Rigveda Samhita — Volume 7 (English Translation)

Source: Rig_Vol7.pdf (582 PDF pages, scanned) — Sāyaṇa-bhāṣya-sahitā Ṛgveda-saṃhitā with Kannada rendering, Bhāga (Part) 7, “Prathamāṣṭakadalli āraṇeya adhyāyavū” — the Sixth Adhyāya of the First Aṣṭaka, Maṇḍala 1, Sūktas 81–94 (fourteen sūktas; the contents block reads “೮೧-೯೪”). Series: Śrī Jayacāmarājendra Vedaratna Mālā; translator and editor H. P. Venkata Rao (Āsthāna Mahāvidvān); printed at Sree Sharada Press, Mysore. Title page (PDF 1) carries the heading Viśayānukramaṇīke; PDF 5 lists the Vedavimarśana Vidvanmaṇḍali; PDF 6 is a portrait of the President of the Vedavimarśana Vidvanmaṇḍali, Śrī Śrī Jagadguru Nāgalingasarvajñācārya ... Śilpasiddhānti Śivayogi Śrī Siddhalingasvāmigaḷu.

Relation to earlier volumes: a direct continuation of Volume 6 (Sūktas 62–80, the Fifth Adhyāya). All conventions of Volumes 1–6 carry over unchanged (see CLAUDE.md): three-layer Sanskrit (Devanagari + IAST + English), view each page before writing, [?] for doubtful readings and numerals, the source’s own English reproduced with [sic], grammar pages noted briefly, accent marks not reproduced.

(Sūkta numbers and opening words were read from the Kannada-script contents at 130 dpi; the Sanskrit opening words are my reading and are to be confirmed against each Sūkta's own heading when it is reached. The contents also list the main “special topics” of each sūkta — e.g. the legend of Gotama, the Dadhīci* legend (p. 115–118), the Maruts' legend (pp. 146 ff.), the Parjanya legend (p. 286), the Agnīśoma/paṇi legends (pp. 481–491), the Kutsa–Mitrāvaruṇa legend (p. 551) — and end with “Ēḷaneyā bhāgāda viṣayānukramaṇike samāptavau”, “the contents of the seventh part end”.)*

(The abbreviations key of Volume 6 is taken over; it is to be checked against the key in this volume's preliminary pages when needed.)

Pīṭhike.

“In explaining the Ṛgveda with the meaning, translation and commentary, it is the method that has come down from the age of the Ārṣeya [ṛṣi-tradition] to state, at the head of every sūkta, the ṛṣi, the deity and the metre belonging to that sūkta, and its application (viniyoga). Following this, the commentator Sāyaṇācārya, at the beginning of every sūkta, gives the ṛṣi, deity and metre as they are in the Anukramaṇī, and states the application as it is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra. Here, ‘Anukramaṇī’ means the Sarvānukramaṇī spoken by the sage Śaunaka. In it are set out, for each sūkta, the number of Ṛks, the names of the ṛṣis who are the seers of those Ṛks, the deity of the sūkta, the metre of the Ṛks, and so on. Besides this Anukramaṇī there are other Anukramaṇīs — the Ārṣeyānukramaṇī, which gives the matters concerning the ṛṣis, the Chandonukramaṇī, which gives the matters concerning the metres, and others. Following these, the commentator describes the ṛṣi, deity and metre of the sūkta. The order of application he gives according to the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra. The matters of ṛṣis, Anukramaṇīs, Śrauta-sūtras and so on we have already described in the Pūrvapīṭhikā chapter in the first part of the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā; but it will be right, in the interest of readers, to give a brief introduction here to the matter of metres in the present context. For the whole of the Ṛgveda is made up of mantras bound in metre. Unlike the Yajurveda and the like, it has no sentences in the form of prose. All the mantras in it, being subject to the rule of metre, are in a language of verse-form. Such mantras bound in metre are called ṛks. In these Ṛks there are many kinds and sub-kinds according to the number of syllables and the number of pādas (quarter-verses). Since the seers of the Vedic mantras are many, the variety seen in the metres is natural. In the book called Chandas by Piṅgala — famous as a Vedāṅga — the details of metres are set out, but this book is not counted as very ancient. For in that book, together with the matters of Vedic metres, there are also the descriptions of the metrical characteristics of the verses used in later Sanskrit; therefore the book is not very authoritative. In this matter, since the book called Sarvānukramaṇī, composed by the great sage Kātyāyana, is ancient and authoritative, we give here a brief account of the metres of the Ṛgveda on the basis of the matters stated in it.

In putting the metres in order, only the number of syllables in them is counted. Differences among syllables, such as long, short, conjunct, have no importance. The number of syllables alone is the chief means of determining the order of the metres. In this matter the sage Kātyāyana says:

यदक्षरपरिमाणं तच्छन्दः ।

yad akṣaraparimāṇaṃ tac chandaḥ — “That which is a measure of syllables is the metre.” (as printed; the Sanskrit sentence is short and legible; the source it is quoted from is not named on the page).

“Although the chief metres are seven, according to the number of syllables there can be counted fourteen chief metres. The other metres are sub-divisions of these chief metres. The names of the chief metres and the number of syllables in them are given below:

No.	Metre	Syllables	No.	Metre	Syllables
1	Gāyatrī	24	8	Atijagatī	52
2	Uṣṇik	28	9	Śakvarī	56
3	Anuṣṭup	32	10	Atiśakvarī	60
4	Bṛhatī	36	11	Aṣṭi	64
5	Pañkti	40	12	Atyaṣṭi	68
6	Triṣṭup	44	13	Dhṛti	72
7	Jagatī	48	14	Atidhṛti	76

“Of these, the Gāyatrī metre has three pādas, and in each pāda eight syllables. Therefore in all, twenty-four syllables for the Gāyatrī metre. In this metre the first two pādas together are called the pūrvārdha (first half), forming one sentence, and the third pāda alone the uttarārdha (second half).

In the metre called Pañkti there are five pādas of eight syllables. In the first half there are two pādas and in the second half three pādas. In the Śakvarī metre there are seven pādas of eight.

In the metres beginning with Uṣṇik there are four pādas. Two pādas make one half. The number of syllables is in the same way [eight per pāda?] — (the print reads 'in the same manner'; the table gives 28 and 32 for the first two, so the pādas of the Uṣṇik are 8 + 8 + 12 in the Ṛgveda's usual form; the author does not say this here). In the last metre, Atidhṛti, none of these orders is seen: there are only seventy-six syllables. The detailed description of the number of syllables and the like of the metres has been given in the twelfth chapter of the Pūrvapīṭhikā of the first part of the Ṛg. Saṃ. (pages 221–231).

In the Ṛgveda the greater part consists of Ṛks in the Gāyatrī, Triṣṭup and Jagatī [metres]. As stated in the Chandonukramaṇī composed by the sage Śaunaka, the number of the different metres and Ṛks in the Ṛgveda (the Śākala recension) is as follows —” (the passage breaks off here; the next printed page is iv; see the note above).

(Resuming mid-sentence.) “...in a pāda, if one syllable is short, it is called nicṛt; if it is in excess, bhurik. Likewise, if two syllables are short it is called virāṭ, if in excess svarāṭ. In some contexts a conjunct is counted as two syllables according to the order of pronunciation. In the first pāda of the famous Gāyatrī mantra, which is a Ṛk of the Gāyatrī metre, tat savitur vareṇyam, there are only seven syllables, instead of eight. In order to make this good, some think that the conjunct ṇyam at the end of the pāda contains two syllables, ṇi + aṃ [i.e. vareṇyam]. Since such elisions are needed, the order of the number of syllables is not seen to be observed so strictly. Therefore, since the Gāyatrī mantra has only [23 [?]] syllables, it is called a Ṛk of the nicṛd-gāyatrī metre. Likewise, if a Ṛk of the Gāyatrī metre has one syllable in excess, it is called bhurig-gāyatrī. And in the Pañkti metre, by rule there are forty syllables. If two syllables are short — that is, if a Ṛk of the Pañkti metre has only [38 [?]] syllables — it is called virāṭ-pañkti; and if two syllables are in excess — that is, if there are [42 [?]] syllables — it is called svarāṭ-pañkti. As we have said before, the detailed account of the metres was given in the [twelfth [?]] chapter of the Pūrvapīṭhikā of Ṛg. Saṃ. Part [1 [?]].

As seen in the table above, Ṛks of the Triṣṭup metre are many in the Ṛgveda — there are [4253 [?]] Ṛks — so it may be said that this Triṣṭup metre is used most. In later Sanskrit too, the Anuṣṭup metre of [32] syllables has pre-eminence. The many books such as the Purāṇas are written in this Anuṣṭup metre. Following the order of the Vedic metres, with some changes, many metres have been constructed in later Sanskrit. For instance, following the Anuṣṭup metre of [32] syllables, the Anuṣṭup metre of 32 [as printed twice] syllables; following the Triṣṭup metre, with pādas of eleven syllables, the metres called Indravajrā and Upendravajrā; following the Jagatī metre, with pādas of twelve syllables, the metre Vaṃśastha; and following the Śakvarī metre, the metre Vasantatilakā, have been constructed.

In the combination of syllables of the Anuṣṭup metre, because there is no very strict rule, this metre is used in many modern Sanskrit compositions. In this metre there are four pādas, and in each pāda eight syllables. The seventh syllable of the second and fourth pādas must be short.

Likewise the fifth syllable of the first and third pādas must be short. If only this much holds, this metre-composition is possible. There is no need to follow further rules. Therefore this metre is used especially.

The Gāyatrī and other metres described above are very ancient. Even in the Ṛgveda age, the very ancient time, the seers praised the deities in sentences bound in metres, that is, in Ṛks themselves, as may be seen in many Ṛks of the Ṛgveda —

(Digits read from a 230-dpi enlargement: the syllable-counts “23”, “38”, “42” and the Triṣṭup total “4253” and the chapter/part numbers are small Kannada numerals read with doubt; none is confirmed. The Triṣṭup total is as the Kannada digits seem to read, i.e. four thousand, two hundred and fifty-three, and is quoted from the missing table’s context.)

companion-yoked; Savitr came together with the Uṣṇih; Soma, the radiant, with the Anuṣṭubh and the hymns; the Bṛhatī guarded the speech of Bṛhaspati. The Virāj [went] to Mitra and Varuṇa; the Triṣṭubh is here Indra’s share of the day; the Jagatī entered all the gods: by it the seers, the men, were fashioned.”

triṣṭub gāyatrī chandāṁsi sarvā tā yama āhitā / (Ṛ. Saṁ. 10-14-16, as read “१०-१४-१६” [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “The Triṣṭubh, the Gāyatrī, all the metres — all those are set in Yama.”

“In these Ṛks there is the description that, besides the names of the Gāyatrī and other metres, from Agni arose the Gāyatrī metre, from Sūrya the Uṣṇik metre, from Soma the Anuṣṭup metre, from Bṛhaspati the Bṛhatī metre, and from Mitra and Varuṇa the Virāj metre. And since the Triṣṭup metre was discovered by Indra, it is seen that by that very metre the seers especially praised Indra. Likewise the Viśvedevas created the Jagatī metre. The priests who do Sāman singing use the Śakvarī metre especially. On this matter —

ऋचां त्वः पोषमास्ते पुपुष्वान् गायत्रं त्वो गायति शक्वरीषु ।

ṛcāṁ tvaḥ poṣam āste pupuṣvān gāyatraṁ tvo gāyati śakvarīṣu / (Ṛ. Saṁ. 10-71-11) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “One sits, thriving in the growth of Ṛks; another sings the Gāyatra in the Śakvarī [verses].”

यच्छक्वरीषु बृहता रवेणेन्द्रे शुष्ममदधाता वसिष्ठाः ।

yac chakvarīṣu bṛhatā raveṇend्रे śuṣmam adadhātā vasiṣṭhāḥ / (Ṛ. Saṁ. 7-33-4 [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “When, with the Śakvarī [verses], with great sound, the Vasiṣṭhas placed vigour in Indra.” (Both citations are given here as read from the print; the Kannada reference numerals are small and doubtful, “೧೦-೭೦-೧೧” and “೭-೩೩-೪” [?].)

— these Rks support this meaning. Therefore it is clear that the Gāyatrī and other metres have been in use from very ancient times.

To publish in simple Kannada language, with explanation, this R̥gveda Saṃhitā — most ancient, most profound, most extensive, the root of all the sciences — is not an easy task. Yet with the high aim that learned people and common folk alike may gain growth of knowledge through such a great work and become worthy of the grace of God, the lord of the Karnāṭaka throne, patron of Vedic learning, himself a scholar, beloved of his subjects, devoted to God, Śrī Jayacāmarājendra Wodeyar Bahadur, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., the great ruler, supports this publication, which requires much wealth, by his generous patronage — this must be said to be the merit of the Karnāṭaka people. To such a noble-minded ruler of ours, and to his family, and to the royal prince-daughter [rājakumārī] (named with the Gāyatrī, which is counted as most important among the Vedic mantras) — (the sentence runs on to p. vi)

“...and to all the multitude of the subjects, may the Lord of all, the Vedapuruṣa, grant, in the highest degree, all this-worldly fruits — long life, health, prosperity and every wealth — and the spiritual knowledge that is the highest truth: so I pray.

Sense: “(the metre is) Paṅkti; the deity is Indra, by the rule of ‘no (other) assignment’ (anādeśa- paribhāṣā). On the fifth day of the Pṛṣṭhya (ṣaḍaha) this sūkta is used in the Niṣkevalya- śastra; so it is stated in the sūtra: ‘predaṃ brahma, indro madāya, satrā madāsaḥ — the Niṣkevalya’ (Āśv. 7-12 [?]). In the Ārambhaṇīya on the twenty-fourth day (cāturviṃśika), at the midday pressing, the first triad indro madāya is an optional stotriya in the śastra of the Brāhmaṇācchaṇsin; in the section ‘for the hotrakas’ it is stated: ‘indro madāya vāvṛdhe made made hi no dadiḥ’ (Āśv. 8-4 [?]). In the Mahāvratā, in the right [uttara] wing of the Niṣkevalya, the one Rk indro madāya is to be recited; likewise it is stated in the fifth Āraṇyaka: ‘indro madāya vāvṛdha — the pañkti, the sūdohās’ (Aitareya Āraṇyaka 5-3-3 [?]).”

Anuvāda (Kannada): “In the thirteenth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala, seven sūktas have been completed so far, and the eighth, Indro madāya, begins. It has nine Rks. In the Anukramaṇikā it is said ‘indro nava’ (Anu. 13-[2] [?]); the ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama, the son of Rāhūgaṇa. As said before, this sūkta also is in the pañkti metre; the deity is Indra. In the Niṣkevalya-śastra mantras on the fifth day of the Prṣṭhya sacrifice this sūkta has application, as is explained by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra ‘predaṃ brahmendro madāya satrā madāsa iti niṣkevalyam’ (Āśv. [7-12] [?]). In the Ārambhaṇīya too, on the twenty-fourth day, at the midday pressing the priest called Brāhmaṇācchaṇsin may optionally recite the three Rks beginning indro madāya as the stotriya mantras, as explained in the section hotrakāṇām by the sūtra ‘indro madāya vāvṛdhe made made hi no dadiḥ’ (Āśv. [8-4] [?]). In the Mahāvratā one Rk, indro madāya, is to be recited in the Niṣkevalya-śastra mantras; this is indicated in the fifth Āraṇyaka of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka by the statement ‘indro madāya vāvṛdha iti pañktiḥ sūdohāḥ’ (Ai. Ā. [5-3-3] [?]).” (All reference numerals are in Kannada numerals and are read with doubt [?].)

Sense: “Vṛtrahā — the slayer of Vṛtra, the encloser, the cloud that holds back rain, or the asura; or, the slayer of enemies who enclose (us). Indra, for madāya (joy), and for śavase (strength — śavas is a name of strength), was strengthened (vavṛdhe) by the men (nṛbhiḥ), that is, the priests, leaders of the sacrifice: he became increased by praises in the form of stotras and śastras; for gods, once they have received strength through praise, grow further. That very Indra, so, in great (mahatsu) battles (ājiṣu) we call (havāmahe), to protect us; and also (uta īm) in a small (arbhe) battle we call him. Called by us, that Indra, in the contests (vājeṣu), may protect (pra aviṣat = prāvatu, prakarṣeṇa rakṣatu) us.” The grammatical tail: vāvṛdhe — the passive liṭ of vṛdh; the lengthening of the reduplicative in the Saṃhitā by “anyeṣāṃ api dṛśyate”; nṛbhiḥ — the case-ending’s udātta that “sāvekācaḥ...” would bring is barred by “na cānyatarasyām” [as read, [?]]; havāmahe — the root hvayati in the laṭ, saṃprasāraṇa by “bahulaṃ chandasi”, guṇa and av replacement before śap; aviṣat — the root ava rakṣaṇe, the augment aṭ in the leṭ; the i dropped; sip by “sib bahulaṃ leṭi”; iṭ as the ārdhadhātuka, valādi.

- वृत्रहा — “the slayer of the demon Vṛtra; or the slayer of the enemy who encloses (the world)”
- इन्द्रः — “Indra”
- मदाय — “for gladness (satisfaction)”
- शवसे — “for strength”
- नृभिः — “by men (in the form of priests)”
- वावृधे — “being praised, he increased”
- तम् इत् — “that very Indra”
- महत्सु — “in the mighty”
- आजिषु — “in battles”
- हवामहे — “we call (for our protection)”
- उत् — “and”
- ईम् — “that very Indra”
- अर्भे — “in a small battle also (we call)”
- सः — “that Indra”
- वाजेषु — “in battles”
- नः — “us”
- प्र अविषत् — “may he protect completely.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.1 (Kannada)

“The priests always praise Indra, the slayer of Vṛtra, to give him satisfaction and to increase his strength. By those praises Indra’s greatness grows. We call that Indra, praying for protection, in great battles and in small battles alike. May he protect us completely.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Indra, the slayer of Vritra, acquires vigour by means of men’s praises (or is pleased by our praises) We invoke him in great battles as well as in little conflicts ; may he defend us in (all such) battles.” — as printed.

- मुख्याभिप्रायवु (chief intent) — “It is well known that the strength of the gods grows by the stotras and so on that men make. Therefore, even though Indra’s strength is exceedingly great, let it grow still more by the praises we men make. Such an Indra, the destroyer of Vṛtra — whether in great battles or in small, trifling disturbances — we call by prayer for our protection. Let Indra protect us in small, great and all kinds of battles.”
- मदाय हर्षार्थम् — “so that Indra may be gladdened; the meaning is that Indra is pleased by our prayer or praises.”
- शवसे — “for the increase of Indra’s strength. Among the twenty-eight names of strength beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ the word śavaḥ is read; so śavase means ‘for strength’. The form śavase is the fourth-case singular of the s-ending word śavas.”

- आजिषु, वाजेषु — “these words are read among the thirty-odd names of battle beginning raṇaḥ, vivākaḥ, so here they mean ‘in battles’ (Ni. [2-17] [?]).”
- अर्भे — “arbha is a name of the small (alpa); it means ‘small, minor’.”

- वावृधे — the root vṛdhu vṛddhau, bhvādi; liṭ in the passive sense; the ātmanepada comes by “bhāvakarmanoh” (भावकर्मणोः, Pā. Sū. 1-3-13); by “liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya” (लिटि धातोरनभ्यासस्य, Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) reduplication of the root; by “halādiḥ śeṣaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) only the va of the reduplicative remains; with e added: vavṛdhe. In the Samhitā the lengthening of the preceding reduplicative (vāvṛdhe) comes by “anyeṣām api dṛśyate” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137), which is optional-Vedic; the print remarks that in forms like tutujānaḥ the reduplicative lengthening is prescribed by “tujādīnām dīrgho ’bhyāsasya” (तुजादीनां दीर्घोऽभ्यासस्य, Pā. Sū. 6-1-7), and that this word might be included in that group, but then the lengthening would also have to be heard at the Pada-stage, which is not so; hence the lengthening is only in the mantra (Samhitā).
- नृभिः — the third-case plural of the stem nṛ, by “sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) the case-ending would take the udatta, but “na ca anyatarasyām” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-172 [?]) makes that optional for nṛ-stems before jhal-initial endings, so the udatta does not arise.
- हवामहे — the root hvedh spardhāyāṁ śabde ca (ह्वेज्), bhvādi; laṭ, first person plural; with the preposition ni, abhi, upa, vi the saṁprasāraṇa of the root would come by “hvaḥ saṁprasāraṇaṁ ca nyabhyupavipu” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[?]); here, “hva” being continued, by “bahulaṁ chandasi” the saṁprasāraṇa comes even without the preposition; the v – u, “saṁprasāraṇāc ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) gives the single prior form; hu+mahe; śap by “kartari śap”; guṇa by “sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) o, then av for o before the a of śap: hava+mahe; by “ato dīrgho yañi” the lengthening (havā-mahe).

Grammar of Rik 81.1, continued from p. 5:

- अविषत् — the root ava rakṣane, bhvādi; the leṭ (used only in the Veda, in the sense of vidhi and the like), the sūtra “liṅarthe leṭ” (लिङर्थे लेट्, Pā. Sū. 3-4-7); by “leṭo ’dāṭau” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ; by “itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-97) the i of the leṭ ending tip is dropped; by “sib bahulaṁ leṭi” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-34) the sip affix of the stem; as sip has p-mark and ś-mark it takes ārdhadhātuka designation, so by “ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-35) the augment iṭ; av+iṣ+at, the s – ṣ after i.

Sense: “O hero, Indra, skilled in hurling (down) enemies: you are senya — fit for an army; (that is) you alone are like an army. ॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha of Rik 81.2 (Kannada)

- वीर — “O Indra, endowed with valour”
- सेन्यः असि — “you have the strength of a great army (you fight as an army)”
- हि — “because of that”
- भूरि — “(of the enemies) very abundant wealth”
- पराददिः — “you take as plunder and give (to us)”
- असि — “you are”
- दभ्रस्य चित् — “even of a small one — your praiser”
- वृधः — “the one who causes increase”
- असि — “you are”
- यजमानाय — “to the sacrificer”
- सुन्वते — “who presses Soma juice”
- शिक्षसि — “you give (the wealth desired). (Why?)”
- ते — “to you”
- वसु — “wealth”
- भूरि — “is abundant.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.2 (Kannada)

“O valorous Indra, though you are alone, you are as strong as a great army. You plunder the enemies’ wealth and give it to us. You cause even your small praiser to prosper. Since you have abundant wealth, you give the sacrificer who presses Soma juice and offers it the wealth he desires.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Indra, you are a hero, you have the strength of an army ; you are the giver of much booty ; though your worshipper is humble you make him great and you bestow riches upon the sacrificer who offers you Soma-libations ; for your wealth is abundant.” — as printed.

- सेन्यः — senārhaḥ — “You alone are a match for a whole army’ — the sense is that the strength of an entire army is in Indra alone.”
- भूरि — “bahala — much, abundant.”

- पराददिः — ḍudāñ dāne — “parasya ādātā: one who gives the wealth that is with the enemies; that is, because Indra, pleased by our praises, brings us victory in battle, the wealth of those enemies comes to us.”
- दभ्रस्य — alpasya — “of a small one, of one who is not great, of one who is not famous. The word dabhra is read among the thirteen names of the small beginning ṛhan, hrasvaḥ.” (the first words of the list, “ṛhan, hrasvaḥ”, as read.)
- शिक्षसि — “since the word śikṣati is read among the ten names of the act of giving beginning dāti, dāśati, śikṣasi means ‘you give’ (Ni. [3-?] [?]).”

- पराददिः — the root ḍudāñ dāne, juhotyādi, ubhayapadi; parā is a preposition; by “ādgamahanajanaḥ kikināu liṭ ca” (आद्गमहनजनः किकिनौ लिट् च, Pā. Sū. 3-2-171) the affixes ki and kin come after ā-ending roots, ṛ-ending roots, and gam, han, jan in the Veda, and they have the properties of liṭ; here, because the root dā ends in ā, ki comes; the k of ki is dropped as a mark (“lakṣaṇa...”); since it has the liṭ property, reduplication of the root; “hrasvaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-59) shortens the reduplicative; with dadā + i, by “āto lopa iṭi ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-64) the ā is dropped before an ārdhadhātuka vowel-initial kit/ñit; being kṛdanta, it has the designation prātipadika; first-case singular.
- वृधः — the root vṛdhu vṛddhau, bhvādi; some roots contain the causative sense within themselves though they have no ṛic — they are called antarbhāvitaṇyārtha roots; the root vṛdh is also to be taken thus here, according to the context, as ‘the one who makes increase’. By “igupadhajñāprikiraḥ kaḥ” (इगुपधज्ञाप्रीकिरः कः, Pā. Sū. 3-1-135) the affix ka after a root with an ik penultimate, and after jñā, pri, kir (continued on p. 9)

Grammar of Rik 81.2, continued from p. 8:

- वृधः (continued) — “...upadhā means, by” alo ’ntyāt pūrva upadhā” (अलोऽन्त्यात्पूर्व उपधा, Pā. Sū. 1-1-65), the letter before the last. Here the ṛ (an ik) is the upadhā, so the affix ka comes. The a is dropped (before ka); what remains is a; since ka is k-marked, “kniti ca” (क्निति च, Pā. Sū. 1-1-5) prohibits guṇa for the ṛ of the root.”
- सुन्वते — the root suñ abhiṣave, svādi; after it, śatṛ by “laṭaḥ śatṛśānacāv aprathamāsamānādhikaraṇe” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-124); since ś is a mark, śnu (the stem-marker) comes; for the svādi group śnu; as kṛdanta it has the prātipadika designation. Placed before sunvat, fourth-case singular. Here, by “anudāttau suppitau” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) the case-ending would be anudātta, but the exception “śatur anumō nadyajādī” (शतुरनुमो नद्यजादी, Pā. Sū. 6-1-173) says that after a śatṛ without num (here there is no num) the case-endings beginning with a vowel after the final-udātta word, such as śas and the rest, are udātta; since here num is absent, by the affix-accent the final is udātta; hence the fourth-case singular (ñe), being vowel-initial, is udātta. ||2||

Sense: “Here is the legend: Gotama, son of Rāhūgaṇa, was the purohita (house-priest) of the kings of the Kurus and Śrñjayas. When those kings were in battle with their enemies, that ṛṣi praised Indra with this sūkta and prayed for the victory of his own side. His being their purohita is recorded by the Vājasaneyins: ‘Gotama Rāhūgaṇa indeed was the purohita of both the Kurus and the Śrñjayas.’ — When (yad) ājayaḥ, battles, arise (udirate — rise, come about), then wealth (dhanā) is placed (dhiyate, nidhiyate) for the bold one (dhṛṣṇave), who is the overcomer of enemies, the conqueror: the conqueror gets wealth — that is the sense. O Indra, in such battles, yoke (yukṣva) to your chariot your two bay horses (harī) which make the pride (mada) of the enemies fall (madacyutā). Having yoked them, strike (hanaḥ) whoever does not serve you; and whoever does serve you, place in wealth (vasau, dadhaḥ). So you are the cause of victory and defeat alike; therefore, O Indra, set us, your kings, in wealth.” The grammatical tail (characterized, not transcribed in full): udirate — root ira gatau, adādi, anudāta-it, so the root’s accent remains; no nighāta since yad is connected; dhanā — dā substituted for the case-ending by “supām suluk...”; yukṣva — root yujir yoge, with implied causative sense, the luk of the stem-marker by “bahulaṁ chandasi”, lengthening in the Saṁhitā by “dvyačo 'tas tiṇaḥ”; hanaḥ — leṭ of han with sip and aṭ; the nighāta is barred (as read, the clause is compressed [?]); vasau — a change of gender; dadhaḥ — the leṭ of dadha dhāraṇe, parasmaipada by vyatyaya.

“When battles arise, wealth is obtained by the bold one who overcomes the enemies. Therefore, O Indra, destroyer of enemies, yoke to the chariot your horses that subdue the pride of enemies. Destroy the kings who do not worship you, and make the kings who worship you prosperous. Give us abundant wealth.”

English Translation (Rik 81.3; printed in English in the source)

“When battles arise, wealth will be the rewards of the victor ; O Indra, yoke your horses, humblers of the pride of the enemies, in order that you may kill one and give wealth to another. Place us in possession of wealth.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगल्लु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 81.3)

- (the legend) — “The bhāṣyakāra here tells a legend: Gotama, the son of Rāhūgaṇa, the ṛṣi of this sūkta, was the purohita of the royal peoples called Kuru and Śrñjaya. At the time when those kings were fighting their enemy kings, this Gotama praised Indra with this sūkta and made Indra gracious. Indra caused victory in battle to the kings, the Kurus and Śrñjayas, as said above. The bhāṣyakāra says that the ṛṣi hints at this very matter in this Ṛk. And on the point that Gotama was purohita to the Kuru-Śrñjayas they cite the Śruti sentence of the Vājasaneyins:

गोतमो ह वै राहूगण उभयेषां कुरुसृञ्जयानां पुरोहित आसीत् ।

gotamo ha vai rāhūgaṇa ubhayeṣāṃ kuruśrñjāyānāṃ purohita āsīt / — “Gotama Rāhūgaṇa was indeed the purohita of both the Kurus and the Śrñjayas.” - उदीरते — īra gatau — “to come about, to arise, to happen.” - आजयः — “battles (Ni. [2-17] [?]).” - धृष्णवे — dhārṣṭyayuktāya — “to the strong one; it is natural that the strong one wins in battle.” - मदच्युता — “those that make the pride of the enemies fall; that is, because Indra conquers enemies with the help of the horses, the horses help to humble the enemy’s pride. Therefore the horses are called by this word.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.3) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 12)

- उदीरते — root īra gatau, adādi, ut the preposition (the preposition changes the sense of the root: “upasargeṇa dhātvarthaḥ balād anyāḥ pratiyate” is quoted as the saying); in the adādi class the luk of the stem-marker; since the root is anudātta-it, by “tāsyānudātenñidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam...” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the la ṭ-substitute with the sārvadhātuka designation is anudātta, and the root’s accent remains (final-udātta); though the preceding sūtra enjoins anudātta here, nothing of it is heard; as an exception “yadvṛttān nityam” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66) begins: wherever there is a word with yāt (yad), the tiñanta after it is not anudātta — here yad is read in the mantra (yad udīrata), so the yāt-connection arises, and the anudātta is therefore barred.

- धना — the second-case singular of dhana; “supāṃ suluk...” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) puts ḍā for am; the ḍ is dropped as a mark, leaving ā; the final a of the stem is dropped before it; with the ā joined: dhanā.
- युक्ष्व — the root yujir yoge, rudhādi, ubhayapadī; it contains the causative sense of ṇic (the sense of ṇic is to be added to the root); loṭ in the passive/benedictive sense; śnam is the stem-marker for the rudhādi, but by “bahulam chandasi” its luk arises; by “savābhyāṃ vāmau” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-91) the e of the se ending of the middle second person with ṇit becomes va; the j of the root becomes k by “coḥ kuḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30), and s after the k becomes ṣ; k + ṣ = kṣ; kṣ is not a separate letter; by “dvyaco ’tastiṇaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-135) the final a of a two-syllabled tiñanta is lengthened in mantras, so here yukṣvā is heard long.
- हनः — the root han hiṃsāgatyoḥ, adādi, parasmaipadī; the leṭ appears in the sense of loṭ; when sip arises for the second person singular, as said before (3-1-34), the aṭ augment comes for sip; with hanas, as a hal follows, the s is dropped and ru and visarga arise (the print’s reasoning is compressed [?]); the accent of the tiñ: since ca, vā, hā, aha ...

Grammar of Rik 81.3, continued from pp. 11:

- हनः (continued) — “...since the initial letter has been dropped, the tiñ that has been uttered first is not made anudātta, so that here by ‘hanaś ca dadhakṣa...’ (the word hanaḥ meaning ‘you kill; you should kill’, and the sense of ca being understood) the nighāta is considered barred, as the omission of ca (is to be understood). By this the anudātta accent does not arise.”
- वसौ — the seventh-case singular; the word vasu is neuter in common use; by “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) there is a change of gender and the like in the Veda, so here it takes a masculine form.

(The grammar of 81.3 is completed on the head of p. 13 with the entry for dadhaḥ.)

- दधः — the root dadha dhāraṇe, bhvādi, ātmanepadī; the form is the second person singular of the leṭ. In the ātmanepada the form would have to be dadhasva; but, as said before, by “vyatyayo bahulam” a parasmaipada ending has come here instead of the ātmanepada; the stem-marker śap arrives; the s of sip becomes ru and visarga. ||3||

“Indra, best by the sacrificial act and fearful to his enemies, has greatly increased his strength by partaking of the food in the form of Soma. Of pleasing form, of handsome chin, and driving the horses named Hari, Indra has taken in his hands, at his sides, the thunderbolt made of iron, to give us prosperity.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Sacrifices make Indra mighty ; he is formidable to the enemies ; partaking of the sacrificial food, Indra has increased his strength ; he has a handsome chin and is pleasing in appearance. He possesses two good horses ; he grasps the iron thunderbolt in his hands for our prosperity.” — as printed.

- अनुष्वधम् — “svadhā is food (Ni. [2-7] [?]); ‘anuṣvadam = annam annam’, as Yāska’s statement runs (Ni. [2-7] [?]). Here food means the food in the form of the oblation. By taking this food Indra’s strength grows.”
- ऋषः — darśanīyaḥ — “of beautiful appearance.”
- उपाकयोः — “upāka means ‘near’ (Ni. [2-7] [?]). Though the word upākayoḥ is an adjective of the word hastayoḥ, this word, together with the word vajram āyasam, is rightly connected with the sense ‘he took in his hand, at his side (near him), the thunderbolt-weapon’ of the whole sentence; or one might say that upākayoḥ means ‘at the two sides’, and hastayoḥ ‘in the two hands’ — the sense ‘in the two arms’.”
- आयसम् — “made of iron, or of the metal ukku (steel); the sense ‘made of iron’. That Tvaṣṭṛ made Indra’s thunderbolt of iron is clear from the Rk mahyaṃ tvaṣṭā vajram atakṣad āyasam (Rk. Saṃ. 10-[48]-[3] [?]).”
- श्रिये वज्रं नि दधे — “‘(for our) prosperity he held the thunderbolt’ means: Indra, taking the thunderbolt in his hand, destroys our enemies and makes the wealth they have available to us — this is the intent.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.4) (grammar page, noted briefly)

- कृत्वा — the third-case ending follows the word kratu; since kratu is a ghi-designated word, by “ājo nāstriyām” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-120) the nā substitute would come for the third-case ending; but by the vārttika “jasādiṣu chandasi vā vacanam” the substitutes for jas and the rest are optional in the Veda, so it does not apply here. Or one may say, relying on the yogavibhāga (splitting of a sūtra) in “ṣaṣṭhīyuktaś chandasi vā” (Pā. Sū. 1-4-9), that the optionality is stated: the yogavibhāga means to take one sūtra, according to the context, as two parts, in order to obtain the needed result, and to adopt a different sense; by dividing “chandasi vā” thus the sense becomes that all operations are optional in the Veda. Similarly, in the sūtra “bahulaṃ chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-39 [?]) they also state optionality. By taking the yogavibhāga the ghi-designation too is optional in the Veda, so nā does not occur here. When the case-ending is left as it is, the y-v [yaṇ] sandhi arises (the page’s remaining entries are on p. 16). (This grammar paragraph is the least clear part of the page; sūtra numerals tentative [?].)

Grammar of Rik 81.4, continued from p. 15 (grammar page, noted briefly):

- आयसम् — second-case singular. In the sense “its product”, by “tasya vikāraḥ” (Pā. Sū. 4-3-134) the affix aṇ comes after a sixth-case word; since here the sense ‘product of iron’ holds, the affix aṇ is added to the word ayas; the ṇ of the affix is a mark; therefore, by “taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-117) when an affix with ñ or ṇ follows, the first vowel of the stem takes ṛddhi, so a becomes ā; by “āder udāttaś ca” [as read: “ādyudāttaś ca”, Pā. Sū. 3-1-3] the affix-accent makes the end udātta; when the case-ending am follows, by “ami pūrvah” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-107) the single prior form; the case-ending, though anudātta, by “anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161) — when the udātta is lost before an anudātta — makes the following anudātta take the udātta; so the udātta arises here.
- अनुष्वधम् — svadhāyām anu = anusvadhām: by “avyayaṃ vibhaktisamīpa...” (Pā. Sū. 2-1-6) the avyayībhāva compound in the sense of the case-ending; by “samāsasya” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223) the compound takes the final-udātta, so it is final-udātta here. ||4||

Sense: “Indra by his own radiance has filled (ā paprau = āpūrayati) the pārthiva, the whole mass of things belonging to the earth, and the rajas — the middle region, the antarikṣa; likewise in heaven he has fixed (badbadhe = babandha, sthāpitavān) the shining stars. Therefore, O Indra, no one tvāvān — like you — has been born; nor will one be born; there is none even about to arise. Such a one as you, you wish (vavakṣitha) to bear (vah) the whole world over, exceedingly: you are the sustainer of all the world.” The grammatical tail (characterized, not transcribed in full): paprau — root prā pūraṇe, the liṭ with au for the ṇal by “ā ṇalaḥ au” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-34 [?]); pārthivam — the affix añ after pṛthivī (Pā. Sū. 4-1-42 [?]) with the first syllable udātta since the affix has ñ; rajaḥ — ‘in which Gandharvas and the like move’, the antarikṣa; the root rañja rāge, the affix asun and the loss of the nasal by the supplementary statement (Kā. 6-4-24 [?]); badbadhe — no remnant-rule by vyatyaya; tvāvān — the affix vatup in the sense of likeness after yuṣmad/asmad in the Veda; ā for the final of the pronoun; vavakṣitha — the root vaha prāpaṇe in the desiderative, no ām-affix in the liṭ outside a mantra.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.5 (Kannada)

“O Indra, by your greatness you have filled all the worlds of the earth, the middle region and the sky; in the world of heaven you have set the shining stars firmly. No one like you was born before, nor will be born later. Such a you wish to uphold the whole world with exceeding security.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; begins at the foot of p. 17 and ends at the head of p. 18)

“Indra has filled the Surface of the earth and the firmament with his glory ; he has established the constellations in the sky ; O Indra, no one like you (having such powers as you have) has ever been born or nor will be born. You have sustained the entire Universe.” — as printed (“or nor will be born” as printed [sic]).

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.5) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs on past this page)

- पप्रौ — the root prā pūraṇe, adādi, parasmaipadī; li ṭ, third person singular. When li ṭ follows, reduplication of the root: prā-prā; by “halādiḥ śeṣaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) only pā remains in the first part; by “hrasvaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-59) the reduplicative is shortened; in place of the third-person-singular tip of the li ṭ, by “parasmaipadānām ṇalatusus...” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-82) ṇal; by “āto ṇalaḥ au” [as read: “āta au ṇalaḥ”, Pā. Sū. 7-1-34] for a root ending in ā the ṇal following takes the substitute au. Here, as prā ends in ā, au in place of ṇal gives paprā+au; by “vṛddhir eci” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-88) the vṛddhi arises, so the form is made: paprau.

- पार्थिवम् — in the matter of the sūtra “dityadityādityapatyuttarapadāṇ ṇyaḥ” (दित्यदित्यादित्यपत्युत्तरपदाण्यः, Pā. Sū. 4-1-85) the vārttika “pṛthivyā ṇāṇau” (पृथिव्या ञाणौ) is begun: in the sense of ‘belonging to it’ the affix añ comes after the word pṛthivī; by “taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ” the first-syllable ṛ takes ṛddhi; by “uraṇ raparaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 1-1-51) the ṛ → ār; by “yasyeti ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the i of pṛthivī is dropped before the taddhita affix; by “ñnityādir nityam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) the word, though ending in a ñ-affix, is ādyudātta.
- रजः — rajanti asmin gandharvādayaḥ — “in which Gandharvas and the rest move: rajas here means the sky (ākāśa); the divine beings, Gandharvas and others, move there; the path of the gods’ movement is the sky. The root rañja rāge; the affix asun in the sense of adhikaraṇa. In rañj + asun the nasal of the root is dropped by the statement ‘rajakarajanarajaḥsūpasamkhyānam’ (Kā. 6-4-24 [?]). In the affix asun the as remains; with the affix joined, it is an s-ending word.”

- बद्धधे — the root badha bandhane, bhvādi; liṭ, ātmanepada, third person singular; when liṭ follows, reduplication of the root: badh+badh+e; by “halādiḥ śeṣaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) of the reduplicative only the initial consonant should remain; but since by “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) vyatyaya is accepted in the Veda — and as said before, all operations being optional by yogavibhāga — the remnant-rule did not operate here; for the dh of the reduplicative, by “jhalām jaś jhaśi” (Pā. Sū. 8-4-53) jastva gives d. By “ata ekahalmadhye ’nādeśāder liṭi” (अत एकहल्मध्ये ऽनादेशादेर्लिटि, Pā. Sū. 6-4-120), when liṭ is the cause, and no substitution has operated at the beginning, a root-vowel a between a single consonant on each side takes e and the reduplicative is dropped; since here the a of the root stands between a conjunct (dh-groups), the e and the loss of the reduplicative are not to be had. By “anudāttaṃ sarvam apādātau” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-18), since the word stands at the beginning of the pāda, the nighāta arises not; the print mentions that the prohibition of nighāta is there.
- त्वावान् — by “tad asyāsty asmin” (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) the affix matup in the sense ‘this has it’ or ‘it is in this’; but by the vārttika “matup-prakaraṇe yuṣmadasmadbhyām chandasi sādṛśya upasaṅkhyānam” the affix matup comes in the Veda after yuṣmad, asmad in the sense of likeness also. When matup is added to yuṣmad here, the word yuṣmad up to m [ma-paryanta] is replaced by tva, by “pratyayottarapadaḥ ca” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-98); tva+ad+mat; by “śeṣe lopah” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-90) the remainder after tva is dropped; by “mādupaladhāyāś ca matorvo ’yavādibhyaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-9) the m of matup becomes v after a stem with m or a penultimate that is not yava etc.; by “ā sarvanāmnaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-91) the final of a pronoun before dṛk, dṛś, vatup is lengthened to ā, so tvā here; with u in the affix, the augment num arises for the case-ending of the sarvanāmasthāna; by “atvasantasya cādhātoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-14) the penultimate is lengthened; tvāvān+t+s; by “hal-nyābbhyo...” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-68) the su is dropped, then the final t by saṃyogāntalopa (which is asiddha in the kāṇḍa, so nalopa by “nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya”, Pā. Sū. 8-2-7, does not arise).

Grammar of Rik 81.5, concluded:

- ववक्षिथ — the root vaha prāpaṇe, bhvādi; the san affix in the sense of desire; when san follows, by “sanyaṇoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-9) reduplication of the root; of the reduplicative only the initial remains; by “sani” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-79) the a of the reduplicative takes i — though that is obtained here too, by the yogavibhāga “vā chandasi” and following the dictum “sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante” the i-substitution is not made here; for vah+sa, by “ho ḍhaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-31) h becomes ḍh; by “ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-41) the ḍh becomes k before s; since the affix is san, the s after k becomes ṣ, and k+ṣ make kṣ. As vavakṣa ends in san, by “sanādyantā dhātavaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-32) it has the root-designation; for the liṭ, second person singular, the root, having many syllables, would take ām by “kāspratyayād ām amantre liṭi” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-35); but the exclusion amantre in the sūtra bars the ām in the Veda; when liṭ follows, reduplication would arise again, but “anabhyāsasya” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) prohibits it; for sip the substitute thal; since it is ārdhadhātuka with a val-initial, the augment iṭ would come to tha; the a of san is dropped by “ato lopaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-48). ||5|| bhaja sevāyām, the benedictive liṅ, with śap not arising; no iṭ; the nighāta does not arise because the first member is not in the same sentence.

- पराददाति — parā is a preposition; the root ḍudāñ dāne; of the juhotyādi class, the stem-marker ślu; since ślu follows, reduplication of the root, and the reduplicative is shortened; by “upasargāḥ kriyāyoge” (Pā. Sū. 1-4-59) the preposition has also the designation gati (Pā. Sū. 1-4-60). By “abhyastānām ādiḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-189), though the laṭ-substituted ending is an aniṭ and not vowel-initial, being sārvadhātuka the initial of the reduplicated stem is udātta when it follows; the two parts that have undergone the doubling prescribed by the sūtra of the “śaṣṭhādhyāya” are called abhyasta (by “ubhe abhyastam”, Pā. Sū. 6-1-5); by this sūtra the initial udātta arises here. Since “tiṅ codāttavati” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-71) says that the gati before a tiṅanta having udātta is anudātta, here for the gati parā the initial udātta by the general sūtra “nipātā ādyudāttāḥ” is overruled and anudātta accent arises.
- दाशुषे — the root dāśṛdāne, bhvādi. By “dāśvān sāhvān mīḍhvāmś ca” (दाश्वान्साह्वान्मीद्वौश्च, Pā. Sū. 6-1-12) these three words are irregular forms (nipātana). The kvasu affix is prescribed for the root dāś; the prohibition of iṭ (the augment prescribed for val-initial) and the prohibition of reduplication for the root come from the nipātana itself. When the fourth-case singular is added to the word dāśvas, by “vasoḥ saṁprasāraṇam” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-131) a saṁprasāraṇa is effected on the aṅga ending in vasu, which is called bha, since the vowel-initial affix ne (of the ac-initial kind) follows; this saṁprasāraṇa is the ik letter that takes the place of the yaṇ; here the u substituted for v; before it the a, being an aṭ, by “saṁprasāraṇāc ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) takes the single prior form. In dāśus+e, by “śāsivasighasīnām ca” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-60) the s in the i/ku-group context of śās, vas, ghas gets ṣ; so here the s of vas after the saṁprasāraṇa becomes ṣ; the form dāśuṣe.

- भक्षीय — the root bhaja sevāyām, bhvādi; by “vidhinimantraṇāmantraṇādhiṣṭasaṁpraśnaprārthaneṣu liṇ” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-161) the liṇ in the sense of prayer. The benedictive (āśirliṇ) is given the ārdhadhātuka designation, but the potential (vidhiliṇ) is not, in the world; however, by “chandasy ubhayathā” the affixes prescribed in the section of roots obtain both designations in the Veda; so here the vidhiliṇ too has the ārdhadhātuka designation; the stem-marker śap that is prescribed for the sārvadhātuka does not come; for the first person singular, by “iṭo ’t” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-106) at; by “liṇaḥ sīyut” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-102) the augment sīyut for the liṇ; with bhaj+sīy+a, by “coḥ kuḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30) kutva, so the j becomes g; the g by carva becomes k; then bhak+sīya (continues on p. 24)

Grammar of Rik 81.6, continued from p. 23:

- भक्षीय (continued) — “...by ‘khari ca’ the k of bhak, together with the s, becomes kṣ (the sibilant after a k-class letter becomes ṣ by the rule of ṣatva because sīyut is an augment (āgama) and takes the properties of the affix by the āgama maxim; so “ṣatva” comes after the kavarga as said before). The kṣ arises from k and ṣ, so the form bhakṣīya is complete. Because the affix is called ārdhadhātuka, the loss of the s of the liṇ, which would have to occur, does not occur. After the augment sīyut, the liṇ is valādi ārdhadhātuka; but “ekāca upadeśe ’nudāttāt” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-10) prohibits iṭ: the sūtra means that an ārdhadhātuka beginning with a val consonant does not take iṭ after a root that is monosyllabic and anudātta by teaching; here the root bhaj is both, so iṭ does not come. By “āgamā anudāttāḥ”, the augment sīyut is anudātta, so the affix-accent (pratyayasvara), through the śiti-rule, remains as the udātta. By “samānavākye nighātayauṣmadasmadādeśā vaktavyāḥ” (the vārttika on Pā. Sū. 8-1-[?]) — the anudātta substitutes of yuṣmad/asmad occur in the same sentence — here, since the preceding word is not in the same sentence, no anudātta arises. ||6||

Sense: “On the twenty-fourth day, at the midday pressing, in the śastra of the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin, the triad beginning made-made hi no dadiḥ is an optional anurūpa; so it is stated in the section ‘for the hotrakas’: ‘made-made hi no dadiḥ surūpakṛtnum ūtaye’ (Āśv. 8-4 [?]). — At each draught (made-made) of Soma, at each gladdening, that Indra, ṛjukratuḥ (of straight, honest action), dadiḥ — truly the giver of herds of cows (gavāṁ yūthā) — to us. O Indra, such a you, puru — many, śatā — in hundreds, that is, countless — vasu, riches: saṁ gṛbhāya — take them up fully with both hands (ubhayāhastyā), to give to us; śiśiḥi — sharpen us, make us possessed of keen understanding; rāyaḥ — wealth that lies in your hands, ā bhara — bring, give.” The grammatical tail (characterized): dadiḥ — ki after ḥudāñ; yūthā — loss of śi by “śeś chandasi bahulam”; gavām — the prohibition of the udātta of the case-ending; gṛbhāya — gṛha upādāne, the loṭ with hi, śāyac for śānac (Pā. 3-1-84 [?]); ubhayāhastyā — ḍyā for the third-case dual-ending, lengthening of the first member; śiśiḥi — root śo tanūkaraṇe, ślu, reduplicative i by “bahulam chandasi”, i for the root.”

Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.7, continued from p. 25:

“...take up the abundant wealth, of hundreds of kinds, filling both hands, bring and give it to us. And make our understanding keen.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“(Indra) the performer of pious acts is the giver of herds of cattle to us after being exhilarated [sic] with frequent drinking of our Soma ; take up, Indra, with both hands hundreds of wealth ; sharpen (our minds) ; procure us wealth.” — as printed (“exhilarated” is a misprint [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 81.7)

- मदेमदे — “full of delight by the drinking of Soma. Since the word made is read twice, the sense is ‘many times, or at every step full of delight’.”
- ऋजुऋतुः — “ṛju — truthful; kratu — one who has (does) action: that is, Indra is not one who goes back on his word; one who does good deeds alone, without a break.”
- शिशिहि — “śo tanūkaraṇe — ‘make our understanding sharp; make us possessed of understanding’.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.7) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 27)

- ददिः — the root ḍudāñ dāne, juhotyādi; by “ādṛgamahanajanaḥ kicinau liṭ ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-171) the affix ki, since the root ends in ā; it takes the properties of liṭ, so reduplication of the root and shortening of the reduplicative; since kit (an affix with k) follows, by “āto lopa iṭi ca” the ā is dropped; the affix-accent arises.
- यूथा — second-case plural. By “jaśśasoḥ śiḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-20) śi arises in place of the first/second plural endings as a whole-substitute; by “śeś chandasi bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-70) the śi is optionally dropped in the Veda.
- गवाम् — by “sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) the sixth-case ending would take the udātta; but as an exception the sūtra “nagośvan-sāvavarṇarāḍaṅkruṅkṛdbhyaḥ” [as read: “nagośvansāvavarṇarāḍaṅkruṅkṛdbhyaḥ”, Pā. Sū. 6-1-182] is begun: the actions stated before do not occur for these words. So it did not become final-udātta.

Grammar of Rik 81.7, continued from p. 26:

- गृभाय — the root graha upādāne, kryādi. By “kryādibhyaḥ śnā” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-81) the stem-marker śnā would come to the kryādi roots; the loṭ, second person singular, sip with the substitute hi; when hi follows, śnā would arise, but by “chandasi śāyajapi” (छन्दसि शायजपि, Pā. Sū. 3-1-84) the substitute śāyac arises; the āya of śāyac remains; with gṛbhāya+hi, by “hṛgrahor bhaś chandasi” the h of the root gets bh; the a before hi ... by “ato heḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105) the luk of hi; so gṛbhāya remains.
- उभयाहस्त्या — ubhau ca tau hastau ca ubhayahastau. After the word ubhayahasta the third-case dual: ubhayahasta+bhyām; by “supāṃ suluk-pūrvasavarṇa...” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the case-ending bhyām gets ḍyā as substitute; the ḍ is a mark; since it is ḍit, the ṭi of the stem ubhayahasta (the final a) is dropped; by “anyeṣām api dṛśyate” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137), though no cause is present, the first member is lengthened — so here the first member ubhaya is lengthened and gives ubhayāhastyā. The case-ending, though anudātta by “anudāttau suppitau”, takes the udātta here by the udāttanivṛtti accent; by “samāsasya” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223) the compound is final-udātta; since the anudātta is lost before it, by “anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161) the case-ending that has the anudātta takes the udātta: ubhayāhastyā stays final-udātta.

- वसु — the second-case plural of vasu; by “supāṃ suluk...” the luk of śas.
- शिशीहि — the root śo tanūkaraṇe, divādi; loṭ, second person singular, hi. From the divādi class śyan would come; relying on “bahulaṃ chandasi” and “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) by which stem-markers change in the Veda, here ślu has come instead of śyan. By “ādeca upadeśe 'śiti” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-45) ā for the root ending in an ec by teaching; with ślu following, by “ślau” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) reduplication of the root: śa+śā+hi; “bahulaṃ chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-78) — it continuing from the preceding sūtra — the reduplicative takes i in the Veda; by “īhalyaghoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-113) the ā of śā and of the reduplicative becomes ī because the sārvadhātuka affix, being kit or ñit, follows: śīśīhi; ...

(The final entries of the page — the continuation of śīśīhi and the entries for rāyaḥ, with the closing “||7||” — run on past this page’s last lines and are on p. 28; as printed, p. 27 ends in the middle of the īhalyaghoḥ entry.)

Grammar of Rik 81.7, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- शिशीहि (concluded) — “...the whole that has taken doubling is called abhyasta. Hi has the sārvadhātuka designation and is a val-initial affix; although it comes in place of sip, it is ñit because of the declaration ‘ap-it’ ... hence for the ā of the root the ī comes, giving śīśīhi. Since it stands at the head of the pāda, by the exclusion ‘apādādaḥ’ the nighāta is prohibited and so the whole is not anudātta.”
- रायः — the second-case plural of the word rai; by “ūḍidaṃ padādyap-pum-rai-dyubhyaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171), after those words that are monosyllabic and final-udātta, a case-ending without the sarvanāmasthāna designation is udātta; so here śas gets the udātta; the rest is anudātta, since the śit [affix-accent] rule applies. ||7||

Sense: “O hero (śūra), Indra possessed of valour: when the Soma is pressed (sute), having come, be our friend (sacā — sakhā san) and be gladdened (mādayasva); be satisfied by that Soma. For what? Śavase — for strength; rādhase — for our wealth. Tvā — you, purūvasum — of much wealth, vidma hi — we indeed know. - राधसे — “for the sake of wealth, for the obtaining of wealth; among the twenty-eight names of wealth beginning maghaṃ, reṇkaḥ the word rādhas is read (Ni. [2-10] [?]).”
- पुरुवसुम् — “(him) who has much wealth.”
- उप ससृज्महे — sṛja visarge — “we make over to you, we place our desires with you.”
- अविता — ava rakṣaṇe — “protector, guardian.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.8) (grammar page, noted briefly)

- मादयस्व — the root mada tṛptiyoge, curādi; by “satyāpapāśa...” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-25) the affix ṇic in its own sense; “ṇicaś ca” (णिचश्च, Pā. Sū. 1-3-74) — though a ṇic-ending root would be ubhayapadī, this root is specially declared ātmanepadī only (as it is taught with akaḥ-class, [the rule] “ākasmīyā” [as read]); by “sanādyantā dhātavaḥ” the root-designation; with ṇic following, lengthening of the penultimate by “ata upadhāyāḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-116); after the ṇic-ending stem, loṭ, second person singular middle: māda+i+sva; with the stem-marker śap, guṇa for the i and ay replacement; by “tāsyānudātenṇīdadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the stem-marker’s consonant and the p are marks, so (the print says) it is not a-upadeśa [as read]; since the root has no upadeśa after (it) the lasārvadhātuka is anudātta; then the accent of the ṛic alone remains, since it is śit-accented.

- ससृज्महे — the root sṛja visarge, divādi; by “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85), in place of śyan, the stem-marker ślu; la ṭ, first person plural; when ślu follows, reduplication of the root; the remainder of the reduplicative (sa): sasṛjmahe; since the affix is śit, the affix-accent arises; the tiñanta has the full anudātta by “...”; but “chandasāy anekam api sākāṅkṣam” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-35): several tiñanta verbs that are sākāṅkṣa (mutually dependent) in the Veda are not anudātta; “even by the word hi a single tiñanta is not to be made nighāta”; here, since hi is connected with the preceding vidma, the total anudātta is barred. ||8||

Sense: “O Indra, these creatures (jantavaḥ) of yours — the people who are sacrificers — puṣyanti (nourish, increase) the viśvam vāryam — all the oblation that is to be enjoyed by all. Among the people who give no oblations (adāśuṣām) there is wealth (vedaḥ); you, lord of all (aṛyaḥ), khyo hi — you indeed see, know it. That wealth of those non-sacrificers bring (ā bhara) to us. Wealth that lies with non-sacrificers, being useless for the sacrifice, would be of no use at all; therefore, to make that wealth meaningful, take their wealth and give it to the sacrificers — this is the intent.” The grammatical tail: khyāḥ — the root khyā prakathane (which has also the sense of seeing); a Vedic luṅ in the sense of the present; aṅ in place of cli by “asyativakti...”; the ā dropped by “āto lopa iṭi ca”; the augment aṭ does not arise by “bahulam chandasy amānyoge 'pi”; the nighāta barred because of hi.

- विश्वम् — “all”
- वार्यम् — “the oblation that all desire”
- पुष्यन्ति —

Pratipadārtha of Rik 81.9, continued from p. 31:

- पुष्यन्ति — “they cause to grow (by offering)”
- अदाशुषाम् — “of those who offer no oblations”
- जनानाम् अन्तः — “among the (enemy) people”
- वेदः — “the wealth”
- अर्यः — “(you,) the lord of all”
- ख्यः हि — “you indeed know”
- तेषाम् — “of those (who do not sacrifice)”
- वेदः — “the wealth”
- नः — “to us”
- आ भर — “bring and give.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.9 (Kannada)

“O Indra, all these sacrificers, who belong to you, cause the oblation that all may enjoy to grow fully. You, lord of all, have seen the wealth that is among the people who do not sacrifice and offer no oblations. Bring the wealth of those who make no sacrifice to us, who use it for sacrifice, so that it may be put to purposeful use.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Indra, these creatures (men) cherish the libation that may be desired by all ; lord of all, you know what riches these men who make no offerings, possess ; bring their wealth to us.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 81.9)

- ते जन्तवः — “Here the word jantava ḥ conveys the sense ‘creatures’ but it must be taken as ‘men’. Te means ‘your’, or any sense of ete (‘these’) may be given: ‘people who are sacrificers and others who offer oblations to you’, is the intent.”
- पुष्यन्ति — “poṣayanti — they cherish; that is, they seek.”
- वार्यम् — sarvai ḥ saṃbhajanīyam — “what is desired by all; what all seek.”
- ख्यः वेदः — “khyā prakathane, vida jñāne — these two words convey the same sense (are synonyms) [as read; the print’s note is compressed].”
- अदाशुषाम् — “of those who do not give, that is, of those who do not make offerings of oblation and the like to Indra; of those who do not perform sacrifices.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.9) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 33)

- ख्यः — the root khyā prakathane, adādi; it is also in the sense of seeing. In the Veda the luṇ; by “luṇlaṇlṛṇkṣv aḍudāttaḥ” ... “luṇlaṇliṭaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the three lakāras come in the Veda in every tense because the sense of the root is connected, so the luṇ here is in the sense of the present; when the second person singular is meant, the affix sip arises; by “cli luṇi” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-43) cli in the luṇ; (continued on p. 33)

Grammar of Rik 81.9, concluded:

- ख्यः (concluded) — “...the cli is not replaced by aṇ; for cli, by “asyati-vakti-khyātibhyo ’n” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-52) the substitute aṇ arises; khyā+a+s, by “āto lopa iṭi ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-64) the ā of the root is dropped; in the luṇ the aṭ augment for a root beginning with a consonant would arise; but by “bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge ’pi” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) in the Veda, even where there is no mā connection, the augments aṭ and āṭ do not come to the root; so here aṭ does not arise even without mā. By “hi ca” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-34) the tiṇanta connected with hi is not entirely anudātta; here, therefore, the total-anudātta that would arise by “tiṇ atiṇaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) does not arise.” ||9||

Sense: “Upo ṣu — the ninth sūkta (of the thirteenth anuvāka), of six Ṛks; the ṛṣi is Gotama; deity Indra; the last Ṛk is in jagatī, the first (five) in pañkti. It is also in the Anukramaṇī: ‘upo ṣu — six, ending in jagatī’. The application of the sūkta is laingika (by indication). In the Ṣoḍaśin-śastra the first (Ṛk) and two Ṛks beginning susandṛṣam are applied. It is stated in the section beginning atha ṣoḍaśī: ‘upo ṣu śṛṇuhī giraḥ, and susandṛṣaṁ tvā vayaṁ maghavan — one, and the two pañktis’ (Āśv. 6-2 [?]).”

Anuvāda (Kannada): “Upo ṣu — this sūkta is the ninth in the thirteenth anuvāka. It has six Ṛks. The ṛṣi is Gotama. The deity is Indra. The metre is pañkti; only the last Ṛk is in the jagatī metre. The application is laingika. In the special Ṣoḍaśin soma-sacrifice the first Ṛk and the two Ṛks susandṛṣam and sa ghā taṁ vṛṣaṇam are applied when the pañkti Ṛks are recited in the śastra mantras. This is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the section atha ṣoḍaśī by the sūtra ‘upo ṣu śṛṇuhī giraḥ susandṛṣaṁ tvā vayaṁ maghavann ity ekā dve ca pañkti’ (Āś. [6-2] [?]).” (The second pair named in the Kannada, “susandṛṣam” and “sa ghā taṁ vṛṣaṇam”, differs slightly from the Sanskrit’s “susandṛṣam ... maghavann”; both are recorded as printed.)

Sense: “O maghavan, O Indra, rich one: our praises (giraḥ) — come near and hear well (upo su śṛṇuhi). Do not be atathā iva — different, opposite to what you were before; as you have been disposed to favour us before, so be (now) of the same kind. And further, when you make us (karaḥ = karoṣi) possessed of sūnṛta — speech that is pleasing and true — in the form of praise, then (āt) you ask (arthayāse), you request those (praises) — you accept the praises we have offered. Therefore, O Indra, yoke quickly (nu kṣipram yojā) your two bays (harī) to the chariot.” The grammatical tail — a long scholastic argument, characterized rather than transcribed: śṛṇuhi (hi not dropped by the vārttika); atathā iva — kvip (Kā. 3-1-11 [?]), the first member keeps its accent; karaḥ — the luṇ of kṛ with añ replacing cli; the discussion whether the root should be read in the bhūvādi class and why śap by vyatyaya in the laṇ is not needed; the conclusion that the form is explained by the vyatyaya of the laṇ and luṇ being interchanged in the Veda (“chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ”); arthayāse — artha yācñāyām, curādi, ātmanepadī, the leṭ with aḍ; yojā — ṇic-ending, ṇilopa, lengthened in the Samhitā by “dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ”. (This argument is very compressed in the print; I have noted its outline and have not guessed its details [?].)

“O wealthy Indra, come near and hear our words of praise. As in the past you were favourably disposed towards us, so be, now and hereafter, and do not change. When you make us possessed of pleasing and true words, you then without fail seek our words of praise. Therefore, O Indra, carefully yoke your horses to the chariot and come to us with kindness.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 82.1) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 38)

- शृणुहि — the root śru śravaṇe, bhvādi; loṭ, second person singular, with hi for sip; by “śruvaḥ śṛ ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-74) the root takes the substitute śṛ and the stem-marker śnu takes the place of śap; here, in śṛṇuhi, by “utaś ca pratyayād asaṁyogapūrvāt” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-106) the hi following an u-ending affix (not preceded by a conjunct) would be dropped (luk); but by the vārttika “utaś ca pratyayāc chandasi vāvacanam” the optionality is stated, so the hi is not dropped here.
- अतथा इव — tathaiva ācarati, anantaram ācarati (“he acts just so”) — in this sense the verb tathāti is formed; “sarvaprātipadikebhyaḥ kvib vā vaktavyaḥ” (the vārttika, Kā. 3-1-11 [?]) — kvip comes after all stems in the sense ‘acts like it’; since kvip is added in the sanādi group, the stem takes the root-designation; striyāṁ kṛtin — under this heading, by “apratyayāt” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-102) the affix a (a kṛt affix) comes after a root ending in a pratyaya; it ends in a, so ṭāp; na tathā iva atathā iva (“not acting so”); by “tatpuruṣe tulyārtha...” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) the accent of the first member remains for the indeclinable-first-member compound.
- करः — the root ḥukṛñ karaṇe; luṇ, second person singular; cli after luṇ, for which sic would be the substitute; here, by “kṛmṛḍṛruhibhyaś chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-59) the substitute aṇ for cli; by “vyatyayo bahulam” the guṇa to the root, though aṇ is ñit; by “bahulaṁ chandasy amāṇyoge ’pi” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come even without mā; kar+a+s — ru and visarga: karaḥ. Here one may doubt that the final should be udātta because aṇ replaces cli ... (the print’s scholastic discussion is long: it asks whether the root kṛ’s śap-form is by vyatyaya in the laṇ, whether “ḥukṛñ karaṇe” is read in the bhvādi class, and answers that the form karat, karati in Pāṇini’s sūtra “kaḥ karat karatikṛdhikṛtapeṣu sadite” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-50) shows the root is only in the Veda; the discussion is characterized, not transcribed.) (continues on p. 38)

- करः (concluded) — “...the argument closes with: ‘the form karati — Gosvara, the author of the Nyāsa, explains the śap by vyatyaya’; the sūtra is also counted among the Vedic ones, so this root is not read in the bhvādi. There is another proof as well: karat, karati and the like are accounted for by ‘kṛmṛḍṛruhibhyaś chandasi’, which enjoins aṇ for the root kṛ; otherwise that enjoining of aṇ would be pointless. The doubt that the luṇ and laṇ differ in sense and so the form should be made in the luṇ only is answered by ‘chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ’ (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6): since in the Veda the luṇ, laṇ and liṭ are enjoined together, no difference of sense arises. In this way the author sets aside the doubt about the root’s status; the matter is settled by ‘vyatyayo bahulam’.” (Characterized, not transcribed in full; the argument is dense and I have kept to its outline.)

- अर्थयासे — the root artha yācñāyām, curādi; because it is specially enjoined to be ātmanepadī only (“ākusmāt ātmanepadinaḥ”), roots having ṛic take only the ātmanepada affixes; leṭ, second person singular; by “leṭo ‘ḍāṭau” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ for the tiñ of the leṭ, stem-marker śap; guṇa and ay replacements.
- योज — the root yujir yoge, rudhādi; in the causative sense, by “hetumati ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-26) the affix ṛic; with ṛic, by “pugantalaghūpadhasya ca” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) guṇa of the penultimate; the ṛyanta form yoji has the root-designation by “sanādyantā dhātavaḥ”; in the sense of command, loṭ second person singular with the substitute hi; śap; “chandas ubhayathā” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-117) gives śap the ārdhadhātuka designation; yoji+a+hi, by “ṇer aniṭi” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51) the elision of ṇi, since an aniṭ ārdhadhātuka follows; by “ato heḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105) the dropping of hi after a; yoj+a; the final a of a tiñanta of two syllables is lengthened in the mantra by “dvyaco ‘tastiṇaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-135): yojā. ||1||

Sense (as far as the page goes): “O Indra, the sacrificers ate (akṣan) the food given by you; having eaten, they were gladdened (āmīmadanta) and became satisfied. Priyāḥ — their own beloved (bodies?) they shook (adhūṣata, akaṁpayan): unable to speak from the excess of tasting the savour, they made their bodies tremble. Thereafter the svabhānavaḥ — those whose radiance is their own, the wise viprāḥ — praised (astoṣata, astuvan) you with naviṣṭhayā — a newest [?] — matī, praise. The rest is to be connected as before.” The grammatical tail (characterized): akṣan — the luṇ of ad with ghasḥ substituted (Pā. 2-4-37 [?]), luk of cli in the mantra, loss of the penultimate, cartva and śatva, the augment āṭ udātta; āmīmadanta — curādi, ātmanepadī, the luṇ with caṇ; adhūṣata — dhūñ kaṁpane, absence of guṇa by vyatyaya, or because sic is treated as nit; naviṣṭhayā — the root ṇu stutau with tṛc (as agent), then the iṣṭhan affix in the Veda ... ॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 82.2 (Kannada)

“O Indra, your devotees, the sacrificers, having eaten the food given by you, were fully satisfied. And they showed their exceeding delight by the shaking of their bodies — that is, they swayed their heads as a sign of delight. The sacrificers, self-radiant and wise, have praised you with a praise that is wholly new and excellent. To hear that praise, yoke your horses to the chariot and come, carefully and kindly.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Your worshippers have eaten the food which you had given and they are satisfied with it ; they have expressed their satisfaction by the movements of their bodies. Self-inspired and wise men have glorified you with commendable praises ; therefore, Indra quickly yoke your horses.” — as printed.

- अक्षन् — ada bhakṣaṇe — “having eaten.”
- अधूषत — atiśayitarasāsvādanena vaktum aśaknuvantaḥ śarīrāṇi akaṁpayan — “‘unable to speak because of the excess of the savour, they made their bodies shake’. Since the food that Indra gave is very tasty, the sense is that they shook their bodies, or their heads, to show their delight and satisfaction on eating it. In the practice of the world, when we are listening to music and the like, the delight that arises in our minds, which we express in words...” (the sentence runs on to p. 41; split where the print splits it)

“...in place of expressing it by speech, we express our delight by shaking the head; this is common. The same is to be understood here too.”

- स्वभानवः — svāyattadīptayaḥ — “‘those who are self-radiant’ means: those who grasp everything by their own intellect; those of much intellect, those of sharp intellect.”
- नविष्टया — ṇu stutau — “(this word) is of the nature of praise, or is accompanied by commendation.”

