṃ te" — "those who have Agni as chief, as the tongue is chief"; as a bahuvrīhi the first member's natural accent should come, but by the Vedic option the end-acute stands. - ṛtāvṛdhaḥ: "ṛtam = truth, or the sacrifice, which they increase"; root vṛdhu vardhane, the root including its causative sense; kvip by kvip ca; anyeṣāṃ api dṛśyate lengthens the first member ṛta. || 14 ||

67. The numeral is read as "44"; the Kannada script of the closing note is clear.

Summary of Sūkta 44. Fourteen Riks to Agni, the Maruts, Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman, the Aśvins and Uṣas (the last two Riks), all written in full. Rik 1 invokes Agni, bringer of the gods, with the Uṣas; Riks 2–6 call on him as messenger, ruler of sacrifices and herald; Riks 7–9 ask him to bring the gods at dawn to the Soma; Rik 10 praises him as shining after many dawns and as purohita of the sacrifice, the protector of villages; Rik 11 says that as Manu placed him, so we place him, the accomplisher of the sacrifice and immortal messenger; Rik 12 compares his flames, when he goes as messenger, to the roaring waves of the sea; Rik 13 asks him to hear and to bring Mitra, Aryaman and the other morning-going gods to the grass; Rik 14 invites the Maruts to hear the praise and Varuṇa to drink the Soma with the Aśvins and Uṣas. The doubtful parts are the many reference numerals (all "as read [?]"). the heavily crowded grammar passages (characterized only), and the placeholder repair in Rik 2 (disclosed there).⁶⁸

Translation ³: "'Tvam agne vasūn' is the second sūkta, of ten ṛks. The Anukramaṇikā here: 'tvam agne, ten (ṛks) in Anuṣṭubh; the last half-ṛk is to the gods' [?]. The ṛṣi is Praskaṇva. The metre is Anuṣṭubh. This sūkta has Agni as its deity, since 'Āgneya' was said of the preceding; the half-ṛk 'ayam somah' is addressed to the gods. In the Prātaranuvāka, at the Āgneya rite and in the Āśvinaśāstra, this sūkta is [used]; it is prescribed in the section beginning 'abhyaitiesyā rātreḥ' [?]: 'tvam agne vasūn, tvam hi kṣaitavat' (Āśv. 4-14 [?]). Likewise on the last day of the Gargatrirātra this sūkta is the Ājyaśāstra; it is prescribed in the section 'āṅgirasam svargakāmah': 'in the last, the Vāravantiya, tvam agne vasūn, and the Ājya' (Āśv. 10-2 [?])."

Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 541 — "Tvam agne vasūn is the second sūkta in the ninth anuvāka. It has ten ṛks. In the Anukramaṇikā it is stated: 'tvam agne dasānuṣṭubham ardharco 'ntyo daiva' [?]. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Praskaṇva, the son of Kaṇva. The metre is Anuṣṭubh. The deity of this sūkta is Agni; that is, the deity of this sūkta is Agni. For the second half of the last ṛk, ayam somah, the deities are the Devas, that is, the gods themselves. In the time of reciting the mantras of the Prātaranuvāka this sūkta is used for the Āśvinaśāstra mantras connected with the Āgneya rite. This matter is indicated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning 'atha etasyā rātreḥ', by the sūtra 'tvam agne vasūn' (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-45-1) and 'tvam hi kṣaitavat' (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-2-1) (Ā. 4-13 [?]); and on the last day of the sacrifice called Gargatrirātra this sūkta

4. The Āśvalāyana numerals differ between the Sanskrit introduction, "4-14", and the anuvāda, "4-13", as read; both [?], kept as read.

5. The Kannada words "sūktadalliruva ṛksaṁkhyai" = "number of ṛks in the sūkta" and "ralḷi" = "in" are left in their Kannada form inside the Devanagari block, as in earlier sūktas. The varga numerals are small and read with doubt, "31, 32" [?]; the earlier note read them as "30, 31". The page header of p. 541 reads "Varga 3[1]".

Translation: "O Agni, in this rite worship the Vasus and the others. Uta, and also janam, another living being too, in the form of a deity, worship. Of what kind? Svadhvaram, with a goodly sacrifice; manujātam, begotten by Manu, by the Prajāpati; ghṛtapruṣam, the sprinkler of water."

Grammatical tail ⁸ - yaja: lengthening in the Saṃhitā by a rule beginning dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ (as printed); svadhvaram: "he whose sacrifice (adhvara) is good"; by the rule naṅsubhyām the second member keeps the end-acute; manujātam: kta in the passive after janī, the causative sense being included; because the first member is in the instrumental and a kta with a passive sense follows, the first member keeps its natural accent (tr̥tīyā karmaṇi, as printed); ghṛtapruṣam: root pruṣa plusa snehana-secana-pūraṇeṣu, "with ghṛta, water, he fills (pruṣṇāti)", kvip by kvip ca.

7. The Saṃhitā prints the verb as long-vowelled yajā; the Pada has the short yaja, and the grammar below explains the lengthening in the Saṃhitā.

8. characterized

Pratipadārtha — "agne — O Agni; tvam — you; iha — in this sacrificial rite; vasūn — the Vasus; rudrān — the Rudras; ādityān — the Ādityas; uta — and; svadhvaram — as one joined to an excellent sacrifice; manujātam — as one born of Manu; ghṛtapruṣam — as the one who sprinkles water; janam — (the other) group of beings (in the form of deities); yaja — worship."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, in this sacrifice, for our sake, worship the Vasus, the Rudras and the Ādityas, and the other class of beings in the form of deities, who are joined to an excellent sacrifice, are born of Manu, and sprinkle water."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 543)

— "Agni, (bring hither and) worship the Vasus, the Rudras, the Adityas or any other being begotten by Manu, sacrificing well and sprinkling water (ghee)."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 543–546 - The Kannada author opens with a general note: "In this sūkta the ṛṣi, calling the Vasus, Rudras and Ādityas, prays that they be gratified by the sacrifice. Who are the Vasus, Rudras and Ādityas indicated here? It is proper to examine subtly what their places are. Here 'Vasus' means deities belonging to the group of Vasus, 'Rudras' deities belonging to the group of Rudras, 'Ādityas' deities belonging to the group of Ādityas. As a rule the Vasus, Rudras and Ādityas are spoken of only in the plural. It is said both in this sūkta and elsewhere that the Vasus are 8, the Rudras 11 and the Ādityas 12 — in all 33 deities [the three figures are read thus; they sum to 31, which I record without adjustment]. In the second ṛk of this sūkta Agni is asked to come bringing trayastrimśatam, the thirty-three, that is, the Vasu-Rudra-Āditya deities. We give some examples from the Ṛgveda in which these deities are praised." - Eight their place; the Vasus are the rays of the Sun, from their shining forth/pervading, therefore they have the heaven as their place."

वसवो यद्विवसते सर्वमग्निर्वसुभिर्वासव इति समाख्या तस्मात्पृथिवीस्थानाः ।

The Kannada author explains: "That is, these Vasus are in the three places, earth, atmosphere and heaven. Since Agni dwells in everything in the form of a Vasu, they are in the earth-place. Indra, being accompanied by Vasus, is called Vāsava; since he is the chief of the Vasus, the Vasus are as if in the middle place, the atmosphere. The word vasavaḥ also means the rays of the Sun, which pervade the upper part of the atmosphere and the heaven everywhere; so they are in the heaven-place. Hence, according to Yāska, these Vasus pervade earth, atmosphere and heaven." Two ṛk-quotations used by Yāska to show the Vasus (both untranslated in the source; reference numerals read with doubt):

सुगा वो देवाः सुपथा अकर्म य आजग्मुः सवनमिदं जुषाणाः । जक्षिवांसः
पपिवांसश्च विश्वेऽस्मे धत्त वसवो वसूनि ॥ (Vājasaneyā Saṃhitā 8-[?], as read)

sugā vo devāḥ supathā akarma ya ājagmuḥ savanam idaṃ juṣāṇāḥ | jakṣivāṃsaḥ papivāṃsaś ca viśve 'sme dhatta vasavo vasūni || — editorial and tentative: "O gods, we have made easy your going and good your path, you who have come, delighting in this pressing; having eaten and drunk, all of you, O Vasus, put riches in us."

ज्मा अत्र वसवो रन्त देवा उरावन्तरिक्षे मर्जयन्त शुभ्राः । अर्वाक्पथ उरुज्रयः कृणुध्वं श्रोता दूतस्य जग्मुषो नो अस्य ॥ (R. Saṃ. 2-[?]-[?] as read)

jmā atra vasavo ranta devā urāv antarikṣe marjayanta śubhrāḥ | arvākpatha urujrayaḥ kṛṇudhvaṃ śrotā dūtasya jagmuṣo no asya || — editorial and tentative: "Here on the earth the shining Vasus, the gods, took delight; in the wide atmosphere they made themselves bright; make (your) ways turn this way, wide-ranging ones; hear us, the messenger who has come" — doubtful throughout [?]; the second line is not given a firm sense.

"On the deities called Rudras and Ādityas, the derivations given for the words rudra and āditya should be applied here in the same way; we have already given the etymological senses of these words."

- manujātam — "born of Manu. Though the name of Manu is cited in many places in the Ṛgveda, little detail is found anywhere. Manu is known as the primal ancestor of the human race and as the guide of the order of sacrifices such as the yajña and yāga. When he was dividing his property among his sons, his youngest son Nābhānediṣṭha, who was studying in the teacher's house in celibacy, got no share; so, finishing his studies and returning, he questioned his father about his share. [Manu] sent him to the place where the Āṅgiras sages were sacrificing, saying that if he taught them certain mantras they would give him wealth as he wished. This story is told both in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā of the Yajurveda. Chiefly, since the sacrifice made by this Manu is famous, the matter of the sacrifice made by Manu is raised in the Ṛgveda. The matter of this Manu is told, besides in the Ṛgveda, in the Atharvaveda, the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, the Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, the Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa and other places" — the Kannada author lists chapter-and-verse numerals for each of these; they are crowded and they have not been trusted, so they are not reproduced [?]. "Because he is the son of Vivasvān (one deity) he is named Manu Vaivasvata, and Vivasvān (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-[?]-1 as read; Ath. [?]; Śat. Br. [?]); because he belongs to the line of Saraṇyū [? "Saṇarṇā", as printed: saṇarṇā — the reading is unclear] he is Sāvarṇi (Sāvarṇa), and because he belongs to the line of Saṃvaraṇa, Sāṃvaraṇi (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-[?]-1 as read): so he has many names."

- ghṛtapruṣam — "wetted by water; ghṛta means water (Ni. 1-[?] as read)."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁶ - yaja: root yaja devapūjādau, loṭ, sip, hi, śap; ato heḥ gives luk of hi; dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ (Pā. 6-3-135 as read [?]) — द्यचोस्तस्तिङः — lengthens the final of a tiṇ-ending word with two vowels in the Saṃhitā of the Veda: hence yajā. - svadhvaram: a bahuvrīhi within a bahuvrīhi: "na vidyate dhvaraḥ (injury) yasya saḥ = adhvaraḥ"; "śobhano 'dhvaro yasya saḥ"; nañsubhyām (Pā. 6-2-172 as read [?]) — नञ्सुभ्याम् — in a bahuvrīhi, after nañ and su the second member keeps its end-acute. - manujātam: "born by Manu", "born of the Prajāpati named Manu"; the root jani prādurbhāve with the causative sense (ṇic) included; niṣṭhā — the suffix kta in the passive sense; janasanakhanām sañjhalo [as read, partly] gives the ā-substitution; homogeneous lengthening; ṛṭṭiā karmaṇi (Pā. 6-2-48 as read [?]) — तृतीया कर्मणि — a kta ending with a passive sense following, the instrumental first member keeps its natural accent. - ghṛtapruṣam: pruṣa, pluṣa snehana-secana-pūraṇeṣu, kryādi; "ghṛtena = with water pruṣṇāti, he fills"; kvip ca gives kvip; ghṛtapruṣ in the nominative singular, ghṛtapruṣam in the accusative singular. || 1 ||

Translation: "O Agni, the gods, vicetasah, of special wisdom, śruṣṭivānaḥ hi, are indeed givers of reward to dāśuṣe, the sacrificer who has given the oblation. Śruṣṭi is the giving of the fruit; they are partakers of that. O rohidaśva, you who are furnished with the horses named Rohit; O girvaṇaḥ, you who are to be served with songs, with praises, O Agni — 'girvaṇā is a god; they serve him with songs', says Yāska (Ni. 6-14 [?]). Bring here, ā vaha, those gods who are counted by the number trayastrīṃśatam, thirty-three."

Grammatical tail - śruṣṭivānaḥ: śruṣṭi has the sense of "impulse, giving"; the abstract suffix ktic; "those who serve (vananti) śruṣṭi, who share in it", hence śruṣṭivānaḥ; the suffix vic by "(it is seen) after other roots too"; the lengthening is Vedic. - vicetasah: "those whose mind (cetas) is special"; in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its natural accent. - girvaṇaḥ: "he who is to be served by songs (gīrbhiḥ)"; asun after vana; the shortening of the first member is Vedic. - trayastrīṃśat: "three and thirty" (trayaś ca trīṃśac ca); by tre strayaḥ (Pā. 6-3-48 as read [?]) trayas is substituted for tri; as a saṃkhyā-compound the first member keeps its natural accent (Pā. 6-2-[?] as read).

Pratipadārtha — "agne — O Agni; vicetasah — endowed with discriminating wisdom; devāḥ — the gods; dāśuṣe — to the sacrificer who gives the oblation; śruṣṭivānaḥ hi — are indeed those who give the fruit; rohidaśva — you who are endowed with horses called Rohit; girvaṇaḥ — you who are fond of praise; trayastrīṃśatam — those of the number thirty-three; tān — those gods; ā vaha — bring (here)."

— "O Agni, it is right that the gods have the discerning thought that after a man, the sacrificer, has offered the oblation, they should repay him. They are eager to give fruit to the sacrificer. You, fond of praise, are endowed with the horses called Rohit. Going with them, bring here those gods of the number thirty-three."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 548)

— "The wise gods are givers of rewards to the offerer of oblations ; O Agni with the red horses, being praised by hymns, bring hither three and thirty (thirty-three) gods."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 548 - śruṣṭivānaḥ — "phalasya dātāraḥ; prārthitasya phalasya dātāraḥ: givers of the fruit; givers of the fruit that was prayed for — they give the fruits that are desired." - vicetasah — "viśiṣṭaprajñānāḥ: those who know everything, those endowed with knowledge." - rohidaśva — "Rohit is a name of Agni's vehicle or of his horses. Yāska says on this: 'harī indrasya | rohito 'gneh' (Ni. 1-[?] as read) — हरी इन्द्रस्य ।

रोहितोऽग्नेः — harī indrasya | rohito 'gneḥ — editorial and tentative: 'the two bays are Indra's; the red ones are Agni's'. The meaning is: Agni, who has the horses called Rohit." - girvaṇaḥ — "gīrbhiḥ stutibhiḥ: one who is praised with words of praise; or a god. Yāska says: 'girvaṇā devo bhavati gīrbhir enaṃ vanayanti' (Ni. 6-[?] as read) — गिर्वणा देवो भवति गीर्भिरेन वनयन्ति — editorial and tentative: 'girvaṇā is a god; they serve him with songs'." - trayastrīṃśatam — "the Vasus 8, the Rudras 11, the Ādityas 12 [as read; their sum is 31], in all thirty-three deities, or deities of thirty-three kinds (classes)."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁷ - śruṣṭivānaḥ: the root śruś in the sense of impulse (preraṇa, as printed); after it, in the abstract sense, ktic; iṭ does not come by a rule beginning śrī... (as read, partly); the ś becomes ṣ by "vraścabhrasja..." (Pā. 8-2-36 as read [?]) — वश्चभ्रस्ज... — śruṣ + ti, then the ṭ-change: śruṣṭi. Root vana saṃbhaktau: "śruṣṭim vananti = saṃbhajante", "those who have a liking for impulse"; vic by "anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante"; "anyeṣām api dṛśyate" lengthens the first member; jas; sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau (Pā. 6-4-8 as read [?]) gives the lengthening of the penultimate (upadhādīrgha). - vicetasah: viśiṣṭaṃ cetaḥ yeṣām te, a bahuvrīhi; the first member keeps its natural accent. - girvaṇaḥ: root gṛ śabde; kvip ca gives kvip; ṛta id dhātoḥ (Pā. 7-1-100 as read) gives ir for ṛ, which by uraṇ raparaḥ ends in r: gir; root vana saṃbhaktau, "gīrbhiḥ vanyate"; sarvadhātubhyo 'sun gives the suffix asun; hali ca (Pā. 8-2-77 as read) lengthens the ik that is the penultimate of a root ending in r or v when a consonant follows, so the i of gir should lengthen; or, taking the case-ending that comes after as the cause of pada-designation, r-vor upadhāyā dīrgha ikaḥ (Pā. 8-2-76 as read) lengthens the ik before a final r/v; but the maxim "sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante" makes these optional in the Chandas, and so they do not come here. - trayastrīṃśatam: "trayaś ca trīṃśac ca =

trayastrimśat", or "thirty increased by three"; tre strayaḥ (Pā. 6-3-48 as read [?]): when a word expressing a number below a hundred follows, trayas is substituted for tri; this does not come in a bahuvrīhi, nor when aśīti follows (as printed); with triṃśat following, a number below a hundred, tri becomes trayas; trayas + triṃśat. Pañca...viṃśati-triṃśat... (Pā. 5-1-[?] as read) — when "trayodaśaśataḥ parimāṇam asya" is intended, trin is substituted for tri [the wording is crowded, [?]]; or the suffix śatip is added after tri by nipātana. "Of the thirty-three the pūraṇa" (trayastrimśatām pūraṇaḥ): tasya pūraṇe ḍaṭ (Pā. 5-2-48 as read [?]) gives the suffix ḍaṭ, and viṃśatyādibhyas tamaḍ anyatarasyām (Pā. 5-2-56 as read [?]) the augment tamaḍ: so trayastrimśatam as printed. || 2 ||

Translation: "O mahivrata, doer of mighty works, O jātavedaḥ, O Agni: śrudhi, hear, havam, the call of praskaṇvasya, of the great sage Praskaṇva, son of Kaṇva. Here are four examples: the sages named Priyamedha, Atri, Virūpa and Aṅgiras — as you hear the call of these, so (hear mine). On this the Nirukta [says]: 'Priyamedhaḥ: he whose wisdom (medhā) is dear ...; so for Praskaṇva hear the call; Praskaṇva, son of Kaṇva, born of Kaṇva ...; virūpaḥ, of many forms; mahivrataḥ, of great vow' (Nī. 3-17 [?]). Priyamedhavat, like Priyamedha: by 'there, and like of that' (Pā. 5-1-116 [?]) the suffix vati in the sense of the genitive; the same for atrivat and the rest. Praskaṇva and the others have been dealt with."