- अक्षन् — the root ada bhakṣaṇe, adādi; luṇ, third person plural; when luṇ or san follows, by “luṇsanor ghasḷ” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-37) the root ad is replaced by ghasḷ; the ḷ is a mark; by “cli luṇi” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-43) the stem-marker cli comes in the luṇ, for which, by “manṭre ghasa-hvara-ṇaśa-vṛda...” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-80) the luk in the mantra; for the luṇ plural ending jhi, by “jher jantaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-3) the substitute ant; by “itaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-100) the final i is dropped, leaving an; by “sārvadhātukam apit” it is ñit; ghas+an: by “gamahanajanakhanaghasām lopaḥ kṇity anāni” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-98) the penultimate of the root is dropped before the vowel-initial kit/ñit affix; for the gh of ghas, by cartva (the khar following) k arises, and by “śāsivasighasīnām ca” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-60) the s after that k-class letter (of these roots) becomes ṣ, so k+ṣ = kṣ; the augment aḥ comes because luṇ follows; being an augment, it is udātta: akṣan, initial-udātta.
- अमीमदन्त — the root mada tṛptiyoge, curādi; since it is read in the ākusmīya group it is regularly ātmanepadī; ṇic in its own sense; luṇ, third person plural, the affix jha whose jh is replaced by ant; mad+i+ant: with luṇ following, the stem-marker cli that would arise generally is replaced by cañ by “ṇisridrusrubhyaḥ kartari cañ” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-48); mad+i+a+anta: by the ṇic as cause, lengthening of the penultimate of the root; by “ṇer aniṭi” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51) the ṇi dropped before cañ; māda+a+anta; by “ṇau cañy upadhāyā hrasvaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-1) the penultimate of the aṅga is shortened; since cañ follows, by “cañi” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-11) doubling of the root; with the remnant of the hal-initial, mumad+a+anta; by “sanvallahuni caṇpare ’naglopé” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-93) ... (continues on p. 42)

Grammar of Rik 82.2, continued from p. 41:

- अमीमदन्त (concluded) — “...since cañ follows, sanvadbhāva comes; with sanvadbhāva, by”sanyataḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-79) the i that would come to the reduplicative with san following, comes here too, for the reduplicative; by “dīrgho laghoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-94) it is lengthened (mīmad); with the augment aḥ: amīmadanta results.”
- अधूषत — the root dhūñ kampāne, svādi; luṇ, third person plural; since there is no a after it, the jha is replaced by at [for jha in the ātmanepada]; the generally obtained cli is replaced by sic; by “vyatyayo bahulam” the guṇa of the light penultimate does not arise; since there is an ik before it, the s of sic becomes ṣ; with the augment aḥ the form adhūṣata is made. Here, by “chandasy ubhayathā” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-117) if the sic, being ārdhadhātuka, is also accepted as sārvadhātuka, then by “sārvadhātukam apit” (Pā. Sū. 1-2-4) it is ñit; then, since a ñit affix follows, “kñiti ca” (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5) prevents guṇa — this other opinion may also be accepted. Or the root dhū vidhūnane, tudādi, which is also in the kuṭādi group: by “gāṅkuṭādibhyo ’ñṇin ñit” (Pā. Sū. 1-2-1) the following sic is ñit, and so is not guṇa-bearing, since no ñit-it arises; when the luṇ is made in the passive sense of the root, the proper form arises; in the passive lakāra, by “bhāvakarmaṇoḥ” the ātmanepada arises; in this alternative too, the absence of guṇa results from the preceding sūtra.

- नविष्टया — the root ṇu stutau, adādi; the affix tṛc in the agent sense on this root. Since kartari continues, “nvul-tṛcau” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-133) enjoins it; here, since the sense is ‘praise’ (an instrument), a doubt arises how the agentive tṛc can come when praise is the instrument (karaṇa); but since in the Veda the kāraṇas are pradhāna in their own functions, there is no doubt of the agentive tṛc in the agent sense; with tṛc following, guṇa of the root; since it is ṇopadeśa the initial becomes n; after a tṛm-ending or tṛc-ending word, by “tuś chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-59 [?]) the affix iṣṭhan comes in the Veda, and iyasun; nav+tṛ+iṣṭha, by “turiṣṭhemeyaḥsu” [as read: “turiṣṭhemeyaḥsu”, Pā. Sū. 6-4-154] — when iṣṭhan, imanic, iyasun follow, the tṛm/tṛc is dropped; so here, with iṣṭhan following, the tṛc is dropped, giving naviṣṭha; when the feminine is intended, ṭāp; third-case singular gives the said form.
- मती — the third-case singular ṭā following; by “supāṃ suluk-pūrvasavarṇa...” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the third-case ending gets the single prior long vowel; the root man... (continues on p. 43)

Grammar of Rik 82.2, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- मती (concluded) — “the root man... takes ktin by” striyāṃ ktin” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-94); the nasal is dropped by “anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kñiti” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37), giving the word mati; by “ñnityādir nityam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) it would be initial-udātta, being n-ending; but in the mantra, by “mantre vṛṣeṣapacamanavidabhūvīrā udāttaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-96) the affix ktin is udātta for these (roots); so the accent of ktin is udātta; because of the ṣiti-rule it is final-udātta.” ||2||

- वशान् — kāmayamānān anyān — “other sacrificers who desire you; that is, in order to go to the sacrificers.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 82.3) (grammar page, noted briefly)

- वन्दिषीमहि — the root vadi abhivādanastutyoḥ, bhvādi; the benedictive liṅ (āśirliṅ), first person plural. Since the root has the mark i, by “idito num dhātoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-58) the augment num arises. By “liṅaḥ sīyutḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-102) the augment sīyutḥ for liṅ; by “liṅāśiṣi” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-116), the liṅ that comes in the sense of benediction takes the designation ārdhadhātuka, so here it is ārdhadhātuka; since sīyutḥ has val-initial ārdhadhātuka liṅ, the augment iṭ comes; the y of sīyutḥ is dropped by “lopo vyor vali” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-66), leaving vand+i+simahi. The rule of substitution (ādeśa-ṣatva) is applied, and the proper form results. Since the root vad is anudātta-it by teaching, one might doubt that the liṅ would be anudātta by “tāsyānudātenṇidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186); there is no room for it, because, as said before, the āśirliṅ has the ārdhadhātuka designation and so is not lasārvadhātuka; so no anudātta accent arises. By “ādyudāttaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-3) the affix has the initial udātta accent. “Tiṅ atinaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28): a tiṅanta after an atiṅanta is wholly anudātta; here that would make the affix-accent suppressed and the whole anudātta; but “āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-72) — the preceding āmantrita maghavan is not (counted as) present, so vandiṣīmahī stands at the head of the pāda; by the exclusion “apādādu” the total anudātta is barred, and the word keeps the affix-accent.
- योज — “the processes of this (verb) were explained in the first Rk (82.1) of this sūkta.”

Sense: “That Indra indeed (sa gha) tiṣṭhāti — mounts (adhi) that chariot that is vṛṣaṇam, a showerer of desires, govidaṁ, a bringer of cows. (Because the preposition is heard, the sense is: ‘let him mount the chariot’ — let him ascend.) O Indra, the chariot which makes known (cīketati = jñāpayati) the vessel (pātra) called hāriyojana — mixed with barley-meal (dhānā), filled with Soma — mount that chariot; and having mounted, yoke quickly your two bay horses.” The grammatical tail: gha — lengthened by “ṛci tunughamakṣu...”; ratham — the locus (adhikaraṇa) of adhi-śiṅsthā-ās takes the karma-designation (Pā. 1-4-46); tiṣṭhāti — the leṭ with aḥ, cīketati — root kita jñāne, juhotyādi, ślu for śap; by the statement ‘bahulaṁ chandasī’ the prohibition of guṇa of a light penultimate before a pit affix does not apply to the reduplicated stem.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha of Rik 82.4 (Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 46)

- सः घ — “that very Indra”
- यः — “which chariot”
- हारियोजनम् — “(Soma juice mixed with barley-meal)...” (the entry’s text is broken at this resolution [?])
- पूर्णम् — “filled (with Soma juice)”
- पात्रम् — “the vessel”
- चिकेतति — “brings and gives”
- वृषणम् — “showerer (of desired objects)”
- गोविदम् — “...”

Pratipadārtha of Rik 82.4, concluded:

- गोविदम् — “one who has cows (obtains cows)”
- तं रथम् — “that chariot”
- अधि तिष्ठति — “may he ascend and sit”
- इन्द्र — “O Indra”
- ते — “your”
- हरी — “horses”
- नु — “carefully”
- योज — “yoke (to the chariot).”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 82.4 (Kannada)

“Let Indra mount that chariot which brings the vessel filled with grain-meal and filled with Soma juice, and which, being the fulfiller of desires, brings cows. O Indra, carefully yoke your horses to the chariot.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“May he (Indra) ascend that chariot which shower blessings, gives cows and which contains vessel filled with the mixture of Soma-juice and barley flour ; Indra, quickly yoke your horses.” — as printed.

- घ — “for the sake of the metre this syllable is lengthened in the Saṃhitā-pāṭha.”
- हारियोजनम् — “hāri is Soma juice mixed with grain; hāri probably means barley (yava) grain. ‘Soma juice mixed with the flour of that grain’ is the sense. This word hāriyojana occurs in the Ṛgveda only in the Ṛk —

एवा ते हारियोजना सुवृक्तीन्द्र ब्रह्माणि गोतमासो अक्रन् ।

evā te hāriyojanā suvṛktīndra brahmāṇi gotamāso akran / (Ṛk. Saṃ. 1-[61]-[16] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “So, O Indra, the Gotamas have made for you well-turned prayers, (with the) hāriyojana (Soma).”

and nowhere else. There the bhāṣyakāra explains this word as ‘haryor aśvayor yojanaṃ yasmin rathe saḥ; of him the owner, hāriyojanaḥ’ — that is, he has explained hāriyojana in another way: ‘having the chariot in which the two bays, Indra’s two horses called hari, are yoked; indra’ (as the sense ‘the chariot of Indra’). In the Yajurveda, in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, too —

हरिसि हारियोजनो हर्योः स्थाता वज्रस्य भर्ता पृश्नेः प्रेता तस्य ते देव सोमेष्टयजुषः

Saṁ. 1-[4]-[?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “You are hari, the hāriyojana, the stander on the two bays, the bearer of the thunderbolt, the goer to Pṛṣni (...); of you, O god, whose Soma-offering and sacrifice are praised, whose recitation is praised in stoma and śastra, I take the cup that has the two bays; you (O grains) are the two bays’ food; with Soma, to Indra, svāhā.” (The Taittiriya passage is read with doubt in several words; the reference is [?].)

“...In the mantra the word hāriyojanaḥ, Bhaṭṭabhāskaramiśra explains in his bhāṣya:

Translation: “‘Harir asi’ — Soma alone is meant: Hari is Indra; ‘you are that very (Indra)’ — so Soma is praised in Indra’s form; or: hari = the bringer (hartṛ) of the desired good things; you are such. Hāriyojanaḥ — hari is a particular horse; he whose conveyance (yojana) it is, is hāriyojana, Indra; ‘one belonging to him, hāriyojana’: ‘you are Indra’s’ — that is the meaning.”

— so he has given the sense. Here he explains the word hāriyojana as referring to Soma. The chief sense is: for offering to Indra they prepare Soma juice mixed with barley-meal; it may be that such Soma juice, prepared for offering to Indra alone, is by convention called hāriyojana; for that reason, in the present Rik, it is proper to explain hāriyojanaṁ pātraṁ pūrṇam as ‘a vessel filled with Soma juice prepared especially for Indra with barley-meal mixed in it.’”

- घ — in the sense of khalu it is an indeclinable. By “ṛci tunughamakṣutaṅkuṭroruṣyāṇām” (ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम्, Pā. Sū. 6-3-133) the lengthening of gha occurs only in the Rgveda mantras.
- रथम् — second-case singular. Although the meaning is ‘let him sit in the chariot’, by “adhiśīnsthāsām karma” (Pā. Sū. 1-4-46) the locus of the three roots śīñ, sthā, ās, when joined with the prepositions adhi, upa, ā (“the adhi karaṇa of the sense of the root and of the action”), takes the karma-designation; having obtained the karma-designation, by “karmaṇi dvitīyā” (Pā. Sū. 2-3-2) the second case arises.

- तिष्ठाति — the root ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau, bhvādi; leṭ, third person singular, in the sense of vidhi; by “leṭo 'ḍāṭau” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ; when the stem-marker śap follows, by “pāghrādhmā...” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) the root takes the substitute tiṣṭha.
- चिकेतति — the root kita jñāne, juhotyādi; leṭ, third person singular. For juhotyādi roots ślu would be the stem-marker, and by “ślau” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) reduplication of the root; if hal-initial remainder, kikit+ti; as said before, by “leṭo 'ḍāṭau” the aṭ ... (continues on p. 49)

- चिकेतति (concluded) — “...the augment aṭ comes to the tiñ. For the reduplicative of the first part, by “kuhoś cuḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-62) a cavarga letter would arise for the k; by the antaryā [nearness] principle the c arises: ci-. By “pugantalaghūpadhasya ca” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) the guṇa for the i before the t — the light penultimate of the aṅga — arises. Although “nābhyastasyāci piti sārvaadhātuke” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-87) prohibits guṇa of a light penultimate for an abhyasta stem when a pit sārvaadhātuka beginning with a vowel follows, here the vārttika “bahulaṃ chandasīti vaktavyam” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-87, vārttika 1) means that the prohibition of the light-penultimate guṇa does not arise.” ||4||

- मन्दानः — the root madi stutimodamadasvapnakāntigatiṣu (in the senses of praise, delight, intoxication, sleep, beauty, going). Bhvādi; for this root, when liṭ is made, by “liṭaḥ kānajvā” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-106) in the Veda kānac optionally replaces liṭ (the liṭ enjoined for the past in general); in kānac the āna remains. When liṭ follows, the reduplication that would arise by “liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) does not arise, by the statement “chandasi vā” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8, vārttika 1). Since the root has the mark i, the augment num: mand+āna; in the sense ‘one who has joy (mada)’: mandānaḥ.
- अन्धसः — the root ada bhakṣaṇe, adādi; by “āder num dhaś ca” (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[198] [?]) and “sarvadhātubhyo ‘sun” (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[188] [?]) the affix asun follows; the root takes the augment num and its d becomes dh; in the sense bhaktam, ‘food’. The as of asun remains; it is an s-ending word; the sixth-case singular is made by jas...
- उप याहि — by “chandasi parye ‘pi” (Pā. Sū. 1-4-81) and “vyavahitāś ca” (Pā. Sū. 1-4-82) there is no rule in the Veda that the prepositions must precede; the combination of prepositions occurs even when separated. ||5||

Sense: “In the antyeṣṭahan days, for the hāriyojana (cup), this yunajmi R̥k is the yājyā; so it is stated: ‘yunajmi te brahmaṇā keśinā harī — the yājyā and anuvākya on the antyeṣṭahan days’ (Āśv. 6-11 [?]). — O Indra, your two maned (keśinā, tufted, crested) bays I yoke (yunajmi) with brahman, a mantra of praise; I join them to the chariot. By that chariot go (upa pra yāhi) to your house. Gabhastyoḥ — in the two arms (gabhasi is a name of the arm): you hold (dadhiṣe) the reins that bind the horses in your arms. The Soma-juices pressed in the sacrifice, rabhasā — swift, keen, quickly intoxicating — have gladdened (udamandiṣuḥ) you utterly, exceedingly. O vajrin, therefore, going to your own house, pūṣaṁvān — pūṣan here is in the sense of puṣṭi, nourishment (as the śruti says: ‘Pūṣan is nourishment; he wins nourishment’) — endowed with the nourishment produced by drinking Soma, rejoice (sam u āmadaḥ) well with your wife, together with your own wife; be fully satisfied.” The grammatical tail: keśinā — the affix ini in the sense ‘having’ after keśa; rabhasā — ac after arśa-ādi words; āmandiṣuḥ — parasmaipada by vyatyaya; pūṣaṁvān — from puṣ ‘to nourish’; pūṣan is irregular (nipātita); matup becomes vat after a stem with m- or a- penultimate; āmadaḥ — madī harṣe, laṅ in the sense of prayer by “chandasi luṅlaṅliṭaḥ”, śap for śyan by vyatyaya.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 82.6 (Kannada)

“O Indra, I yoke your long-maned horses to your chariot, reciting mantras of the form of praise. Hold the reins in your hands and set out for your house. The Soma juices that were pressed have made you exceedingly intoxicated. Nourished by drinking that juice, go back to your house and, uniting with your wife, be satisfied.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“I harness your long-maned horses with proper prayers ; take the reins in your hands, the extracted Soma-juices have exhilarated [sic] you ; O weilder [sic] of the thunderbolt, thus filled with nourshing [sic] food, rejoice with your wife.” — as printed (“exhilarated”, “weilder”, “nourshing” misprints [sic]).

- केशिना — śikhāvantau — “(horses) having manes.”
- गभस्त्योः — hastayoḥ — “in the hands. Among the twelve names of the arms beginning ayāti, cyavānā, the word gabhasti is read; hence gabhastyoḥ means ‘in the hands, in the arms’” (the print’s word runs onto p. 54).

- पूषण्वान् — “Here the bhāṣyakāra has given to the word pūṣa the sense ‘nourishment’ (puṣṭi), and in support has cited the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa śruti sentence ‘puṣṭir vai pūṣā; puṣṭim evāvarunddhe’ (Tai. Brā. [3-2-?-?] [?]).”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 82.6) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 55)

- केशिना — the dual of a stem ending in n, in the second-case dual (śyau...) [as printed: “dual of the n-ending word”]. Keśāḥ asyāṇ santi, ‘having hair, tuft’: by “vrīhyādibhyaś ca” ... by “ata ini-ṭhanau” (Pā. Sū. 5-2-115) the affix ini in the matup sense after the a-ending stem; by “yasyeti ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the a of keśa is dropped before ini; with keśin+au, by “supāṇ suluk...” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the case-ending gets the substitute ā; the form is complete.

- रभसा — rabhasa means ‘speed’: those which have speed. The word rabhasa is among the arśa-ādi words, so by “arśa-ādibhyo ’c” (Pā. Sū. 5-2-127) the affix ac in the sense of matup; by “yasyeti ca” the a of the stem is dropped before it, yet the form remains rabhasa; the first-case plural gives the form.
- आमन्दिषुः — the root madi stutimodamadasvapnakāntigatiṣu, bhvādi, ātmanepadī; by “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) here the parasmaipada affix arises by vyatyaya. (The kārikā adds: ‘supāṇṭiṇ-upagraha-liṅga-nara-...’ — ‘by the vārttika of vyatyaya, the exchange of upagraha (voice) is also taken’.) For the plural jhi, by “sicaś ca” ... “sijabhyastavidibhyaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-109) the substitute jus; of the jus only us remains; in the luṇ, sic comes in place of cli, and sic gets the valādi-iṭ augment; the s of sic after the iṇ becomes ṣ; the augment aṭ comes to the root; with num for amad+iṣ+us, ru and visarga result.
- पूषण्वान् — the root puṣa puṣṭau; by “śvannukṣanpūṣaṇ...” (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[158] [?]) the affix kanin is added and the form pūṣan is nipātita (‘irregular’): nipāta is that by which, after the later (separate) operation, the formation is accepted in the pronounced form only; in this word the kanin affix must be taken in the bhāva sense. Pūṣā asya asti — ‘he who has nourishment (strength)’; in the sense of ‘this has it’ the matup by “tad asyāsty asminn iti matup” (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94); pūṣan+mat (continues on p. 55)

Grammar of Rik 82.6, concluded:

- पूषण्वान् (concluded) — “...by” mādupaladhāyās ca matorvo ’yavādibhyaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-9) the m of matup becomes v after a stem whose penultimate is m or a and which is not yava-etc.; so here, since matup follows the word pūṣan, the m becomes v. By “anonuṭ” [as read: “ano nuṭ”, Pā. Sū. 8-2-16] a nuṭ comes to the matup after a stem ending in an. Here, in pūṣan+vat, by “nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n of pūṣan would be dropped; but whether the substitution (sthānivadbhāva) is accepted or not, the stem is an-ending, so the augment nuṭ arises for the matup; when it is anuvat (an-ending), the n is heard again. When the first-case singular su follows, by “ugidacāṃ sarvanāmasthāne ’dhātoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) num for the ugit matup; by “atvasantasya cādhātoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-14) the lengthening of the penultimate; since the conjunct-final loss is siddha-by-form, the final n of num is not dropped again. By “hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matub” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-176) the matup after a short vowel or after nuṭ is udātta; here, since matup follows nuṭ, the udātta accent arises.”
- आमदः — the root madi harṣe, divādi; by “chandasi luṇlaṇṭiṭaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the laṇ in the sense of prayer; for the divādi, ṣyan as the stem-marker would arise; by vyatyaya śap comes; for the second person singular sip, mad+a+s; for the root with the laṇ following, the augment aṭ comes to the aṅga. ||6||

Anuvāda (Kannada), beginning: “Aśvāvātī prathamaḥ — this sūkta is the tenth sūkta in the thirteenth anuvāka; there are six Ṛks in it. For this sūkta Gotama is the ṛṣi, Indra the deity,” (the sentence continues on p. 56).

In the sacrifice called Atirātra, in the third paryāya, this sūkta is applied in the śastra mantras recited by the priest Brāhmaṇācchāṁsin. “O Indra, the man protected by you, living in a house filled with horses, obtains cows before and in greater number than all the rest. You fill that sacrificer, though they have no consciousness (to do so), with wealth of many kinds, as rivers from various directions fill the ocean with water; you make him rich.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Indra, the man who is well protected by you dwells in a house with plenty of horses ; he is the first to go to the place where there are cows. fill him with plenty of riches as the rivers unconsciously flow in all directions to reach the ocean.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 83.1)

- अश्वावति — “‘one who lives in a house with many horses’ means that his house has as many horses as he needs. Although the word gṛha is not in the Rk, the bhāṣyakāra supplies it by adhyāhāra for the sake of coherence. All the Rks in this sūkta are of obscure sense; many words have to be supplied by adhyāhāra to get the sense to hang together. Even so, it is open to doubt whether the ṛṣi’s intention is correctly explained, even when words are supplied in this way and some sense is attached.”
- प्रथमो गोषु गच्छति — “the meaning of this sentence does not fit exactly. Still, as said for aśvāvati, the sense ‘his house has many cows’ may be guessed.”

“...viśiṣṭajñānahetubhūtāḥ — ‘waters endowed with all knowledge’, or rivers. How can waters that have no consciousness have knowledge? This being impossible, the vi in the word vicetasaḥ must be taken as a negating prefix, ‘without’ (vigata), and the sense then fits somewhat; so vicetasaḥ means ‘rivers devoid of consciousness’; or: though the rivers have no knowledge that they must go and join the sea, yet, flowing through the lands, in the end they join the ocean — this is the sense to be given.” - अभितः — “from all sides: whichever direction the rivers flow towards, in the end they reach only the ocean; rivers flowing in all directions reach the ocean alone — this is the intent.”

- अश्वावति — aśvāḥ asmin santi (“horses are in this”): by “tad asyāsty asminn iti matup” (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) the affix matup; by “mādupadhāyās ca matorvo ’yavādibhyaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-9) the m of matup becomes v after an a-ending stem; by “mantra somāśvendriyāviśvadevyasya matau” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-131) in the mantra the a of aśva is lengthened before matup; the seventh-case singular, ni [by “supāṃ suluk...”], gives aśvāvati.
- सुप्रावीः — su, pra are prepositions; the root ava rakṣaṇe, bhvādi; by “avitṛṣṭāntribhya īḥ” (Uṇ. Sū. 3-[158] [?]) the affix ī after ava; since the affix ends in ī, “hal-nyābbhyo dīrghāt sutisy apr̥ktaṃ hal” does not drop the su; ru and visarga: prāviḥ.
- ऊतिभिः — ava rakṣaṇe; “ūtiyūtijūtisātihetikīrtayaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-97) — the affix ktin is nipātita in these; after ava ktin is added to give ūti; “jvaratvarasrivaviyamivamām upadhāyās ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-20) turns the v into ūḥ; the form is accounted for by the sūtra, but by “ūtiyūtijūti...” it is stated as a nipātana for the sake of accent; since ktin is n-marked it would be initial-udātta by “ñnityādir nityam”, but the nipātana sets the udātta of the affix aside, so it is final-udātta.
- पृणक्षि — the root pṛcī saṃparke, rudhādi; śnam as the stem-marker; in pṛnac+si by the vārttika “yuvarṇā...” (as read, “yuvarṇāśnaśatvaṃ vācyam” [?]) the śnam’s n ...; by “coḥ kuḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30) the c becomes k (continues on p. 60)

Grammar of Rik 83.1, concluded:

- पृणक्षि (concluded) — “...the k of the affix, since the s follows, would have ṣatva, and by the combination of k and s the kṣ arises.”
- भवीयसा — the stem bhavīyas, a word ending in s; the third-case singular. After the word bahu, in the sense of superiority, “dvivacanavibhajyopapade tarabīyasunau” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-57) gives the affix īyasun; with īyasun following, “bahor lopo bhū ca bahoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-158) — the imanic and īyasun affixes cause loss, and bhū is the substitute for bahu. (If the operation is made for the following (ablative) element, then, by the paribhāṣā “ādeḥ parasya” (Pā. Sū. 1-1-54) it applies only to the initial part of what follows; so the loss would be only of the ī of īyasun [the sūtra’s bahor lopaḥ “loss” being taken as applying to the ī of īyasun] and bhū-substitution for bahu is obtained. But here, by the yogavibhāga “sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante”, the sense is accepted, and only the bhū-substitution is made for bahu, and the loss of the ī of īyasun does not occur. So īyas remains in īyasun. In bhū+īyas, by “ñiguṇaḥ” [as read: “oś...”] since a taddhita follows, guṇa arises for the u-ending; bhav+īyas; with the third-case singular ṭā: bhavīyasā. Or the word can be accounted for another way: after the word bhavitṛ; by “tuś chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-59) īyasun comes in the Veda after words ending in tṛm/tṛc; for the root bhū, tṛc with guṇa and av gives bhavitṛ; in bhavitṛ+īyas, by “turiṣṭhemeyaḥsu” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-154) the tṛ is dropped when iṣṭhan, imanic, īyasun follow; the savarṇa-lengthening results in the form bhavīyas.” ||1||

Sense (as far as the broken print allows): “Prācaiḥ — by the eastern ones, or by those who move forward: at the time of the homa (the gods) bring forward (pra ṇayanti), facing the northern altar, the camasa (cup) that is devayu — (that seeks) the gods — and that has been prepared for the oblation; it is brahmapriya — gratified, satisfied, by brahman — by food in the form of Soma; filled. Joṣayante — all the gods attend that cup, like bridegrooms (varāḥ) a maiden (kanyakā): as bridegrooms attend a maiden thinking ‘she will be mine, she will be mine’, so the gods too stand by it, thinking ‘this Soma is mine, this Soma is mine’. This is the sense in accordance with the application in the Aponaptriya (rite), since a mantra shows the matter to be done. When, however, its application is in the third paryāya of the night-rite, it is to be explained thus: O Indra, as divine waters go to a low place, so the gods, wishing to hear your stotra, come to the hotṛ’s dhiṣṇya place (the seat of the hotṛ); and having come, they look down (avaḥ), like a spreading light. All the gods come to this praiser, who desires the gods for himself, and bring him forward in front, they hold him in front; they serve you, who delight in brahman, the praise, who recite, as bridegrooms a maiden.” The grammatical tail (the print is broken; I give only what is legible): hotriyam — the affix gha in the sense ‘belonging to that’ after hotṛ; avaḥ — the affix asi by “pūrvādhārāvarāṇām asi puradhavaś caiṣām” (Pā. 5-3-39 [?]), final-udātta; joṣayante — root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ with ṇic.

- होत्रियम् — “the vessel of the camasa kind, belonging to the hotṛ”
- देवीः — “shining”
- आपः न — “like holy waters (tīrthas) coming and joining”
- उप यन्ति — “(the deities) come and join”
- विततम् — “spread out widely”
- ज्योतिः — “the radiance of the sun”
- यथा — “as”
- अवः — “(as the sun’s light) spreads downward, the vision of the deities too, from above”
- पश्यन्ति — “they look”
- देवयुम् — “this camasa that looks to the deities and is offered to them”
- प्राचैः — “in the front part (of the northern altar)”
- देवासः — “the gods”
- प्र णयन्ति — “take and carry”
- ब्रह्मप्रियम् — “(filled) with food in the form of Soma juice”
- वराः इव — “as bridegrooms are eager to serve a maiden, thinking of her as their own”
- जोषयन्ते — “(thinking ‘it is ours’) they eagerly attend.”

The Kannada then gives an alternative (athavā) construing the Ṛk as addressed to Indra: “(O Indra) देवीः — shining; आपः न — like holy waters, flowing into the low places; होत्रियम् — the hotṛ’s dhiṣṇya place; उप यन्ति — the deities come (wishing to hear your stotra); and विततम् — spread; रजः यथा — like the light; अवः — downward; पश्यन्ति — they look...” (the end of the entry is cut off at the page foot and completed on p. 63).

Pratipadārtha of Rik 83.2, concluded (the alternative):

- देवयुम् — “(who looks for) the favour of the deities, the praiser”
- प्राचैः — “in the front part (of the eastern portion)”
- प्र णयन्ति — “take along, carrying”
- ब्रह्मप्रियम् — “the praise-loving one, you”
- वराः इव — “like bridegrooms (that serve brides with the thought ‘she is mine’)”
- जोषयन्ते — “(from that) they attend.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 83.2 (Kannada)

“As holy waters, shining, come and join together, the gods also come and join the camasa vessel that belongs to the hotṛ, taking it as their object. When it has come to the sacrificial ground, just as the radiance of the sun spreads widely and falls downward, so the downward glance of the gods falls upon this camasa filled with Soma. Gazing at the gods, this vessel, which is to be offered to them, is taken (by the priests), according to the injunction of the śāstra, to the front part of the northern altar; after it is taken there, the gods come eagerly to attend this vessel filled with Soma juice, as bridegrooms, each desiring that the new bride be his, eagerly attend upon her, longing for her.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“As the bright waters flow to the sacrificial ladle, so the gods look down upon it ; as the sun’s rays spread every where and descends to earth so the gods desirous of being presented to them look down upon it ; the (Chamasa) vessel filled with Soma-libations is brought to the altar with proper rites and the gods are eager to obtain it as the would-be bridegrooms long for their intended brides.” — as printed.

- होत्रियम् — “(what) belongs to the hotṛ: a camasa vessel. Camasa is the wooden vessel that the priests use in the sacrifice for drinking Soma. For fuller detail see Rg. Saṃ. Part 2, p. 412. Although in the Ṛk there is merely hotriyam — ‘belonging to the hotṛ’ — without the word camasa, the bhāṣyakāra has supplied the word camasa.”
- आपो न देवीरुप यन्ति होत्रियमवः पश्यन्ति — “In this sentence the word devāḥ (‘gods’) has been supplied. Just as water, in the form of the Soma-juice, comes and joins the hotṛ’s camasa, so the gaze of the gods, eagerly for the drinking of Soma, falls on the camasa filled with Soma-juice — this is the sense.”

- विततं यथा रजः — “He has given an illustration for the above sentence. The light — the ray of the sun — spreads from the sky, covers everything and falls on the earth; the gaze of the gods likewise falls on the hotṛ’s camasa on the sacrificial altar.”
- प्राचैर्देवासः प्र णयन्ति देवयुं ब्रह्मप्रियम् — “brahman means food (Ni. [?–?] [?]). It is the established practice at the altar to bring to the Āhavanīya fire in the eastern direction the soma and other oblation-materials to be offered to the gods, and to consecrate them by reciting mantras. So they bring food that is dear to the gods to the east; the gods desire it — this is the chief sense.”
- जोषयन्ते वरा इव — “Concerning the gods’ desire for oblations, he gives a comparison: just as men who desire a lovely maiden as bride (kanyārthinaḥ), wishing that she may be theirs, make themselves anxious to win her by manifold courtesies, so the gods are eager, and strive, to gain the oblation prepared for them, the Soma juice” (the print at the end of this paragraph is clotted [?]).

- होत्रियम् — the root hu dānādanayoḥ, juhotyādi; with tṛ added, with guṇa, the word hotṛ is formed. In the sense ‘belonging to him’, by “tasyedam” (Pā. Sū. 4-3-120) the affix gha (ghaḥ); for gh by “āyaneyīniyiaḥ phaḍhakhachaghāṃ pratyayādīnām” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-2) the substitute iy; with the substitution made, the word hotriya is formed.
- अवः — “pūrvādharaṇāsi puradhavaś caiṣām” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-39) — a luptaprathamāka word (a word with the nominative elided). To the three words pūrvā, adhara, avara, in the sense of ‘the quarter’, the affix asi is added; with the asi-affix following, the three stems are replaced in order by pur, adh and av. Since the affix is added in the sense of the stem itself, the asi-affix gives the meaning of the stem; the conveying of meaning is a general property of an affix, so even if these (replacements) have no special meaning-conveying power, they are understood to be meaningful with the sense of their original stems; hence here asi is added in the sense ‘lower’. For the stem the substitute av arises; av+asi; since the i in the affix is for pronunciation, the word is an indeclinable ending in s; by the affix-accent it is final-udātta.

Grammar of Rik 83.2, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- प्राचैः — “like uccaiḥ, nīcaiḥ, this too is an indeclinable. Or, the root añcu preceded by the preposition pra takes the affix ka in the bhāva sense, whereby the form is made; the k of ka is a mark, the affix being non-taddhita, etc., it takes the designation it; since a kit affix follows, by”aniditām hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24) the n of the root añc is dropped; with the affix added it is an a-ending word. A doubt arises about adding ka here: by the vārttika “ghañarthe kavidhānam” (the affix ka is prescribed in the sense of ghañ) ka should be stated in the bhāva sense; but in the bhāṣya, as a remainder of that vārttika, a list is given: ‘sthāsnāpāvyadhīhanīyudhyarthām’ — that is, it is to be understood that ka in the sense of ghañ comes only for the roots read there. If so, how can ka be made when this root is not read there? — a question that arises. But the listing there is not to be taken as a restriction; it is a suggestive (upalakṣaṇa) list: ‘one should take also those similar to the roots listed’ — as when someone is told ‘protect the curds from the crows’ (kākebhyo dadhi rakṣyatām), the speaker does not intend that only crows are to be driven off: cats and other creatures that spoil the curds are to be driven off too. Likewise here, taking the similarity with the listed roots, one should surmise that ka in the sense of ghañ comes for other roots also.”

- जोषयन्ते — the root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ, tudādi; since the action of the instigator is to be shown, by “hetumati ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-26) the affix ṇic. Here a doubt arises: since only the agent (the gods) shows activity, and the one to be instigated has not been shown, how does the activity of the instigated (prayojya) appear? But in the matter of serving, the gods are themselves the prayojya, and so by accepting the instigated-ness that is in them, by “ṇicaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 1-3-74) the ātmanepada arises, since the fruit of the action goes to the agent. With the ṇic, when śap follows, guṇa and ay arise. ||2||

Sense: “In the Pravargya (rite) at the abhiṣpa (...) this Ṛk adhi dvayoḥ is used; it is stated in the section spṛṣṭvodakam: ‘adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṃ vacaḥ; śukraṃ te anyad yajataṃ te anyat’ (Āś. 4-6 [?]). This Ṛk is also used at the moving forward of the havirdhāna (the two oblation-carts): it is stated: ‘yamo iva yatamāne...; at the time of coming (yadā etam) he should begin the half-Ṛk adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṃ vacaḥ’ (Āś. 4-9 [?]). — O Indra, upon the two havirdhānas (carts bearing the oblations), you have placed (adadhāḥ) an ukthya, a śastra-fitting speech (vacaḥ), a statement of the form of the mantra yuñje vām... and so on. Objection: how can one speech be placed over two havirdhānas? The Brāhmaṇa has explained: ‘adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṃ vacaḥ — of the two, this third is to be “placed over”: the ukthya speech; for it is said, “the ukthya speech is a rite connected with the sacrifice; by it he prospers the sacrifice”’ (Ai. Brā. 1-38 [?]). As in the pair of havirdhānas one third (cover-piece of khadira wood) is placed over both, so one stotra is proper for the two. Uktha is the śastra related to the sacrifice; a speech suited to it is also sacrificial. Because by that placing the two havirdhānas, which are of the nature of the sacrifice, are made into the sacrifice, the sacrifice too is prospered. Of what kind are the two havirdhānas? Yatasrucā — those in which the srucs, the cups (graha, camasa) and the other vessels are bound together (yata). Mithunā — existing as a pair, those two pure havirdhānas that worship (saparyataḥ) you. And further, the sacrificer who has such havirdhānas, asaṃyattaḥ — not having gone to fight with enemies — dwells (kṣeti) in your (te) rite (vrata); he flourishes (puṣyati), is nourished with children and cattle; and for the sacrificer who presses Soma (sunvate) in the sacrifice dedicated to you there is bhadrā śaktiḥ — auspicious, excellent strength. All this you have done by placing the ukthya speech on the two havirdhānas.” The grammatical tail (characterized): yatasrucā — root yamu upame, the nasal dropped in the niṣṭhā; a bahuvrīhi with the first member’s accent; in the three words idam... the case-ending is ā by “supāṃ suluk...”; saparyataḥ — sapara pūjāyām, yak of the kaṇḍvādi group; kṣeti — kṣi nivāsagatyōḥ, luk of the stem-marker; sunvate — the fourth case in the sense of the sixth, by the statement; the case-ending udātta by “śatur anumah”.

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Indra, you have placed words of sacred praise with both kinds of oblations consisting of grain and butter ; the two oblations are placed together in ladles and jointly presented to you so that the sacrificer, undistrubed [sic] is engaged in your worship and is prosperous ; auspicious power is granted to the sacrificer who offers oblations.” — as printed (“undistrubed” a misprint [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 83.3)

The meaning of this Rk is difficult (toḍakāgīruvudu).

- द्वयोः — havirdhānayoḥ — “In the Rk there is only the word dvayoḥ; the bhāṣyakāra has explained it as havirdhānayoḥ, ‘of the two havirdhānas’. Yāska has given the etymology of the word havirdhāna: ‘havirdhāne havīṃśāṃ nidhāne’ — that is, ‘the vessel or place in which the oblations — the Soma — are placed: havirdhāna’. The word havirdhāna is not found anywhere in the R̥gveda. In the Yajurveda it occurs in mantras in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā (1-2-?-?; 6-1-?-?; 6-2-?...) and so on [numerals as read, all [?]]. There this word conveys the sense of a cart for carrying a load of Soma, or a hut in which the Soma is placed, or a vessel in which the Soma is placed. Soma is loaded into two carts called havirdhāna, and a single covering, of khadira wood (bhadi), is spread over both, and taken from the eastern portion (prācīnavaṃśa) to the northern altar. The bhadi is made of darbha grass [as read; khadira is the printed word, [?]]. The related sacrificial procedure, being lengthy, and its explanation being unnecessary here,

I have not given. See the discussion in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (1-[3?]-[?] [?]) for the rest.”

- उक्त्यं वचः — “When the covering called khadira [bhadi, as printed] is placed over the two vessels called havirdhāna in which the oblation is kept, the mantra of the form of a śastra that is said. For this the former half of the present Ṛk — adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṁ vaco yatasrucā mithunā yā saparyataḥ — is recited. One covering is used for covering the two havirdhānas; and since the covering is used to join them together, no separate mantras for each of the two havirdhānas are used; only one mantra is said. For that reason the expression ukthyaṁ vacaḥ — ‘a speech in the form of a śastra mantra’ — is in the singular. While joining these havirdhānas, they recite the mantra yuje vāṁ brahma pūrvyaṁ namobhir viśloka etu pathyeva sūreḥ | śṛṇvantu viśve amṛtasya putrā āye dhāmāni divyāni tasthuḥ || (Ṛk. Saṁ. 10-13-1 [?])” — Gloss, mine and tentative: “I join your ancient brahman with homages; let the fame (of the singer) go forth like a road of the sun [?]; let all the sons of the immortal hear, who have taken their divine stations.” (the gloss is tentative; the verse is garbled in the print at the second pāda [?]).

Special Topics of Rik 83.3, continued from p. 68 — the Sanskrit of the quoted Ṛk is:

युजे वां ब्रह्म पूर्व्यं नमोभिर्विश्लोक एतु पथ्येव सूरेः । शृण्वन्तु विश्वे अमृतस्य पुत्रा आ ये धामानि दिव्यानि तस्थुः ॥

yuje vāṁ brahma pūrvyaṁ namobhir viśloka etu pathyeva sūreḥ | śṛṇvantu viśve amṛtasya putrā ā ye dhāmāni divyāni tasthuḥ || (Ṛk. Saṁ. 10-[13]-1 [?])

- यतस्रुचा — “‘those holding in the hand the sruc, the wooden ladle for pouring Soma’: that is the meaning. The bhāṣyakāra says: yatāḥ saṁbaddhāḥ sruco grahacamasādilakṣaṇāni pātrāṇi yayos te — ‘those two in which the sruca, the vessels of the kind of graha and camasa cups, are bound’.”
- मिथुना — “two; that is, the two havirdhānas.”
- असंयत्तः — “the correct meaning of this word is ‘having put down the vessels such as the sruc that were in the hand’ (that is, ‘with the sruc etc. lowered’). The bhāṣyakāra says: śatrubhiḥ saha yuddhārtham anabhigataḥ san — ‘not having gone to fight with enemies’.”
- व्रते — “in the rite of the form of sacrifice.”
- क्षेति — nivasati — “he is a promoter, doing the performance of rites.”
- पुष्यति — prajāyā paśubhiḥ ca puṣṭo bhavati — “possessed of children, cattle, wealth and so on, he thrives.”
- भद्रा शक्तिः — kalyāṇī śaktiḥ, utkṛṣṭaṁ balam — “excellent, or great, strength.”

Special application: “There is a special application for this Ṛk: in the sacrifice called Pravargya this Ṛk adhi dvayoḥ is recited as stotra. This is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section spṛṣṭvodaḥ, by the sūtra ‘adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṁ vacaḥ, śukraṁ te anyad yajataṁ te anyat’ (Āś. 4-[6] [?]). And it is used when the covering called bhadi is placed over the two havirdhānas; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra indicates it with the sūtra ‘yamo iva yatamāne yadaitam adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṁ vaca ity ardharcam ārabhet’ (Āś. 4-[9] [?]).”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 83.3) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 70)

- यतसुचा — yatāḥ srucau yayos te (“those two in which the ladles are bound”). The root yamu uparame; with the affix ka, yam+ta; by “anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kñiti” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37) the nasal at the end of the root is dropped, since a jhal-initial kit affix follows; from the word yata, a bahuvrīhi compound with sruc.

(Running head: “Sāyaṇabhāṣyasahitā”; right: “Maṁ 1 A. 13 Sū. 83”).

Grammar of Rik 83.3, continued and concluded:

- यतसुचा (concluded) — “...as pointed out, it is a bahuvrīhi compound. By”bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member with its udātta-svarita keeps its natural accent; the sense is that by the retention of the natural accent in a first member having an udātta or a svarita, the first member is prakṛtibhāva. By this sūtra the first-member-accent arises here. Then, since yata is final-udātta by the affix-accent, the udātta-then-anudātta of su... “udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-4-66) turns the anudātta in the s of sruc into svarita; by “svaritāt saṁhitāyām anudāttānām” (Pā. Sū. 1-2-39) the praca arises for what follows sruc. When the dual affix is added after the word yatasruc, by “supāṁ suluk...” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the case-ending gets the substitute ā.”
- सपर्यतः — the root sapara pūjāyām; by “kaṇḍvādibhyo yak” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-27) the affix yak is added for its own sense to the kaṇḍvādi roots (a gaṇa read as ākṛtigaṇa); since sapara is read in the kaṇḍvādi group, yak arises after this too; the root-designation by “sanādyantā dhātavaḥ”; the form in the third person dual. Here by the root-accent the y would be udātta, and by the affix-accent the t; but by “tāsyānudāttēnīdadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the lasārvadhātuka after an a-upadeśa root is anudātta, so the accent of the yak wins since it is śit; the y, being udātta by the root-accent, ... by “udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-4-66) a svarita comes to the following anudātta.
- क्षेति — the root kṣi nivāsagatyōḥ, tudādi; kṣi+ti; by “tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77) śa would arise, but by “bahulaṁ chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-73) the luk of the stem-marker; when luk has occurred, by “nelumatāṅgasya” [as read: “na lumatāṅgasya”, Pā. Sū. 1-1-63] the stem-marker’s operation is not effective but, since sārvadhātuka is the cause, guṇa arises for the aṅga.
- सुन्वते — the fourth-case singular of the stem sunvat, from the root suñ abhiṣave; with śatṛ added, by “svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-73) the stem-marker śnu: su+nu+at; śatṛ being ñit (by “sārvadhātukam apit”), no guṇa for the stem-marker; by yaṇ-sandhi, sunvat. By “śaṣṭhyarthe caturthī vaktavyā” (Pā. Sū. 2-3-62, vārttika 1 [?]) the fourth case is used in the sense of the sixth; by “śatur anumō nadyajādī” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-173) the vowel-initial case-endings after a śatṛ-ending stem without num are udātta, so the fourth-case ending ne is udātta.

- मिथुना या — by “supām suluk...” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the first-case dual gets the substitute ā. ||3||

Sū. 6-4-14) the penultimate is lengthened; by "sko ḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-29) the initial s of the conjunct is dropped.
- शम्या — śamī is the name of a rite: śāmyaty anayā kriyayā doṣajātam iti śamī ("the faults are quieted by this act"). The root śama upaśame; the affix ghañ in the sense of instrument; when am+a stands, by "ata upadhāyāḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-116) ṽṛddhi would arise; but “nodāttopadeśasya māntasyānācameḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-34) prohibits vṛddhi for a root ending in m which has an anudātta-upadeśa — so no vṛddhi for the root; since it is read in the gaurādi group, by “ṣiḍgaurādibhyaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 4-1-41) ñiṣ... (continues on p. 74)

- शम्या (concluded) — “...by”yasyeti ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the ā [of śama] is dropped. By “kr̥ṣṭāṣṭhā...” [as read: “kar̥ṣātvalo ghaño ’nta udāttaḥ”, Pā. Sū. 6-1-159] final-udātta would arise; but by “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) the initial-udātta accent comes by vyatyaya.”
- सुकृत्या — śobhanaṁ kṛtyaṁ karaṇaṁ yasyāṁ sā sukr̥tyā (“that in which the performance is good”; the act in which the means is good). By “nañsubhyām” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) in a bahuvrīhi the final member of the compound after nañ and su is final-udātta, so the word sukr̥tyā is final-udātta. When the third-case singular ṭā is added, by “ājāḥ ṭāpaḥ” [as read: “āṇ nadyāḥ... / ṭāṇasiṇasām inātsyāḥ”, Pā. Sū. 7-1-12] the ā-ending stem takes ina ... the substitute ā for the ṭā, the ai... the ya replacement; since it precedes an udātta, the case-ending takes svarita on the anudātta.” ||4||

“When the Paṇi carried off the cows, the ṛṣi named Atharvan, addressing Indra, made sacrifices; by the help of that sacrifice he discovered, before anyone else, the path by which the cows had been carried off. Thereafter Indra, the protector of the rites and radiant, appeared in the form of the Sun to show that path. Atharvan, by this help, got the cows back. At that time Bhṛgu, the son of Kavi, became Indra’s helper for destroying the asuras. We worship with sacrifices such a deathless Indra, born to restrain the Rākṣasas.”

English Translation (Rik 83.5; printed in English in the source)

“Atharvan first discovered the path of the stolen cattles [sic: “cattle”] by sacrifices ; then the bright Sun (Indra) the protector of pious performances, was born ; Atharvan regained the cattle with the help of Usanas son of Kavi ; let us worship Indra who was born to destroy Asuras.” — as printed (in the print: “the stolen cattle”; I reproduce it as read, [sic] not needed).

- अमृतम् — marāṇarahitam — “(the immortal Indra), who is free of death.”
- अथर्वा — “a famous ṛṣi. His name occurs in many Ṛks, but we know little of his affairs.”
- वेनः, सूर्यः — “to these words the bhāṣyakāra has said that Indra appeared in the form of the shining Sun. Or one may say that the sense that fits well is: after the sun had risen and given light, the ṛṣi Atharvan saw the path by which the cows had been carried off.”
- व्रतपाः — vratānāṁ karmaṇāṁ pālayitā — “the protector of the rites such as sacrifices.”
- उशना काव्यः — kaveḥ putra uśanā bhṛguḥ — “Uśanas, the son of Kavi. He is called Bhṛgu. He is a famous ṛṣi. The name of this ṛṣi, called Kāvya, occurs in the Ṛgveda in 1-[121]-[12]; 1-[83]-[5]; 1-[130]-[9]; 6-[20]-[11]; 8-[23]-[17]; Atharvaveda 4-[?]-[?]; Taittirīya Saṁhitā 3-[?]-[?]-[?] and other mantras” (all reference numerals read from the small Kannada print and uncertain [?]).

- यमस्य जातम् — asurāṇāṃ niyamanārtham jātam — “born for the restraining of the asuras: born in order to subdue them.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 83.5) (grammar page, noted briefly; begins here)

- पथः — the second-case plural śas after the stem pathin; by “bhasya ṭer lopaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-88) the ḥi (final vowel together with what follows) of a bha-stem pathin is dropped; here, since the vowel-initial affix śas follows, the stem is bha-designated, so the ḥi is dropped. With the loss of in, path+as; ru and visarga make the form. Here, by “anudāttau suppitau” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) the case-ending would be anudātta; the stem pathin, by “pathimathyṛbhukṣām ā” ... [as read: “phiṣo ’nta udāttaḥ” (Phiṭ. Sū. 1)] being final-udātta by the Phiṭ-sūtra; when the anudātta follows, the udātta is lost (lopa), so by “anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161) the case-ending receives the udātta accent.

Grammar of Rik 83.5, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- तते — the root tanu vistāre, tanādi, svaritet (marked for either voice). Tan+te: u (the stem-marker u) would be added, but by “bahulaṃ chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-73) the luk of the stem-marker arises; by “anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kñiti” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37) the nasal n is dropped, giving tate. By “tiñ atīnaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28), since it follows an atīnanta, it would be wholly anudātta.
- अजनि — the root janī prādurbhāve, divādi; luñ, third person singular, in the agent sense. Jan+ta: cli arises generally; for it, by “dīpajanabudhapūritāyipyāyibhyo ’nyatarasyām” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-61) when a ta ending of the third singular follows, ciṇ is optionally the substitute; with ciṇ, by “ciṇo luk” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-104) the ta affix of the singular is dropped after ciṇ; the root ending in ñ-marked [ñ-mark] takes ... ājani, with the augment a: ājani.
- आजत् — the root aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ, bhvādi, with the stem-marker śap; lañ, third person singular; the i of tip is dropped by “itaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-100); since the root is vowel-initial the augment ā arises for the stem: ājat. ||5||

Sense: “When (yat, yadā) the barhis (sacred grass) is cut (vṛjyate) — fetched by the adhvaryu for use — for a rite that is the cause of good offspring (svapatyāya, ‘of good descent’); or when the arka — the hotṛ, the accomplisher of the stotra — in the shining (divi) sacrifice utters (āghoṣate) the śloka, the praise-speech; or when, at the time the pressing of Soma has begun, the pressing-stone (grāvā) sounds; (as an illustration:) like the kārū, the praiser, the reciter of the śastra (ukthya), who makes the desired sound — on all these occasions (abhipitveṣu, abhiprāptiṣu) Indra rejoices (raṇyati, ramate). Or: when the aforesaid barhis and so on have been fully obtained, Indra gives a cry of joy (harṣaśabda), ‘our union will be (accomplished).’”
The grammatical tail (characterized): vṛjyate — the passive of vṛjī varjane, with the yak accent remaining; āghoṣate — root ghuṣir viśabdane, no nighāta since the particle yat continues; raṇyati — root ramu kṛiḍāyām with śyan and parasmaipada by vyaṭyaya, or from raṇa ‘to sound’.”

Pratipadārtha of Rik 83.6, concluded: “अभिपित्वेषु — when occasions arrive; इन्द्रः — Indra; रण्यति — is gladdened or makes a sound indicating joy.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 83.6 (Kannada)

“Whether it is the time of cutting the pure darbha grass for the sake of an excellent rite, or the time when, in the shining sacrifice, the hotṛ, the accomplisher of the stotra, recites the stotra, or the time when the stone that presses Soma juice makes a sound pleasing like the praiser — on all these occasions Indra shows delight that the sacrifice addressed to him has come to its conclusion.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Whether the sacred grass is cut for the sacrifice, in order to bring down the blessings, whether the priest recites the sacred hymn in the brilliant sacrifice, whether the stone used to press the soma plant makes a sound like the priest who repeats the hymn, on all these occasions Indra rejoices.” — as printed.

- बर्हिः — “darbha grass whose tips have been cut. When sacrificing, the priests cut the tips of the darbha grass and spread them on the ground as seats. They pray to the gods to come and sit on them. The sound of the crackling when the darbha tips are cut makes Indra glad — that is the idea, since it is done for the sacrifice.”
- अर्कः — “the hotṛ or priest who recites Ṛks (mantras). In place of the word arkin the word arka has been used. In this sense the word arka is used in Ṛk. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?]” (numerals as read [?]).
- श्लोकः — “śloka ḥ śṛṇote ḥ (Ni. [6-9] [?]): śloka means a speech in the form of praise (Ni. [3-?] [?]).”

- ग्रावा — “the stone used for crushing the Soma plant to extract the juice. Yatra grāvā vadati means: the sound that arises as the Soma plant is crushed is pleasing to Indra. The convention of describing the sound of crushing the Soma plant with the stone by the words grāvā vadati is seen to be old. In yatra grāvā vadati tatra gacchata ṃ (Ṛk. Saṃ. 1-[135]-[?] [?]) and in other places there are examples.”

Special Topics of Rik 83.6, continued:

- कारुः — “the one who makes; that is, the one who makes the stotra. Kavi: this word is read in the Ṛgveda in the Ṛks 1-[?]-[?]; 2-[?]-[?]; 6-[?]-[?]; 10-[?]-[?] [numerals read from the small print and uncertain [?]]. Forms of this word, kārava ḥ, kārove, kārum and so on, occur in many Ṛks.”
- उक्थ्यः — “one who recites the śāstra mantra, the ṛtvij.”
- अभिपित्वेषु — pūrvoktānāṃ barhirādīnām abhiprāptiṣu — “when the words such as the cutting of the darbha, spoken of before, are heard...”
- रण्यति — asmadiyo yogo bhaviṣyatīti harṣaśabdaṃ karoti — “‘he makes a cry of joy, thinking that our union will come to pass’. Since the matters above, such as the cutting of darbha, are signs of the performance of the sacrifice, on hearing such sounds Indra is gladdened and utters a joyful sound to express his pleasure.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 83.6) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 81)

- वृज्यते — the root vṛjī varjane, rudhādi; laṭ in the passive sense; when the lakāra (laṭ) denoting the object follows, by “sārvadhātuke yak” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-67) the affix yak arises for the root; by “bhāvakarmaṇoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 1-3-13) the ātmanepada affix arises. If the accent of the affix were to be heard, then by “tāsyānudātennīdadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the lasārvadhātuka is anudātta because it follows an a-upadeśa root (vṛjī); then the yak accent alone remains, being śit; by “tiñ atinaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) total anudātta would arise, but by “nipātair yadyadihantakuvidnetracet...” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-30) the tiñanta is not anudātta when connected with these nipātas; here yat (in yad vṛjyate) is the connection, so the total anudātta did not arise.

- आघोषते — the root ghuṣir viśabdane, bhvādi, with the preposition ā; the ir is a mark; when the stem-marker śap follows, guṇa of the light penultimate. Here too, as before, the affix gets the final-udātta because the root is a-upadeśa; śap is pit, so anudātta; the root-accent (udātta) remains; for the anudātta śap after the udātta syllable svarita arises; the anudātta that follows a svarita is pracaṇa. As before there is no nighāta (total-anudātta), because of the connection with the preceding yat.
 - रण्यति — the root ramu krīḍāyām, bhvādi; since śap is the expected stem-marker, by “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) śyan arises in the Veda; the anudātta-it root also takes the parasmaipada by that very rule; ...it should be ramyati; here, then, (the page ends here; the remaining lines are on p. 81)

Grammar of Rik 83.6, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- रण्यति (concluded) — “...the change that comes at the end of the root — namely the substitution of ṛ for the m — is to be called a Vedic one; for this no anuśāsana (rule) is needed. Or the root is raṇa śabde; since it is bhvādi, the stem-marker śap is obtained, and, as before, śyan is to be enjoined by vyatyaya; as no Vedic alteration is supposed here, there is economy (lāghava). In the third person singular the form raṇyati results. By “tiṇ atinaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) total anudātta would arise, since abhipitveṣu [an atiṇanta] precedes the tiṇanta.” ||6||

Sense (as far as legible): “Asāvi — the eleventh sūkta (of the thirteenth anuvāka), of twenty Ṛks. The Anukramaṇī says: ‘asāvi — twenty: six Anuṣṭubh, Uṣṇīh, and the triads in Pañkti, Gāyatrī and Triṣṭubh; a prāgātha.’ The first six are Anuṣṭubh; from the seventh three are Uṣṇīh; from the tenth three are Pañkti; from the thirteenth three are Gāyatrī; from the sixteenth three are Triṣṭubh; the nineteenth is Bṛhatī and the twentieth Satobṛhatī. The ṛṣi is Gotama, by continuation; the deity is Indra by the rule of ‘no (other) assignment’. The application of the sūkta is to be understood by indication [?]. In the Śoḍaśin-śāstra (avihṛta, ‘unseparated’) the first two triads are stotriya and anurūpa; it is stated in the sūtra: ‘atha śoḍaśī — asāvi soma indra te — the stotriya and anurūpa’ (Āś. 6-2 [?]). In the abhiplava ukthya (rites), at the third pressing, these very two triads are optional stotriya and anurūpa of the Acchāvāka (the rest of this sentence is broken in the print [?]); it is stated: ‘asāvi soma indra te; imam indra sutaṃ piba’ (Āś. 7-8 [?]).”

Anuvāda (Kannada): “Asāvi soma — this sūkta is the eleventh in the thirteenth anuvāka. There are twenty Ṛks in it. The Anukramaṇikā says ‘asāvi viṃśatiḥ śaḍanuṣṭubha uṣṇīhaḥ pañktigāyatrītriṣṭubhas tṛcāḥ prāgātha’. That is: the first six Ṛks of this sūkta are in the anuṣṭubh metre; from seven, three Ṛks are in uṣṇīk; from ten, three Ṛks in pañkti; from thirteen, three Ṛks in gāyatrī; from sixteen, three Ṛks in triṣṭubh; the nineteenth Ṛk is in bṛhatī and the twentieth in satobṛhatī. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama; the deity is Indra; the application of the sūkta follows from the sense. In the Śoḍaśin-śāstra mantras (avihṛta) the first six Ṛks (two triads) are to be recited as stotriya mantras, as explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra ‘atha śoḍaśī: asāvi soma indra te iti stotriyānurūpau’; and also in the Abhiplava and Śaḍaha sacrifices the sage called Acchāvāka, in the third-pressing rite, may optionally recite these two triads — the first six Ṛks — as stotriya mantras in the ukthya-śāstra; this is indicated in the section ayūṣu of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra ‘asāvi soma indra te imam indra sutaṃ piba’.” (the Sanskrit and Kannada differ slightly in the sūtra citations; recorded as printed; reference numerals [?]) Sense: “O Indra, Soma has been pressed (asāvi) for you. O śaviṣṭha — exceedingly mighty — and therefore dhṛṣṇo, subduer of enemies, come (ā gahi) to the place of sacrifice. “O Indra, Soma juice has been pressed and made ready for you. O exceedingly mighty one, and therefore subduer of enemies, graciously come to the place of the divine sacrifice. As the sun fills the middle region with his rays, may the abundant strength gained by drinking Soma juice fill your whole body.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Indra, the Soma has been expressed for you ; mightiest and brave Indra, come (to our sacrifice) ; may strength inspired by Soma-libations, fill you as the Sun fills the firmament with his rays.” — as printed.

- धृष्णो — śatrūṇāṃ dharṣayituḥ — “one who subdues the pride of enemies; the valorous.”
- इन्द्रियम् — “valour, strength.”
- रजः — “since for this word (rajasī) the sense ‘heaven and earth’ is given (Ni. [2-9] [?]), the sense ‘as the sun’s rays pervade the earth and the middle region’ can also be given where needed.”
- न — “the word na here conveys the sense of comparison, ‘like’ (iva).”

- शविष्ठ — to śavasvin (from śavas) in the superlative sense the affix iṣṭhan by “atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-55); śavas means strength; since vin arose by “asmāyāmedhāsrajo vini” (Pā. Sū. 5-2-121) the word śavasvin is formed; with śavasvin+iṣṭha, by “vinmatorluk” [as read: “vinmatorluk”, Pā. Sū. 5-3-65] the vin is dropped when iṣṭhan, īyasun follow, so śavas+iṣṭha; by “ṭeḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-155) the ṭ of a bha-stem is dropped before iṣṭhan, īmanic, īyasun: the as of śavas is dropped. Since śaviṣṭha stands at the head of the pāda, by the exclusion “apādādaḥ” no nighāta accent arises.
- गहि — the root gam! gatau, bhvādi; loṭ, second person singular, with hi for sip: gam+hi; śap would arise, but by “bahulaṃ chandasi” the luk of the stem-marker; as it is luk there is no sthānivadbhāva. For this reason the śap being the cause, the substitute cha by “iṣugamiyamāṃ chaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-77) does not arise. By “anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām...” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37) the nasal is dropped; since hi is said to be apit, it is ñit, so the m of gam (with a nasal) is dropped. Gah+hi ...: by “ato heḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105) the luk of hi would come after an a-ending; but by “asiddhavad atrābhāt” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-22) operations in the bha section are treated as non-effective in respect of earlier ones; the nasal-loss is enjoined in the bhādhikāra, and so is the hi-loss; so, when the hi-loss is made, the nasal-loss is treated as non-effective; therefore, since the m is still present, the a is not before hi, and the hi is not dropped. ||1||

Sū. 4-1-161 [?]) the two affixes añ and yat come after the word manu; when they follow, the stem gets the augment ṣuk. The stem-and-affix combination should show a sense of jāti (birth, class). The operations that follow come about. Here the affix añ has come; with manu+añ, since ṣuk is kit, it becomes the final element of manu [manus]; the ñ of añ is a mark; since añ has ñ, by “taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-117) the first vowel of the stem takes vṛddhi. When the sixth-case plural ām follows the word mānuṣa, by “hrasvanadyāpo nuṭ” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-54) ām gets the augment nuṭ; by “nāmi” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-3) a vowel-ending stem is lengthened before nām; by “raṣābhyām no ṇaḥ samānapade” (Pā. Sū. 8-4-1) the n after r or ṣ in the same word becomes ṇ, here because it follows the ṣ of the ṣuk.” ||2||

- युक्ता ते ब्रह्मणा हरी — “‘Your horses have been yoked to the chariot by the stotras we make’: that is, in the 3rd Rk of the sūkta [sic: the print reads ‘in the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th Rks’] — yojā nv indra te harī — ‘yoke, O Indra, your horses to the chariot’ — having heard our prayer made so, to come to our sacrifice you yoked the horses to the chariot; therefore, it is said here, ‘your horses have been yoked to the chariot by our stotras’.” (The Kannada here refers back to the refrain of the previous sūkta, 82, Riks 1–4 yojā nv indra te harī [as read, reference [?]].)
- अर्वाचीनम् — “facing, turned towards.”

- ग्रावा कृणोतु वग्नूना — “In the sacrifice, they crush the soma plant with stones to make the Soma juice ready for you. May the sound of it be heard by you and turn your mind towards us — the ṛṣi prays thus.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.3) (grammar page, noted briefly)

- युक्ता — the root yujir yoge; the affix cta in the sense of the object (karman); yuj+ta: by “coḥ kuḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30) the j becomes g [the ku letter], and by “khari ca” (Pā. Sū. 8-4-55) carva arises, so k; the word is a kṛdanta so it has the designation prātipadika; in the dual first-case ending, by “supām suluk...” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the case-ending gets the substitute ā.
- वग्नूना — the root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; “vacer gaś ca” (Uṇ. Sū. 3-[33] [?]) — the affix nu after the root vac, and g in place of the c as final substitute; when the third-case singular follows, by “ājo nāstriyām” [as read: “āño nāstriyām”, Pā. Sū. 7-3-120] the substitute nā arises. ||3||

Sense: “O Indra, drink this pressed (sutam) Soma. Of what kind? Jyeṣṭham — exceedingly praiseworthy; madam — intoxicating; amartyam — not deadly: the intoxication produced by drinking Soma, unlike other intoxications, does not kill. And the streams (dhārāḥ) of this radiant Soma, present in the house (sadane) of the sacrifice (ṛtasya), flow (abhy akṣaran) towards you, reach you; they come of their own accord.” The grammatical tail: jyeṣṭham — iṣṭhan after praśasya, with jyā as substitute (Pā. 5-3-61 [?]); akṣaran — the root kṣara sañcalane, a Vedic lañ.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha of Rik 84.4 (Kannada)

- इन्द्र — “O Indra”
- सुतम् — “that has been pressed”
- ज्येष्ठम् — “the best”
- मदम् — “that gives delight”
- अमर्त्यम् — “(unlike other intoxicating substances) not deadly, though intoxicating”
- इमम् — “this Soma juice”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.4 (Kannada)

“O Indra, the best, giving delight, and — unlike other intoxicating substances — not destructive: drink this Soma juice that has been pressed. The streams of this shining Soma juice flow towards you in the house of the sacrifice. Drink them.”

English Translation (Rik 84.4; printed in English in the source)

“Indra, drink this excellent, immortal and exhilarating Soma-juice. In this house of sacrifice the streams of brilliant Soma are flowing towards you.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.4)

- ज्येष्ठम् — “the best, the highest; excellent.”
- अमर्त्यम् — “free of death; one that does no harm of any kind; immortal.”

- मदम् — madakaram — “one that gives delight; that opens the mind with joy; exhilarating.”
- शुक्रस्य — “śukra means water also (Ni. [1-12] [?]). Yāska has given the etymology of the word śukra: ‘śukraṁ śocater jvalatikarmaṇaḥ’ (Ni. [? -?] [?]) — ‘śukra is from śocati, a verb of burning’. In this Rk the sense is ‘water that shines’, that is, the Soma juice.”
- त्वाम् अभ्यक्षरन् — kṣara sañcalane — “they flow to your neighbourhood. Since this Soma juice is made ready for you, the juice that comes flowing wants you alone — that is the intent.”
- ऋतस्य — yajñasya — “although the word ṛta has the sense ‘truth’, it is conventional for it to convey the sense ‘sacrifice’. Ṛta means the true action, that is, the sacrifice. Ṛtasya sādane means ‘in the sacrificial house in which sacrificial acts are performed’.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.4) (grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 91)

- ज्येष्ठम् — after the word praśasya, in the sense of excess, the affix iṣṭhan by “atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-55). “Praśasyasya śraḥ” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-60) — the continuing sense of “ajādī guṇavacanād eva” — the sense ‘beginning with a vowel’ continues; when an affix beginning with a vowel follows, śra is the substitute for praśasya. By “jyaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-61) when iṣṭhan or iyasun follows, jya is the substitute for praśasya: jya+iṣṭha; by “yasyeti ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the dropping of a would be obtained, but by “prakṛtyaikāc” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-163) a monosyllabic stem keeps its natural form before iṣṭhan, etc.; thus no alteration occurs. This prakṛtibhāva, it is stated in the bhāṣya, is enjoined to override all the elisions in the taddhita section. When guṇa (of jya+iṣṭha) is made, jyeṣṭha results.

Grammar of Rik 84.4, continued from p. 90:

- सुतम् — the root suñ abhiṣave; kta in the passive; because it is k-marked no guṇa for the root; by the affix-accent it is final-udātta.
- पिब — the root pā pāne, bhvādi; by “pāghrādhmā...” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) the substitute piba when śap follows; piba is a substitute ending in a; hence, when śap follows, the doubt of the light-penultimate guṇa (after i) has no scope; by “ato guṇe” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the single following form results from the a; since it is before an a the sip-substitute hi is dropped by “ato heḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105); since an atiñanta (sutam) precedes, nighāta (anudātta) arises.
- अक्षरन् — the root kṣara sañcalane, bhvādi; by “chandasi luñlañliṭaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the lañ in the sense of the present; for the plural jhi the substitute ant; by “itaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-100) a [loss of the i]; the final t drops by conjunct-final loss; the augment aṭ for the stem; with a+kṣar+a+n, by “ato guṇe” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the single form; by “tiñ atiñah” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) total anudātta.

- त्वा — tvām: by “dvitīyāyām ca” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-23) the substitutes tvā and mā come for yuṣmad and asmad in the second case; so here for yuṣmad in the second case the substitute tvā. ||4||

Sense (as far as legible): “O priests, quickly (nūnam) worship (arcata) Indra — do the worship; ... and speak (bravītana = brūta) the ukthāni, the stotras to be accomplished by well-sung mantras. May the pressed (sutāḥ) indavaḥ, the Somas, make Indra glad (amatsuḥ); afterwards pay homage (namasyata) to that Indra, who is the jyeṣṭham sahaḥ — the most praiseworthy, the strong, the possessed of might.” The grammatical tail: bravīta — tana as the substitute of the loṭ ending ta; amatsuḥ — madī harṣe, the Vedic luṇ in the sense of prayer; namasyata — kyac by “namovarivaścitraṇaḥ kyac” [the rest of the entry is illegible].”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha of Rik 84.5 (Kannada; legible in sense)

“O priests, offer worship to Indra with attention. Recite the stotras of the form of mantras. Let the pressed Soma juices make Indra joyful and intoxicated. Salute that Indra, the best of the best and strong.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Offer worship quickly to Indra ; recite hymns in his honour ; let the distilled Soma drops exhilarate [sic] him ; adore his great strength.” — as printed (“exhilarate” a misprint [sic]; the line is partly blurred in the scan).

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.5) (grammar page, noted briefly)

- ब्रवीतन — the root brūñ vyaktāyāṃ vāci, adādi; the loṭ second person plural with the affix tha; by “loṭo laṇvat” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) the laṇ-like state arises; in the laṇ, for tha by “tasthasthamipāṃ tām̐tam̐tāmaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute ta; with brū+ta, by “taptanaptanathanāś ca” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-45) the substitute tana comes in the Veda for ta of the loṭ (by the continuing word tasya); by vyatyaya the pit-hood arises for tana; by “bruva iṭ” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-93) iṭ is the augment for the root before it; by “sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa, and av replacement: bravītana.

- अमत्सुः — the root madi harṣe, divādi; by “chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the luṇ in the sense of prayer (‘let them make (him) joyful’). Before the plural jhi, cli arises; for it the substitute sic; by “sicaś ca” ... “sijabhyastavidibhyaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-109) the substitute jus for the jhi that follows sic in the luṇ; of jus only us remains; the augment aṭ for the stem; with amad+s+us, iṭ would be obtained for sic as a valādi; but “āgamaśāstram anityam” (a paribhāṣā) says the rules enjoining augments are non-universal, so no iṭ arises; “ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-35), being a rule of this iṭ, is therefore non-universal; by “khari ca” (Pā. Sū. 8-4-55) carva for the d of the root, giving amatsuḥ.
- नमस्यत — a denominative; by “namovarivaścitraṇaḥ kyac” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-19) — the word karaṇa (‘doing’) continues — the affix kyac comes after namas, varivas, citraṇ in the senses of worship, service, wonder respectively; since kyac is of the sanādi group, the kyac-ending namasya gets the root-designation; the loṭ second person plural, tha replaced by ta, as before.
- सहः — “the word sahas occurs in the sense of strength. Here it is used in the sense ‘one who has that’. In the sūtra “matvarthe māsatannoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 4-4-[?]) the vārttika “lugakāreṇa... vaktavyāḥ” is read: the affix enjoined in the matup sense is dropped; here, since the stem ends in as, vin would be obtained in the matup sense; by this vārttika luk of the matup-sense affix arises, though the sense is shown. Yaḥ śiṣyate saḥ... (the remainder of the sentence is on p. 94)

Sense: “O Indra, since you yoke (yacchase) your two bays, the horses of that name, to the chariot, therefore no one other than you is rathītaraḥ — exceedingly possessed of a chariot (a better charioteer): none (nakiḥ) exists, because others have no chariot yoked with such horses. - त्वा — “(looking to) you”
- मज्जना — “equal in strength”
- नकिः — “no one”
- स्वश्वः — “any other with good horses, yoked (to the chariot)”
- नकिः आनशे — “none has overtaken you (driven after you).”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.6 (Kannada)

“O Indra, when you yoke your horses called Hari to the chariot, there is no charioteer who surpasses you. There is none who has strength like you. However excellent the horses he drives, none can drive the chariot after you, leaving you behind.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

- नकिष्ट्वत् — nakiḥ + tvat (a division of the words). Nakis is an indeclinable ending in s. In nakis+tvat, by “yuṣmattattatakṣuḥṣvantaḥpādam” (युष्मत्तत्तक्षुःष्वन्तःपादम्, Pā. Sū. 8-3-103) the s in the middle of a pāda gets ṣatva when it is followed by the substitutes of yuṣmad beginning with t — tvat, tat, tatakṣus [the takṣus forms] — all of which are substitutes for yuṣmad etc.; here tvat is that substitute; when ṣatva has occurred, by “ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-4-41) the ṣṭutva sandhi follows for the t after ṣ.

- रथीतरः — atiśayena rathī (‘exceedingly possessed of a chariot’). By “dvivacanavibhajyopapade tarabīyasunau” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-57) the affix tarap in the sense of excess. Rathī — ‘he who has a chariot’ — the affix ini after ratha in the matup sense by

- यच्छसे — the root yamu upame, parasmaipadī, bhvādi; by “vyatyayo bahulam” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) by vyatyaya the ātmanepada affix arises; with śap following, by “iṣugamiyamām chaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-77) cha is the final substitute. Or the root is dān dāne, for which, by “pāghrā...”, yaccha arises as the substitute; this too being parasmaipadī, the ātmanepada is to be explained by vyatyaya only. In the loṭ [laṭ] second person singular the form is as stated.
- स्वश्वः — śobhanau aśvau yaśya saḥ svaśvaḥ (‘one who has two good horses’): a bahuvrīhi compound. By “nañsubhyām” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) the final-udātta of the word aśva following su would be obtained; but “ādyudāttaṁ dvyacchandasi” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-119) — a two-syllabled word with initial udātta remains initial-udātta in the Veda after su — so here the accent of the final member (initial-udātta) is retained. By “āsūpruṣīṣīṣikaṇikaṭikaṭipāṭibhyaḥ kvan” [as read: “āsūpruṣī...”, Uṇ. Sū. 1-[149] [?]] the word aśva, being kvan-ending, has initial-udātta by nit-accent; being two-syllabled, and su being the preceding member, the initial-udātta is heard.
- आनशे — the root aśū vyāptau, svādi, anudātte ṭ, li ṭ, third person singular; when vivakṣā is made for the ātmanepada, the affix ta; by “liṭas tajhayor eṣirec” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-81) the substitute eś for ta ... (continues on p. 97)

Grammar of Rik 84.6, concluded:

- आनशे (concluded) — “...eś arises; with liṭ as the cause, doubling of the root; with a hal-remnant: a+aś+e. By “ata ādeḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-70) the initial a of the reduplicative is lengthened; where “ato guṇe” would obtain the single following form, this sūtra is begun as an exception to it. When the reduplicative is lengthened, by “aśnoteś ca” [as read: “aśnoter...”, Pā. Sū. 7-4-72] the root aś, with a long-vowel reduplicative, takes the augment nu ṭ; with the augment at the beginning of the root, the form ānaśe arises.” || 6||

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha of Rik 84.7 (Kannada)

- यः — “which Indra”
- एक इत् — “alone”
- दाशुषे — “to the one who offers oblations”
- मर्ताय — “the man”
- वसु — “wealth”
- विदयते — “(gives specially)”
- (सः) — “such”
- अप्रतिष्कृतः — “(who is) without opposing words”
- इन्द्रः — “Indra”
- अङ्ग — “quickly”
- ईशानः — “becomes the lord (of the whole world).”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.7 (Kannada)

“He who specially favours with wealth the man who offers oblations — he is none other than Indra, who has no opposing word and is the lord of the whole world. This is certain.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“He who alone quickly bestows wealth upon the man who offers him oblations is the undisputed sovereign Indra.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगल्लु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.7)

“In the sacrifice called Abhiplavaṣaḍaha, in the third-pressing rite, the Brāhmaṇācchaṃsin may optionally use the three Ṛks beginning ya eka id vidayate as stotra-mantras; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the section aihyūṣu by the sūtra ‘sakhāya āśiṣāmahi ya eka id vidayate’ (Āś. [7-8] [?]). In the Mahāvrata also, at the time of reciting the niṣkevalya-śastra mantras, these three Ṛks are to be recited as mantras of the Uṣṇih metre; this is indicated in the fifth Āraṇyaka of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka by the sentence ‘ya eka id vidayata āyohādribhiḥ’ (Ai. Ā. [5]-[?]-[?] [?]).”

- अङ्ग — “In this R̥k, and in the next two R̥ks as well, in the last pāda the words indro aṅga (‘Indra, aṅga’) are read. For the word aṅga Yāska says: ‘aṅgeti kṣipranāma; aṅgam aṅcanād vā aṅgitaṃ ca kṣaṇena bhavati gatam ity arthaḥ; aṅcanād vā aṅceḥ...’ (Ni. [?·?] [?]) — ‘aṅga is a name for “quickly”; or from aṅcana (going), what is “gone” in an instant’ — the print gives the explanation ‘the word aṅga also is derived from one of two roots of the sense of going, aṅganāt and aṅcanāt; both these roots mean going; hence the sense ‘going quickly’ must be given to aṅga’. The bhāṣyakāra has explained this word as kṣipra, ‘quickly’. Western scholars, because the word occurs here in this R̥k and in the next two with the word indra, and because no meaning fits it elsewhere, take the word aṅga as an exclamation of wonder.”
- अप्रतिष्कृतः — paryair apratiśabditaḥ pratikūlaśabdarahitaḥ — “one against whom no one speaks: undisputed, unopposed, with no one to oppose what he says.”

- विद्यते — vi is a preposition; the root daya dānagatirakṣaṇahiṃsādāneṣu, bhvādi, ātmanepadī; had the stem-marker śap been made, dayate would result; since śap is pit, by “anudāttau suppitau” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) it is anudātta; if the accent of the affix ta were udātta, then by “tāsyānudātennīdadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) it would be anudātta, being lasārvadhātuka; then the root-accent alone remains, and, by “dhātoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-162), the root’s final vowel is udātta; when the a-vowel of ya is udātta, the y [ya] before an udātta syllable is svarita, and the anudātta syllables after the svarita become pracaya. By “tiñ atinaḥ” the total anudātta would arise; but “nipātail yadyadihantakuvit...” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-30) bars the nighāta, since yaḥ in the previous pāda is connected.
- अप्रतिष्कृतः — na pratiṣkutaḥ apratiṣkutaḥ; prati is a preposition; the root ku śabde, adādi; the affix cta in the passive; because it is k-marked no guṇa for the root; “what is made to sound (kūyate) against” is pratiṣkuta, one ‘spoken against’; the word apратиṣkuta is made in the sense ‘one who is not (spoken against)’. By “pāraskaraprabhṛtīni ca saṃjñāyām” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-157) the words listed in this gaṇa take su ṭ and are nipātita when they are names. This is an ākṛtigaṇa: that is, words that are likewise su ṭ-bearing by other śāstras may be understood to be included in this gaṇa. Thus pratiṣkuta is found with su ṭ; for this there is no other rule, so one must understand that it is read in the pāraskara gaṇa. Su ṭ ...

Grammar of Rik 84.7, concluded:

- अप्रतिष्कृतः (concluded) — “...since su ṭ is neither a substitute nor an affix, ṣatva does not come by” ādeśapratyayayoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-59); hence, since su ṣāmādi words are read in the su ṣāmādi group, “su ṣāmādiṣu ca” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-98) gives ṣatva. Na pratiṣkutaḥ apratiṣkutaḥ: a nañ-compound; the n of nañ is dropped by “nalopo nañah” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-73) before a following member that begins with a vowel [a-initial?]; only a remains. By “avyaye nañ kunipātānām” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[?]) the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its natural accent: a is udātta; since it precedes an udātta, the a of pra in prati becomes svarita; the remaining anudāttas after the svarita become pracaya.” ||7||

Sense: “Arādhāsam — one lacking rādhas, wealth in the form of oblations: that is, a non-sacrificer. When will Indra sphurat — will he kick, strike down (vadhiṣyati) such a mortal with his foot, like a kṣumpā — a toadstool-like mushroom (ahicchatraka, ‘snake’s umbrella’)? English Translation (printed in English in the source)

- पदा — the third-case singular of the word pād; with ṭā following, by “padd annṛnniśasan...” [as read: “pad-dan-no-mās-hṛn-niś-asan-yūṣan-doṣan-yakañ-chakan-udan-āsan-chu-prabhṛtiṣu”, Pā. Sū. 6-1-63] the substitute pad for pād; so the form is padā; by “ūḍidaṁ padādi...” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) the case-ending is udātta.
- क्षुम्पमिव — the root kṣubha sañcalane; ghaṇ in the sense of the object; since ghaṇ follows, by the word bahulam the augment num arises for the root though no cause is present; by vyatyaya, p is the substitute for the bh of the root; the form kṣumpa.
- स्फुरत् — the root sphura sañcalane; by “chandasi luṇlaṇṇiṭaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the laṇ in the sense of the future (lṛṭ); by “bahulaṁ chandasy amānyoge ’pi” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come; the stem-marker śa by “tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77), being ñit by “sārvadhātukam apit” the guṇa of the root is barred by “kniti ca” (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5); by “itaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-100) the i of the affix is dropped; the form sphurat; by “tiṇ atinaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) the nighāta accent.
- शुश्रवत् — the root śru śravaṇe; the leṭ, third person singular, the affix ti; by “itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-97) the loss of the i; by “bahulaṁ chandasi” (Pā. Sū.

2-4-76) ślu for śap; by “leṭo ‘ḍāṭau” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ for the affix; by “ślau” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) reduplication of the root; with the hal-remnant, the ik of the root takes guṇa; av replacement; the form śuśravat. ||8||

- त्वा — from the stem yuṣmad in the second-case singular, by “tvāmau dvitīyāyāḥ” [as read: “tvāmau dvitīyāyāḥ”, Pā. Sū. 8-1-23] the final of the stem with the case-ending is replaced by the anudātta substitute tvā.
- सुतावान् — by “dīrghād aṭi samānapāde” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-9) the n, since a follows (in the next word), becomes ru; by “ato ‘ci nityam” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[?]) the nasalization of the vowel before the ru arises.
- आविवासति — the root vivāsa upasevāyām, loṭ [la ṭ], third person singular. Since yaḥ is in the preceding connection, no nighāta accent arises. Since śap is anudātta, the lasārvadhātuka after it, by “tāsyānudātenñidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186), is anudātta; the root-accent remains.
- तत् — the stem tad, the fourth-case singular; by “supāṁ suluk...” the case-ending is dropped.
- पत्यते — the root patḥ gatau; since the sense of causation is included in the root (antarbhāvitaṇyārtha) the laṭ, third person singular, ātmanepada, with the affix ta; by “ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) e; by “vyatyayo bahulam” the śyan stem-marker: patyate; by “tiñ atīñāḥ” the total anudātta. ||9||

On the fifth day of the Pṛṣṭhya (ṣaḍaha), in the Niṣkevalya, this triad is the anurūpa; stated in the section stome vardhamāne: ‘svādor itthā viśūvata upa no haribhiḥ sutam’ (Āś. 8-12 [?]). — Svādoḥ — of the sweet, flavourful madhu, the sweet-juiced Soma, viśūvataḥ — that in this way pervades all sacrifices (itthā): of such Soma the white (gauryaḥ) cows drink (pibanti). (The genitive stands in the sense of the fourth case, because ‘the object is the sampradāna’, by the statement ‘the verb must be taken’.) Those cows that, for splendour (śobhase), go (sayāvarīḥ) together with the showerer of desires (vṛṣṇā) Indra, become glad (madanti): they drink the remainder of the Soma drunk by Indra. Vasvīḥ — those cows that, by giving milk, give dwelling; svarājyam anu — following (heeding) the sovereignty (rājya) of their own Indra.” The grammatical tail (characterized): viśūvataḥ — the root viś/vyāptau with an Uṇādi ku-affix, then matup (udātta), the lengthening in the Saṃhitā, va for ma by vyatyaya; madhvaḥ — yaṇ in place of u when no guṇa; gauryaḥ — nīṣ in the gaurādi group; sayāvarīḥ — vanip after yā, nīp and r; madanti — śap for śyan by vyatyaya; vasvīḥ — from vasa nivāse with the u-affix; the discussion of the nīṣ after u-ending adjectives (Kā. 4-1-44, vārttika 1 [?]); svarājyam — final-udātta of the compound’s last member.”

“White-coloured cows drink the sweet Soma juice, full of flavour and pervading all sacrifices in one and the same way. The cows follow Indra, who fulfils their desired objects, in order that their splendour may grow; having drunk the Soma juice drunk by him, they obtain satisfaction. And, giving milk, they dwell in their cow-sheds, heeding the sovereignty of Indra, their own.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“The white cows drink of the sweet Soma-juice prepared in every sacrifice ; the cows that go with bountiful Indra appear beautiful and are beneficent [sic] in accordance with his sovereignty.” — as printed (“beneficent” as printed [sic]).

“On the last day of the twenty-four-day sacrifice (cāturviṃśa), at the midday pressing, the priest called Acchāvāka may optionally recite the triad svādor itthā viśūvataḥ (three Ṛks); this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section hotrakāṇām, by the sūtra ‘yaḥ satrāhā vicarṣaṇiḥ svādor itthā viśūvataḥ’ (Āś. [7-4] [?]). And on the fifth day of the Prṣṭhya sacrifice the application of this triad (three Ṛks) is for the niṣkevalya-śastra mantras; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the section stome vardhamāne by the sūtra ‘svādor itthā viśūvata upa no haribhiḥ sutam’ (Āś. [8-12] [?]).”

- विषूवतः — viṣ/vyāptau; sarvayajñeṣu vyāptiyuktasya — “pervading all sacrifices: that is, prepared in all sacrifices for offering to the gods.”
- मध्वः — “of the sweet portion of Soma juice. Although the word somasya is not here, for the word madhvaḥ the sense ‘tasty Soma juice’ is to be given. To indicate the sense of Soma juice the use of the word madhu alone is conventional in the Ṛgveda.”

- सयावरी: — sahagacchantyaḥ — “going together with Indra, being with Indra.”
 - वृष्णा — kāmābhivarṣakeṇa — “from Indra, who showers desired things.”
 - वस्वी: — vasa nivāse; payaḥpradānena nivāsakāriṇyaḥ — “dwelling (in the cow-sheds); by giving milk they make what is favourable to dwelling. Hence the cows are called vasvīḥ.”
 - स्वराज्यम् — “what svarājya means here the bhāṣyakāra has not stated clearly. He explains: ‘These cows, by giving milk, are the means of providing habitation.’ Under Indra’s overlordship, cows giving milk at will are suitable for people to dwell by; this prosperous sovereignty may be said to be in Indra’s nourishing. At the end of this Ṛk and of the next two Ṛks the words vasvīḥ anu svarājyam are read again and again; in these usages the ṛṣi’s intention is not clear.”

- विषूतः — the root viṣ/vyāptau; the Uṇādi affix ku; because it is k-marked, no guṇa of the light penultimate; the word viṣu. Viṣuḥ asya asti iti viṣūvat: by “tad asyāsty asminni” (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) matup; by vyatyaya, though no cause is present, v for the m of matup; by “hrasvanuḍbhyām matup” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-176) since it follows a short vowel, matup is udātta; by “anyeṣām api dṛśyate” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137) the first part of matup is lengthened in the Samhitā; in the sixth-case singular viṣūvataḥ results.
- मध्वः — madhu+jas [as printed; sixth-case singular is meant]. When the sixth-case singular follows, by the word vā of “jasādiṣu chandasi vāvacanam” (vārttika) the u does not take guṇa as it would by “gher nīti” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-111); since guṇa is absent, yaṇ for the ik by “iko yaṇaci” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-77); ru and visarga for the s of the affix: madhvaḥ. Since “kriyāgrahaṇam kartavyam” is said in the bhāṣya, even though the root dā is absent, here the object takes sampradāna-designation, and so the sixth case arises in the sense of the fourth.
- पिबन्ति — the root pā pāne; laṭ, third person plural; by “pāghrādhmāsthā...” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) piba is the substitute; anta for jhi; since an atiṇanta precedes, nighāta accent.
- गौर्यः — “ṣiḍgaurādibhyaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 4-1-41) nīṣ in the feminine; “yasyeti ca” drops the a; with gaurī+jas, “dirghāj jasi ca” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[?]) forbids the single prior long; so yaṇ; then, since the udātta ī is replaced by yaṇ, by “udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito nudāttasya” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) the anudātta of the case-ending jas that follows becomes svarita.
- सयावरी: — the root yā prāpaṇe; by “āto maninkvanipvanipāś ca” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-74) the affix vanip; in the feminine by “vano ra ca” (Pā. Sū. 4-1-7) nīp and r for the n; saha yāntyaḥ sayāvaryaḥ; with jas, by “supām suluk-pūrvasavarṇa...” the lengthening; vanip is pit so it is anudātta; the root-accent remains; by “gatiḥ kārakopapadāt kṛt” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the first member keeps its natural accent in the compound.

“Those cows of many colours, desiring Indra’s beneficial touch, mix with their milk the Soma juice that he is to drink. Those cows, dear to Indra, urge on his enemy-destroying thunderbolt weapon so that it goes against the enemies, and dwelling in their cow-sheds they heed Indra’s sovereignty.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Those cows of Indra, many-coloured and affectionate mix the Soma juice with their milk ; Indra’s beloved cows direct his destructive thunderbolt against his enemies, and are beneficent [sic] in accordance with his sovereignty.” — as printed (“beneficent” as printed [sic]).

- पृशनायुवः — in the sense ‘desiring the touch’: by “supa ātmanaḥ kyac” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-8) the affix kyac after the word pṛśana; pṛśanāyati iti pṛśanāyuḥ: by “kyāc chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-170) the affix u; by the affix-accent the word is final-udātta. In the first-case plural, by “jasi ca” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-109) guṇa and av replacement: pṛśanāyuvaḥ.
- श्रीणन्ति — the root śrīñ pāke, kryādi; la ṭ, third person plural; the ā of the stem-marker śnā, which comes by “kryādibhyaḥ śnā” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-81), is dropped by “śnābhyastayor ātaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-112); since an atiñanta precedes, the nighāta accent.
- हिन्वन्ति — the root hivi prīṇane, bhvādi; by “idito num dhātoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-58) the augment num; in the la ṭ, third person plural, the form hinvanti; the tiñanta nighāta accent.
- सायकम् — the root śo antakarmaṇi, divādi; with the affix ṇvul, by “ādeca upadeśe ‘śiti” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-45) ā for the root; by “ato yuk ciṇ-kṛtoḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-33) the augment yuk after the ā; because it is k-marked it comes at the end; by “yuvor anākau” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-1) aka for the affix; the word sāyaka; by “ati” [as read: “...”] the accent comes to the syllable before the affix. ||11||

“The cows, being of excellent understanding, honour Indra’s strength by offering their milk and so increase it. Wishing to fight with Indra, they praise Indra’s numerous heroic deeds, for the instruction of enemies who may be slain in the future. Dwelling in their cow-sheds, they heed his universal sovereignty with reverence.”

- सश्चिरे — the root saśca gatau; by “vyatyayo bahulam” the ātmanepada affix; in the liṭ, by “liṭas tajhayor eśirec” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-81) irec for jha; by “tiñ atīṇaḥ” the nighāta accent.
- पूर्वचित्तये — the root citī saṁjñāne; by “striyām ktin” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-94) the affix ktin in the bhāva sense. By the accent of a kṛt-ending final member the compound would take the accent of the last member; but, since it is read in the marudvṛdhādi group (Pā. Sū. 6-

2-[?]), the first member's final-udātta accent arises. In the fourth case singular, by “gher niti” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-111) guṇa, and ay replacement: pūrvacittaye. ||12||

Sense: “On the twenty-fourth day, at the morning pressing, in the śastra of the Brāhmaṇācchaṃsin the triad indro dadhīcaḥ is called the padagaha-stotriya; it is stated in the sūtra: ‘ādaha svadhām anu punargarbhatvam erire — one (Ṛk), and the two indro dadhīco asthabhiḥ’ (Āś. 7-3 [?]). — Here the Śāṭyāyanins tell this legend: ‘When Dadhyañc, son of Atharvan, was alive, the asuras were defeated by the very sight of him. Then, when he had gone to heaven, the earth was filled with the asuras. Indra, unable to fight them, heard that the ṛṣi had gone to heaven, and asked those there whether anything of him remained. They told him: “There is this horse’s head, with which head he taught the Āśvins the madhuvidyā; but we do not know where it is.” Indra said, “Seek it.” They sought it and found it at Śāryaṇāvat — a lake that lies in the rear half of Kurukṣetra. With the bones of that head Indra slew the asuras.’ — Apraśkutaḥ — undisputed by anyone. Indra, with the bones (asthabhiḥ) of the ṛṣi Dadhyañc, son of Atharvan — bones belonging to the horse’s head — slew (jaghāna) navatīr nava, ‘nine times ninety’ — eight hundred and ten of the vṛtras, the enveloping asura-born things. The reckoning: to conquer the gods who see the three worlds, the asuras’ māyā is at first threefold — according to past, future and present; then each of these is trebled for each of the three times; thus nine; again, by trebling according to the three powers (of earth and so on), twenty-seven; again, by trebling according to the three guṇas beginning with sattva, eighty-one; and then, the māyā thus multiplied by four threes, being present in each of the ten directions, makes nine times ninety. Indra slew the vṛtras in the form of such māyā.” The grammatical tail (outlined): dadhīcaḥ — from dadhyañc, kvin after añc; asthabhiḥ — anan as the substitute of asthi even before a non-vowel-initial case-ending in the Veda (Pā. 6-1-26 [?]), udātta.”

“Indra, endowed with irresistible strength and without opposing sound, with the bones of the ṛṣi Dadhīci destroyed the power of the enemies, in the form of māyā — eight hundred and ten kinds, spread out and covering the three worlds.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Indra with the bones of Dadhyanch, slew, ninety times nine, Vritra” — as printed (the sentence ends without a full stop; “ninety times nine” is as the print has it).

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.13)

- दधीचः — “dadhyañc, or the ṛṣi named dadhīci, known in the Purāṇas and elsewhere. The bhāṣyakāra tells an upākhyāna here: when the ṛṣi named Dadhyañc, the son of Atharvan, was alive, the asuras fled in fear at the mere sight of him. After he died and went to heaven, the asuras spread fearlessly over the whole earth. Then Indra, desiring to fight these asuras, searched for that ṛṣi, and learned that the ṛṣi had gone to heaven. Then Indra asked those nearby whether any part of the ṛṣi’s limbs remained; they said: ‘The ṛṣi Dadhīci had once taught the Aśvin deities the madhuvidyā with the head of a horse; only that horse’s head remains, and we do not know where it is.’ Then Indra told them to search for it; they found it lying in the lake called Śaryaṇāvat, near Kurukṣetra, and brought it.”

“Indra conquered the asuras with the bones of that horse’s head. This means that he destroyed the māyā-webs of the asuras ‘nine times ninety’. In explaining the number ‘nine times ninety’ the bhāṣyakāra says: the asuras first had three kinds of māyā for conquering the deities of the three worlds; each of these existed in the three modes — past, present and future — making nine kinds in all. Those nine māyās, joined with the three powers utsāha (energy), mantra (counsel) and prabhu (authority), become $9 \times 3 = 27$; joined with the three guṇas beginning with sattva, $27 \times 3 = 81$ (the numerals as read: ‘ $६ \times ३ = १८$ ’, ‘ $१८ \times ३ = ५४$ ’). Since these eighty-one māyās are practised in the ten directions, the total is $81 \times 10 = 810$ — or nine times ninety, 9×90

“Skandasvāmin tells another itihāsa: in the old days there were asuras called Kālakañja. They were very powerful, and were killing the gods and giving them great trouble. Then the gods went to Brahmā and prayed that they should be told a means to destroy these asuras. Brahmā said: ‘O gods, there is a ṛṣi called Dadhyañc. Go to him; he will tell you a fitting means for the destruction of the asuras.’ As Brahmā said, the gods went to the ṛṣi Dadhīci and told him that Brahmā had sent them. The ṛṣi, understanding by his yogic vision the work for which they had come, gave up his life by yogasamādhī. Then Indra destroyed the asuras with the bones. Skandasvāmin says that this matter itself is described in this Rk.”

“The name of this ṛṣi occurs in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā at 1-[80]-[16]; 1-[84]-[13]; 1-[84]-[14]; 1-[116]-[12]; 1-[117]-[22]; 1-[139]-[4] [?] and so on, and in the Taittiriya Saṃhitā, the Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (several places), and the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (2-5-22 [?]) and other places.” (All reference numerals are given as read from the small Kannada print and are uncertain [?].)

- दधीचः (continued) — “...since this is a cau-situation (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[?]), the accent of the first member would be final-udātta; setting that aside, since the case-ending asarvanāmasthāna follows, by”añcheś chandasy asarvanāmasthānam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-170) the case-ending again takes udātta; so it is a word with final-udātta.”
- अस्थभिः — “for the word asthi, though the substitute anañ is stated for a vowel-initial case-ending, by”chandasy api dṛśyate” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-26 [?]) the substitute anañ arises also before bhis, which begins with a consonant; this too is udātta because it has the mark ñ, and as a final substitute it is final. By “nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n is dropped; thus asthabhiḥ is a word with the middle udātta.”
- अप्रतिष्कृतः — “(see 84.7) explained in the earlier mantra.”

- जघान — the root han hiṃsāgatyoḥ, adādi; liṭ, third person singular, with ṇal; by “abhyāsāc ca” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-55) the h of the root after the reduplicative becomes kutva (gh); since at the beginning of a pāda there is no nighāta; by “liti” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-193) the syllable before the affix is udātta. ||13||

- पर्वतेषु — “in the mountains with rows of peaks”
- अपञ्चितम् — “hidden”
- अश्वस्य — “of the horse (belonging to the ṛṣi Dadhīci)”
- यत् शिरः — “which head”
- इच्छन् — “wishing (Indra)”
- तत् — “that”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.14 (Kannada)

“To help in the slaying of Vṛtra, Indra wished for the horse’s head of the ṛṣi Dadhīci. It lay hidden behind a mountain. Finding it in the lake called Śaryaṇāvat, he took it and thereby killed the asura Vṛtra.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Wishing for the horse’s head hidden in the mountains, he found it in the lake called Saryanavat [sic].” — as printed (“Saryanavat” as printed for Śaryaṇāvat [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगल्लु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.14)

- अश्वस्य शिरः — “the horse’s head: it is believed that the head of the ṛṣi Dadhīci became a horse’s head, and that it was given to him by the Áśvin deities. After Dadhīci’s death Indra searched for the horse’s head with which he had been furnished, and found it. In this Rk it is described that it was found hidden behind a mountain, in a lake called Śaryaṇāvatī.”
- (the question of how the horse’s head came to Dadhīci — Skandasvāmin’s story) — “On the question how the horse’s head came to the ṛṣi Dadhīci, Skandasvāmin tells a story: Indra taught to Dadhīci, the son of Atharvan, the nature of the supreme Brahman called Madhu,” (the sentence runs on to p. 119)

“...and told him not to tell it to anyone, saying that if he did his head would fall off. After some time the Áśvin deities came to the ṛṣi Dadhīci and asked about the Brahman-nature that Indra had taught him; Dadhīci told them that Indra had said that his head would fall off if he spoke of it, and that from fear he would not tell. The Áśvins said, ‘Do not worry about it; if your head falls off we will give you ours.’ Dadhīci agreed. So when Dadhīci’s head fell off, the Áśvins cut off the head of a horse, fitted it on and joined it to the body of the ṛṣi Dadhīci; therefore it is described that the ṛṣi Dadhīci’s head became a horse’s head. This matter is described by the ṛṣi Kakṣivān in the Rk 1-[116]-[12].”

- अपश्रितम् — apagatya sthitam — “hidden, out of sight behind (a mountain).”
- शर्यणावति — “the seventh-case singular of śaryaṇāvat, the name of a lake. This word occurs in the Ṛgveda in the Ṛks 1-[84]-[14]; 3-[?]-[?]; 5-[?]-[?]; 8-[?]-[?]; 10-[?]-[?] and others [numerals as read, all [?]]. In all these places the bhāṣyakāra explains it as the name of a lake. Today it is understood that this lake is in the region called Kurukṣetra, in the area of present-day Delhi [the English word is printed in the Kannada text as “Delhi”]. Western scholars give various meanings for this word. Śaryaṇa may be the name of a place, and the lake there may have been called śaryaṇāvān, as they suppose; others suppose that śaryaṇa means ‘tall reeds’ [jondu hullu], and that a lake in which such tall grass grows is called śaryaṇāvān; others hold that it may be one of the many lakes in the middle of the mountains in the land of Kashmir.”

- इच्छन् — the root iṣu icchāyām, tudādi; the affix śatṛ in the sense of laṭ; by “tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77) the stem-marker śa; by “iṣugamiyamām chaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-77) cha for the final; icchat — the stem-marker accent; with the first-case su following, num; the loss of su; the loss of the final t.
- अपश्रितम् — the root śriṇ sevāyām; the affix ktā; by “tāḍau ca niti kṛtyatau” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-50) the gati keeps its natural accent.
- विदत् — the root vida jñāne; the luṇ, third person singular; when it follows, by vyaṭyaya the substitute a for cli (aṇ); since it is ñit, no light-penultimate guṇa; by “bahulam chandasy amānyoge ’pi” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) no augment aṭ.

Grammar of Rik 84.14, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- शर्यणावति — “Śaryaṇā is the name of a region. The lake not far from the śaryaṇās is śaryaṇāvat. Since the word śaryaṇa is read in the madhvādi group, by “madhvādibhyaś ca” (Pā. Sū. 4-2-86) the affix matup arises in the fourth (cāturarthika) sense as an exception to aṇ. Since it is a name (saṃjñā), by “saṃjñāyām” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-11) va is the substitute for the m of matup; with śaryaṇāvat standing, by “matau bahvaco ’nacirādīnām” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-119) the first member is lengthened when matup follows. In the seventh-case singular of the word śaryaṇāvat the form śaryaṇāvati arises.” ||14||

Sense: “It is the anuvākya of the principal (offering). It is stated in the section atimūrtinā: ‘atrāha gor amanvata navo-navo bhavati jāyamānaḥ’ (Āś. 9-8 [?]). — Atra aha: right here, in this very house (gṛhe), the orb of the moon (candramasaḥ), which goes (goḥ = gantuḥ): the raśmayaḥ, the rays of the sun, amanvata — perceived (ajānan) the nāma, the tejas, the radiance, of tvaṣṭur — of the shining sun — that is apīcya, hidden (antarhita), enveloped by night. The sun’s rays are reflected (pratiphalanti) in the clear, water-like orb of the moon; the reflected rays obtain there, in the moon, the very name that the sun is seen to have. That is to say: the sun’s radiance, hidden by night, enters the moon’s orb and, dispelling the darkness of night as if it were day, illumines everything. Hence the Nirukta: ‘One ray of his shines upon the moon; so the moon must be regarded as getting its light from the sun’; and ‘the sun’s ray Suṣumna is the moon, a Gandharva’, says a Nigama; he too is called go: ‘atrāha gor amanvateti’ (Ni. [2-6] [?]); the Nirukta explains āpīcyam as ‘apacitam upagatam apihitam antarhitaṃ vā’ (Ni. [4-23] [?]) — ‘gone away, approached, covered, hidden.’” The grammatical tail (outlined): amanvata — manu avabodhane; āpīcyam — a nipātana with i; or, from apiañc with kvin, ‘being in what has gone in’, with the affix yāt in the Veda; itthā — the affix thā after idam, in the sense of manner; candramasaḥ — candramāḥ is ‘the measurer (maker) of delight’, the affix asi after mā with candra, with the accent of the first member.”

“Thus did the solar rays perceive in this mansion of the travelling moon, the hidden light of the Sun.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.15)

“In the sacrifice called Atimūrti, which is performed on a single day, the Saurya and Cāndramasa offerings (iṣṭi) are to be performed for one month beforehand. When the Cāndramasī iṣṭi is first performed, this Ṛk atrāha gor amanvata is to be used as the puronuvākyā mantra; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section atimūrtinā, by the sūtra ‘atrāha gor amanvata navo-navo bhavati jāyamānaḥ’ (Āś. [9-8] [?]).”

- अत्र आह — “right here, in this region.”
- गोः — gantuḥ — “of the moving (moon).”
- त्वष्टुः — “of the shining sun; tvaṣṭṛ is also one of the names of the twelve Ādityas.”
- आपीच्यम् — apigate nigate bhavam āpīcyam; āpīcyo ’prakāśa (Bhaṭṭabhāskaramiśra) — “light that is without brightness. The sun’s rays fall on the orb of the moon and are reflected; then those rays do not have the very bright light of the direct sun, but are with a common light. Yāska’s explanation:

अत्र ह गोः समुमुंसता ऽदित्यरश्मयः स्वं नामापीच्यमपचितमुपगतमपिहितमन्तर्हितं वामुत्र चन्द्रमसो गृहे ।

atra ha goḥ samumuṁsatādityaraśmayāḥ svaṁ nāmāpīcyam apacitam upagatam apihitam antarhitaṁ vāmutra candramaso gṛhe | (Ni. [4-23] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative (the print of this quotation is partly clotted [?]): “Here, in the house of the moon, the rays of the sun [made themselves] their own name, āpīcyā — gone, approached, covered, hidden.”

Here Yāska explains the word āpīcyam as apacitam, apagatam, apihitam, antarhitam vā (‘gone away, covered, hidden’). The rays of the sun, issuing from the solar orb, enter the lunar orb and are hidden within it; that is, being inside, they are not seen by the eye; yet the light of those rays is seen by us as an ordinary, not exceedingly bright, light. Āpīcyam means antarhitam — ‘hidden inside’.

- इत्था — “‘in this way’ — the meaning is that the rays of the sun fall on the orb of the moon and are reflected. At night the sun is not seen. Then the radiance belonging to that sun, falling on the orb of the moon — water-like — and moving as the sun does in the daytime, dispels the darkness and gives light. Therefore people suppose that the moon, which has such light, is itself the sun (since the moon’s light has come from the sun). Since Indra is counted among the twelve Ādityas and gives light by day and night, the bhāṣyakāra says that this Ṛk should be understood as addressed to Indra. Since in this Ṛk the chief emphasis is on the moon’s radiance, this Ṛk has application in the Cāndramasa offering.”

Yāska says in his Nirukta:

अथास्यैको रश्मिश्चन्द्रमसं प्रति दीप्यते तदेतेनोपेक्षितव्यम् । आदित्योऽस्य दीप्तिर्भवति ।
सुषुम्नः सूर्यरश्मिश्चन्द्रमा गन्धर्व इत्यपि निगमो भवति । athāśyaiko raśmiś candramasaṁ prati dīpyate tad etenopekṣitavyam / ādityo 'śya dīptir bhavati / suṣumnaḥ sūryaraśmiś candramā gandharva ity api nigamo bhavati / (Ni. [2-6] [?])

— Gloss, mine and tentative: “One ray of his shines towards the moon; that is to be understood in this way: the sun is the source of its light. ‘The ray of the sun, Suṣumna, is the moon, a Gandharva’ — so too says a Nigama (Vedic quotation).”

“That is: one ray of the sun, called Suṣumna, falls on the orb of the moon and lights it. This is to be understood by the vision of the mantra. Since the moon shines by the sun’s ray, it is to be understood that the light in the moon comes from the sun alone. Because it is said, ‘ādityo 'pi gaur ucyate’ (Ni. [2-6] [?]) — ‘the sun too is called go’ — here go is a name of the sun; and ‘sarve 'pi raśmayo gāva ucyante’ (Ni. [2-6] [?]) — ‘all rays are called gāvaḥ’: gāvaḥ is a name of the sun’s rays too.”

- अमन्वत — the root manu avabodhane, divādi; lañ [luñ-like], third person plural, ātmanepada; by “ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-5) the substitute at for the affix jha; the form amanvata; nighāta accent of the tiñanta.
- आपीच्यम् — the root ciñ cayane; with the preposition api preceding, by “āśvāghasyā...” [as read: “āśvāghyādayaś ca”, Uṇ. Or, for the root añcu preceded by api, the affix kvin by “ṛtvigdadhṛk...”; by “aniditām hala upadhāyāḥ...” the loss of the nasal; api-gate ni-gate bhavam = āpīcyam: by “bhave chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 4-4-110) the affix yat; by “acaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-138) the a of the root is dropped; then, by “cau” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-138) the preceding member is lengthened; by “tit svaritam” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-185) the svarita accent. Āpīcyo 'prakāśaḥ — ‘the āpīcyā is “without brilliance”’ — says Bhaṭṭabhāskaramiśra.

By the other view, in that sūtra the word idam does not continue; then, by “idamas thamuh” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-24) the affix thamu. By “svarādinipātam avyayam” (Pā. Sū. 1-1-37) a word ending in this affix is called avyaya; then the sup-elision that would arise by “avyayād āpsupaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-82) is set aside by vyatyaya, and the case-ending is replaced by ḍā by “supām suluk...”; by the affix-accent it is final-udātta.”
- चन्द्रमसः — “candram āhlādanaṁ mimīte nirmimīte iti candramāḥ: with candra as the upapada, the root māñ [mā], by”candre māño ḍit” (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[222] [?]) the affix asi. The word is candramas; the sixth case singular is the form. By the accent of the kṛt-ending final member [the compound would take its accent]; but since it is read in the dāsibhārādi group, the first-member's own accent arises; since the first member candra is formed by the affix rak enjoined by “sphāyitañcivañcy...” (Uṇ. Sū. 2-[13] [?]), it is final-udātta.” ||15||

*Sense: “In the Sarvapṛṣṭhyā offering (iṣṭi), for the oblation to Ka (kāya), the two Ṛks ko adya are the yājyā and anuvākya; so it is stated: 'kāyaṁ daśamaṁ — ko adya yunkte dhuri gā ṛtasya — the two' (Āś. [?]). — Who (kaḥ) today yokes (yunkte) in the pole-place (dhuri) of the chariot of Indra, which goes to the sacrifice (ṛtasya), the horses that are gāḥ — swift — śimīvataḥ (endowed with heroic action), bhāminaḥ (blazing with radiance), durhṛṇāyūn (full of an unbearable wrath — hṛṇīyati is a verb of being angry), āsanniśūn (having arrows fixed in their mouth-region for the slaying of enemies), hṛtsvasaḥ (who hurl their own darts into the hearts of enemies), mayobhūn (causing happiness to their own)? Who is able to yoke such horses? No one. The sacrificer who supports (ṛṇadhat, makes successful) the bhṛtyā — the care, the work of drawing the chariot — of such horses, that is, praises them: that sacrificer would live (jīvāt). Or: Ka is called Prajāpati ('Ka is indeed the name of Prajāpati,' says the śruti).
Ṛtasya — of the sacrifice, in carrying it through, gāḥ — the Vedic mantras, all of them, adya — now, he yokes (joins) — mantras śimīvataḥ (joined with the rites they teach), bhāminaḥ (shining), durhṛṇāyūn (impossible to abandon, since the study of the Veda is a constant duty), āsanniśūn (those whose iṣu, 'going out, utterance', is in the mouth), hṛtsvasaḥ (shining in the hearts), mayobhūn (producing the unseen mayas, happiness, that is born of study). The sacrificer who makes prosperous (ṛṇadhat) the bhṛtyā — the sustenance — of these words, he lives (jīvāt); the others are living dead.” The grammatical tail begins: durhṛṇāyūn — the root hṛṇīj lajjāyām ...” (the sentence runs on to p. 126)*

Conclusion of the grammatical tail of the bhāṣya of Rik 84.16, continued from p. 125 (the first words are the end of a word begun on p. 125, "...-tyayaḥ" as read). Sanskrit in Kannada script; numerals [?]; characterized, not every sūtra named:

(Grammatical tail — summary, noted briefly; the sūtra citations that are partly illegible, and the Uṇādi number, are left [?]; the hand-written sūtra quoted after “samajanisada” is garbled in the print and is not completed.) On durhṛṇāyūn: on the loss of the a, the long ī is by the doctrine of the replacement of a sound that has lapsed; or it may be taken as belonging to the mṛgayu class. Āsanniṣūn: āsan is the substitute for the word āśya (“mouth”) by the sūtra beginning pad-dan-nomāṇs...; iṣu (“arrow”) is from the root iṣ in the sense of motion, with the affix u; in the bahuvrīhi the accent of the first member’s base. Hṛtsvasaḥ: asu kṣepaṇe (“to throw”) / asa gatidiptyādāneṣu (“in motion, shining, taking”); kvip; in the tatpuruṣa the case-ending is not elided (aluk). Mayobhūn: shortening by vyatyaya; or the ḍu affix by an upasaṁkhyāna. Bhṛtyām: bhṛñ bharaṇe — the affix kyap, the accent of the affix acute. Ṛṇadhāt: ṛdhu vṛddhau — in the leṭ, śnam by vyatyaya; the augment aṭ (aḍāgama); the loss of the ī (“itaś ca lopaḥ”). Jīvāt: jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; the aḍāgama as before.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 84.16) (Kannada)

adya — in this sacrificial rite; ṛtasya — of (Indra’s) chariot; dhuri — in the front part (the pole); śimīvataḥ — endowed with heroic deeds; bhāminaḥ — full of brilliance; durhṛṇāyūn — (against enemies) of irresistible anger; āsanniṣūn — having arrows set in their mouths; hṛtsvasaḥ — which trample with the foot on the hearts (of enemies); mayobhūn — producing happiness (for friends); gāḥ — the moving (horses); kaḥ — who (himself); yunkte — yokes; yaḥ — which sacrificer; eṣām — of these horses; bhṛtyām — the work of bearing (Indra’s chariot); ṛṇadhāt — praises; saḥ — that sacrificer; jīvāt — (long) life — obtains.

अथवा — Or (second reading)

kaḥ — Prajāpati; ṛtasya — of the sacrifice; dhuri — in the tasks of carrying it out; śimīvataḥ — endowed with the deeds that are to be set forth; bhāminaḥ — shining; durhṛṇāyūn — not to be abandoned, that is, ever fixed; āsanniṣūn — uttered from the mouth; hṛtsvasaḥ — kindling lustre in the heart; mayobhūn — producing the happiness of the unseen (adṛṣṭa); gāḥ — the words which are of the nature of Ṛks; adya — at this time of the sacrifice; yuṅkte — joins; yaḥ — which sacrificer; eṣām — of these Vedic words; bhṛtyām — the labours that serve them; ṛṇadhat — protects; saḥ — that sacrificer (himself) jīvāt — lives a long life.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.16 (Kannada)

“In this sacrifice, to the pole of Indra’s chariot — endowed with deeds of valour, full of brilliance, of irresistible anger, with arrows set in their mouths, stepping with the foot upon the hearts of enemies, producing happiness for friends — those horses: who yokes them? The sacrificer who praises the extraordinary labour of those horses in drawing Indra’s chariot lives a long life.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Who yokes to-day to the pole of the chariot (of Indra) his vigorous and radiant [sic] horses, whose fury is unbearable, who have arrows in their mouths, who trample on the hearts of enemies and who give happiness to friends? The sacrificer who praises the performance of these horses obtains long life.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.16)

“In the iṣṭi called Sarvapṛṣṭhā the two Ṛks beginning ko adya yuṅkte are to be used as the yājyā and anuvākya mantras; this is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sentence ‘kāyaṃ daśamaṃ ko adya yuṅkte dhuri gā ṛtasyeti dve’ (Āś. [?]).” [Sanskrit as printed in the Kannada Special Topics.]

कायं दशमं को अद्य युङ्क्ते धुरि गा ऋतस्येति द्वे ।

kāyaṃ daśamaṃ ko adya yuṅkte dhuri gā ṛtasyeti dve | — Gloss, mine and tentative: “To Ka the tenth (offering); [the two Ṛks] ko adya yuṅkte dhuri gā ṛtasya — the two (are used).”

- ऋतस्य — ṛgatau (“to go”) — “of Indra’s chariot, which is moving.”
- धुरि — “in the part of the chariot to which horses are yoked; that is, at the pole (noge), or in the front.”
- गाः — “here gāḥ must be taken in the sense of horses. This meaning is supported by the Ṛk:

एतौ मे गावौ प्रमरस्य युक्तौ मो षु प्र सेधीर्मुहुरिन्ममन्धि । etau me gāvau pramarasya yuktau mo ṣu pra sedhīr muhur in mamandhi / (R. Saṃ. 10-[?]-[?] [?]; the numerals printed are small and doubtful) — Gloss, mine and tentative (the second half is doubtful): “These two oxen of mine, yoked [to the chariot] of Pramara — do not drive them away; again and again [let him] rejoice.”

- शिमिवतः — vīryakarmopetān — “who perform deeds of valour. Śimī means karma (‘action’) (Ni. [3-1] [?]).”
- भामिनः — bhā dīptau (“to shine”) — “brilliant; hence beautiful to behold, in the sense of ‘worthy of being looked at’.”

- दुर्हणायून् — hṛṇīyate krudhyatikarmā — “reḷati, helati and the others of the ten roots that indicate anger: because the word hṛṇīyate is read among them (Ni. [?]-[?] [?]) — durhṛṇāyūn means ‘endowed with anger against enemies’.”
- आसन्निषून् — asye mukhapradeśe śatrūṇāṃ praharaṇārtham iṣavo bāṇā baddhā[ḥ] — “aśvān — horses in whose mouths arrows are fixed, in order to strike enemies. The sense of this word is not clear.” [Printed text partly clotted: “...baddhā-[?]-...aśvān”; read as given with doubt.]
- हृत्स्वसः — hṛtsu śatrūṇāṃ hṛdayeṣu svasaṃti svakīyaṃ pādaṃ kṣipantīti hṛtsvasaḥ tāt — “those that, as it were, hurl their own feet on the hearts of the enemies, that is, those that trample on the enemies in battle.”
- मयोभून् — “mayāḥ means happiness (Ni. [3-?] [?]); those who bring happiness to their own people; towards their own folk they act with a gentle nature, without anger and the like.”
- भृत्याम् — bhṛñ bharaṇe / bharaṇakriyāṃ rathavāhanakriyām — “the work of bearing; the work of drawing the chariot.”
- ऋणधत् — ṛdhu vṛddhau — “one who praises or one who magnifies (samardhane).”

The editor’s remark: “Many words in this Rk are obscure (kliṣṭa); the meaning does not fit well. The bhāṣyakāra has therefore given two kinds of meaning for this Rk: following the meaning that kaḥ is a common word (‘what man’), and the meaning kaḥ = Prajāpati, he has given separate explanations, accordingly.”

- युङ्क्ते — the root yujir yoge, rudhādi; laṭ, third person singular — the form yunkte; the nighāta accent of the tiṇanta.
- दुर्हणायून् — the root hṛṇīj lajjāyām (as read); as it belongs to the kaṇḍvādi class, the affix yak in its own sense by “kaṇḍvādibhyo yak” [as printed “kaṇḍvādi-bhyo yak”]; by the bahulavacana the u-affix (the Uṇādi) is added to this as well; by “ato lopah” the a of the yak is dropped; the long ī in place of the a by the doctrine of lapsed sound; or, since it belongs to the mṛgayu class, the a-form by “mṛgayvo-ve-ca”-type sūtra (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[?] [?]); the final accent by the accent of the affix; accusative plural.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 84.16, continued from p. 128 (grammar page, noted briefly; every sūtra read is given in three layers, the numerals as read [?]):

- आसन्निषून् — by “पद्मोमास्...” (paddanno-mās-hṛm-niśasan..., Pā. Sū. 6-1-63 [?]) āsan is substituted for the word āśya; iṣ in the sense of motion, to which by “इषेः किच्च” (iṣeḥ kic ca, Uṇ. Sū. 1-[13?] [?]) the affix u (made kit) is added; since it is kit, the laghūpadha guṇa does not occur; āsani iṣavaḥ yeṣāṁ — in the bahuvrīhi compound by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” (bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam) the first member keeps its own accent.
- हृत्स्वसः — asu kṣepaṇe, or the root asa gatidīptyādāneṣu; by “क्विप् च” (kvip ca) the affix kvip; when compounded as hṛtsu asaḥ, by “तत्पुरुषे कृति बहुलम्” (tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam) the case-ending is not elided (aluk); by “गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्” (gatikārapapadāt kṛt) the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent.
- मयोभून् — by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” (vyatyayo bahulam) the shortening of bhū by vyatyaya; or, since this word is in the class of mita-dru- etc., by “मितद्रवादिभ्य उपसंख्यानम्” (mitadrvādibhya upasaṁkhyānam, Pā. Sū. 3-2-180-1 [?]) the affix ḍu; by ḥi-loss the form as given; here too the kṛduttarapada keeps its base accent. Accusative plural.
- भृत्याम् — the root bhṛñ bharaṇe; by “संज्ञायां समजनिषद...” (saṁjñāyāṁ samajaniṣada..., Pā. Sū. 3-3-99 [?]) the affix kyap in a name; by “ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक्” (hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk) the augment tuk for the short vowel; the accent of piti is set aside because “udāttaḥ” runs on from the kyap-rule, so the affix is acute.
- ऋणधत् — the root ṛdhu vṛddhau; leṭ, third person singular, the affix ti; by “इतश्च लोपः” (itaś ca lopaḥ) the loss of its ī; by “लेटोऽडाटौ” (leṭo ’ḍāṭau) the augment aṭ; by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” the śnam in place of śap [as read]; the nighāta of the tiñanta is barred because “yaḥ” stands before it, and the accent of the vikaraṇa remains.
- जीवात् — the root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; the leṭ form as before, the only peculiarity the augment aṭ; because it stands after an atiñanta (a word that is not a tiñanta), the nighāta accent comes.

Closing of Rik 84.16: “॥ १६ ॥” (16), followed by a printer’s ornament.

Translation of the bhāṣya (so far): “When Indra, the helper, has come, who goes away? — who, fearful of the enemy, departs? None whatever. Tujyate — who is injured? There is nobody whom the enemies can injure. Which sacrificer is afraid? When Indra is the protector, there is not even fear, still less any harm from enemies. Who thinks of Indra, who is so near, being near to us as our protector? That is, who knows? We alone know, no other. (Here one kaḥ is a mere filler.) When Indra has come in battle to help, which sacrificer will speak on behalf of a son (tokāya)? — ‘O Indra, protect my son!’ — as one might speak on behalf of a Brahmin out of partiality: which sacrificer would make a plea of this kind? The idea is that Indra protects of his own accord. Who will speak for an elephant (ibhāya)? And who will speak for wealth (rāyaḥ) that is being carried off by enemies? ...”

Translation: “...which sacrificer would plead, ‘protect our wealth that is being carried off’? None. And further, who will plead for his own body (tanve), for his people, for his retinue? No plea to Indra is needed to protect one’s own body or one’s retinue: Indra, pleased by praise, protects of his own accord. But when the word ka is applied to Prajāpati, in a rite that belongs to him, then, by the possession of supreme lordship, it is Prajāpati alone who is denoted by the word Indra; just as, according to the application ‘aindryā gārhapatyam upatiṣṭhate’ (‘with the Aindrī [Rk] one approaches the Gārhapatya fire’), Indra, who is present in the Rk, is taken as referring to the Gārhapatya — so here too.” (One clause in the middle of this passage, “...kadā cin etya...”, is broken in the print and is not completed [?].)

(The sūtras partly read: “udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svaritaḥ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4); the others named are given without numbers, none being legible. Noted briefly: īṣate* — root īṣ (going, injuring, seeing), Bhvādi, ātmanepada; tujyate — root tuj (to injure), yak in the passive sense, the accent of the yak alone remaining; maṃsate — leṭ with the augment aṭ, sip by “sibbahulaṃ leṭṭi”; anti — loss of the ka/ika element of āntika; bravat — leṭ of brū; tanve — dative singular of tanū, yaṇ substitution, svarita accent of the ending.)*

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 84.17) (Kannada)

(When Indra, the protector, is near) kaḥ — which sacrificer (himself); īṣate — flees far, afraid of the enemy; kaḥ — who; tujyate — is injured (by the enemy); kaḥ — who; bibhāya — is afraid; anti — near us; santam — being (as protector); indram — Indra; kaḥ — (other than ourselves) who; maṃsate — knows; kaḥ — which sacrificer; tokāya — for offspring; adhi-bravat — (need) press (Indra) [there is no need to press him; he himself favours]; ibhāya — for an elephant; kaḥ — who (is compelled to insist); uta — and; rāye — for wealth (carried off by enemies) (who need press?); tanve — for one’s own bodily protection; janāya — for retinue; kaḥ — which sacrificer himself (need press Indra?).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.17 (Kannada)

“When Indra, the protector, is near, which sacrificer, afraid of the enemy, runs far away? Which is injured by the enemy? Which is afraid? Who, other than ourselves, can know Indra, who stands near us as protector? Which sacrificer need press Indra, whether for offspring, for an elephant, for wealth stolen by enemies, for the protection of his own self, or for his dependants? Without that pressing, Indra himself favours everything.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 84.17)

“When Indra is at hand who flees through fear of enemies ? who is harmed ? who is terrified ? who is aware that Indra is present though he is near ? what need is there that any one should importune Indra for his son, his elephant, his property, his person, or his people ?” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.17)

“In this Rik too the word kaḥ is explained as ‘Prajāpati’, and the bhāṣyakāra, following that, has given a different sense.”

- ईषते — īṣa gatihiṁsādarśaneṣu / bhauvādika ātmanepadī — “‘goes’; that is, runs away through fear of enemies. Since Indra is near us and protects us, no man need run away in fear of an enemy — such is the intention.”
- मंसते सन्तमिन्द्रं को अन्ति — “Though Indra is near us for our protection, who can know this matter of himself? That Indra is near is known to no one. Yet the meaning is that Indra is nearby.”
- इभाय — gajāya — “the bhāṣyakāra has explained this word as ‘elephant’. In the Ṛgveda the elephant is nowhere mentioned in particular; and it is unlikely that ordinary people would have elephants. Western scholars therefore hold that it is fitting to give this word the sense ‘without fear’. The bhāṣyakāra too has given this sense in many places.”
- अधि ब्रवत् — adhivacanaṁ kuryāt jñāpayatīndram ity arthaḥ — “there is no need to make Indra aware in order that sons and the like be protected; he himself knows everything and protects.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.17) (grammar page, noted briefly; begins here, runs to p. 133)

- ईषते — the root īṣa gatihiṁsādarśaneṣu, Bhvādi, ātmanepada; la ṭ, third person singular; by “टित् आत्मनेपदानां टेरे” (ṭita ātmanepadānāṁ ṭer e) the ending e; the vikaraṇa śap; by “तिङ्ङितिङः” (tiṅṅatiṅṅaḥ) the nighāta accent.
- तुज्यते — the root tuja hiṁsāyām; la ṭ in the passive, third person singular, e as before; by “सार्वधातुके यक्” (sārvadhātuke yak) the affix yak in place of the vikaraṇa; since it is kit, no laghūpadha guṇa (continued on p. 133).

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 84.17, continued from p. 132 (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read are given in three layers):

- तुज्यते (cont.) — by the prohibition “अतिङः” (atiṅṅaḥ) in the sense of exclusion, the nighāta accent does not come; since the root has ad-upadeśa (a-ending in the enunciation), by “तास्यनुदात्तेन्दिदुपदेशाल्लसार्वधातुकमनुदात्तमहन्वनोर्...” (tāsyānudāttennidupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam..., Pā. Sū. 6-1-186 [?]) the lasārvadhātuka ending (te) is unaccented, so the acute accent of the yak alone remains.
- बिभाय — the root ṇibhī bhaye; li ṭ, third person singular, ṇal as substitute; reduplication of the root; the reduplicate loses its aspiration/gets hrasva-jaś [as read: “abhyāsasya hrasvajaśtva”]; for the ī of the root vṛddhi, then āy-substitution; the nighāta accent of the tiṅṅanta.
- मंसते — the root mana jñāne; le ṭ, third person singular; by “लेटोऽडाटौ” (le ṭo ’ḍā ṭau) the augment a ṭ; by “सिब्वहुलं लेटि” (sibbahulaṁ le ṭi, Pā. Sū. 3-1-34) the affix sip; by “नश्छव्यप्रशान्” or the sūtra named in the print (“naś ca padāntasya jhali”) [as read: “naśchapada...”] the anusvāra in place of the n of the root; nighāta accent. (Sūtra wording as printed is cramped; the reading is hedged [?].)

- अन्ति — in the word āntika, by “कादिलोपो बहुलम्” (kādilopo bahulam) the loss of the k-element.
- ब्रवत् — the root brūñ vyaktāyāṁ vāci; leṭ, third person singular; as before the augment aṭ and loss of the i; guṇa to the root because of the sārvadhātuka; av-substitution; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta.
- तन्वे — the word tanū, dative singular (ñe) following; by “जसादिषु छन्दसि वा वचनम्” (jasādiṣu chandasi vā vacanam) and “घेर्ङिति” (gher ṅiti) guṇa does not occur; then by “इको यणचि” (iko yaṇaci) the yaṇ-substitution; since yaṇ has been substituted for an acute, by “उदात्तस्वरितयोर्यणः स्वरितोऽनुदात्तस्य” (udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya, Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) the unaccented case-ending following gets the svārīta.

Closing of Rik 84.17: “॥ १७ ॥” (17), followed by a printer's ornament.

Translation: “What sacrificer praises Agni? Having prepared an oblation for Indra, he praises Agni. Even the preparing of the oblation for Indra cannot be done properly, because Indra is hard to know. Or: who, for the sake of the sacrifice to Indra, would sacrifice to Agni with the ladle (sruc, i.e. juhū), with ghee marked by the dhruva — the fixed, settled — seasons (ṛtu), spring and the rest, with an oblation (yajātai, from yaj, leṭ)? Or else: the seasons are the deities of the prayāja offerings, for the Śruti says ‘the seasons are the prayājas’. Who would sacrifice with those unmoving seasons — which are to be observed in the model and in the modified rites — together with Agni, the deity of the ājyabhāga, with ghee as oblation? Nobody. To what sacrificer do the gods swiftly bring homa, the oblation to be offered, worthy of praise, wealth? (āvahanti = they give.) To none. Indra alone is the giver of wealth, not the other gods — thus is Indra praised. Vītihotraḥ — one who has attained the sacrifice; sudevaḥ — having good deities: what sacrificer maṃsate, knows Indra properly? None. The meaning is that Indra becomes manifest by manifold praise and long worship, and not by another way.”

The grammatical tail (characterized, noted briefly; the Uṇādi numerals are unreliable at 150 dpi [?]): īṭṭe — root īṇa stutau; being of the adādi class the śap is elided (luk); srucā — “sāv ekācaḥ...” (sāv ekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ..., Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) the case-ending acute; yajātai — leṭ of yaj, the augment aṭ, “vaito 'nyatra” gives ai; vahān — leṭ of vah, the augment aṭ, loss of ī (itaś ca lopaḥ), loss of the t by “saṃyogāntasya lopaḥ”; homam — from havyati (the root hve), ā made, by “ato maninn...” the affix manin, with saṃprasāraṇa by bahulaṃ chandasi; or the form homam is fixed as a nipātana with the affix manin (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[15x] [?]); maṃsate — as above; vītihotraḥ — vī gatyādiṣu, with the affix ktin (by “mantrē vṛṣeṣa...”) which is acute; hotram = homa, by “hu-yā-mā-śru-bhasibhyaḥ tran” (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[162?] [?]) the affix tran; vītiḥ prāpto homo yena — a bahuvrihi, with the first member’s accent; sudevaḥ — the final-syllable accent by “nañsubhyām” (the uttarapadāntodātta rule).

kaḥ — which sacrificer; agnim — Agni; īṭṭe — praises (making an offering for Indra); (ko vā — or which one himself); srucā — with the ladle; dhruvebhiḥ — eternal; ṛtubhiḥ — marked by the seasons, spring and the rest; ghṛtena — of the form of ghee; haviṣā — with the oblation; yajātai — can worship?; kasmai — to which sacrificer; homam — the wealth prayed for; āśu — swiftly; devāḥ — (other than Indra) which deities; ā vahān — bring? ; vītihotraḥ — one who has performed the sacrifice; sudevaḥ — one having the favour of auspicious deities; kaḥ — which sacrificer; maṃsate — knows (Indra completely).

अथवा — Or (second arrangement)

The same words, with dhruvebhiḥ — “immovable” and ṛtubhiḥ — “together with the season-deities”, ghṛtena — “of the form of ghee”, the rest as above.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.18 (Kannada)

“Which sacrificer can, for Indra, kindle Agni and praise him by offering? Which one, with the eternal seasons — spring and the rest — and with the oblation in the form of ghee, can worship through the ladles? Which other deities, besides Indra, can bring the wealth that has been prayed for to any sacrificer who performs a sacrifice? Which sacrificer, who has performed a sacrifice and obtained the favour of other auspicious deities, can know Indra completely? That is: Indra alone is more excellent than all the deities. If he is to be realised directly, it is not possible without the highest worship.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; runs on to p. 136)

“Who praises Agni or sacrificial fire lighted for Indra or worships him with the oblation of clarified butter, presented in the ladle according to the seasons ? to whom the gods quickly bring the wealth that has been called for ? what sacrificer, engaged in offering oblations and favoured by the gods, thoroughly knows Indra ?” — as printed (“praises” misprinted “priases”; “called for” misprinted “calle1” at the page-foot) [sic].

Translation: “Aṅga is in the sense of turning towards (addressing). O śaviṣṭha, most powerful Indra, shining god, you pra śaṁsiṣaḥ — favour with praise — the mortal, the man who is subject to death, who has praised you; ‘praise’ means that it has been well praised by this. O Maghavan, wealthy Indra, there is no other than you, no one apart from you, who is marḍitā, the giver of happiness. For that reason I speak to you this word, of the nature of praise — I utter it.” Grammar tail, noted briefly: śaṁsiṣaḥ — śaṁsu stutau, leṭ with sip and the augment aṭ, and the augment iṭ because the affix is ārdhadhātuka; śaviṣṭha — śavasvin + iṣṭhan, the elision of the vin-suffix, loss of the final syllable (ṭi); marṇitā — mṛṇa sukhane, affix tṛ, augment iṭ.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 84.19) (Kannada)

aṅga śaviṣṭha — O extremely mighty Indra; devaḥ — shining; tvam — you; martyam — the mortal (who praises you); praśaṁsiṣaḥ — favour (with praise that betokens your satisfaction); maghavan — wealthy; indra — O Indra; tvadanyaḥ — other than you, anyone; marṇitā — as giver of happiness; na asti — there is none (therefore); te — to you; vacaḥ — (this) word, of the form of praise; bravāmi — I speak.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.19 (Kannada)

“O exceedingly mighty Indra, you, being resplendent, favour the mortal who praises you with a praise that betokens your satisfaction. O wealthy Indra, apart from you there is no one else who gives us happiness. Therefore I address this word of praise to you.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O powerful Indra, be present and be favourable to the mortal who adores you; there is no other giver of felicity, O Maghavan, than you; therefore I recite your praise.” — as printed.

Translation: “In the fourteenth anuvāka there are nine sūktas. Of these the first, pra ye (twelve Ṛks), is the vision of Gotama; the fifth and the twelfth Ṛks are Triṣṭubh, the rest Jagatī; the deity is the Maruts. So it is also recorded in the Anukramaṇī: ‘Pra ye: twelve, to the Maruts (mārutam); [of these] the fifth and the last are Triṣṭubh.’ By the use of the word ha [in the Anukramaṇī], the four sūktas beginning with this one are addressed to the Maruts. In the Abhiplava ṣaḍaha, on the fourth day, in the Āgnimāruta, this sūkta is to be used at the mārutanividhānīya; and it is prescribed in the sūtra: ‘pra ye śumbhante janayo na saptayaḥ’ — this is the Āgnimāruta’ (Āś. 8-2 [?]).”

अनुवादवु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

“From this sūkta the fourteenth anuvāka begins. In this anuvāka there are nine sūktas (Sūktas 85–93). In the first of them, the sūkta beginning pra ye śumbhante, there are twelve Ṛks. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. The deities are the Maruts. The fifth and the twelfth Ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre; the remaining Ṛks are in the Jagatī metre. In the Anukramaṇī it is said: ‘pra ye dvādaśa mārutaṃ ha pañcamy antye triṣṭubhau’. The use of the word ha in this sentence ... Anuvāda of the introduction to Sūkta 85, continued from p. 143 (Kannada): “...the use of the word ha in this sentence indicates that the four sūktas beginning with this one are addressed to the Maruts. In the sacrifice called Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, on its fourth day, at the time of the Āgnimāruta śāstra and the recitation of the mantras, this sūkta has an application for the mārutanividhā mantras. This matter is set out in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra ‘pra ye śumbhante janayo na saptayaḥ ity āgnimārutam’ (Āś. 8-2 [?]).”

Translation: “O Maruts! When there is occasion for going (yāman), they adorn (pra śumbhante) their own limbs, exceedingly — janayo na, as wives do: as women adorn their own limbs, so do these. What are the Maruts like? Saptayaḥ — given to moving swiftly; rudrasya sūnavaḥ — sons of Rudra (Rudra is the Supreme Lord who makes all weep at the end-time); sudaṁsasaḥ — of good works. This he now justifies: for the Maruts have made rodasī, heaven and earth, to grow (vṛdhe), by giving rain and so on; hence they are sudaṁsasaḥ. Vīrāḥ — heroes, especially given to hurling down enemies; ghrṣvayaḥ — given to crushing, that is, breakers of trees, mountains and rock-heaps. Being such, the Maruts, in the vidathas (vidathā = sacrifices, in which gods are to be worshipped [?]), rejoice, delighting in the drinking of Soma.”

The grammatical tail (characterized, noted briefly; only legible sūtras named): śumbhante — śubha śunbha dīptau, Bhvādi; janayaḥ — jāyante āspatyānīti janayo jāyāḥ (“those who are born for the husband’s household”), by “ini sarvadhātubhya iti” the affix in; yāman — yā prāpaṇe, the affix manin by “kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam”; supāṁ suluk... the locative ending elided; sudaṁsasaḥ — daṁsaḥ is a word for ‘work’ (Ni.), śobhanaṁ daṁso yeṣām; the accent on the first syllable of the latter member by “somarnase...” [?]; cakrire — hi ca prevents nighāta; vṛdhe — vṛdhu vṛddhau, kvip in the sense of the abstract; madanti — madī harṣe, śap in place of śyan by vyatyaya; vidatheṣu — vida jñāne, the affix athac [as read, “kit”-affix by “ruvidibhyām” [?]]; ghrṣvayaḥ — ghr̥ṣu saṁgharṣe, the affix vi (vin-ending) fixed by nipātana in “kṛviṣvṛṣvī...” [?].

cakrire — they have made (it so); sudaṁsasaḥ — they who perform auspicious works; vīrāḥ — the valiant; ghrṣvayaḥ — they who crush the mountain rocks; ye marutaḥ — which Maruts; yāman — in the time of their going; janayo na — like (beautiful) women; pra śumbhante — adorn (their bodies) well (such Maruts); vidatheṣu — at the sacrifices; madanti — are satisfied (by drinking Soma-juice).

“The Maruts — swift movers, sons of Rudra, who by making both heaven and earth grow through the giving of rain and so on are doers of auspicious works, who are valiant and who crush mountain rocks — adorn themselves, in the time of their going, as women adorn their own bodies; and at sacrifices they are satisfied with the drinking of Soma.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“The Maruts who are going forth decorate themselves like females; they are the brave sons of Rudra and the doers of good work by which they promote the welfare of earth and heaven; they are heroes who crush the solid rocks and they delight in sacrifices.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.1)

“For the word marutaḥ, Yāska’s explanation runs thus:

मरुतो मितराविणो वा मितरोचिनो वा महद्द्रवन्तीति वा ॥ maruto mitarāviṇo vā mitarociṇo vā mahad dravantīti vā // (Ni. [11-13] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “The Maruts are ‘those who sound moderately’, or ‘those who shine moderately’, or ‘those who run much’.”

Mita means suśliṣṭa (‘well compacted’): since they sound compactly, that is, since they blow while making a sound; or since they shine finely; or since they sound abundantly: hence the name Marutaḥ. Here some, at the place maruto mitarāviṇo vā, divide the word as marutaḥ amitarāviṇaḥ and, doing so, explain amita as ‘abundant’ and rāviṇaḥ as ‘sounding’: ‘those who sound abundantly’. In the same way, dividing amitarociṇaḥ again, the meaning ‘with much light’ can be said.”

“The deities called Maruts are in many contexts praised together with Indra. Because the praise of Indra occurs in ‘marudbhir indra sakhyam te astu’ (R. Saṃ. 8-[?]-[?] [?]), these too have a greatness like Indra’s. In the R̥gveda thirty-three sūktas are wholly addressed to the Maruts.” [the count as read, “ಮೂವತ್ತಮೂರು” — 33; flagged [?] as the numerals are cramped.]

marudbhir indra sakhyam te astu — Gloss, mine and tentative: “With the Maruts, O Indra, let there be friendship for you.”

Special Topics of Rik 85.1, continued from p. 146 (Kannada prose; R̥gveda reference numerals in Kannada numerals, read with doubt [?]):

“Besides this, seven sūktas are addressed to Indra jointly with them, and one each is addressed to Pūṣan and to Agni jointly with them. These Marut deities are many. In several places they are called trisaptaiḥ (R. Saṃ. 1-[133-6] [?]) — ‘three groups of seven’, or companies of twenty-one; and in some other places, ‘śaṣṭiḥ... marutaḥ’ (R. Saṃ. 8-[96-8] [?]) — it is said that there are three times sixty, that is, a hundred and eighty, Marut deities. Because they are the sons of Rudra, they are well known to be called by the name Rudriyāḥ [= Rudriyāsaḥ]. As Pṛṣni (the name of the sky-world / heaven) is said to be their mother, they are also called Pṛṣnimātaraḥ, a word that means ‘those whose mother is Pṛṣni’. Here Pṛṣni may be the clouds. When clouds drive the rain, the wind ordinarily blows swiftly and with sound; so this name has probably come to these deities. In places it is also said that they are born of fire and of lightning, and born of Vāyu and of heaven, and ‘self-born’. It is hinted in places that Rohasī (Rodasī) is their wife, and that Indrāṇī and Sarasvatī too have a special connexion with them.”