19. The Nirukta passage in the middle is partly crowded: the words after priyā asya medhā and the clause ending "yathā prāgram" are given as read, doubtful [?].

Pratipadārtha — "mahivrata — O Agni, doer of mighty works; jātavedaḥ — one who knows everything that is born; priyamedhavat — as you listened to the call of Priyamedha; atrivat — as to that of Atri; virūpavat — as you heeded the call of Virūpa; aṅgirasvat — as you heeded the call of Aṅgiras; praskaṇvasya — of the great sage Praskaṇva, son of Kaṇva; havam — the invocation; śrudhi — hear."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are one who knows all that is born. As you heard the invocations of Priyamedha, Atri, Virūpa and Aṅgiras, so now too, hear the invocation of the great sage Praskaṇva, son of Kaṇva, and favour him."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 550)

— "Agni, accomplisher of great acts, you know all that are born ; hear the invocation of Praskanwa, as you have heard those of Priyamedha, of Atri, of Virupa, of Angiras."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 551–552 - priyamedhavat — "as one hears the call of the sage named Priyamedha. In the Ṛgveda Priyamedha Aṅgiras means the sage named Priyamedha, a son or descendant of Aṅgiras. In the second sūkta of the eighth maṇḍala of the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā he is a ṛṣi of a number of ṛks together with the sage Medhātithi Kāṇva, and he is the ṛṣi of the ṛks of several other sūktas of the same maṇḍala and of one sūkta of the ninth maṇḍala; in all, the ṛṣi of some dozens of ṛks [the Kannada author gives the sūkta numbers and ṛk-counts; the numerals are very small and I do not trust them, so they are not reproduced [?]]. The name of this Priyamedha is cited in many ṛks:" three quotations follow, untranslated in the source; each is given in three layers, with an editorial and tentative gloss, every reference "as read [?]"

2. | यथा चित्कण्वमावतं प्रियमेधमुप स्तुतम् । ²¹

arvāñcaṃ tvā puruṣṭuta priyamedhastutā harī | — editorial and tentative: "O much-praised one, may the two bays praised by Priyamedha (bring) you hither."

"That this sage, being of the Aṅgirasa line, did many stotras and sacrifices especially together with the sage Medhātithi of the Kaṇva line, is to be understood. A close association of the Kaṇva line with the sage Priyamedha and his sons is seen; there are many ṛks whose words indicate 'priyamedhāḥ, the sons or descendants of Priyamedha':"

8. वयः सुपर्णा उप सेदुरिन्द्रं प्रियमेधा ऋषयो नाधमानाः ।

vayaḥ suparṇā upa sedur indraṃ priyamedhā ṛṣayo nādhamānāḥ | — editorial and tentative: "Like birds, like eagles, the Priyamedha seers sat down by Indra, begging."

"From this it may be inferred that the sage Priyamedha was not only a famous sage but one respected by all." - atrivat — "the sage Atri is a very famous sage; he and his line are the ṛṣis of the sūktas of the fifth maṇḍala of the Ṛgveda. That the line of this sage had a special connexion and intercourse with the lines of the sages Priyamedha, Kaṇva and Gotama is known from the ṛks [five references, numerals not trusted, [?]] and from the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa [reference, [?]]. And [two further Ṛgveda references, [?]]: since in these two ṛks the names of the rivers Parūṣṇī and Yamunā are indicated, it appears that they had settled in the extensive region along those rivers." - virūpavat — "the sage named Virūpa is a descendant of the sage Aṅgiras. The name of this sage occurs, besides in this ṛk, only in the ṛk" (untranslated in the source; reference "8-[?]-[?]" as read):

तस्मै नूनमभिद्यवे वाचा विरूप नित्यया । (R. Saṃ. 8-[?]-[?])

tasmai nūnam abhidyave vācā virūpa nityayā | — editorial and tentative: "To him, to the shining one, now, O Virūpa, with constant speech" (the sentence is cut off in the print; no firm sense).

"Because it is only in this ṛk, we have not learnt more of this sage." - aṅgirasvat

— "the sage Aṅgiras is very famous and the primal ancestor of the sage-line of that name. His name is mentioned in Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-45-3 [this ṛk]; 1-139-[?]; 3-31-[?] and other ṛks."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁴ - priyamedhavat: analysis "priyamedhasyeva"; tatra tasyeva (Pā. 5-1-116 as read [?]) — तत्र तस्येव — the suffix vati after words ending in the locative or the genitive in the senses "as in that" and "as of that"; the i of vati is for pronunciation; the list is read as tasivati, hence by taddhitaś cāsarvavibhaktiḥ the word is avyaya, and the following sup is dropped by avyayād āp supaḥ. - atrivat: the process is as before. jātavedaḥ: explained at Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-44-1 (as printed [?]). virūpavat: "virūpasyeva", vati after the genitive. aṅgirasvat: "aṅgirasa iva", the vati by tatra tasyeva. praskaṇvasya: explained at Ṛ. Saṃ. 44-6 (as read [?]). śrudhi: anyeṣām api dṛśyate gives the lengthening; the rest of the process is given at a place whose numeral is read as "45-1" [?]. || 3 ||

Translation: "The mahikeravaḥ, doers of mighty works, the priyamedhāḥ, sages joined to a dear sacrifice, ahūṣata, called (āhūtavantāḥ) Agni ūtaye, for protection. What kind of Agni? He who rājantaṃ, shines, śukreṇa śociṣā, with pure light, among the adhvarāṇāṃ, sacrifices. Mahikeravaḥ: root maha pūjāyām, the Uṇādi suffix in; root ḍukṛñ karaṇe, the suffix uṇ; 'those whose workers (kāravaḥ) are great (mahayaḥ)'; the substitution of e for ā is Vedic; in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its natural accent. Priyamedhāḥ: those whose medha (sacrifice) is dear.

25. Two small words in the tail are crowded: the Uṇādi-sūtra name "kṛvāpājī-..." and the mood-name "luṇi", marked [?].

Āhūṣata: root hveñ spardhāyām śabde ca; in the aorist with sic the Vedic saṃprasāraṇa ('bahulaṃ chandasī'), the pūrvārūpa, the lengthening by halaḥ, and the ṣa by ādeśapratyaya yoḥ."

Pratipadārtha — "mahikeravaḥ — those who perform great acts; priyamedhāḥ — the sages (or the descendants of the sage Priyamedha), joined to a sacrifice dear (to the gods); ūtaye — for their protection; adhvarāṇām — in the midst of the sacrifices; śukreṇa śociṣā — with a pure flame; agnim — the god Agni; rājantam — who shines; ahūṣata — have called with prayers."

Bhāvārtha

— "The sages are of pure heart. They do excellent works. They love the sacrifice. The descendants of such a sage, Priyamedha, have called the god Agni, with prayers, both for their own protection and for the protection of the sacrifice. He is shining in the midst of the sacrifices with a pure flame."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 554)

— "The performers of great ceremonies, the offerers of acceptable sacrifices (or the Priyamedhas) have invoked for their protection Agni, shining with brilliant splendour [sic] in the midst of sacrifices."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 554–555 - mahikeravaḥ — "prauḍhakarmāṇaḥ: [in Kannada] those who do great and great sacrifices and the like; [the source adds in English:] 'performers of great sacrifices'." - priyamedhāḥ — "priyeṇa yajñenopetāḥ: those who perform a sacrifice dear to the deities, or to Agni; or, if desired, the word may be said to mean the descendants of the sage Priyamedha." - agnim śukreṇa śociṣā — "Agni, who shines with a greatly radiant splendour." (The sentence is cut off at the end of the line in the print, "... the shining Agni — ...").

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁶ - mahikeravaḥ: root maha pūjāyām, the Uṇādi suffix in: mahi; root ḍukṛñ karaṇe, the suffix uṇ by the Uṇādi rule beginning kṛ-vā-pā-ji-mi-sv... (Uṇ. 1-1 as read; the print of the rule is crowded [?]) — कृवा-पा-जि-मि-स्वदि-साध्य-शूभ्य उण् [as read, [?]] — kṛ-vā-pā-ji-mi-svadi-sādhy-aśūbhya uṇ; añco 'ññiti (Pā. 7-2-115 as read [?]) — अचोऽञ्जिति — when a ñit or ñit suffix follows, the final vowel of the aṅga takes vṛddhi: ṛ → ār; mahikāru; the ā becomes e by the Vedic rule; mahikeru; before jas, guṇa by jasi ca; avādeśa; ru, visarga. "Mahayaḥ kāravaḥ yeṣāṃ te", a bahuvrīhi; the first member keeps its natural accent. - priyamedhāḥ: "priyaḥ medhaḥ yeṣāṃ te". - āhūṣata: root hveñ spardhāyām śabde ca; luñ; the ātmanepada by svaritañītaḥ kartrabhiprāye kriyāphale (Pā. 1-3-72 as read) — स्वरितञितः कर्त्रभिप्राये क्रियाफले — when the fruit of the action goes to the agent; jhi → jha → ata; cleḥ sic (Pā. 3-1-44 as read) the sic for cli; the aṭ augment; āhve + s + jha; ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ (Pā. 7-1-5 as read) gives at for jha; "bahulaṃ chandasi" (Pā. 6-1-34 as read) a variety of saṃprasāraṇa of the root hveñ in the Chandas; ahu + e + s + ata; saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. 6-1-108 as read) makes a single pūrvarūpa substitute u for u + e; halaḥ (Pā. 6-4-2 as read) lengthens the u (the saṃprasāraṇa standing after a consonant at the end of the aṅga); ādeśapratyayayoḥ (Pā. 8-3-59 as read) gives ṣ for s: āhūṣata. || 4 ||

Translation: "O ghṛtāhavana, O Agni, called with ghee; O santya, giver of fruit: imā u girah, these very words — these stotra-words too, though uttered by us — su śrudhi, hear well, yābhiḥ, the songs with which kaṇvasya sūnavah, the sons of the great sage Kaṇva, havante, call you avase, for their own protection. Ghṛtāhavana: 'he in whom (or by whom) one is called with ghee'; the suffix lyuṭ in the locative sense; the initial acute of the vocative. Śrudhi: dhi in place of hi by śrūśṛṇuprakṛvṛbhyaḥ chandasi; the vikaraṇa is dropped by bahulaṃ chandasi."

27. The closing numeral of the bhāṣya is printed so that it reads like "30" or "50", a slip or a crowded numeral [?]; the Rik is the fifth, as the Saṃhitā and Pada numerals show.

Pratipadārtha — "ghṛtāhavane — O one who is called by the oblation of ghee; santya — O Agni, giver of fruit; kaṇvasya — of the sage Kaṇva; sūnavah — the sons; yābhiḥ — with which words; avase — for protection; tvā — you; havante — call; imā u girah — these very words of praise (even though uttered by us); su śrudhi — hear well."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, who are invoked in the sacrifice by pouring ghee and who give fruit to the sacrificers, hear well these words of praise that the sons of the sage Kaṇva speak to you for their protection."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 557)

— "O generous Agni, invoked with ghee, listen to these praises with which the sons of Kanwa invoke you for protection."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 557 - ghṛtāhavana — "one who is called by pouring ghee in Agni." - santya — "the giver of fruit."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁸ - ghṛtāhavana: "ghṛtena āhūyate asmin"; karaṇādhikaraṇayoś ca (Pā. 3-3-117 as read [?]) — कणाधिकरणयोश्च — the suffix lyuṭ in the locative sense; yuvor anākau (Pā. 7-1-1 as read) ana for yu; guṇa of the root hu, avādeśa; āmantritasya ca (Pā. 8-1-19 as read) gives the all-unaccented. - śrudhi: explained at R. Saṃ. 1-4[?]-13 (as printed; this would be the thirteenth ṛk of the preceding sūkta); in the Saṃhitā two lengthenings come by anyeṣām api dṛśyate. || 5 ||

Translation: "In the Aśvamedha, after the offering to Pūṣan, this ṛk 'tvām citraśravastama' is the anuvākyā of the sviṣṭakṛt (the offering that makes the rite well-performed); it is prescribed in the section 'sarvānnāmānāpsyann' [?]: 'tvām citraśravastama, yad vāhiṣṭham tad agnaye' (Āśv. 10-6 [?]). O citraśravastama, you who are specially endowed with food in the form of various oblations; O purupriya, who gladden many sacrificers; O Agni: vikṣu, among the peoples, jantavaḥ, the sacrificers born among the people, call you (havante, āhvayanti), havyāya voḥhave, to carry the oblation. What kind of you? Śociṣkeṣam, having hair in the form of flames. Thus the Vājasaneyins say: 'for the rays of him when kindled are, as it were, flaming hair.'"

31. Crowded: the Āśvalāyana section-name, read "sarvānnāmānāpsyann" in the anuvāda but "...āsyann..." in the bhāṣya's print; the Uṇādi number; the last word of the Pāṇini tail. All marked [?].