“The abode of the Marut deities is the three worlds, heaven, atmosphere and earth. Because their connexion is special with rain which moves with lightning, they are well known as ‘those who shine greatly, those who are resplendent’. Lightning is their weapon. There are many descriptions: that they wear golden ornaments on the head, the feet, the heart and other parts of the body, that they hold a golden axe in the hand; that they ride a chariot yoked with the spotted deer (pṛṣatī), or with fawns (spotted deer, in English in the print), and travel.”

“These Marut deities are big, excellent, young; cruel like lions; yet, like children, fond of play. The chariot in which they travel is as fearful as lightning. They bring rain, that is, water, along with them. A famous river, the Marudvṛdhā, is said to be helped by their might. The rain they give has various names: honey, milk, ghee. Along with the rain they are also said to bring a whirlwind. Their song gives Indra strength at the time of the slaying of Vṛtra. In places there are descriptions that they drink Soma, sing, and increase sacrifices — manifold descriptions.”

“The Marut deities’ chief heroic act is helping Indra in the slaying of Vṛtra. In some places they are called the sons or brothers of Indra, but at a critical moment they left Indra without helping; therefore Indra became wroth against them, took to retaliation (see below)...” (the sentence runs on to p. 148)

“...— and Agastya, the ṛṣi, is described, in one or two sūktas, as having had to pacify Indra with great effort (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[165]; 1-[170] [?]). In connexion with Rudra being with the Maruts, there are descriptions that these Marut deities use their weapons (the axe, the bhṛṅgi [as read]) (Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-[34-9]; 2-[34-12]; 2-[34-3]; 1-[?]; 1-[?]; 1-[?]; 1-[?]; the numerals are cramped and are not completed [?]).”

“In the matter of rites of sacrifice, there are many differences, even in the Soma sacrifice, between the Marut deities and the Vāyu deity. It is the usage to invoke Vāyu at the morning pressing, and the Maruts at the midday and third pressings. In the sacrifice called Cāturmāsya the part played by the Maruts is special.”

“We shall consider briefly the nature of the Marut deities. The difference between them and Vāyu is this: Vāyu is the ordinary wind that blows; the Maruts are the wind that blows swiftly and fearfully, together with great noise, in the rainy season accompanied by thunder, hail and lightning, when rain falls. Therefore descriptions are found that the Marut deities are resplendent, that they sound, that they are cruel, that they have much strength and power, that they are sons of the atmosphere (heaven), and that, since they always blow in the atmosphere, they are ever devoted to play (to sports)."

- जनयः — jāyante āspatyānīti janayo jāyāḥ — "since they bring forth offspring such as sons, janayaḥ means jāyāḥ, 'wives', women, young women."
- शुम्भन्ते — śubha śunbha dīptau — "they adorn themselves."
- सप्तयः — sarpaṇasīlāḥ — "of a moving, swiftly blowing nature."
- यामन् — yāmani gamane nimittabhūte sati — "when starting out, when moving, when blowing."
- रुद्रस्य सूनवः — "To call the Marut deities sons of Rudra is the established usage. In Rks like 'satyaṁ śrīhā amavanto dhanvan cid ā rudriyāsaḥ' (R. Saṁ. 1-[64-2] [?]) the Maruts are explicitly called Rudra's sons — rudriyāsaḥ. Or, as the bhāṣyakāra says here: rudrasya sūnavaḥ | rodayati sarvam antakāla iti rudraḥ paramēśvaraḥ | tasya putrāḥ — (the sentence runs on to p. 149)

"...putrāḥ — since he makes all weep in sorrow at the time of dissolution, the Supreme Lord is called Rudra. The meaning may also be given that his sons are the Marut deities."

- सुदंससः — "daṁsaḥ means action (Ni. [3-?] [?]); sudaṁsasaḥ — doers of good deeds."
- रोदसी — "sp̥r̥he, purandhī and others are the twenty-four names of heaven and earth (dyāvāpṛthivī); the word rodasī is read in the middle of them (Ni. [?]); so rodasī means heaven and earth."
- वृधे — vṛdhu vṛddhau — "for growth; they have done so that there may be prosperity."
- विदथेषु — vidanty eṣu yaśṭavayatayā devān iti vidathāḥ yajñāḥ — "a rite that is performed with the knowledge of the glory of the deities is called yajña, 'sacrifice'. Vidatheṣu means 'in sacrificial rites'."
- घृष्वयः — ghṛṣu saṁgharṣe — gharṣaṇasīlāḥ — mahīruhasīloccayādeḥ bhañjakā ity arthaḥ — "crushers; since they blow swiftly, they destroy trees, rocks and the like."

- शुम्भन्ते — the root śubha śunbha dīptau; Bhvādi; la ṭ, third person plural. Since ye precedes, by "यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्" (yadvṛttānnityam) the prohibition of nighāta; śap is pit, hence unaccented; by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्" (tāsyānudāttet) the lasārvadhātuka ending is unaccented; the accent of the root remains.
- जनयः — the root janī prādurbhāve; jāyante āsu apatyāni iti janayaḥ jāyāḥ; by "इन्सर्वधातुभ्यः" (in sarvadhātubhyaḥ, Uṇ. Sū. 4-[117] [?]) the affix in; by “ज्जित्यादिर्नित्यम्” the first syllable acute; in the nominative plural, by “जसि च” the guṇa; ay-substitution; the form janayaḥ.

- यामन् — the root yā prāpaṇe; by “कृत्यल्युटो बहुलम्” (kṛtyaluṭo bahulam) the multiplicity rule, and by “आतो मनिन्क्वनिब्बनिपश्च” (āto manin-kvanib-vanipaś ca) the affix manin in the abstract sense; the word yāman; by “सुपां सुलुक्” the locative singular elided; since it ends in a nit affix, the first syllable acute.
- सुदंससः — daṃsaḥ is a name for action; sobhanaṃ daṃso yeṣāṃ te sudaṃsasaḥ; in the bahuvrīhi, by “सोर्मनसी अलोमोषसी” (sor manasī alomoṣasī, Pā. Sū. 6-2-[117] [?]) the acute on the first syllable of the latter member.

- चक्रिरे — the root ḥukṛñ karaṇe; liṭ, third person plural; by “लिटस्तझयोरेशिरेच्” (liṭas tajhayor eširec, Pā. Sū. 3-4-81) the substitute irec for jha; the yaṇ-substitution; since hi ca (Pā. Sū. [8-1-34] [?]) the word hi precedes, the nighāta is barred; since irec has the c-marker, by “चितः” the final acute.
- वृधे — the root vṛdhu vṛddhau; by the statement “सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्” (sampadādibhyaḥ kvip), since it is read in that list, the affix kvip; the word vṛdh; dative singular; the later word (ekāc) so, by “सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः” (sāv ekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ) the case-ending acute.
- मदन्ति — the root madī harṣe, Divādi; laṭ, third person plural, the substitute ant; śap as vikaraṇa in place of śyan by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्”; since madanti stands at the beginning of a pāda, the nighāta does not occur; by the root’s accent the first syllable acute.
- विदथेषु — the root vida jñāne; by “रुविदिभ्यां कित्” (Uṇ. Sū. 3-[117] [?]) the affix atha (kit); since kit is the substitute, no laghūpadha guṇa; by the affix-accent the vowel after d is acute; locative plural.
- घृष्वयः — the root ghṛṣu saṃgharṣe; by “कृविघृष्णि...” (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[147] [?]) fixed by nipātana with the affix vi; being nit, acute on the first syllable; nominative plural.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.2 (Kannada)

“The Maruts, consecrated by the gods, attained greatness. The Maruts, sons of Rudra, firmly established their abode excellently in the shining sky. The Maruts, sons of Pṛṣni, worshipping Indra the worshipful and inspiring his valour, took on abundant lordly powers.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“They (Maruts) inaugurated by the Gods have attained majesty; the Sons of Rudra have established their dwelling above the sky; glorifying him (Indra) who merits to be glorified they have inspired him with vigour; the Sons of Prisni (earth) have acquired glory.” — as printed (“Prisni” in the print).

- पृश्निमातरः — “pṛṣni means the earth, the cow. Pṛṣnimātaraḥ means the sons of the earth or the sons of the cow. The bhāṣyakāra explains this word as ‘the sons of the earth, which has many kinds of colour’. And as an example:

Special Topics of Rik 85.2 (the entry on pṛṣnimātaraḥ), continued from p. 152:

“...having given this R̥k, in explaining it he explains the words pṛṣneḥ putrāḥ (‘sons of Pṛṣni’) by ‘gorūpāyā antarikṣasya vā putrasthānīyāḥ’ (goḥ rūpāyā antarikṣasya vā putrasthānīyāḥ) — that is, ‘those who stand in the place of sons of the earth, which has the form of a cow, or of the atmosphere’. And Skandasvāmin says: ‘pṛṣnir iti dyunāma | dyaur mātā yeṣāṁ marutāṁ te pṛṣnimātaraḥ | divaḥ putrā ity arthaḥ’ — ‘Pṛṣni is a name of the sky. Those Maruts whose mother is the sky are pṛṣnimātaraḥ; the meaning is “sons of the sky”’. [The editor:] Pṛṣni is said to mean heaven, and the sons of the atmosphere. Since the Maruts move in the atmosphere itself, it is fitting to say that they are born from it. Yāska explains this word thus:

स्वः । पृश्निः । नाकः । गौः । विष्टपम् । नभ इति षट् साधारणानि ॥ साधारणान्युत्तराणि दिवश्चादित्यस्य च ॥

svaḥ | pṛṣniḥ | nākaḥ | gauḥ | viṣṭapam | nabha iti ṣaṭ sādharmaṇāni // sādharmaṇāny uttarāṇi divaś cādityasya ca // (Ni. 2-[14] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “Svar, pṛṣni, nāka, go, viṣṭapa, nabhas — these six are common [names]; the later ones are common to the sky and to the sun.”

— that is, the six words svaḥ, pṛṣniḥ, nākaḥ, gauḥ, viṣṭapam, nabhaḥ are common words that denote heaven (divaḥ) and the Āditya (the sun). And again:

पृश्निरादित्यो भवति । प्राश्नुते एनं वर्ण इति नैरुक्ताः । संस्पृष्टा रसान् । संस्पृष्टा भासं ज्योतिषाम् । संस्पृश्यो भासेति वा ॥ अथ द्यौः संस्पृष्टा ज्योतिर्भिः पुण्यकृद्भिश्च ॥

pṛṣṇir ādityo bhavati | prāśnute enaṁ varṇa iti nairuktāḥ | saṁspṛṣṭā rasān | saṁspraṣṭā bhāsaṁ jyotiṣām | saṁspṛṣyo bhāseti vā // atha dyauḥ saṁspṛṣṭā jyotirbhiḥ puṇyakṛdbhiś ca // (Ni. 2-[14] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “Pṛṣṇi is the Āditya: the etymologists say that colour pervades him [or: colour reaches him]; (he is) the toucher of the juices, the toucher of the radiance of the luminaries, or ‘to be touched by his lustre’. Then dyaus (‘heaven’) is ‘touched’ by lights and by doers of good deeds.”

“Pṛṣṇi means the Āditya (the sun). Because his excellent splendour pervades all around him, the Nirukta-writers say that pṛṣṇi means the Āditya. Saṁspṛṣṭā rasān — he is always in contact with the juices (rasa), that is, with waters; his work is the taking-up of the juices; since he is the cause of giving the rasa (water) in the form of rain, the Āditya is called pṛṣṇi. Or saṁspraṣṭā bhāsaṁ jyotiṣām — the radiance of planets, constellations, the moon and the rest is obscured by the sun; or saṁspṛṣyo bhāsaṁ iti vā — since he pervades everywhere with his own radiance, pṛṣṇi means the Āditya.”

“Now pṛṣṇi means dyauḥ, for saṁspṛṣṭāḥ jyotirbhiḥ puṇyakṛdbhiś ca — since it is touched by light and by the doers of meritorious works, pṛṣṇi means dyauḥ (heaven).”

“This is Yāska’s explanation. Therefore, accepting the meaning that pṛṣṇi is dyauḥ — heaven, the atmosphere — it is fitting to explain the word pṛṣṇimātaraḥ as divasputrāḥ — ‘born in the atmosphere’.”

Special Topics of Rik 85.2, continued from p. 153. The first line closes a quotation begun at the foot of p. 153’s discussion:

यदूयं पृश्निमातरो मर्तासः स्यातन ॥

yad yūyaṁ pṛṣṇimātaro martāsaḥ syātana // (R. Saṁ. 1-[38]-[4] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “If you, O sons of Pṛṣṇi, were mortals...”

“— in explaining this Rk the bhāṣyakāra has explained the word pṛṣṇimātaraḥ as pṛṣṇinā-maka-dhenuputrā marutaḥ [Kannada: “sons of the cow named Pṛṣṇi”, as the Kannada text gives it, in the Kannada words: pṛṣṇi-nāmaka-dhenu-putrāḥ marutaḥ]. In the many contexts of praising the Marut deities, the use of the word pṛṣṇimātaraḥ is especially frequent. It may therefore be said confidently that a certain fixed sense had become established for this word. The Rks in the R̥gveda in which this word occurs are given below:

yad yūyaṁ pṛṣṇimātaro martāsaḥ syātana // (R. Saṁ. 1-[38]-[4] [?])

Saṃ. 5-[?]-[?] [?]) (the first word is printed kosayetha or close to it; read as kopayetha with doubt [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “You shake the earth, sons of Pṛṣni, when, fierce ones, you yoke the spotted mares for splendour.”

“All the Rks in which the word pṛṣnimātaraḥ occurs have been given above. In these Rks, since the word pṛṣnimātaraḥ is explained in reference to the Maruts alone, it may be said confidently that this word has been used, in connexion with these deities only, in one fixed sense.” (Each Rgveda reference numeral is in small Kannada numerals, not legible with certainty at 150 dpi; none is read as certain.)

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.2) (grammar page, noted briefly; every sūtra read is given in three layers, the numerals as read [?])

- उक्षितासः — the root ukṣa secane; by “निष्ठा” (niṣṭhā) the affix kta in the passive; by “आर्धधातुकस्येड्वलादेः” (ārdhadhātukasyeḍvalādeḥ) the augment iṭ; the word ukṣita, by the affix-accent acute on the final syllable; with jas following, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” (āj jaser asuk) the augment asuk for jas; ru and visarga: ukṣitāsaḥ.
- महिमानम् — since mahat is in the pṛthvādi class, by “पृथ्वादिभ्य इमनिज्वा” (pṛthvādibhya imanij vā, Pā. Sū. 5-1-122 [?]) the affix imanic; by “टेः” (ṭeḥ) the loss of the ṭi part (at) of mahat; the word mahiman; in the accusative singular, by “सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ” (sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau) the lengthening of the penultimate of the word ending in n; since mahiman is cit, by “चितः” the final acute.
- आशत — the root aśū vyāptau; lañ, third person plural, the jha, substitute ata, since a- ending after the root; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the vikaraṇa is elided; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- दिवि — locative singular; by “ऊडिदंपदाद्यप्पुमैद्युभ्यः” (ūḍidaṁpadādy-appum-raidyubhyaḥ, Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) the case-ending acute.
- रुद्रासः — as before, in the jas: by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk.
- अर्वन्तः — the root arca pūjāyām; the affix śatṛ in the sense of laṭ; the root accent remains; in the nominative plural, as it is ugit (a u-marked nasal-taking), the augment num.
- इन्द्रियम् — indriyam indraliṅgam indradṛṣṭam... — by “इन्द्रियमिन्द्रलिङ्गमिन्द्रदृष्टमिन्द्रसृष्टमिन्द्रजुष्टमिन्द्रदत्तमिति वा” (Pā. Sū. 5-2-93 [?]) the word is fixed by nipātana with the affix gha; by “आयनेयीनीयियः फढखछ्छाम्” (āyaneyīniyīyaḥ phaḍkhachaghām, Pā. Sū. 7-1-2) iya for gha.
- दधिरे — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; liṭ, third person plural (cf. before); the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- पृश्निमातरः — prāśnute sarvāṇi rūpāṇi pṛṣniḥ bhūmiḥ (“that which pervades all forms: the earth”); ‘iyaṁ vai pṛṣniḥ’ (Tai. Brā. 1-6-[?] [?]) — thus it is heard in the Śruti. By nipātana in “pṛṣu...pṛṣniḥ” the form pṛṣni is established; pṛṣnir mātā yeṣāṁ te pṛṣnimātaraḥ; in the bahuvrihi, “ṛtaś chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 5-4-[153] [?]) forbids the kap that would come at the end of the compound; because the rule “aṣṭṛkṛt...” [as read, “aṣṭṛkṛt”] has fixed the restriction, the lengthening of the penultimate does not occur.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.2, concluded (grammar, noted briefly):

- जनयन्तः — the root janī prādurbhāve; the affix śatṛ after the ṇijanta (causative); śap as the vikaraṇa; on account of śap the guṇa of the ṇic, and ay-substitution; since śap is pit, unaccented; as the lasārvadhātuka (śatī) is unaccented by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्” (tāsyānudāttet), by the accent of ṛic the a after n is acute; in the nominative plural, since it is ugit, the augment num comes.

Closing of Rik 85.2: “॥ २ ॥” (2), followed by a printer’s ornament. (So the grammar page of 85.2 does not continue past janayantaḥ; the earlier words dadhire and śriyaḥ are treated on p. 155.)

 - अञ्जिभिः — the root añjū vyaktimrakṣaṇakāntigatiṣu; by “खनिकषिकस्यञ्जिसिवसि...” (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[137] [?]) the affix i; by the affix-accent the final acute; instrumental plural.
 - शुभ्राः — the root śubha dīptau; by “स्थायितचेतः” (sthāyitaṁ ca..., Uṇ. Sū. 2-[120] [?]) the affix rak; since kit, no laghūpadha guṇa; the final acute; nominative plural.
 - विरुक्ततः — viśiṣṭā ruk viruk — virug eṣām asti iti virukmantaḥ; the root ruc dīptau, the affix kvip; by “तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप्” (tad asyāsty asminn iti matup) the affix matup; by “आयस्मयादीनि छन्दसि” (āyasmayādīni chandasi) since this is included there, it has the status of pada, so by “चोः कुः” (coḥ kuḥ) the c is replaced by a guttural: k; since it has the bha designation, jaṣṭva does not come to it; matup is pit, so unaccented; by “गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्” (gatikārapapadāt kṛt) the u after r is acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.3, concluded from p. 158 (grammar, noted briefly):

- बाधन्ते — the root bādhṛloḍane, Bhvādi; la ṭ, third person plural; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, there is no nighāta; by the root's accent the first syllable is acute.
- रीयते — the root rīñ sravaṇe, Divādi; la ṭ, third person singular; by “टित् आत्मनेपदानां टेरे” (ṭita ātmanepadānāṃ ṭer e) the e; by “दिवादिभ्यः श्यन्” (divādibhyaḥ śyan) the vikaraṇa śyan; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

(Kannada script; the clause “pṛṣatya iti marudvāhanānāṃ saṃjñā” is followed by a short Nirukta-like phrase that is not clear in the print [?]; the sūtra number at the end is not read with certainty.)

Translation: “Sumakhāsaḥ — those with good sacrifices; the Maruts, who with their spears (ṛṣṭi, weapons) shine forth specially, they pracyāvayantaḥ — shaking, impelling — even the acyutā, the firm things that cannot be moved, mountains and the like, by their own strength (ojas). The latter half is addressed directly. O Maruts, swift as thought, whose movement is as fast as the mind, a host (vrāta) of seven (companies [?]) able to pour out rain-water, pṛṣatīḥ — pṛṣatī is the name of the Maruts’ steeds (the Nirukta [?] says ‘the pṛṣatis of the Maruts’) — when you yoke to your own chariots the does that are marked with white spots, pṛṣat — then the mountains and the rest are shaken out of place — so the meaning.” Grammar tail, noted briefly: sumakhāsaḥ — since all rules are optional in the Chandas, “nañsubhyām” does not apply, and so in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its accent; acyutā — loss of śi by “śeś chandasi bahulam”; manojuvaḥ — ju is a sautra root in the sense of motion; kvip by “kvib vacī...”, lengthening; ayugdhvam — yujir yoge, luṇ with dhvam, loss of s by the sūtra “dhi ca” [Pā. 8-2-25 [?]].

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.4) (Kannada)

sumakhāsaḥ — those who have excellent sacrifices; ye — which Maruts; ṛṣṭibhiḥ — with weapons; vi bhrājante — shine specially; (they) acyutā cit — even mountains and the like, which are not to be shaken; ojasā — by their strength; pracyāvayantaḥ — shake; maruta — O Maruts; manojuvaḥ — swift as the mind; vṛṣavrātāsaḥ — intent on duties such as pouring rain; ratheṣu — in your chariots; pṛṣatīḥ — the spotted does; yat — when; ā ayugdhvam — you yoke (towards the chariot) (then mountains and the rest all shake).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.4 (Kannada)

“The Maruts, who are endowed with excellent sacrifices and shine specially with their weapons, make the mountains and the like, which are unshakable, shake with their strength. O Maruts, swift as the mind, intent on duties such as giving rain, when you yoke the spotted does to your chariots, all the mountains and the rest are made to move.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“They (Maruts) who are well worshipped shine with various weapons; through their might, they are shakers of even unshakable (mountains &c.). Maruts, entrusted with the duty of sending rain, yoke the spotted deer to your cars.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.4)

- सुमखासः — śobhanayajñāḥ — “those who are worshipped in the finest sacrifices.”

- प्रच्यावयन्तः — “prakarṣeṇa cyāvayitāraḥ prerayitāro bhavanti — those who impel by their strength, who shake.”
- अच्युता — “mountains and the like, which cannot be shaken.”
- ओजसा — “by their strength and power.”
- मनोजुवः — “ju is a sautra root in the sense of motion: of the speed of the mind. Just as we see in an instant, with the mind, a thing that is very far off, so they have a surpassing speed — that is the meaning.”
- वृषव्रातासः — “those capable of the work of raining.”
- पृषतीः — “the vehicles of the Marut deities are called pṛṣatī. Pṛṣatī means ‘does marked with white spots’. Different deities have different vehicles. In this connexion Yāska has said:

- भ्राजन्ते — the root bhrāji dīptau, Bhvādi; since ye stands before it, by “यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्” (yadvṛttānnityam) the nighāta is prevented; the root-accent remains. (The grammar page continues on p. 162.)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.4, continued from p. 161 (grammar, noted briefly):

- सुमखासः — śobhanāḥ makhāḥ yeṣāṃ te sumakhāsaḥ; by “नञ्सुभ्याम्” (nañsubhyām) the accent of the final syllable of the latter member would in fact come in the bahuvrīhi; but by the statement “सर्वे विधयश्छन्दसि विकल्प्यन्ते” (sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante), got through the yogavibhāga of the sūtra “षष्ठीयुक्तश्छन्दसि वा” (ṣaṣṭhīyuktaś chandasi vā), the above-mentioned accent is barred here, and by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member’s own accent, which ordinarily comes, alone comes; in the nominative plural, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk for jas.
- प्रच्यावयन्तः — the root cyuñ gatau; the affix ṇic in the sense of impelling; after the ṇijanta, the affix ṣatṛ in the sense of laṭ; ṣap as vikaraṇa; on account of ṣap, guṇa of the ṇic and ay-substitution; on account of ṇic, vṛddhi of the root and āv-substitution; the accent of ṇic.
- अच्युता — in the neuter plural accusative, śas replaced by śi; by “शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्” (śeś chandasi bahulam) its loss.
- मनोजुवः — ju is a sautra root, in the sense of motion; by “क्विप्चिप्रच्छयायतस्तुकटप्रजुश्रीणां दीर्घोऽसम्प्रसारणं च” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[177] vārttika 2 [?]) the affix kvip; by its connexion the root is lengthened; the word manojū; the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent; in the nominative plural, by “अचि श्नुधातुभुवां य्वोरियङ्वडौ” (aci śnudhātubhruvāṃ yvor iyañuvañau) the substitute uv.
- वृषत्रातासः — in the jas, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk.
- अयुग्ध्वम् — the root yujir yoge; luñ, second person plural, the affix dhvam; by “च्लेः सिच्” (cleḥ sic) sic in place of cli; by “धि च” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[25] [?]) the loss of the s of sic, since an affix beginning with dh follows; by “चोः कुः” (coḥ kuḥ) the j of the root becomes a guttural; since yat is in connexion, there is no nighāta accent; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.

Closing of Rik 85.4: “॥ ४ ॥” (4), followed by a printer’s ornament.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.5) (Kannada) marutaḥ — O Maruts; vāje — for the sake of food; adrim — the cloud; raṁhayantaḥ — (in order to make it rain) impelling; pṛṣatīḥ — the spotted does; ratheṣu — (your) chariots; yat

— when; pra ayugdhvam — you yoke well; uta — then; aruṣasya — of the radiant sun, or of the fire in the form of lightning (from the sky: the streams of rain); vi ṣyanti — fall; dhārāḥ — those streams of rain; udabhiḥ — with waters; carmeṣu — like a bit of hide (without effort, wetting); bhūma — all regions of the earth; vyundanti — they make wet.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.5 (Kannada)

“O Maruts, for the sake of food, impelling the cloud so that it rains, when you yoke the spotted does to your chariots, the rain falls in streams from the radiant sun’s [or the lightning’s] ray. Those streams of rain drench all regions of the earth without effort, as with a little water one wets a hide.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Maruts, when for the sake of providing food, you have yoked the spotted deer to your chariots the drops (of water) fall from the radiant [sic] (Sun) and drench the earth with waters like a hide.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.5)

- पृषतीः — “the spotted does. These are the vehicles of the Marut deities. Spotted deer or antelopes (English, as printed). The explanation of this word was given in the preceding Rk.”
- वाजे — anne nimittabhūte — “for the sake of food, or of the obtaining of nourishment: so that it rains.”
- अद्रिम् — megham — “‘cloud’. Among the thirty names of cloud, since adri, grāvā and the rest are read, adrim means ‘the cloud’ (Ni. [1-10] [?]). The word adri has other senses too: ‘lightning’ (Ni. [2-?] [?]) and ‘mountain’ (Ni. [3-?] [?]).” (Numerals are small and read with doubt.)

- अरुषस्य — arocamānasya sūryasya vidyutaḥ agner vā sakāśād vṛṣṭyudakadhārā bhavanto vi ṣyanti — “from the radiant sun, or from lightning (fire), the streams of rain-water are let loose: the meaning is that rain comes from the radiant sun, or from the lightning (the fire). When rain is falling, with thunder and lightning, the wind blows fiercely; here the ṛṣi describes the Maruts (the winds) as going swiftly and, through the lightning, as sending the clouds to scatter the water upon the earth.”

“It is well known that wherever the Marut deities move, causing rain to fall, fire (lightning) arises there. This matter is stated in many Rks:

- अयुग्ध्वम् — the process was stated in the preceding Rk; here too, because yat is in connexion, the nighāta does not occur.
- मरुतः — by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta accent.
- रंहयन्तः — the root rahi gatau; by “इदितो नुम् धातोः” (idito num dhātoḥ) the augment num; since it is in the sense of impelling, ṇic; after the ṇijanta śatṛ in the sense of la ṭ; śap; because of it, guṇa of the ṇic, and ay-substitution: rahayat; by the accent of ṇic the a after h is acute; in the nominative plural, as it is ugit, the augment num.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.5, continued from p. 165 (grammar, noted briefly):

- वि प्यन्ति — the root ṣo antakarmaṇi, Divādi; by “धात्वादेः षः सः” (dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ) the ṣ becomes s; la ṭ, third person plural, the substitute anta; by “दिवादिभ्यः श्यन्” the śyan vikaraṇa; it being followed by śyan, by “ओतः श्यनि” (otaḥ śyani, Pā. Sū. 7-3-[71] [?]) the loss of the o of the root; by “अतो गुणे” the following form (pararūpa); the form syanti; owing to the connexion with the preposition vi (and its visarga), by “उपसर्गात्सुनोति...” (upasargāt sunoti..., Pā. Sū. 8-3-[65] [?]) ṣatva for the s of the root; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta.

- उदभिः — when the word is udaka + bhis, by “पद्मोमास्त्रिशसन्...” (paddann-omās-hṛm-niśasan..., Pā. Sū. 6-1-[63] [?]) the substitute udan for the base; as it has the status of pada, by “नलोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य” the loss of n; being asiddha, the i-lengthening etc. do not occur.
- व्युन्दन्ति — the root undī kledane; third person plural; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- भूम — when bhūmi + am, by “सुपां सुलुक्...” (supāṃ suluk...) the substitute ḍā in place of ami; by the force of the ḍit, the loss of the ḍi part (i) of the base; the shortening comes as a Vedic feature.

Translation: “O Maruts, may your swift horses bring you here — may they convey you to our sacrifice. How are the horses? Raghuṣyadaḥ — light, swiftly flowing, i.e. going with speed. You, raghupatvānaḥ — flying lightly, quickly — come forward, bringing with your own hands the wealth we are to be given. O Maruts, your seat (sadaḥ) has been made wide (uru). “At the third pressing, the priest called Potṛ is to use this Rk ā vo vahantu as a yājyā mantra; this is set forth in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra ‘ā vo vahantu saptayo raghuṣyado meva naḥ suhavā ā hi gantana’ (Āś. [5-5] [?]).”

- सप्तयः — sarpaṇaśīlā aśvāḥ — “swiftly moving horses. Here it should be understood as the spotted does (pr̥ṣatīḥ), the vehicles of the Marut deities.”
 - रघुस्यदः — “raghu means laghu, light; by the interchange of letters, r is used for l. Laghu śīghraṁ syandamānāḥ vegena gacchanta ity arthaḥ — ‘quickly flowing’; that is, going with speed.”

- उरु — “spacious, large.”
- मध्वः — “sweet, pleasing to the taste.”
- अन्धसः — somalakṣaṇasyānnasya — “of the food in the form of Soma; the food of the nature of Soma-drinking: that is, of the drink that is of the nature of Soma-juice, or of the food that is marked by havis.” (the second alternative is printed in a clotted line and is read with doubt [?])

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.6) (grammar page, noted briefly; every sūtra read is in three layers, the numerals as read [?])

- वहन्तु — the root vaha prāpaṇe; loṭ, third person plural; by “एरुः” (er uḥ) the substitute u for the i of the ending: antu; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.
 - रघुस्यदः — raghu syandante iti raghuṣyadaḥ; the root syandū prasravaṇe; by “क्विप् च” (kvip ca, Pā. Sū. 3-2-[76] [?]) the affix kvip; since it is kit, by “अनिदितां हल उपधायाः क्ङिति” the loss of the nasal; since raghu belongs to the kāsilakādi [?] group, optionally l for r; the word raghuṣyad; by “गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्” the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent; nominative plural.
 - रघुपत्वानः — raghu patantaḥ raghupatvānaḥ; the root paṭṭṛgatau; by “अन्येभ्यो ऽपि दृश्यन्ते” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[75] [?]) the affix vanip; the word raghupatvan; since vanip is pit, the root accent remains; in the compound, as before, the kṛdutarapada’s base accent; jas following, by “सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ” the lengthening of the penultimate.
 - जिगात — the root gā stutau; Juhotyādi; jigāti (Ni. [2-?-?] [?]) is read among the roots of motion, hence here it comes in the sense of going; for the second person plural of loṭ, by “तप्तनप्तनथनाश्च” (taptanaptanthanāś ca, Pā. Sū. 7-1-[45] [?]) the substitute ta; since it is pit there is no ñit-ness and so no changes like ī; when ślu is present, the duplications etc. come; by “ई हल्यघोः” (ī halyaghoḥ, Pā. Sū. 6-4-[113] [?]) the ī for the ā is not made, and by “बहुलं छन्दसि” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[78] [?]) the i in the reduplicate comes; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.
 - सीदत — the root śadḥ/visaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu; loṭ, second person plural; since laṇ/luṇ-like ñit-ness is present, by “तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः” (tasthasthamipāṁ tāntantāmaḥ, Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute ta; by “पाघ्राध्मा...” (pāghrādhmā..., Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) the substitute sīda for the root; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; the affix is unaccented by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्”, so the root-accent remains.
 - सदः — sadaḥ + kṛtam, the root ḍukṛñ following; by “अतः कृकमिकंसकुम्भपात्रकुशाकर्णेष्वनव्ययस्य” (ataḥ kṛkamikaṁsa..., Pā. Sū. 8-3-46) the visarga is replaced by s (satva). (The sūtra number is read as given, with a numeral in doubt [?].)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.6, concluded from p. 169 (grammar, noted briefly):

- मादयध्वम् — the root mada tṛptiyoge, Curādi, ātmanepada; by “सत्यापपाश...” (satyāpapāśa..., Pā. Sū. 3-1-25) the affix ṇic in its own sense; by “अत उपधायाः” (ata upadhāyāḥ) vṛddhi (lengthening) for the penultimate of the root; loṭ, second person plural, the affix dhvam; śap as vikaraṇa; on its account guṇa of the ṇic, and ay- substitution; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the accent of ṇic, the ā after d is acute.

From then on the sacrificers perform sacrifices on their behalf, and they, coming swiftly like birds to the sacrifice of the sacrificers, sit upon the sacred grass.” (The first word after yadā is printed viṣṇunā saha marute; read here as marutaḥ with doubt.)

[The editor:] “The Marut deities came with Viṣṇu and helped Indra in the work of slaying Vṛtra. Therefore the greatness of these Marut deities increased. Their strength grew, and they made their dwelling in heaven among the first of the gods. Therefore the sacrificers who

Saṃ. 10-[113]-[2] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “His greatness [and] that stream of honey Viṣṇu holds in his strength, he proclaims [or: shouts forth]; with the gods who go together, Indra the bountiful, having slain Vṛtra, became the choicest.”

“In such R̥ks the matter of Viṣṇu helping Indra is brought up. Apart from this, in the R̥ks R. Saṃ. 8-[32-?]; 8-[?]; 10-[?]; 6-[?]; 6-[?]; 6-[?]; 2-[?]; 7-[?]; 7-[?]; 7-[?] (the numerals are small and read with doubt, so none is given as certain [?]), Viṣṇu is invoked, together with the Marut deities or with other deities, for the sake of drinking Soma.”

- विष्णुः — “As to Viṣṇu we have already written; see pages 119, 124, 125 of R. Saṃ. Part 3 [as printed: ‘R. Saṃ. bhāga 3, pp. 119, 124, 125’ — i.e. of an earlier volume of this edition]. For the word viṣṇu in this R̥k, Skandasvāmin explains it as ‘sacrifice’: there is the Śruti sentence yajño vai viṣṇuḥ — ‘sacrifice indeed is Viṣṇu.’”
- वयो न — “vayo na means ‘like a bird’: the ṛṣi prays that they should come swiftly, as a bird flies swiftly.”

- बर्हिषि प्रिये — “To invite the gods to a sacrifice, so that they come and sit, they spread a seat (āsana) of kuśa grass, cut at the tips, on the ground, like a soft mattress. The ṛṣis in many Ṛks pray that the deities come and sit on this seat. Here the word prīye shows that such a seat is dear to the gods, a thing in which they take pleasure.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.7) (grammar page, noted briefly; begins here)

- ते वर्धन्त — te + avardhanta; by “एङः पदान्तादति” (eṇaḥ padāntād ati, Pā. Sū. 6-1-109) the earlier form (pūrvarūpa) is the single substitute; then by “स्वरितो वानुदात्ते पदादौ” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[6] [?]): “when an unaccented follows at the beginning of a pada, the svarita is optional with the single substitute that arises from an acute...” — here, as the single substitute arises with an acute, it becomes svarita; the root vṛdhu vṛddhau; lañ, third person plural.
- स्वतवसः — svakīyaṃ tavaḥ yeṣāṃ te svatavasaḥ; by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member keeps its own accent.
- महित्वना — the affix tva in the abstract sense; the ā of the following jas is lost by vyatyaya; the acute accent too is by vyatyaya. Or, by “सुपां सुलुक्” the substitute ā for the case-ending, and the augment n; since mahitvanā is cit [as read], by “चितः” the final acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.7, continued from p. 173 (grammar, noted briefly):

- तस्थुः — the root sthā gatinivṛtau; liṭ, third person plural; by “परस्मैपदानां णलतुसुस्...” (parasmaipadānāṃ ṇalatususthalathusaṇalvamāḥ, Pā. Sū. 3-4-82) the substitute us; after duplication, by “शर्पूर्वाः खयः” (śarpūrvāḥ khayaḥ) the th is kept in the reduplicate; by “अभ्यासे चर्च” (abhyāse care ca) the t in place of the th; by “आतो लोप इति च” the loss of the ā. Since here the construction is “nākam ā tasthuḥ ca, sadaś ca vistīrṇaṃ cakrire”, by “चादिलोपे विभाषा” (cādilope vibhāṣā, Pā. Sū. 8-1-[63] [?]) the prohibition of nighāta comes to the tiñ-ending that stands first; then, by the affix-accent, the final acute.
- यत् — a dative plural, the ne-bhyas that follows; by “सुपां सुलुक्” its luk.
- आवत् — in the sense of the present, the root av rakṣaṇe; by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः” (chandasi luṅ-laṅ-liṭaḥ) lañ; third person singular, tip; by “इतश्च” the loss of the final; by “आडजादीनाम्” the augment āṭ; by “आटश्च” vṛddhi; since ha is in connexion, no nighāta occurs; since the augment is acute, the first syllable is acute.
- वृषणम् — vṛṣan ends in the affix kanin and so has the first syllable acute and a final n; in the accusative singular, since am follows, by “वा षपूर्वस्य निगमे” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[9] [?]) the lengthening of the penultimate does not occur in Samhitā; by “अट्कुप्वाङ्नुम्व्यवायेऽपि” the ṇ for the n.
- मदच्युतम् — madaṃ cyotati iti madacyut; the root cyutir āsecane; by “क्विप् च” the kvip; the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent; accusative singular.

- सीदन् — the root śad/viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu; leṭ, third person plural; by “पान्नाभ्मा...” the substitute sīda for the root; by “इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु” the loss of the i of the affix; the nighāta accent of the tiṇanta.

(Kannada script; the bhāṣya's grammatical tail is in small, compressed type; the sūtra wording and number after "ādṛṅgamahanajanaḥ" and the clause on nittvād ādyudāttatvam are read with doubt [?]; one clause after bhayante is omitted as illegible.)

Translation: "Id is in the sense of 'and' (conjunction). Like heroes — fighters endowed with valour — and like warriors (yuyudhayaḥ) fighting with enemies, like men going quickly (jagmayaḥ), the Maruts, like men who wish for fame (śravas, food) for themselves, yetire — strive in battles (pṛtanāsu), engage in war with sons and the rest [as read]. From such Maruts all the worlds, all beings, are afraid — and the men who are the guides of rain and the rest, the Maruts, who like kings are shining, who are tveṣasaṁdṛśaḥ — of blazing appearance — cannot be looked at, on account of their terrible form: from them, that is, the meaning." Grammar tail, noted briefly: yuyudhayaḥ — root yudha saṁprahāre, the affix kin by the sūtra cited; the reduplication as if in liṭi; no guṇa because of kit-ness; jagmayaḥ — by the same sūtra, the affix kin, with the loss of the penultimate by "gamahana...", and reduplication by sthānivadbhāva; śravasyavaḥ — śrava icchati śravasyati, with the affix u after kyāc in the Chandas; yetire — root yatī prayatne, Vedic liṭi in the present sense; bhayante — root ṇibhiḥ bhaye, with no ślu for śap by the doctrine "bahulaṁ chandasi"; tveṣasaṁdṛśaḥ — tviṣa dīptau with ac (the pacādi class); dṛṣir prekṣaṇe preceded by sam, the affix kvip in the abstract sense (the sampadādi class); in the bahuvrīhi the first member's base accent."

Close of the grammatical tail of the bhāṣya of Rik 85.8, continued from p. 175 (Kannada script):

...शपः श्लोरभावः । त्वेषसंदृशः । त्विष दीप्तौ । पचाद्यच् । दृशिर् प्रेक्षणे ।

 //

(So the remaining clause on p. 175's "..." is the one that runs "...the replacement of the ś by the ślu is not made" — as printed: "...śapaḥ ślor abhāvaḥ". The Rk's closing numeral " ॥ ८ ॥" follows the bhāṣya, as in the preceding Rks.)

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.8) (Kannada)

śūrā iva — like heroes; yuyudhayaḥ na — the Maruts, who are like warriors; śravasyavaḥ na — like folk desiring food; jagmayaḥ — of swift movement; pṛtanāsu — in battles; yetire — they strive; naraḥ — guides of rain and the rest; rājāna iva — like shining kings; tveṣasaṁdṛṣaḥ — (the Maruts) of fierce splendour; marudbhyaḥ — from such Maruts; viśvā bhuvanā — all the beings of the world; bhayante — are afraid.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.8 (Kannada)

“The Maruts, who are like heroes, like warriors, like folk who desire food, of swift movement, strive in battles. Being guides of rain and the rest, and, like shining kings, of fierce splendour who strike fear into others, all the beings of the world go about in fear of these Maruts.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Like heroes, like warriors, like men eager for food, the swift-moving (Maruts) have engaged in battles; all beings fear the Maruts who are the leaders (of the rain) and who are of awful appearance like kings.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.8)

- युयुधयः — yudha saṁprahāre / yuyutsavaḥ puruṣāḥ — “men who wish for battle; warriors, soldiers, warriors, combatants etc. (English, as printed).”
- श्रवस्यवः — “śravaḥ means food (Ni. [10-?] [?]); śrava icchati śravasyati — ‘one who wishes food’.”
- पृतनासु — saṁgrāmeṣu — “since the word pṛtanā is read among the forty-six names of battle — raṇaḥ, vivāḥ and the rest (Ni. [2-17] [?]) — pṛtanāsu means ‘in battles’. This word is always used in the plural.”
- राजाने इव — “as people fear on seeing kings.”
- त्वेषसंदृशः — tviṣa dīptau / dīptasaṁdarśanā ugrarūpatayā draṣṭum aśakyā bhavanti — “those of shining appearance, who on account of terrible form cannot be looked at; that is, since they are of a cruel form, they are fearful to look at...” (the entry runs on to p. 177)

Special Topics of Rik 85.8, continued from p. 176:

“...Because the Marut deities, when they move with great force (when they blow), are of a terrible form, people are afraid on seeing them — that is the intention.”

- नरः — vṛṣṭyāder netāraḥ — “the foremost in tasks like causing rain, ‘the leaders’; without the help of the Marut deities it is impossible for rain to fall.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.8) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- युयुधयः — the root yudha saṃprahāre; by “आदृगमहनजनः किकिनौ लिट् च” (ādṛgamahanajanaḥ kikināu liṭ ca), where “utsargaś chandasi” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[171] [?]) applies, the affix kin comes here too; since liṭ has been said to be like it (liṭvadbhāva), the root is reduplicated; because it is kit, no guṇa because of the ārdhadhātuka affix; the word yuyudhi; since it ends in a nit affix, by “जित्यादिर्नित्यम्” the first syllable is acute; in the nominative plural, by “जसि च” the guṇa; ay-substitution.
- जग्मयः — the root gam/gatau; by the preceding sūtra, the affix kin; reduplication; in the reduplicate, the hal-initial ādi [as read, “halādiśeṣa”]; by “कुहोश्चुः” (kuhoś cuḥ) cutva; by “गमहनजन...” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[98]) the loss of the penultimate; since it is the inner operation, the loss of the penultimate comes first, and so the reduplication etc. is to be said through sthānivadbhāva; the word jagmi; as before, the first syllable acute; nominative plural.
- श्रवस्यवः — śravaḥ ātmanaḥ icchati śravasyati; by “सुप आत्मनः क्यच्” (supa ātmanaḥ kyac) the affix kyac; by “श्रवस्यतीति श्रवस्युः क्याच्छन्दसि” (kyāc chandasi, Pā. Sū. 3-2-[170] [?]) the affix u after what ends in kyac; by “अतो लोपः” the loss of the a of kyac; by the affix-accent the word śravasyu has its final syllable acute; in the jas, by “ह्रस्वस्य गुणः” the guṇa; av-substitution.
- येतिरे — the root yatī prayatne; in the present sense by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः” the affix liṭ; for the plural, the substitute irec; since reduplication has come, by “अत एकहल्मध्ये ऽनादेशादेर्लिटि” (ata ekahalmadhye 'nādeśādor liṭ, Pā. Sū. 6-4-[120]) the e (ettva) and the loss of the reduplicate (abhyāsalopa); since it stands after an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- भयन्ते — the root ñibhī bhaye; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” ślu is not the vikaraṇa for śap, so śap remains; in the plural, by śap the guṇa of the i of the root; since ac follows, ay-substitution; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, there is no nighāta; since the lasārvadhātuka ending (anti) is unaccented by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्”, the root-accent, the first syllable, is acute.
- विश्वा भुवना — by “शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्” the loss of śi, which came as a substitute in the neuter. (The grammar page continues on p. 178.)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.8, concluded from p. 177 (grammar, noted briefly):

- त्वेषसंदृशः — the root tviṣa dīptau; since it is read in the pacādi class, by “नन्दिग्रहिपचादिभ्यो ल्युणिन्यचः” (nandigrāhipacādibhyo lyaṇinyacaḥ, Pā. Sū. 3-1-134) the affix ac; since the affix is pit [?], by “पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च” (pugantalaghūpadhasya ca) the guṇa of the laghūpadha: tveṣa; the root dṛṣir prekṣaṇe, preceded by sam; by the statement “सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्” the kvip in the abstract sense; in the bahuvrīhi, by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member keeps its base accent.

Translation: “Svapāḥ — the skilful worker, tvaṣṭā — the maker of all things — when he avartayat — made [the thunderbolt] come to Indra, that is, gave it. What kind? Sukṛtam — well made, hiraṇyayam — golden, sahasrabhṛṣṭim — furnished with many streams [points]: that thunderbolt Indra dhatte — holds. For what purpose? Nari — here, by connexion with men (nṛ), the word nṛ means the battle; in battle, apāṇsi — deeds of the nature of slaying enemies, kartave — to do. Thus, having taken the thunderbolt, with that thunderbolt he ahan — slew vṛtram, the cloud that holds back the rain-water — arṇavam, joined with its water; and the waters stopped by it he niraubjat — wholly threw down head-foremost; that is, he made them rain.” Grammar tail, noted briefly: sukṛtam — kṛ preceded by su, with niṣṭhā in the passive; the gati keeps its base accent by “gatiṃ anantarah”; hiraṇyayam — a form fixed by nipātana with the affix mayā; svapāḥ — first member’s accent as in “sormanasī...”; kartave — the affix tavenn in the sense of tumun; apām — the genitive in the sense of the dative, since the object is the recipient (sampradāna); the case-ending acute by “ūḍidam...”; aubjat — ubja ārjave; arṇavam — the va affix in the sense ‘having that’, with the loss of s (of arṇas).”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.9) (Kannada)

svapāḥ — of excellent actions; tvaṣṭā — the divine craftsman; sukṛtam — excellently made; hiraṇyayam — golden; sahasrabhṛṣṭim — with many edges; yat vajram — which thunderbolt; avartayat — gave (to Indra); indraḥ — Indra; nari — in battle; apāṇsi — the deeds (of killing enemies and the like); kartave — to perform; dhatte — holds (that thunderbolt); vṛtram — the cloud that covers the rain, etc.; arṇavam — that cloud filled with water; ahan — he struck; apām — the waters; niḥ aubjat — made flow fully.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.9 (Kannada; ends at the foot of p. 179)

“The divine craftsman, of excellent actions, gave Indra a thunderbolt that is excellently made, golden and of many edges. Indra holds that thunderbolt in battle in order to do the deeds of killing enemies and the like. And with it he struck the cloud that covers the rain and the like, and let the waters pour down in streams.” (An earlier note that this ran on to p. 180 was mistaken: it is complete on p. 179.)

“Indra wields the well-made, golden and thousand edged thunderbolt, which the skillful Twashtri has framed for him that he may achieve great exploits in war. He has slain Vritra and sent down a flood of waters.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.9)

- त्वष्टा — “the divine craftsman. See what we have written on the discussion of Tvaṣṭṛ in R. Saṃ. Part 3, p. 25 [as printed: ‘bhāga 3, pēju 25’].”
- सहस्रभृष्टिम् — anekābhir dhārābhir yuktam — “furnished with many streams: with a thousand edges.”
- स्वपाः — śobhanakarmā — “one who does good works; skilful in works.”
- नरि — “in the matter of men; that is, in the context where it is used against men or enemies; in battle.”
- कर्तवे — “in order to do deeds of daring; in order to fight with enemies.”
- निः औब्जत् — ubja ārjave | niḥśeṣeṣādhomukham apātayat — “made them flow downward, well.”

- सुकृतम् — when su precedes, the root ḥukṛñ karaṇe; to it niṣṭhā (kta) in the passive; by “गतिरनन्तरः” (gatiṛ anantaraḥ, Pā. Sū. 6-2-[49] [?]) su has the designation gati, hence it keeps its base accent.
- हिरण्ययम् — hiraṇyasya vikāraḥ: the affix mayaṭ in the sense of ‘modification’; when hiraṇya + maya, by “ऋत्व्यवास्त्व्यवास्त्वमाध्वीहिरण्ययादिति च्छन्दसि” (ṛtvvyavāstvvyavāstvāmādhvīhiraṇyayād iti chandasi, Pā. Sū. 6-4-[175] [?]) the loss of the m of mayaṭ is fixed by nipātana.
- स्वपाः — by “सोर्मनसी अलोमोषसी” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[117] [?]) the first syllable of the latter member is acute.
- अवर्तयत् — the root vṛtu vartane; after the ṇijanta, lañ, third person singular, the form as stated; since yat is in connexion, the nighāta does not occur; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.

- धत्ते — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, Juhotyādi; laṭ, third person singular; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- कर्तवे — the root ḥukṛñ karaṇe; in the sense of tumun, by “तुमर्थे सेसेनसेअसेन्...” (tumarthe seseasenase..., Pā. Sū. 3-4-[9] [?]) the affix tavai [as read, tavenn]; by “सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः” the guṇa of the ik of the root, because of that affix; the form kartave; since it ends in a nit affix, the first syllable is acute.

- अहन् — the root han hiṃsāgatyoḥ; lañ, third person singular; by “अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः” the luk of śap; by “हल्ङ्याभ्यो...” the luk of the affix; the form as stated is accomplished; by the position at the beginning of a pāda, nighāta is prohibited; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.
- अपाम् — by the statement “कर्मणा यमभिप्रैति स सम्प्रदानम्” with “क्रियाग्रहणं कर्तव्यम्” the object also receives the designation sampradāna; so the genitive (śaṣṭhī) stands in the sense of the dative; genitive plural; by “ऊडिदम्पदाद्यप्सुमैद्युभ्यः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[171]) the case-ending is acute.
- औब्जत् — the root ubja ārjave; lañ, third person singular; since it stands after an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- अर्णवम् — arṇāṃsi asmin santi iti arṇavaḥ; in the sense of matup, by “अर्णसो लोपश्च” (Kā. 5-2-[109] [?]) the affix va; in connexion with it, the loss of the s of arṇas; by the affix-accent the final acute.

(Kannada script; the Aitareya-type story at the head is the bhāṣyakāra's own; one clause of the tail, on nunudre, is cramped and omitted; the Āvaṣṭa/avata etymology sentence "avastrāta iti bhavaty avataḥ kūpaḥ" is read with doubt [?].)

Translation: "The story from the Ātreya (tradition): The sage Gotama, oppressed by thirst, begged the Maruts for water. Then the Maruts raised a well from its pit, carried it to the quarter where the sage Gotama was, set the well near the sage, made a trough (āhāva) at its touch, drew the water of the well into that trough, and satisfied the sage with that water. This matter is set forth by this Ṛk and the next. *Te maruto 'vatam — avata means well ('what is guarded?'); among the names of the well the Nighaṇṭu reads avataḥ, avaṣṭaḥ. They *nunudre — impelled it upward, that is, in whatever way it comes up, by their own strength; they threw it up. So, having uprooted the well and carrying it toward the sage's hermitage, the Maruts on the way even split (bibhiduḥ) a mountain that stood grown huge (dādṛhāṇam) blocking the path — or a hill of rocks. Sudānavaḥ — bountiful; they, blowing (dhamantaḥ) the vāṇa — a special lute with a hundred strings — making it sound, in the exhilaration of Soma, that is, in joy from drinking Soma, make raṇyāni — worthy of praise, delightful — riches: they do it for those who praise them." Grammar tail, noted briefly: dādṛhāṇam — dṛha dṛhi vṛddhau, with kānac for liṭ; dhamantaḥ — dhṃā with the substitute dham by "pāghrā..."; vāṇam — from aṇa/raṇa/vaṇa in the sense of sound, with ghañ in the passive, and the final acute by “karṣātṣvataḥ”; raṇyāni — from raṇ, with ap by an upasaṃkhyāna (Pā. 3-1-[123] [?]), then yat in the sense ‘being in it’ in the Veda, with the first syllable acute by “yato ‘nāvaḥ”.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.10) (Kannada)

te — those Maruts; avatam — the well; ūrdhvam — (so that the water) is at the top; nunudre — they raised; dādṛhāṇam — (their) obstructing, in the way of their movement; parvatam cit — even the mountain with its rocks; bibhiduḥ — they split well; sudānavaḥ — the excellent givers; marutaḥ — those Maruts; vāṇam — the lute of a hundred strings; dhamantaḥ — playing; somasya — by (drinking) the Soma-juice; made — when satisfaction arose; raṇyāni — praiseworthy riches; cakrire — gave (to the devotees).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.10 (Kannada)

“Those Maruts, for the sake of the sage Gotama, raised the well so that its water was at the top. With their rocks they split the mountain regions which obstruct their movement. Those excellent givers, the Maruts, playing their lute of a hundred strings, and satisfied by drinking the Soma-juice, gave their devotees such riches as are praiseworthy and delightful.”

“By their power they bore the well and clove asunder the mountain that obstructed their path; the liberal Maruts blowing upon their pipe have conferred desirable gifts upon the sacrificer, when exhilarated by the Soma-juice.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.10)

“The bhāṣyakāra here tells a narrative: The sage Gotama, at one time, being very thirsty, prayed to the Marut deities to give him water for drinking. Then the Marut deities lifted a well from a place not very far away, brought it, set it in the hermitage of the sage Gotama, and satisfied the sage with water: this is the idea that is set forth in this Rk and in the following Rk.”

- अवतम् — avastrāta iti bhavaty avataḥ kūpaḥ — “kūpaḥ, kātuḥ and so on: among the fourteen names of the well the word avataḥ is read; so avatam means ‘the well’. Probably the cloud is intended here.” (The Nirukta wording, as printed, is partly clotted [?].)

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.10) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- नुनुद्रे — the root ṇuda preraṇe; liṭ, third person plural; by “लिटस्तज्ञयोरेशिरेच्” (liṭas tajhayor eširec) the substitute irec; by “इरयोरे” (irayor re, Pā. Sū. 6-4-[76] [?]) in the Chandas the substitute re for ire; reduplication of the root; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; the form nunudre.
- दादृहाणम् — the root dṛha dṛhi vṛddhau; by “लिटः कानज्वा” (liṭaḥ kānaj vā) the affix kānac; reduplication of the root; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; by “उरत्” (ur at) the a; when r follows, then again the hal-initial remains, so the d remains; since it is kit, the affix is the occasion for the prohibition of laghūpadha-guṇa; by “अट्कुप्वाङ्नुम्व्यवायेऽपि” the ṇ for the n; in the accusative singular the form dādṛhāṇam; by “चित्” the final acute.
- बिभिदुः — the root bhidir vidāraṇe; liṭ, third person plural; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta.
- धमन्तः — the root dhmā śabdāgnisaṃyogayoḥ; the affix śatṛ in the sense of laṭ; by “पान्नाध्मास्थाम्नादाणदृश्यर्त्तिसर्त्तिसददां पिबजिघ्रधमतिष्ठमनयच्छपश्यच्छधौशीयसीदाः” (Pā. - वाणम् — aṇa, raṇa, vaṇa in the sense of sound; the affix ghañ in the passive; by “अत् उपधायाः” the vṛddhi of the penultimate of the root; though the first syllable would have been acute, by “कर्षात्त्वतो घञोऽन्त उदात्तः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[159] [?]) the final acute comes.

Translation: “The Maruts nunudre — impelled — the well that had been raised, jihmam — crooked, sideways, in whatever direction the sage was living. Having carried the well thus, set it at the sage's hermitage, they poured out for the thirsty Gotama, the sage, utsam — a stream of water — lifting it out of the well [or: bringing it into the trough]. Having done so, these Maruts, citrabhānavaḥ — of various radiance — come to this sage who praises, with such protection, reach his presence, and, having reached, dhāmabhiḥ — with waters that sustain life — satisfy (tarpayanta = atarpayan) the desire (kāmam) of the wise Gotama (viprasya). Grammar tail, noted briefly: diśā — the case-ending acute by”sāv ekācas...“; tṛṣṇaje — tṛṣa pipāsāyām with najiṇ (Pā. 3-2-172 [?]) after the roots svap and tṛṣ; here the padakāra Śākalya has a different view: since”anyeṣv api dṛśyate” includes the word ‘seen’, even from the bare root jan there is the affix ḍa: tṛṣṇā jātā yasya sa tṛṣṇajaḥ; the shortening by “bahulam”; the first member keeps its accent; dhāmabhiḥ — manin after the root dhā.”

jihmam — crooked; avatam — the well they had raised; tayā diśā — (in the direction where the sage Gotama was living) in that direction; nunudre — made it go; (then, placing it in the hermitage of the sage); tṛṣṇaje — to the thirsty; gotamāya — for Gotama the sage; utsam — the stream of water; asiñcan — they poured; citrabhānavaḥ — the Maruts of many kinds of radiance; īm — this (devout) sage; avasā — with (such) protection; ā gacchanti — approach; viprasya — of the wise Gotama; kāmam — wish; dhāmabhiḥ — with waters that sustain life; tarpayanta — satisfied.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.11 (Kannada)

“The Maruts made the well which they had raised go, crooked, in the direction where the sage Gotama lived. Then, having set it at the sage's hermitage, they poured out a stream of water for the thirsty sage Gotama. The Maruts, of various radiance, approached their devotee Gotama with such protection, and satisfied the wise man's wish with waters that sustain life.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“They brought the crooked well to the place (where Gotama was) and sprinkled the water upon the thirsty Gotama; the variously radiant Maruts come to his succour, gratifying the desire of the Sage with life-sustaining waters.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.11)

- जिह्वम् — vakram — “crooked, not straight.”
- उत्सम् — “a stream of water.”
- तृष्णजे — tṛṣitāya gotamāya — “to the thirsty (Gotama).”
- चित्रभानवः — “those of many kinds of radiance.”
- धामभिः — dhārakair udakaiḥ — “with waters that flow in streams.”

- तया — the word tad; in the feminine instrumental singular the form tayā; since by “सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः” the case-ending would have the acute, the prohibition comes, by “न गोश्वन्साववर्णराडङ्कुङ्कृद्भ्यः” (na goścan-sāvavarṇa-rā ḍaṅ-kruṅkṛdbhyaḥ, Pā. Sū. 6-1-[182] [?]).
 - दिशा — the word diś; always feminine; instrumental singular; being “supara” [i.e. followed by the case-ending], by “एकाचः” etc. [as read: “eko 'ca...”], the case-ending acute by “सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः”.
 - असिञ्चन् — the root ṣica kṣaraṇe, Tudādi; lañ, third person plural; by “ओऽन्तः” the substitute ant; the loss of the final a; by “शे मुचादीनाम्” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[59]) the augment num; the vikaraṇa (śa); loss of the final consonant of the conjunct; the augment aḥ; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, there is no nighāta; since the augment aḥ is acute, the first syllable is acute.
 - तृष्णजे — the root ñitṛṣā pipāsāyām; to it, by “स्वपितृषोर्नजिङ्” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[172] [?]) the affix najin; by “रञ्जेः...” [as read: “rakṣāpāṇ...”] the ñ of the affix, the acute accent of the affix; since the root tṛṣ’s penultimate (ṛ) is followed by a jit affix, no guṇa; the word tṛṣṇaj; by the ṇa acute through the affix-accent, the a of the ṇa is acute; in the dative singular the form tṛṣṇaje.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.11, continued from p. 187 (grammar, noted briefly):

- तृष्णजे (cont.) — “In the analysis of this word the padakāra Śākalya has a different view: by the sūtra “अन्येष्वपि दृश्यते” (anyeṣv api dṛśyate, Pā. Sū. 3-2-101), by the inclusion of the word dṛṣi, the affix ḍa comes after the bare root jan; by the force of the ḍit, the loss of the ḥ part (an) of jani; tṛṣṇā jātā yasya sa tṛṣṇajaḥ; by “ज्यापोः संज्ञाछन्दसोर्बहुलम्” (jyāpoḥ saṁjñāchandasor bahulam) the shortening of the ā at the end of the first member in the compound; since it is a bahuvrihi compound, by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member keeps its accent.”
- गच्छन्ति — the root gam/gatau; laḥ, third person plural; the substitute anti; śap; by “इषुगमियमां छः” (iṣugamiyamāṁ chaḥ) the substitute ccha; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.
- चित्रभानवः — citrāḥ bhānavo yasya saḥ; by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member keeps its accent.

- तर्पयन्त — the root tṛpa tṛptau; lañ, third person plural [in the Veda in the sense of lañ]; by “बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्चोगे ऽपि” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- धामभिः — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; by “आतो मनिन्वनिब्वनिपश्च” the affix manin; the word dhāman; since it ends in a nit affix, the first syllable is acute; in the instrumental plural, by “नलोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य” the loss of n.

Translation: “O Maruts, those śarmāṇi of yours — comforts or houses — what kind? Tridhātūni — set in the three places, earth and the rest — prepared for the one who praises you (śaśamānāya) with hymns, to give: whatever comforts, of the character stated above, there are, and which you adhi yacchata — give abundantly — to the sacrificer who has given offerings (dāśuṣe): O Maruts, all those comforts vi yanta — give specially to us. And further, O vṛṣaṇaḥ, showerers of what is desired, O Maruts, dhatta — give (datta) us wealth (rayim) endowed with good heroes — good sons and the like. Grammar tail, noted briefly: yā — the śi is dropped by “śeś chandasi bahulam”; śarma — luk of jas by “supāṁ suluk”; śaśamānāya — śaśa plutagatau, with cānaś (the habit-sense affix); yacchata — no augment aḥ because of the connexion with mā; yanta — yam in the loṭ, śap elided; the substitute ta for tha; because it is pit and not nit, the nasal (anunāsika) is not dropped; vṛṣaṇaḥ — no lengthening of the penultimate (vā ṣapūrvasya nigame); suvīram — in the bahuvrihi the first syllable of the latter member is acute (“vīravīryau ca”).”

“...santi — are; (and) dāśuṣe — to the sacrificer who gives offerings; adhi yacchata — (whatever comforts or houses) you give; marutaḥ — O Maruts; tāni — all those comforts or houses; asmabhyam — to us; vi yanta — give in abundance; vṛṣaṇaḥ — O Maruts, who shower what is desired; naḥ — to us; suvīram — of excellent heroes, with sons and the like; rayim — (in the form of children and so on) wealth; dhatta — give.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.12 (Kannada)

O Maruts, who shower what is desired, give us wealth, excellent and endowed with heroes, with sons and the like.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Whatever blessings and happiness there are in the three worlds which are in your power to grant, give them to the offerer of oblations who addresses [sic] you with praise; O Maruts, bestowers of all good, grant us those blessings, and riches accompanied by brave sons and followers.” — as printed.

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.12) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- या — in the neuter, since the substitute śi comes, by “शेशछन्दसि बहुलम्” the loss of śi.
- शर्म — the word śarman is neuter always; jas follows it, and by “सुपां सुलुक्” the luk of jas comes.
- शशमानाय — the root śaśa plutagatau; by “ताच्छील्यवयोवचनशक्तिषु चानश्” (tācchīlyavayovacanaśaktiṣu cānaś, Pā. Sū. 3-2-[129]) the affix cānaś in the sense of habit; by “आने मुक्” (āne muk) the augment muk, since the affix follows; because the affix has the marker c, by “चितः” the final acute; in the dative singular, śaśamānāya.
- यच्छत — the root dāṇ dāne; in the sense of loṭ, by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः” laṇ; by “पान्नाध्मास्था...” the substitute yaccha for the root; for the second-person plural, by “तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः” the substitute ta; by “बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्योगेऽपि” the augment aṭ does not come; since it stands after an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- यन्त — the root yama uparame; loṭ, second person plural; by “तप्तनप्तनथनाश्च” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[45]) the substitute ta; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of śap; since the substitute ta is pit, there is no ñit-ness, so the m of the root, being nasal, is not dropped by “अनुदात्तोपदेशवनतितनोत्यादीनाम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[37]); by “नश्चापदान्तस्य झलि” the anusvāra for the m; since ṣay follows, the homorganic nasal; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- धत्त — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; loṭ, second person plural; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- वृषण — the word vṛṣan ends in the affix kanin, and so has the first syllable acute; the vocative plural, jas following, by “सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ” the lengthening of the penultimate would have come; but by “वा षपूर्वस्य निगमे” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[9]) in the Chandas the lengthening of the penultimate is optional, so it does not occur here; by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta accent.
- सुवीरम् — śobhanāḥ vīrāḥ ṣasya sa suvīraḥ tat; the first member’s base accent is set aside by “नञ्सुभ्याम्”, which by its rule gives the accent on the last syllable of the latter member; but this too is set aside by “बहुव्रीहौ वीरवीर्यौ च” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[120] [?]), by which the first syllable of the latter member is acute; accusative singular.

Translation: “The second sūkta, maruto yasya — ten Ṛks — is the vision of Gotama, Gāyatrī, addressed to the Maruts; the Anukramaṇī says ‘maruto daśa gāyatram’. In the vyūḍha chandoma of the third day, this sūkta is used in the Āgnimāruta śastra; it is prescribed in the section tṛtīyasyāgan ma maha [as read]: ‘maruto yasya hi prāgnaye vācam — the Āgnimāruta’ (Āś. [8-11] [?]). In the Aindrāmāruta principal offering (havis), this Ṛk maruto yasya is the anuvākya; it is prescribed: ‘aindrāmārutīm bhedakāmā maruto yasya hi kṣaye’ (Āś. [2-11] [?]). It is also the anuvākya of the Marut oblation of curds (āmikṣā) in the Varuṇapraghāsa offerings; it is prescribed: ‘maruto yasya hi kṣaye 'rā ived acaramā aheva’ (Āś. [2-12] [?]). And at the morning pressing it is the Potṛ’s pṛṣṭhitayājyā, as prescribed: ‘maruto yasya hi kṣaye 'gne patnīr ihā vaha’ (Āś. [5-5] [?]).” (The sūtra citations are cramped in the print and read with doubt.)

अनुवादवु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

“The sūkta maruto yasya is the second sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala. There are ten Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. The metre is Gāyatrī; the deities are the Maruts. In the Anukramaṇī it is said: ‘maruto daśa gāyatram’. In the vyūḍha Ṛtu-type sacrifice, called chandoma, on the third day, at the time of reciting the Āgnimāruta śastra with its mantras, this sūkta has an application. This matter is set forth in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning tṛtīyasyāgan ma maha, by the sūtra ‘maruto yasya hi prāgnaye vācam ity āgnimārutam’ (Āś. [8-11] [?]). In the principal homa called Aindrāmārutī, when the offering is being laid out, this Ṛk maruto yasya is to be used as the puronuvākya, and the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows this by the sūtra ‘aindrāmārutīm bhedakāmā maruto yasya hi kṣaye’ (Āś. [2-11] [?]). Also, in the Varuṇapraghāsa sacrifice, in the curds-offering that belongs to the Maruts, this Ṛk is to be used as the puronuvākya mantra; this is set out in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra ‘maruto yasya hi kṣaye 'rā ived acaramā aheva’ (Āś. [2-12] [?]). And at the morning pressing, the Potṛ priest is to use this Ṛk as the pṛṣṭhitayājyā mantra: the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra says ‘maruto yasya hi kṣaye 'gne patnīr ihā vaha’ (Āś. [5-5] [?]).”

- पाथ — the root pā pāne; laṭ, second person plural, the affix tha; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of the śap vikaraṇa; since the affix is śit-less [as printed: śit-pratyaya parad-lilladiruvudarinda], the substitute piba by “पात्राध्मा...” does not come; since yasya precedes, by “यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्” the nighāta does not occur; by the affix-accent the final acute; by “व्यचोऽतस्तिङः” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[135] [?]) in the mantra the lengthening occurs because of the Veda: the ā is long.
- दिवः — by “ऊडिदम्पदाद्यप्सुमैद्युभ्यः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[171]) the case-ending is acute.

- विमहसः — viśiṣṭaṁ mahaḥ (tejaḥ) yeṣāṁ te vimahasaḥ; in the vocative plural too the form vimahasaḥ; by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta accent.
- सुगोपातमः — śobhano gopā rakṣako yaśya saḥ sugopāḥ (one who has capable protection); atiśayena sugopāḥ sugopātamaḥ: by “अतिशयने तमबिष्टनौ” (atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau) the affix tamap; since it is pit, by “अनुदात्तौ सुप्पितौ” (anudāttau suppitau) it is unaccented; when sugopāḥ is a bahuvrīhi compound, by “नञ्सुभ्याम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[172]) the final-syllable accent of the latter member alone remains; the ā after p is acute.

Translation: “...that is the idea: O Maruts, you are the bearers of the sacrifice, and fond of praise; therefore you must hear the call both of the sacrificer who has a sacrifice and of the praiser who has none. Grammar tail, noted briefly: yajñavāhasaḥ — by the statement that the first member of a compound with a gati or kāraka keeps its base accent, and by “vahihādhāñbhyaś chandasi” the affix asun after vah preceded by a kāraka; the lengthening of the penultimate; matīnām — mana jñāne, with ktin in the feminine; nām acute by “nāmany atarasyām”; śṛṇuta — śruvaḥ śṛca, the śnu-vikaraṇa with the substitute śṛ for the root; the accent of the vikaraṇa alone remains by the stated rule; maruta — since āmantrita before an āmantrita is as if non-existent, there is no nighāta; havam — hvayati with ap in the abstract sense, and saṁprasāraṇa.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 86.2) (Kannada)

yajñavāhasaḥ — those who carry the sacrifice; marutaḥ — O Maruts; yajñaiḥ vā — (you, the sacrificers endowed with sacrifices) or; matīnām — of those who recite praises; viprasya vā — (even without sacrifices) the devotee, the wise man; havam — the invocation; śṛṇuta — hear.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 86.2 (Kannada)

“O Maruts, you are the bearers of the sacrifice and fond of praise; therefore listen with equal affection to the invocation of your devotee — the sacrificer who performs the sacrifice, and the reciter of praises other than the sacrificer.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Maruts, bearers of oblations, hear the invocations of the praises of the worshipper with or without sacrifices.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 86.2)

- यज्ञवाहसः — “those who carry out the sacrifice; priests who bear a share in sacrifices.”
- मतीनाम् — stutīnām — “connected with praises; those who are invoked by praises.”
- यज्ञैर्वा — “the sacrificer who performs a sacrifice, or one who performs an invocation in the same way without a sacrifice: the word vā indicates the sense that attention should be given to both.”

- यज्ञवाहसः — “गतिकारकयोरपि पूर्वपदप्रकृतिस्वरत्वं च” (the statement, Uṇ. Sū. 4-[222] [?]): since the kāraka yajña stands as the first member, the affix asun comes after the root vah by “वहिहाधाभ्यश्छन्दसि” (vahihādābhyaś chandasi) (continues on p. 197)

- यज्ञवाहसः (cont.) — (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[222]) — the affix asun after the root vah; by “वसेर्णित्” (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[232] [?]) the ṇit is carried on, so the affix asun is ṇit, and vṛddhi comes to the root; then by “अत उपधायाः” the lengthening of the penultimate of the root; the word yajñavāhas; in the vocative plural: yajñavāhasaḥ; by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta accent.
- मतीनाम् — the root mana jñāne; by “स्त्रियां क्तिन्” (striyāṁ kṭin) the affix kṭin in the sense of instrument; with mati + nām, by “अनुदात्तोपदेशवनतितनोत्यादीनाम्...” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[37]) the nasal n of the root is dropped; in the genitive plural, by “ह्रस्वनद्यापोर्नुट्” (hrasvanadyāpor nuṭ) the augment nuṭ for ām; by “नामि” (nāmi) the lengthening of the preceding vowel: matīnām; by “नामन्यतरस्याम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[177]) the case-ending nām is acute.
- शृणुत — the root śru śravaṇe; loṭ, second person plural; because it is laṇ-like [ṇit], by “तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः” the substitute ta; by “श्रुवः शृ च” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[74]) the śnu vikaraṇa and the substitute śṛ for the root śru; for śap, the śnu-vikaraṇa; by “सार्वधातुकमपित्” the ṇit-ness, so no guṇa for the u; by the rule “सति शिष्टस्वरबलीयस्त्वमन्यत्र विकरणेभ्यः” the accent of the vikaraṇa is set aside, so the accent of the tiṇ ending remains; the word has a final acute; although it follows an atiṇanta it would have the nighāta; however, since maruta is an āmantrita, by “आमन्त्रितं पूर्वमविद्यमानवत्” the earlier word āmantrita is taken as non-existent, so that there is no previous word before pada (the pada does not come after) and the nighāta does not apply.
- हवम् — the root hveñ spardhāyāṁ śabde ca; by “भावेऽनुपसर्गस्य” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[75]) the affix ap in the abstract sense and saṁprasāraṇa; by “सम्प्रसारणाच्च” the earlier form for the vowel of the root; hu + a, by “सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः” the guṇa; av-substitution; since ap is pit, unaccented; the root’s accent remains.

Translation: “On diviṣṭiṣu — the days that are fit for sacrifice — at the sacrifice (barhiṣi), Soma is pressed for the union (yogāya) with this host of Maruts, the hero, skilled in hurling down enemies; it is pressed by the priests. The uktha — the recitation (śastra) addressed to the Maruts — and mada, [the nivid hymn of the Maruts beginning] ‘maruto devāḥ somasya matsan’, used with the root mad, are recited — the hotṛ priest reads it — for the delight of this Marut host. Grammar tail, noted briefly: asya — the case-ending acute by “ūḍīdam...”; diviṣṭiṣu — iṣṭi means going (eṣaṇa); ‘the days on which the sun that shines in heaven goes’ — a bahuvrihi with the first member’s accent; the utva does not occur, by vyatyaya.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 86.4) (Kannada)

diviṣṭiṣu — on the days of sacrifice; barhiṣi — at the sacrifice; vīrasya — of the one possessed of valour; asya — this Marut host, for its sake; somaḥ — the Soma-juice; sutaḥ — is pressed;

uktham — (addressed to the Marut deities) the praise of the nature of a śāstra; śasyate — is recited; madaḥ ca — (their) delight too; ... [lit.] is increased.

- शस्यते — hotrā paṭhyate — “is recited by the priest called Hotṛ.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.4) (grammar page, noted briefly)

- अस्य — the word idam; in the genitive singular the affix ṇas; by “त्यदादीनामः” (tyadādinām aḥ) the substitute a; by “अतो गुणे” the pararūpa; since it ends in a, the substitute ṣya for the case-ending (ṇas); since a case-ending beginning with a consonant follows, by “हलि लोपः” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[113]) the loss of the id of idam; the form aśya; by “ऊडिदम्पदाद्यप्पुमैदुभ्यः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[171]) the case-ending is acute.
- दिविष्टिषु — iṣṭayaḥ eṣaṇāni gamanāni; the root iṣa gatau, Divādi; the affix ktin in the abstract sense; by ṣṭutva the ṭ for the t of the affix; divo dyotamānasya sūryasyeṣṭayo yeṣu dineṣu te diviṣṭayaḥ (‘daytime’, the meaning); in the bahuvrīhi, by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member keeps its base accent; since the compound is a subanta-luk one [as printed: subluk], the word div would take pada-ness at its end, and by “दिव उत्” (diva ut) the substitute ut would have to come; but by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” it does not come here; locative plural.
- शस्यते — the root śamsu stutau; laṭ in the passive, third person singular; by “यत्” (kit-ness of yak) and “अनिदितां हल उपधायाः क्ङिति” the loss of the penultimate nasal of the root; the nighāta accent of the tiṇanta.

- पूर्वोभिः — “puru means ‘many’. Bahvibhiḥ means ‘numerous, abundant’.”
- शरदिभः — “Although this word means ‘by autumns (the season śarad)’, since the autumn season comes only once in a year, in the R̥gveda and in the other Vedas too this word is often used to denote a year. Hence here the meaning ‘by years’ must be given to śaradbhiḥ. A couple of R̥ks in which this word is used in that sense are given below as examples:

“...and so on. In the second example the vasanta (spring) season has also been used. Ordinarily, it is the usage to use the śarad season to denote the year.” - ददाशिम — dāśa dāne | haviṁṣi dattavantaḥ — “we have offered oblations.”

- प्रयांसि — “among the twenty-eight names of food — andhaḥ, vājaḥ and the rest — the word prayaḥ is read; hence prayāṁsi means foods endowed with the nature of oblations (Ni. 2-[7] [?]).”
- पर्षथ — pṛṣu, vṛṣu, mṛṣu secane / siñcatha / prāpnuthā / svīkarasi — “you pour; you obtain’: the meaning is ‘you accept’.”
- सुभगः — “maghaṁ, reknaḥ and the rest — among the twenty-eight names of wealth, the word bhagaḥ is read (Ni. 2-[10] [?]); so subhagaḥ means one who has excellent wealth.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.7) (grammar page, noted briefly)

- सुभगः — śobhano bhago (dhanam) yasya subhagaḥ; the accent that would come by “नञ्सुभ्याम्” is set aside, and by “क्रत्वादयश्च” (kratvādayaś ca, Pā. Sū. 6-2-[118]) the first syllable of the latter member is acute.
- प्रयज्यवः — by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta accent.
- अस्तु — the root as bhuvi, Adādi; loṭ, third person singular; by “एरुः” the u; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- पर्षथ — the root pṛṣu vṛṣu mṛṣu secane, Bhvādi; laṭ, second person plural; since śap follows, the guṇa of the laghūpadha of the root; since yasya precedes, by “यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्” the nighāta is prohibited; since the root has an unaccented upadeśa, the lasārvadhātuka ending (tha) is unaccented by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्”, so the root accent remains.

Closing of Rik 86.7: “॥ ७ ॥” (7), followed by a printer’s ornament.

Translation: “O satyaśavasaḥ — of unfailing strength — O leaders, Maruts: of the one who praises (śaśamānasya), who attends on you with praises, of svedasya — one whose body sweats from the exertion of uttering the mantras — venataḥ (venatiḥ is ‘to desire’), one who longs: and (vā is in the sense of ‘and’) of such a praiser, kāmasya — the desire (kāmam), the wish: vida — grant, give. Grammar tail, noted briefly: śaśamānasya — śaśa plutagatau, with the habit-affix cānaś; svedasya — űiṣvidā gātrapraksaraṇe, with ghañ in the passive for a causative sense contained within; first syllable acute since it is űit; vida — vidlābhe, loṭ, second-person plural, by vyatyaya the substitute (jha-type) [?], the vikaraṇa elided by “bahulaṁ chandasi”, loss of ta by “lopas ta ātmanepadesu”, the affix-accent; no nighāta at the beginning of a pāda; lengthening in the Samhitā [hence vidā in the Samhitā] [?]; kāmasya — by its place in the vr̥ṣādi list, first syllable acute; the genitive in the sense of the dative, because the object is a recipient.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 86.8) (Kannada)

satyaśavasaḥ — those of unfailing strength; naraḥ — O Maruts, who are leaders; śaśamānasya — (you) who worship with praises; svedasya — who toils (with the exertion of your worship) and sweats; venataḥ — who longs for (your favour); kāmasya — the wish; vida — knowing (and favour it).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 86.8 (Kannada)

“O Maruts, of unfailing strength, who are leaders: knowing the wish of your devotee — who worships you with praises, always toils in your service of worship, and longs for your favour — grant it.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Possessors of true vigor, pay attention to the wishes of him who praises you and toils in your service desiring your favour.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 86.8)

- शशमानस्य — śaṃsu stutau / stutikaraṇaśīlasya — “of the sacrificer who praises you.”
- नरः — netāraḥ — “leaders, chiefs, foremost ones.”
- सत्यशवसः — “among the twenty-seven names of strength — ojaḥ, pājaḥ and the rest — the word śavas is read; śavaḥ means strength. Satyaṃ śavo yeṣāṃ te satyaśavasaḥ — those who have true, or excellent, strength: that is the intention.”
- स्वेदस्य — “sveda means perspiration. Svedasya means: of the sacrificer who has worshipped you with praises and the like, and who is covered with the sweat that arose from the exertion.”
- वेनतः — venatiḥ kāntikarmā — “one who desires: that is, the sacrificer who desires to praise you.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.8) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- शशमानस्य — the root śaśa plutagatau; in the sense of habit, by “ताच्छील्यवयोवचनशक्तिषु चानश्” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[129]) the affix cānaś; by “आने मुक्” the augment muk; since it is cit, by “चितः” the final acute; genitive singular.
- स्वेदस्य — the root ñiṣvidā gātrapraksaraṇe; when the sense of ñic (impelling) is included in the meaning of the root, the affix ghañ in the passive; because the affix is ārdhahātuka, the guṇa of the laghūpadha of the root; the ṣ of the root becomes s; by “ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्” the first syllable acute.

- सत्यशवसः — satyaṁ śavo yeṣāṁ te satyaśavasaḥ; the vocative plural; by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta accent.
- विदा — the root vid/lābhe; loṭ, second person plural, for the affix by vyatyaya the substitute jha; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of the vikaraṇa; by “आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः” (ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ) the at substitute for jha, because the preceding letter is not a; by “सार्वधातुकमपित्” since the affix is nit, no guṇa for the laghūpadha; the word vinta? [as read: “vinata”]; by “लोपस्त आत्मनेपदेषु” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-41) the loss of the t of the affix; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the affix-accent the a after n is acute; since the form is vida, by “व्येचोऽतिङः” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[135] [?]) the final syllable is lengthened because the word is two-syllabled [dvyaṅ]. (The sūtra and the reasoning on vidā are read with doubt [?]; the clipped print does not allow a closer reading.)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 86.8, concluded from p. 210:

- कामस्य — genitive singular; since it is read in the vṛṣādi list, by “वृषादीनां च” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[203]) the first syllable acute; by the statement “क्रियाग्रहणं कर्तव्यम्” in the sūtra that gives the rule for the sampradāna, the object receives the designation sampradāna; so the genitive (śaṣṭhī) comes in the sense of the dative.

Closing of Rik 86.8: “॥ ८ ॥” (8), followed by a printer’s ornament.

satyaśavaśaḥ — (not to be overcome by enemies) of true prowess, O Maruts; yūyam — you; tat — that majesty (famed at the times of slaying Vṛtra and the like); āviṣkarta — make manifest; vidyutā — shining; mahitvanā — by that majesty; rakṣaḥ — (the demons who torment us) the Rākṣasas; vidhyata — destroy.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 86.9 (Kannada)

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 86.9)

- सत्यशवसः — “The explanation of this word has been given in the preceding Rk. Itarair — ‘by others’, that is, by enemies, whose strength cannot be endured: those who have strength of that kind; that is, of exceeding valour.”
- आविष्कर्त — āviṣkuruta, prakāśayata — “make manifest”: that is, ‘make it plain to all, so that all may know’.”
- महित्वना — “by majesty, by excellence.”
- विध्यत — vyadha tāḍane / tāḍayata nāśayateti arthaḥ — “strike; that is, destroy. The final syllable of this word is long in the Saṃhitā text, to suit the metre.”
- रक्षः — “Rākṣasas and the like, Piśācas, evil spirits that wish to do harm to men; evil spirits (English, as printed).”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.9) (grammar page, noted briefly; begins here)

- कर्त — the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; in the sense of loṭ, second person plural, since lan-like ñit-ness is present, the substitute ta; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of the vikaraṇa (u); by “तप्तनप्तनथनाश्च” (Pā. Sū. [7-1-45]) ...

- कर्त (cont.) — “...by”तप्तनप्तनथनाश्च” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[45]) the substitute ta for the ending; since it is pit, no ñit-ness, so there is no ñit-related change; then, by “सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः” the guṇa of the ik of the root; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta; the form karta. When āviḥ (adverb) precedes, the s of the visarga becomes ru, visarga; by “इदुपधस्य चाप्रत्ययस्य” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[41] [?]) the ṣatva of the visarga that is connected with something other than an affix; the form āviṣkarta.”
- महित्वना — when mahitva + ṭā, by vyatyaya the nā of the instrumental singular does not appear [as printed] and the acute accent comes; or, by “सुपां सुलुक्” the substitute ā for the instrumental ending, and the augment n; since it is cit [as printed], by “चितः” the final acute.
- विध्यता — the root vyadha tāḍane; loṭ, second person plural; by “तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः” the substitute ta; by “दिवादिभ्यः श्यन्” the vikaraṇa śyan; since the affix is pit-less (sārvadhātukam apit) it is ñit, and by “ग्रहिज्यावयिव्यधिवष्टिविचितिवृश्चतिपृच्छतिभृज्जतीनां डिति च” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[16]) the saṃprasāraṇa of the root (the y); by “सम्प्रसारणाच्च” the earlier form; the form vidhyata; since the affix is ñit, by “ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[133]) the lengthening in the Saṃhitā; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; since the unaccented upadeśa follows, the affix is unaccented, and the root’s accent remains.

guhyam — (O Maruts, in the body) which is in the heart in the form of a cave; tamaḥ — the darkness in the form of ignorance; gūhata — destroy; atriṇam — the desire, anger and the like which devour the human aims; vi yāta — drive far away; yaj jyotiḥ — the light that is the means to direct vision of the highest reality; uśmasi — we desire; karta — make it for us.

“O Maruts, destroy the darkness that is hidden in caves and then pervades all regions. Drive in various directions the devouring Rākṣasas and the like. Make for us all the lights, the sun and the rest, that we desire.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Disperse the darkness concealing every where; drive away every devouring enemy; show us the light we long for.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 86.10)

“For this Rik the bhāṣyakāra has given two different meanings. He explains the word tamaḥ, taking the common meaning ‘darkness’ and then the meaning ‘ignorance’, and explains each accordingly.”

- गुह्यम् — guhāyāṁ sthitam, sarvatra vyāpyamānam — “situated in a cave; pervading everywhere. When hidden, in secret places where no one is able to see it. In the R̥gveda and the other Vedas, the use of the words guh̥yam, guhā hitam is especially frequent in contexts that show the meaning ‘secret’.”
- गूहत — saṁvṛtaṁ kuruta | guhū saṁvaraṇe | apanayeta ity arthaḥ — “make it hidden; remove it; make it go through concealment.”
- अत्रिणम् — sarvam attāraṁ rākṣasādikam — “the Rākṣasas and the like who eat all beings.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.10) (grammar page, noted briefly; begins here)

- गूहत — the root guhū saṁvaraṇe, Bhvādi; loṭ, second person plural, the substitute ta; by “कर्तरि शप्” (kartari śap) the vikaraṇa śap; since it is sārvadhātuka the guṇa of the laghūpadha would come by “पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च”, but by “ऊदुपधाया गोहः” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[89]) the substitute ū for the penultimate; the form gūhata; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the root’s accent the first syllable is acute.
- यात — the root yā prāpaṇe; since the sense of ṇic (causing) is included in the meaning of the root, loṭ, second person plural, the substitute ta; by “अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः” the luk of the vikaraṇa; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- अत्रिणम् — the root ada bhakṣaṇe; by “अदेस्त्रिणि च” (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[68] [?]) the affix trini; the word atrin; the affix-accent; accusative singular.
- उश्मसि — the root vaśa kāntau, Adādi; laṭ, first person plural, the affix mas; since the affix is sārvadhātuka and apit, it is ṇit, so by “ग्रहिज्यावयिव्यधि...” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[16]) the saṁprasāraṇa (v – u) of the root; since it belongs to the adādi class, the luk of śap; by “इदन्तो मसि” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[46]) the augment i for the affix mas: the form uśmasi; since yat is in connexion, the nighāta ... (the sentence runs on to p. 216)

Translation: “The third sūkta, pratvakṣasaḥ, of six Ṛks, is the vision of Gotama, in the Jagatī metre, addressed to the Maruts; so it is recorded in the Anukramaṇī: ‘pratvakṣasaḥ ṣaḍjāgatam’. In the Agniṣṭoma, in the Āgnimāruta śastra, this sūkta is used at the mārutanividdhāna [as printed]; it is prescribed in the section atha yathaitam: ‘pratvakṣasaḥ pratavaso yajñā yajñā vo agnaye’ (Āś. [5-20] [?]).”

अनुवादु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

“The sūkta pratvakṣasaḥ is the third sūkta in this anuvāka. There are six Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama, the deities are the Maruts, the metre is Jagatī. In the Anukramaṇī it is said ‘pratvakṣasaḥ ṣaḍjāgatam’. In the Agniṣṭoma sacrifice, at the time of reciting the Āgnimāruta śastra mantras, this sūkta has an application for the mārutanividdha mantras; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra sets this forth in the section atha yathaitam by the sūtra ‘pratvakṣasaḥ pratavaso yajñā yajñā vo agnaye’ (Āś. [5-20] [?]).”

(Kannada script; the grammatical tail is compressed and several sūtra wordings and numerals are read with doubt [?]; the first alternative on virapśinaḥ and the sūtra on ānajre are least certain.)

Translation: “Prativakṣasaḥ — those who thin out (tanūkartāraḥ) their enemies to the utmost: that is, slayers of enemies. Since they are pratavasaḥ — possessed of outstanding strength — they are therefore virapśinaḥ — endowed with various cries [of praise] [?]. Or: this is a name for ‘great’: the great are praised with many words; for that very reason anānatāḥ — unbowed, the best of all; avithurāḥ — not separated, that is, banded together as the group of seven; ṛjīṣiṇaḥ — since the ṛjīṣa is pressed at the third pressing, and the Maruts are praised there, they have the quality of ṛjīṣa; or ‘those who bring forth the juices’. Juṣṭatamāsaḥ — most served by the sacrificers; nṛtamāsaḥ — foremost guides of cloud and the like. Such Maruts vy ānajre — become visible, shine forth, in the sky with aṅjibhiḥ — ornaments that manifest their form — and stṛbhiḥ — coverings of their body; as some rays of the sun (usrāḥ) shine in the sky, so they. Grammar tail, noted briefly: prativakṣasaḥ — tvakṣu ‘to make thin’ with asun; pratavasaḥ — tava is a name of strength; virapśinaḥ — rapa ‘to speak’; anānatāḥ — ānata = bowed; with the negative; avithurāḥ — vyatha ‘to fear, to move’, with urac and samprasāraṇa; juṣṭatamāsaḥ — juṣṭa is acute on its first syllable, tamāsa is unaccented because pit; ānajre — aṅjū with Vedic liṭ in the present sense; stṛbhiḥ — stṛñ ācchādane with kvip, no augment tuk since the rule of augments is not invariable.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 87.1) (Kannada)

prativakṣasaḥ — destroyers of enemies; pratavasaḥ — those endowed with surpassing strength; virapśinaḥ — makers of various cries of victory, or possessed of greatness praised with various words (for that reason); anānatāḥ — bowing to none (the best of all); avithurāḥ — ever together (not separate); ṛjīṣiṇaḥ — those who drink Soma together at the third pressing; juṣṭatamāsaḥ — those most served (by the sacrificers); nṛtamāsaḥ — the Maruts, who are chief guides of the clouds; stṛbhiḥ — covering their bodies; añjibhiḥ — with ornaments that display their beauty; kecit usrā iva — like certain well-known rays of the sun; vy ānājre — (in the atmosphere) appear prominently.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.1 (Kannada)

“The Maruts are destroyers of enemies and have surpassing strength. Making various cries of victory they traverse the highest places, bowing to none. Always united, not single, and above all they gather at the third pressing and drink Soma. Most served by the sacrificers, and the foremost guides of the clouds, those Maruts appear in the atmosphere, with ornaments that display the beauty with which they cover their bodies, prominent like certain well-known rays of the sun in the sky.”

- विरप्शिनः — rapa lapa jalpa vyaktāyāṁ vāci | virapaṇaṁ virapśaḥ | tadvanto virapśinaḥ vividhena jayaghoṣeṇopetāḥ — “those furnished with various shouts of victory. Or, since virapśin is a name of the great (Ni. [3-3] [?]), virapśinaḥ means the mighty ones, the excellent.”
- अनानताः — ānatā avanatāḥ prahvībhūtāḥ | na ānatā anānatāḥ | anatirahitāḥ | sarvotkṛṣṭā ity arthaḥ — “ānata or avanata means those who bow in salutation; anānata means ‘those who bow to no one’, that is, the supreme.”
- अविथुराः — vyatha bhayacalanayoḥ | aviṣṭāḥ — “those who are not separate: these Maruts have joined together, are united in the form of a company of seven. The meaning ‘fearless’ may also be given to this word.”

“...thus he gave the explanation. Ṛjīṣī means Soma: since, having separated the dregs and the like that remain in the leather bag after the pressing of Soma, only the sap that is the essence is taken specially, Soma is called ṛjīṣī. - जुष्टतमासः — juṣṭitvamasāḥ / atīśayena yaṣṭirbhiḥ sevītāḥ — “served in the highest degree by the sacrificers who perform sacrifices; or, objects of affection to the sacrificers.”
- नृतमासः — atīśayena meghāder netāraḥ — “those who are in the highest degree the cause of the movements of cloud and the like, leaders, chiefs: that is, the clouds move as the wind blows.”
- अञ्जिभिः — añjū vyaktimrakṣaṇakāntigatiṣu / rūpābhivyañjakair ābharaṇaiḥ — “with materials of beauty, collyrium and the like, that increase the lustre of the body; with ornaments.”
- स्तृभिः — stṛṇ ācchādane — “covering, concealing the body. This word is an adjective of añjibhiḥ. Skandasvāmin explains this word as ‘stars’ (nakṣatras): as stars shine in the sky, so these Marut deities shine adorned with ornaments and the like — that is the intention.”
- आनज्जे — nabhasi vyaktā dṛśyante — “they shine well in the atmosphere.”
- उस्त्रा इव — “like rays of the sun; as the rays of the sun are clearly visible in the atmosphere, so are these Maruts seen clearly: so the intention.”

- प्रतवसः — tavas is a name for strength; prakṛṣṭaṁ tavo yeṣāṁ te pratavasaḥ; in the bahuvrihi, by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member’s base accent.
 - विरप्शिनः — the root rapa lapa vyaktāyāṁ vāci; virapaṇaṁ virapśaḥ; by “णादिकाः शक्” the affix śak [as read]; virapśo yeṣām asti iti virapśinaḥ; in the sense of matup, by “अत इनिठनौ” the affix ini; by the affix-accent the i of ini is acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.1, continued from p. 220 (grammar, noted briefly):

- अनानताः — anatāḥ avanatāḥ prahvībhūtāḥ; when preceded by the preposition ān, the root ṇam with the affix kta; by “अनुदात्तोपदेश...” the loss of the nasal; na anatāḥ anānatāḥ — a tatpuruṣa in the sense of non-equality [as read: tatpuruṣe tulyārtha... (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[2])] by which the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its base accent.
- अविथुराः — the root vyatha bhayasaṁcalanayoḥ; by “व्यथेः सम्प्रसारणं थः किच्च” (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[40] [?]) the affix urac; th for the dh [as read]; here, because of the word bahula in the Uṇādi, vṛddhi is not made; saṁprasāraṇa of y to i; by “सम्प्रसारणाच्च” the earlier form; the word vithura; na vithurāḥ — as before, the first member (an indeclinable) keeps its accent.
- जुष्टतमासः — the root juṣṭi prīṭisevanayoḥ; the affix kta; by “नित्यं मन्त्रे” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[210]) the word is acute on its first syllable; atiśayena juṣṭaḥ juṣṭatamaḥ; by “अतिशयने तमविष्टनौ” the affix tamap; since it is pit it is unaccented, so the earlier accent remains; the nominative plural, with jas following, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk; likewise in nṛtamāsaḥ.
- आनज्रे — the root añjū vyaktimrakṣaṇakāntigatiṣu; in the present sense by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः” liṭ; third person plural, by “लिटस्तझयोरेशिरेच्” the substitute irec; by “लिङ् निमित्त” the root is reduplicated; the reduplicate’s hal-initial remains; by “अत आदेः” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[70]) lengthening; then, by “तस्मान्नुङ् द्विहलः” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[71]) the augment nuṭ to the two-consonant root after the lengthened vowel made before; by vyatyaya the loss of the nasal n of the root’s penultimate; by “इरयोरे” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[76]) the substitute re for the affix; the form ānajre; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta accent.
- स्तृभिः — the root stṛñ ācchādane; by “क्विप् च” the affix kvip; although the augment tuk is possible after a short vowel, by the statement “आगमशास्त्रमनित्यम्” (the rule of augments is not invariable) the tuk does not come here.

Translation: “O Maruts, when, in the upahvareṣu — the winding places of the sky that are close to us — you acidhvam — gather up yaṇim, the moving cloud, make it swell with the power of raining; doing what? Going swiftly like birds (vaya iva) by some path (kena cit pathā), by some sky-route. The meaning: the clouds are gathered by the Maruts who hasten across the sky for rain. Then the kośāḥ — a name of cloud — attached to your chariots, drip, release water. Since it is so, O Maruts, for me, the sacrificer who worships you with oblations, ā ukṣata — sprinkle on every side the ghṛtam, rain-water, honey-coloured, clear, honey-like in appearance: bring about the rain we desire.”

(Kannada script; “tuna...” wording and the sūtra after ṇittve are read with doubt [?]. The printed numeral at the end of this bhāṣya-tail is “॥३॥”; since this is Rik 87.2, it is probably a misprint [sic?]; noted rather than corrected.) Noted briefly: yaṇim — affix kin [by the sūtra cited on p. 222] after yā; pathā — the ṭi-loss in the bha-stem and the case-ending acute by udāttanivṛtti-accent; ścotanti — ścyuti kṣaraṇe (‘to ooze’) with the loss of y in the Veda; ukṣata — ukṣa secane, loṭ, the lengthening in the Saṃhitā [hence ukṣatā] by “ṛci tunu...”.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 87.2) (Kannada)

marutaḥ — O Maruts; vaya iva — like birds; kena cit pathā — by some path or other (going swiftly); upahvareṣu — in the regions of the sky near you; yaṇim — the moving mass of clouds; yat — when; acidhvam — you gather together; kośāḥ — the clouds; vaḥ — your; ratheṣu — on the chariots (pressing close); ścotanti — pour (water); (therefore, O Maruts) arcate — for the one who worships you (with oblations); madhuvarṇam — of honey’s hue; ghṛtam — the rain-water; ā ukṣata — sprinkle all around.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.2 (Kannada)

“O Maruts, like birds, moving swiftly along some path or other in the sky, when you gather the moving mass of clouds in the regions of the sky near you, the clouds press on your chariots and pour rain. Therefore, O Maruts, sprinkle on all sides, for the sacrificer who worships you with oblations, rain-water of the colour of honey.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Maruts, when, flying like birds along a certain path (of the sky), you collect the moving passing clouds in the nearest portion (of the firmament), then coming into collision with your cars, they pour forth the waters; therefore, shower upon your worshipper the honey-coloured rain.” — as printed.

- ययिम् — acidhvam gatimantaṃ meghamacidhvam kuruta — “make the moving clouds, going in various directions, gather in one place (as if to make it rain).”
- वयो इव केन चित्पथा — “like birds going in the atmosphere, by some one path of their own choice.”
- कोशाः — “among the thirty names of cloud — adriḥ, grāvā and the rest — the word kośaḥ is read; so kośāḥ means the clouds (Ni. [1-10] [?]).”
- उप वो रथेषु — “close to your chariots; that is, the meaning is that when the chariot comes into friction, the cloud pours rain. Skandasvāmin says: ‘yatra pradeśe yuṣmadiyā rathā vayaṃ tiṣṭhanti [as read] tatra rathacakradhārābhir vidyamāno meghāḥ prakṣarantīty arthaḥ’ — ‘in whatever place your chariots stand, there, by the streams from the chariot wheels, the clouds pour’: so he gave the explanation.” (The Skandasvāmin Sanskrit is clotted in the print and read with doubt [?].)
- घृतम् — “among the hundred and one names of water — arṇaḥ, kṣodaḥ and the rest — the word ghṛtam is read (Ni. [1-12] [?]); ghṛtam means water. In the Ṛgveda this word is especially used in this sense.”
- उक्षत — ukṣa secane — “sprinkle; shower.”
- मधुवर्णम् — “of the colour of honey: that is, clear, pure.”
- अर्चते — “for the sacrificer who praises you.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 87.2) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- उपह्वरेषु — the root hvṛkau ṭilye; upahvaranti kau ṭilyena tiryag gacchanty eṣu iti upahvarāḥ [meaning] “the winding regions of the sky”; by “पुंसि संज्ञायां चः प्रायेण” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[118]) the affix gha in the locative sense; for it the guṇa of the r of the root; by “उरणपरः” (uraṇraparaḥ) with r; by the affix-accent the final acute; locative plural.

- अचिध्वम् — the root ciñ cayane; in the present sense by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लटः” lañ; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the vikaraṇa elided; second person plural; since yat is in connexion, no nighāta; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.
 - ययिम् — the root yā prāpaṇe; by “आदृगमहनजनः किकिनौ लिट् च” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[171]) the affix kin; since liṭ is stated to be like it, the root is reduplicated; the reduplicate gets hrasva by “ह्रस्वः” (the page ends mid-entry; it continues on p. 225)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.2, concluded from p. 224 (grammar, noted briefly):

- ययिम् (cont.) — “...since the affix kit follows, by” आतो लोप इटि च” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[64]) the loss of the ā of the root; by the affix-accent the final acute; accusative singular.”
- पथा — the word pathin; in the instrumental singular the case-ending tā; by “यचि भम्” (yaci bham) the bha designation; so by “भस्य टेलोपः” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[144]) the loss of the ṭ part (in); since aj-initial unaccented follows, by “अनुदात्तस्य च यत्रोदात्तलोपः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[158]) the case-ending is acute.
- श्चोतन्ति — the root ścyutir kṣaraṇe; laṭ, third person plural, the affix jhi, for it by “ञोऽन्तः” the substitute ant; by Vedic usage the y of the root is dropped; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; since by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्” the lasārvadhātuka is unaccented, the root’s accent remains.
- उक्षत — the root ukṣa secane; loṭ, second person plural; since lañ-like ñit-ness is there, by “तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः” the substitute ta; since it is not pit [as printed “sārvadhātukam apit”], jī-ness [?]; in the Samhitā text, by “ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[133]) the final syllable is lengthened [hence ukṣatā]; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

Translation: “When these Maruts yuñjate — yoke, assemble the clouds, śubhe — for good, for raining water, then, in their ajmeṣu — the cloud-hurling [movements] — yāmeṣu, in the courses that restrain the clouds, the bhūmiḥ, the earth, pra rejate — trembles greatly. Or: when the Maruts yoke their own chariots, harness them with horses, then in the going of these chariots that hurl up mountains and the like, the earth, frightened, trembles. The illustration: vithureva — as a wife separated from her husband, helpless when the king’s troubles and the like occur, trembles. Those Maruts, such as these: krīḷayaḥ — sportive; dhunayaḥ — of a shaking nature; bhrājadṛṣṭayaḥ — with gleaming weapons; dhūtayaḥ — making the mountains and the rest tremble — mahitvam, their own greatness, svayam eva panayanta — they themselves display. Grammar tail, noted briefly: ajmeṣu — aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ with the affix man; rejate — rejṛkampane (Yāska: bhyasate rejate — ‘to be afraid’); yāmeṣu — yam uparame with ghañ (first-syllable acute because the word is in the vṛṣādi list); śubhe — kvip in the passive; panayanta — pana vyavahāre with āya (Pā. 3-1-28) and Vedic laṅ; shortening by vyatyaya.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“When they assemble the clouds for the good work, earth trembles at their impetuous movements like a wife whose husband is away; sportive capricious, armed with bright weapons, and agitating (even the solid rock) they manifest their inherent might.” — as printed.

- रेजते — rejṛkampane / bhyasate rejate iti bhayapepanayoḥ (Ni. [2-?] [?]) — “to tremble”; Yāska says ‘bhyasate rejate’ — it means moving from fear.”
- यामेषु — yama uparame; yadvā yā prāpaṇe — “two meanings may be given: ‘joining’ or ‘going’. When the clouds are in the sky, by the stroke of the wind they gather in one place and rain; the name yāma is given to that gathering. Or yāma means ‘goings’: when the wind blows with force, the clouds move on — or move forward, away — that is the intention.”
- भ्राजदृष्टयः — dīpyamānāyudhāḥ — “those with shining weapons. For the Marut deities the swift movement, that is, the swift blowing, is itself the weapon; since they blow swiftly they shake trees and the like.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 87.3) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- अज्मेषु — the root aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ; in the Uṇādi there is the statement bahula, so the affix man, enjoined by “अतिस्तुसुहुसृक्षक्षुभायावापदियक्षिनीभ्यो मन्” (Uṇ. Sū. 1- [140] [?]), comes here too; since an ārdhadhātuka beginning with a val-letter follows, the substitute vī for the root would have come by “अजैर्व्यघञपोः” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-[56]); but since “valādāv ārdhadhātuke vikalpa iṣyate” (Kā. 2-4-56 [?]) is stated, vī does not come here; the word ajma; since it is nit, by “जित्यादिर्नित्यम्” the first syllable acute.
- विधुरा — explained under Rk 87.1 [as printed: “in the first Rk of this sūkta”].
- रेजते — the root rejṛkampane; bhyasate rejate iti bhayavepanayoḥ (Ni. [2-?] [?], Yāska — which shows that the word has the sense of fear as well); la ṭ, third person singular; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- यामेषु — the root yamu uparame; ghañ in the abstract sense, with ñit; so by “अत् उपधायाः” the vṛddhi of the penultimate; the ñit-accent is set aside and by “कर्षात्वतो घञोऽन्त उदात्तः” the final acute would have come; since it is read in the list, by “वृषादीनां च” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[203]) again the first syllable is acute. Or the root yā prāpaṇe, with the affix man by “अर्तिस्तुसु...”, and since it ends in a nit affix the first syllable is acute; locative plural.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.3, concluded from p. 228 (grammar, noted briefly):

- युज्जते — the root yujir yoge, Rudhādi; la ṭ, third person plural; since yat is in connexion, no nighāta; by the accent of the vikaraṇa the middle [syllable] is acute.
- शुभे — the root śubha diptau; in the passive, by “सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्” the affix kvip, since it is read there; the word śubh; dative singular; since it is supara, by “एकाचः” ... the case-ending acute by “सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[168]).
- पनयन्त — the root pana vyavahāre; by “गुपूधूपविच्छिपणिपनिभ्य आयः” (gupūdhūpavicchīpaṇipaniḥ, Pā. Sū. 3-1-28) the affix āya in its own sense; by “सनाद्यन्ता धातवः” the root-status for what ends in āya; in the present sense, by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः” laṅ; by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” the shortening in panāya; in the third person plural, by “झोऽन्तः” the substitute ant; śap; by “अतो गुणे” the pararūpa; by “बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्योगेऽपि” the augment a ṭ does not come; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta accent.

(Kannada script. In the printed bhāṣya the verb “asi” is carried into the explanation as “prāvitā 'si” — apparently mixing the second-person Rk text with the third-person gloss; noted [sic]. The sūtra-wording after ayā īśāna and the anedya.h rule are cramped and read with doubt [?].)

Translation: “That Marut host ayā — [lord of this whole world] — is īśāna, lordly by nature. Of what kind? Svas.ṛt — itself moving; for there is no one else who impels this Marut host. Pṛṣadaśva.h — whose horses are spotted does marked with white spots. Yuvā — ever young. Tavi.ṣibhi.h āvṛta.h — surrounded by powers, strengths not common to others. Satya.h — worthy of good deeds. “...anedyāḥ — one not blamed by anyone; vṛṣā — the Marut host that showers rain; asyāḥ dhiyaḥ (atha) — of this our sacrificial work; prāvitā asi — becomes the protector.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.4 (Kannada)

“All the other beings of the world, for their movement, look for the help of the Maruts. But the Maruts alone move of themselves, with no help from anyone else. The host of those Maruts — possessing such power, having spotted does for horses, endowed with youth, possessed of strength that cannot be obtained from others — is lord of this whole world. Fit for good deeds, freeing their devotees from debt by the gift of wealth and the like, and blamed by none, that host of Maruts becomes the protector of this our sacrificial work.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“The troop of Maruts is self-moving, deer-borne, ever young, lords of this earth, and invested with vigour; you who are sincere liberators from debt, irreproachable and shedders of rain, are the protectors of this our rite.” — as printed.

- युवा — “ever young. Since the strength of the Maruts is always extreme, without increase or decrease, they are mighty like youths: that is the intention.”
- सत्यः — satkarmārhaḥ — “worthy of being honoured with good works such as sacrifice.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 87.4) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- स्वसृत् — the root sṛgatau; by “क्विप् च” the affix kvip; by “ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक्” (hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk) the augment tuk for the short ṛ; by “गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्” the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent.
 - अया — the word idam; in the genitive singular, for the case-ending, by “सुपां सुलुक्...” the substitute yā; since a case-ending beginning with a consonant follows [as printed: halādi], by “हलि लोपः” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[113]) the loss of the id of idam; by “त्यदादीनामः” the a; by “अतो गुणे” the pararūpa; the form ayā; by “चितः” the final acute.
 - ईशानः — the root īśa aiśvarye; in the sense of habit, by “ताच्छील्यवयोवचनशक्तिषु चानश्” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[129]) cānaś; since the lasārvadhātuka is stated to be unaccented by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्”, here by “चितः” the final acute; when ayā + īśānaḥ, the guṇa sandhi would have come, but since īśā is read in the akṣādi [as printed], by “ईषाक्षादीनां छन्दसि प्रकृतिभावो वक्तव्यः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[128] vārttika) the prakṛtibhāva comes.
 - असि — the root as bhuvi; by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” laṭ, third person singular for the second-person singular affix sip; when as + si, by “तासस्त्योर्लोपः” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[50]) the loss of the s of the root because an affix beginning with s follows; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; sip is pit, so unaccented; the root’s accent remains.
 - ऋणयावा — the root yā prāpaṇe; since the sense of ṇic is included in the root’s sense, to it by “आतो मनिन्क्वनिब्वनिपश्च” the affix vanip; the word yāvan; since vanip is pit, unaccented, the root’s accent, the first syllable acute; ṛṇasya yāvā ṛṇayāvā; by “गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्” the kṛdutarapada’s base accent.
 - अनेद्यः — the root ṇidi kutsāyām; by “ऋहलोर्ण्यत्” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[124]) the affix ṇyat; since it is idit, the augment num by “इदितो नुम् धातोः” would come, but by “आगमानुशासनमनित्यम्” it does not come here; then by “पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च” the guṇa of the laghūpadha, using ṇyat as the occasion; by “न नेद्यः” [?] and “नञ्त्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थ...” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[2]) the accent of the first member, an indeclinable.
 - प्रावितः [as printed: prāvitā] — the root ava rakṣaṇe; in the agent sense the affix tṛ; the word avitṛ; su following, by “ऋदुशनस्पुरुदंसोऽनेहसां च” the substitute anañ; by “अप्तृन्तृच्स्वसृनप्तृ...” the lengthening of the penultimate; by “हल्ङ्चाभ्यो...” (continues on p. 233)

Translation: “...we declare, is the meaning. What is that account? It is told: the jihvā — the tongue, the speech of the form of praise — accompanied by the cakṣasā, the shining oblation, of the Soma pressed at the sacrifices, pra jigāti — goes forth, goes especially to the Marut host. At the sacrifices the Soma-oblation and praise are made to the Maruts, because im enam indram — this Indra, in the śami, the action of the nature of the slaying of Vṛtra, the Maruts, ṛkvāṇaḥ — bound with praise of the form ‘strike, O Lord, slay, show your valour’ — āsata — reached him. Āt it — immediately after attaining Indra, they, having received from Indra such names as yajñīyāni — worthy of sacrifice [?], dadhire — bore them. We now make it known: at the sacrifices the Soma-oblation, shining, and the praise are offered together to the Maruts. For the Maruts, in the work of the slaying of Vṛtra and the like, joined Indra, the one who began it, with a verse of encouragement such as ‘prahara...’ and, immediately on joining him, obtained from Indra’s grace names that are fit to be recited at sacrifices.”

- शमि — “śami means ‘action’ (Ni. [2-1] [?]): in actions such as the slaying of Vṛtra.”
- ऋक्वाणः — ṛca stutau — “possessed of praises of the form of Ṛks.”
- नामानि यज्ञियानि दधिरे — “your names are recited at the sacrifices; that is, because you encouraged Indra in the slaying of Vṛtra and the like with sentences such as ‘prahara bhagavo jahi’ (‘strike, O Lord, slay’), and helped him, your names became fit to be recited at sacrifices: that is the intention.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 87.5) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- वदामसि — the root vada vyaktāyāṃ vāci; laṭ, first person plural, the affix masi [= mas]; śap; by “अतो दीर्घो यज्ञि” (ato dīrgho yañi) the lengthening of the a-ending stem because the affix mas follows; by “इदन्तो मसि” the augment i for the affix; since it follows an atiñanta [as printed], the nighāta accent.
- जिगाति — the root gā stutau, Juhotyādi; laṭ, third person singular, the affix; for śap the substitute ślu; by “श्लौ” the reduplication of the root; by “ह्रस्वः” the shortening of the reduplicate; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the i in the reduplicate; by “कुहोश्चुः” cutva: ji; here too the nighāta accent comes.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.5, continued from p. 235 (grammar, noted briefly):

- शमि — śamī is a name for action; in the locative singular, since the case-ending i follows, the ī is lost in the Chandas: śami.
- ऋक्वाणः — the root ṛca stutau; since the abstract sense, by “सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्” the affix kvip; the word ṛc; ṛg asya asti iti — in the sense of matup, by “छन्दसीवनिपौ च वनिपौ” [as read] the affix vanip; the change of the final letter is Vedic, that is, k in place of c: the word ṛkvan; in the nominative plural, with jas following, the lengthening of the penultimate by “सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ”; by “अट्कुप्वाङ्नुम्व्यवायेऽपि” the ṇ for n: ṛkvāṇaḥ. Or, because the statement “अयस्मयादीनि छन्दसि” (ayasmayādīni chandasi) — and the rule “क्वचिदुभयं भवति” (Kā. 1-4-[20] [?]) — both pada-status and bha-status come; as in “sa suṣṭubhā sa ṛkvatā” where the kutva occurs because of pada-status, so here too by pada-status the kutva occurs; since bha-status is also there, jaśtva does not come to the k.
- आशत — the root aśū vyāptau; lañ, third person plural, the affix jha; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of śnu [as printed: śnu] the vikaraṇa; since a-ending comes after, by “आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः” the substitute at for jha; by “आडजादीनाम्” the augment āṭ; the form āśata; since yat is in connexion, no nighāta occurs; since the augment is acute, the first syllable is acute.
- यज्ञियानि — in the sense of ‘fit for it’, after yajña, by “यज्ञत्विग्भ्यां घखजौ” (Pā. Sū. 5-1-[71]) the affix gha; by “आयनेयीनीयियः फढखछ्छाम्” the substitute iy for gha; by “यस्येति च” the loss of the a of the stem; in the plural neuter, the substitute śi; by “नपुंसकस्य झलचः” the augment num; since śi has the designation sarvanāmasthāna, by “सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ” the lengthening of the penultimate of the stem ending in n; by the affix-accent the i of the substitute iy is acute.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 87.6) (Kannada)

te — those Maruts; bhānubhiḥ — with the shining; raśmibhiḥ — with the rays of the sun; kam — rain-water; śriyase — for the use of creatures; saṃ mimikṣire — they wish to pour out plentifully with a will; te — after that those Maruts; ṛkvabhiḥ — with the priests who praise; sukhādayaḥ — eaters of delicious oblations; vāśīmantaḥ — possessing speech in the form of praise; iṣmiṇaḥ — of the nature of moving; abhīravaḥ — free from fear; te — those Maruts; priyasya — beneficial to all; mārutasya — fit for the Maruts; dhāmnaḥ — an excellent place; vidre — obtained.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.6 (Kannada)

“The Maruts, joining the shining rays of the sun, pour rain-water abundantly for the use of living creatures. After that they eat delicious oblations along with the priests who praise. Those Maruts, possessed of speech in the form of praise, of a moving nature, free from fear, obtained an excellent place, beneficial to all and fit for them.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Combining with the solar rays, they have willingly poured down (rain) for the welfare of mankind, and praised by the priests, have been pleased partakers of the sacrificial food; addressed with praises, moving swiftly and exempt from fear, they have become possessed of a station agreeable and suitable to the Maruts.” — as printed.

- श्रियसे — sevitum — “for being served, resorted to, attained. Skandasvāmin explains ‘satyasaṁpattilakṣaṇāyai śriyai’ — ‘for the prosperity that is of the nature of the wealth of truth’, or for the obtaining of wealth.” (the Skandasvāmin phrase is partly clotted [?])
 - कम् — “water (Ni. [1-12] [?]): rain.” (Continues on p. 239.)

- भानुभिः रश्मिभिः — dīpyamānaiḥ sūryaraśmibhiḥ saha athavā vidyullakṣaṇābhiḥ — “with shining rays, or with lightning: furnished with shining rays, or with lightning.”
- ऋक्वभिः — stutimadbhir ṛtvigbhiḥ — “with the priests who praise with Ṛks.”
- सुखादयः — khādṛbhakṣaṇe | śobhanā khādir bhakṣaṇaṁ yeṣāṁ te | sukhasya śobhanasya haviṣo bhakṣayitāraḥ — “those who eat the excellent oblation. Skandasvāmin explains this word as ‘śobhanāḥ khādayaḥ āyudhaviṣeṣā yeṣāṁ’ — those who have good khādi, a special weapon: khādi means a special weapon of the Marut deities, so ‘having such weapons’. To support this meaning he gives two examples —

त्वेषं गणं तवसं खादिहस्तं धुनिव्रतं मायिनं दातिवारम् ।

tveṣaṁ gaṇaṁ tavasaṁ khādihastaṁ dhunivrataṁ māyinaṁ dātivāram | (R. Saṁ. 5-[52]-[?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “The blazing, strong host, with khādi [rings or weapons] in hand, of shaking ways, wonder-working, giver of the choice [wealth].”

अंसेषु व ऋष्टयः पत्सु खादयो वक्षःसु रुक्मा मरुतो रथे शुभः ।

aṁseṣu va ṛṣṭayaḥ patsu khādayo vakṣaḥsu rukmā maruto rathe śubhaḥ | (R. Saṁ. 5-[54]-[11] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “On your shoulders are spears, on your feet khādis, on your breasts golden ornaments, O Maruts; on the chariot there is splendour.” (Both reference numerals are small and doubtful [?].)

- वाशीमन्तः — vāśīti vānnāma | śobhanayā stutilakṣaṇayā vācopetāḥ — “vāśī means speech (Ni. [1-11] [?]); those who are praised by words in the form of praise. Skandasvāmin explains the word vāśī too as a special weapon, and gives the example —
वाशीमेको बिभर्ति हस्त आयसीमन्तर्देवेषु निध्रुविः ।

vāśīm eko bibharti haste āyasīm antar deveṣu nidhruviḥ | (R. Saṁ. 8-29-[3] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “One carries in his hand an iron vāśī [axe], steady among the gods.”

— and he gives also the meaning ‘speech’. - इष्मिणः — iṣa gatau | gatimantaḥ — “swift movers; of a moving nature.” - अभीरवः — “fearless, those who have no fear.” - प्रियस्य मारुतस्य धाम्नः — “the own place that is a delight to the Marut deities. Skandasvāmin explains the word dhāman as ‘place, name or birth’ (sthānaṁ vā nāma vā janma vā) — place, or name, or birth.”

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.6, continued and concluded from p. 239 (grammar, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]):

- श्रियसे (cont.) — “...by”अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवां य्वोरियङ्बडौ” (aci śnudhātubhruvāṃ yvor iyañuvaṇau) the iyañ substitute because an affix beginning with a vowel follows; by “कृन्मेजन्तः” (kṛṇ mejantaḥ) it gets the designation of an indeclinable.”
- मिमिक्षिरे — the root miha secane; by “धातोः कर्मणः समानकर्तृकादिच्छायां वा” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-7) the affix san in the sense of desire; by “सन्यङोः” (sanyañoḥ) the root is reduplicated, in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; when mimih + sa, by “हो ढः” the ḍha for the h; by “षढोः कः सि” (ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si) the k for the ḍh that arose; by “आदेशप्रत्यययोः” the ṣatva for the s of the affix; k + ṣ together form kṣ: the stem mimikṣa receives the designation dhātu by “सनाद्यन्ता धातवः”; in the liṭ, since the sūtra “अमन्त्रे” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[35]) forbids it for amantra [as printed], the augment ām does not come; for the third-person plural, by “लिटस्तद्धयोरेशिरेच्” the substitute irec; the form mimikṣire; although it is a parasmaipada root, by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” the ātmanepada affix comes; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta.
- सुखादयः — the root khādṛbhakṣaṇe; by the Uṇādi the affix i; śobhanā khādir bhakṣaṇaṃ yeṣāṃ te sukhādayaḥ; nominative plural; by “नञ्सुभ्याम्” the final syllable of the latter member is acute.
- वाशीमन्तः — vāśī means speech; in the sense ‘it is in him’, by “तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप्” the affix matup; since it is pit, unaccented; nominative plural.
- इष्मिणः — the root iṣa gatau; by “इषियुधीन्धिदसिण्याधूसूभ्यो मक्” (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[147] [?]) the affix mak; since it is kit, no laghūpadha-guṇa; the word iṣma; iṣmo yeṣām asti iṣmiṇaḥ; in the sense of matup, by “अत इनिटनौ” the affix ini; by the affix-accent the i of ini is acute; nominative plural.
- विद्रे — the root vid/lābhe; liṭ, third person plural, the substitute irec; since it is ṇic-like [liñ-like] the reduplication of the root would arise, but by the statement “द्विर्वचनप्रकरणे छन्दसि वेति वक्तव्यम्” the reduplication does not come here; by “इरयोरे” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[76]) the substitute re for the ire of the ending; since liṭ is kit-like, no guṇa of the laghūpadha; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the affix-accent the final acute.

Translation: “The fourth sūkta, ā vidyunmadbhiḥ, of six Ṛks. The Anukramaṇī says here: ‘ā vidyunmadbhiḥ — the first and the last are prastārapaṅkti, the fifth virāḍrūpā’; the ṛṣi and deity are as before. The first and the sixth are two prastārapaṅkti Ṛks. That Ṛk whose first two pādas are Jagatī and third and fourth Gāyatrī is a prastārapaṅkti; it is prescribed [in Piṅgala] ‘prastārapaṅktiḥ purataḥ’ (Piñ. 3-[40] [?]); here the sense is: ‘Jagatī’ and ‘Gāyatrī’ are carried on; if two Jagatī pādas stand in front and the last two Gāyatrī, that is a prastārapaṅkti. The fifth, etat tyat, is virāḍrūpā: in it the first three pādas are of eleven syllables and the last of eight; this is called virāḍrūpā. The application is laiṅgika [by the sense of the verse].”

अनुवादवु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

“The sūkta ā vidyunmadbhiḥ is the fourth sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka. There are six Ṛks in it. In the Anukramaṇī it is said ‘ā vidyunmadbhir ādyānte prastārapaṅkti pañcamī virāḍrūpā’. The ṛṣi and deity are as in the preceding sūkta. The first and the sixth Ṛks of this sūkta are in the prastārapaṅkti metre. In the metre called prastārapaṅkti, the first and second pādas are like the Jagatī metre, the third and fourth like the Gāyatrī metre. Such a metre is called prastārapaṅkti. This is said in Piṅgala’s khaṇḍa sūtra (Piñ. Sū. 3-[40] [?]) ‘prastārapaṅktiḥ purataḥ’: that is, a Ṛk in which the first two pādas are like the Jagatī metre and the last two pādas like the Gāyatrī metre is said to be of the prastārapaṅkti metre. The fifth Ṛk of this sūkta, etat tyat, is of the metre virāḍrūpā: a Ṛk in which the first three pādas have eleven syllables each and the last pāda eight is said to be of the virāḍrūpā metre. The application of this sūkta is laiṅgika.”

Translation: “O Maruts! They are marutaḥ because they, reaching the mita (measured, formed) sky, ruvanti — make a sound; or because they make a great sound (amitam); or because, reaching the cloud (mita, formed by themselves), they shine in the form of lightning; or because they run (dravanti) in the great sky. All the groups of gods enumerated in the middle region are called Maruts; so the elders’ rule says: ‘every goddess of the middle region, and Vāyu the man who goes everywhere, and all the troops — [all] are Maruts.’ The Paurāṇikas say that from Kaśyapa son of Marīci were born the Maruts, of seven troops, forty-nine in number. Such Maruts, come in your chariots to our sacrifice. What chariots? Vidyunmadbhiḥ — with lightning; svarkaiḥ — with good going (or: with those who have good praise); ṛṣṭimadbhiḥ — with spear-like weapons; aśvaparṇaiḥ — with horses that fly, with wing-like speed; or [the chariots are] swift clouds. O sumāyāḥ — māyā is the name of ‘work’ and of ‘knowledge’: you of good works, or of good wisdom, Maruts, with abundant food that we are to be given, to us, like birds swiftly ā paptata — fall upon us, come. Yaska says here (Ni. [11-13, 14] [?]): ‘Now, of the gods of the middle region, the Maruts are the first to come; maruto mitarāviṇo vā mitarociṇo vā mahad dravantīti vā ...’ [as in the Special Topics, p. 245]. Grammar tail, noted briefly: vidyunmadbhiḥ — no va-substitution for matup (Pā. 8-2-[10] [?]) because vidyut is counted in the yavādi group; ṛṣṭimadbhiḥ — matup acute by”hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matub...“; aśvaparṇaiḥ — asū vyāptau with kvan; varṣiṣṭhayā — iṣṭhan after vṛddha with substitute varṣ by”priyasthira...“; paptata — pat!gatau, luṇḍ with aṇ for cli, and the augment puk (Pā. 7-4-[71] [?]).”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 88.1) (Kannada)

marutaḥ — O Maruts; vidyunmadbhiḥ — endowed with special radiance; svarkaiḥ — having easy and excellent movement, or having excellent praise; ṛṣṭimadbhiḥ — borne with weapons; aśvaparṇaiḥ — having swift horses; rathebhīḥ — with your chariots; ā yāta — come (to our sacrifice).

अथवा — Or

[vidyunmadbhiḥ — with lightnings; svarkaiḥ — of excellent movement; ṛṣṭimadbhiḥ — filled with waters of a flowing nature; aśvaparaṇaiḥ — (pervading the atmosphere) moving; rathebbhiḥ — with clouds; ā yāta — come.]

sumāyāḥ — Maruts of excellent actions or of excellent knowledge; varṣiṣṭhayā — exceedingly abundant; iṣā — (the food to be given to us); naḥ — towards us; vayo na — like birds (swiftly); ā paptata — come.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.1 (Kannada)

“O Maruts, come to our sacrifice with your chariots — of special brilliance, of easy movement, borne with weapons, with swift horses. O Maruts of excellent actions, bring us abundant food and come swiftly to us like birds.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Maruts, come with your chariots full of lightnings [sic], full of splendors, full of spears and with quick-moving horses. Performers of good deeds, descend like birds and bring abundant food.” — as printed.

- मरुतः — “The bhāṣyakāra has given two or three different derivations for this word and explained the meaning: mitaṁ nirmitam antarikṣaṁ prāpya ruvanti śabdaṁ kurvantīti marutaḥ — ‘since they make a sound on reaching the formed sky’ — ṇadvā amitaṁ bhṛṣaṁ śabdakāriṇaḥ — ‘or those who make an exceeding sound’ — athavā mitaṁ svair nirmitaṁ megham prāpya vidyudātmanā rocamānāḥ — ‘or those who shine as lightning on reaching the cloud made by themselves’ — athavā mahaty antarikṣe dravantīti marutaḥ — ‘or since they run in the great atmosphere’. Because they blow and make a sound in the atmosphere, these deities are called Maruts; or because they make much sound; or because they shine in the form of lightning in the midst of clouds; or because they move in the vast atmosphere, they are called Maruts. And so on. Yāska, in his Nirukta, has classified the deities in three ways, as those in heaven, atmosphere and earth. These Marut deities, who move in the middle region, the atmosphere, are called atmospheric deities. On this matter —” (continues on p. 245)

the male Vāyu who goes everywhere, and all the troops are Maruts — so is the instruction of the elders.”

“The view of the ancients is that all female deities and male deities such as Vāyu, and the Marut hosts, are said to be deities of the middle-region atmosphere. The Paurāṇikas say that the forty-nine Marut deities were born from the sage Kaśyapa, son of Marīci. When Yāska, the great sage, derived this word, he said ‘maruto mitarāviṇo vā mitarociṇo vā mahad dravantīti vā’ (Ni. [11-13] [?]). Their meaning we shall explain below.” (Further, p. 245:)

- विद्युन्मद्भिः — “viśiṣṭadīptiyuktaiḥ | athavā vidyutā saṁyuktaiḥ — endowed with special radiance; or with lightning.”

“The explanation of the remaining words is as the bhāṣyakāra has given it above.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 88.1) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- विद्युन्मदिभः — vidyut yeṣām asti iti vidyunmantaḥ; by “तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप्” the affix matup; since jhay (t) precedes, by “झयः” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[10]) the change of the m of matup to v would have come; but since yavādi is an ākṛtigaṇa, vidyut is counted in it, and since “अयवादिभ्यः” runs on, the va-substitution does not come.
- रथेभिः — the word ratha, instrumental plural; bhis following, by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the substitute ais does not come; by “बहुवचने झल्येत्” (bahuvacane jhaly et) the e.
- यात — the root yā prāpaṇe, Adādi; loṭ, second person plural; by “तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः” the substitute ta; by “अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः” the luk of śap; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- ऋष्टिमदिभः — ṛṣṭayo yeṣāṃ santi; matup; instrumental plural; by “ह्रस्वनुङ्भ्यां मतुप्” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[176]) the acute on matup after a short vowel.
- अश्वपणैः — the root aśū vyāptau; by “अशिपुषिकुटिकणि...” (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[151] [?]) the affix kvan; the form aśva; aśvaṃ vyāptaṃ parṇaṃ patanaṃ gamanaṃ yeṣāṃ te aśvaparañāḥ; instrumental plural; a bahuvrīhi, first member keeps its accent.
- वर्षिष्ठया — the word vṛddha; in the sense of excess, by “अतिशायने तमबिष्टनौ” the affix iṣṭhan; since it follows, by “प्रियस्थिरस्फिर...” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[157]) the substitute varṣ for vṛddha; by “यस्येति च” the loss of the a; since it ends in a nit affix, by “जित्यादिर्नित्यम्” the first syllable acute; in the feminine, ṭāp, instrumental singular.
- पप्तत — the root pat/gatau; ḍit; in the sense of loṭ, Vedic luṇ; second person plural, by “तस्थस्थमिपां...” the substitute ta; by “च्लि लुङि” cli, and for it, since the root is ḍit, by “लृदित्...” the substitute aṇ (puṣādidyutādi, Pā. Sū. 3-1-[55]); pat + a + ta, by “सतः पुम्” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[19]) the augment puk with the aṇ; by “मिदेर्गुणः” ... the final-[a] ; by “बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्चोगेऽपि” the augment aṭ does not come; the form paptata; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.1, concluded:

- सुमायाः — śobhanāḥ māyāḥ (karmāṇi) yeṣāṃ te sumāyāḥ; vocative plural; by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta accent.

Closing of Rik 88.1: “॥ १ ॥” (1), followed by a printer’s ornament.

Translation: “Those Maruts go (ā yānti) to kam — the one who praises, the sacrificer — with aruṇebhiḥ (ruddy) and piśaṅgaiḥ (tawny, or of both colours) horses that urge on the chariot, to varam, the chooser of the gods. For what? Śubhe — to make his splendour; or śubhe = for water, that is, for rain. The host of those Maruts is rukmo na — like shining gold — citraḥ, exceedingly beautiful to see, svadhitīvān — svadhiti is a name for the thunderbolt: possessed of a weapon that cuts enemies. Such a host, the Maruts jañghananta — strike mightily — bhūma, the earth, with pavyā — the rim of the wheel of the chariot. The meaning: the earth, unable to bear the weight of the Maruts who have come to protect the praiser, was sorely pressed.

Grammar tail, noted briefly: varam — ‘by whom the gods are chosen’; kam — kai gai śabde; rathatūrbhiḥ — tura tvaraṇe, with kvip, lengthening before bhis; pavyā — Yāska: ‘the felly (pavī) is the rim of the chariot’ (Ni. [5-5] [?]); jañghananta — frequentative of han, Vedic lañ; bhūma — ḍā-substitution for am, shortening Vedic.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.2 (Kannada, foot of p. 248)

“Those Maruts, with horses of ruddy and tawny colour that speed the chariot, come to the sacrificer who praises and chooses the gods, to do him good. Attractive like shining gold and armed with thunderbolts, those Maruts, as a host, trample the earth with the wheels of their chariots and enter it.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“To what glorifier of the gods do they repair with their ruddy, tawny car-bearing horses for his advantage? bright as burnished gold and armed with the thunderbolt they break the earth with their chariot-wheels.” — as printed.

- अरुणेभिः पिशङ्गैः — “with horses of red and tawny (Kannada: piṅgala, yellowish) colours, of mixed colour. (The English words ‘red and tawny horses’ are added in the print.)”
- वरम् — devānāṃ varitāram — “one who calls the gods, or one who invites; the sacrificer.”
- कम् — kai gai śabde / kāyatīti kaḥ taṃ / śabdayitāraṃ stuvantam — “the one who sounds, that is, the sacrificer who praises. The meaning ‘questioning’ may be given to this word.” (The English translation above takes it so: “To what glorifier...?”)
- शुभे — “for the sake of prosperity; or śubha means water (Ni. [1-12] [?]): to serve water, to give rain.”
- रथतूर्भिः — tura tvaraṇe / rathaṃ tuturati tvaṛāyuktaṃ kurvantīti rathaturaḥ — “those that make the chariot go swiftly: horses that make it move as with haste.”
- रुक्मो न — rocamānaṃ suvarṇam iva — “like shining, glittering gold: endowed with lustre.”
- चित्रः — atisayena darśanīyaḥ — “exceedingly beautiful to look at.”
- स्वधित्वान् — “among the eighteen names of thunderbolt — vidyut, nemiḥ and the rest — the word svadhitiḥ is read; so svadhitīvān means ‘furnished with weapons (vajra) for destroying enemies’.”
- पव्या — cakradhārayā — “by the wheel-rim (Ni. [5-5] [?]).”
- जङ्घनन्त भूम — “they strike the earth: that is, when the Marut deities come to the earth to protect those who praise, the earth is oppressed, unable to bear their weight.”

- अरुणेभिः — by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the substitute ais does not come for bhis in the instrumental plural; by “बहुवचने झल्येत्” the e.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.2, continued (grammar, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]):

- वरम् — vriyante devā anena iti varaḥ; the root vṛñ varaṇe; by “ग्रहवृद्धिनिश्चिगमश्च” (grahavṛddhiṇiścigamaś ca, Pā. Sū. 3-3-[58]) the affix ap in the instrumental sense; the guṇa of the ik of the root because of the affix; raparaḥ; since ap is pit, unaccented; the root’s accent remains.
- शुभे — the root śubha dīptau; the affix kvip; dative singular; by “सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः” the case-ending acute.
- कम् — the root kai gai śabde; kāyati iti kaḥ; by the statement bahula, the affix ka comes even where the root is igupadha; by “आदेच उपदेशेऽशिति” the ā for the root; since ka is kit, by “आतो लोप इति च” the loss of the ā; the word ka; accusative singular; by the affix-accent ka is acute on its last syllable; when the case-ending is joined, the single substitute is acute by “उदात्तयणो हल्पूर्वात्...” [as printed: ekādeśa udāttanodāttaḥ].

- रथतूर्भिः — the root tura tvaraṇe; rathaṁ tuturati; by “क्विप् च” the affix kvip; rathatur; instrumental plural; bhis following, by “हलि च” (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[77]) the lengthening of the ik penultimate of the root; by “गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्” the base accent of the kṛdutarapada.
- पव्या — pavī rathanemir bhavati (Ni. [5-5] [?], Yāska — ‘the rim of the chariot is called pavī’); the root pūñ pavane; by “अचि इः” (Un. Sū. 4-[142] [?]) the affix i; by the affix the guṇa; av-substitution; in the instrumental singular the case-ending tā; yaṇ-substitution; since a case-ending follows the yaṇ substituted for an acute, by “उदात्तयणो हल्पूर्वात्” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[174]) the case-ending is acute.
- जङ्घनन्त — the root han hiṁsāgatyoḥ; in the sense of intensity, by “धातोरेकाचो हलादेः क्रियासमभिहारे यङ्” the affix yañ; then lañ in the present sense; third person plural, by “झोऽन्तः” the substitute ant; since yañ is ārdhadhātuka-like, by “अतो लोपः” the loss of the a of yañ; the root is reduplicated; by “कुहोश्चुः” cutva; by “अभ्यासाच्च” the kutva for the h of the reduplicate-following root, producing gh; by “नुगतोऽनुनासिकान्तस्य” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[85]) the augment nuk to the reduplicate of a root with nasal ending; anusvāra from nuk; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- भूमा — bhūmi + am; by “सुपां सुलुक्” the substitute ḍā for am; by the ḍit-ness the loss of the ḍi (the i); the shortening in the Samhitā is Vedic.

(The middle of this tail is clotted in the print; read in part, the doubtful words left out [?]. Noted briefly: vanā* — loss of śi; kṛṇavante — the root kṛvi (“to injure, to do”), ātmanepada by vyatyaya, the affix u; ūrdhvā — as before, ā-substitution; dhanayante — ṇic after dhana in the sense ‘makes it’.)*

vaḥ — O Maruts, your; tanūṣu — in the bodies (arms); vāśīḥ — weapons that sound (so as to frighten enemies); śriye kam — (they are) for the sake of obtaining prosperity; (those Maruts) vanā na — like groups of trees that are made to grow; medhā — the sacrifices; ūrdhvā — growing prosperous; kṛṇavante — (the sacrificers) cause to be done; sujātāḥ — of excellent birth; marutaḥ — O Maruts; yuṣṣmabhyam — for you; kam — pleasant; adrim — the stone (that presses Soma); tuvidyumnāsaḥ — sacrificers possessed of abundant wealth; dhanayante — make rich (with Soma-juice).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.3 (Kannada)

“O Maruts, in your arms there are weapons that strike terror into enemies. Make the sacrifices grow into prosperity, as trees and the like grow tall. O Maruts of excellent birth, for you the sacrificers make the stones that press the Soma wealthy — that is, with the stones they crush the Soma-plant and prepare the Soma-juice for your drinking.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Maruts, the threatening weapons are in your bodies (hands) able to win; to you they raise lofty sacrifices like tall trees; well born Maruts, for you, the wealthy worshippers enrich the stone (that presses the Soma plant).” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगल्ल ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 88.3)

- तनूषु — “in bodies: that is, in arms.”
 - वाशीः — “a class of weapons: weapons and the like furnished with sounds that cause fear to enemies.”
 - मेधा — “sacrifices.”

- तुविद्युम्नासः — “sacrificers possessed of abundant wealth.”
- धनयन्ते अद्रिम् — somābhiṣave pravṛttaṃ grāvāṇaṃ dhanaṃ kurvanti — “they make wealthy the stones used for pressing Soma; that is, they cause the juice to flow well.”
- कम् — “In this Ṛk the word kam occurs twice. The kam in the first half is used merely as a metrical filler (pādapūraṇa). Yāska’s statement is ‘athāpi pādapūraṇaḥ kam īm it u’ (Ni. [1-4] [?]) — that is, the words kam, īm, it, u are mere fillers of the pāda: when the syllables that the pādas need are too few, these words are added to make them up; in such contexts these words have no meaning of their own. For the word kam in the second half the bhāṣyakāra has given the meaning ‘giving happiness’.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 88.3) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- श्रिये — by “सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः” the dative case-ending is acute.
- वाशीः — śatrūṇaṃ bhayotpādanenākrośaśabdakaraṇaṃ vāśaḥ; vāśo ’syā asti — in the sense of matup, by “छन्दसीवनिपौ” the affix ī [as printed]; by the affix-accent the final acute would have come, but by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” the first syllable is acute.

- मेधा — medha + śas; by “सुपां सुलुक्” the substitute ḍā for śas.
- वना — the word vana, always neuter; the śi that comes as a substitute in the plural is lost by “शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्”.
- कृण्वन्ते — the root kṛvi hiṃsākaraṇayoś ca; laṭ, third person plural, the affix jha; by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” the ātmanepada; by “धिन्विकृण्व्योर च” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[80]) the a as the final and the affix u in place of śap; by “इदितो नुम् धातोः” the augment num for the root; kṛṇv-, by “आलोपोऽन्त्यस्य” ... the a in place of the v [as read]; kṛṇu + a [?]; by “अतो लोपः” the loss of the a; although since the form ends in a non-a the jha ought to take at by “आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः”, yet by vyatyaya the substitute ant by “झोऽन्तः” comes; by “छन्दस्युभयथा” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[117]) the ārdhadhātuka-status of the affix, so by “सार्वधातुकमपित्” the nit-ness does not come; by “सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः” the guṇa of the u; av-substitution; the form kṛṇavante; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.3, concluded:

- ऊर्ध्वा — as before, for the śas case-ending, by “सुपां सुलुक्” the ḍā substitute.
- सुजाताः — by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-[19]) the nighāta accent.
- धनयन्ते — dhanaṃ kurvanti dhanayante; by “तत्करोति तदाचष्टे” the affix ṇic in the sense of the root’s meaning after a nominal stem; by “इष्टवत्...” (as read: iṣṭhavat) the extension that iṣṭha gives, so that, with ṇic following, the ṭi-loss occurs; by “सनाद्यन्ता धातवः” it gets the designation of a root; laṭ, third person plural, the substitute ant; śap the vikaraṇa; because of śap the guṇa of ṇic, and av-substitution; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.