Pratipadārtha — "citraśravastama — one who has food in the form of the most abundant and varied oblations; purupriya — dear to many sacrificers; agne — O Agni; śociṣkeśam — whose hair is blazing; tvām — you; havyāya volhave — to carry the oblations; vikṣu — among the peoples; jantavaḥ — the sacrificers who are born (as men); havante — call with prayer."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are very dear to the sacrificers. They offer you food in the form of abundant and varied oblations. Growing by it you shine with your hair in the form of flames. To you, so blazing, the sacrificers born among the peoples pray, that you carry the oblations for the gods."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 558)

— "Agni, granter of abundant food, who are beloved by many, the sons of men (sacrifices) invoke you, flame-haired, to convey the oblations to the gods."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ), p. 559 - (opening note) "In the Aśvamedha sacrifice, when the sviṣṭakṛt offering is made in the iṣṭi connected with Pūṣan, this ṛk 'tvām citraśravastama' is to be recited as puro-'nuvākyā, as shown in the section 'sarvānnāmānāpsyān' of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'tvām citraśravastama (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-45-6) yad vāhiṣṭhaṃ tad agnaye (Ṛ. Saṃ. 5-[?]-[?])' (Ā. 10-6 [?])." - citraśravaḥ — "vividha, various; one who is joined to the substances of offering, such as ghee and havis." - śociṣkeśam — "one whose flames are the hair; as hair is a covering for men, so Agni, covered with radiant splendour, shines — this is the idea. Here keśa may be said to mean 'ray'; there is the sentence of the Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā (Śukla Yajurveda): 'śocanta iva hy etasya samiddhasya raśmayah keśāḥ' (Sanskrit as printed) — शोचन्त इव ह्येतस्य समिद्धस्य रश्मयः केशाः — śocanta iva hy etasya samiddhasya raśmayah keśāḥ — editorial and tentative: 'for the rays of him, kindled, are as it were flaming, the hairs'." - purupriya — "dear to the sacrificers, the many people: bahūnāṃ yajamānānāṃ prītikara." - vikṣu jantavaḥ — "prajāśūtpannā yajamānāḥ: among the people, that is, those born among men — the sacrificers who are men."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³² - citraśravastamaḥ: śravaḥ is a name for food; "citraṃ śravaḥ yasya saḥ", a bahuvrīhi — one who has food in the form of many kinds of oblations. When the sense of excess (atisāya) is meant, the suffix tamaḥ by atisāyane tamabhiṣṭhanau (Pā. 5-3-55 as read [?]); the vocative; the all-unaccented by āmantritasya. - śociṣkeśam: root śuca dīptau (the root in the first class; the Vedic commentator holds that it also has the sense of "shine"); the Uṇādi rule arci-śuci-hu-sṛpi-chādi-chardibhya isih (Uṇ. 2-10[?] as read) — roots arci pūjāyām, śuca śoke, hu dānādanayoḥ, sṛpḥ gatau, chada apavāraṇe (in the causative), chardi vamaṇe [as read] — the suffix isi; śuc + is; pugantalaḥpādhasya ca gives guṇa of the light penultimate (u → o): śocis. The accent of the suffix: the i is acute. "Śociḥ keśo yasya taṃ", a bahuvrīhi, "one whose hair is of the form of light"; the first member keeps its natural accent — that is, whatever accent it had first remains after the compound. - havyāya: karmanā yam abhipraiti sa sampradānam (Pā. 1-4-32 as read [?]) — कर्मणा यमभिप्रैति स संप्रदानम् — "whom the agent has in view by the action is the recipient"; the vārttika "kriyāgrahaṇaṃ kartavyam" is added: that which is the aim of an action also gets the name sampradāna; hence havya, the aim of the action of carrying signified by volhave, gets sampradāna; caturthī sampradāne then gives the dative. - volhave: root vaha prāpaṇe; tumarthe sesenasese... (Pā. 3-4-9 as read [?]) gives the suffix tavenū; vah + tave; hoḍhaḥ (Pā. 8-2-31 as read) — h becomes ḍh even before a jhal and at the end of a word; jhaṣas tathor dho 'dhaḥ (Pā. 8-2-40 as read) dha for the ta; ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ (Pā. 8-4-41 as read) the ṣṭu-change: the dh becomes ḍh; ḍho ḍhe lopah (Pā. 8-3-13 as read) the first ḍh is dropped;

32. pp. 559–560 — grammar pages, noted briefly

sahivahor odavarṇasya (Pā. 6-3-112 as read) the o for the a of vah: voḍhave; by the rule cited as "ajmadhyasthaṭhakārasya ḷhakāraṃ vaitathā kramam" [as printed, a Prātiśākhya-type rule, [?]] the ḍh is replaced by ḷh: voḷhave. The suffix is nit, so the end of the suffix is acute (āsyudātta as printed; the first syllable of the suffix). || 6 ||

Translation: "O Agni, the wise sages, diviṣṭiṣu, in the sacrifices, ni dadhire, have set you down, established you. What kind of one? Hotāram, the caller; ṛtvijam, one given to worship in the seasons; vasuvittamam, one who most of all makes wealth be obtained; śrutkarṇam, endowed with ears fit for hearing; saprathastamam, most renowned. Dadhire: since the ending ire is cit, the end is acute; being at the head of a pāda, the all-unaccented does not come. Diviṣṭiṣu: iṣṭayaḥ means desires; those sacrifices in which there are desires for heaven (divaḥ, of svarga) are diviṣṭayaḥ; by the saying that all rules are optional in the Chandas, the u for div (Pā. 6-1-131 [?]) is not made; in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its natural accent."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, you are the one who calls the gods to the sacrifice. You sacrifice properly in the seasons, give abundant wealth, and have subtle ears that hear the praises of the sacrificers well. By all these qualities you are extremely renowned. The wise and discerning priests have established you, endowed with these excellent qualities, in the sacrifices (have installed you)."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 561)

— "Agni, the wise men have placed (established) you in their sacrifices as the invoker, the priest, the giver of vast wealth, the quick-hearing and well-renowned."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 561–562 - vasuvittamam — "atiśayena dhanasya lambhayitāram: greatly, that is, in great measure; one who makes wealth be got by the sacrificer." - śrutkarṇam — "one who has ears that hear our invocation; that is, one who hears our invocation quickly." - sapraṭhastamam — "atiśayena prakhyātam: very much renowned, greatly famous." - diviṣṭiṣu — "iṣṭaya eṣaṇāni; divaḥ svargasyaiṣaṇāni yeṣu yogeṣu te diviṣṭayah: in the sacrifices that are performed in order to attain heaven."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁵ - dadhire: root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoh, liṭ, jha as substitute; liṭas tajhayor eṣirec (Pā. 3-4-81 as read) — लिटस्तझयोरेशिरेच् — in place of ta and jha of liṭ, eś and irec; hence irec for jha; doubling; shortening of the reduplicative syllable; abhyāse carca (Pā. 8-4-54 as read) — अभ्यासे चर्च — the aspirated and other jhal letters in the reduplicative syllable become car and jaś letters: the dh of the reduplicative syllable becomes d; dadhā + ire; āto lopa iṭi ca (Pā. 6-4-64 as read) drops the ā: dadhire. The ending ire is cit, hence the end-acute; because it stands at the head of the second pāda, the all-unaccented by tiñ atinaḥ does not come. - diviṣṭiṣu: root iṣa gatau; striyām ktin, the ṣṭutva; "divaḥ iṣṭiḥ eṣaṇam yeṣu yogeṣu te

diviṣṭayaḥ", a bahuvrīhi — those sacrifices in which there is a desire for heaven; diva ut (Pā. 6-1-131 as read [?]) — दिव उत् — the final of div in the pada becomes u; though it is obtained, the maxim sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante (paribhāṣā, "63" as read [?]) makes it optional, so it does not come; the first member keeps its natural accent. || 7 ||

Translation: "O Agni, the sutasomāḥ, those furnished with pressed Soma, the viprāḥ, the wise priests, abhi prayah, with the food in the form of the oblation in view, ā acucyavuh, have made you come. What kind of you? Bṛhat, great, bhāḥ, shining. What kind of priests? Bibhrataḥ, bearing, holding, the haviḥ of the sacrificer who is the dāśuṣe martāya, the mortal who gives the oblation."

Grammatical tail ³⁸ - ācucyavuh: root cyuṇ gatau, with the causative sense (ṇic) included; the imperfect (laṇ) with the parasmaipada by the principle of exchange (vyatyaya); śap → ślu "because of the Chandas"; jhi → jus by sijabhyastavidibhyaś ca (Pā. 3-4-109 as read [?]); guṇa by jusi ca (Pā. 7-3-83 as read [?]). - bṛhat,

37. The phrase "haviṣpradasya" in the middle of the bhāṣya is crowded in the print, [?]; the verb-form ācucyavuh is ā + acucyavuh joined.

38. characterized; numerals as read [?]

bhāḥ: in both the case-ending is dropped (supām suluk...). Bibhrataḥ: root ḍubhrñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; before śatr, the augment num is forbidden by nābhyastāc chatuḥ; the initial acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ. - martāya dāśuṣe: in both, the dative is to be said in the sense of the genitive (vārttika, Pā. 2-3-62-1 as read [?]).

Pratipadārtha — "agṇe — O Agni; sutasomāḥ — those furnished with pressed Soma juice; dāśuṣe — who gives the oblation; martāya — (on behalf) of the human sacrificer; haviḥ — the oblation; bibhrataḥ — and holding; viprāḥ — the wise priests; br̥hat — of great form; bhāḥ — and shining; tvā — you; prayaḥ abhi — towards the food in the form of the oblation; ā acucyavuḥ — have caused to come."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Agni, the wise priests, having pressed the Soma juice, have taken the oblation up to offer it to you on behalf of the sacrificer who gives the oblation. You are of great form and shining. They have caused you, endowed with radiance, to come towards the food in the form of the oblation."

— "O Agni, shining with great splendour, the wise priests with libations of Soma-juice and holding the oblation on behalf of the person who presents it, have summoned you to partake of the sacrificial food."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 564 - ācucyavuḥ — "cyuñ gatau: they have caused (you) to come." - br̥hadbhāḥ — "br̥han mahāntaṃ bhā bhāsamānaḥ: one who shines with great, abundant brilliance." - bibhrato haviḥ — "standing holding the oblation in order to offer it to you." - martāya dāśuṣe — "on behalf of the man who offers the oblation to you, that is, on behalf of the sacrificer." - prayaḥ — "food in the form of the oblation."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁹ - acucyavuḥ: root cyuñ gatau (class 1), the root including ñic; lañ; the ātmanepada "should lawfully come" by anudātta-ñita ātmanepadam (Pā. 1-3-12 as read) but by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. 3-1-85 as read) the parasmaipada; the aṭ augment; jhi; śap → śla by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 2-4-73 as read); doubling after śla; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ drops the y of the reduplicative syllable (cyu → cu); pūrvo 'bhyāsaḥ (Pā. 6-1-4) names the first part of the doubled word the abhyāsa; sijabhyastavidibhyaś ca (Pā. 3-4-109 as read) — सिजभ्यस्तविदिभ्यश्च — jus in place of jhi after sic, an abhyasta or vid; ubhe abhyastam (Pā. 6-1-5 as read) — the whole doubled word is named abhyasta; jusi ca (Pā. 7-3-83 as read) — जुसि च — guṇa for the ik-ending aṅga before jus: u → o; acucyo + us; avādeśa: acucyavus; ru, visarga. - br̥hat-bhāḥ: in both, the case-ending drops by supām suluk... (Pā. 7-1-39 as read). - bibhrataḥ: root ḍubhrñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, juhotyādi; laṭ; laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau — śatṛ in place of laṭ; by nābhyastāc chatuḥ (Pā. 7-1-78 as read) no num after an abhyasta stem; so when jas follows, the num that would come by ugidacām sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ does not come; abhyastānām ādiḥ (Pā. 6-1-189 as read) gives the initial acute. - martāya, dāsuse: śaṣṭhyarthe caturthī vacanam (Pā. 2-3-62 [vārttika], as read "2-3-62-1" [?]) — षष्ठ्यर्थे चतुर्थी वचनम् — the dative in the sense of the genitive. || 8 ||

— "Strength-generated (or produced by friction) Agni, giver of rewards, provider of dwellings, bring and seat the gods that move in the morning and other divine beings to drink the Soma-juice in this sacrifice."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 566–567 - sahasṛte — "balena araṇibhyāṃ mathita: churned by the two araṇis with strength. When Agni is produced, strength, that is, force, is used in the araṇi-sticks; hence 'one churned (made to appear) by strength' is the idea. Sahas means strength (Ni. 2-[?] as read). In the sacrifice they lay one piece of the araṇi wood on another, churn it, and produce Agni; for that churning force has to be used." ⁴³ "Produced by friction which requires strength to perform effectually." - prātaryāvṇaḥ — "prātarāgacchataḥ: those who go or move in the morning; that is, those who go to the

Since in this ṛk no particular deity is stated as daivyaṃ janam, it may be inferred that the thirty-three deities named Vasus, Rudras and Ādityas, spoken of in the first ṛk of this sūkta, are meant." - āsādaya — "make (them) sit, cause (them) to sit down." vaso — "leader of the place of dwelling."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁴ - prātaryāvṇaḥ: prātar is an indeclinable ending in r; root yā prāpaṇe; "prātaḥ yānti"; vanip by ato manin kvanib vanipaś ca (Pā. 3-2-74 as read [?]); prātaryāvan, śas; alloponaḥ (Pā. 6-4-134 as read) drops the a of an; prātipadikāntanumvibhaktiṣu ca (Pā. 8-4-11 as read) gives ṇ for n; because of the second member being a kṛd, the first keeps its natural accent, and the root's own accent (dhātusvara) alone remains. - sahaskṛta: "sahate 'bhibhavaty anena iti sahaḥ balam", root saha marṣaṇe, the suffix asun by sarvadhātubhyo 'sun; "sahasā kṛtaḥ", an instrumental tatpuruṣa; ojaḥsahombhastamasas tṛtīyāyāḥ (Pā. 6-3-3 as read [?]) — ओजःसहोऽम्भस्तमसस्तृतीयायाः [as read] — the instrumental ending does not drop (aluk) when the second member follows; since this is a case-ending that depends on a prātipadika, the luk that would come by supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ ought logically not to come; but by the maxim sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante this too is optional, and so the luk of the instrumental does come here: sahaskṛta. || 9 ||

Translation: "O Agni, arvāñcam, (him who is) turned towards (us), daivyaṃ janam, the group of divine beings, born of the deities — sahūtibhiḥ, along with the other gods who have a common invocation, yakṣva, worship (them). O sudānavah, gods who give fruit well: ayaṃ somaḥ, this Soma is placed before you;
taṃ pāta, drink that Soma. Of what kind? Tiroahnyam, called by this name: the Soma that is pressed on the preceding day and offered on the following day has this name."

Grammatical tail ⁴⁶ - daivyaṃ: after deva the suffix yañ in the senses that precede the divyatīya group; yakṣva: in the imperative the śap drops (bahulaṃ chandasi); the suffix-accent is absent because of the Chandas; because the vocative agne is at the head of the pāda and counts as non-existent before, the verb is not

45. The rule-name beginning devādyañāñau and the phrase
 "āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavad" are crowded in the print and given as

unaccented (tiñ atīṇaḥ). - sahūtibhiḥ: "those for whom the invocation (āhūti) is common"; sa for samāna in the Chandas; in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its natural accent. - tiroahnyam: ahnyam = "occurring in the day" (bhave chandasi, yat); the loss of ṭi by nas taddhite does not come, since ahnaṣṭakhoreva restricts it to the ṭa- and *kha-*suffixes; the loss of the a of an by alloponaḥ when it has bha-designation; the prakṛtibhāva by ye cābhāvakarmaṇoḥ is not made, being optional in the Chandas; "tirohito hnyaḥ = tiroahnyaḥ" (prakṛtyāntaḥpādam gives prakṛtibhāva); the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its natural accent.

Pratipadārtha — "agne — O Agni; arvāñcam — (one who is) turned towards (us); daivyaṃ janam — the group belonging to the deities; sahūtibhiḥ — together with the other gods who have a combined invocation; yakṣva — worship; sudānavaḥ — O gods, excellent givers of fruit; ayaṃ somaḥ — this Soma juice (is before you); tiroahnyam — called tiroahnya (since it is prepared on the previous day); tam — this Soma juice; pāta — drink."