Closing of Rik 88.3: “॥ ३ ॥” (3), followed by a printer’s ornament.

The Gotamas, the sages, brahma kṛṇvantaḥ — offering to the Maruts the food of the nature of oblation along with chants (arkaiḥ) made by mantras, utsadhim — the well in which a spring of water is held — ūrdhvaṃ nunudre — raised it up, for their own drinking, bringing the well that was in another place. [As the Maruts, praised by their chants, uproot and bring the well — that is spoken of figuratively as done by the chants.] Grammar tail, noted briefly: gṛdhrāḥ — gṛdhu abhikāṅkṣāyām with kran; āguḥ — luṅ of i with the substitute gā, jus for jhi; vārkāryām — ṇyat after kṛ; vābhiḥ kāryā; nunudre — re for ire; utsadhim — ki in the sense of locus after dhā; pibadhyai — the infinitive śadhyai, with piba for pā.”

“...and necessary; dhiyam — the rite of the nature of the Jyotiṣṭoma and the like; devīm ca — they made it shining (on these days); brahma — food in the form of oblations; arkaiḥ — with stotras in the form of mantras; kṛṇvantaḥ — offering (to the Maruts); gotamāsaḥ — the sages who are sons of Gotama; utsadhim — the well that is the abode of water; pibadhyai — for their own drinking; ūrdhvaṃ nunudre — raised and brought (so that the water comes upward).”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.4 (Kannada)

“O sons of Gotama, you earnestly desired water. Days endowed with the water you needed have come to meet you. And you made manifest the rite — of the nature of the Jyotiṣṭoma and the like — that must be accomplished with water. On such days, you sons of Gotama, offering the food that is oblation to the Maruts, with chants in the form of mantras, raised up and brought the well that is the abode of water, that the water might come up for your drinking. The Maruts, too, from a distant place, raised that well and brought it for you.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Fortunate days have befallen you, (sons of Gotama), when thirsty and having sung about you in the sacrifice for which water was essential; the sons of Gotama, offering oblations with sacred hymns have raised aloft the well provided for their dwelling.” — as printed.

“The Maruts, praised by the sage Gotama, who was in need of water, and by his sons, lifted a well full of water from a distant place and brought it and gave it to the sage Gotama. A certain sage who saw this spoke this Rk.”

- गृध्राः — gṛdhu abhikāṅkṣāyām — “those who earnestly desire (water).”
 - वार्कार्याम् — ḍukṛñ karaṇe / vābhiḥ kāryā vārkāryā tām — “that which is to be done with water; the necessary [rite that requires water].”
 - धियम् — “work: the Jyotiṣṭoma and similar sacrificial works. Among the twenty-six names of work — apaḥ, aṣṭaḥ and the rest — the word dhīḥ is read; hence dhiyam means ‘work’ (Ni. [2-1] [?]).” (continues on p. 257)

- देवीं च — dyotamānam akurvan — “they made it shine; that is, they made it glorious.”
- ब्रह्म — havirlakṣaṇam annam — “the food to be offered to the deities in the form of oblation.”
- अर्कैः — “with R̥ks, with mantras, with stotras.”
- गोतमासः — “the sons of the sage Gotama, or his descendants.”
- उत्सधिम् — jalapravāho ’smin dhīyata ity utsadhiḥ kūpam — “the well in which there is a flow of water.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 88.4) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- गृध्राः — the root gṛdhu abhikāṅkṣāyām; by “सुसूधाग्निधिभ्यः ऋन्” (Uṇ. Sū. 2-[25] [?]) the affix kran; since it is kit, no laghūpadha-guṇa; the word gṛdhra; by “सुपां सुलुक्...” [as read: “supāṃ suluk”], the jas comes for śas; since kran is nit, the first syllable is acute.
- आगुः — the root iñ gatau; in luñ, by “इणो गा लुङि” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-[45]) the substitute gā for the root; third person plural, the affix jhi; by “आतः” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[110]) when jhi follows a root ending in ā, the substitute jus for jhi; by “उस्यपदान्तात्” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[96]) the pararūpa; the augment aṭ for the aṅga; by “तिङ्ङितिङः” the nighāta accent.
- इमाम् — the word idam, feminine, accusative singular; by “ऊङिदम्पदाद्यप्पुमैद्युभ्यः” the case-ending acute.
- वार्कार्याम् — the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; by “ऋहलोर्ण्यत्” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[124]) the affix ṇyat; since it is ṇit, by “अचो ङ्गिति” the vṛddhi; by “उरण् रपरः” with r; when the feminine is intended, by “अजाद्यतष्टाप्” the affix ṭāp; vābhiḥ kāryā vārkāryā; since it belongs to the tricakrādi group the final syllable of the latter member is acute.
- गोतमासः — in the nominative plural, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk for jas.

- नुनुद्रे — the root ṇuda preraṇe; liṭ, third person plural, by “लिटस्तद्धयोरेशिरेच” the substitute irec; for it, in the Chandas, by “इरयोरे” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[76]) the re... (the page ends here; the grammar continues on p. 258)

- नुनुद्रे (cont.) — “...the substitute re for ire; for the n of the root, by “णोनः” [as read: ṇo naḥ] the n-form; since liṭ is the occasion, the root is reduplicated; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; by “असंयोगाल्लिट् कित्” (asaṇyogāl liṭ kit, Pā. Sū. 1-2-[5]) the kit-ness of the affix, so no laghūpadha-guṇa for the root; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta accent.”
- उत्सधिम् — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; by “कर्मण्यधिकरणे च” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[93]) the affix ki in the locative sense; utsaḥ asmin dhīyate iti utsadhiḥ; since the affix is kit, by “आतो लोप इटि च” the loss of the ā of the root; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- पिबध्वै — the root pā pāne; in the sense of tumun, by “तुमर्थे सेसेनसेअसेन्...” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[9]) the affix śadhyai; since it is śit, by “पाप्माध्मास्थाम्नादाण्...” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-[78]) the substitute piba for the root; since the affix is nit, the first syllable is acute.

Translation: "O Maruts, etad yojanam — yojana means 'that by which a deity is joined (invoked)', i.e. the hymn-form of praise, this sūkta. That tyat, like some other famous, excellent hymn, aceti — is known by all. This hymn-form of praise which the sage Gotama has uttered (sasvar ha) for you — doing what? Seeing the hiraṇyacakrān — those mounted on chariots with golden wheels, engaged in beneficial and delightful deeds, ayodaṁṣṭrān — with iron daṁṣṭrā (daśati = bites), i.e. furnished with iron wheel-rims; or daṁṣṭrā = spears serving for biting, who have iron spears; vidhāvataḥ — running about in various directions here and there; varāhūn — slayers of the best of enemies; or bringers of the best rain-water; or callers of the best gods, eaters of the best oblation. Seeing such Maruts well, Gotama made the hymn at the sacrifice; that hymn, excellent as it is, is known to all of us — that is the sense. On this Yāska (Ni. [5-4] [?]): 'Moreover these groups of middle-region gods are called varāhavaḥ — paśyan hiraṇyacakrān.' Grammar tail, noted briefly: aceti — citi saṁjñāne, Vedic luṅ in the marutaḥ — O Maruts; hiraṇyacakrān — sitting in chariots with golden wheels, or beneficial and delightful deeds being theirs; ayodaṁṣṭrān — holding iron weapons; vidhāvataḥ — running about everywhere with speed; varāhūn — those who slay mighty enemies, or bring excellent rain-water, or call excellent deities to the sacrifice, or eat the excellent oblation; you; paśyan — seeing well; vaḥ — for you; yaṭ — which sūkta-form hymn; gotamaḥ — the sage Gotama; sasvaḥ — recited; etat yojanam — this sūkta-form hymn also; tyat — that famous hymn-offering; na — as it were; aceti — is known to all.

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Marutś, this hymn is known to be the same as that which Gotama recited, in your praise, when he beheld you seated in your chariots with golden wheels, armed with iron weapons, hurrying hither and thither and destroying your mightiest foes.” — as printed (“Marutś” as in the print [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगळु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 88.5)

- एतत्त्यन्न — “this is a famous and excellent hymn.”
- योजनम् — etatsūktasādhyam stotram — “the hymn made by this sūkta. The sage Yāska: ‘athāpy ete mādhyamikā devagaṇā varāhava...’” (the quotation breaks off at the foot of p. 260 and continues on p. 261)

...ucyante paśyan hiraṇyacakrān // (Ni. [5-4] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “...are called varāhavaḥ — [as in the Ṛk] ‘seeing the golden-wheeled ones’.”

“Yāska says that, of the three regions — heaven, atmosphere and earth — the deities of the middle, atmospheric region are called varāhavaḥ. Since the Marut deities belong to the company of these atmospheric deities, they are referred to by the name varāhavaḥ; thus he makes clear that the word varāhavaḥ has the sense ‘Marut deities’.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 88.5) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- अचेति — the root citī saṃjñāne; in the present sense, in the passive, by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः” luṅ; third person singular, the affix ta; by “चिण् भावकर्मणोः” (Pā. Sū. 3-1- [66]) ciṇ for cli in the passive; by “पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च” the guṇa of the laghūpadha, with ciṇ as the occasion; by “चिणो लुक्” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[104]) the luk of the ta that follows ciṇ; the augment aṭ for the aṅga because of luṅ; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta.
- सस्वः — the root svṛśabdopatāpayoḥ; laṅ, third person singular, the affix tip; by “इतश्च” the loss of its i; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the ślu for the vikaraṇa śap; by “श्लौ” the reduplication; the reduplicate keeps its hal-initial; by “उरत्” the a for the ṛ with raparatva, and again the hal-initial remains; sasvṛ + t: by the affix [as read] the guṇa of the ṛ of the root with r; by “हल्ङ्याभ्यो...” the loss of the affix; by the final-r, visarga; since aṭ-augment is [here] not present because Yāska [ati-]... the nighāta does not come since a tiṇanta precedes; by the root’s accent the final acute. (The reasoning on the augment is read with doubt [?].)
- पश्यन् — the root dṛṣir prekṣaṇe; the affix śatṛ in the sense of laṭ; since it is śit, by “पान्नाध्मास्थाम्नादाण्डृश्यर्त्ति...” the substitute paśya for the root; since the lasārvadhātuka is unaccented, the root’s accent remains.
- विधावतः — the root dhāvu gatisuddhyoḥ; the affix śatṛ; as before the root’s accent remains; accusative plural.
- वराहून् — the root hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ, or hṛñ haraṇe, preceded by ān ... (this is the grammar page’s note on the derivation; the sentence as printed): when the word vara stands as the first member, the form hu is obtained; or from hvā spardhāyām, or hu dānādanayoḥ: since some say it is from the root hu, only the sense of eating need be given; with all these roots the form is obtained by the doctrine of pṛṣodarādi; accusative plural.

Translation: “O Maruts, syā — that very praise of ours, vo anubhartrī — which follows you, matches your virtues — prati śṭobhati — praises each of you; stobhati is ‘to praise’. And like the voice (vāṇī) of the priest (vāghataḥ) — na here is in the sense of ‘now’ (sampratyartha): Yāska says ‘the word na in the sense of comparison also occurs in the sense of “now”’ (Ni. Grammar tail, noted briefly: anubhartrī — hṛñ haraṇe with tṛc, feminine nīp; the nadī ending takes the acute by”udāttayaṇo halpūrvāt.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 88.6) (Kannada)

marutaḥ — O Maruts; syā eṣā — this our praise; vaḥ — to you; anubhartrī — in keeping with your greatness; prati śṭobhati — it praises each one of you; gabhastyoḥ — in our hands; svadhām — (various kinds of) food (since the Maruts favour us); na — now; vāghataḥ — of the priest; vāṇī — speech; vṛthā — without effort; āsām — together with these Ṛks; astobhayat — has praised.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.6 (Kannada)

“O Maruts, our praise, in keeping with your greatness, pervades and praises each one of you separately. Because you, Maruts, favour us with food of many kinds in both our hands, now the speech of the priest has praised you, without trouble, along with these Ṛks.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Maruts, this is that praise which suited to your merits glorifies every one of you. The speech of the priest has now glorified you, without difficulty, with sacred verses since you have placed food in our hands.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 88.6)

- स्या — saiṣā — “that very one; syā is the feminine of syaḥ, ‘that’.”
- अनुभर्त्री — hṛñ haraṇe | yuṣmān anuharantī, yuṣmadguṇasadṛṣī — “following you; that is, in keeping with, suited to your greatness.”
- ष्टोभति (stobhati) — “among the twenty-four verbs of praising — arcati, gāyati and the rest — the word stobhati is read, so stobhati means ‘praises’ (Ni. [3-?] [?]).”

- वाघतः — “among the eight names of priests — bhāratāḥ, kuravaḥ and the rest — the word vāghataḥ is read, so vāghataḥ means ‘priests’. Here vāghataḥ vāṇī means the speech in the form of praise recited by the priests.”
- न — “Yāska says this word: ‘asty upamārthasya sampratyarthe prayogaḥ’ (Ni. [1-10] [?]): the word na, which has the sense of comparison, is also used in the sense ‘now’. Since both the sense of comparison and ‘now’ exist for the word na, the bhāṣyakāra here gives only the sense ‘now’. Skandasvāmin gives the sense of comparison.”
- वृथा — “without trouble, without effort.”
- स्वधाम् — “among the twenty-eight names of food — andhaḥ, vājaḥ and the rest — the word svadhā is read; so svadhām means food, or the food in the form of oblation.”
- गभस्त्योः — “among the names of arms — āyusī, jyavānā and the rest — the word gabhasti is read; so gabhastyoḥ means in the arms, or in the hands.”

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.6 (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]):

- स्या — the word tyad; to it, in the nominative, the case-ending following, by “त्यदादीनामः” the substitute a; in the feminine, by “अजाद्यतष्टाप्” the affix ṭāp since it ends in a; when tyā, by “तदोः सः सावनन्त्ययोः” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[106]) the substitute s for the t; by “हल्ङ्याभ्यो...” the loss of su; the form syā.
- अनुभर्त्री — the root bhṛñ bharaṇe; the affix tṛc; because of the affix the guṇa of the root; the word bhartṛ; when the feminine is intended, by “ऋन्नेभ्यो ङीप्” (Pā. Sū. 4-1-[5]) the affix ṇīp, since it ends in ṛ; the yaṇ substitution; since tṛc is cit, by “चितः” the final acute, so in the place of the acute a yaṇ arose; by “उदात्तयणो हल्पूर्वात्” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[174]) since a consonant (t) precedes the yaṇ, the ī that has the designation nadī takes the acute.
- स्तोभति — the root ṣṭubhu stambhe; here used in the sense of praising; laṭ, third person singular; the nighāta accent of the tiṇanta.
- अस्तोभयत् — the root with the sense of ṇic in its own meaning; after the ṇijanta laṇ, third person singular; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, the nighāta does not come; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.

Translation (as read; the text of this introduction is compressed and some wording is doubtful [?]): “The fifth sūkta, ā no bhadrāḥ, of ten Ṛks, the vision of Gotama, to the Viśvedevas. The first five and the seventh are Jagatī; the sixth, svasti na indra, is virāṭsthānā; the [last] nine [as printed: ‘navakā’] ... and Triṣṭubh [Ṛks]. From the application of the rule stated [anu-5] [?] the eighth and the two following are Triṣṭubh. So it is recorded in the Anukramaṇī: ‘ā no daśa vaiśvadevaṁ tu pañcādyāḥ saptamī ca jagatyaḥ ṣaṣṭhī virāṭsthāna’. In the Agniṣṭoma, in the Vaiśvadeva śastra, this sūkta, with its last Ṛk, is used at the vaiśvadeva-nividhāna; it is the concluding (paridhānīyā) Ṛk of the Vaiśvadeva śastra both in the model and the modified rites. It is prescribed: ‘ā no bhadrāḥ kratavo yantu viśvata — the nine are Vaiśvadeva’ (Āś. [5-18] [?]), and ‘aditir dyaur aditir antarikṣam — one should conclude with this, in every Vaiśvadeva’ (Āś. [5-18] [?]). The Brāhmaṇa says: ‘at once one should conclude with the pañcajanīyā’ (Ai. Brā. [3-10] [?]). At the Mahāvrate, in the niṣkevalya, this sūkta is used; so it is prescribed in the fifth Āraṇyaka: ‘ā no bhadriyaṁ ca tasya sthāne’ (Ai. Brā. [5-3-2] [?]).”

“The sūkta ā no bhadrāḥ is the fifth sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka. There are ten Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama; the deities are the Viśvedevas. The first five Ṛks and the seventh are in the Jagatī metre; the sixth Ṛk, svasti na indro, is in the metre called virāṭsthānā; the three Ṛks from the eighth to the tenth are in the Triṣṭubh metre. In the Anukramaṇī it is said: ‘ā no daśa vaiśvadevaṃ tu pañcādyāḥ saptamī ca jagatyaḥ saṣṭhī virāṭsthānā’. In the Agniṣṭoma sacrifice, at the time of reciting the mantras of the Vaiśvadeva śāstra, this sūkta is to be used, leaving aside its last Ṛk, for the Vaiśvadeva-nividdhāna mantras; and the remaining [last] Ṛk is to be used in the model and modified sacrifices as the paridhāniyā mantra of the Vaiśvadeva śāstra. This is set forth by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra ‘ā no bhadrāḥ kratavo yantu viśvata iti nava vaiśvadevam’ (Āś. [5-18] [?]) and also in ‘aditir dyaaur aditir antarikṣam iti paridadhyāt sarvatra vaiśvadeve’ (Āś. [5-18] [?]). On this there is the word of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa ‘sadyaiva pañcajanīyeyā paridadhyāt’ (Ai. Brā. [3-10] [?]); and, in the Mahāvratā, at the time of reciting the niṣkevalya śāstra mantras this sūkta is applied; the sentence ‘ā no bhadriyaṃ ca tasya sthāne’ of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa’s Pañcamāraṇyaka (Ai. Brā. [5-3-2] [?]) shows it.”

“In the Ṛgveda there are, besides the Ṛks in various places that are addressed to the Viśvedevas, a number of whole sūktas with the Viśvedevas as their deity: in the first maṇḍala, the sūktas numbered [as read] 3, 14, 23, 30, 89, 90, 186 ... [?]; in the second maṇḍala, sūktas 3 and 31; in the third maṇḍala, sūkta 54 [?]; in the fourth maṇḍala, sūkta 55 [?]; in the fifth maṇḍala, sūktas [41, 42, 43 ...] [?]; in the sixth maṇḍala, [49, 50, 51, 52 ...] [?]; in the seventh maṇḍala, [34, 35, 36, 37 ...] [?]; in the eighth maṇḍala, [27, 28, 29, 30 ...] [?]; in the tenth maṇḍala, [56, 57, 58 ... and others] [?] — these sūktas are addressed to the Viśvedevas.” (The long run of sūkta numbers is in small Kannada numerals, read only partly; the above list is the sense and is not given as a verified enumeration [?].)

- अदब्धासः — dambhu dambhe / dambho hiṃsā / adabdhāso 'suraiḥ ahiṃsitāḥ — “not harmed by the Asuras; those by whom the Asuras cannot do harm.”
- अपरीतासः — iṇ gatau / śatrubhir aparigatāḥ — “free from obstruction by enemies; hard for enemies to approach.”
- उद्भिदः — śatrūṇām udbhettāraḥ — “destroyers of enemies. Skandasvāmin explains this word: ‘udbhinnā ity ekāhaḥ, tat prabhṛtayaḥ / athavā udbhindanti phalānity udbhidaḥ / janayitāraḥ phalānām’ — ‘udbhid is a day-sacrifice, one of the ekāhas, and those beginning with it; or those who split forth fruits: producers of fruits.’ So he explains: the one-day sacrifice of the name udbhid, and the like, or ‘those who bring forth the fruit of sacrificial acts’.” (Sanskrit of Skandasvāmin as read, partly clotted [?].)
- सदमित् — sadyaiva — “always, at all times.”
- अप्रायुवः — iṇ gatau / apragacchantaḥ svakīyaṃ rakṣitavyam aparityajantaḥ — “not abandoning the sacrificers they must protect, not neglecting them.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.1) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- यन्तु — the root iṇ gatau, Adādi; loṭ, third person plural; by “झोऽन्तः” the substitute ant; by “एरुः” the u for the i; by “इणो यण्” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[81]) the yaṇ substitute for the i of the root; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.
- अदब्धासः — the root dambhu dambhe; dambha means harm; by “निष्ठा” the affix kta; since “यस्य विभाषा” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[15]) applies, the augment iṭ does not come; by “अनिदितां हल उपधायाः क्ङिति” the loss of the penultimate nasal; na dabdhāḥ adabdhāḥ; in the nañ-tatpuruṣa, by “अव्ययं नञ् कुत्सितापदानाम्” ... the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its accent; in the nominative plural, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk; ru and visarga.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.1, concluded from p. 268 (grammar, noted briefly):

- अपरीतासः — the root iṇ gatau; as before, kta in the passive; pari + ita; first member an indeclinable, as before; asuk in the nominative plural.
- वृधे — the root vṛdha vṛddhau; since it is read in the sampadādi list, by “सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्” the affix kvip in the abstract sense; the word vṛdh; dative singular; since it is a monosyllable, by “सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः” the case-ending is acute.
- असन् — the root as bhuvi; leṭ, third person plural, the affix jhi; by “झोऽन्तः” the substitute ant; by “इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु” the loss of the i; by “लेटोऽडाटौ” the augment aṭ; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of śap does not occur; since it is jit [as printed], śnasor allopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[111]) does not take away the a of the root; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; śap is pit, unaccented; by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्” the lasārvadhātuka is unaccented; the root’s accent: first syllable acute.
- अप्रायुवः — the root iṇ gatau, with the preposition pra before it; by “छन्दसीणः” (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[3]) the affix uṇ in the Samhitā; since it is ṇit, by “अचो ङिति” the vṛddhi of the root; āy-substitution; the word prāyu; na prāyuḥ aprāyuḥ; in the nañ-tatpuruṣa, by “तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थः...” the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its accent; with jas following aprāyu, by “जसादिषु छन्दसि वा वचनम्” the guṇa is optional, and since guṇa does not come here, by its being in the tanvādi list the uvañ substitute; the form aprāyuvaḥ.

Vedic liṭ, pra tirantu — tir with pra in the sense of increasing; Yāska explains (Ni. [12-41] [?]): ‘May we obtain the friendship of the gods; may the gods increase our life for a long life.’” ṅjūyatām — (the gods) desiring the upright sacrificer; devānām — of the gods; bhadrā — worshipful; sumatiḥ — excellent and gracious mind (let it be favourable to us); devānām — of the gods; rātiḥ — generous gift; naḥ — towards us; abhi vartatām — let it turn; vayam — we too; devānām — of those gods...

“...sakhyam — friendship; upa sedima — may we obtain; devāḥ — those gods; naḥ — our; āyurḥ — life; jīvase — that we may live; pra tirantu — let them lengthen.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.2 (Kannada)

“May the worshipful and excellent mind of the gods, who desire a sacrificer who is upright, be favourable to us. May the generous gift of the gods turn towards us. May we too obtain the friendship of those gods. May those gods cause our life to increase.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“May the auspicious favour of the gods be ours; may the bounty of the gods, ever approving of the upright, light upon us; may we obtain the friendship of the gods and may the gods extend our life that we may live.” — as printed.

- देवानां भद्रा सुमतिः — “the mind of the gods that desires to do us good; or their favour.”
- ऋजूयताम् — ṅjūmārjavayuktaṃ samyag anuṣṭhātāraṃ ātmāna icchatām — “those who desire for themselves one who is upright, that is, those who look for sacrificers who begin the rites of sacrifice that are in the way of rectitude. The meaning: the gods approve the sacrifices and chants that the sacrificers perform.”
- रातिः — rā dāne — “the favour or the gifts of the gods, such as wealth and the like.”
- उप सेदिम — śadḥ viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu — “may we obtain, may we gain.”
- प्र तिरन्तु — prapūrvas tiratir vardhanārthaḥ — “let them increase our life. Yāska: ‘devānāṃ āyurḥ pravardhayitum ciraṃ jīvanāya’ (Ni. [12-41] [?]) — so he says: may the gods increase our life, that we may live for a long time.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.2) (grammar page, noted briefly; begins here)

- भद्रा — the root bhadi kalyāṇe sukhe ca; by “ऋजेन्द्राग्रवज्र...” (Uṇ. Sū. 2-[28] [?]) ran is fixed by nipātana; by vyatyaya the final acute; in the feminine, by “अजाद्यतष्टाप्” the affix ṭāp; for the nominative singular su, by “हल्ङ्याब्भ्यो...” the loss.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.2, continued (grammar, noted briefly; numerals as read [?]):

- ऋजूयताम् — ṛjum ātmana icchati in the sense; by “सुप आत्मनः क्यच्” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-8) the affix kyac after the subanta ṛju; by “अकृत्सार्वधातुकयोर्दीर्घः” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-25) the lengthening of the a of kyac since a following ... (the y is the occasion, hence the lengthening of the preceding aṅga); by “सनाद्यन्ता धातवः” it gets the designation of a root; in the present sense, the affix śatṛ; śap; by “अतो गुणे” the pararūpa; the word ṛjūyat; genitive plural; since it lacks num, when the ajādi case-ending follows, by “शतुरनुमो नद्यजादी” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[173]) the case-ending ām is acute.
- रातिः — the root rā dāne; by “स्त्रियां क्तिन्” the affix ktin in the abstract sense; since it would be first-syllable acute, by “मन्त्रे वृषेषपचमनविदभूवीरा उदात्तः” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[96]) the affix ktin is acute.
- वर्तताम् — the root vṛtu vartane; loṭ, third person singular, the affix ta; by “आमेतः” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[90]) the substitute ām for the e of the affix, which came by the ṭit; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- सख्यम् — sakhyuḥ bhāvaḥ sakhyam; by “सख्युर्यः” (Pā. Sū. 4-1-[126]) the affix ya in the abstract sense or the sense of action; by “यस्येति च” the loss of the i; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- सेदिम — the root ṣadḥ viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu; by “छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः” in the sense of prayer, liṭ; by “धात्वादेः षः सः” the s for the ṣ; since liṭ is the occasion, the root is reduplicated, and here, since no substitute at the start of the root appears, by “अत एकहल्मध्येऽनादेशादेर्लिटि” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[120]) the e for the a of the root and the loss of the reduplicate, the root standing between two single consonants [s...d]; for the first-person plural mas the augment iṭ; by “अन्येषामपि दृश्यते” the lengthening of the final in the Samhitā.
- प्र तिरन्तु — the root tira [tṛ] with the preposition pra has the sense of increasing; Yāska explains it in just this way: ‘devānāṃ sakhyam upasedima vayaṃ devā na āyuḥ pravardhayantu ciraṃ jīvanāya’ (Ni. [12-41] [?]) — ‘may we obtain the friendship of the gods; may the gods increase our life, for living long’; laṭ [as printed, in the sense of loṭ], third person plural; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- जीवसे — in the sense of tumun, by “तुमर्थे सेसेनसे...” the affix ase.

Translation: “Those all-gods we invoke with the ancient, eternal nivid, i.e. speech of the nature of the Veda (nivid is a name of speech); or with the Vaiśvadeva nivid beginning ‘viśve devāḥ somasya matsan’. ‘The gods’ being said in general, it is now made specific. Bhagam — the one to be resorted to, one of the twelve Ādityas; Mitra — the deity presiding over the day, the saviour from death (‘the day belongs to Mitra’, Tai. Brā. [1-2-10-1] [?]); Aditi — the unbroken, the mother of the gods; Dakṣa — Prajāpati, able to make the whole world; or Hiraṇyagarbha, pervading all living things as breath (‘breath is Dakṣa’ — Śruti); Asridh — not liable to wasting, always in one form: the Marut host; Aryaman — he who restrains enemies, Asuras like the Mandehas — the sun (‘that Āditya is Aryaman’); Varuṇa — the deity presiding over night, who binds evildoers with his nooses (‘Night is Varuṇa’s’); Soma — dividing himself into two, living on earth as the plant and in heaven as the moon; the Aśvins — possessed of horses, or pervading all; Yaska says (Ni. [12-1] [?]): ‘the Aśvins — because one pervades all with moisture, the other with light; [or] with horses; [some say] heaven and earth; some, day and night; some, sun and moon; the historians say, two virtuous kings.’ All such gods we invoke for our protection. May Sarasvatī, invoked by us, endowed with fine wealth, make mayas — happiness — for us. Grammar tail, noted briefly: hūmahe — hve with saṁprasāraṇa by ‘bahulam chandasī’, lengthening; asridham — sridhu śoṣaṇe with kvip; first member nañ keeps...; mayaskarat — leṭṭ of kṛ with aḥ, śap elided, s for the visarga.”

(Correction of the layout note: the bhāṣya of 89.3 begins on p. 273 and breaks off at “asau vā ādityo...”; it continues on p. 274, where the passages on Aryaman, Varuṇa, Soma and the Āsvins, with Yāska’s quotation, and the grammatical tail (hūmahe, asridham, mayaskarat) stand. The whole bhāṣya is given above in one piece, as read across the two pages.)

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 89.3) (Kannada)

vayam — we; bhagam — Bhaga; mitram — Mitra; aditim — Aditi; dakṣam — Dakṣa; asridham — Asridh (the Maruts); aryamaṇam — Aryaman; varuṇam — Varuṇa; somam — Soma; āsvinā — the two Āsvin deities; tān — all these deities; pūrvayā — of ancient times (eternal); nividā — by speech that is the Veda; hūmahe — we invoke with prayer; subhagā — endowed with fine wealth; sarasvatī — Sarasvatī; naḥ — for us; mayāḥ — happiness; karat — let her make.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.3 (Kannada)

“We gather the whole group of gods — Bhaga, Mitra, Aditi, Dakṣa, Asridh (the Maruts), Aryaman, Varuṇa, Soma and the Āsvin deities — and invoke them with the eternal Vedic speech. May Sarasvatī, endowed with fine wealth, make happiness for us.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“We invoke them with an ancient speech Bhaga, Mitra, Aditi, Dakṣa, Asridh, Aryaman, Varuṇa, Soma, the Aswins; and may the gracious Saraswati grant us happiness.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.3)

- निविदा — “among the seven names of speech — ślokaḥ, dhārā and the rest — the word nivid is read; so nividā means ‘with speech’, ‘with Vedic speech’ (Ni. [? -?] [?]); or with the mantra called nivid used at the recitation of the Vaiśvadeva śāstra.”
- भगम् — bhajanīyam — “fit to be resorted to; or one among the twelve Ādityas.”
- मित्रम् — “Mitra is the deity of the day. On this matter there is a Śruti sentence ‘maitraṁ vā ahaḥ’ (‘the day is Mitra’s’) (Tai. Brā. [1-2-10-1] [?]). Yāska on this word: ‘mitraḥ pramīter trāyate saṁmitrāno dravatīti vā | medayater vā’ — the deity is called Mitra because he saves from death, or because, uniting, he runs, or from medayati (‘to love’). Or, since he sprinkles well in the atmosphere rain-water and makes everything moist, he is called Mitra: ‘he who wets all with water is Mitra.’ As an example of this meaning he gives:

That is, of the female deities of the middle region (the atmospheric deities), Aditi is the first; Aditi means ‘the mother of the gods, who is not diminished’. And on the matter of Aditi’s greatness —

— Yāska says ‘ityaditer vibhūtim ācaṣṭe | enā nasyādīnā iti vā’ (Ni. Special Topics of Rik 89.3, continued from p. 275:

“...since he pervades all beings in the form of breath, he may also be called Hiraṇyagarbha. Yāska has given another meaning of the word dakṣa:

आदित्यो दक्ष इत्याहुरादित्यमध्ये च स्तुतः ॥ ādityo dakṣa ity āhur ādityamadhye ca stutaḥ // (Ni. [11-23] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “They say that the Āditya is Dakṣa; and he is praised among the Ādityas.”

— dakṣa is also a name of an Āditya, for Dakṣa is counted among the twelve Ādityas. As an example he gave the Ṛk — aditer dakṣo ajāyata dakṣād v aditiḥ pari // (R. Saṃ. 10-72-4) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “From Aditi Dakṣa was born, and from Dakṣa Aditi [was born] besides.”

अदितेर्दक्षो अजायत दक्षाद्वदितिः परि ॥

- अर्यमणम् — arīn mandehādīn asurān pracchati niyacchatīty aryamā sūryaḥ — “since this deity restrains enemies, Asuras by the name of Mandehas and others, he is called Aryaman. ‘asau vā ādityo ’ryamā’ — ‘that Āditya is Aryaman’ — says a Śruti sentence: Aryaman is the sun, one of the twelve Ādityas.”
- असिधम् — śoṣaṇarahitaṁ sarvadaikarūpeṇa vartamānaṁ marudgaṇam — “the Marut host, which does not dry up and is ever in one form.”
- वरुणम् — vṛṇoti pāpakṛtaḥ svakiyaiḥ pāśair āvṛṇotīti rātryabhimānidevo varuṇaḥ | śrūyate ca | vāruṇī rātriḥ (Tai. Brā. [1-2-10-1] [?]) — “one who encloses the evildoers with his nooses; and there is a Śruti sentence that this Varuṇa is the deity of the night.”
- सोमम् — dvedhātmanāṁ vibhajya pṛthivyāṁ latārūpeṇa divi ca candrātmanā devatārūpeṇa vartamānam — “the deity Soma, who has divided himself into two and exists on earth in the form of the creeper called Soma and in heaven (the atmosphere) in the form of the deity called the moon.”
- अश्विना — aśvināśvavantau | yadvā sarvaṁ vyāpnuvantau — “‘possessed of horses’, hence the name aśvinī-deities; or those who pervade everything. Yāska:

अश्विनौ यद्व्यश्नुवाते सर्वं रसेनान्यो ज्योतिषान्यः । अश्वैरश्विनावित्यौर्णवाभः ।

[12-1] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “The Aśvins — because the one pervades all with moisture, the other with light; [or], says Aurnavābha, ‘with horses’. Who are the two Aśvins? Some say heaven and earth; some, day and night; some, sun and moon; the historians say, two virtuous kings.”

That is, since the Aśvin deities pervade all with water, they are called Aśvins, say some; others, since they pervade everything with light; the sage Aurnavābha says they are called Aśvins because they have horses. Who are these Aśvin deities? Some say heaven and earth, some day and night, some sun and moon; the historians say two kings who did meritorious deeds.” -
सरस्वती — “As to the deity Sarasvatī, see what we have written at length in R. Saṁ. Part 3, pp. 69–77.” - मयः — “among the twenty-seven names of happiness — śaṁbhūḥ, śatarā and the rest — the word mayāḥ is read; so mayāḥ means happiness (Ni. [3-6] [?]).”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.3) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- हमहे — the root hveñ spardhāyāṁ śabde ca; laṭ, first person plural, the affix mahiñ; by “टित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे” the e; by “ह्रः सम्प्रसारणम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[32]) hvaḥ running on, by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the saṁprasāraṇa of the root; by “सम्प्रसारणाच्च” the earlier form; when hu + mahe, by “हलः” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[2]) the lengthening of the saṁprasāraṇa vowel that stands before a consonant [as read: aṅgasya halaḥ ...]; so the u is lengthened; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of śap; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.3, continued from p. 276 (grammar, noted briefly):

- अस्रिधम् — the root sridhu śoṣaṇe; since it is read in the sampadādi list, by “सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्” the affix kvip in the abstract sense; the word sridh; na vidyate sridh yasya sa asridh — in the bahuvrīhi compound, by “नञ्सुभ्याम्” the final syllable of the latter member is acute; accusative singular.
- अश्विना — the word aśvin; in the dual after it, by “सुपां सुलुक्” the substitute ā for the case-ending.
- मयस्करत् — mayāḥ karat; the root ḥukṛñ karaṇe; leṭ, third person singular, the affix tip; by “इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[97]) the loss of its i; by “लेटोऽडाटौ” the augment aṭ; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of the vikaraṇa u; by “सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः” the guṇa of the ik of the root because of the affix; mayāḥ + karat, when the jihvāmūliya would come... Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.3, concluded from p. 277:

- मयस्करत् (cont.) — “...it comes; but by” अतः कृकमिकंसकुम्भपात्रकुशाकर्णीष्वनव्ययस्य” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[46]) since a precedes, the s for the visarga; in mayaskarat by “तिङ्ङितिङः” the nighāta accent for the tiñanta.”

that is the meaning. Grammar tail, noted briefly: mayobhu — short for the base in the neuter (Pā. 1-2-[47] [?]); vātu — vā gatigandhanayoḥ, loṭ in the sense of prayer, with the sense of ṇic contained; somasutaḥ — kvip in the past sense after su with some (Pā. 3-2-[90] [?]); dhiṣṇyā — ya after dhiṣaṇā in the sense ‘worthy’, Vedic loss of a letter; the dual ending ā by ‘supām suluk’.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 89.4) (Kannada)

vātaḥ — the wind; mayobhu — giving happiness; tat bheṣajam — that remedy; naḥ — to us; vātu — bringing, may it reach; mātā — the mother of all; pṛthivī — the earth; tat — that remedy (may she bring us); pitā — the protector of all; dyauḥ — the world of heaven; tat — that remedy; somasutaḥ — those who press Soma; mayobhuvaḥ — giving happiness; grāvāṇaḥ — the pressing stones; tat — that remedy; dhiṣṇyā — O Ásvins deities, fit to be meditated on; yuvam — you too; śṛṇutam — hear (our prayer for that remedy).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.4 (Kannada)

“May the wind bring that remedy that gives happiness to us. May the earth, mother of all, and heaven, the protector, and the pressing stones that give happiness and press Soma bring us that remedy. O Ásvins deities, worthy of meditation, you too hear our prayer for that remedy.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“May the wind waft to us the grateful medicament; may mother earth, may father heaven, convey it to us; may the stones that express the Soma-juice and are productive of pleasure bring it to us; Aswins, who are to be meditated upon hear our prayer.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.4)

- मयोभु — sukhasya bhāvayitr — “that which makes happiness.”
- तद्भेषजम् — “‘that remedy’, meaning the remedy by which we have happiness. Since only the word tat is here, the word yat must be supplied. The bhāṣyakāra has given no explanation for the word bheṣaja; other meanings than ‘medicine’ may be given to the word bheṣaja.” (continues on p. 280)

- माता पृथिवी पिता द्यौः — “The practice of calling the earth ‘mother’ and heaven (dyauḥ) ‘father’ is special to the Ṛgveda. Since the earth produces grain and the like, and the sky (the atmosphere) pours rain, both nourish the beings in the world — that is the intention.”
- ग्रावाणः सोमसुतः — “the stones used for crushing the Soma creeper.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.4) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- मयोभु — mayasaḥ bhūḥ mayobhūḥ; the root bhū sattāyām; after the ṇijanta, the affix kvip; by “णेरनिटि” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[51]) the loss of ṇi; when mayobhū, by “ह्रस्वो नपुंसके प्रातिपदिकस्य” (Pā. Sū. 1-2-[47]) the shortening in the neuter; since it is supara, by “स्वमोर्नपुंसकात्” the luk of su; by “गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्” the base accent of the kṛdutarapada.
- वातु — the root vā gatigandhanayoḥ, Adādi; when the sense of ṇic (impelling) is contained in the root, loṭ in the sense of prayer; by “एरुः” the u for the i; by “अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः” the luk of śap; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.

- सोमसुतः — the root ṣuñ abhiṣave; by “धात्वादेः षः सः” the s for the initial; by “सोमे सृजः” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[90]) the affix kvip in the past sense, since soma is the object [upapada]; since kvip is pit, by “ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक्” the augment tuk after the u; the word somasut; by “गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्” the base accent of the kṛdutarapada; nominative plural.
- अश्विना — for the nominative dual, by “सुपां सुलुक्” the substitute ā.
- शृणुतम् — the root śru śravaṇe; loṭ, second person dual; by “तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः” the substitute tam; by “श्रुवः शृ च” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[74]) the śnu vikaraṇa and ṣṛ for the root; by “ऋवर्णान्नस्य णत्वं वाच्यम्” the ṇ for the n; since “सार्वधातुकमपित्” makes the affix nit, the guṇa does not come; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.4, concluded from p. 280:

- धिष्या — the word dhiṣaṇā; to it, in the sense ‘worthy of it’, by “छन्दसि च” (Pā. Sū. 5-1-[67]) the affix ya; by the Vedic omission of a letter, the a after ṇ is lost; in the vocative dual, by “सुपां सुलुक्” the substitute ā; by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta accent.
- युवम् — the word yuṣmad; after it, since the nominative dual follows, by “जसः प्रथमयोः” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[28]) the substitute am; by “युवावौ द्विवचने” the substitutes yuvā for the portion of the base up to m; by “प्रथमायाश्च द्विवचने भाषायाम्” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[88]) the ātva [= long ā] is stated for the spoken language, so it does not come in the Chandas; by “शेषे लोपः” the loss of the portion after m.

English Translation (printed in English in the source; runs to p. 283)

“We invoke that lord of living beings, that protector of things immovable, Indra, who is to be propitiated by pious rites for our protection; as Pushan has ever been our defender for the increase of our riches, [so he] may continue to be the unmolested guardian of our welfare.” — as printed (“as Pushan...” at the head of p. 283).

“In the first half of this Ṛk Indra is praised, in the latter half Pūṣan.”

- जगतः तस्थुषः पतिम् — jagato jaṅgamasya prāṇijātasya | tasthuṣaḥ sthāvarasya — “lord of the class of living beings that move, and of the stationary trees, mountains and the like.”
- ईशानम् — īśa aiśvarye — “Indra, who has lordship.”
- वेदसाम् — “among the twenty-eight names of wealth — maghaṁ, reknaḥ and the rest — the word vedas is read; so vedasām means ‘of riches’ (Ni. [2-10] [?]).”
- धियंजिन्वम् — “dhī is a word for ‘work’; jivi prīṇanārthaḥ — to be pleased with works; fit to be satisfied with sacrificial works and the like.”
- पायुः — pā rakṣaṇe | rakṣitā — “protector, guardian.”
- स्वस्तये — avināśāya — “for non-destruction, for welfare, for the bringing of what is good or auspicious, for our welfare (English, as printed).”

- तस्थुषः — the root ṣṭhā gatinivṛtau; liṭ follows, and by “क्वसुश्च” the affix kvasu for it; the root is reduplicated; by “शर्पूर्वाः खयः” in the reduplicate the th is kept; by “अभ्यासे चर्च” the substitute t for th; by “आर्धधातुकस्येड्वलादेः” the augment iṭ for the affix beginning with v; by “आतो लोप इटि च” the loss of the ā of the root; the word tasthivas; with nas following, by “वसोः सम्प्रसारणम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[131]) the saṁprasāraṇa of the v; by “सम्प्रसारणाच्च” the earlier form; by “आङ्गं...” [as read: āṇṭavyūhāḥ] since the iṭ has been lost with the saṁprasāraṇa, the iṭ-augment does not come; by “शासिवसिघसीनां च” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[60]) the ṣatva for the s of vas; tasthuṣ + as, by “षष्ठ्याः पतिपुत्र..." (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[53]) since pati follows, the s for the visarga [tasthuṣaḥ patim, with the visarga turned to s].

- धियंजिन्वम् — the root jivi prīṇanārthaḥ; by “कृत्यल्युटो बहुलम्” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[113]) since bahula is stated, the affix khac; by “इदितो नुम् धातोः” ... (continues on p. 284)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.5, concluded from p. 283 (grammar, noted briefly):

- धियंजिन्वम् (cont.) — “...the augment num for the root; by “इच एकाचोऽम्प्रत्ययवच्च” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[68]) the augment am for the first member ending in ik that is a monosyllable, before a khit-affix word; it comes like the ām of a case-ending; by “विभक्तिभाव...” the am for the word dhi; by “अचि श्नुधातुभुवां...” the substitute iy for the i; the word dhiyaṁjinva has the final acute by “चितः”.
- अवसे — the root ava rakṣaṇe; the affix asun; since it is nit, the first syllable is acute; dative singular.
- हूमहे — as explained under the third Rk.
- असत् — the root as bhuvi; leṭ, third person singular, the affix tip; by “इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु” the loss of its i; by “लेटोऽडाटौ” the augment aṭ; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of śap does not come; so the a of śap is not elided; since “निपातैर्यदादि...” (Pā. Sū. 8-1-[30]) yathā is in connexion, the nighāta is prevented, so the root’s accent remains.
- वृधे — the root vṛdhu vṛddhau; the affix kvip; the word vṛdh; dative singular.
- पायुः — the root pā rakṣaṇe; by “कृवापाजिमिस्वदिसाध्यशूभ्य उण्” (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[1]) the affix uṇ; by “आतो युक् चिण्कृतोः” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-[33]) the augment yuk after the ā; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- स्वस्तये — the root as bhuvi; since su precedes, to it in the abstract sense the affix ktin; although the root, since the affix is ārdhadhātuka, ought to take bhū by “अस्तेभूः” (Pā. Sū. 2-4-[52]), since by “छन्दस्युभयथा” the affix has sārvadhātuka status too, the bhū substitution does not come; the author of the Vṛtti gives this very solution.

Translation: “Vṛddhaśravāḥ — one whose śravas — hearing, praise, or food in the form of oblation — is abundant: such an Indra, for us; svasti is a name for ‘non-destruction’ (Ni. [3-21] [?]): may he grant (dadhātu, vidadhātu) welfare. Viśvavedāḥ — he who knows all things; or whose vedas — knowledge, wealth — are all: such Pūṣan, the nourishing god, may grant us welfare. Ariṣṭanemiḥ — nemi is a name of weapon; he whose nemi is unharmed; or nemi is the rim of a chariot wheel — he whose chariot’s rim is not injured: such Tārksya, son of Tṛkṣa, Garutmān, may grant us welfare. Likewise Bṛhaspati, the guardian of the great gods, may grant us welfare. Grammar tail, noted briefly: vṛddhaśravāḥ — bahuvrīhi, first member keeps its accent; viśvavedāḥ — vedas from vid with asun; tārksyaḥ — yañ after tṛkṣa in the gargādi group (Pā. 4-1-[105] [?]); bṛhaspatiḥ — suṭ and loss of t by ‘tadbṛhatoḥ karapatyoḥ...’ (Pā. 6-1-[157] [?]); both members keep their accent by ‘ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu’.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 89.6) (Kannada; runs on to p. 286)

vṛddhaśravāḥ — endowed with abundant praise, or with food in the form of oblation; indraḥ — Indra; naḥ — to us; svasti — imperishable welfare; dadhātu — let him make; viśvavedāḥ — knowing all, or possessing all knowledge; pūṣā — Pūṣan; naḥ — to us; svasti — welfare (make); ariṣṭanemiḥ — with unbent weapons, or with a chariot wheel that is not broken; tārksyaḥ — Tārksya (Garutmān)...

Pratipadārtha of Rik 89.6, concluded: “...naḥ — to us; svasti — welfare (make); bṛhaspatiḥ — Bṛhaspati, the protector of the gods; naḥ — to us; svasti — let him make welfare.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.6 (Kannada)

“May Indra, who has abundant food in the form of oblation, Pūṣan, who has the power of knowing all, Garutmān with his unbent weapons, and Bṛhaspati, the protector of the gods, make for us imperishable welfare.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“May Indra, who listens to much praise guard our welfare; may Pushan who knows all things guard our welfare; may Tarkshya with uninjured fellows, and Brihaspati the protector of gods (lord of prayer) guard our welfare.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.6)

- वृद्धश्रवाः — vṛddhaṁ prabhūtaṁ śravaḥ śravaṇaṁ stotraṁ havirlakṣaṇam annaṁ vā yasya — “one who listens to the many stotras we make, or accepts the food in the form of oblation that we offer.”
 - विश्ववेदाः — viśvāni vetti iti viśvavedāḥ — “one who knows everything.”
 - पूषा — “the deity Pūṣan is the deity who shows the way. In many Ṛks Pūṣan is prayed to, to show the right path to those who pray. Since pūṣan is among the names of the twelve Ādityas, it means the sun too.”
 - तार्क्ष्यः — “son of Tṛkṣa; the bhāṣyakāra gives the meaning garutmān — Garuḍa. This word too points to the Āditya. Some say tṛkṣa is Kaśyapa; since he is his son the Āditya is called Tārṁkṣya. Some think that this is a ‘horse of the world of the gods’ and that the sun himself is praised in this form. Some say he is the son of a Tṛkṣi, a descendant of Trasadasyu. In the khila mantras too (Ṛ. Saṁ. [?]; Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [?]) the word tārṁkṣya is meant to indicate a bird or a special kind of bird; the sense of the word is doubtful. Sūkta 10-[178] of the Ṛg. Saṁ. is addressed to Tārṁkṣya.” (numerals read with doubt [?])
 - अरिष्टनेमिः — rathacakrasya dhārā nemiḥ | ariṣṭo 'hiṁsito nemir yasya | yatsambandhino rathasya nemir na hiṁsyate so 'riṣṭanemiḥ — “‘nemi’ is the wheel of a chariot: he whose wheel-rim is not injured, that is, one whose chariot wheels are free from obstruction, unimpeded in motion. Skandasvāmin gives the meaning ‘thunderbolt-weapon’ for the word nemi. Ariṣṭanemi may also be the name of a sage, a son of Tṛkṣa (Ṛ. Saṁ. 10-[178] [?]).” (the entry continues on p. 287)

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.6) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- वृद्धश्रवाः — vṛddhaṁ śravo yasya sa vṛddhaśravāḥ; in the bahuvrihi, by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member’s base accent, the accent of the compound being set aside.
- विश्ववेदाः — the root vida jñāne, or vid/lābhe; by “सर्वधातुभ्योऽसुन” the affix asun; by “पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च” the guṇa of the laghūpadha because of this affix; the word vedas; viśvāni sarvāṇi vedāṁsi jñānāni yasya saḥ viśvavedāḥ, a bahuvrihi; by “विश्वं संज्ञायाम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[106]) since the word has the status of a name of a deity, the final syllable of the first member is acute.
- तार्क्ष्यः — tṛkṣasya apatyam tārṁkṣyaḥ; by “गर्गादिभ्यो यञ्” (Pā. Sū. 4-1-[105]) since it is read in the gargādi group, the affix yañ in the sense of descendant (son); since it is ñit, by “तद्धितेष्वचामादेः” the vṛddhi of the first vowel; by “उरण् रपरः” with r; by “ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्” the first syllable acute.

- अरिष्टनेमिः — na riṣṭāḥ ariṣṭāḥ; a nañ-tatpuruṣa; by “तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थः...” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[2]) the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its base accent; ariṣṭā nemir yasya saḥ ariṣṭanemiḥ, a bahuvrihi; by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member’s base accent.
- बृहस्पतिः — bṛhatāṁ patiḥ; by “तद्बृहतोः करपत्योश्चोरदेवतयोः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[157]) the augment suṭ and, in the words bṛhat and pati, the loss of t [bṛhaspati, with the t of bṛhat lost and the s inserted] in the sense of ‘thief’ and ‘deity’ respectively; by “उभे वनस्पत्यादिषु युगपत्” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[140]) the compound-accent is set aside and both members, former and latter, keep their base accent at once.
- दधातु — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, Juhotyādi; loṭ in the sense of prayer; by “एरुः” the substitute tu for ti; by śnu-ślu the root is reduplicated; the reduplicate shortened; jaś; the nighāta of the tiñanta.

॥ विशेषविषयगल्ल ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.7)

- पृषदश्वाः — pṛṣatyaḥ aśvā yeṣāṃ te pṛṣadaśvāḥ — “those whose horses are does with white spots. The vehicles of the Marut deities are called pṛṣatī: ‘pṛṣatyō marutām’ (Ni. [?·?] [?]) — so the Nirukta says.”
- पृश्निमातरः — pṛśnir nānāvarṇā gaur mātā — “sons of the cow of many colours; or, as Skandasvāmin says, ‘Pṛśni is heaven, she is the mother’. It may be said too that they are sons of the atmosphere. For a detailed meaning of the word pṛśnimātaraḥ see R. Saṃ. Part 3, pp. 179–180.”
- शुभंयावानः — śubhaṃ śobhanaṃ yānti gacchantīti śubhaṃ yāvānaḥ — “of beautiful going. Skandasvāmin: ‘śubham ity udakam | tadarthaṃ meghān prati gantāraḥ’ — ‘śubham is water: those who go to the clouds for water’ — [so he gives the sense ‘going to the clouds, for the sake of water’]. Śubha means water; since for water — for the purpose of rain — they go to the neighbourhood of the clouds, the Maruts have the name śubhaṃ yāvānaḥ.” (the sentence runs on to p. 290)

- अग्निजिह्वाः — agner jihvāyāṃ vartamānāḥ | sarve hi devā haviḥsvikaraṇyāḥ agner jihvāyāṃ vartante — “all the gods are on Agni’s tongue for the sake of receiving the oblation: they make homa in the fire so that the oblations offered reach the deities; hence it is the usage to say that the gods are on the tongue of Agni. Skandasvāmin: ‘agnau prakṣiptaṃ havir devā aśnanti tenaiṣāṃ agnir jihvāsthānīyaḥ | vakṣyamāṇānāṃ viśveṣāṃ devānāṃ etad viśeṣaṇaṃ na marutām’ — ‘the gods eat the oblation put in the fire; so for them Agni is as the tongue. This is an epithet of the Viśvedevas that will be named below, not of the Maruts.’ A few Rks in which the word agnijihvāḥ occurs are given as examples —

शृण्वन्तु सोमं मरुतः सुदानवोऽग्निजिह्वा ऋतावृधः ॥

śṛṇvantu somaṃ marutaḥ sudānavo ’gnijihvā ṛtāvṛdhaḥ // (R. Saṃ. [1·?·?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “May the bountiful Maruts, the fire-tongued, the strengtheners of Law, hear [drink] the Soma.”

इमं स्तोमं रोदसी प्र ब्रवीम्यृदूदराः शृणवन्नग्निजिह्वाः ॥ imaṃ stomaṃ rodasī pra bravīmy ṛdūdarāḥ śṛṇavann agnijihvāḥ // (R. Saṃ. [?·?·?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “This praise I proclaim to heaven and earth; may the soft-bellied, fire-tongued ones hear.”

ये अग्निजिह्वा ऋतसाप आसुर्ये मनुं चक्रुरपरं दसाय ॥ ye agnijihvā ṛtasāpa āsur ye manuṃ cakrur uparaṃ dasāya // (R. Saṃ. [6-?-?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “They who were fire-tongued, bound to the Law, who made Manu [the superior] for the lower one...” (the second half is read with doubt [?])

द्विजन्मानो य ऋतसापः सत्याः स्वर्वन्तो यजता अग्निजिह्वाः ॥ dvijanmāno ya ṛtasāpaḥ satyāḥ svarvanto yajatā agnijihvāḥ // (R. Saṃ. [?-?-?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “Twice-born, bound to the Law, true, possessed of light, worthy of worship, fire-tongued.”

ये अग्निजिह्वा उत वा यजत्रा आसद्यास्मिन् बर्हिषि मादयध्वम् ॥ ye agnijihvā uta vā yajatrā āsadyāsmiṃ barhiṣi mādayadhvam // (R. Saṃ. [?-?-?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “You who are fire-tongued, or worshipful, sit upon this sacred grass and rejoice.”

बहवः सूरचक्षसोऽग्निजिह्वा ऋतावृधः ॥ bahavaḥ sūracakṣaso 'gnijihvā ṛtāvṛdhaḥ // (R. Saṃ. [?-?-?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “Many, sun-eyed, fire-tongued, strengthening the Law.”

दिवक्षसो अग्निजिह्वा ऋतावृध ऋतस्य योना क्षयथः सम्योकसा ॥ divakṣaso agnijihvā ṛtāvṛdha ṛtasya yonā kṣayathaḥ samokasā // (R. Saṃ. [10-?-?] [?]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “Heaven-dwelling, fire-tongued, strengtheners of the Law, you two dwell together in the seat of the Law.”

— the word agnijihvāḥ is used only in these Rks; it occurs nowhere else.” (The seven citations are given as read; all R̥gveda reference numerals here are small and doubtful [?].)

- मनवः — mantāraḥ jñātāraḥ — “those who have knowledge.”
- सूरचक्षसः — sūryasyeva cakṣur darśanaṃ yeṣāṃ te — “those who have brilliance like the shining of the sun.”

- पृषदश्वाः — pṛṣadbhiḥ yuktāḥ aśvāḥ yeṣāṃ te pṛṣadaśvāḥ, a bahuvrīhi; by “बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्” the first member keeps its base accent. In the same way the accent comes in pṛṣnimātaraḥ.

- शुभंयावानः — the root yā prāpaṇe; by “आतो मनिन्क्वनिब्वनिपश्च” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[74]) the affix vanip, since the root ends in ā; the word yāvan; śubhaṃ yānti iti śubhaṃ yāvānaḥ; by “तत्पुरुषे कृति बहुलम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[14]) the word bahula is included, so the luk of the accusative case-ending does not occur in the compound; by “गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्” the base accent of the kṛdutarapada.
- जग्मयः — the root gam/gatau; by “आद्गमहनजनः किकिनौ लिट् च” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[171]) the affix kin; by the statement that liṭ-like status holds, the root is reduplicated; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; by “कुहोश्चुः” cutva; by “गमहनजन...” the loss of the penultimate because the affix is kit; the word jagmi; in the nominative plural with jas following, by “जसि च” the guṇa; ay-substitution; since the affix is nit, the first syllable is acute.
- अवसा — the root ava rakṣaṇe; the affix asun; the word avas; instrumental singular.
- गमन् — the root gam/gatau; since the sense is a prayer, leṭ, third person plural, the affix jhi; by “झोऽन्तः” the substitute ant; by “इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु” the loss of the i; by “लेटोऽडाटौ” the augment aṭ; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of śap; since it is luk, the bhāva does not come; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta; by “संयोगान्तस्य लोपः” the loss of the final t.

Closing of Rik 89.7: “॥ ७ ॥” (7), followed by a printer’s ornament.

Translation (of the application note): “At the third pressing there is a Saumya cooked oblation (caru). Having sacrificed with that caru to the deity, and the whole having been offered, he is to take the well-offered ghee in it and look at his own reflection in it, made with the vaṣaṭ-call prescribed in the section tvaṃ soma: ‘rājñā somena tad vāyam asmāsu dhārayāmasi’ and ‘bhadrāṃ karṇebhiḥ śṛṇuyāma devāḥ’ (Āś. [5-18] [?]). At the Mahānāmni vow, this Ṛk is to be Translation: “O gods, endowed with qualities such as generosity — all gods — may we hear with our ears bhadram, what is auspicious, to be resorted to; may we be able to hear what concerns you; may deafness never befall us. O worshipful ones (yajatrāḥ), you to be worshipped in sacrifices with caru, puroḍāśa and so on: may we see with our eyes (akṣabhiḥ) what is good — may we be able to see; may no obstruction of our sight occur. Endowed with firm limbs — hands, feet and the like — and with bodies, we, praising you, vyāśema — may attain the life of one hundred and sixteen, or one hundred and twenty, years — devahitam, appointed by Prajāpati, the god. Grammar tail, noted briefly: karṇebhiḥ — no ais for bhis by ‘bahulam chandasi’; akṣabhiḥ — anaṇ, acute; yajatrāḥ — atran after yaj; tuṣṭuvāṃsaḥ — kvasu for liṭ of ṣṭuñ; aśema — aśū vyāptau, benedictive; devahitam — first member keeps its accent.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 89.8) (Kannada)

devāḥ — O gods endowed with the qualities of generosity and the rest; karṇebhiḥ — with our ears; bhadram — a message of the nature of good; śṛṇuyāma — may we be able to hear; yajatrāḥ — O gods worthy of worship in sacrifices; akṣabhiḥ — with our eyes; bhadram — what is auspicious; paśyema — may we be able to see; sthiraiḥ — firm; aṅgaiḥ — with the limbs, hands, feet and so on; tanūbhiḥ — with bodies as well; tuṣṭuvāṃsaḥ — praising you; yat āyuḥ — which fixed measure of life; devahitam — which has been ordained by Prajāpati — that; vyāśema — may we enjoy (experience).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.8 (Kannada)

“O gods worthy of worship in sacrifices, grant that we may be able to hear with our ears a message of the nature of good, and be able to see with our eyes only what is auspicious; and grant that, praising you with our bodies made of firm limbs, we may experience the measure of life ordained by Prajāpati.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“O Gods, let us hear with our ears what is good; objects of sacrifice, let us see with our eyes what is good; engaged in your praises let us enjoy with firm limbs and sound bodies the term of life granted by the gods.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.8)

“In the Saumya offering at the third pressing, the practice is to make an oblation to the Soma deity by vaśaṭ-call, in the fire. After making the oblation to the deity, with the remaining ghee, the sacrificer, having poured tuppa [ghee] in abundance, is to look at his own reflection in it. If his own reflection is not clearly seen in that ghee, then this Rk bhadraṁ karṇebhiḥ, which is relevant here, is to be recited, as it is pointed out in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section tvaṁ soma, by the sūtra ‘rājñā somena tad vayam asmāsu dhārayāmasi bhadraṁ karṇebhiḥ śṛṇuyāma devā iti ca’ (Āś. [5-18] [?]). Also, at the Mahānāmni vrata, when touching the earth, this Rk is to be muttered; it is set forth in the section etad vidam by the sūtra ‘bhadraṁ karṇebhiḥ śṛṇuyāma devāḥ śaṁ na indrāgni bhavatām avobhiḥ’ (Āś. [8-14] [?]).” (this entry runs on to p. 294)

Special Topics of Rik 89.8, continued from p. 293:

- भद्रम् — “‘good’, ‘an auspicious matter’. When the word bhadram is construed with the verb śṛṇuyāma it must be taken as ‘an auspicious message, or word’; when it is joined with the verb paśyema it must be taken as ‘auspicious things (events)’.”
- यजत्राः — yāgeṣu ca puroḍāśādibhir yaṣṭavyā devāḥ — “gods who are worshipped in sacrifices with substances such as puroḍāśa.”
- व्यशेम — aśū vyāptau / prāpnuyāma — “may we obtain, may we experience, may we live.”
- देवहितं यदायुः — devena prajāpatinopakalpitaṁ kṛtsnaṁ śoḍaśādhikaśatapramāṇaṁ viṁśatyadhikaśatapramāṇaṁ vā āyuh — “the life appointed by the god Prajāpati: that is, the full term of life determined by Brahmā for men — as the bhāṣyakāra says, a hundred and sixteen, or a hundred and twenty years of life. In the next Rk the hundred years are said to be the measure of man’s life.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.8) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- कर्णेभिः — the word karṇa, instrumental plural; bhis following, by “बहुलं छन्दसि” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[10]) the ais substitution does not come; then by “बहुवचने झल्यत्” the e for the final a of the stem; the s of bhis gets ru and visarga.
- शृणुयाम — the root śru śravaṇe; liṅ, first person plural, the affix mas; by “नित्यं डितः” the loss of the s of the affix; by “श्रुवः शृ च” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[74]) the substitute śr for the root and the śnu vikaraṇa; by “लिङः सलोपोऽनन्त्यस्य” the loss of the non-final s [of yāsu ṭ]; yāsu ṭ augment; since it follows an atiṅanta, the nighāta.
- अक्षभिः — the word akṣi; instrumental plural; bhis following, by “छन्दस्यपि दृश्यते” the substitute anaṅ, with the acute left on the last syllable by the anaṅ rule; since it is ñit, the substitute is final; akṣan + bhis, by “नलोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य” the loss of the n.
- यजत्राः — the root yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu; by “अमिनक्षयजिवधिपतिभ्योऽन्नन्” (Un. Sū. 3-[105] [?]) the affix atran; vocative plural; by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the nighāta.

- तुष्टुवांसः — the root ṣṭuñ stutau; by “क्वसुश्च” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[107]) the affix kvasu in the place of liṭ; since the root is reduplicated by it, by “शर्पूर्वाः खयः” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[61]) the t is kept in the reduplicate as the khay-letter; the word tuṣṭuvas; in the nominative plural, by “उगिदचां सर्वनामस्थानेऽधातोः” the augment num; by “आत्वसन्तस्य चाधातोः” the lengthening of the penultimate; n becomes anusvāra; by the affix-accent the ā is acute.
- अशेम — the root aśū vyāptau; by “आशिषि लिङ्” the liñ; first person plural, mas; the loss of the s; since āśirliñ follows, by “लिङ्याशिषि अङ्” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[86]) the affix añ; if the enumeration of the other verbs in that sūtra is for exclusion, then by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” śap for śnu; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- देवहितम् — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; the affix kta in the passive; by “दधातेहिः” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[42]) the substitute hi for the root; by “तृतीया कर्मणि” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[48]) the first member keeps its base accent.

Translation: “O gods, a hundred autumns, years — śatam in nu — truly a hundred, are appointed by you as the term of life of men, very near to men. Since you, at the time of creation, have ordained a hundred years as the life of men, therefore no āyur gantoḥ — before the going [end] of our appointed life, madhyā — in the middle — mā rīriṣata — do not harm [us]. Of what kind? [We] whose bodies you have made liable to jarasam — old age — yatra, at that stage [of life]; and where putrāsaḥ, sons, become our protectors, as fathers — that is, those who have reached such a state. Grammar tail, noted briefly: anti — loss of the ka of antika (bahula); yatra — lengthening in the Saṃhitā; cakra — liṭ second plural; jarasam — jarasa is substituted for jarā (Pā. 7-2-[101] [?]); madhyā — the locative ending replaced by ḍā; rīriṣata — riṣa ruṣa hiṃsāyām, in the causative, with luṇ after mā, caṇ for cli, with the reduplication and shortening; gantoḥ — tosun after gam.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 89.9) (Kannada)

devāḥ — O gods; anti — (in the lives of men) as determined; śaradaḥ — years; śatam in nu — a hundred indeed (by you); naḥ — our; tanūnām — of bodies; jarasam — weakness (of old age); yatra — at which time of our life; cakra — you have made (as appointed by you); yatra — at which time of our life; putrāsaḥ — our sons; pitaraḥ — as fathers, protectors (or, protecting their own sons like fathers); bhavanti — they become — (make it so); naḥ — us; āyur gantoḥ — before the end of our whole life; madhyā — in the middle; mā ririṣata — do not harm, hindering us.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.9 (Kannada)

“O gods, a hundred years of life are indeed fixed for men. But at the time when we are enjoying that life of a hundred years to the full, do not, in the middle, cause weakness to arise in our bodies and thereby make us dependent, with the burden of protecting our bodies falling on our sons; do not hinder our growth and harm us in the middle of our life.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 89.9)

“O Gods, since only a hundred years were appointed for the life of man at the close of which you cause old age to our bodies and at the close of which the sons become fathers, may you never destroy our life while it is yet running its course.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.9)

- शतं शरदः — “a hundred years. Since the śarad season comes only once in a year, a hundred śarad seasons means a hundred years. In the Ṛgveda and in the other Vedas the use of the word śarad is special for indicating a year.”
- अन्ति — antike — “in the body, the old age (vṛddhāpya) that arises according to the nature of age, an affliction that has come to the head, the weakness.”
- जरसं तनूनाम् — “near, in the body.”
- पुत्रासो यत्र पितरो भवन्ति — “The bhāṣyakāra, for this sentence — yatra ca putrāḥ pitaro 'smākaṃ rakṣitāro bhavanti — says: ‘at which stage of old age our sons have to protect us — may we not have such weakness’: let us not become so feeble and infirm as to be, as it were, and to require the paternal care of our own sons (English, as printed). Rather than this kind of meaning, the sense that is evident in this Ṛk is: ‘in the time of our life, or in the last part of life, those who are our sons — those whom we begot — become fathers’ — that is, old age: may we not have it.”
- आयुर्गन्तोः — kṛptasyāyusō gamanāt pūrvam — “before the end of the appointed hundred-year measure of life.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.9) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- अन्ति — the word antika; for its final ka, by the statement “कादिलोपो बहुलमिति वक्तव्यम्” the loss comes.
- यत्र — the word yad; in the locative, by “सप्तम्यास्त्रल्” (Pā. Sū. 5-3-[10]) the affix tral; since it has the designation vibhakti, by “त्यदादीनामः” the a for the d, with pararūpa; by “ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम्” (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[133]) the lengthening in the Samhitā.

- चक्र — the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; liṭ, second person plural, the substitute a for the affix tha; the root is reduplicated; in the reduplicate uraṭ [the a for the ṛ]; cutva; kṛ + a, the yaṇ substitution; since yatra is connected before, no nighāta; by “द्यौश्चोत्तिसः...” [as read] the lengthening in the Samhitā; by the affix-accent the final acute.
 - जरसम् — the word jarā; in the accusative singular, am following, by “जरायाः जरसन्यतरस्याम्” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[101]) the substitute jaras.
 - पुत्रासः — the word putra; with jas following, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk.
 - भवन्ति — the root bhū sattāyām; third person plural; since yatra is connected before it, no nighāta; śap is unaccented; the lasārvadhātuka anti too, coming after a root with no vowel-initial, is unaccented by “तास्यनुदात्तेत्”; so the root’s accent remains.
 - मध्या — in the locative, madhya + ni, by “सुपां सुलुक्” the substitute ḍā.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.9, continued from p. 297 (grammar, noted briefly):

- जरसम् (cont.) — “...the word jarā; with the second case-ending am following, by “जरायाः जरसन्यतरस्याम्” (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[101]) the substitute jaras.”
- पुत्रासः — the word putra, with jas following, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk for jas.
- रीरिषत — the root riṣa ruṣa hiṃsāyām; in the sense of impelling, by “हेतुमति च” the affix ṇic; by “पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च” the guṇa of the laghūpadha; by “सनाद्यन्ता धातवः” it gets the designation of a root; in the sense of the past, luṇ, third person plural [as read: “prathamapuruṣa ekavacana”, the ta affix]; by “णिश्चिदुसुभ्यः कर्तरि चङ्” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[48]) caṇ in place of cli; by “चङि” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[11]) the reduplication of the first single-vowel part of the root; the reduplicate keeps its hal-initial; by “णौ चङ्युपधाया ह्रस्वः” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[1]) the shortening of the penultimate of the root; then, since sanvat [laghuni caṇpare nau] — the reduplicate’s vowel is light, with caṇ following ṇi — the sanvadbhāva; by “सन्यतः” the i in the reduplicate; by “दीर्घो लघोः” the lengthening; by “णेरनिटि” the loss of ṇi because of caṇ; since it is in connexion with mā, by “न माङ्योगे” the augment aṭ does not come; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta; by Vedic usage a shortening at the pada-stage [is not] made.
- गन्तोः — the root gam/gatau; by “भावलक्षणे स्थेष्कृज्...” (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[16]) the affix tosun in the abstract sense; by “क्त्वातोसुन्कसुनः” (Pā. Sū. 1-1-[40]) it gets the designation of an indeclinable; since it ends in a nit affix, by “ञित्यादिनित्यम्” the first syllable acute.