— "O Agni, call all the deities, the group belonging to the gods who stand before you, together, and worship them. O gods, the givers of fruit, this Soma juice has been made ready for you. Drink this Soma juice that was pressed on the previous day (yesterday)."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 569)

— "Agni, bring divine beings (gods) with simultaneous [sic: spelling as printed, 'simultaneous'] invocations and worship them ; O generous gods, this is (here is) the soma-juice, drink it, it was expressed yesterday"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 569 - arvāñcam — "facing us, in front. The idea: in the sacrifice the gods are to be called and made to sit facing the sacrificer." - daivyaṃ janam —

"the groups of deities, that is, the Vasus, Rudras and Ādityas." - sahūtibhiḥ — "samānāhvānaiḥ: with invocations that call all together." - tiroahnyam — "pūrvasminn ahny abhiṣuto yaḥ somaḥ uttare 'hani hūyate tasyaitannāmadheyam: 'the Soma that is pressed on the previous day and is offered on the next day has this name' (Sanskrit as printed) — पूर्वस्मिन्नह्न्यभिषुतो यः सोमः उत्तरेऽहनि हूयते तस्यैतन्नामधेयम् — editorial and tentative: as in the translation above. The 'previous day' means the day gone by: 'I offer to you today the Soma juice pressed and made ready on yesterday's day. Drink it,' the sage prays."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁷ - daivyaṃ: root divu kriḍāda, pacādi-suffix ac, guṇa of the light penultimate; "devād yañ-añau" (as read [?], a rule of Pā. 4-1-85 type): after deva, in the sense that precedes divyatīya, the suffix yañ; yasyeti ca drops the a; taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ gives vṛddhi of the first vowel: the e becomes ai. - yakṣva: root yaja devapūjāda; loṭ, thās, thāsaḥ se (Pā. 3-4-80 as read) gives se; savābhyāṃ vāmau (Pā. 3-4-91 as read) gives va for the e (se → sva); yaj + sva; bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 2-4-73 as read) drops the śap (luk); vraścabhrasjasrjamrjayajarājabhrājacchaśāṃ ṣaḥ (Pā. 8-2-36 as read) the j becomes ṣ; ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si (Pā. 8-2-41 as read) the ṣ becomes k: yak + sva; ādeśapratyayayoḥ gives ṣ for s: yakṣva. The vocative agne stands at the head of the pāda (so that agne is treated as not existing before), āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat (Pā. 8-1-72 as read) and the word yakṣva thus stands at the head of the pāda; the all-unaccented by tiṅ atinaḥ does not come. The Kannada author remarks that although, as the word ends in a verbal suffix, the suffix-accent should come, the root-accent (dhātusvara) is what comes, being Vedic. - sahūtibhiḥ: "samānā hūtiḥ (āhvānam) yeṣāṃ te sahūtayaḥ, taiḥ"; samānasya chandasy amūrdhaprabhṛtyudarkeṣu (Pā. 6-3-84 as read) — in the Chandas, when a second member follows, sa for samāna, but not when mūrdhan, etc. follow; a bahuvrīhi, so the first member keeps its natural accent. - pāta: root pā pāne (class 1); loṭ, tha; loṭo laṇvat makes it like laṇ; tasthasthamipāṃ tām̐tam̐tāmaḥ (Pā. 3-4-101 as read) gives ta for tha; bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 2-4-73 as read) drops śap: pāta; the all-unaccented by tiṇ atīnaḥ. - tiroahnyam: "ahani bhavam = ahnyam": bhave chandasi (Pā. 4-4-110 as read) — भवे छन्दसि — in the Chandas the suffix yat after a word in the locative in the sense of "being there"; ahan + ya; ahnaṣṭakhoreva (Pā. 6-4-145 as read) — the ṭi of ahan drops only when the suffixes ṭa and kha follow, so with other suffixes the ṭi does not drop; so too nas taddhite (Pā. 6-4-144 as read), which would drop the ṭi of an aṅga ending in n and called bha before a taddhita, does not apply; yaci bham (Pā. 1-4-18 as read) gives the bha-designation; alloponaḥ (Pā. 6-4-134 as read) drops the a of an; ye cābhāvakarmaṇoḥ (Pā. 6-4-168 as read) would give prakṛtibhāva before a taddhita beginning with y — but since here a suffix in the sense of "being" (bhāva) follows, the prakṛtibhāva would, strictly, not apply; yet by sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante it does not come. Tiras + ahnyam; sasajuṣo ruḥ (Pā. 8-2-66 as read) gives ru; ato ror aplutād aplute (Pā. 6-1-113 as read) gives u for ru; tira + u + ahnyam; ād guṇaḥ (Pā. 6-1-87 as read) gives guṇa: tiro + ahnyam. Prakṛtyāntaḥpādam avyapare (Pā. 6-1-115 as read) — प्रकृत्यान्तःपादमव्यपरे — [the Kannada explanation:] a short a that is not followed by a v or y ... standing in the middle of a pāda; the e and o within the ṛk-foot keep their natural form (prakṛtibhāva): so tiroahnyam without elision. Tatpuruṣe tulyārtharṭṭiyā... (Pā. 6-2-2 as read) gives, to an indeclinable first member, the natural accent. || 10 ||

48. The numeral is read as "45"; the Kannada script of the closing note is clear.

Summary of Sūkta 45. Ten Riks, nine to Agni and the last in part to the Devas. Rik 1 asks Agni to worship the Vasus, Rudras, Ādityas and other beings born of Manu; Rik 2 says that the wise gods give fruit to the giver of oblations, and asks Agni, with his red horses, to bring the thirty-three; Rik 3 asks him to hear Praskaṇva's call as he heard Priyamedha, Atri, Virūpa and Aṅgiras; Rik 4 says the Priyamedhas have called Agni, shining among sacrifices, for protection; Rik 5 asks him to hear the praises with which Kaṇva's sons call him; Rik 6 says that men call the flame-haired, much-loved Agni to carry the oblation; Rik 7 says the wise have set him down as caller, priest, giver of wealth, quick-hearing and renowned; Rik 8 says the priests with pressed Soma and the oblation have brought him to the food; Rik 9 asks him, born of friction, to seat the morning-going gods and other divine beings on the grass for the Soma; Rik 10 asks him to worship the divine group together, and invites the gods to drink the Soma pressed the day before. All ten Riks are written in full. The long Special Topics essays are on the Vasus, Rudras and Ādityas (Rik 1) with ten Ṛgveda citations and Yāska's account of the Vasus, on the sages Priyamedha, Atri, Virūpa and Aṅgiras (Rik 3) with eleven Ṛgveda citations, and on the sahaskṛta kindling and the tiroahnya Soma. The doubtful parts are the many reference numerals (all "as read [?]"), the sūtra numerals, the Manu reference list (not reproduced), the figures for the Vasus, Rudras and Ādityas (read 8, 11, 12 and a total of 33; they sum to 31 — recorded, not adjusted), and the crowded grammar passages.⁴⁹

Anuvāda (Kannada), p. 571 — "Eṣo uṣā is the third sūkta in the ninth anuvāka. In it there are fifteen ṛks. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Praskaṇva. This sūkta and the next sūkta have the Āśvin gods as deity; this sūkta is in the Gāyatrī metre. The Anukramaṇikā says: 'eṣo pañconāśvinaṃ tu gāyatram' [?]. In the time of reciting the mantras of the Prātaranuvāka this sūkta is used for reciting the Gāyatrī-metre Āśvina-śastra mantras connected with the Āśvina rite; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'athāśvina eṣo uṣāḥ' (Ā. 4-13 [?])."

Translation: "Eṣo uṣāḥ: this very Uṣas, seen by us, priyā, the cause of joy to all, apūrvyā, not present in the earlier times such as midnight but the present Uṣas, the goddess Uṣas, having come divaḥ, from the heavenly world, vyucchati, drives off the darkness. Pratipadārtha — "priyā — the cause of joy (to all); apūrvyā — manifest only now, not before this (all night); eṣo uṣāḥ — this goddess Uṣas who is seen by our eyes; divaḥ — from the sky (coming); vyucchati — drives away the darkness; aśvinā — O Ásvin gods; vām — you; br̥hat — exceedingly; stuṣe — I praise."

Bhāvārtha

— "After the night, which was full of darkness, had gone, the goddess Uṣas has just now appeared. Coming from the sky, driving away the darkness and spreading radiance, she is the cause of joy to all. O Ásvin gods, helpers of the appearing of Uṣas, who gives joy to all, I praise you exceedingly."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 573)

— "This beloved Ushas, until now unseen, scatters the darkness from the sky ; O Aswins, I greatly praise you."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 573 - apūrvyā — "pūrvam avidyamānā; nūtanā: one not existing before; new; one not existing, or not seen, until now." - "In this sūкта the ṛṣi, aiming at the Ásvin deities who are to be prayed to in the morning, describes the time of Uṣas as their forerunner."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁷ - stuṣe: root ṣtuñ stutau; by "tiñāṃ tiño bhavanti" (as printed, a general maxim of exchange of person-endings), the first-person singular iṭ is replaced by the second-person singular thās, which becomes se; stu + se, ṣatva. Or: the first-person singular iṭ of leṭ; ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e (Pā. 3-4-79 as read [?]) gives the e; sip by sibbahulaṃ leṭi (Pā. 3-1-34 as read [?]); stuṣe. || 1 ||

Translation: "The gods, the two Ásvins, who are endowed with the qualities about to be told — tau stuṣe, I praise them: so the connexion with the previous (ṛk) runs. What kind? Dasrā, dasrau, beautiful to behold; sindhumātarā, whose mother is the sea. Although it is the Sun and the Moon that are sea-born, yet, in the view of some, the Ásvins are of that form, and therefore are so. Rayīṇām manotarā, who with the mind cause (men) to cross over (to) riches (the givers of wealth); dhiyā, by (their) work, vasuvidā, who cause the dwelling-place to be obtained."

Grammatical tail ⁹ - manotarā: "those who cross (or make to cross) by mind"; the root tṛ, with the causative sense included, takes the suffix ap by ṛdor ap; when the s at the end of the first member becomes ru, the u is Vedic. - rayīṇām: nām is acute by nāmanyatarasyām. Dhiyā: the case-ending is acute by sāvekāca.... Vasuvidā: "they who obtain (vindete) dwellings"; kvip by kvip ca.

Pratipadārtha — "dasrā — who are beautiful in form; sindhumātarā — whose mother is the sea; rayīṇām — of riches; manotarā — who distribute (them) with their mind; dhiyā — (to each one) according to his work (as the fruit of it); vasuvidā — who cause dwelling-places to be obtained; yā devā — whichever Ásvin gods there are (those I praise)."

Bhāvārtha

— "The Ásvin gods are sons of the sea. They are of beautiful form. They distribute riches with great generosity, with good mind; but without discrimination they do not show their generosity. To each one, in accord with his work, and as the very fruit of it, they cause dwelling-places to be obtained. I praise the Aśvin gods who are such generous givers and lovers of justice."

— "(I praise Aswins) who are divine, of pleasing appearance, children of the sea, givers of wealth and granters of dwellings (as the reward of the sacrifice)."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 575 - dasrā — "darśanīyau: beautiful, or destroyers of enemies." - sindhumātarā — "those whose mother is the sea, that is, sons of the sea. According to some, as the Sun and the Moon are born of the sea, so these Aśvin gods too are born of the sea, and therefore, the commentator says, it is proper to call them sons of the sea. Sindhu means the sea. As the word samudra also means the atmosphere (antarikṣa), one may say that these Aśvin gods were born in the atmosphere." - manotarā — "manasā tārayitārau; manasā tarata iti manotarau; dhanānām dātārāv ity arthaḥ: those who distribute wealth, that is, those who give." - dhiyā — "karmaṇā: by work (Ni. 3-[?] as read)." - vasuvidā — "vasūni nivāsasthānāni vindete iti vasuvidau; nivāsasthānasya lambhayitārau: those who get dwelling-places for performers of sacrifices and the like."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁰ - manotarā: "manasā tarata"; root tṛ plavanataraṇayoḥ, the root with ṇic-sense included; after it ṛdor ap (Pā. 3-3-57 as read [?]) — ऋदोरप् — the suffix ap after a root ending in ṛ or u in the abstract sense or for a non-agent kāraka; guṇa with raparatva. Sasajuṣo ruḥ (Pā. 8-2-66 as read) gives ru for the final s of manas at the end of a pada (manar + tara). The Kannada author then notes that ru is followed by a ta, not by an a, so ato ror aplutād aplute (Pā. 6-1-113) and haśi ca (Pā. 6-1-114)

13. Crowded: the Pāṇini number after bruvo vaciḥ, the root-name "jūṣ" [print reads like "jyāṣ"], and the Vedic a clause before hali ceti; all marked [?].

Translation: "O Ásvins, your (vām) chariot, jūrṇāyām adhi viṣṭapi, above the heaven that is praised by the various śāstras, yat, when it patāt, goes, with its horses (vibhiḥ), then your kakuhāsaḥ, excellent praises, vacyante, are spoken by us. Vacyante: in the passive of brūñ, vac replaces brū by bruvo vaciḥ; the saṃprasāraṇa by vacisvapi...; since the option vā chandasi continues, the pūrvārūpa is optional and the yañ-substitution stands; the accent is that of the suffix. Kakuhāsaḥ: because one says 'kakubh is the horn, and also the chief', praises that declare chief-ness are indicated by the word kakup, 'chief'; the h is Vedic; the augment asuk by ājjaser asuk. Jūrṇāyām: a root with the sense 'decay of age'; because roots have many meanings, here the sense of praise is to be taken; (kta) with no i; the lengthening by hali ca; n in place of t by radābhyām niṣṭhāto naḥ.... Vibhiḥ: vī gatyādau; 'they that go (viyanti) are the vayaḥ, horses'; the Uṇādi suffix ḍi. Patāt: root pat! gatau, leṭ, the aḍ-augment, and the i dropped."

Pratipadārtha — "vām — (O Ásvin gods) of you two; rathaḥ — the chariot; jūrṇāyām — (by the various śāstras) praised; adhi viṣṭapi — in the world of heaven; yat — when; vibhiḥ — with the horses; patāt — it goes (then); vām — your; kakuhāsaḥ — praises; vacyante — are recited (by us)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Ásvin gods, the various śāstras praise the glory of the heaven-world. In that heaven-world, when your chariot goes with its horses, bearing you seated, we offer praises (stotras) to praise your power."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 578)

— "When your chariot proceeds above the glorious heaven, drawn by your horses your praises are sung by us."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 578 - kakuhāsaḥ — "since the word kakuha is read among the thirteen [?] names of mahat beginning 'mahat, bradhnaḥ' in the Nighaṇṭu (Ni. 3-1[?] as read), this word has the name mahat (great) or śreṣṭha (excellent). Here the sense 'excellent' is explained as 'excellent praises'; praises, stotras." - jūrṇāyām — "stotra-done, praised. Jūṣ [?] vayohānau; dhātūnām anekārthatvāt atra stutyartha vaktavyaḥ: [the root] means 'to decay, to pass the age'; since roots have many meanings, the commentator's view is that the sense of praise is to be taken here for this root." - vibhiḥ — "vī gatyādaḥ; viyanti gacchantīti vayo 'śvāḥ: the root vī has the sense of going; vayaḥ are horses, which go by nature. Vibhiḥ is [printed as] a fourth-case plural" ¹⁴. - patāt — "patati, gacchati: goes, moves."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁵ - vacyante: root brūñ vyaktāyām vāci; laṭ in the passive; bhāvakarmaṇoḥ (Pā. 1-3-13 as read [?]) gives the ātmanepada; jha → anta, ṭi → e; sārvadhātuke yak (Pā. 3-1-67 as read) the suffix yak; brū + ya + ante; bruvo vaciḥ (Pā. 2-4-53 as read [?]) vac for brū before an ārdhadhātuka; vacisvapiyajādīnām kiti (Pā. 6-1-15 as read) saṃprasāraṇa of vac, svap and yaj-class roots before a kit suffix (v → u); saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. 6-1-108 as read) and vā chandasi (Pā. 6-1-106 as read) — the pūrvarūpa is optional in the Chandas, so here it does not come; iko yaṇaci (Pā. 6-1-77 as read) the yaṇ: u → v; vac + ya + ante; ato guṇe (Pā. 6-1-97 as read) the pararūpa; vacyante; the suffix-accent; it stands at the head of the pāda, so tiñ atīṇaḥ gives no all-unaccented. - kakuhāsaḥ: "kakubhaṃ śṛṅge viduḥ pradhāne ca" (as printed, a lexicon-statement) — "horn" and "chief" are the two senses of the word; here, the sense "chief"; praises that speak of pre-eminence are indicated by lakṣaṇā; the final letter becomes h by Vedic usage; jas; kakuh + as; ājjaser asuk gives the augment asuk: kakuhāsas; ru, visarga. - jūrṇāyām: root jūṣ [?] vayohānau, many-meaning; niṣṭhā gives kta: jū + ta; śryukaḥ kiti (Pā. 7-2-11 as read) — श्रुकः किति — a kit or nit suffix after śriñ, a root of one vowel, or a root ending in uk takes no iṭ; bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 7-1-103 as

15. pp. 578–579 — grammar pages, noted briefly

read) — the ū becomes ur with raparatva: jur + ta; hali ca (Pā. 8-2-77 as read) lengthens the penultimate ik of a root ending in r or v before a consonant: jūr; radābhyām niṣṭhāto naḥ pūrvasya ca daḥ (Pā. 8-2-42 as read) — रदाभ्यां निष्ठातो नः पूर्वस्य च दः — n for the t of kta and ktavatu after r or d, and n for a preceding d: jūr + na; raśābhyām no ṇaḥ samānapade (Pā. 8-4-1 as read) gives ṇ: jūrṇa; the suffix-accent. - vibhiḥ: root vī gatyāda, "viyanti gacchantīti vayaḥ", birds [the Kannada author says "birds", pakṣigaḷu; the bhāṣya says horses]; the Uṇādi suffix ḍit; because it is ḍit, the ṭi-loss occurs even without bha-designation. - patāt: root patḥ gatau, leṭ, tip; leṭo 'ḍātau (Pā. 3-4-94 as read) gives the augment aṭ; itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. 3-4-97 as read) drops the i. || 3 ||

Translation: "O Aśvins, the gods: the Sun, apāṃ jāraḥ, who by his own heat makes the waters decay (dry up), haviṣā, with the oblation given by us, pipartti, nourishes — satisfies — the gods.

16. The Saṃhitā runs papurir narā, as the Pada's papuriḥ | narā shows; the Saṃhitā's printed spacing is papurirnarā.

Since the oblation is given when the Sun has risen, the Sun's being the fulfiller is to be seen; so, at the time of sunrise you two should come: this is the sense. What kind of jārah? Papuriḥ, by nature a filler, in the way stated; pitā, protector; kuṭasya carṣaṇiḥ, beholder of the work (rite). Here the Nirukta [says]: "The one who dries up the waters, with the havis he fills (pipartti), papuḥ — these are words of the Veda from the root pr, "to fill", or prī, "to please"; the father, the watcher of what is done, is Āditya' (Ni. 5-24 [?])."

Grammatical tail ¹⁷ - jārah: "that which makes decay (jarayati)", the Āditya; by dārajārau kartari ṇiluk ca a ghaṇ-ending form given by nipātana; the end-acute by the rule beginning karṣātvataḥ.... - apām: the case-ending is acute by ūdidam.... - pipartti: root pṛ pālanapūraṇayoḥ, tip; śap → ślu because the root is of the juhotyādi class; the i of the reduplicative syllable by artipipartyoś ca; initial acute of the reduplicated stem by anudātte ca. - papuriḥ: the suffix kin by ādr̥gamahana...; though kit-ness is already given by the liṭ-likeness, the guṇa is excluded by the separate making of kit — ṛcchatyṛtām (Pā. 7-4-11 as read [?]); u by udoṣṭhyapūrvasya; being nit, the initial acute.

Pratipadārtha — "narāḥ — O leaders (Aśvins); papuriḥ — (the Sun) whose nature is to nourish (the gods with oblation); pitā — as protector; kuṭasya carṣaṇiḥ — as the observer of the (sacrificial) rite; apām jārah — the Sun who, as it were, makes the waters shrink by his heat; haviṣā — with the oblation offered by us; pipartti — nourishes (the gods)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Aśvin gods, leaders, the Sun is the protector of the world and observes the work of all in the world. He is the one who makes the waters shrink by his heat. In the same way, with the oblation offered by us he makes the gods well nourished."

17. characterized, numerals as read [?]

English Translation (the source's own, p. 581)

— "O Guides (Aswins), the Sun the evaporator of the waters, the nourisher the protector and beholder of sacred rite. [o]urishes [sic: the first letter of the verb is lost in the print] the gods with our oblations."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), pp. 581–582 - jāraḥ apām

— "one who makes water shrink by his heat, that is, the Sun." - haviṣā pipartti — "makes the gods nourished with the oblation; that is, after sunrise those who sacrifice offer oblations with the deities in view, and that oblation brings nourishment to the deities. Since the oblation has to be offered after sunrise, in the morning, the Sun, being a helper in this offering, is himself the one who brings nourishment to the deities: the ṛṣi has said this chief idea in another manner." - papurīḥ — "uktakrameṇa pūraṇasvabhāvaḥ: one whose nature is to fill the oblation." - jāraḥ — "jarayatīti jāra ādityaḥ: one who causes heat, that is, Āditya [as printed in Kannada]." - pitā — "protector; protector of the works that men do." - kuṭasya carṣaṇīḥ — "kṛtasya karmaṇas cāyitā draṣṭā: one who looks at all the works that men do; the witness of work." - Yāska on this ṛk (untranslated in the source; reference "Ni. 5-2[?]" as read): haviṣāpām jarayitā pipartti papur iti pṛṇātinigamau vā prīṇātinigamau vā pitā kṛtasya karmaṇas cāyitādityaḥ || — editorial and tentative: "With the oblation (or: water) the dryer-up of the waters fills (pipartti); papur: (these are) Vedic words from pr 'to fill' or prī 'to please'; the father, the observer of what is done, Āditya."

हविषापां जरयिता पिपर्तिं पपुरिति पृणातिनिगमौ वा प्रीणातिनिगमौ वा पिता कृतस्य

The Kannada author explains: "That is, though Āditya dries up the water, at all times he fills the whole created world with havis, that is, with water (the word havis is read among the names of water in the Nighaṇṭu, Ni. 1-1[?]); he draws the water that is in seas and other reservoirs by his rays and fills the earth with water in the form of rain from the cloud. Pipartti and papuḥ are both nigama (Vedic) words; for these words the meanings are 'fill' (pūrayati) or 'please' (prīṇāti), filling or satisfying; and this Sun is the protector of the whole world and a witness of all works that people do, that is, one who sees everything: this is the idea."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ¹⁸ - jārah: the root jūṣ [?] vayohānau [the print's root-name is crowded, as in Rik 3]; parimāṇākhyāyāṃ sarvebhyaḥ (Pā. 3-3-20 as read [?]) — परिमाणाख्यायां सर्वेभ्यः — on which there is the vārttika "dāra-jārau kartari ṇiluk ca": after the roots dṛ vidāraṇe and jūṣ [?] vayohānau, being ṇijanta, the suffix ghaṇ in the agent sense, and the ṇi drops. By this jārayati → jāra: jṛ + ṇic, ghaṇ, the ṇi's luk, jṛ + a, vṛddhi with raparatva: jāra. The word is well known in the Upaniṣad, and here denotes the Sun: the Śruti sentence "yo 'sau tapann eti sa sarveṣāṃ bhūtānāṃ prāṇān ādāyodeti" (as printed; in Sanskrit) — योऽसौ तपन्नेति स सर्वेषां भूतानां प्राणानादायोदेति — yo 'sau tapann eti sa sarveṣāṃ bhūtānāṃ prāṇān ādāyodeti — editorial and tentative: "he who goes about burning, he rises taking up the vital breaths of all beings" — says that the Sun takes away life. The root-sense is "loss of age"; so it is proper that the word should denote the Sun, who diminishes the span of life. Karṣātvato ghaṇaḥ anta udāttaḥ (Pā. 6-1-159 as read [?]) gives the end-acute. - apām: ūḍidampadādyappumraidyubhyaḥ (Pā. 6-1-171 as read [?]) — ऊडिदम्पदाद्यप्पुम्रेद्युभ्यः — the case-ending is acute. - pipartti: root pṛ pālanapūraṇayoh; juhotyādi, laṭ, tip; juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ (Pā. 2-4-75 as read) ślu for śap; doubling after ślu; urat (Pā. 7-4-66 as read) gives a for the reduplicative syllable's r; artipipartyoś ca (Pā. 7-4-77 as read [?]) — अर्तिपिपत्योश्च — i for the reduplicative syllable of r and pṛ; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ drops the r of the reduplicative syllable: pip + pṛ + ti; sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoh gives guṇa with raparatva to the second part; anudātte ca (Pā.

6-1-190 as read [?]) the initial of the reduplicated word is acute when a non-acute sārvadhātuka suffix follows. - papuriḥ: root pṛ pālanapūraṇayoḥ; āḍṛgamahanaḥ kikināu liṭ ca (Pā. 3-2-171 as read [?]) — आदृगमहनः किकिनौ लिट् च — after roots in ā or ṛ, and gam and han, the suffixes ki and kin, which are also liṭ-like. [The Kannada author's discussion of whether the reading is "ā-dṛ" or "āḍṛ..." and of the taparaḥ in "tatkālasya" is crowded and given here only in outline: since ā is said with tapara, only the ā, and not the long forms, is taken; pr + i; the kit-ness already follows from the liṭ-likeness (āsaṃyogāl liṭ kit, Pā. 1-2-5 as read), but ki/kin is made separately so that ṛcchatyṛtām (Pā. 7-2-11 [? the bhāṣya's number, "7-4-11", differs]) — the guṇa otherwise given before liṭ — does not apply. Udoṣṭhyapūrvasya (Pā. 7-1-102 as read) gives u for the ṛ of the aṅga preceded by a labial: pur; doubling; urat gives a for the reduplicative syllable: papur + i. The suffix is nit, so ñnityādir nityam (Pā. 6-1-197 as read) gives initial acute. || 4 ||

Translation: "O matavacasā, you whose praise-words are approved, O Nāsatyas, Āsvins: that Soma which is the ādārah, the impeller, of your (vām) minds (matīnām) — somasya, of the Soma — taṃ somaṃ pātaṃ, drink that Soma: you two drink. What kind of Soma? Dhṛṣṇuyā, of daring nature: that is, keen, by being the sole bringer of exhilaration."

19. The phrase "madaikaratvena" is crowded in the print, [?].

Pratipadārtha — "matavacasā — you whose praise-words are approved (by you); nāsatyā — O Aśvin gods; vām — of you two; matīnām — of the minds; ādāraḥ — that which awakens; dhṛṣṇuyā — that makes (you) full of vigour; somasya — the Soma juice; pātām — drink."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Aśvin gods, stotras are highly agreeable to you. Along with those who offer those stotras that are agreeable to you, drink the Soma juice, which awakens your minds and makes you full of vigour."

— "O Nasatyas, accept our praises and drink of the exhilarating Soma-juice, the animator of your mind."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 584 - ādāraḥ vām matīnām — "ḍṛñ ādare; ādārayatīty ādāraḥ; yuvayor matīnām prerakaḥ somaḥ: the Soma juice that stimulates or expands your intellect." - matavacasā — "matam abhimataṁ stotrarūpaṁ vaco yayos tau; abhimatastotrau: the stotras that we make are agreeable to you, that is, approved; so, 'you who have accepted, who are pleased with, my stotras'." - dhṛṣṇuyā — "dharṣaṇaśīlam: the Soma juice that stimulates the intellect, produces intoxication, makes the intellect expand and become sharp."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁰ - ādāraḥ: root ḍṛñ ādare [as printed]; "ādārayati iti ādāraḥ"; dārajārau kartari ṇiluk ca (Pā. 3-3-20 vārttika, as read "3-3-20-1" [?]): here, by the word dāra, both the root ḍṛñ and the root dṛ are taken, as is seen; if dṛ vidāraṇe is meant, "dārayanti iti dārāḥ", those who melt the mind — and "wife" is the denoted sense of this word [sic, as printed]. Thāthaghañktājabitrakāṇām (Pā. 6-2-144 as read [?]) gives the last member the end-acute. - matīnām: nām is acute by

nāmanyatarasyām. - matavacasā: "matam = approved, vacaḥ = words in the form of praise, of whom they are"; the vocative dual's ending ā by supām suluk... (Pā. 7-1-39 as read). - pātam: root pā pāne, loṭ, [the print states "second person, plural, tha-suffix"; the form is evidently the dual, thas, as printed tam]; loṭo laṇvat gives laṇ-likeness; tasthasthamipām tāmṭamṭāmaḥ (Pā. 3-4-101 as read) gives tam; bahulam chandasi (Pā. 2-4-73 as read) drops the śap; now no suffix beginning with ś follows, so the piba-substitution by pāghrādhmā... (Pā. 7-3-78 as read) does not come. - somasya: kriyāgrahaṇam kartavyam — the soma is a recipient (sampradāna), so the genitive stands for the dative. - dhṛṣṇuyā: supām suluk...: yāc is substituted for the genitive singular ending [as the Kannada says; "genitive" here is as printed]. || 5 ||

causative (ṇic) in the aorist (luṇi), caṇi, the ṇi dropped; shortening of the penultimate, doubling, the remaining initial consonant, behaviour as in the desiderative, the i, lengthening; the aṭ does not come, even without mā, by the saying 'bahulaṃ chandasi...'; the abhyāsa gets the acute by exchange; no all-unaccented, by yadvṛttān nityam. Asme: śe in place of the dative plural. Rāsāthām: root rā dāne; in a Vedic prayer the aorist with the ātmanepada by exchange; sic for cli; no iṭ because the root has one vowel; no aṭ as before."

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Aśvin gods; jyotiṣmatī — endowed with light of savour and vigour; yā — which (food); tamaḥ — the darkness in the form of poverty; tiraḥ — destroying; naḥ — us; pīparat — satisfies; tām iṣam — that food; asme — to us; rāsāthām — give (you two)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Aśvin gods, give us the food that is endowed with light — that is, savoury, vigorous and nourishing — which destroys the darkness of our poverty, gives us vigour, brilliance and other powers, shows (us) the light, and satisfies us."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 587)

— "O Aswins, grant us that invigorating food that shall place us beyond the darkness (of poverty) thereby satisfying us"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 587 - pīparat — "pṛ pālanapūraṇayoḥ: 'to fill, to satisfy': this is the sense of the root pṛ. Hence 'yā naḥ pīparat tām iṣam', the food that gives us satisfaction, is meant." - jyotiṣmatī tamas tiraḥ — "here the word jyotiṣmatī is an adjective of the word yā. 'Shining food' means excellent, nourishing, savoury food. Tamas tiraḥ: to make the darkness disappear; the ṛṣi has given the figure that the darkness called poverty or hunger is to be driven away by the light that is excellent food." - rāsāthām — "rā dāne: rāsāthām means: O Aśvin gods, both of you give."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁴ - pīparat: root pṛ pālanapūraṇayoh, ṇic, luṇ; ṇisridrusrubhyaḥ kartari caṇ (Pā. 3-1-48 as read) — णिश्रिद्रुसुभ्यः कर्तरि चङ् — caṇ for cli; ṇer aniṭi (Pā. 6-4-51 as read) drops the ṇi before an ārdhadhātuka without iṭ; aco ṇṇiti (Pā. 7-2-115 as read) vṛddhi: pā + a + luṇ; ṇau caṇy upadhāyā hrasvaḥ (Pā. 7-4-1 as read) shortens the penultimate: par; caṇi (Pā. 6-1-11 as read) doubling of the first one-vowel part of the root: par + par + a + t; itaś ca (Pā. 3-4-100 as read) drops the final i of tip; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ drops the r of the reduplicative syllable; sanvallahuni caṇpare 'nagloṣe (Pā. 7-4-93 as read) — the reduplicative syllable behaves as in the desiderative (the Kannada author explains at length how "aṅgasya" is carried over; crowded, outlined only); sanyataḥ (Pā. 7-4-79 as read) gives i for the a of the reduplicative syllable; dīrgho laghoḥ (Pā. 7-4-94 as read) lengthens it: pī + par + a + t; bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi (Pā. 6-4-75 as read) forbids the aṭ; caṇy anyatarasyām (Pā. 6-1-218 as read [?]) — the upottama a of the root should be optionally acute, but by exchange the abhyāsa gets the acute (vyatyayo bahulam); yadvṛttān nityam forbids the all-unaccented. - asme: the dative plural ending is replaced by śe by supām suluk.... - rāsāthām: root rā dāne; in the sense of prayer, luṇ by Vedic usage; the ātmanepada by exchange; second person dual, āthām; cleḥ sic; ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt (Pā. 7-2-10 as read) forbids iṭ; the aṭ is forbidden as before; tiṇ atinaḥ gives the all-unaccented. || 6 ||

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Áśvin gods; matīnām — of the praises (as vast as the sea); pārāya gantave — in order to go to the farther shore; nāvā — in the form of a boat; naḥ — facing us; āyātam — come graciously; ratham — your chariot; yuñjāthām — join with the horses."

— "O Áśvin gods, in the form of a boat, fit for crossing the ocean of stotras vast as the sea, come facing us; and, to come down from above to the earth, harness your horses to the chariot."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 589)

— "O Aswins, come as a ship to bear us over the ocean of praises ; harness your car."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśaya, singular in the print), pp.

— "The sense of this ṛk does not fit properly. 'O Áśvin gods, to reach the shore — the end — of the sea of the stotras that we are making; that is, [come so that] you hear our stotras; hearing them and being satisfied, make your chariot ready to come near us': this may be the chief idea."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁷ - nāvā: after the word nau, the instrumental singular suffix ṭā; eco 'yavāyāvaḥ (Pā. 6-1-78 as read) gives āv for the o; sāvekācaḥ... — the case-ending is acute. - gantave: root gam gatau; tumarthe sesenasase... gives the suffix tavenū; gam + tave; naś chapadāntasya jhali (Pā. 8-3-24 as read) gives the anusvāra for m; anusvārasya yayi parasavarṇaḥ (Pā. 8-4-58 as read) the homogeneous nasal; the nit suffix gives the initial acute. - yuñjāthām: root yujir yoge, loṭ, ātmanepada, second person dual āthām; rudhādibhyaḥ śnam; yunaj + āthām; śnasor allopaḥ (Pā. 6-4-111 as read) drops the a of the śna suffix; the substitute-treatment (sthānivadbhāva) of the dropped a is

28. The Uṇādi rule-name and the two numbers marked [?] are crowded; the form of the liṭ rule is partly legible only.

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśaya), pp. 591–592 - aritram — "ṛ gatau: a thing that is a means for going. Since the word sindhūnām, 'of the seas', is here, a thing for moving on the sea is meant — a boat." - divaspr̥thu — "dyulokād api vistīrṇam: wider than heaven, very vast; that is, very big." - tīrthe — "avataraṇapradeśe: a place of crossing; the shore of the sea." - dhiyā — "karmaṇā: by work. Dhiyā yuyujra indavaḥ: the Soma juices have been joined with the rites of the sacrifice, etc.; that is, in this sacrificial rite that we are performing, the Soma juices have been made ready to be offered to you." - The Kannada author adds: "In this ṛk, because the case-endings are not in order, and also because they are as they are, the sense does not fit properly without supplying some words (adhyāhāra)."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ²⁹ - aritram: root ṛ gatau; artilūdhusūkhanasahacara itraḥ (Uṇ. 3-2-18[?] as read [?]) — the suffix itra; guṇa; the suffix-accent. - divaḥ: ūḍidampadādyap... — the case-ending is acute. - tīrthe: root tīr plavanataraṇayoh; the Uṇādi rule pātrytūdivacirici-sicibhyaḥ thak (as printed, crowded, [?]) gives the suffix thak; kr̥iti ca forbids guṇa; ṛta iddhātoḥ (Pā. 7-1-100 as read) gives ir (i with repha); hali ca lengthens. - yuyujre: root yuj, liṭ, jha; liṭas tajhayor eśirec gives irec for jha; doubling; irayo re (Pā. 6-4-76 as read) — in the Chandas re replaces ire: re for irec; tiñ atīṇaḥ gives the all-unaccented. || 8 ||

Translation: "O kaṇvāsaḥ, O sons of Kaṇva; or, O wise priests: ask the Aśvins thus (the words 'ask' being understood). How? That is told. Divāḥ, from the heaven-world, indavaḥ, the Sun's rays have appeared. Sindhūnām pade, in the place of the waters — which are of the nature of flowing as rain — that is, in the atmosphere, vasu, the light of the time of dawn, the cause of our dwelling and so on, has appeared (so the sentence is completed). At this moment, svaṃ vavrim, your own form, kuha dhitsathaḥ, where do you wish to place it? Where do you wish to set it? The sense is: it is to be shown, coming here."