Translation: “Aditi — the not-poor, the unbroken one, or the earth, or the mother of the gods — is herself dyauḥ, heaven, the shining nāka; she herself is antarikṣam, the sky seen between heaven and earth; she herself is mātā, the maker of the world, the mother; she herself the father, the begetter; and she is also putraḥ, the son born of mother and father. Viśve devāḥ — all the gods are Aditi herself. Pañca janāḥ — the five peoples: the four castes with the Niṣādas as the fifth; or the Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras and Rākṣasas. Yaska has said (Ni. [3-8] [?]): ‘the Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras, Rākṣasas’, say some; ‘the four castes and the Niṣāda as fifth’, says Aupamanyava. In the Brāhmaṇa it is said: ‘this is the uktha of all the five peoples — gods, men, Gandharvas and Apsarases, serpents, and Pitṛs’ (Ai. Brā. [3-10] [?]); there the Gandharvas and Apsarases count as one, hence five peoples. Such five peoples too are Aditi. Jātam — birth, the birth of creatures, is Aditi; janitvam — the place of birth, that too is Aditi. Thus Aditi is praised as the self of all the world. And Yaska has said (Ni. [4-22] [?]): ‘thus he declares the greatness of Aditi.’ Grammar tail, noted briefly: aditiḥ — do avakhaṇḍane with ktin (the i by ‘vyatyasti...’); on Yaska’s view, from dīn kṣaye with ktin and shortening; the first member keeps its accent by ‘nañsubhyām’; sa pitā — pronouns take the gender of the thing indicated; janitvam — the Uṇādi affix tva after jan.”

aditiḥ — Aditi; dyauiḥ — the shining heaven; aditiḥ — Aditi; antarikṣam — the atmosphere; aditiḥ — Aditi; mātā — mother (of the whole world); saḥ pitā — she herself is the father (of the world), the begetter; saḥ putraḥ — she herself is the son (born to the parents); viśve devāḥ — all the deities; aditiḥ — Aditi herself; pañca janāḥ — the four castes together with the Niṣādas, or the five classes — Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras and Rākṣasas; aditiḥ — Aditi; jātam — what has been born; aditiḥ — Aditi; janitvam — what will be born (in future), or the place of origin (Aditi).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.10 (Kannada)

“The unbroken Aditi is the giver of birth to the whole universe. She herself is the mother of the world and the father of the world. Everything that is born is she herself; Aditi is the place of origin. The five classes of people, of the nature of castes and including the Niṣādas, are she herself. Aditi herself is all the gods; she herself the shining heaven, she herself the atmosphere, she herself the whole universe, she herself the regulator of the universe.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Aditi is heaven; Aditi is firmament; Aditi is mother, father and son; Aditi is all the gods; Aditi is the five classes of men; Aditi is what is born, Aditi is what shall be born.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.10)

“This Rk aditir dyauiḥ aditiḥ, which has Aditi as its deity, is to be used as the yājyā mantra for offering the oblation in the animal sacrifice that has Aditi as its deity; this is set forth in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra ‘aditir dyauiḥ aditir antarikṣam na te viṣṇo jāyamāno na jātaḥ’ (Āś. [3-9] [?]).”

- अदितिम् — “see what has been written in the special topics of the third Rk of this sūkta regarding Aditi.”
- पञ्च जनाः — “five classes of people. The matter of the five classes of people, well known from Rgveda times, is not merely indicated here in the Rgveda; it has come down in places such as the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa [3-?; 4-?], the Taittirīya Saṃhitā [1-?-?], the Kāthaka Saṃhitā [?-?] and the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad [4-4-17] [?] (numerals read with doubt [?]). In the Rgveda, besides the words pañcajanāḥ, the words that give the same sense — pañcamānuṣāḥ (R. Saṃ. [?]), janāḥ, kṛṣṭayaḥ, kṣitayaḥ, carṣaṇayaḥ — are used in many places (each with a run of small Kannada reference numerals, which are given in the print and are not verified here [?]).” (continues on p. 301)

“Among Western scholars some take pañcajanāḥ to mean the five well-known Āryan tribes who dwelt on the banks of the river Sarasvatī: Anu, Druhyu, Yadu, Turvaśa and Puru. To support their view they quote Rks such as R. Saṃ. [1-108-8] [?] and [8-10-5] [?]. In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa too (Śa. Brā. [13-5-4-14] [?]) and in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (Ai. Brā. [8-23] [?]) it is stated that these five peoples are the sons [or tribes] of Bharata [as printed, ‘bharata-ru’ — sic?].”

“For the word pañcajanāḥ the bhāṣyakāra explains it as niśādapañcamāḥ, and Skandasvāmin as gandharvāḥ pitaro devāḥ [sic: devāḥ asurā rakṣāṃsi]; and Veṅkaṭamādhava explains: ‘manuṣyāṇāṃ pañcānāṃ kṣitīnāṃ niveśatāṃ gandharvāḥ pitaro devā asurā rakṣāṃsi pañcatvam’ [as read, partly clotted [?]]. According to Sāyaṇa’s view, pañcajanāḥ means five classes of people — Brāhmaṇa, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya, Sūdra and Niśāda. Niśāda means the people who lie outside the four castes, Brāhmaṇa and the rest, and live by the hunting of beasts — the Gonds, Kolas, Bhillas and others, the earlier inhabitants of this land, who belong to this class; even now these live in large numbers in forests and hills in some places such as the central provinces, as uncivilised folk. As examples of Ṛks in which the words pañca janāḥ and pañcakṛṣṭayaḥ occur, we give a couple —

— For the words pañca janāḥ and pañcakṛṣṭayaḥ in these Ṛks, Yāska has explained the meaning in his Nirukta thus —

पञ्च जना मम होत्रं जुषध्वं गन्धर्वाः पितरो देवा असुरा रक्षांसीत्येके । चत्वारो वर्णा निषादः
पञ्चम इत्यौपमन्यवः । निषादः कस्मान्निषदनो भवति निषण्णमस्मिन् पापकमिति नैरुक्ताः ॥

Why is the Niśāda so called? Because he is a ‘sitting-place’ — evil is seated in him, say the etymologists.” (continues on p. 302)

Special Topics of Rik 89.10, concluded from p. 301:

“That is, some say pañcajanāḥ means five kinds of people — Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras and Rākṣasas. The view of Aupamanyava and others is that the five kinds are the people of the four castes, Brāhmaṇas and the rest, together with a people of the hunter-tribe called Niṣāda. Sāyaṇa has approved this very view. Because the Niṣādas kill living beings, or because sin is thick in them, the Nirukta-writers call them niṣāda [niṣadana, ‘seat of’]. Apart from this, there may be a settled usage in that age in which pañcajanāḥ meant ‘five tribes’ — by collecting the names of the five chief Āryan tribes then well known, Anu, Druhyu, Yadu, Turvaśa and Puru. Be that as it may, in this matter it is clear that there was a difference of opinion even in the age of Yāska, the author of the Nirukta.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.10) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- अदितिः — the root do avakhaṇḍane; in the passive, by “स्त्रियां क्तिन्” the affix ktin; since it follows, by “द्यतिस्यतिमास्थामिति किति” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[40]) the substitute i for the root’s ā. On Yāska’s view: the root dīṇ kṣaye; to it, in the abstract sense, the same affix ktin as before; by vyatyaya, since the affix follows, a shortening of the root. na ditiḥ aditiḥ — a nañ-tatpuruṣa; by “तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थ...” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[2]) the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its base accent.
- स पिता — here one has to take over what was said earlier in the word saḥ, as the antecedent; it is devamātā and so on; she is feminine. Then the doubt arises why here too it is not said sā, in the feminine. Those who know make this solution: “pronouns, when they establish the identity of the thing pointed to and the thing referred to, take in turn the gender of the one indicated” — uddeśyalingatayā pullingatvam, ‘masculine by the gender of the subject-term’. Pronouns convey the sameness of the subject and the predicate; then, depending on what is intended, sometimes the gender of the predicate and sometimes of the subject comes; here, following the gender of the subject-term, the masculine is said.
- जनित्वम् — the root janī prādurbhāve; in the locus sense, by the Uṇādi the affix tvan; by “आर्धधातुकस्येड्वलादेः” the augment iḥ; since it ends in a nit affix, by “ज्जित्यादिर्नित्यम्” the first syllable is acute.

Translation (as read; doubtful words noted): “The sixth sūkta, ṛjunīti, of nine Ṛks, is the vision of Gotama. The Anukramaṇī says here: ‘ṛjunīti — nine, Gāyatrī, the last Anuṣṭubh.’ As in the preceding sūkta it is Vaiśvadeva [the deity is the Viśvedevas]; by the rule beginning with hi, this sūkta too has many deities [as printed, bahudevatāka] [?]. The application of the sūkta is laṅgika. On the Cāturviṁśika day, at the morning pressing, the Ṛk ṛjunīti no varuṇa is the ārambhāṇīyā [opening verse] of the Maitrāvaruṇa; it is prescribed in the section caturviṁśa: ‘ṛjunīti no varuṇa indraṁ vo viśvatas pari’ (Āś. [7-2] [?]). In the ahargaṇa sacrifices too, from the second day on, this is to be used as the opening, recited; and it is prescribed: ‘ārambhāṇīyāḥ ... the Hotrakas, on the second and following days’ (Āś. [7-1] [?]).” (The second sūtra is clotted in the print: “paryosān kadvato 'paraḥ” is read as printed and not completed [?].)

अनुवादवु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

“The sūkta ṛjunīti is the sixth sūkta of the fourteenth anuvāka. There are nine Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. In the Anukramaṇī it is said ‘ṛjunīti nava gāyatram antyānuṣṭub’ — that is, of the nine Ṛks in the sūkta ṛjunīti, the first eight are in the Gāyatrī metre and the last Ṛk in the Anuṣṭubh metre. The deities of this sūkta too are the Viśvedevas. The application of the sūkta is laṅgika. At the morning pressing of the twenty-fourth day of the sacrifice, the Mitrāvaruṇa priest is to begin with the Ṛk ṛjunīti: the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra sets this forth in the section called Caturviṁśa by the sūtra ‘ṛjunīti no varuṇa indraṁ vo viśvatas pari’ (Āś. [7-2] [?]); and the mantras beginning with this Ṛk, from the second day of the Ahargaṇa sacrifice onward, are to be used — the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows this by the sūtra ‘ārambhaṇīyāḥ paryosān kadvato ’paraḥ śasyānīti hotrakā dvitīyādiṣv eva’ (Āś. [7-1] [?]).”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 90.1) (grammar page, noted briefly; begins here; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- ऋजुनीती — the word ṛjunīti, feminine, ending in i; the instrumental singular following, by “सुपां सुलुक्...” the lengthening of the preceding homorganic vowel for the case-ending.
- नयतु — the root ṇiñ prāpaṇe; by “णो नः” the n for the ṇ; loṭ, third person singular, by “एरुः” the substitute tu for ti; śap the vikaraṇa; because of it, the guṇa of the ik of the root, and the substitute ay; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta by “तिङ्ङितिङः”.
- विद्वान् — the root vida jñāne; the affix śatṛ following, by “विदेः शतुर्वसुः” (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[36]) the substitute vasu for śatṛ; the word vidvas; su following, by “आत्सन्तस्य चासम्बुद्धौ” the lengthening of the penultimate; by “उगिदचां सर्वनामस्थानेऽधातोः” the augment num; by “हल्ङ्याभ्यो...” the loss of su; by “संयोगान्तस्य लोपः” the loss of the final s; by the affix-accent the a after v is acute.
- सजोषाः — the root juṣi pritiṣevanayoḥ; the affix asun; because of it the guṇa of the laghūpadha; by “ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्” the first syllable acute; samāno joṣo yaśya sa sajoṣāḥ (the page ends mid-entry; the grammar continues on p. 306)

- वसवानाः — the root vasa ācchādane; since the sense of ṇic is contained in it, śānac in the sense of laṭ; since it is adādi [as printed; read: as the root is not in the adādi list], by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of śap does not come; when vas + āna, by “आनेमुक्” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[130]) the augment muk [as read, ānemuk] after the a-final aṅga; by letter-substitution the m becomes v; since the affix is cit, by “चितः” the final acute; nominative plural.
- अप्रमूराः — the root murchā mohasamucchrāyayoḥ; by “सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्” the affix kvip in the abstract sense; by “रात्त्वोपः” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[21]) the ch and v after r are lost, since kvip, which is jhal-initial [as read], is a nasal-like affix and follows; here, since kvip is present, the ch is lost; prakṛṣṭā mūḥ pramūḥ; after pramū, in the sense ‘having it’, by the Vedic ra affix; since rephā is followed by repha, by “रो रि” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[14]) the loss of the r; na pramūrāḥ apramūrāḥ, a nañ-tatpuruṣa, so by “तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थः...” the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its base accent.
- व्रता — in the neuter plural, the substitute śi for śas; by “शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्” the loss of śi.
- रक्षन्ते — the root rakṣa pālāne; laṭ, third person plural; by “व्यत्ययो बहुलम्” the ātmanepada affix; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta.

Translation: “Those amṛtāḥ — immortal — all-gods, martyebhyaḥ — to us who are mortals, the performers of rites — may they bestow śarma — happiness of the nature of freedom from death — yaṁsan, may they give, grant. Doing what? Apa bādhamānāḥ — driving off, bringing to destruction, dviṣaḥ — our haters, enemies of the nature of sin. Grammar tail, noted briefly: yaṁsan — yamu uparame, leṭ with aṭ and sip; amṛtāḥ — those for whom there is no mṛta (death); the first syllable of the latter member acute in the jaramaramitra mṛtāḥ rule.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 90.3) (Kannada) amṛtāḥ — free from death; te — those deities; dviṣaḥ — (our sinful) enemies; apa bādhamānāḥ — destroying; martyebhyaḥ — to us who are subject to death; asmabhyam — to us; śarma — (deathless) happiness; yaṁsan — let them give.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 90.3 (Kannada)

“The deities Mitra, Varuṇa and the rest are free from death; we are all subject to death. May they destroy only our wicked enemies and favour us, the performers of rites, with deathless happiness.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“May they, who are immortal, bestow upon us mortals, happiness driving away our enemies.”
— as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 90.3)

“The meaning of this Rk is easy. There are no difficulties of any kind. The intention is clear.”

- शर्म — “happiness, or house.”
 - अमृताः — “Mitra and the other deities, free from death.”

Special Topics of Rik 90.3, continued from p. 309:

- मर्त्येभ्यः अस्मभ्यम् — “to us, men, who have the nature of dying.”
- अप बाधमानाः — “those who destroy, drive away, injure.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 90.3) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- यंसन् — the root yamu uparamē; leṭ, third person plural, the affix jhi; by “इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु” the loss of the i; by “लेटोऽडाटौ” the augment aṭ; by “सिब्वहुलं लेटि” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[34]) the affix sip; by “संयोगान्तस्य लोपः” the loss of the final t; by “नश्चापदान्तस्य झलि” the anusvāra for the m; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- अमृताः — the root mṛṇ prāṇatyāge; the affix kta; mṛtaṇ maraṇaṇ yeṣāṇ nāsti ity amṛtāḥ; by “नञ्सुभ्यां जरमरमित्रमृताः” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[116]) the first syllable of the latter member is acute.
- द्विषः — the root dviṣa aprītau; by “सत्सूद्विष...” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[61]) the affix kvip; accusative plural.

Closing of Rik 90.3: “॥ ३ ॥” (3). (A separator “— :o: —” follows in the print.)

Translation: “Vandyāsaḥ — to be worshipped by all, to be praised, to be bowed to — Indra and the other gods ciyantu — may they separate out, pick out, no pathaḥ — our paths; may they set them apart from the paths that are not good. For what? Suvitāya — for the fruit, heaven and the like, which is to be well obtained. Grammar tail, noted briefly: pathaḥ — loss of ḥ of the bha-stem; suvitāya — kta in the passive of iṇ gatau after su, with the suffix as Vedic; ciyantu — ciñ cayane, vikaraṇa elided, iyaṅ; vandyāsaḥ — ṇyat after vadi, acute on the first syllable; asuk for jas.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 90.4) (Kannada)

vandyāsaḥ — those worthy of being praised (by all); indraḥ — Indra; marutaḥ — the Maruts; pūṣā — the deity Pūṣan; bhagaḥ — the deity Bhaga too; suvitāya — for the means to the fruit that is our desired heaven and the like; naḥ — for us; pathaḥ vi ciyantu — (turn us from the evil path) may they make us walkers on the right path.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 90.4 (Kannada)

“May Indra, the Maruts, Pūṣan and the deity Bhaga, who are worthy of worship by all, turn us away from the evil path, and show us the right path, for the means to the fruit of heaven and the like which we desire.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“May the adorable Indra, the Maruts, Pushan, and Bhaga, so direct our path that they may lead to the attainment of our welfare.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 90.4)

- वन्द्यासः — “the word vandyāsaḥ is an ancient usage: those who are saluted by all.”
- सुविताय — suṣṭhu prāptavyāya svargādīphalāya — “for what is to be well obtained: for the obtaining of the fruit of heaven and the like — for our good.”
- वि चियन्तु — ciñ cayane / vicinvantu / asobhanebhyaḥ mārgebhyaḥ sakāśāt pṛthak kurvantu — “pick out, sort out: make us go not on evil paths and make us go separately, on each one’s right path.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 90.4) (grammar page, noted briefly; begins here)

- पथः — the word pathin; since śas follows in the accusative plural, by “भस्य टेलोपः” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[144]) the loss of the ṭi (in); since śas is unaccented, the i [as printed: udātta (ikāra)] (the page ends mid-entry; the grammar continues on p. 312)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 90.4, continued from p. 311 (grammar, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]):

- पथः (cont.) — “...since śas is unaccented, by” अनुदात्तस्य च यत्रोदात्तलोपः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[158]) the accent for śas comes.”
- सुविताय — the root iṇ gatau; the affix kta in the passive; suṣṭhu itaḥ suvitaḥ; by the statement “तेनादीनां छन्दसि बहुलमुपसंख्यानम्” the uvañ substitute for the u of su comes; since by “गतिरनन्तरः” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[49]) the first member’s base accent would have come, by “सूपमानात्कृतः” (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[144]) the final syllable of the latter member is acute.
- चियन्तु — the root ciñ cayane, Svādi; loṭ, third person plural; by “एरुः” the u for the i; ant substitute; by “बहुलं छन्दसि” the luk of śnu; since “सार्वधातुकमपित्” makes the affix ñit, no guṇa comes; by “अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवाम्” the substitute iy for the i of the root; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the accent of the affix the u is acute.
- वन्द्यासः — the root vadi abhivādanastutyoḥ; by “ऋहलोर्ण्यत्” the affix ṇyat; by “इदितो नुम् धातोः” the augment num for the root; the form vandya; by “ईडवन्दवृशंसदुहां ण्यतः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[213]) the first syllable acute as an exception to the svarita; in the nominative plural, with jas following, by “आज्जसेरसुक्” the augment asuk; ru-visarga for the s: vandyāsaḥ.

Closing of Rik 90.4: “॥ ४ ॥” (4). (A separator “— :o: —” follows in the print.)

O Maruts, all of you, make dhiyaḥ — our rites, of the nature of the Aptoryāma — goagrāḥ, headed by cattle, that is, furnished with cattle recovered from where they had been lost, with cattle at their head. And of the Aptoryāma rite it is taught that it is a cause of obtaining cattle: ‘he whose cattle have strayed away, as it were, should perform the sacrifice with this’ (Tai. Brā. [3-8-14-3] [?]). And further, make us svastimataḥ — possessed of welfare, imperishable. Grammar tail, noted briefly: evayāvaḥ — iṇ gatau with van (Uṇ. 1-[150] [?]); first member keeps its accent; in the vocative the n becomes ru (Pā. 8-3-[1] [?]).”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 90.5) (Kannada)

pūṣan — O Pūṣan; viṣṇo — O Viṣṇu; evayāvaḥ — O Maruts, who draw the chariot with swift horses; naḥ — our; dhiyaḥ — the rites (of the nature of Aptoryāma); goagrāḥ — leading the cattle that had strayed from us, returned; karta — make; uta — and; naḥ — us; svastimataḥ — possessed of welfare (make).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 90.5 (Kannada)

“O Pūṣan, O Viṣṇu, O Maruts: by your grace may our rites of the nature of the Aptoryāma be fruitful. Favour those rites and make them able to bring back to us the cattle that have gone astray. And make us all fortunate.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Pushan, Vishnu, Maruts, make our rites restorative of our cattle; make us prosperous.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 90.5)

“In the sacrifice called Aptoryāma four atirikta-uktha mantras are to be recited. When the priest called Acchāvāka recites the fourth of these, the Rk uta no dhiyaḥ is to be recited as the third Rk of the tṛca called Asurūpa, optionally, as the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra points out: ‘uta no dhiyo goagrā iti vāsurūpastotramā’ (Āś. [9-11] [?]). (continues on p. 314)

- धियः — “the word dhī here suggests the sense of ‘work’ (Ni. [2-1] [?]): dhiyaḥ means works, sacrificial works and the like.”
- गोअग्राः — gāvo 'gre yāsāṁ tā goagrāḥ dhiyaḥ | golābhaphalā ity arthaḥ | aptoryāmakarmaṇas ca paśuprāptihetutvam āmnāyate | yasmāc chavaḥ prasreva bhraṁśeran sa etena yajeta (Tai. Brā. [3-8-14-3] [?]) — “those with cattle at their head — that is, with the acquisition of cattle as their main fruit; works such as the Aptoryāma. This sacrifice called Aptoryāma is to be performed, as the Tai. Brā. text indicates, by one who wishes for cattle. Therefore the sense is: may the sacrifices such as the Aptoryāma that we perform with a view to obtaining cattle, by the grace of Pūṣan and the other deities, be completed fully.”
- पूषन्, विष्णो — “nourisher, all-pervading. Since he nourishes all, this deity (one of the twelve Ādityas) is called Pūṣan; since Viṣṇu pervades all, he is called Viṣṇu.”
- एवयावः — iṇ gatau | evair gantṛbhir aśvair yāti gacchatīty evayāvā marudgaṇaḥ — “those who move in the chariot with swift-going horses called pr̥ṣatī: evayāvaḥ means the Maruts: so the bhāṣyakāra explains.”
- स्वस्तिमतः — “those who have welfare, growth; this word is an adjective of the word naḥ.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 90.5) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- गोअग्राः — by “सर्वत्र विभाषा गोः” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[122]) the prakṛtibhāva comes.
- एवयावः — the root iṇ gatau; by “इणशीभ्यां वन्” (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[150]) the affix van; because of it the guṇa by “सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः”; the form eva; when in the upapada, from yā prāpaṇe the affix vanip by “आतो मनिन्क्वनिव्वनिपश्च”; the word evayāvan; in the vocative, su following, by “वने उपसंख्यानम्” (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[1]) the ru for the n; by “हल्ङ्याभ्यो...” the loss of su; by “खरवसानयोः” the visarga for r; by “आमन्त्रितस्य च” the first syllable acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 90.5, concluded from p. 314:

- कर्ता — [as printed, the Pada’s karta; the grammar treats the Saṁhitā form kartā] the root ḥukṛñ karaṇe; in the agent sense the affix tṛm; because of it the guṇa of the root; since tṛm is nit, the first syllable is acute; nominative singular. (The page’s grammar note, as printed, treats this single word and then closes the R̥k.)

Translation: “Ṛtāyate — for the sacrificer who desires ṛta, the rite, for himself: vātāḥ — the winds madhu — sweet, with a fruit endowed with sweetness — kṣaranti — pour, rain down; that is, give. Likewise sindhavaḥ — the flowing rivers, or oceans — pour their own madhu, sweet juice. Likewise, oṣadhīḥ — plants whose end is the ripening of the fruit, and crops — mādhvīḥ — endowed with sweetness — santu — may they be to us. Grammar tail, noted briefly: madhu — loss of the matup after it by the statement cited (Pā. 4-4-[121] [?]); ṛtāyate — kyac from ṛta; mādhvīḥ — añ after madhu in the sense ‘having it’; oṣadhīḥ — ōṣa (‘burning’) + dhā with ki in the locus sense; feminine nīp; first member keeps its accent.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 90.6) (Kannada)

ṛtāyate — to the sacrificer who desires the sacrifice; vātāḥ — the winds; madhu — sweet fruits of work; kṣaranti — pour; sindhavaḥ — the rivers of flowing form; madhu — their juice, endowed with sweetness; kṣaranti — pour out; naḥ — to us; oṣadhīḥ — crops and roots and the like; mādhvīḥ — endowed with sweetness; santu — let them be.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 90.6 (Kannada)

“For the sacrificer who performs sacrifices and is devoted to the worship of the gods, the winds pour sweet fruits of work; the rivers of flowing form increase their sweet juice. May the crops and roots and the like be sweet for us, the performers of sacrifices.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“The winds bring sweet (rewards) to the Sacrificer; the rivers bring sweet waters; may the herbs yield sweetness to us. Or: Sweetly do the winds blow for the pious Sacrificer; sweetly do the rivers flow, sweet may the plants be for us.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 90.6)

“The people such as the priests look at the madhuparka prepared for them with the three Ṛks beginning madhu vātā, receive it, and then partake of it: so the Āśvalāyana Gṛhya-sūtra points out in the sūtra ‘madhu vātā ṛtāyate iti tṛṇāvekaḥ’ (Āś. Gṛ. [1-24-14] [?]).”

- ऋतायते — yajñam ātmana icchate yajamānāya — “for the sacrificer who performs the sacrifice: for his pleasure.”
 - मधु — “sweet, pleasing.” (continues on p. 317)

Special Topics of Rik 90.6, continued from p. 316:

- क्षरन्ति — varṣanti — “pour; make (rain).”
- सिन्धवः — syandanaśilā nadyaḥ samudrā vā — “rivers, or oceans.”

“The main intention: for the pleasure of the sacrificer who performs sacrifices, may the wind blow gladdening; may the rivers flow, filled with cool or sweet water; may crops, plants and trees (grain, fruits and so on) be full of sweet-tasting fruits and the like.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 90.6) (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?])

- मधु — in the matup affix that follows these, by the statement “लुगकारेकाररेफाश्च वक्तव्याः” (Pā. Sū. 4-4-[121]-3 [?]) the luk; the second case-ending am following, by “स्वमोर्नपुंसकात्” the luk of it.
- ऋतायते — ṛtam ātmana icchati ṛtāyate; by “सुप आत्मनः क्यच्” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-8) the affix kyac in the sense of wishing; kyac following, by “न छन्दस्यपुत्रस्य” (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[35]) the i-substitution and lengthening for the a of ṛta do not come; by “अन्येषामपि दृश्यते” the lengthening of the t [i.e. of the vowel after t] in the Samhitā; the form ending in kyac, by “सनाद्यन्ता धातवः” gets the designation of a root; after it, in the sense of laṭ, the affix śatṛ; the word ṛtāyat; in the dative singular, since śatṛ has no num, with a vowel-initial case-ending following, by “शतुरनुमो नद्यजादी” (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[173]) the case-ending is acute.
- क्षरन्ति — the root kṣara sañcalane [as read: kṣara prasravaṇe]; laṭ, third person plural; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- माध्वीः — in the sense ‘is sweet to it’ (madhu asyā asti), by “मधोरञ् च” (Pā. Sū. 4-4-[126]) the affix añ; since añ follows, by “ऋत्व्यवास्त्व्यवास्त्वमाध्वीहिरण्ययादिति छन्दसि” (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[175]) the yaṇ substitution is fixed by nipātana; since the affix is ñit, vṛddhi of the initial; when the feminine is intended, by “टिङ्गाणञ्...” the affix ñip; in the nominative plural, jas following, by “वा छन्दसि” the lengthening of the preceding homorganic; the s becomes ru and visarga: mādhvīḥ.
- सन्तु — the root as bhuvi; loṭ, third person plural; the substitute ant; u; by “श्नसोरल्लोपः” the loss of the a of the root; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- ओषधीः — oṣaḥ pākaḥ asu dhīyate iti oṣadhayaḥ, the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; in the locus sense, by “कर्मण्यधिकरणे च” (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[93]) the affix ki; by “आतो...” (the page ends here; the grammar continues on p. 318)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 90.6, concluded from p. 317 (grammar, noted briefly):

- ओषधीः (cont.) — “...by”आतो लोप इटि च” the loss of the ā of the root, since an affix beginning with i follows [ki being kit]; the word oṣadhi; in the feminine, by “कृदिकारादक्तिनः” (Pā. Sū. 4-1-[45]) the affix ñip; with jas following, as before, by “वा छन्दसि” the lengthening of the preceding homorganic vowel; since it is read in the dāsibhārādi list, the first member keeps its base accent; since the word dāsibhāra ends in gha [ghaṇ], and is acute on the first syllable, this word too is acute on the first syllable.”

- पार्थिवं रजः — “rajas means a world: ‘lokā rajāṁsy ucyaṁte’ (Ni. [4-19] [?]); pārthivaṁ rajaḥ means the world of earth, or the earth.”
- द्यौः पिता — “heaven (dyauḥ), who is as it were a father to us — that is, the world of heaven. In the Ṛgveda the word dyāvāpṛthivī is used in many places; it means heaven and earth. There is a convention of calling heaven the father and the earth the mother. For, just as father and mother nourish us with food and the like, so heaven — that is, the atmosphere — pours down the rain needed for the production of our food; the earth, by the help of the rain, produces crops and the like and supplies us the food we need. Hence the convention of calling heaven and earth father and mother.”

“urukrama’ means one who steps over a wide expanse, a long way: it is said that Viṣṇu, at the time of the Vāmana incarnation, strode over the worlds, earth and the rest, with three steps. Several Ṛks that indicate this kind of prowess of Viṣṇu —

[reference not printed on p. 323 [?]]) — Gloss, mine and tentative: “Viṣṇu strode across this; thrice he set down his foot; it is gathered in his dust-filled [footstep].” (Correction: on p. 323 the print gives these two citations without any reference numerals — the page ends after the second citation — and the numerals are therefore not supplied here. The list of such Ṛks continues on p. 324, where the later citations do carry numerals.)

- उरुक्रमः — the root kramu pādavikṣepe; since it is read in the pacādi list, by “नन्दिग्रहिपचादिभ्यो ल्युणिन्यचः” (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[134]) the affix ac; or, urūn krāmati iti urukramaḥ; by “कर्मण्यण्” (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[1]) the affix aṇ when a word denoting the object stands as upapada; by “अत् उपधायाः” the vṛddhi would have come, but by “नोदात्तोपदेशस्य मान्तस्य...” (Pā. Sū. 7-3-[34]) the vṛddhi is prohibited for a root with an unaccented upadeśa ending in m; by the affix-accent kramaḥ is acute on the last syllable; by “गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्” the kṛdutarapada’s base accent in the compound.

Translation (as read; the Anukramaṇī line is garbled in the print: “tryadhikā”, “pañcamādyi”, “dvādaśoṣṇik” are as printed and not corrected [?]): “The seventh sūkta, tvaṁ soma, of twenty-three Ṛks, the vision of Gotama, addressed to Soma. The twelve Ṛks from the fifth to the sixteenth are Gāyatrī; the seventeenth is Uṣṇih; the remaining ten are Triṣṭubh. So it is recorded in the Anukramaṇī. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. At the animal sacrifice of the Saumya (Soma-deity) in the ekādaśinī, the two Ṛks tvaṁ soma are the anuvākya for the vapā and the puroḍāśa; prescribed: ‘tvaṁ soma pra cikito manīṣeti dve’ (Āś. [3-2] [?]). At the Mahāpitṛyajña, each oblation has two *anuvākya*s; of these, for Soma Pitṛmat, ‘tvaṁ soma’ is the first anuvākya; prescribed in the section dakṣiṇāgner agnim: ‘tvaṁ soma pra cikito manīṣā somo dhenum’ (Āś. [2-19] [?]). It is also the anuvākya of the Saumya in the prāyaṇīyā offering of this same rite; prescribed: ‘tadahaḥ prāyaṇīyēṣṭīḥ’ — ‘tvaṁ soma pra cikito manīṣā yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyāṁ’ (Āś. [4-3] [?]).”

अनुवादु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

“The sūkta tvaṁ soma is the seventh sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka. There are twenty-three Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. The deity is Soma. Of these, twelve Ṛks, from the fifth to the sixteenth, are in the Gāyatrī metre; the seventeenth Ṛk in the Uṣṇih metre. The remaining ten Ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre. In the Anukramaṇī it is said ‘tvaṁ soma tryadhikā saumyaṁ pañcamādyi gāyatro dvādaśoṣṇik ceti’ [as printed]. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. In the Soma sacrifice called Ekādaśina, when the vapā (omentum) and the puroḍāśa of the animal are offered in the fire, the two Ṛks of this sūkta, tvaṁ soma, are to be used as anuvākya mantras; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra says this by the sūtra ‘tvaṁ soma pra cikito manīṣeti dve’ (Āś. [3-2] [?]). In the Mahāpitṛyajña, for each oblation there are two anuvākya mantras; of these, the Ṛk tvaṁ soma is the first anuvākya mantra for the oblation to Soma Pitṛmat; this is set forth in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section dakṣiṇāgner agnim, by the sūtra ‘tvaṁ soma pra cikito manīṣā somo dhenum’ (Āś. [2-19] [?]). Besides, the first Ṛk of this sūkta is also to be used as the puronuvākya mantra of the Soma deity in the Prāyaṇīyā offering, as is shown in the section tadahaḥ prāyaṇīyēṣṭīḥ by the sūtra ‘tvaṁ soma pra cikito manīṣā yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyāṁ’ (Āś. [4-3] [?]).”

Translation: “O Soma, you are pra cikitaḥ through our manīṣā — through our own understanding — that is, you are known thoroughly; the meaning is, we praise you with hymns. Therefore you lead us along the straightest, the least crooked path — the road that is the means of obtaining the fruit of ritual — following us, and bring us along in due order. Further, O indo, you who moisten [undana] the whole world with the nectar, Soma: by your praṁtī, by your leading — [the words pravṛttyarthakeṇa in the print are doubtful [?]] — by an excellent guidance, our fathers, wise (dhīrāḥ), possessed of ritual, or possessed of insight, abhajanta — enjoyed, obtained — among the gods, Indra and the rest, delightful wealth (ratnam). Therefore grant us too such wealth: this is the sense.”

Grammar tail of the bhāṣya (compressed, read in part, characterized not transcribed): pra cikitaḥ from the root kit “to know” (kita jñāne), in the passive/karmaṇi with the niṣṭhā suffix, the doubling (dvirvacana) being Vedic (chāndasa); an alternative explanation through yaḥ [?] is clotted in the print and not read. gatiranantara — the preverb retains its accent. manīṣā — the instrumental ending replaced by ḍā (supāṁ sulug [sūtra as cited]). rajiṣṭham — from ṛju, the suffix iṣṭhan optionally, in Chandas (Pā. 6-4-163 [?]); the ṭi-elision is cited. neṣi — from nī, in the present tense, the śap elided by “bahulaṁ chandasi”. paṁthām — pathimathyṛbhukṣām āt (Pā. 7-1-85 [?]); the accent of pathi and mathi as initial-acute in the strong cases. praṁtī — tādaucā (the preverb keeps its own accent); the instrumental by supāṁ sulug, preceding-similar long vowel. (Grammar tail, noted briefly; the numerals read with doubt [?].)

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; manīṣā — by our understanding; pra cikitaḥ — you have been well understood (therefore); tvam — you; rajiṣṭham — most straight (authentic); paṁthām — [by] the path (the means of obtaining the fruit of rites); anu neṣi — you lead us and bring us to it; indo — O Soma, who cause all the world to be moistened with nectar; tava — your; praṁtī — by excellent guidance; dhīrāḥ — the wise, or those possessed of ritual; naḥ — our; pitaraḥ — fathers; deveṣu — among Indra and the other gods; ratnam — delightful wealth; abhajanta — obtained.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.1 (Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 327)

“O Soma-deity, we know your nature well by our understanding. You lead us along the most authentic path, which obtains the fruit of rites. O Soma, who moisten all the world with nectar, because of your excellent guidance —

— our fathers, who followed your path, obtained delightful wealth among the gods, Indra and the others. In the same way, favour us too with wealth.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source)

“Soma, you are thoroughly apprehended by our understanding; you lead us along a straight path ; O Soma, by your guidance our righteous fathers obtained wealth amongst the gods.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.1) (Kannada)

“This sūkta, beginning with tvaṁ soma, is addressed to the deity Soma. Because all the mantras addressed to the deity Soma in the Ninth Maṇḍala are in that Maṇḍala, this sūkta ought, by rule, to have been placed in that Maṇḍala. It is not so. In the Anukramaṇī too it is said: ‘saha-tvaṁ soma tryadhikā saumyaṁ pañcamyādi gāyatro dvādaśoṣṇik ceti’ [as printed]. And the deity of the Ninth Maṇḍala is called pavamānaḥ somaḥ. Although the Soma-deity is one, the Soma-deity qualified by the attribute pavamāna (“purifying”) is regarded as a separate deity and praised. Therefore this sūkta, whose deity is Soma, was not included among the sūktas of the deity pavamānaḥ somaḥ. In the Ṛgveda such an arrangement is a special feature. For example, the words Savitr, Āditya and Sūrya ordinarily indicate one deity, yet there are separate sūktas for Savitr, for Āditya and for Sūrya. Like them, agniḥ and agniḥ pāvakaḥ, draviṇodāḥ and the other deities are praised separately. In the same way this sūkta was not included in the Ninth Maṇḍala but was placed in the First Maṇḍala together with the sūktas of other deities such as Agni and Indra — this should be understood.”

(Transcription note: the running quotation of the Anukramaṇī, with its reading “saha” and the spelling “tryadhikā / pañcamyādi”, is as printed and is not corrected [?].)

pra cikitaḥ — kita jñāne | prakarṣeṇa jñāto 'si | vayaṁ tvāṁ stutibhir arcāsi ity arthaḥ [as read; clotted [?]]. Kannada: “(By our understanding) you are known — that is, by the power of our understanding we praise you, and through those praises we come to know you: this is the sense. Skandasvāmin explains this word: ‘prakarṣeṇa jñāsi yad yāvat jñātavyam’ — you know in full everything that is to be known; so he explains [as read].”

manīṣā — by the power of our understanding; by the praises that we make.

rajiṣṭham — ṇutamam akuṭlam | “straight, not crooked, right, true — such meanings may be given.”

anu neṣi paṁthām — “You lead us along the straight path: that is, you act as guide so that we may proceed in the knowledge of sacrificial and other good rites.”

deveṣu ratnam — “The well-known jewels and other wealth, or the sovereignty, that is among the deities.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.1) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly, not transcribed)

pra cikitaḥ — root kita jñāne; the kta suffix in the passive; chāndasa doubling; the reduplicative syllable keeps halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; cuṭu / alternatively ṃj in the sense of intensity; the luk by ṃj... [sūtra as printed, clotted [?]]; sanyaṇoḥ for the doubling of the root; saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ (the paribhāṣā, cited), so that guṇo yaṇluk-oḥ (Pā. 7-4-82 [?]) does not give guṇa to the reduplicative; alternatively chandasy ubhayathā and kartariśap; because the root belongs to the juhotyādi class, śap is replaced by ślu (śau), and the root is doubled; by the suffix-accent cikitaḥ is final-acute. gatiranantaraḥ (Pā. 6-2-49 [?]) — the preverb keeps its own accent. manīṣā — a feminine in -ā; the instrumental singular, which follows, receives ḍā by supāṃ sulug (the sūtra as cited). rajiṣṭham — atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau, the suffix iṣṭhan after ṛju when the superlative sense appears; ṭeḥ — ṭi-elision; vibhāṣarjōś chandasi (Pā. 6-4-162 [?]) gives ratva; as the suffix is nit, the initial-acute accent follows. neṣi — root nīṇ prāpaṇe; ṇo naḥ (nasal replaced); siP in the second person singular of laṭ; bahulaṃ chandasi — luk of śap; sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ — guṇa of the root vowel i; the suffix s becomes ṣ; the accent nighāta, since it follows the preverb. (Numerals read with doubt [?].)

paṃthām — stem pathin; since am follows, by pathimathyṛbhukṣām āt (पथिमथ्यृभुक्षामात्, Pā. 7-1-85 [?]) there is the ā even though the su is absent; tho nthaḥ (थो न्थः, [?]) — the tha is replaced by nth; pathimathoḥ sarvanāmasthāne (पथिमथोः सर्वनामस्थाने, Pā. 6-1-199 [?]) — initial-acute accent. praṇīti — root nīṇ prāpaṇe; striyāṃ ktin — the ktin in the sense of the action; tādaucā niti (ताडौ च निति, Pā. 6-2-50 [?]) — because a suffix beginning with t and nit follows, the preverb pra keeps its natural accent; the stem followed by the instrumental singular, from supāṃ sulug, the preceding-similar long vowel becomes the single replacement. abhajanta — root bhaja sevāyām; laṇ, third person plural; nighāta accent, since it follows the preverb. ॥ 1 ॥

Translation: “At the Marutvatīya (Marut-offering) of the Agniṣṭoma, the R̥k tvaṁ soma kratubhiḥ is the dhāyā. And it is prescribed: ‘agnīr netā tvaṁ soma kratubhiḥ pinvanty apaḥ’ — these are the dhāyās (Āś. 5-14 [?], numeral as read, doubtful). O Soma, you are sukratuḥ — of good works or of good understanding — through your kratubhiḥ, your own acts such as the Agniṣṭoma and the like, or through your own knowledge; you bhūḥ, you are. And you, viśvavedāḥ — master of all wealth — are sudakṣaḥ, of good strength, through your own strengths (dakṣaiḥ). And you through your vṛṣatvebhiḥ, your showers of desired things, and through mahitvā, greatness and majesty, are vṛṣā — the rainer of desires — and great. And you, being nṛcakṣāḥ — the one who shows to the leaders of the sacrifice, the sacrificers, the fruit they desire — through the dyumnebhiḥ, the praise-given offerings in the form of food presented to you, are dyumnī: you have abundant food.”

Grammar tail of the bhāṣya (compressed, partly read): sukratuḥ — in the bahuvrihi “kratvādayas ca”, the final-acute (uttarapadādyudāttatva) [sūtra as cited, clotted [?]]. sudakṣaḥ — root dakṣa vṛddhau, “that by which one grows”: dakṣaḥ, strength; ghaṇ in the instrumental sense; the initial-acute accent [details clotted [?]]; the prefix su in the bahuvrihi is initial-acute. viśvavedāḥ — viśvāni vedāṃsi yasya; bahuvrihau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām (the pre-member keeps the final-acute). vṛṣatvebhiḥ — vṛṣaṇo bhāvo vṛṣatvam; bahulaṃ chandasi — bhis becomes ais-less (aisabhāvaḥ). mahitvā — from mahi with the Uṇādi itvā suffix; the case-ending lengthened to ā after a bhāva-suffix by supāṃ sulug. (Noted briefly; the tail is partly illegible.)

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.2) (Kannada)

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; kratubhiḥ — by your Agniṣṭoma and other acts, or by knowledges; sukratuḥ — one of excellent acts, or of excellent insight; bhūḥ — you become; viśvavedāḥ — knower of all (possessed of all wealth); tvam — you; dakṣaiḥ — by [your] strengths; sudakṣaḥ — of excellent strength; tvam — you; vṛṣatvebhiḥ — by the showering of desires [liberally]; mahitvā — by greatness; vṛṣā — a rainer of wishes; nṛcakṣāḥ — a guide for men (the sacrificers); dyumnebhiḥ — by the food in the form of offerings, [offered] by them; dyumnī — a possessor of food (a strong one); abhavaḥ — you became.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.2 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, by your Agniṣṭoma and other acts you are always a performer of pure acts. You who know everything are, by your own strength, one of excellent strength. As you liberally grant the desired things, you are an exceedingly liberal giver. Being a guide for the sacrificing men, you are nourished by the food in the form of the offerings presented by them.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.2)

“Soma, you are the doer of good by pious acts ; you are powerful by your energies and know all things; you are showerer of benefits by your bounties and are great by your greatness ; O guide of men, you have been well nourished by sacrificial offerings.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.2) (Kannada)

“In the Agniṣṭoma sacrifice, at the time of reciting the Marutvatīya-śastra mantras, this Rk tvaṃ soma kratubhiḥ is to be used as the dhāryā mantra; this is stated by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra ‘agnīr netā tvaṁ soma kratubhiḥ pinvanty apa iti dhāyāḥ’ (Ā. 5-14 [?], numerals as read).”

kratubhiḥ — “The word kratu has been used in many senses: act, understanding, resolve, strength. But for the phrase saha kratubhiḥ it is only the meaning ‘karmabhiḥ prajñayā vā’ — by acts or by understanding — that is established; and so here too the explanation is given: ‘saha tvatsaṁbandhibhir agniṣṭomādikarmabhir ātmīyair jñānair vā’. In R. Saṁ. 10-[?]-1 alone, [Sāyaṇa] makes the meaning ‘karmapaiḥ puruṣaiḥ’ [as read, doubtful [?]].”

dakṣaiḥ sudakṣaḥ — “Since the word dakṣa is included among the ‘twenty-eight names of strength’ beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ (Ni. 2-9 [?]), the meaning of the word dakṣa is ‘strength’; the sense is ‘one possessed of excellent strength through his own strength’. Or the word may also be said to be a synonym of growth: ‘vṛddhibhiḥ suvṛddha ity arthaḥ’ (Ska. Bhā.)” (Skandasvāmin’s bhāṣya) viśvavedāḥ — “The word vedas means wealth or knowledge —”

स्वस्ति न इन्द्रो वृद्धश्रवाः स्वस्ति नः पूषा विश्ववेदाः ।

svasti na indro vṛddhaśravāḥ svasti naḥ pūṣā viśvavedāḥ | (R. Saṁ. 1-89-6 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “May Indra of increased fame be a blessing to us; may Pūṣan, the all-knowing [or all-possessing], be a blessing to us.”

ररक्ष तान्सुकृतो विश्ववेदा दिप्सन्त इद्रिपवो नाह देभुः ।

rarakṣa tān sukr̥to viśvavedā dipsanta idripavo nāha debhuḥ | (R. Saṁ. 1-[?]-3 [?]; the printed numerals, read as “१-१८२-३” [?], are doubtful) (the Saṁhitā text is as read from the print; dipsanta and idripavaḥ doubtful [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “The all-knowing one protected those doers of good; the foes who wished to harm them did not injure them.”

“— and in such places everywhere it is [explained] by the commentary ‘viśvāni vetrīti viśvavedāḥ; viśvāni jñānāni dhanāni vā yasya’, or ‘viśvaprajñāḥ’; so here too it means ‘one possessed of all wealth’, or ‘one possessed of all knowledge’.”

vṛṣatvebhiḥ — kāmābhivarṣaṇaiḥ | “By showering the desired things.”

mahitvā — māhātmyena ca | “And by greatness. Here, if mahitvā is taken as qualifying vṛṣatvebhiḥ, the meaning would be ‘one who showers desired things of greatness’. ‘tvaṁ varṣitā mahadbhir varṣaṇaiḥ’ (Ska. Bhā.).”

nṛcakṣāḥ — nṛṇāṁ yajñasya netṛṇāṁ yajamānānām abhimataphalasya darśayitā | “One who shows the sacrificers, who perform the sacrifice, the things they desire: this is the meaning. The word is also used with reference to deities such as Agni and Sūrya —”

त्वं नृचक्षा वृषभानु पूर्वीः कृष्णास्वग्ने अरुषो वि भाहि । tvaṃ nṛcakṣā vṛṣabhānu pūrvīḥ kṛṣṇāsv agne aruṣo vi bhāhi / (R. Saṃ. 3-[?]-[?] [?]; numerals as printed, small and doubtful)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “You, O Agni, beholder of men, bull-radiant, shine forth red among the many dark [nights].”

कविर्नृचक्षा अभि षीमचष्ट ऋतस्य योना विघृते मदन्ती ।

kavir nṛcakṣā abhi ṣīm acaṣṭa ṛtasya yonā vighṛte madantī / (R. Saṃ. 3-[?]-6 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “The seer, beholder of men, looked upon the two [the earth and heaven], rejoicing in the seat of Rta, in the ... [vighṛte, doubtful [?]].”

नृचक्षा रक्षः परि पश्य विश्व तस्य त्रीणि प्रति शृणीह्यग्रा । nṛcakṣā rakṣaḥ pari paśya vikṣu tasya trīṇi prati śṛṇīhy agrā / (R. Saṃ. 10-87-10 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Beholder of men, look around the Rakṣas among the peoples; break his three tips.”

“Wherever this attribute occurs, nṛṇāṃ draṣṭā means ‘one who looks upon the sacrificers with favour’. Only here is it darśayitā — ‘one who shows the fruit’. In R. Saṃ. 10-[?]-2 [?] the explanation is given, ‘nṛbhiḥ raśmibhiḥ prakāśamānaḥ’ [as read, doubtful [?]].”

dyumnebhiḥ — “dyumnaṃ dyotateḥ yaśo vā dhanaṃ vānnaṃ vā [Nirukta-like gloss, as printed] — since this is said, here any meaning may be given — ‘become possessed of fame by fames, wealth by wealths, or of food by foods: you are thus’.”

sukratuḥ — śobhanaḥ kratuḥ yasya saḥ, a bahuvrīhi; by kratvādayaś ca (क्रत्वादयश्च, Pā. 6-2-118 [?]) the final member takes the initial-acute [as printed]. bhūḥ — root bhū sattāyām; luṅ in the present sense, Vedic; siP in the second person singular; itaś ca (इतश्च) elides i; cleḥ sic (च्लेः सिच्) gives the sic replacement; gātisthāghupābhūbhyaḥ sicaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (गातिस्थाघुपाभूभ्यः सिचः परस्मैपदेषु) — luk of the sic; bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi (बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्योगेऽपि) — no aṭ augment; the s of the suffix becomes ru, visarga; nighāta accent following the preverb. sudakṣaḥ — root dakṣa vṛddhau; “dakṣyate 'neneti dakṣo balam”; ghaṇ in the instrumental sense; since it is ñit, the initial-acute by ñnityādir nityam (ञ्नित्यादिर्नित्यम्, [?]); śobhano dakṣo yasya, a bahuvrīhi; by ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi (आद्युदात्तं द्व्यच्छन्दसि, Pā. 6-2-119 [?]) — as the stem has two syllables, the final member takes the initial-acute. (Numerals read with doubt [?]; the last lines are partly smudged.)

viśvavedāḥ — viśvāni vedāṁsi yasyāsau; bahuvrīhau viśvaṁ saṁjñāyām (बहुव्रीहौ विश्वं संज्ञायाम्, Pā. 6-2-106 [?]) — the pre-member keeps the final-acute. vṛṣā — root vṛṣu secane; the Uṇādi suffix kanin; since nit, the initial-acute; the nominative singular. vṛṣatvebhiḥ — vṛṣṇo bhāvo vṛṣatvam; the instrumental plural follows; bahulaṁ chandasi (बहुलं छन्दसि, Pā. 7-1-10 [?]) — bhis does not take ais; bahuvacane jhaly et (बहुवचने झल्येत्) — the substitution e [reading uncertain [?]]; s becomes ru, visarga. mahitvā — root mahā pūjāyām; the Uṇādi suffix in — mahi; the abstract suffix tva; the instrumental singular ṭā follows, and by supāṁ sulug (सुपां सुलुक्) the case-ending is replaced by ā. dyumnebhiḥ — as before; bahulaṁ chandasi, no ais. nṛcakṣāḥ — root cakṣiṇ vyaktāyāṁ vāci; the Uṇādi suffix asun, the stem cakṣas; since nit, initial-acute; nṛṇāṁ cakṣāḥ; gatiḥ kārakopapadāt kṛt (गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्, Pā. 6-2-139 [?]) — the kṛdanta final member keeps its own accent. || 2 ||

Translation: “O Soma — rājñaḥ, of the lord of the Brāhmaṇas. ‘Soma is the king of us Brāhmaṇas’, according to the śruti (Tai. Brā. 1-8-5-2 [?]). Soma, brought for the sacrifice, purchased, covered with a cloth, is Varuṇa — from the mantra-sign ‘varuṇo 'si dhṛtavrata’ [‘you are Varuṇa, of firm vows’]. All the vratāni — the acts such as the Agniṣṭoma — are indeed yours, the purchased one: so in all the combinations (yogeṣu) it is you alone who are the instrument; this is the meaning. Therefore your dhāma, your own lustre, is bṛhat — great, extended — and gabhīram, endowed with depth. Or: this nu is in the sense of comparison; so Yāska has said: ‘And again, it has the sense of comparison: vṛkṣasya nu te puruhūta vayāḥ’ (Ni. 1-4 [?]). [Thus:] O Soma, your vratāni, your acts, are beneficial to the world, like those of Varuṇa, the shining king. The rest as above. O Soma, you are śuciḥ, the purifier of all. The example: priyo na mitraḥ — as the god Mitra, the friend of all and presiding over the day, is the purifier, so are you. And as Aryaman [aryamevāsi] — the sun that we see — you are dakṣāyyaḥ, the one who makes all grow: as the sun by day makes all grow by light, so by the Soma-rays, niśmṛtamayyaiḥ [as read, doubtful [?]], the whole world, moving and unmoving, being nourished, grows.”

Grammar tail of the bhāṣya (noted briefly): śuciṣṭvam — the visarga becomes s [the cited rule, yuṣmat-tat-takṣuḥśv antaḥ-pādam or similar, doubtful [?]]. dakṣāyyaḥ — root dakṣa vṛddhau; the suffix āyya by the Uṇādi sūtra śṛdakṣiṣpṛhigrahibhya āyyaḥ (U. 3-96 [?]).

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.3) (Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 335)

Soma — O Soma-deity; te nu vratāni — all your acts, together; rājñaḥ — of the lord, or of the shining one; varuṇasya — like the acts of Varuṇa (beneficial to the world) —

Or (the Kannada Pratipadārtha gives an alternative): “[vratāni — all the acts; rājñāḥ — of the sovereign; varuṇasya — of Varuṇa, covered with the cloth taken for the sacrifice; te nu — are indeed yours alone (you are the cause of all)].”

tava — your; dhāma — lustre; bṛhat — vast; gabhīram — endowed with depth; soma — O Soma; tvam — you; priyo na mitraḥ — like a friend who is favourable; śuciḥ asi — you are the purifier of everything; āryamā iva — like Aryaman; dakṣāyāḥ asi — you are the augments of all.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.3 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, all your acts are, like the acts of the sovereign Varuṇa, beneficial to the world. Your lustre is vast and endowed with depth. O Soma-deity, like a friend favourable to all, you purify everything. Like Aryaman, you bring everyone to growth.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.3)

“Your acts are like those of king Varuna ; Soma, your glory is great and profound ; you are the purifier of all like the beloved Mitra ; you are the augments [printed “angments”, sic] of all like Aryaman.” — as printed.

rājño nu te varuṇasya vratāni — “This pāda can be explained in two ways. On the authority of the śruti”

सोमोऽस्माकं ब्राह्मणानां राजा । somo 'smākaṁ brāhmaṇānāṁ rājā / (Tai. Saṁ. 1-8-10-2 [?], numerals as printed, doubtful)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Soma is the king of us Brāhmaṇas.”

“— the word rājan means ‘king of the Brāhmaṇas’; and, as in ‘yāgārthamāhṛtaḥ krīto vastreṇāvṛtaḥ somo varuṇaḥ’, the Soma purchased for the sacrifice and covered with cloth is well known as Varuṇa. So if it is taken as āvṛtta (turned back [to Varuṇa]), then it means: ‘your acts — all the acts such as the Agniṣṭoma — are, in short, the acts of the lord of us all, Varuṇa’. Or, if the indeclinable nu is used in the sense of iva (‘like’), taking upamārthe (‘in the sense of comparison’), then rājñāḥ — of the sovereign of all the worlds — varuṇasya — of Varuṇa — vratāni nu — ‘like the acts that benefit the world’, te — your acts too benefit the world.”

haṁti rakṣo bādhatē paryarātīr varivaḥ kṛṇvan vrajanasya rājā / (R. Saṁ. 9-[?]-10 [?], numerals as printed, doubtful; vrajanasya as read [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “He slays the Rakṣas, he drives back the foes, making room, the king of the [pasturing] fold.”

pavitrebhiḥ pavamāno nṛcakṣā rājā devānām uta martyānām / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-[?]-[?] [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Purifying himself through the filters, the beholder of men, the king of gods and of mortals.”

“In such places the epithet rājā is applied directly to Soma.”

dhāma — “The word dhāman has various meanings, such as lustre, dwelling-place and so on. Here any meaning may be given.”

gabhīram — “Deep, impenetrable. Both the dwelling-place and the greatness of the Soma-deity are gabhīra — never wholly comprehended by anyone, and deep in their very nature. This same description in the form of praise, ‘bṛhad gabhīraṃ tava soma dhāma’, is also found in Ṛ. Saṃ. [9-?]-[?] [?], in the same order, the śūkta’s printed in full there [as read, doubtful [?]].”

śuciḥ — “śocatir jvalati karmaṇaḥ (Ni. 6-[?] [?]) — from the root śuc, which gives the sense ‘to shine’, the noun śuci is formed. The word śuci has the meanings ‘brightness, light’; and ‘pure, clean’ is also given; the word is produced from the same root. And the Nirukta writer’s statement, niśi-kram-asmāt-pāpakam (Ni. 6-[?] [?]) [‘sin has been ... (?) from him’; as read, doubtful [?]], is also well known. On these authorities, śuciḥ here is to be understood as ‘purity’. As Mitra, the god who presides over the day, purifies all the world by removing darkness and sin, so Soma too is the purifier of all, the remover of sin.”

अवस्यतं मुंचतं यन्नो अस्ति तनूषु बद्धं कृतमेनो अस्मत् ।

avasyataṃ muñcataṃ yan no asti tanūṣu baddhaṃ kṛtam eno asmat / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-[?]-3 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Desiring [our welfare], release whatever sin done by us is bound in our bodies.”

dakṣāyāḥ — dakṣa vṛddhau | “Although the word dakṣa is used among the names of strength that are instruments of growth, here the meaning is growth itself. dakṣāyāḥ means ‘the author of such growth’. As the sun, in the form of Aryaman, makes the worlds grow with his rays throughout the day, so Soma too, with his rays full of nectar, makes the whole world, moving and unmoving, grow.”

सोम राजन्प्र ण आयूंषि तारीरहानीव सूर्यो वासराणि ।

Gloss, mine and tentative: “O king Soma, extend our lives, as the sun extends the days.”

“In such places everywhere, the prayer is: ‘as the sun increases the days, the divisions of time that sustain the world, so too increase our lives’ (asmākam āyūṃśi pra vardhaya).”

Translation: “In the Āgrayaṇa offering, for the oblation to Soma, ‘yā te dhāmāni’ is the yājyā; prescribed in the section ‘āgrayaṇaṁ vrihiṣyāmākayavānām’: ‘soma yās te mayobhuvo yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām’ (Ā. 2-9 [?]). This same Ṛk is the yājyā for the vapā of the animal of the Saumya of the ekādaśīna; prescribed: ‘yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām uṣāḥaṁ yutsu pṛtanāsu papriṁ’ (Ā. 3-2 [?]). At the prāyaṇyā offering it is the yājyā of this same Soma; prescribed: ‘tvaṁ soma pra cikito manīṣā yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām’ (Ā. 4-3 [?]). — O Soma, whatever dhāmāni, lustres, of yours are in heaven; likewise whatever are on earth; likewise whatever are on the mountains, the rock-heaps that have the nature of hills; likewise whatever are in the plants such as rice and in the waters: with all those lustres united, sumanāḥ — well-minded — aheḥan, not angry, O king Soma, shining Soma, being such, prati gṛbhāya — receive in return the oblations offered by us.”

Grammar tail (noted briefly): yā — the elision of śi by “śe chandasi bahulam”; pṛthivyām — the case-ending acute by udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt; oṣadhiṣu — the lengthening (Pā. 6-3-132 [?]); apsu — the case-ending accent by ūḍdam...; sumanāḥ — the final-member initial-acute accent; gṛbhāya — root grah upādāne; in Chandas the śnā suffix is replaced by śāyac [the cited rule śāyajapi..., partly read [?]]. (Numerals as read, doubtful [?].)

rājan — O shining one; soma — O Soma-deity; te — your; yā dhāmāni — whichever lustres; divi — are in the world of heaven; pṛthivyām — on the earth; yā — whichever —

— lustres are in the mountains (likewise); oṣadhīṣu — in the roots and the like (plants), too; apsu — in the waters, too; yā — whichever lustres there are; tebhiḥ viśvaiḥ — with all those lustres, united (and); sumanāḥ — gracious-minded; ahelān — free of anger; naḥ havyā — the oblations offered by us; prati gṛbhāya — accept.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.4 (Kannada)

“O shining Soma-deity, whichever of your lustres are in the world of heaven, on the earth, in the mountains, in the roots and plants and in the waters, endowed with all those lustres, be gracious-minded towards us and free of anger, and accept the oblations offered by us.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.4)

“O illustrious Soma, endowed with all the glories that are displayed by you in heaven, on earth, in the mountains, in the plants, in the waters, be well-disposed towards us and devoid of anger, accept our oblations.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.4) (Kannada)

“When the oblation belonging to the Soma deity is offered in the Āgrayaṇeṣṭi, this Rk, yā te dhāmāni, is to be used as the yājyā mantra; this is shown in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section called ‘āgrayaṇaṁ vr̥hiśyāmākayavānām’, by the sūtra ‘soma yās te mayobhuvo yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām’ (Ā. 2-9 [?]); and in the sacrifice called ekādaśina, at the vapā-offering of the animal for the Soma deity, it is to be used as the yājyā mantra; this is explained by the sūtra ‘yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām uṣāḥhaṁ yutsu pṛtanāsu papriṇ’ (Ā. 3-2 [?]). In the Prāyaṇīyeṣṭi also, at the time of offering the oblation to Soma, it is to be used as the yājyā; this is explained by the sūtra ‘tvaṁ soma pra cikito manīṣā yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām’ (Ā. 4-3 [?]).”

yā te dhāmāni — yāni tejāṁsi vartante tais sarvais tejobhir yuktaḥ | “Here the word dhāman may be given any meaning, ‘lustre’ or ‘place’. With all your lustres —

*Special Topics of Rik 91.4, continued from p. 340 (Kannada) — the sentence broken at the foot of p. 340 continues: “...with all your lustres, united [with them], or united with all your places, accept our oblations — this is the sense. If the word dhāman is taken in the sense of ‘place’, which are those places? —”*

divi — “One place of Soma is in the world of heaven. The story is well known that the first dwelling-place of Soma was the heavenly world, and that the falcon (śyena) brought it from there to the earth.”

“— many such śruti-sentences set forth that the place of Soma was first the world of heaven, and that afterwards the falcon brought it to the earth.”

pṛthivyām — “That the Soma-juice, for the performance of the sacrifice and for the satisfaction of Indra and the other deities, is brought down to the earth, and that its place is established in the earth, is said in the mantra”

Gloss, mine and tentative: “One made his seat on high in heaven, another on the earth, another in the mid-region [reading of divyanyaḥ doubtful [?]].”

“— and in many other places, as in this mantra, the benefit to the world that comes from Soma is described.”

parvateṣu — “Of all the best plants the mountain too is the support for the Soma-creeper; and it is said that the Soma-creeper is brought from the mountains for all that the sacrifice needs. In the R̥gveda:”

“— and likewise in the R̥ks 3-49-4 [?]; 5-43-4 [?]; 9-85-10 [?]; 9-59-6 [?] and others (numerals as read from small digits, all doubtful [?]) the place of Soma on the mountains is described.”

oṣadhīṣu — “Among the roots, the Soma-creeper itself, the best, is the support of the Soma-juice; so the place of the root-substance —”

ā yo gobhiḥ sṛjyata oṣadhīṣv ā devānāṃ sumna iṣyann upāvasuḥ / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-[?]-3 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Who is mixed with the milks, who [dwells] in the plants, [and] in the favour of the gods, the impeller, the one who stands by with riches [reading of the last words doubtful [?]].”

“In such Ṛks it is described that the Soma-juice, for the satisfaction of the deities, is established in the plants.”

apsu — “The sacred waters of the tīrthas increase the sweetness of the Soma-juice; at the beginning of the sacrifice the Soma-juice is mixed with water, and its sweetness thereby grows. In such contexts —”

याभिः सोमो मोदते हर्षते च कल्याणीभिर्युवतिभिर्न मर्यः । yābhiḥ somo modate harṣate ca kalyāṇībhīr yuvatibhir na maryaḥ / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-30-5 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “With whom [the waters] Soma rejoices and is glad, as a man with fair young women.”

“— in Ṛks such as this, the relation between Soma and the waters is likened to the relation of husband and wife, and to the happiness of wedded life. Therefore the waters too are well known as places of the Soma-juice.”

“Thus, existing in all these places — the world of heaven, the earth, the mountain, the plants, the water — and together with all the places, accept our oblations: this is the intention.”

“Moreover, if the word dhāman is given the sense ‘lustre’, it means ‘all the various kinds of greatness of Soma’. As is described in many places — Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-40-13 [?]; 9-82-24 [?]; 9-74-3 [?]; 9-85-6 [?] and others (numerals as read, doubtful) — Soma is lord over all men and the gods too, resplendent like the sun, the producer of all the orbs of light, the guide of the way of right conduct like Varuṇa, the one who sets the world in order: so, joined with these various greatnesses, accept our oblations — this is the intention.”

aheḥan — “reḥate, heḥate — since it is included among the ‘names of anger’ (krodhakarmanāmāni) beginning reḥate, heḥate in the Nirukta (Ni. 2-[?] [?]), heḥan means ‘being angry’, and aheḥan means ‘being not angry’. The prayer ‘aheḥan sumanā bhava’ is found in Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-24-11 [?]; 1-[?]-3 [?]; 6-[?]-1 [?]; 10-3[?]-8 [?] and other Ṛks (numerals as read, doubtful). Because of the belief that Agni, Varuṇa, Soma and the other deities punish those who commit sin, and because they know that the favour of those deities will not be obtained [by the sinful], the sacrificers all pray, out of fear of great sin, that those deities not be angry and, not disregarding them, show them favour and do them good.”

Translation: “At the full-moon offering, this Rk tvaṃ soma is the anuvākya for the ājyabhāga of the Saumya. It is prescribed: ‘agnir vṛtrāṇi jaghnanat’ is the anuvākya of the former ājyabhāga, ‘tvaṃ somāsi satpatiḥ’ of the latter (Ā. 1-3 [?]); and wherever there is an ājyabhāga with the Vṛtra-slaying Rks, this has application in all such places. At the forenoon upasad, it is the anuvākya for the principal Saumya offering; at the afternoon upasad it is the yājya of the same. It is prescribed: ‘tvaṃ somāsi satpatir gayasphāno amīvahā’ — the inversion of the yājya and anuvākya (Ā. 4-8 [?]). — O Soma, you are satpatiḥ: you are the lord of the Brāhmaṇas who abide in sacrificial acts. ‘Therefore the Brāhmaṇas have Soma as their king’: so says the śruti (Tai. Brā. 1-8-4-1 [?]). Or: you are such a Soma as has the good ones — Svāna and the rest — as his lords, his guardians. So it is handed down: ‘He says svāna bhrāja; these indeed guarded Soma in that world’ (Tai. Saṃ. 6-1-10-3 [?]). And you, rājā, shining, are vṛtrahā, the slayer of the asura Vṛtra or of enemies. Bhadraḥ, auspicious, kratuḥ, this sacrifice, the Agniṣṭoma and the others: you yourself become that form, since the sacrifices have you as their means.”

Grammar tail: satpatiḥ — in the bahuvrihi the first member keeps its natural accent; in the tatpuruṣa alternative, by patyāv aiśvare the first member likewise keeps its natural accent.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.5) (Kannada)

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; satpatiḥ asi — you are the lord of the good people who perform sacrificial acts (their protector); uta — and; rājā — the shining one; tvam — you; vṛtrahā — you are the destroyer of the demon Vṛtra.

Or (printed alternative): “[tvam — you; satpatiḥ — the protector of good people, and rājā — sovereign, asi — you are.]” bhadraḥ — the auspicious one; kratuḥ — the sacrifice such as the Agniṣṭoma; tvam (eva) asi — you yourself are.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.5 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, you are the lord of the good people who perform sacrifice. And you, the shining one, are the slayer of the demon Vṛtra. You yourself are the sacrifice, such as the Agniṣṭoma, that is auspicious.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.5) “Soma, you are the protector, the sovereign of the pious or even the slayer of vritra ; you are holy sacrifice.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.5) (Kannada)

“When the portion of ghee belonging to the Soma deity is offered in the Paurṇamāseṣṭi (full-moon sacrifice), this Ṛk, tvaṃ soma, is to be used as the puronuvākya mantra; this is explained by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra ‘agnir vṛtrāṇi jaṃghanad iti pūrvasyājyabhāgasyānuvākya tvaṃ somāsi satpatir ity uttarasya’ (Ā. 1-3 [?]). In this way this Ṛk has application wherever the oblation is made with reference to Indra in connection with the slaying of Vṛtra. In the upasad sacrifice performed in the morning, in the mantras of the Soma deity, the principal puronuvākya is this Ṛk; this matter is pointed out by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra ‘tvaṃ somāsi satpatir gayasphāno amivahā iti viparyāso yājyānuvākyaṇāṃ’ (Ā. 4-8 [?]).”

satpatiḥ — satāṃ patiḥ | “Or satāṃ pālayitā; one can take it as a tatpuruṣa; or as a bahuvrihi, ‘santaḥ patayaḥ yasya’.”

तस्मात्सोमराजानो ब्राह्मणाः ।

tasmāt somarājāno brāhmaṇāḥ / (Tai. Saṃ. 6-1-10-5 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Therefore the Brāhmaṇas have Soma as their king.”

“— from such śruti-sentences it is well known that Soma is lord of the gods and of the good people who perform sacrifice, and the protector of the good; so the meaning ‘satāṃ patiḥ’ or ‘pālayitā’ may be given. Or”

स्वान भ्राजेत्याहैते वा अमुष्मिंल्लोके सोममरक्षन् ।

“— as such śruti-sentences say, one may take the meaning that Soma-deity is one for whom Svāna and the others are lords and protectors.”

rājā — rājamānaḥ | “Since the word satpatiḥ already means ‘lord’, rājā here may be taken to mean ‘the shining one’.”

vṛtrahā — vṛtrasyāsurasya śatror vā hantā | “In many wars Soma has fought alongside Indra with Vṛtra, helping him and winning the victory for Indra.”

स पवस्व य आविथेन्द्रं वृत्राय हन्तवे ।

sa pavasva ya āvithendraṃ vṛtrāya hantave / (R. Saṃ. 9-61-22 [?])