Pratipadārtha — "kaṇvāsaḥ — O sons of Kaṇva, or wise priests (ask the Aśvins thus); divāḥ — from the heaven-world; indavaḥ — the rays of the Sun (have appeared); sindhūnām — of the waters; pade — in the place, in the atmosphere; vasu — the light of the time of dawn (the cause of our dwelling) (has appeared); svaṃ vavrim — your own form; kuha — where; dhitsathaḥ — do you wish to place? (come graciously and let us see it)."

Bhāvārtha

— "O sages of the line of Kaṇva (or wise priests), ask the Aśvin gods thus: 'How have the rays of the Sun arisen and gone forth from heaven? How does the dawn become visible in the atmosphere beyond the sea? Where have you set your form?', that is, 'Where can we see you?'"

English Translation (the source's own, p. 594)

— "O Kanwas, ask this of the Aswins—How do the rays of the Sun proceed from the sky ? How does the dawn rise on the waters beyond the horizon ? where do you desire to make your own appearance ?"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu), p. 594

— "The sense of this ṛk does not fit properly. Each one interprets this ṛk in a different way. The commentator's sense indicates one kind of idea; it is not clear whether this is the intention of the ṛṣi."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁰ - kuha: vā ha ca chandasi (Pā. 5-3-13 as read [?]) — वा ह च छन्दसि — in the Chandas the suffix ha after the word kim in the locative sense; kṛttaddhitasamāsāś ca (Pā. 1-2-46 as read) gives the taddhita-ending word the name prātipadika; supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ (Pā. 2-4-71 as read) drops the locative ending; kim + ha; prāgdiśo vibhaktiḥ (Pā. 5-3-1 as read) — the suffixes enjoined from here up to diśaśabdebhyaḥ... (Pā. 5-3-27 as read) are given the name vibhakti; kutiho (Pā. 7-2-104 as read) — ku for kim before a t- or h-beginning vibhakti: kuha. If ha were stated as an independent suffix, the suffix-accent would come and the end would be acute; so the Kannada author holds that saptamyās tral (Pā. 5-3-10 as read) gives tral, and ha is substituted for it, and that vā ha ca chandasi means "in the Chandas, after kim, ha replaces tral"; then by lititi the letter before the suffix is acute, the rest unaccented, and by udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ (Pā. 8-4-66 as read) the suffix is svarita. - dhitsathaḥ: root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; dhātoḥ karmaṇaḥ samānakartṛkād icchāyām vā (Pā. 3-1-7 as read) gives san; sanyaṇoḥ (Pā. 6-1-9 as read) doubling; dhā + dhā + sa; sani mīmāghurabhalabhaśakapatapadām aca is (Pā. 7-4-54 as read) — सनि मीमाघुरभलभशकपतपदामच इस् — before a san beginning with s, the vowel of these roots is replaced by is; so the ā of the latter part becomes is; atra lopo 'bhyāsasya (Pā. 7-4-58 as read) drops the reduplicative syllable: dhis + sa; saḥ syārdhadhātuke (Pā. 7-4-49 as read) — a t for the s before an ārdhadhātuka beginning with s: dhitsa; laṭ, second person dual thas, śap, pararūpa, ru, visarga: dhitsathaḥ. || 9 ||

Translation: "Bhā, the splendour of the Sun, aṃśave, for the production of the rays of the time of dawn, abhūt, has come into being, has appeared. And the Sun, hiraṇyaṃ prati, in his own rising, has become like gold. And Agni, asitaḥ, (become) dark when the Sun entered his own splendour, having himself become black, vyakhyat, has lit up, jihvayā, with his own flame. So this is the time of your coming, O Aśvins, is the sense. Abhūt: guṇa is forbidden by bhūsuvoṣaḥ. Hiraṇyaṃ prati: prati in the sense of 'representing' or 'returning' (Pā. 1-4-92 [?]) has the name karmapravacanīya; the accusative where a karmapravacanīya is joined (Pā. 2-3-8 [?]). Akhyat: root cakṣiṇ vyaktāyāṃ vācī; in the aorist khyāñ is substituted for cakṣiṇ." ³²

Pratipadārtha — "bhā u — the brilliance of the Sun; aṃśave — in order to make the dawn bright; abhūdu — has appeared; sūryaḥ — the god Sun; hiraṇyaṃ prati — (by the light of his time of rising) like gold; asitaḥ — (before the Sun's radiance) the dimmed Agni; jihvayā — with the (dim) flame; vyakhyat — lit up. (As this is the proper time for your coming, O Aśvin gods, come too.)"

Bhāvārtha

— "O Aśvin gods, for making bright the dawn, delightful to the world, the brilliance of the Sun has appeared. The Sun has become, by the radiance of his time of rising, delightful, like gold.

³¹. The numeral closing the bhāṣya is printed so that it reads like "34" — crowded or a slip for "10" [?]; the Rik is the tenth, as the Saṃhitā and Pada numerals show.

³³. from p. 596

The flame of the fire that shone all night has also become dim before the Sun's brilliance. Since the time of the rising of such a radiant Sun is also the time of your coming, come graciously."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 596)

— "There was just enough light to make the dawn visible ; then the Sun rose like gold ; the fire shone with darkened flames."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 596 - "Although the sense of this ṛk is clear, some words have to be supplied for the sense to fit properly." - hiranyaṃ prati — "since at the time of the Sun's rising his light has a slight reddish tinge, it is usual to compare the radiance of the Sun at that time to the light of gold." - jihvayā asitaḥ — "sita means white or shining; asitaḥ means not shining, dim. Jihvayā: by the tongue, that is, by the tongues of Agni, which are the flames. Here the idea is that Agni shone with dim flames — that is, before the Sun's light the light of Agni became dim."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁴ - abhūt: root bhū sattāyām, luṅ, cli; cleḥ sic; the aṭ augment; abhū + s + luṅ; tip; itaś ca drops the i; gātisthāghupābhūbhyaḥ sicaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. 2-4-77 as read) — गतिस्थाघुपाभूभ्यः सिचः परस्मैपदेषु — luk of the sic; bhūsuvos tiṇi (Pā. 7-3-88 as read) — भूसुवोस्तिङि — guṇa is forbidden for bhū and sū when a tiṇ with the name sārvadhātuka follows. - hiranyaṃ prati: pratiḥ pratinidhipratidānayoḥ (Pā. 1-4-92 as read) — प्रतिः प्रतिनिधिप्रतिदानयोः — pratinidhi means "like"; pratidāna means giving back what was given; in these senses prati has the name karmapravacanīya; karmapravacanīyayukte dvitīyā (Pā. 2-3-8 as read) — the accusative. - akhyat: root cakṣiṇ vyaktāyām vāci, luṅ, cli; cakṣiṇaḥ khyāñ (Pā. 2-4-54 as read) — चक्षिडः ख्याञ् — khyāñ is substituted for cakṣiṇ before an ārdhadhātuka suffix; being ñit (the ñ is a marker) both parasmaipada and ātmanepada may come by svaritañitaḥ...; here parasmaipada, tip, the i dropped; the aṭ augment; akhyā + cli + t; asyativaktikhyātibhyo 'n (Pā. 3-1-52 as read) — अस्यतिवक्तिख्यातिभ्योऽङ् — aṅ for cli; āto lopa iṭi ca (Pā. 6-4-64 as read) drops the ā: akhyat; tiṅ atināḥ gives the all-unaccented.

Translation: "Ṛtasya, for the Sun pāram etave, to go to the far side — to the mountain of rising which lies beyond the night — panthāḥ, the path, the road, sādhuyā, has become proper, fit; it is just ready. Divah srutiḥ, the spreading radiance of the Sun, whose nature is to shine, vyadarśi, has been specially seen. Therefore you, Ásvins, are to come. Etave: root iṇ gatau; the suffix tavenū by tumarthe sesen.... Sādhuyā: yāc for the case-ending by supām suluk. Adarśi: passive aorist; ciṇ for cli; the luk of ciṇ drops the ta. Srutiḥ: root sru gatau; ktic by ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām."

Pratipadārtha — "ṛtasya — for the Sun; pāram — the end of the night, the mountain of rising; etave — to go and reach; panthāḥ — the path; sādhuyā — in a fit manner; abhūdu — has been made; divah — of the Sun, whose self is splendour; srutiḥ — the spreading radiance; vi adarśi — has become clearly visible. (Therefore, Ásvin gods, come too.)"

Bhāvārtha

— "O Ásvin gods, the night, with its darkness, has come to an end. The path of the Sun to reach the mountain of rising, which lies at the end of it, is in order. The radiance of the Sun, whose nature is to spread across the world, is clearly seen. Since this is the right time for your coming too, come graciously."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 598)

— "A fit path was made for the sun to go at the end of the night (in the morning); the radiance of the sun became visible."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 598 - ṛtasya — "sūryasya: since he moves in the atmosphere, ṛtasya means 'of the Sun'." - sādhuyā — "fit, favourable for moving." - srutiḥ — "sru gatau: since it spreads on all sides, srutiḥ means brilliance, radiance, light."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁵ - etave: tumarthe sesenasase... gives the suffix tavenū after the root iṇ gatau; guṇa; being nit, the initial acute. - sādhuyā: after the word sādhū the nominative singular su; for it yāc by supāṃ suluk.... - adarśi: root ḍṛśir prekṣaṇe, passive luṇ, cli; bhāvakarmaṇoḥ (Pā. 1-3-13 as read) gives the suffix ta; ḍṛś + cli + ta; ciṇ bhāvakarmaṇoḥ (Pā. 3-1-66 as read) — चिण् भावकर्मणोः — when ta, in the abstract or passive sense, follows, ciṇ replaces cli; the aṭ augment; a + ḍṛś + i + ta; ciṇo luk (Pā. 6-4-104 as read) drops ta, which stands after ciṇ; the guṇa of the light penultimate. - srutiḥ: root sru gatau; ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām (Pā. 3-3-174 as read) gives the suffix ktic; kniti ca forbids guṇa; the suffix is cit, so by citaḥ (Pā. 6-1-163 as read) the end is acute. | | 11 | |

Translation: "Jaritā, the praiser, of the Aśvins' (concerned): tat-tad it, every one of the things done again and again, every protection towards us, prati bhūṣati, adorns one by one — that is, praises each time. What kind of Aśvins? Made somasya pipratoḥ: when joy is the occasion, filling (drinking) the Soma. Bhūṣati: root bhūṣa alaṃkāre, of the bhvādi class. Pipratoḥ: root pṛ pālanapūraṇayoḥ (some read pṛ); śatr after laṭ; ślu for śap; doubling, a for ṛ, the remaining initial consonant; i for the abhyāsa; because śatr is jī, guṇa is absent and yaṇ comes; the initial acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ."

Pratipadārtha — "made — in the state that gives joy; somasya — of the Soma juice; pipratoḥ — satisfied by filling (drinking); aśvinoḥ — of the Aśvin gods; tat-tad it avah — (their) every protection, granted at every step; jaritā — the devoted praiser; prati bhūṣati — adorns each (that is, praises each time with gratitude)."

Bhāvārtha

— "The sacrificer who praises the Aśvin gods, who drink Soma for the sake of joy, praises with gratitude, at every step, each protection they grant from time to time."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 600)

— "The worshipper glorifies every protection extended to him by the Aswins who are exhilarated [sic] with the drinking of Soma."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 600 - bhūṣati — "bhūṣa alaṃkaraṇe: he adorns, that is, he praises; he remembers with gratitude." - made somasya pipratoḥ — "the Aśvin gods who have drunk the Soma juice well (fully) because it gives delight to the mind."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁹ - bhūṣati: root bhūṣa alaṃkāre (class 1); laṭ, tip, śap; bhūṣati; all-unaccented. - pipratoḥ: root pṛ pālanapūraṇayoḥ — here some read the root as ending in a short r (pṛ); in the view of Pāṇini's school the root pṛ takes the Vedic shortening; laṭ; laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau gives śatṛ; juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ gives ślu; doubling after ślu; urat (Pā. 7-4-66 as read) gives a for the r of the reduplicative syllable, with raparatva; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ drops the r of the reduplicative syllable: pa + pṛ + at; artipipartyoś ca (Pā. 7-4-77 as read) gives i for the a of the reduplicative syllable: pipṛ + at; had the root been pṛ with the long r, udoṣṭhyapūrvasya (Pā. 7-1-102 as read) would have required u for the latter part; sārvadhātukam apit (Pā. 1-2-4 as read) makes śatṛ

38. The print has "śvinoḥ" for "aśvinoḥ" and "asyāvo" where the sense wants "aśvinor avo"; both kept as read, [?]. The root is printed "pyā" with the remark "pṛ, say some".

39. pp. 600–601 — grammar pages, noted briefly

Translation: "O śaṃbhū, producers of happiness, O Aśvins: manuṣvat, as with Manu, vivasvati, in the sacrificer who attends (on you) — dwelling (vavasānā), by nature dwellers, you — somasya pītyā, for the drinking of Soma, and girā, for the praise: ā gatam, come. Vavasānā: root vasa nivāse; cānaś in the sense of habit, age or capacity (Pā. 3-2-129); śap → ślu; doubling; the lengthening of the reduplicative syllable in the Saṃhitā by anyeṣām api dṛśyate; ā for the dual ending; the end-acute because the suffix is cit. Pītyā: root pā pāne; ktin in the abstract sense; i by ghumāsthā...; the end-acute by exchange; in the instrumental singular the yaṇ, and the case-ending acute by udāttayaṇo hal pūrvāt. Manuṣvat: root mana jñāne; 'he who thinks, knows' is manuḥ; the Uṇādi suffix usi by the word 'variously'; vati in the locative sense by tatra tasyeva; the suffix-accent. Gatam: loṭ of gam; śap dropped; the nasal dropped by anudāttopadeśa...."

Pratipadārtha — "śaṃbhū — O Ásvin gods who produce happiness; manuṣvat — as with Manu; vivasvati — (with him) in the sacrificer who serves you; vavasānā — you whose nature is to dwell; somasya — of the Soma juice; pītyā — for drinking; girā — for accepting praise; ā gatam — come graciously."

— "O Ásvin gods, who give happiness to the sacrificer and wish to dwell with him who serves you, just as you went to Manu, come here too, both to drink the Soma and to accept the stotras that we make."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 602)

— "Beneficient [sic] Aswins, co-dwellers with your worshipper as with Manu, come hither to drink of the soma-juice and accept our praise."

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu), p. 602 - vavasānā — "vasa nivāse; nivāsaśīlau: dwellers; those who are in the neighbourhood of the sacrificer for his protection." - vivasvati — "locative singular: in the sacrificer who serves you, that is, in the house of the sacrificer, or near him." - girā — "in order to hear words in the form of praise." - manuṣvat — "like Manu: you were with Manu, drank Soma at his sacrifice and heard his stotras; in the same way come here also, drink the Soma and accept the stotras: this is the idea."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴¹ - vavasānā: root vasa nivāse; tācchīlyavayovacanaśaktiṣu cānaś (Pā. 3-2-129 as read) — ताच्छील्यवयोवचनशक्तिषु चानश् — tācchīlya is "habitual disposition"; cānaś after roots in the senses of habit, age and capacity; vas + āna; śap; bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 2-4-73 as read) gives ślu; doubling; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ drops the s of the reduplicative syllable; vavas + āna; anyeṣām api dṛśyate lengthens the first va: vāvasāna; the vocative

Translation: "O Aśvins, pariṣmanoh, going all round, yuvoh, of you both, śriyam anu, following the splendour that consists in your coming, eṣā uṣāḥ, this Uṣas, upācarat, let her come near: the goddess of the time of dawn, let her come here; the sense is that she comes after you two have come. 42. The words "yuvoh ... ṣaṣṭhīdvivacanādeśaḥ" and "nittyayānto" are crowded in the print and given as read, [?].

Pratipadārtha — "(aśvinā) — O Áśvin gods; parijmanoḥ — who move all around; yuvoḥ — of you two; śriyam anu — following the splendour (that consists in your coming); uṣāḥ — the goddess of the time of dawn; upācarat — let her come here (and you both too) [the parenthesis is crowded in the print, [?]]; aktubhiḥ — in the times of night; ṛtā — the oblations of the sacrifice; vanathaḥ — you desire and enjoy."

— "O Áśvin gods, you move about all over the world. Following the splendour that consists in the coming of you two, let the goddess of the time of dawn come here. You two partake, in the times of night, of the oblations offered for you in the sacrifice."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 604) — "O Aswins, let Ushas follow the bright appearance of you who go round the universe and may you be pleased with the oblations offered by night." ⁴³

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viṣaya), p. 605 — "The main idea: O Áśvin gods, you have the capacity to move about everywhere. Your coming is before the time of dawn. The goddess Uṣas comes only after following you. After you have come, the time of dawn is reached. As you come it is still night with darkness; accept the oblations offered in such a night and be satisfied." - parijmanoḥ — "parito 'jato gacchata iti parijmānau: going all around; that is, those who go everywhere." - ṛtā — "yajñagatāni havīṃṣi: the oblations offered in the sacrifice." - vanathaḥ — "vana ṣaṇa saṃbhaktau: you obtain, you desire." - aktubhiḥ — "in the times of night: there is the Nirukta statement 'aktubhī rātribhiḥ' (Ni. 1[?]-2[?], as read)":

| अक्तुभी रात्रिभिः । (Ni. [?])

aktubhī rātribhiḥ | — editorial and tentative: "aktubhiḥ (means) by the nights."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁴ - yuvoḥ: after the word yuṣmad the genitive dual os; "supāṃ supo bhavanti" (as printed) — os for os; hence, the vibhakti beginning with a vowel after the substitution, yo 'ci (Pā. 7-2-89 as read [?]) — y for the final of yuṣmad and asmad — does not apply; śeṣe lopaḥ (Pā. 7-2-90 as read [?]) drops the part from ma on, and the remaining ad is dropped before a vowel-initial case-ending: yu + os; the Kannada author says the ā-y substitution is the cause of the other; ru, visarga; the vibhakti is acute by the udātta-nivṛtti svara; osi ca (Pā. 7-3-104 as read) is not applied in the Veda; ato guṇe, pararūpa; the single-substitute accent. - parijmanoḥ: śvann ukṣann paṣann plīhan kledan snehan mūrdhan majjann aryamann viśvapan parijman mātariśvan maghavann iti (Uṇ. 1-158 [?] as read) — the list of Uṇādi words: after the root aj, the suffix manin; the a is dropped by Vedic usage. - ṛtā: śe śchandasi bahulam (Pā. 7-1-39 [?]) — the śi drops (as printed). - vanathaḥ: root vana ṣaṇa saṃbhaktau; laṭ, second person dual thas; śap, ru, visarga; tiṅ atīṇaḥ gives the all-unaccented. || 14 ||

Translation: "In the Pravargya, at the forenoon offering of the gharma oblation, this ṛk 'ubhā pibatam' is the second yājyā; it is prescribed in the section 'athottaram': 'ubhā pibatam aśvineti...' (Āśv. 4-2 [?]). In the Āśvina-śāstra too this ṛk is the second yājyā; it is prescribed: 'pra vām andhāmṣi madyāny asthur ubhā pibatam aśvineti yājye' (Āśv. 6-5 [?]). O Aśvins, ubhā, both of you, pibatam, drink — take the Soma-drink. After that, ubhā, both of you, avidriyābhiḥ, with praiseworthy, ūtibhiḥ, protections, naḥ, to us, śarma, happiness, yacchatam, give."

Pratipadārtha — "aśvinā — O Aśvin gods; ubhā — both of you; pibatam — drink the Soma juice; (after that) ubhā — both of you; avidriyābhiḥ — with (blameless, hence) praiseworthy; ūtibhiḥ — with your protections; naḥ — to us; śarma — happiness; yacchatam — give."

Bhāvārtha

— "O Aśvin gods, both of you graciously drink the Soma juice. After that, with your protections that are free of fault and therefore praiseworthy, give us happiness (make us happy)."

English Translation (the source's own, p. 607)

— "O Aswins, drink you both (the soma libation) and bestow upon us happiness through your blameless protection"

Special Topics (viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ), p. 607 - "In the sacrifice called Pravargya, when the oblation called gharma is offered in the forenoon, this ṛk 'ubhā pibatam' is to be used as the second yājyā mantra: this is explained by the sūtra 'ubhā pibatam aśvineti cobhābhyām anavānam' [as printed, crowded, [?]] in the section 'athottaram' of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Ā. 4-2 [?]). And at the time of reciting the Āśvina-śāstra mantras this ṛk is again to be used as the second yājyā; this is said in the same Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'pra vām andhāṃsi madyāny asthur (Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-[?]-[?]) ubhā pibatam aśvineti yājye (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-46-15)" — Sanskrit as printed: प्र वामन्धांसि मद्यान्यस्थुः [?] — pra vām andhāṃsi madyāny asthuḥ — editorial and tentative: "your intoxicating juices have gone forth" [?]; the reference numerals are as read [?]. - avidriyābhiḥ ūtibhiḥ — "drā kutsāyāṃ gatau: vidri is censure; tadvirodhinī avidriḥ stutiḥ, the opposite of it, avidri, is praise; 'tām yānti iti avidriyāḥ', those that go to it: the meaning is 'things worthy of praise'. Avidriyābhiḥ means 'with protections that are in the form of praise or praiseworthy, excellent protections'."

45. The Āśvalāyana sūtra's wording "ubhā pibatam aśvineti cobhābhyām anavānam", the two Āśvalāyana numerals, and the two grammatical numbers marked [?] are crowded.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ⁴⁶ - pibatam: root pā pāne, loṭ, thaś replaced by tam; śap; pāghrādhmā... (Pā. 7-3-78 as read) gives piba for pā — thus piba + a + tam; because of the śap, pugantalaḥpādhasya ca (Pā. 7-3-86 as read) would give guṇa of the light penultimate; but aṅgavṛtte punarvṛttāv avidhir niṣṭhitasya (Paribhāṣā, number read "63" [?]; Kannada: "when one rule belonging to the aṅga-section has come and a form has been finished, another aṅga-section rule does not come again") — so the guṇa of the light penultimate does not come after the piba-substitution; or piba, a stem ending in a, is read in the sūtra as acute on the first syllable by nipātana; piba + a + tam; ato guṇe gives pararūpa: pibatam; tiṅ atinaḥ gives the all-unaccented. - yacchatam: root dāṇ dāne, loṭ, thaś → tam; śap; pāghrādhmā... gives yaccha for dā. - avidriyābhiḥ: root drā kutsāyāṃ gatau; with vi before it, the Uṇādi suffix ki in the abstract sense; vi + drā + i; āto lopa iti ca drops the ā: vidri, "censure"; na vidriḥ = avidriḥ, "praise, the opposite of censure"; "avidriyāḥ": those who go (yānti)

to praise, "worthy of praise"; root yā prāpaṇe; anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante gives vic; gatikārapapadāt kṛt gives the first member its natural accent. || 15 ||

Summary of Sūkta 46. Fifteen Riks to the Aśvins, the dawn-hymn of the Third Adhyāya, all written in full. Rik 1 praises the Aśvins as the beloved Uṣas first appears from the sky; Rik 2 praises them as beautiful sons of the sea, bringers of wealth and dwellings; Rik 3 sings praises as their chariot goes above the heaven; Rik 4 invokes the Sun, who dries the waters and nourishes the gods with the oblation, beholder of the rite; Rik 5 asks them to drink the exhilarating Soma; Rik 6 asks for food that carries men beyond the darkness of poverty; Rik 7 asks them to come as a boat across the ocean of praises and to harness their chariot; Rik 8 says their vessel stands at the shore of the seas, the chariot on the land, the Soma ready; Rik 9 (as the source says, hard to fit) asks where they will show themselves, as the sun's rays proceed from the sky; Rik 10 describes the dawn-light, the Sun rising like gold and Agni's flames growing dim; Rik 11 says the Sun's path is made ready and his radiance seen; Rik 12 says the worshipper praises each of the Aśvins' protections; Rik 13 invites them, as to Manu, to drink the Soma and accept the praise; Rik 14 asks Uṣas

48. Mine, tentative: "Whatever may be fallen from letter or word, or wanting in measure — may all that be forgiven, O God, Lord of Speech; homage to you. May it be well. Auspiciousness."

49. That is the last page of the PDF: printed p. 608 = PDF 622, as the offset PDF – 14 predicts. The volume contains nothing after the colophon, so no index, errata or further pages were found.

to follow them and them to enjoy the oblations of the night; Rik 15 asks them both to drink and to give happiness by blameless protection. The doubtful parts are the many reference numerals (all "as read [?]", the crowded grammar passages (characterized only), the root-name jūṣ [?] in Riks 3–4, and the source's own remarks that the sense of Riks 7–9 does not fit well.

Collected Notes

Every translator's note and editorial remark of this volume, gathered by Sūkta and Rik.

The Third Adhyāya of the First Aṣṭaka

1. Read letter by letter from the Kannada-script print; the verses are the standard ones that open each part, and the reading here is consistent with the same opening in the earlier volumes.
2. printed in Kannada script; read from the 150-dpi image
3. Reading notes: the printed words "ऋषिश्चान्यस्मादिति]" and "सोममेतायामेति" are what the Kannada letters give; the word read "पञ्चदशर्चम्" is partly obscured. The form "atimūrtinā" is as in the Kannada anuvāda below, which also names the sūtra "Gosavavivadhau paśukāma indrasomam etāyām iti madhyandinaḥ". The numerals "6-8" after "ā." are small and uncertain.

Sūkta 33

1. In the line "sūktadalliruva ṛksaṅkhye" the Kannada word "sūktadalliruva" is normalised from the print's "sūktadalliruva ṛksaṅkhye"; the line is Kannada, not Sanskrit.
2. printed with accent marks, in Kannada script; the accents are not reproduced here, as in Volumes 2–3 — the Kannada notation could not be converted reliably
3. Reading note: the print divides the words with underline marks as "ṛte-yāmo-pa gavyantaḥ"-style; The first word is read as printed "etāyāma upa" run together, "etāyāmopa". The last word is printed split over two lines as "paramāva-rjate"; read "param āvarjate". Sandhi in "gavyanta indram" is as printed.
4. provisional rendering, to be replaced by the Pada, the bhāṣya and the source's own English, which follow on the next pages
5. printed with accent-marks, not reproduced

6. The print has "ವವ್ಯಧಾತಿ" with the vowel-sign of the Pada; the compounds are marked with the avagraha-like sign "s" in the transcription for pramatiṃ and ā-varjate, where the print shows a small separating mark.
7. Kannada script converted letter by letter
8. pp. 3–4, characterized rather than transcribed, as the convention directs for dense accent-and-sandhi argument; named words and the sūtras that could be read are given
9. The "iti nighāta-pratiṣedhaḥ" citation could not be read beyond these opening words.
10. Kannada; translated
11. p. 5, grammar page — noted briefly
12. accents not reproduced
13. the line "arkyaiḥ" was checked on an enlarged slice at 300 dpi: the print reads arkyaiḥ, with a y; the bhāṣya below writes the word as arkaiḥ — recorded as printed
14. p. 10, grammar page — noted briefly
15. pp. 12–13, characterized, not transcribed
16. p. 14, grammar page — noted briefly
17. accents not reproduced; the last word is divided across two lines in the print: prēti-mīyuh
18. Reading note: the Saṃhitā text of the second line is read as printed — viṣuṇak te — the second word being a single printed unit "ವಿಷುಣಕ್ತೇ"; the Pada on the next page will show how the print divides it. The Saṃhitā is not completed with the Pada here; Rik 4's Pada, bhāṣya and the rest follow from p. 17 and are not yet written.
19. the print's first half is given in full; the grammatical tail is characterized below
20. pp. 17–18, characterized
21. The translations are editorial and tentative: the source leaves these two ṛks untranslated, and the second verse's second line is dense.
22. p. 20, grammar page — noted briefly
23. accents not reproduced; the Pada's yajvabhiḥ is read for the Saṃhitā's printed word, which is small and could be read yajñabhiḥ

26. the entry continues on p. 25
27. pp. 27–28, characterized; the print is crowded and the small numerals were not pursued
28. The source leaves these six half-verses untranslated. My glosses, editorial and tentative: 1. "[the aid] by which Navagva Dadhyañc opens [?], by which the inspired ones obtained [?]." 2. "The Navagva and the Daśagva, most Aṅgīrasa-like, rejoice together among the gods." 3. "O mighty Indra, with the swift ones [?] you split the phaliga [?], with a roar, [your] strength, with the Daśagvas." 4. "Where the friend [Indra], with his friends the Navagvas, [following] the cows with the brave [?] went after them." 5. "Our fathers the Aṅgīrasas, the Navagvas, the Atharvans, the Bhṛguḥ, worthy of soma." 6. "[That aid] by which, O wealthy [dawn], you shone richly on Navagva, Aṅgīras, Daśagva, Saptāśya." The reference numbers were read from small Kannada numerals and are all uncertain.

39. the first line only, at the foot of p. 42; the rest on p. 43 is not yet written
40. the first line was given at the foot of p. 42
41. The Pada's last word is printed with a dh — "adhuḥṣat" — while the Saṃhitā prints "aduḥṣat"; the bhāṣya explains this below as a Vedic non-application of the bhaṣ substitution in the Saṃhitā.
42. p. 43, characterized
43. Printed so, including "productions" [sic] and the full stop after it.
44. the Kannada gloss differs from the bhāṣya's; reported as printed
45. pp. 44–46, grammar pages — noted briefly
46. p. 47, characterized

47. The source leaves these five half-verses untranslated and ends the list "ityādi" — "and so on". My glosses, editorial and tentative: 1. "with a concordant mind, ... he makes him a friend in the battles"; 2. "with us, O Indra, with [your] friends, ... in concord, sit down and rejoice"; 3. "for you two have made a good name ..., and you are slayers of Vṛtra, in concord"; 4. [too uncertain to gloss]; 5. "the two in concord, to go, ... as on a fine day ... you drive on". All five references are read from small Kannada numerals and are uncertain; several words in nos. 3–5 are also uncertain.
48. pp. 49–50, grammar pages — noted briefly
49. accents not reproduced; the print gives the śṛṇi- syllable with a faint conjunct that is read as śṛṇgiṇam
50. p. 52, characterized
51. The print's last word reads "iliviśaḥ", with a v; reported as printed.

ardayo vāvṛdhāno dive-dive || (ṛ. saṃ. 8-53-2 [?])

65. The source leaves all the ṛks above untranslated. My glosses, editorial and tentative: 10.49.4 "I, like a father, for his desire, subdued for Kutsa the Vetāsus, Tugra and Smadibha"; 1.51.6 "you, O Indra, protected Kutsa in the killings of Śuṣṇa, and subdued Śambara for Atithigva"; 6.26.3 "you urged on the poet in the winning of the [shining] prize, you drove Śuṣṇa [away] for Kutsa who gave [offerings]". The others are left unglossed. All numerals are read from small Kannada digits and are uncertain.

66. Reading note: the line "śvitryaṃ" is printed with the conjunct chv-; chvitryaṃ is read, i.e. śvitryaṃ after the -ñ, and the final word of the second line as vedanākaḥ, as printed. The Pada, bhāṣya and the rest follow from p. 67 and are not yet written.

13. Glosses editorial and tentative; the second is doubtful.

14. p. 78, PDF 92 — grammar page, noted briefly; begun here, to continue on p. 79

15. first line only, at the foot of p. 80; accents not reproduced; the second line is on p. 81 and is not yet written

16. Reading note, written after viewing the Pada on p. 81: the Saṃhitā prints "trirv-aśvinā"; the Pada divides this as triḥ | ūṃ iti | aśvinā, so trir v aśvinā is the particle ū joined to aśvinā by sandhi.

17. p. 82, characterized; the print is crowded and the numerals were not pursued

18. The source's Kannada: 'Sītā, the daughter of Savitṛ (the Sun), desired — was pleased with — King Soma'; the reference is not given in the print here.

19. The source leaves these untranslated. My gloss, editorial and tentative: "Agni was the leader of the wooers of Sūryā [the second half-verse: 'Soma was the one who desired the bride; the two Aśvins were both the wooers; when Savitr gave Sūryā, who was praising [?] her husband, with the mind']". The numerals are read from small Kannada digits and are uncertain.

20. Translation editorial, from the Sanskrit; the source gives it in a Kannada paraphrase as above.

25. no full stop in the print
26. Translation of the ṛk editorial and tentative: "From her the oceans flow forth, by it the four quarters live; thence flows the imperishable [water], and by that all the world lives". The reference numerals are read from small Kannada digits and are [?].
27. p. 91, PDF 105 — grammar page, noted briefly; begun, to continue on p. 92
28. p. 94, characterized
29. The source leaves these ṛks untranslated. My glosses, editorial and tentative: 1. "O Nāsatyas, the Sun's daughter chose your chariot, with [her] splendour"; 2. "The maiden, the Sun's daughter, rejoicing, mounted your chariot here, O heroes"; 3. "When Sūryā mounted your swift-running chariot always". The reference numerals are read from small Kannada digits and are [?].
30. pp. 95–96, PDF 109–110 — grammar pages, noted briefly
31. p. 98, characterized; the print is crowded and the small numerals were not pursued
32. The source leaves the two ṛks untranslated; glosses, editorial and tentative: 1.154.4 "he who, as the one [god] with the threefold [support], upheld earth and heaven and all the worlds"; 1.157.1 "with which you go to the house of the pious, flying like a bird with wings, with the three-fold [chariot]". Both references, read from small Kannada digits, are [?], and the reading of the first ṛk's first word in the print is uncertain.
33. p. 100, PDF 114 — grammar page, noted briefly; begun, to continue on p. 101
34. the page breaks off mid-sentence; it continues on p. 101

35. Translation editorial and tentative: the verse is read from the print and its middle words are not fully secure.
36. Reading note: the print's phrase "kākṣyātrayayukte" is clear; "tvadīyāni" in the last sentence is as printed, though the sense is "their [the beings'] bodies".
37. p. 104, characterized
38. The English prints "the three distant worlds", where the Kannada gloss on p. 104–105 has "the three altars"; the difference is recorded as printed. The Special Topics below, on parāvataḥ, give "three distant worlds".
39. Translation of the Nirukta passage editorial and tentative; the Kannada paraphrase is rendered as printed. The reference numeral is [?].
40. Untranslated in the source. My glosses, editorial and tentative: 1. "with which [you go to] three distant [regions], all the shining [realms] of heaven"; 2. "come, over three distant [lands], come, over the five peoples"; 3. "those who from afar seek kinship, dear to Manu, the births of Vivasvat". All three references are read from small Kannada numerals and are [?].
41. p. 106, PDF 120 — grammar page, noted briefly; begun, to continue on p. 107
42. p. 109, characterized
43. Printed so, with "oblations is prepared" [sic].
44. Untranslated in the source; the gloss, editorial and tentative: "like [a stream] of a thousand streams they sounded together, in the vault of heaven, the honey-tongued, unfailing [?]".
45. My gloss, tentative: "protect us by days and nights, O Áśvins, with unharmed good fortunes"; "you go through heaven, the wide mid-region, measuring out days with nights". Both references are read from small Kannada numerals and are [?].
46. p. 111, PDF 125 — grammar page, noted briefly
47. This is the first of the two Triṣṭup ṛks of the sūkta, per the introduction on p. 71.
48. p. 113, characterized
49. Printed so, "siccifice" [sic], with a stray full stop after the question mark.
50. Page 115 continues the list:

51. The source leaves all these ṛks untranslated. My glosses, editorial and tentative: "we mount your wide [?] chariot, golden, O Dasras"; "with the three-seated, three-cornered, well-shaped chariot come, O Áśvins"; "the three-seated lord of bounty, of all good fortune, would bring us welfare for biped and quadruped"; "the chariot of you two that is three-seated, with golden reins, O Áśvins". The reference numerals are all in small Kannada digits and are [?] or not read; the second and the last-but-one quotations are the least secure.
52. The source leaves these untranslated. My glosses, editorial and tentative: "the ass, O Nāsatyas, won a thousand in the contest of Yama's [?] battle"; "your two spotted mares were yoked; the swift one [stood] at the yoke of the ass"; "where is the resting-place of the great chariot, the unyoking of the swift ass"; "yoke the ass to the chariot, strong-limbed, O possessors of virile wealth".

Sūkta 35

1. Kannada title line: "mūvattaidaneyā sūktavu"
2. The upper third of this leaf is the end of the grammar of Sūkta 34 Rik 12, already written above; the sūkta begins below the ornament.
3. printed in Kannada script; read from the 150-dpi image
4. The heading is thus consistent with the introduction if the first group is read "1, 9".
5. accents not reproduced
6. the first half in full, the grammatical tail characterized

21. the entry continues on p. 145, to be viewed next
22. Correction of a note above: the Special Topics of Rik 4 end on p. 144 with the entry taviṣīm dadhānaḥ — "making brightness by his own power" — the last line of that page; p. 145 opens directly with the grammar. The words "continues on p. 145" in the preceding paragraph were a premature remark.

23. p. 147, characterized; some of the quoted rule-names are crowded and are given as read, [?]

26. pp. 148–150, PDF 162–164 — grammar pages, noted briefly
27. Reading note, written after viewing the Pada: the Saṃhitā prints the nasalised "-āṁ" in "upasthāṁ"; the Pada's upa-sthā shows the base, the nasalisation being the Vedic rule noted in the grammar below. The last word is printed "cikētat" in the Saṃhitā and Pada alike.
28. p. 151, characterized; the print is crowded and several rule-names are only partly legible [?]
29. Printed so, with raised dots for full stops.
30. The grammar of Rik 6 follows on p. 153, to be viewed next.
31. Reading note: the print's word after "kam" in the next-to-last sentence is "myaloka", which could not be resolved — probably mṛtyuloka, "world of mortals", or dyuloka — and it is left as [?].
32. pp. 155–156, characterized; the print is crowded and several rule-names only partly legible [?]
33. Printed so, with a raised dot after "regions" and a stray semicolon-spacing; "directed (towards the earth)" is the source's own insertion.

45. Translation of the Nirukta quotation editorial and tentative.
46. Reading note, written after viewing the Pada on the same page: the Saṃhitā's "svavāṁ yātv arvāṁ" is the Pada's sva-vān | yātu | arvān joined by sandhi, with the Vedic nasalised āṁ before a vowel-initial word.
47. p. 169, characterized; the print is crowded and several rule-names only partly legible [?]
48. Printed so, with "Rukshasas" and a raised dot after "night".
49. begun; continued on p. 171
50. Untranslated in the source. My gloss, editorial and tentative: "O Jāṭavedas, kindled, iron-fanged, touch the yātudhānas with your flame"; "and in the mid-region too, O king, go round; set your jaws on the yātudhānas". The reference numerals are as read from small Kannada digits [?].) (The list of examples continues on p. 171, to be viewed next.
51. Mine and tentative: "here tell, O Agni, which one he is, the yātudhāna who does this"; "break his ribs with your heat, O Agni; cut the root of the yātudhāna in three ways". The reference numerals are as read from small Kannada digits and not secure [?].
52. The Saṃhitā's "sugebhī rakṣā" is the Pada's sugebhiḥ | rakṣa, with the visarga lost and the vowels lengthened by Vedic sandhi, as the grammar on p. 176 explains.

- 42. pp. 461–462 — grammar pages, noted briefly
- 43. pp. 463–464 — grammar pages, noted briefly
- 44. Numeral read as "42".
- 45. The 43rd sūкта thus begins at the foot of p. 464, not at p. 465 as the old contents table says.

Sūкта 43

- 1. large Kannada title line at the foot of p. 464: "nalavattamūraneya sūktavu"
- 2. printed in Kannada script; read from the 150-dpi images; it begins at the foot of p. 464 and ends at the top of p. 465
- 3. In the Anukramaṇikā quotation the word "ṛṭīyā" before "maitrāvaruṇī" is as read and is crowded; the anuvāda below gives the Mitra–Varuṇa ṛk as the one beginning yathā no mitra, which is Rik 5 [?].
- 4. Translation editorial; the Gṛhya-sūtra quotation is as printed, the names of its second and third verses are crowded [?].
- 5. The Rik numerals of the deity line are small: the print appears to read "1, 3, 4, 6" for Rudra, which would leave Rik 2 without a deity; "1, [2?], 4, 6" is given, doubtful [?]. The varga numerals are read with doubt.
- 6. accents not reproduced
- 7. The Saṃhitā prints kad, the Pada kat; the Saṃhitā's śantamam with n and the Pada's śam-tamam as printed.
- 8. The print of "tamupyayasmayādittvena" and "tuś chandasīti" is crowded and read with doubt [?]; the translation of that stretch is characterized below.
- 9. characterized
- 10. pp. 468–469 — grammar pages, noted briefly
- 11. Printed with the compound-suffix names crowded; drift only.
- 12. the grammatical tail ends with rudriyam at the foot of the page

13. Two doubtful readings: the Taittirīya references "4-5-1-1" and "1-8-6-1" are as read [?]; "ghor jñati" in the rule-name for paśve is crowded [?].
14. Printed "hymn" as "hymnn".
15. The source leaves both passages untranslated; the glosses are editorial and tentative; the reference numerals, small, are read with doubt [?]. The remainder of the Special Topics, if any, and the grammar of Rik 2 begin on p. 472 and are not yet written.
16. Correction to the heading of Sūkta 43 above (made now that Riks 3 and 5 have been read). The ṛk yathā no mitro varuṇaḥ (whose deity the anuvāda calls Mitra–Varuṇa) is Rik 3, not Rik 5; this agrees with the Anukramaṇikā's "tṛtīyā maitrāvaruṇī" (the third ṛk is Mitra–Varuṇa). So the deity line of the heading, which was given as "1, [2?], 4, 6 Rudra; 5 Mitra–Varuṇa", is to be read as Rudra for Riks 1, 2, 4, 5, 6; Mitra–Varuṇa for Rik 3; Soma for Riks 7–9. The numerals in the print's deity line remain small and doubtful [?]. The statement "Mitra–Varuṇa for Rik 5" in the earlier progress notes was a slip.

34. The bhāṣya, Pratipadārtha and the rest of Rik 8 begin on p. 488, not yet written.
35. from p. 488; the Saṃhitā and Pada are above
36. In the grammatical tail the form "ṛttvaṃ" in "bahulavacanād ikārasyāpy ṛttvaṃ" is as read, doubtful [?]; the sūtra number 7-1-4 is as read [?].
37. p. 489 — grammar page, noted briefly
38. accents not reproduced; Anuṣṭubh
39. The bhāṣya ends with two numerals, "|| 12 ||" and "|| 9 ||"; the second is the Rik number; the first (possibly a varga numeral) is not understood [?].
40. The source's heading for this English reads "Euglib Translation" — a misprint [sic].
41. p. 492 — grammar page, noted briefly
42. Numeral read as "43".
43. The old contents table gave p. 493 for Sūkta 44 — this is confirmed.

Sūkta 44

1. First sūkta of the Ninth Anuvāka.
2. large Kannada title line: "nalavattanāḷkaneya sūktavu"
3. printed in Kannada script; read from the 150-dpi image; the words marked [?] are crowded
4. editorial and tentative; the numerals of the Āśvalāyana references are read with doubt
5. Reference numerals are small and read with doubt.
6. The varga numerals and the Rik numerals of the deity line are small: the print appears to read "1, 3 [or 2]" for the first group and "3-14" [?] for the second; "1-2 ... 3-14" is given, doubtful [?]. The deity line's wording "agnirūśvināvuṣāḥ" is as read.
7. accents not reproduced
8. The Saṃhitā prints vahā and adyā with long final vowels, the Pada vaha and adya, and devāṃ uṣarbudhaḥ with the nasal sign.

9. The printed Nirukta passage is crowded: "tasmāt sarvānṛtūn paśavo" is read with doubt [?], and the sūtra "jātaprajñāno" and the final words are as read.

28. pp. 508–509 — grammar pages, noted briefly
29. The long list of roots and suffixes in the sūtra is crowded and not reproduced.

30. The closing numeral of this bhāṣya reads like "25" in the print, as in Rik 9 of Sūkta 43; It is taken as the Rik number 5, unexplained [?].
31. pp. 511–512 — grammar pages, noted briefly
32. The Saṃhitā prints namasyā, the Pada namasya.
33. The clause on the optionality of the pit-ness of hi and the consequent laghūpadha-guṇa ("vā chandasīti...") is crowded and garbled in the print [?].
34. a cross-reference to an earlier volume of the same edition
35. All these numerals, small in the print, are read with doubt [?].
36. pp. 515–516 — grammar pages, noted briefly
37. The Saṃhitā prints pracetaso 'gne; the Pada divides pra-cetaḥ | agne.
38. it breaks off at the foot of the page and continues on p. 517, not yet written
39. the sentence continues on p. 517.
40. from p. 517; the Saṃhitā, Pada and the beginning of the bhāṣya are above
41. pp. 517–518 — grammar pages, noted briefly
42. In the bhāṣya "āhavanīyognaḥ" (for āhavanīyo 'gneḥ) is as read, doubtful [?]; the clause "ktini krādaḥ ca niti" and the Pāṇini numbers are read with doubt.
43. The source's heading for this English reads "Englih Translation" — a misprint [sic]; "Agni" is printed "Agui" once.
44. pp. 520–521 — grammar pages, noted briefly
45. In the grammatical tail the words "svarādityaḥ" (for svaṛ ādityaḥ, 'svar' = the Sun) and the rule-name sthāgāpāpaco bhāve are as read, doubtful [?].
46. pp. 523–524 — grammar pages, noted briefly
47. The Saṃhitā prints anūśasaḥ with a long ū where the Pada has anu uśasaḥ; Both are given as printed.
48. The bhāṣya of Rik 10 begins on p. 525, not yet written.
49. from p. 525
50. characterized; the numerals are as read, doubtful [?]
51. pp. 526–527 — grammar pages, noted briefly

65. R. Saṃ. 3-[?]-[?] as read
66. R. Saṃ. 10-[?]-[?] as read
67. p. 540 — grammar page, noted briefly
68. The numeral is read as "44"; the Kannada script of the closing note is clear.

Sūkta 45

1. Second sūkta of the Ninth Anuvāka.
2. large Kannada title line at the foot of p. 540: "nalavattaidaneya sūktavu"
3. printed in Kannada script at the foot of p. 540; read from the 150-dpi image; the words marked [?] are crowded
4. editorial and tentative; the Anukramaṇikā clause and the Āśvalāyana references are read with doubt
5. The Āśvalāyana numerals differ between the Sanskrit introduction, "4-14", and the anuvāda, "4-13", as read; both [?], kept as read.

6. The Kannada words "sūktadalliruva ṛksaṃkhyai" = "number of ṛks in the sūkta" and "raḷḷi" = "in" are left in their Kannada form inside the Devanagari block, as in earlier sūktas. The varga numerals are small and read with doubt, "31, 32" [?]; the earlier note read them as "30, 31". The page header of p. 541 reads "Varga 3[1]".
7. accents not reproduced
8. The Saṃhitā prints the verb as long-vowelled yajā; the Pada has the short yaja, and the grammar below explains the lengthening in the Saṃhitā.

47. characterized, numerals as read [?]
48. pp. 569–571 — grammar pages, noted briefly; the crowded stretch characterized only
49. The numeral is read as "45"; the Kannada script of the closing note is clear.

Sūkta 46

1. Third sūkta of the Ninth Anuvāka, the last sūkta of Volume 4.
2. large Kannada title line on p. 571: "nalavattāraneya sūktavu"
3. printed in Kannada script at the foot of p. 571; read from the 150-dpi image; the words marked [?] are crowded
4. editorial and tentative; the Anukramaṇikā clause and the Āśvalāyana reference are read with doubt
5. The varga numerals are small and read with doubt, [?]; "sūktadalliruva ṛksaṃkhyai" is Kannada for "number of ṛks in the sūkta", left in its Kannada form as in earlier sūktas.
6. accents not reproduced
7. Two words are crowded: "bṛhatprabhūtam" and the first word of the grammatical tail's "...aikavacanasya"; both [?].
8. p. 573 — grammar page, noted briefly
9. The print repeats the heading "Saṃhitā-pāṭha" above the bhāṣya on p. 574, evidently a misprint for "Sāyaṇa-bhāṣya"; The bhāṣya is given under its proper heading.
10. characterized
11. pp. 575–576 — grammar pages, noted briefly
12. The Pada of Rik 3 is on p. 577, not yet seen; The Saṃhitā is given as printed, with the word-division marked as the Saṃhitā's only: "vibhiṣ patāt" is the reading of the Saṃhitā's विभिषत्तात्, subject to the Pada.
13. from p. 577
14. Crowded: the Pāṇini number after bruvo vaciḥ, the root-name "jūṣ" [print reads like "jyāṣ"], and the Vedic a clause before hali ceti; all marked [?].
15. sic: evidently a slip for the instrumental plural, as the sense requires
16. pp. 578–579 — grammar pages, noted briefly
17. The Saṃhitā runs papurir narā, as the Pada's papurih | narā shows; the Saṃhitā's printed spacing is papurirnarā.