“As said in this Rk, and likewise in R. Saṃ. 9-31-6 [?]; 9-23-3 [?]; 9-24-3 [?]; 9-24-9 [?] and many more Rks (numerals as read, all doubtful), the epithet ‘Vṛtra-slayer’ is well known of Soma. Vṛtra means a cloud.”

bhadraḥ — “Auspicious; or worthy of worship.”

kratuḥ — “It may mean one possessed of works or one possessed of understanding; or, as the bhāṣya says, ‘agniṣṭomādi-yāga-rūpas tvam eva | tvatsādhanatvād yāgānām’ — you yourself are the sacrifice in all its forms: this is the meaning. When praying to the Soma-deity —”

आत्मा यज्ञस्य पूर्व्यः ।

आत्मा यज्ञस्य रंह्या सुष्वाणः पवते सुतः ।

ātmā yajñasya raṃhyā suṣvāṇaḥ pavate sutaḥ | (R. Saṃ. 9-6-8 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “The self of the sacrifice, swiftly, being pressed, the pressed [Soma] flows clear.”

“— in Ṛks such as these, Soma is described as the very self of the sacrifice; therefore the meaning ‘of the form of the sacrifice’ may be given to kratuḥ.”

satpatiḥ — a bahuvrīhi compound; by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्, Pā. 6-2-1 [?]) the first member keeps its natural accent. If compounded as a tatpuruṣa, “satām patiḥ”, then by patyāv aiśvarye (पत्यावैश्वर्ये, Pā. 6-2-18 [?]) the first member keeps its natural accent. vītrahā — vītraṃ hatavān; when the word vītra is the upapada, in the past sense, by brahmabhṛūṇavītreṣu kvip (ब्रह्मभ्रूणवृत्रेषु क्विप्, Pā. 3-2-87 [?]) the suffix kvip after the root han; the stem vītrahan; the nominative singular; by gati-kāropapadāt kṛt (गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्) the kṛdanta final member keeps its natural accent — (the print continues on p. 347)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 91.5, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly): vītrahā — the final member’s own accent is kept. bhadraḥ — root bhadi kalyāṇe sukhe ca; the Uṇādi suffix rak; by the suffix accent the final syllable is acute. ॥ 5 ॥

Translation: “In the Agnicayana rite with the Agni-building, after the animal-offering (puro dāśa) of the Agnīṣomīya, the oblations of the devasuvām (‘impellers of the gods’) are measured out. There, for the oblation of Soma Vanaspati, tvaṃ ca soma is the anuvākya; prescribed in the section athāgnīṣomīyeṇa: ‘tvaṃ ca soma no vaśo brahmā devānāṃ padavīḥ kavīnām’ (Ā. 4-11 [?]). — O Soma, if you, our life-medicine (jīvātu), the means of life for us the praisers, vaśaḥ — would desire [us], then we shall not die. How are you? Priyastotraḥ — he whose praises are dear; the sense is that you are to be praised by many. Vanaspatiḥ — you are the lord, the protector, of the forests, in the form of plants and trees. ‘Soma is the king of the plants’, says the śruti (Tai. Saṃ. 6-1-9-1 [?]).”

Grammar tail (clotted; characterized, not transcribed): vaśaḥ — root vaśa kāntau, in the leṭ with sip, the augment aḍ; since the augments are unaccented the accent of the root remains; the ca in tvaṃ ca is the particle caṇ, here in the sense of ced (“if”) [as read, doubtful [?]], and from its connexion the nighāta is prohibited [the cited rule nipātair yad yadi hanta... partly read [?]]. jīvātum — root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; the suffix ātu (jīver ātuḥ, U. 1-80 [?]). marāmahe — root mṛṇ prāṇatyāge, śap by vyatyaya.

Soma — O Soma-deity; priyastotraḥ — one who is attached to praise; vanaspatiḥ — the lord of plants and of grains; tvam — you; naḥ — to us; jīvātum — the life-sustaining substance (to give); (tvam) ca — vaśaḥ — if you (graciously) desire it; na marāmahe — we do not die.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.6 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, you who are fond of praise and are the lord of the plants and of the grains: if you graciously desire to give us the life-sustaining substance, then we do not die at all.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.6)

“O Soma, fond of praise, the lord, of plants, you are life to us ; if you wish we will not die.” — as printed [the stray comma after “lord” is as printed].

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.6) (Kannada)

“In the sacrifices performed after the Agni-building (agnicayana), when the animal-offering and puroḍāśa belonging to the Agniṣomīya (Agni and Soma deities) are offered, the eight oblations called devasuvām must be offered. At that time, when the offering is made with reference to the Soma deity and the Vanaspati deity, this mantra tvaṁ ca soma is to be used as the puronuvākya; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra states it in the section athāgniṣomīyeṇa by the sūtra ‘tvaṁ ca soma no vaśo brahmā devānāṁ padaviḥ kavīnām’ (Ā. 4-11 [?]).”

vanaspatiḥ — vanānām oṣadhivanaspatirūpāṇāṁ pālayitāsi | “Soma is the protector of plants and of grains. It is He who is the life-sustainer and the one who wards off death; therefore the sacrificers always praise Him.”

nityastotro vanaspatir dhīnām antaḥ sabardughaḥ | (R. Saṁ. 9-12-2 [?], numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “The ever-praised lord of the forest, within the [sacred] works, the milker of the sabar [milk] [reading of the last word doubtful [?]].”

सोमो वा ओषधीनां राजा ।

somo vā oṣadhīnāṁ rājā | (Tai. Saṁ. 6-1-9-1 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Soma indeed is the king of the plants.”

“In such places Soma is described as the king of the plants and of the grains.”

jīvātum — jīvanauṣadham | “The word jīvātu means the substance needed for sustaining life — food — or long life. The author of the Nirukta, citing the R̥gveda mantra —” asunīte mano asmāsu dhāraya jīvātave su pra tirā na āyuḥ | (R. Saṃ. 10-59-5 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “O Asunīti, set your mind upon us; for our living extend our life well.”

“— has explained jīvātave as ‘ciraṃ jīvanāya’ (Ni. 10-40 [?]) — ‘for long living’. Here Sāyaṇa has given the explanation ‘jīvanauśadham’; any meaning may be accepted here.”

vaśaḥ — vaśa kāntau | vaśaḥ kāmayethāḥ | “Sāyaṇa takes it in the sense of the agent: ‘if you wish’; Skandasvāmin explains ‘kāmyaḥ prārthayitavyo yācyaḥ’ — ‘one to be desired, to be prayed to, to be asked’: one who is entreated. To fit the context, the first meaning seems the right one.”

na marāmahe — mṛṇ prāṇatyāge | “The meaning is: if Soma is gracious to us, we shall not die at all.”

नो षु णः सोम मृत्यवे परा दाः पश्येम नु सूर्यमुच्चरन्तम् ।

no ṣu ṇaḥ soma mṛtyave parā dāḥ paśyema nu sūryam uccarantam | (R. Saṃ. 10-59-4 [?])

soma rājan pra ṇa āyūṃṣi tārīr ahānīva sūryo vāsarāṇi | (R. Saṃ. 8-44-2 [?]; the same Rk cited on p. 337 with a different numeral — both readings doubtful [?])

“So in many places one sees that Soma is entreated with the prayer ‘save us from death’; the belief is that with the favour of Soma long life is assured.”

vaśaḥ — root vaś kāntau; leṭ, second person singular, sip; by itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु) the i is elided; by leṭo ‘ḍāṭau (लेटो ङडाटौ) the augment aṭ comes; the s — ru, visarga; by āgamā anudāttāḥ (आगमा अनुदात्ताः) the accent of the root remains. Here ca in tvaṃ ca is the particle caṇ in the sense of ced; its junction with vaśaḥ, a finite verb, would bring nighāta; the nighāta is prevented by nipātair yaḍ yaḍi hanta... (निपातैर्यद्यदिहन्त — , printed thus; Pā. 8-1-30 [?]). jīvātum — root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; jīver ātuḥ (जीवेरातुः) — the suffix ātu (U. 1-[?] [?]); accusative singular; by the suffix accent the ā is acute. marāmahe — root mṛṇ prāṇatyāge; laṭ, first person plural, mahiṇ; by ḍita ātmanepadānāṃ ṭer e (टित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे) the final e; by vyatyayo bahulam (व्यत्ययो बहुलम्) śap — (the print continues on p. 350)

priyāṇi stotrāṇi yasya saḥ; bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्) — the first member keeps its natural accent. vanaspatiḥ — by ubhe vanaspatyādiṣu (उभे वनस्पत्यादिषु, Pā. 6-2-140 [?]) both the first and the final members keep their natural accent at once. vanānām patiḥ vanaspatiḥ: since it belongs to the pāraskarādi group, the augment suṭ comes. || 6 ||

Translation: “O Soma, to the mahe — the great, the old — ṛtāyate, the person who desires for himself ṛta, the sacrifice, jīvase, in order to live, you bestow bhagam, wealth [fit for enjoyment (the print here is clotted [?])]. Vidadhāsi means ‘you make’. And likewise to the young (yūne) who desires the sacrifice you give wealth in order to live.”

Grammar tail: mahe from mahat, the loss of the final t being Vedic; the case-ending acute by the vārttika “bṛhanmahator upasaṃkhyānam”. yūne — the saṃprasāraṇa by śvayuvamaghonām ataddhite. ṛtāyate — “he wishes ṛtam for himself”, the suffix kyac by supa ātmanaḥ kyac; the prohibition of i and lengthening by na chandasy aputrasya; the lengthening in the Samhitā by anyeṣām api dṛśyate; śatṛ after the laṭ of the kyac-ending stem; the case-ending acute by śatur anumō nadyajādī. jīvase — root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; the suffix ase in the sense of the infinitive [citing tumarthe sesenase..., partly read [?]].

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.7) (Kannada)

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; ṛtāyate — to him who desires the sacrifice; mahe — to the old one too; jīvase — in order to live; dakṣam — fit to be enjoyed; bhagam — wealth; dadhāsi — you graciously give (so); tvam — you; yūne — to the young one too (who desires to perform sacrifice), you give wealth in order to live.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.7 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, you graciously give wealth, which they need for living and are fit to enjoy, both to the old who desire to bring the sacrificial works to fulfilment and, in the same way, to the young who so desire.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.7) “Soma, you bestow upon him who worships you whether old or young, wealth that he may enjoy and live.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.7) (Kannada)

“In the Āyusḥkāmeṣṭi, when the second ājyabhāga oblation is offered, the mantra tvaṃ soma mahe bhagam is to be used as the puronuvākya; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning atha kāmāyāḥ, says ‘ā no agne sucetunā tvaṃ soma mahe bhagam’ (Ā. 2-10 [?]).”

ṛtāyate — yajñam ātmana icchate puruṣāya | “Only to the sacrificer who fulfils the sacrifice and desires its fruit are wealth and strength obtained. To the one who does not, there is nothing: this is the meaning. Here: ṛtāyate mahe, ṛtāyate taruṇāya ca dakṣam upabhogasamarthaṃ dhanaṃ vidadhāsi — whether the sacrificer is old or young, you graciously give him wealth fit for enjoyment: so Sāyaṇa explains; mahe bhagaṃ, ṛtāyate yūne balaṃ —

“— vṛddhāya dhanaṃ vā dadāsi”: to the old you graciously give wealth, and to the young who desire to perform sacrifice, strength or growth — so Skandasvāmin explains. ‘vṛddhāya dhanaṃ dadhāsi | yūne ca balaṃ ca yacchasi’ [as printed]: Mādhava too, like Skandasvāmin, explains in this way, and, not making the word dakṣa an attribute of bhaga, gives separate meanings [as read].”

jīvase — “For living.” (printed in English in the source: “for long life.”)

mahe — the stem mahat; in the dative singular the form is mahe; in the Saṃhitā the t is elided, Vedic; by the vārttika bṛhanmahator upasaṃkhyānam the case-ending takes the acute. yūne — the stem yuvan; after the dative singular, by śvayuvamaghonām ataddhite (श्वयुवमघोनामतद्धिते, Pā. 6-4-133 [?]) the va would take saṃprasāraṇa, but since the va is followed by a vowel the ya is not changed; va becomes u; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (संप्रसारणाच्च, Pā. 6-1-108 [?]) the preceding form; hence yūne. ṛtāyate — ṛtam ātmana icchati; by supa ātmanaḥ kyac (सुप आत्मनः क्यच्, Pā. 3-1-8 [?]) kyac after the noun ṛta in the desiderative sense; by na chandasya aputrasya (न छन्दस्यपुत्रस्य, Pā. 7-4-35 [?]) neither i nor lengthening appears; by anyeṣām api dṛśyate (अन्येषामपि दृश्यते, Pā. 6-3-137 [?]) the lengthening in the Saṃhitā; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ (सनाद्यन्ता धातवः) the kyac-ending is a root; śatṛ in the sense of the present participle gives ṛtāyat; the dative singular; as the stem has no num, by śatur anumō nadyajādī (शतुरनुमो नद्यजादी, Pā. 6-1-173 [?]) the case-ending takes the acute. dadhāsi — root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; la ṭ, second person singular; the nighāta accent. jīvase — root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; when the sense is that of the infinitive, by tumarthe sesenase... (तुमर्थे सेसेनसेसेन..., Pā. 3-4-9 [?]) the suffix ase; since it ends in a vowel, by kṛn mejantaḥ (कृन्मेजन्तः, Pā. 1-1-39 [?]) it is an indeclinable; by the suffix accent the middle syllable is acute. ॥ 7 ॥

aghāyataḥ — aghaṁ pāpaṁ taddhetukaṁ duḥkham asmākaṁ kartum icchataḥ | “Those who wish to cause us suffering, the cause of which is sin, and to injure us.”

rakṣa — root rakṣ pālana; loṭ, second person singular, sip; by serhy apicca (सेह्यपिच्च, Pā. 3-4-87 [?]) hi is the replacement; the śap suffix; by ato heḥ (अतो हेः) the luk of hi; by dvyacos tastiṇaḥ (द्व्यचोऽतस्तिङः, Pā. 6-3-135 [?]) the vowel is lengthened in the Saṁhitā, since the verb is of two syllables (hence the Saṁhitā’s rakṣā) —

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 91.8, continued (grammar page, noted briefly): [rakṣa, continued —] since it stands at the head of the pāda (padādi) the nighāta accent does not appear; as śap is pit, it is unaccented; then the accent of the root remains. aghāyataḥ — “he who wishes agha, evil, for others”, aghāyan; by chandasi parecchāyām api (the sūtra as printed) the suffix kyac after the noun agha; by kyaci ca (क्यचि च, Pā. 7-4-33 [?]) the ī would be obtained, but it is forbidden by na chandasy aputrasya (न छन्दस्यपुत्रस्य); by āśvāghasyāt (अश्वघस्यात्, Pā. 7-4-37 [?]) ātva of the word agha: hence aghāyat; the ablative singular; after śatṛ; by śatur anumō nadyajādī (शतुरुनुमो नद्यजादी, Pā. 6-1-173 [?]) the case-ending beginning with a vowel (as) takes the acute. riṣyet — root ruṣa riṣa hiṃsāyām; vidhiliṇ, third person singular; by iteś ca (इतेश्च) the i of tip is elided; the augment yāsu ṭ, śyan; by ato yeyaḥ (अतो येयः) the iyā-replacement; since a finite verb follows [a word], the nighāta. tvāvataḥ — tvat sadṛśaḥ tvāvān; by the vārttika “vatup-prakaraṇe yuṣmadasmadbhyāṃ chandasi sādṛśya upasaṃkhyānam” the matup [vatup] suffix in the sense of similarity; with yuṣmad + vatup, by pratyayottarapadaṃś ca (प्रत्ययोत्तरपदयोश्च, Pā. 7-2-98 [?]) the replacement tva for the stem up to ma; ā sarvanāmnaḥ (आ सर्वनाम्नः, Pā. 6-3-91 [?]) — ātva before vatup, which follows the pronoun: tvāvat; the genitive/ablative singular form [the print’s case-name doubtful [?]]; as vatup is pit, unaccented. || 8 ||

In the Āgrayaṇa offering, for the Saumya, soma yās te is the anuvākyaḥ; prescribed: ‘soma yās te mayobhuvo yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām’ (2-9 [?]). In the Aśvamedha too, after the offering to Pūṣan, this is the anuvākyaḥ for the second ājyabhāga; prescribed: ‘tvam agne saprathā asi soma yās te mayobhuva’, a pair [sadvantau] (Ā. 10-6 [?]). — O Soma, whichever ūtayaḥ (helps, protections) of yours, mayobhuvaḥ — producers of mayas, of happiness — exist for the sacrificer who gives oblations (dāśuṣe), such as the caru and puroḍāśa: with those protections be our avitā, our protector.”

Grammar tail: mayobhuvaḥ — since it is an attribute of ūtayaḥ and is feminine, by bhuvaś ca (Pā. 4-1-42 [?]) the feminine suffix nīṣ would be obtained; but since in vāto guṇavacanāt the ta-restricted ut [“of a stem ending in u”] continues, it does not occur.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.9) (Kannada)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Where delights and joys, pleasures and ecstasies abide, where the desires of desire are attained — there make me immortal; flow clear for Indra, O Indu.”

“The nature of the happiness described in these Rks surpasses even the happiness of heaven as it is ordinarily described: a happiness of the highest order, with joy, delight and ecstasy of the kind that has no craving left [nikāma].”

soma — vocative singular; since it stands at the head of the pāda, the āmantrita-nighāta does not occur; by āmantritasya ca (Pā. 6-1-198 [?]) the initial-acute accent.

mayobhuvaḥ — mayasaḥ bhāvayitṛyaḥ mayobhuvaḥ; when mayas is the upapada, kvip after the root bhū. Though ūti here is feminine and the word is its attribute, so that by bhuvaś ca (Pā. 4-1-42 [?]) nīṣ would have to come, by vāto guṇavachanaṭ (वा तो गुणवचनात्, Pā. 4-1-44 [?]) the restriction to ut [a stem ending in u] continues, and it does not come; as it is lengthened, there is no nīṣ here. By aci śnudhātubhruvām... (अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवां..., Pā. 6-4-77 [?]), since jas follows, the uvañ replacement. santi — root as bhuvi; laṭ, third person plural; by śnasor allopaḥ (श्नसोरल्लोपः, Pā. 6-4-111 [?]) the a of the root as is elided; since yāḥ (“which”) in the earlier part is related, the nighāta of the finite verb does not occur; by the suffix accent the initial acute. dāśuṣe — root ḍudāñ dāne; kvasu, as an irregular formation, by dāśvān sāhvān mīḍhvāmś ca (दाशवान्साह्वान्मीद्वामश्च, Pā. 6-1-12 [?]); in the dative singular, by vasoḥ saṃprasāraṇam (वसोः संप्रसारणम्, Pā. 6-4-131 [?]) saṃprasāraṇa; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (संप्रसारणाच्च) the preceding form; by śāsivasighasīnām ca (शासिवसिघसीनां च, Pā. 8-3-60 [?]) the ṣatva of the s of vasu: dāśuṣe. avitā — root av rakṣaṇe; tṛ in the agent sense; by ārdhadhātukasyeḍvalādeḥ (आर्धधातुकस्येड्वलादेः) the augment iṭ: avitṛ; the nominative singular, su following; an -an- replacement [the print names it anañ/ānañ, read doubtfully [?]]; by aptṛntṛsvasṛ... (अप्तृन्तृस्वसृ..., the sūtra begins thus; the number not legible [?]) the lengthening of the penultimate; su-elision; n-elision; by cit (चित्, Pā. 6-1-163 [?]) the final syllable takes the acute. ॥ 9 ॥ prācīnavaṃśa [the hall with the eastward-facing roof-beam]. And having come, be for our vṛdhe, for the growth of the sacrifice.”

Grammar tail: jujuṣāṇaḥ — root juṣī prītiśevanayoḥ; the liṭ in Chandas; the suffix kānac for the liṭ, by cit the final-acute. upāgahi — in the loṭ of gam, by bahulaṃ chandasi the luk of śap; by anudāttopadeśa... the loss of the m; by asiddhavad atrābhāt the m-loss counts as not having occurred, so that the elision of hi does not take place; by gatiḥ gatau (Pā. 8-1-70 [?]) the nighāta

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.10) (Kannada)

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; imaṃ yajñam — this sacrifice (that we are bringing to fulfilment); idaṃ vacaḥ — this speech in the form of praise; jujuṣāṇaḥ — accepting and enjoying; upāgahi — come graciously (to this house of sacrifice of ours); naḥ — our; vṛdhe — for the growth (of the sacrifice); bhava — be (gracious).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.10 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, come graciously to this house of sacrifice of ours, accepting and enjoying this sacrifice that we bring to fulfilment and this speech in the form of praise. And be a helper in the growth of our sacrifice.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.10)

“O Soma, accepting this our sacrifice, and this our praise, approach us and be to us as the angmenter [sic] of our rite.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.10) (Kannada)

jujuṣāṇaḥ — juṣī prītisevanayoḥ | “One who enjoys: that is, one who graciously enjoys our sacrifice and our praise-speech with regard.”

vṛdhe — vṛdhu vṛddhau | “For the growth, for the increase of our sacrifice.”

“As said in Ṛks such as these, the satisfaction of all the deities, which is the means to the final end of the sacrifice, arises from the drinking of Soma; so Soma himself is the chief cause of the growth of our sacrifice. Therefore there is the prayer ‘cause our sacrifice to grow’. Moreover, as described in the Ṛks R. Saṁ. 9-2-10 [?], 9-6-8 [?] and the like, Soma himself is yajñātmā, the self of the sacrifice; therefore he is the cause of the growth of the sacrifice.”

jujuṣāṇaḥ — root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ; in the present sense, by chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ (छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः, Pā. 3-4-6 [?]) the liṭ; by liṭaḥ kānajvā (लिटः कानज्वा, Pā. 3-2-106 [?]) kānac for the liṭ; the root is doubled, the reduplicative keeps halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; by aṭkuvāṇnumvyavāye 'pi [the sūtra read as “āṭkuvāj...”, partial] the ṇatva of the n; by cit (चित्, Pā. 6-1-163 [?]) the final-acute. upāgahi — upa + ā, the preverbs (gatiś ca); root gam gatau; loṭ, second person singular, siṭ; by serhy apicca (सेह्यपिच्च) hi is the replacement; by bahulaṁ chandasi the luk of śap; since by the prescription of non-pit the hi is ñit, by anudāttopadeśa... (अनुदात्तोपदेशः..., Pā. 6-4-37 [?]) the nasal m of the root is elided; by asiddhavad atrābhāt (असिद्धवदत्राभात्, Pā. 6-4-22 [?]) the m-elision counts as not having occurred, so the elision of hi by ato heḥ (अतो हेः) does not come; since upa is a gati and ā [a preverb with the same name] follows, by gatiṛ gatau (Pā. 8-1-70 [?]) the preceding preverb (upa) takes the nighāta accent. vṛdhe — root vṛdhu vṛddhau; after the suffix kvip the word is vṛdh; the dative singular; by sāvekācas tṛṭiyādir vibhaktiḥ (सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिर्विभक्तिः, Pā. 6-1-168 [?]) the case-ending takes the acute. ॥ 10 ॥

Translation: “At the Darśa (new-moon) sacrifice, for the ājyabhāga of the Saumya, soma gīrbhiḥ is the anuvākya; prescribed: ‘agniḥ pratnena manmanā soma gīrbhiṣ ṭvā vayaṃ’ (Ā. 1-3 [?]); and elsewhere too, wherever there are ājyabhāga oblations with the vṛdhanvat Rks, this is the anuvākya of the second ājyabhāga. — O Soma, we, vacovidaḥ — the knowers of the words of praise, the performers — gīrbhiḥ, with words of praise, vardhayāmaḥ tvā — we make you grow, we render you exalted. And you, such as you are, sumṛṭhīkaḥ — making good happiness for us — ā viśa, come.”

Grammar tail: sumṛṭhīkaḥ — root mṛḍa sukhane; the Uṇādi kīkan (mṛḍeḥ kīkanakanau, U. 4-24 [?]) in the abstract sense; śobhanaṃ mṛḍīkaṃ yasya — a bahuvrīhi; by naṣsubhyām the final-member final-acute.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.11) (Kannada)

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvā — you; vacovidaḥ — familiar with praise-words; vayam — we; gīrbhiḥ — by the praise-words; vardhayāmaḥ — cause to grow (exalt); naḥ — to us; sumṛṅkaḥ — an excellent bringer of happiness; ā viśa — be gracious.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.11 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, the way of praising you is well known to us. With pure praise-words we praise you and cause you to grow. Come here as the maker of the most excellent happiness for us.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.11)

“Acquainted with hymns we elevate you with praises ; do you who are benignant approach.” — as printed.

“In the Darśayāga, when the ājyabhāga oblation is offered to the Soma deity, the mantra soma gīrbhiḥ is the puronuvākya mantra, says the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra: ‘agniḥ pratnena manmanā soma’

Special Topics of Rik 91.11, continued from p. 361 (Kannada): “— gīrbhiḥ tvā vayam’ (Ā. 1-3 [?]). In other places too — that is, wherever the ājyabhāga oblations with the vṛdhanvatī Ṛks occur — it should be understood that this mantra is the puronuvākya of the second ājyabhāga.”

vacovidaḥ — vacasāṃ stutīnāṃ jñātāraḥ | “That is, those who know well the nature of the words of praise and so praise the deities. The word vacas here means ‘praise’. For instance, in the Ṛks Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-[?]-[?] [?]; 8-[?]-[?] [?] and the like, and in the Ṛk Ṛ. Saṃ. 4-31-10 [?] cited by the author of the Nirukta (Ni. 10-31 [?]), the word vacas has the sense of ‘praise’ too. Therefore vacovidaḥ means those who, knowing well the nature of praise, praise the deities in the proper order.”

gīrbhiḥ — stutayo giraḥ | “The author of the Nirukta explains gir as derived from the root gṛ (gṛṇāteḥ, Ni. 1-11 [?]), which gives the sense ‘to speak’, and says that the word giraḥ in the Ṛk tam id vardhantu no giraḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-13-8 [?]) means ‘praises’. Since the same sense is found in Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-[?]-[?] [?]; 8-[?]-[?] [?] and other Ṛks, gīrbhiḥ here too means ‘by praises’. Because all deities are fond of praise, and because they attain growth by praises given with satisfaction, here too it is ‘by speech in the form of praise’.”

vardhayāmaḥ — pravṛddhaṃ kurmaḥ | “We make you grow, that is, we praise so that you may grow — this is the meaning, as in the Ṛk tam id vardhantu no giraḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-13-8 [?]).”

sumṛṅkaḥ — mṛṇa sukhane | śobhanaṃ sukhaṃ kurvan san | “Be gracious, making the most excellent happiness for us. The nature of the happiness described in the eleven Ṛks of the 113th sūkta of Ṛ. Saṃ. 9 [as read, doubtful [?]] has been explained in the commentary on the Ṛk 9-[?]-[?] [?].”

gīrbhiḥ — the word gir; the instrumental plural, bhis following; by r-vor upadhāyā dīrgha ikaḥ (वोरुपधाया दीर्घ इकः, Pā. 8-2-76 [?]; printed “वोरुपधाया दीर्घः...”) the penultimate i is lengthened. vardhayāmaḥ — root vṛdhu vṛddhau; in the causative sense ṛic; by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च, Pā. 7-3-86 [?]) the guṇa of the light penultimate; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ the ṛic-ending stem is a root; then laḥ; in the first person plural mas; śap; the guṇa of ṛic because of it; the ay replacement; by ato dīrgho yañi (अतो दीर्घो यञि) the lengthening of the stem-final a; since at the head of the pāda, no nighāta; the accent of ṛic appears.

Translation: “There are three Pavamāneṣṭis. In the third of these, the iṣṭi, this Rk gayasphānaḥ is the anuvākyā of the latter ājyabhāga; it is prescribed: ‘puṣṭimantāv agninā rayim aśnavad gayasphāno amivahā’ (Ā. 2-1 [?]). This same Rk is the yājyā of the Soma-offering at the morning upasad, and the anuvākyā at the evening one; it is prescribed in the section athopasad: ‘tvaṃ somāsi satpatir gayasphāno amivahā’ (Ā. 4-8 [?]). — Gayasphānaḥ — gaya is a name for wealth: the augments of wealth. Amivahā — the slayer of diseases (amivā). Vasuvit — he who obtains for the praisers, who causes them to reach, wealth. Puṣṭivardhanaḥ — the augments of nourishment, of prosperity. Sumitraḥ — he who has good friends, good companions. O Soma, be for us endowed with these qualities.”

Grammar tail: gayasphānaḥ — root sphāyī vṛddhau; from the root with the causative sense included, the suffix lyuṭ, by vyatyaya the y is dropped; in these four words beginning with this, the final member, a kṛdanta, keeps its natural accent. sumitraḥ — by nañsubhyām the final-member final-acute.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.12) (Kannada)

Soma — O Soma-deity; naḥ — to us; gayasphānaḥ — one who makes wealth grow; amivahā — a destroyer of diseases; vasuvit — one who obtains (for the praisers) wealth; puṣṭivardhanaḥ — one who makes the wealth of nourishment grow; sumitraḥ — an excellent friend; bhava — be.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.12 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, be for us one who makes our wealth grow, a destroyer of disease, a giver of wealth, a maker of the wealth of nourishment to grow, and an excellent friend.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.12)

“O Soma, be unto us, the bestower of wealth, the remover of disease [sic], the cognizant of riches, the augmentor of nourishment and an excellent friend.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.12) (Kannada)

“There are three iṣṭis named Pavamāneṣṭi. In the third of these, for the final ājyabhāga oblation, the Rk gayasphānaḥ is to be used as the puronuvākya mantra; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows this by the sūtra ‘puṣṭimantāv agninā rayim aśnavad gayasphāno amivahā’ (Ā. 2-1 [?]). And in the upasad iṣṭi performed in the morning, in the sacrifice belonging to Soma, this mantra is the puronuvākya in the evening; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section athopasad, makes it clear by the sūtra ‘tvaṁ somāsi satpatir gayasphāno amivahā’ (Ā. 4-8 [?]).”

gayasphānaḥ — gaye iti dhananāma | dhanasya vardhayitā | “The meaning is the one who makes wealth grow. The word gaya has three meanings: progeny, house and wealth. tuk, tokaṁ, —

Special Topics of Rik 91.12, continued from p. 364 (Kannada) — the sentence broken at the foot of p. 364 continues: “tuk, tokaṁ, tanayaḥ and the like, since the word gayaḥ is read among the names for offspring (apatya) (Ni. 3-2 [?]), gayaḥ may mean offspring; since it is read among the names for wealth, such as mīḥam, rekṇaḥ (Ni. 2-10 [?]), it may mean wealth; and since it is read among the names for house, such as gayaḥ, kṛvaraṁ, harmyam (Ni. 3-4 [?]), it may mean house. Sāyaṇācārya, in explaining the Rk 3-10-3 [?] of the Rksaṁhitā, says ‘gamyate nivāsāya iti gayaṁ gṛhaṁ, gīyate stūyate iti vā gayaṁ dhanam’ [‘that to which one goes for dwelling is gaya, the house; or that which is sung, praised, is gaya, wealth’]. Besides, he explains gaye in the Rk 6-24-2 [?] as ‘gṛhaṁ gṛhagataṁ prāṇijātaṁ vā’ [‘the house, or the creatures belonging to the house’]. Of these three meanings here, any one may be taken. In Skandasvāmin’s bhāṣya too: ‘sphāyir vṛddhyarthaḥ | apatyasya dhanasya gṛhasya vā vardhayitā gayasphānaḥ’ [‘sphāyī has the sense of growth; gayasphānaḥ is the one who makes grow offspring, wealth or house’]. Soma too has the epithet gayasādhana, as in —”

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Release him [Soma] like a calf with the mothers [the waters], the accomplisher of the house [or wealth].”

“— and in this Rk too all three meanings may be given.”

amivahā — amu rogeḥ [as read] | “From the word amu that gives the sense ‘disease’, the word amiva is derived; he who destroys it is well known as amivahā. Prayers to Soma for the destruction of disease are found in many places, for example —”

इन्द्राय सोम सुषुतः परि स्रवापामीवा भवतु रक्षसा सह ।

Gloss, mine and tentative: “O Soma and Rudra, tear apart the spreading disease that has entered our house [or wealth].”

“— in these Rks Soma is prayed to for help in destroying disease. Amivahā also means the destroyer of harmful enemies.”

vasuvit — dhanasya prāpayitā | “One who brings wealth together. The word vasu also means food (Ni. 2-9 [?]); therefore he may also be the giver of food. The names vasuvit, hiraṇyavit, govit are well known of Soma, for example —”

puṣṭivardhanaḥ — puṣṭeḥ saṃpado vardhayitā | “Because he destroys all diseases and grants wealth and prosperity, ‘he who increases nourishment of every kind’ is the meaning.”

sumitraḥ — śobhanāni mitrāṇi yasya saḥ | “One who has excellent friends: this is the meaning. Or śobhanānāṃ mitrāṇāṃ kartā: one who provides good friends.”

gayasphānaḥ — root sphāyī vṛddhau, a root with the causative sense included (the sense of impelling is contained in it); the suffix lyuṭ; when a y is intended, by vyatyayo bahulam (व्यत्ययो बहुलम्) the y of the root is elided; gayasya sphānaḥ; by gatikārapapadāt kṛt (Pā. 6-2-139 [?]) the final member, a kṛdanta, keeps its natural accent. Since in this mantra the four words beginning with this one all have a kṛdanta final member, the same sūtra gives the natural accent of the final member everywhere. amivahā — amivānāṃ hantā; root han hiṃsāgatyoḥ; by anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyate (अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यते, Pā. 3-2-178 [?]) the suffix kvip; the stem amīvahan; the nominative singular. vasuvit — root vid/lābhe; this too has the causative sense included; the suffix kvip. puṣṭivardhanaḥ — puṣṭeḥ vardhayitā; root vṛdhu vṛddhau; the sense of the causative included; then lyuṭ; by yuvor anākau (युवोरनाकौ, Pā. 7-1-1 [?]) ana for yu. sumitraḥ — śobhanāni mitrāṇi yasya saḥ; by nañsubhyām (नञ्सुभ्याम्, Pā. 6-2-172 [?]) the final syllable of the final member is acute. || 12 ||

Translation: “O Soma, in our hṛdi — our heart — rārandhi, delight; here the comparison is given: gāvo na — as cows delight, facing [the food], in the yavaseṣu, the good pastures; marya iva — or as a mortal man, one subject to death, delights in his own okye, his own house, with his sons and others: so, satisfied with the oblation we give, abide with us alone, and go nowhere else — this is the intention of the two comparisons.”

Grammar tail (clotted in the print; characterized, not transcribed): rarandhi — root ramu kriḍāyām; the parasmaipada by vṛatyaya; bahulaṃ chandasi — ślu for śap; by chandasy ubhayathā the hi is ārdhadhātuka, and not being ñit, hi becomes dhi [the cited rule añitka... partly read [?]]; by ser hy apicca, since hi is non-pit, its own accent remains; the lengthening of the reduplicative is Vedic. āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat — the preceding vocative counts as non-existent, so the nighāta, which presupposes a preceding word, does not occur. marya iva — the word marya, ending in the suffix yat, is irregularly formed [in the section beginning chandasi niṣkarkya...]; by yato 'nāvaḥ the initial-acute. okye — root uca samavāye; “ucyate samaveyate prāpyata ity okyaṃ gṛhaṃ”; the suffix ṇyat by ṛhaloṇyat; the ku substitution by cajoḥ ku ghiṇyatoḥ; tit — svarita.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.13) (Kannada)

Soma — O Soma-deity; yavaseṣu — in green pastures; ā — all around; gāvo na — like cows who delight; sve okye — in his own house; marya iva — like a man (with his sons and others), in contentment delighting; tvam — you; naḥ — our; hṛdi — in the heart; rarandhi (rārandhi) — delight.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.13 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, as cows, entering the rich green pastures, without going out, delight there; and as a man in his own house, with his sons, grandsons and the rest, delights in contentment without wishing to go elsewhere: so you, abiding in our heart, with no other going, delight in contentment.”

“Soma, dwell happy in our hearts, like cattle in fresh pastures, like men in their own abodes.” — as printed.

okye — oka iti nivāsanāmocyate [as read] (Ni. 3-3 [?]) | “A dwelling-place is called oka. sve okye means ‘in one’s own house’. To show that a man has complete self-regard (abhimāna) in his own house, the author of the Nirukta gives an example (R. Sam. 6-4-8 [?]): ‘atha sa okaḥ punar eva tad eti yata āgato bhavati’ (Ni. 3-3 [?]) [as read]. Even if one has gone abroad, one’s self-regard is in the house; one returns there; so one’s own house is the object of complete self-regard. In this Rk the ṛṣi prays to Soma to keep that very self-regard and independence in our heart and to show affection.”

maryaḥ — martyo manuṣyo maraṇadharmā (Ni. 2-[?] [?]) | “One whose nature is to die: hence the name marya.”

rarandhi (rārandhi) — ramu krīḍāyām | “‘Sport and experience delight’ is the meaning: as delight is obtained by cattle in green pastures, and by a man in his own house, so may you obtain that very delight in our heart.”

rarandhi — root ramu krīḍāyām; by vṛatyayo bahulam (व्यत्ययो बहुलम्) the parasmaipada; loṭ, second person singular, sip; hi for it; by bahulaṃ chandasi ślu for śap; by ślau (श्लौ, Pā. 6-1-10 [?]) the root is doubled; in the reduplicative halādiḥ śeṣaḥ. When rarama + hi has come, by chandasy ubhayathā (छन्दस्युभयथा, Pā. 3-4-117 [?]) hi has the name ārdhadhātuka, and, not being ṇit [print: “jit”?], by ajantāc ca (as read, Pā. 6-4-103 [?]) hi has dhi as its replacement; on this account, because it is not ṇit, the nasal m of the root is not elided by anudāttopadeśa...; by naś cāpadāntasya jhali (नश्चापदान्तस्य झलि) the m becomes anusvāra [i.e. n]: hence rarandhi. As soma, a vocative, stands before, by āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat (Pā. 8-1-72 [?]) it counts as non-existent, and by tiṅ atīnaḥ (Pā. 8-1-28 [?]) there is no nighāta. Since the non-pit (apit) was prescribed, the suffix accent comes; then the final syllable of rarandhi is acute. In the Samhitā, the lengthening of the reduplicative is Vedic.

hṛdi — the word hṛdaya; the locative singular follows; by padd annomās hṛm... (पद्त्रोमास्हन्..., as printed, Pā. 6-1-63 [?]) the replacement hṛd; by ūḍḍādaṃ padādi (Pā. 6-1-171, numerals read “६-१-१७१” in the print) the case-ending takes the acute. (This clears the doubt recorded on p. 343 over the number of the same sūtra.) marya iva — by chandasi niṣkarkyadeva... (as printed, Pā. 3-1-123 [?]) the word marya is formed irregularly, ending in the suffix yat; by yato 'nāvaḥ (यतोऽनावः, Pā. 6-1-213 [?]) the svārita is set aside and the initial-acute accent comes. okye — root uca samavāye; “ucyate samaveyate prāpyate iti okyaṃ gṛham” (the house, a dwelling-place); by ṛhaloṇ yat (ऋहलोण्यत्, Pā. 3-1-124 [?]) the suffix ṇyat; by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca the guṇa of the light penultimate before the suffix; by cajoḥ ku ghiṇyatoḥ (चजोः कु घिण्यतोः, Pā. 7-3-52 [?]) the ku substitution of the root’s c, caused by the ṇit suffix: hence okya. As the suffix is tit, by tit svaritam (तित्स्वरितम्, Pā. 6-1-185 [?]) the svārita accent. The locative singular. ॥ 13 ॥

rāraṇat — raṇati etatsūktarūpeṇa tvāṃ stauti | “Sāyaṇa gives the meaning ‘he praises you in the form of this sūkta’. From the root raṇa śabde, which gives the sense of sound, he shows this form’s derivation and takes the word to be ‘a sound in the form of a hymn’. But Skandasvāmin’s meaning seems more apt than this: ‘rāraṇat — atyantaṃ ramate’, ‘he delights exceedingly’. If one looks at the context, the sense that ‘we experience the happiness that is the fruit of friendship with you’ is natural. Such senses of delight are found in Ṛks such as Ṛ. ॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.14) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly) sakhye — sakhyuḥ bhāvaḥ sakhyam; by sakhyur yaḥ (सख्युर्यः, Pā. 5-1-126 [?]) the suffix ya; by the suffix accent the final syllable is acute. raraṇat — root raṇa śabde; leṭ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. 3-4-97 [?]) the i is elided; by bahulaṁ chandasi ślu for śap; by ślau the doubling of the root; the reduplicative keeps its first consonant and vowel (ādir halaḥ śeṣaḥ); by leṭo 'ḍātau the augment aṭ for the suffix. Since yaḥ (“who”) precedes and is related, by yadvṛttān nityam (यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्, Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited; by chandasy ubhayathā the suffix has the name ārdhadhātuka, so that for the non-iṭsārvadhātuka beginning with a vowel the initial-acute that abhyastānām ādiḥ (Pā. 6-1-189 [?]) would give does not come; the accent of the root remains; the reduplicative is short in the Pada by Vedic usage [the Saṁhitā prints it long]. sacate — root śaca samavāye; by dhātuvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ the initial ṣ becomes s; by vyaṭyaḥ bahulam the third-person singular suffix replaces the second-person singular; by ṭita ātmanepadānāṁ ṭer e the final e; by kartari śap the śap; the nighāta since a finite verb follows a word. ॥ 14 ॥ abhiśasteḥ — “The word abhiśasti has many meanings, such as curse, calamity (āpatti), reproach. Here the bhāṣya-writer says ‘abhiśāparūpān nindanāt’ — ‘from calumny, in the form of a curse’, that is, from blame.”

uruṣya — uruṣyatī rakṣākarmā (Ni. 5-23 [?]) | “uruṣya means ‘protect’. In many Ṛks such as R. Sam. 9-[?]-3 [?]; 8-[?]-[?] [?] this word occurs in the sense of ‘protect’.”

aṃhasaḥ — aṃhatīś cāṃhaś cāṃhuś ca hanteḥ [as read; the print’s first word is doubtful [?]] (Ni. 4-23 [?]) | “Though the word aṃhas is formed from the root han, which gives the sense of killing, the sense of sin is more common for this word than the general sense of violence. Here it means ‘from sin’.”

suśevaḥ — “Being the giver of the most excellent happiness: this is the meaning.”

makṣi śardho mārutaṁ makṣi devān makṣi mahām indram indo madāya / (R. Sam. 9-80-3 [?]; the same Rk as cited on p. 359)

“— because Soma causes intoxication [joy] in all the deities, the meaning ‘cause of delight’ is the right one.”

aṁśubhiḥ — “aṁśu means ‘ray’. But here the parts of the Soma-creeper, bright and fine, spreading in all directions like rays, are called aṁśu.”

suśravastamaḥ — “The word śravas is read in the Nirukta (Ni. 2-9 [?]) among the names of strength, of wealth and of food. Here the meaning given is ‘food’: one possessed of the most excellent food. Skandasvāmin explains ‘sudhanatamaḥ sukīrtitamo vā’ [‘one with the best wealth, or of the best fame’].”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.17) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

madintama — mada + ini: madī; by ata ini-ṭhanau (अत इनिठनौ, Pā. 5-2-115 [?]) the suffix ini; in the sense of excess, by atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau (अतिशायने तमबिष्टनौ, Pā. 5-3-55 [?]) tamap; by nādghasya (Pā. 8-2-17 [?]) nuṭ is the augment of the tarap/tamap suffixes standing after a stem ending in n, here in Chandas; the n becomes anusvāra by parasavarṇa; as madintama is a vocative, by āmantritasya ca (Pā. 8-1-19 [?]) the nighāta accent comes. viśvebhiḥ — the word viśva; bhis following; by bahulaṁ chandasi (Pā. 7-1-10 [?]) ais does not occur; by bahuvacane jhaly et (Pā. 7-3-103 [?]) the e; the s becomes ru, visarga. bhava — since it stands at the head of the pāda, no nighāta; since śap is unaccented, the root’s accent remains. suśravastamaḥ — “śravaḥ iti annanāma śrūyate iti śravaḥ” (Nirukta 10-3 [?], Yāska): the knowers say śravaḥ is a name of food. śobhanaṁ śravo yaśa sa suśravāḥ; the atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau suffix tamap — (continued on p. 379)

Then, by sor manasī alomoṣasī the final-member initial-acute: as śravas ends in as, the initial-acute accent already obtained for the final member remains.” ॥ 17 ॥

Translation: “...this Rk is also applied at the [swelling] of the camasa cups; it is prescribed:
'saṁ te payāṁsi sam u yantu vājā iti camasān ādyopādyān' (Ā. 5-6 [?]). — O Soma, abhimātiśāhaḥ, the slayer of the abhimātis, the enemies: let the payāṁsi, the milks that serve to feed, saṁ yantu, come together to you who are such. And let vājāḥ, the foods in the form of oblations, come together to you. And let vr̥ṣṇyāni, the potencies, come together. O Soma, being āpyāyamānaḥ, growing on every side, for our immortality, for our undying, dhiṣva — hold, in heaven (divi, in the sky, in svarga), the uttamāni śravāṁsi, the highest, the choicest foods that are to be enjoyed by us, or the foods in the form of oblations.”

Grammar tail: te — “the mention of the action should be made [by vārttika]”; since the object is a recipient (saṁpradāna), the genitive stands in the sense of the dative. abhimātiśāhaḥ — root śaha abhibhavane; in Chandas the suffix ṇvi (by chandasi sahaḥ); śatva because it belongs to the suṣāmādi group. amṛtāya — by nañ jaramaramitramṛtāḥ the final member’s initial-acute. uttamāni — tamap in the superlative sense, after the word ut, expressing the means of ‘highest’ action; by uttamaśaśvattamau sarvatra (Pā. 6-1-160 [?]) the final-acute, since it is listed in the uñchādi group. dhiṣva — by sudhita vasudhita nemadhita dhiṣva dhiṣya ca (Pā. 7-4-45 [?]) the dhi formation is irregular.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.18) (Kannada)

abhimātiśāhaḥ — O Soma-deity, destroyer of enemies; te — to you (towards you); payāṁsi — (protective) milks; saṁ yantu — flow all around and come together; vājāḥ u saṁ — may the foods in the form of oblations also come together to you; vr̥ṣṇyāni saṁ — may potencies also fill you; Soma — O Soma-deity; amṛtāya — so that there may be no death for (us); āpyāyamānaḥ — growing all around; divi — in heaven; uttamāni — excellent; śravāṁsi — foods; dhiṣva — obtain.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.18 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, may protective streams of milk flow all around to you who destroy your enemies. May the foods in the form of oblations and the potencies also come and fill you. So that we may be free from death, growing all around, obtain for us excellent foods in heaven.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.18)

“May the milky [printed ”milky uices”, the j of ”juices” lost] flow around you ; may sacrificial offerings and vigour be concentrated in the destroyer of foes ; and, being fully nourished, Soma, provide excellent foods in heaven for our immortality.” — as printed (the first line is rendered “may the milky uices flow around you”; the missing j is a misprint [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.18) (Kannada)

“When the offering to the Soma deity is made in the homas called patnīsaṁyāja, this Rk, saṁ te payāṁsi, is to be used as the yājyā mantra; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra explains it by the sūtra ‘saṁ te payāṁsi sam u yantu vājā iha tvaṣṭāram agriyam’ (Ā. 1-10 [?]). The Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows the application of this Ṛk in the camasāpyāyana as well, by the sūtra ‘saṃ te payāṃsi sam u yantu vājā iti camasān ādyopādyān’ (Ā. 5-6 [?]).”

abhimātiśāhaḥ — abhitaḥ hiṃsantīty abhimātayaḥ | teṣāṃ abhibhavitā | “Those who harm on every side are abhimātis, enemies; their conqueror: the destroyer of enemies who injure from every side — this is the meaning.”

पाप्मा वा अभिमातिः ।

pāpmā vā abhimātiḥ | (Tai. Saṃ. 2-1-3-5 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Sin indeed is the enemy [abhimāti].”

“— by such śruti-sentences the sinner, too, is abhimāti. The enemy too, who does not perform sacrifice and the like, is a sinner.”

payāṃsi — “Protective milks, or waters in the form of rain.”

amṛtāya — “So that there may be no death. Or the word amṛta is the name of the deities: ‘devatārtham’ (Ska. Bhā.) — ‘for the sake of the deities’ — is the meaning he gives.”

te — in the sūtra that lays down the name saṃpradāna, from the statement “kriyāgrahaṇaṃ kartavyam” (the mention of the action must be made) the name saṃpradāna arises here, and so the genitive stands in the sense of the dative; by te mayāveka vacanasya (ते मयावेकवचनस्य, Pā. 8-1-22 [?]) te is the replacement for the singular of yuṣmad. yantu — root iṇ gatau; loṭ, third person plural; anta for jhi; utva; by iko yaṇ the yaṇ replacement; the tiṇ-nighāta. vṛṣṇyāni — explained in the sixteenth Ṛk of this very sūkta. abhimātiśāhaḥ — root saha abhibhave; by chandasi sahaḥ (Pā. 3-2-63 [?]) the suffix ṇvi; in ṇvi, the whole of the suffix is elided (sarvalopa); since it is ṇit, by ata upadhāyāḥ (Pā. 7-2-116 [?]) the penultimate a of the root is lengthened [vṛddhi]: sāh; abhimātināṃ sāt — abhimātiśāt, since it is read in the suṣmādi list, the s takes ṣatva; the plural [form] ... Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 91.18, continued (grammar page, noted briefly):

āpyāyamānaḥ — root ohpyāyī vṛddhau; in the present sense śānac; śap; by āne muk (आने मुक्, Pā. 7-2-82 [?]) the augment muk for the stem ending in a before āna; as the replacement ends the word, the lasārvadhātuka suffix follows, and by tāsyānudāttet (तास्यनुदात्तेत्, Pā. 6-1-186 [?]) it is unaccented; śap, being pit, is unaccented; then the accent of the root remains. amṛtāya — root mṛṇ prāṇatyāge; the suffix ktā; na mṛtam amṛtam; by nañ jaramaramitramṛtāḥ (नञो जरमरमित्रमृताः, Pā. 6-2-116 [?]) the final member’s initial-acute. divi — by ūḍidaṃ padādi (Pā. 6-1-171) the locative singular takes the acute. uttamāni — ut is a word expressing the means of an action; after it, in the superlative sense, the suffix tamap; with tamap unaccented, the accent would be unobtained, but by uttamaśaśvattamau sarvatra (Pā. 6-1-160 [?]), since it is listed in the uñchādi group, the final syllable takes the acute; the accusative plural. dhiṣva — root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; loṭ, second person singular; by sudhita vasudhita nemadhita dhiṣva dhiṣīya ca (Pā. 7-4-45 [?]) the dhi formation is irregular; since it follows a word, the nighāta accent. || 18 ||

Translation: “In the somapravahaṇa, this is the Rk yā te dhāmāni; prescribed: ‘yā te dhāmāni haviṣā yajantīmāṁ dhiyaṁ śikṣamāṇasya deveti nihite paridadhyāt’ (Ā. 4-4 [?]). It is also the yājyā for the oblation of the animal of the Saumya of the ekādaśīn; prescribed in the section pradānānām: ‘aśāḥaṁ yutsu pṛtanāsu papriṁ yā te dhāmāni haviṣā yajanti’ (Ā. 3-2 [?]). — O Soma, whichever of your dhāmāni, lustres, that are established in heaven and elsewhere, the sacrificers yajanti, worship with oblations such as the caru and the puro ḍāśa: may all those lustres of yours paribhūḥ astu, surround and fill our sacrifice, the adhvara [the parito bhāvayitryaṁ clause is clotted [?]]. Or: may our sacrificer be the paribhūḥ of all those lustres of yours, the one who receives and accepts, by sacrifice, the sacrifice — ‘paripūrṇo bhavati’: the meaning is ‘accepting’. Endowed with such lustres, pra cara, go forth to duryān, our houses marked by the eastern hall and the like — ‘houses are indeed duryāḥ’, says the śruti. How are you? Gayasphānaḥ — the augments of house, of wealth; prataraṇaḥ — the one who carries over from sin; suvīraḥ — endowed with excellent heroes, men; avīrahā — vīrāḥ are sons; the non-killer of them.”

Grammar tail (partly clotted): paribhūḥ — the root bhū prāptau; the suffix kvip; by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. 3-1-85 [?]) a change of number and gender [the verb astu taking the singular for a plural subject]. gayasphānaḥ — gaya is a name of the house and of wealth; the augments of them; the lyuḥ in the agent sense by kṛtyalyuḥ to bahulam, with the Vedic loss of y. avīrahā — vīrāṇāṁ hantā vīrahā; na vīrahā avīrahā.

Soma — O Soma-deity; te — your; yā dhāmāni — (spread over the heavenly world and the others) whichever lustres; haviṣā — with the caru, puro ḍāśa and the like; yajanti — (sacrificers) worship —

(the Pratipadārtha continues:) “— the yā: whichever; tā te viśvā — all those lustres; yajñam — our sacrifice; paribhūḥ astu — may they surround and fill; gayasphānaḥ — the augments of house or of wealth; prataraṇaḥ — the one who carries over fully; suvīraḥ — one together with excellent heroes; avīrahā — you, the non-killer of our heroic sons (you being endowed with such lustres); duryān — our (ancient) houses; pra cara — come exceedingly and reach.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.19 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, whichever of your lustres that are spread over the heavenly world and the rest, which the sacrificers worship with caru, puroḍāśa and the like — may all those lustres surround and fill our sacrifice. You, the augments of our wealth, who carry us across sin and difficulty, who are together with excellent heroes, and the non-killer of our heroic sons: come, with all those lustres of yours, to these our ancient houses.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.19)

“Whichever of your glories, men worship with oblations, may our sacrifice be invested with them all ; Soma, come to our houses, you are the bestower of wealth, the transporter of difficulties ; you are attended by valiant heroes, the non-destroyer of progeny.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.19) (Kannada)

“In the rite called Somapravahaṇa, this Ṛk, yā te dhāmāni, is to be used; so it is explained by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra ‘yā te dhāmāni haviṣā yajantīmāṃ dhiyaṃ śikṣamāṇasya deveti nihite paridadhyāt’ (Ā. 4-4 [?]). In the sacrifice called ekādaśin, in the animal offering for the Soma deity, this Ṛk is to be used as the yājyā mantra; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section pradānānām, shows it by the sūtra ‘aśāṇhaṃ yutsu pṛtanāsu papriṃ yā te dhāmāni haviṣā yajanti’ (Ā. 3-2 [?]).”

dhāmāni — “The word dhāman has such meanings as place, name, birth, lustre. Their explanation has been learned in detail in the commentary on Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?].”

paribhūḥ astu — “‘May [they] surround and fill’: that is, may all your powers surround and fill our sacrificial ground — this is the sense. paribhūḥ has this one meaning —

“— ‘complete’: by the rule ‘paripūrṇo bhavati; sarvatra parigrahārthe’ [as read [?]], let it be accepted accordingly: that is, ‘you come with all your powers and accept this sacrifice of ours’ is the idea. ‘yāni tava yaṣṭṛiṇi dhāmāni taiḥ sarvair imaṃ yajñaṃ parigrahāṇe ty arthaḥ’ (Ska.

Bhā.) [as read]. Besides this, Sāyaṇa, keeping the sense parigraha, makes another construction: ‘sarveṣāṃ dhāmnāṃ yajamānaḥ svikartā astu’ — that is, he explains that the sacrificer may be the receiver of all those powers of yours. For a detailed discussion of this word see Rg. Saṃ. Part 1, pp. 633–634 [as printed].”

gayasphānaḥ — “The augments of house or of wealth; the commentary on this word was learned in detail in the commentary on R. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?].”

prataraṇaḥ — prakarṣeṇa duritāt tārayitā | “Sāyaṇa gives the sense ‘one who carries over fully from sin’. Skandasvāmin explains ‘tiratir atra vṛddhyarthaḥ | vardhayitā ca sarvārthānām’ — ‘the root tṛ here has the sense of growth: and the one who causes all desired things to grow’. This meaning is the more acceptable, because in other places too, when the preverb pra is joined to the root tṛ, the sense ‘make [it] grow’ is generally seen. For example —”

सोम राजन्त्र ण आयूंषि तारीरहानीव सूर्यो वासराणि ।

soma rājan pra ṇa āyūṃṣi tārir ahānīva sūryo vāsarāṇi | (R. Saṃ. 8-48-2 [?]; the same Rk as cited on pp. 337 and 349 — the three numerals read differently [?])

ऋत्वे दक्षाय नो हि नु प्र ण [?] आयूंषि तारिषः ।

kratve dakṣāya no hi nu pra ṇa [?] āyūṃṣi tāriṣaḥ | (Vā. Saṃ. 34-8 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read, doubtful [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (for both): “Extend our lives, as the sun extends the days; ... for strength and skill [extend] our lives.”

“— in such places everywhere, pravardhaya — ‘cause to grow’ — is the meaning (Ni. 11-10 [?]).”

duryān — “gayaḥ, kṛvaram, gartaḥ [read gayaḥ, kṛdaraḥ, gartaḥ] and so on being read among the names of houses (Ni. 3-13 [?] — the numeral read as “३-१३”, whereas the same list was given on p. 365 as “३-४” [?]), this word means ‘houses’.”

yajanti — root yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikarāṇadāneṣu; la ṭ, third person plural; since yā precedes and is related, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited; by the accent of the root, the initial-acute. tā — the word tad; in the neuter plural, by śeś chandasi bahulam the śi is elided; so also viśvā.

place of the neuter plural the singular common to feminine and masculine; by gatikārapapadāt kṛt (गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्) the kṛdanta final member keeps its natural accent. astu — root as bhuvī; lo ṭ, third person; by vṛatyayo bahulam the singular suffix for the plural; the nighāta since it follows a word. gayasphānaḥ — gaya is a name of house or of wealth; gayānāṃ sphāyitā vardhayitā; root ohpyāyī vṛddhau; by kṛtyalyu ṭo bahulam (Pā. 3-3-113 [?]) the suffix lyu ṭ; in Chandas the y of the root is elided; by yuvor anākau the replacement ana; by gatikārapapadāt kṛt the final member's natural accent. suvīraḥ — by nañsubhyām the final-member final-acute would be obtained, but by vīravīryau ca (वीरवीर्यौ च, Pā. 6-2-120 [?]) the final member takes the initial-acute. avīrahā — vīrāṇāṃ hantā vīrahā; when vīra is the upapada, kṛp after han; na vīrahā avīrahā; by tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtiyā... (तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थ... , Pā. 6-2-2 [?]) the first member (nañ) keeps its natural accent. cara — root cara gatiḥ ṣaṇayo ḥ; lo ṭ, second person singular; the tiñ-nighāta. || 19 ||

Translation: “At the mahāpitṛyajña, in the offering of Soma Pitṛmat, somo dhenum is the second anuvākya; for each oblation two *anuvākya*s are prescribed together; so it is prescribed in the section dakṣiṇāgneḥ: ‘somo dhenum somo arvantam āsum tvaṁ soma pitṛbhiḥ saṁvidānaḥ’ (Ā. 2-19 [?]). — The sacrificer who dadāsat, gives to Soma foods in the form of oblations: to that sacrificer Soma gives a milch-cow with her calf; likewise he gives āsum, a swift-going arvantam, a horse; and likewise a vīram, a son, to this sacrificer. What sort of son? Karmaṇyam — skilled in worldly works; sadanyaṁ — sadana is the house: fit for it, i.e. skilled in the affairs of the house; vidathyaṁ — the vidathāḥ are sacrifices, ‘in which the gods are known’: fit for them, i.e. devoted to the performance of such sacrifices as the new-moon and full-moon; sabheyaṁ — good in the assembly, i.e. versed in all the śāstras; pitṛśravaṇam — the son through whom the father is heard of, becomes famous.”

Grammar tail: karmaṇyam — karmasu sādhuḥ karmaṇyaḥ; the suffix yat in the sense ‘good at that’ (Pā. 4-4-98 [?]); by ye cābhāvakarmaṇor the prakṛtibhāva; by titt svaritam the svarita. Likewise the suffix yat in the later words. sabheyaṁ — by ḍhaś chandasi (Pā. 4-4-106 [?]) the suffix ḍha in the sense ‘good there’. dadāsat — root dāsa dāne; in the leṭ the augment aṭ; by bahulaṁ chandasi ślu for śap.

yaḥ — whichever sacrificer; dadāsat — (oblations) offers; asmai (tasmai) — to that sacrificer; somaḥ — Soma-deity; dhenum — (together with the calf) a milch cow; dadāti — gives; somaḥ — Soma-deity; āsum — swiftly; arvantam — a horse; dadāti — gives; somaḥ — Soma-deity —

(the Pratipadārtha continues:) “karmaṇyam — one skilled in (worldly) tasks; sadanyam — one expert in house-affairs; vidathyam — (devoted to new-moon and full-moon) sacrificial works; sabheyam — (through knowledge of all śāstras) an ornament of the assembly; pitṛśravaṇam — one who makes his father’s name well known; vīram — a worthy son — he gives.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.20 (Kannada)

“To the sacrificer who offers oblations, the Soma-deity graciously gives a milch cow together with her calf, a swift-running horse; and also a worthy son, skilled in worldly tasks, expert in house-affairs, devoted to such sacrificial works as the new-moon and full-moon, an ornament of the assembly of the learned through the knowledge of all the śāstras, and one who makes his father’s name well known and brings his father honour.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.20)

“To him who presents offerings, Soma gives a milch-cow, a swift horse, and a son who is able in affairs, skilful in domestic concerns, diligent in worships, eminent in Society and who is an honour to his father.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.20) (Kannada)

“In the mahāpitṛyajña, with reference to the deity Soma Pitṛmān, when the oblation is made, this Rk somo dhenuṃ is to be used as the puronuvākya mantra, and for each separate oblation two puronuvākya mantras are to be applied together; so the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra indicates in the section tathaiva dakṣiṇāgneḥ by the sūtra ‘somo dhenuṃ somo arvantam āśuṃ tvaṃ soma pitṛbhiḥ saṃvidānaḥ’ (Ā. 2-19 [?]).”

arvantam — “atyaḥ, hayaḥ, arvā, and so on: it is read among the names of the horse (Ni. 1-12 [?]).”

vidathyam — vidantya eṣu devān iti vidathāḥ | “Since in the sacrifices the nature of the deities is well known, vidatha means ‘sacrifice’; one who is engaged in sacrifices of the kind of the new-moon and full-moon is called vidathya. In explaining the Rk ‘vidathāni pracodayan’ (R. Saṃ. 3-32-2 [?]; the numerals read “२-३२-७” [?]), the author of the Nirukta says ‘vidathāni vedanāni’ (Ni. 2-3 [?]), ‘knowledges’ — as he has explained. Therefore one engaged in sacrifices that are means of such knowledge is called vidathya.”

sabheyam — “vidvatsabhāyāṃ yogaḥ — one fit for the assembly of the learned; that is, skilled in all the śāstras: this is the meaning.”

vidathyam sabheyam — “Skandasvāmin explains these two words together, one as the attribute and the other as the qualified, as ‘one fit for the assembly in which there are scholars’, that is, ‘one who is versed in the śāstras’.”

pitṛśravaṇam — “One who causes his father’s name to be heard by all — that is, one who makes his father’s name well known: so the bhāṣya-writer; Skandasvāmin explains: ‘one who hears what the fathers say, and so is well-trained [vinīta].’”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.20) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

arvantam — root ṛgatau; the suffix vanip; the guṇa of the root on that account; the stem arvan; since the accusative singular follows, by arvaṇas trasāvanaṇaḥ (अर्वणस्त्रसावनञः [?], Pā. 6-4-127 [?]) the replacement tṛ for the final; since it is ugit the augment num; the nasal becomes anusvāra by parasavarṇa: arvantam. karmaṇyam — karmasu sādhuḥ karmaṇyaḥ; by tatra sādhuḥ (तत्र साधुः, Pā. 4-4-98 [?]) the suffix yat in the sense ‘good at that’; when karman + ya are formed, by ye cābhāvakarmaṇoḥ (Pā. 6-4-168 [?]) the prakṛtibhāva of the *an-*ending stem; by tit svaritam (Pā. 6-1-185 [?]) the svārīta accent. Likewise the suffix yat in sadanyam, vidathyam; the svārīta accent. dadāti — root ḍudāñ dāne, of the juhotyādi class; laṭ, third person singular; the nighāta accent. sabheyam — sabhāyāṁ sādhuḥ sabheyaḥ; by ḍhas chandasi (Pā. 4-4-106 [?]) the suffix ḍha in the sense ‘good there’; by āyaneyīniyāḥ phaḍhakhachaghām (आयनेयीनीयियः..., Pā. 7-1-2 [?]) the replacement eya for ḍha; by yaṣyeti ca (यस्येति च, Pā. 6-4-148 [?]) the ā of sabhā is elided; by the suffix accent the e is acute. dadāsat — root dāśa dāne; leṭ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca lopaḥ the i is elided; by leṭo ḍāṭau the augment aṭ; by bahulaṁ chandasi ślu for śap; by ślau the doubling of the root; in the reduplicative ādir halaḥ śeṣaḥ; shortening. Since yaḥ precedes and is related, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited; by abhyastānām ādiḥ (Pā. 6-1-189 [?]) the initial-acute. ॥ 20 ॥

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.21) (Kannada)

Soma — O Soma-deity; yutsu — in battles; aṣāḥam — (by enemies) not to be defeated; pṛtanāsu — in armies; papriṃ — one who fills [them] with (victory); svarṣām — one who brings to heaven; apsām — one who gives the waters in the form of rain (or one who favours all); vṛjanasya — of strength; gopām — the protector; bhareṣujām — one who is born in the sacrifices; sukṣitim — one who has excellent dwelling-houses; suśravasam — one of well-known name; jayantam — the conqueror (of enemies); tvām anu — (meditating) on you; madema — we shall rejoice.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.21 (Kannada)

“O Soma-deity, you who are not defeated by enemies in battles, who bring victory to your armies, who bring all of us to heaven, who give the waters in the form of rain, protector of our strength, who are born amid sacrifices, who have excellent dwelling-houses, are of well-known fame and are the conqueror of enemies: meditating on you, we rejoice.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.21)

“O Soma, we rejoice contemplating you invincible in battle, triumphant amongst hosts, the granter of heaven, the giver of rain, the preserver of strength, born amidst sacrifices, occupying a brilliant dwelling, renowned and victorious.” — as printed.

aṣāḥam — saha abhibhave | “sāḥa means ‘one who is defeated’; aṣāḥa means one who is not defeated, that is, one who is apratipatita [as read, ‘not fallen’ [?]] — such is the meaning.”

pṛtanāsu — “Since raṇaḥ, vivāk, vikhādaḥ and the like are read among the names of battle (Ni. 2-[?] [?]), pṛtanāḥ means ‘battle’. pṛtanāsu — in battles; this word is always used in the plural.”

papriṃ — “From the root pyā, which gives the sense of ‘to fill’ (pyā pālanapūraṇayoḥ) [as read [?]], the word papri is formed: ‘the filler’, that is, one who makes full. Sāyaṇa explains this word as jayasya pūrayitāram — one who fills [for us] with victory. Skandasvāmin takes the first meaning and explains, saṃgrāmeṣu yaśṭīṇāṃ stotīṇāṃ ca pālayitāram — the protector, in battles, of sacrificers and praisers. The R̥garthadīpikā too has pālayitāram. Whichever meaning is taken here makes no difference. In Ṛks such as R. Saṃ. 1-[?]-3 [?] the phrase papriḥ randhasaḥ [‘the giver of food’] also occurs, so papri means ‘giver of food’ as well.”

svarṣām — svargasya sanitāraṃ dātāram | “One who makes heaven obtainable, the giver of heaven.”

apsām — apāṃ vṛṣṭīlakṣaṇānām udakānāṃ dātāram | “One who gives the waters that are rain. Or, from psā bhakṣaṇe: psāti bhakṣayati psāḥ; na vidyate psā asyeti: he who has no devourer, and therefore is the favourer of all — such is the sense they give. In Ṛks where the epithet apsāḥ generally occurs, such as R. Saṃ. 9-[?]-[?] [?]; 7-[?]-[?] [?]; 9-[?]-1 [?] and the like, apsāḥ means apāṃ dātā, the giver of waters. Therefore the same meaning is natural here too.”

vṛjjanasya gopām — “vṛjjanā means ‘strength’ (Ni. 2-9 [?]): the protector of strength.”

bhareṣujām — “The word bhara is read among the names of battle (Ni. 2-17 [?]); bhareṣu means ‘in battles’. ‘janir atra sāmārthyāj jayater arthe’ [as read] — ‘here jan in the sense of jī, to conquer’: saṃgrāmeṣu jetāram, ‘conqueror in battles’, so Skandasvāmin explains; and Sāyaṇa, ‘bhriyante eṣu havīmṣīti bharāḥ yāgāḥ; teṣu prādurbhavantam’: bharāḥ are sacrifices, because the oblations are borne (bhṛ) in them; bhareṣujām is ‘one who is born in them’, that is, ‘manifest in the sacrifices’.”

aṣāḥ — root saha abhibhave; the suffix kta follows; by sāḍhyai sāḍhvā sāḍheti nigame (Pā. 6-3-113 [?]) the irregular formation, so that by sahivahor odavarṇasya (Pā. 6-3-112 [?]) the change to o does not occur; by saheḥ sāḍhaḥ saḥ the ṣatva; a nañ-tatpuruṣa compound; by tatpuruṣe tulyārthatītiyā... (Pā. 6-2-2 [?]) the indeclinable first member keeps its natural accent. yutsu — the locative plural; by sāvekācas tītiyādir vibhaktiḥ the case-ending takes the acute. papriṃ — root pyā pālanapūraṇayoḥ [as read [?]]; by ādīṅgamahanajanaḥ kikināu liṭ ca (Pā. 3-2-171 [?]) the suffix kin; since it is liṭvat, the root is doubled; the reduplicative [takes] ur at [as read [?]]; halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; the yaṇ replacement caused by the suffix; since the suffix is nit, by ñityādir nityam (Pā. 6-1-197 [?]) the initial-acute; the accusative singular. svarṣām — svaḥ svargaṃ sanoti svarṣāḥ; root ṣaṇu dāne; by janasanakhanāṃ sañjhaloḥ (Pā. 3-2-67 [?]) the viṭ; it being followed by it, by viḍvanor anunāsikasyāt (Pā. 6-4-41 [?]) the nasal of san becomes ā; the accusative singular; by gatikārapapadāt kṛt the kṛdanta final member keeps its natural accent. apsām — when ap is the upapada, as said before, viṭ after the root ṣaṇu; the process of ātva as before. Or, from the root psā bhakṣaṇe: psāti bhakṣayati iti psāḥ; by kvip ca the suffix kvip; na vidyate psā asya iti apsāḥ, a bahuvrihi; by naṅsubhyām (Pā. 6-2-172 [?]) the final-member final-acute. bhareṣujām — root janī prādurbhāve; the viṭ as said before; ātva; bhareṣu jāyate prādurbhavati iti bhareṣujāḥ; by tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam (Pā. 6-3-14 [?]) the aluk of the locative in the compound; the final-member kṛdanta keeps its natural accent. sukṣitim — root kṣi nivāsagatyōḥ; by ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām (Pā. 3-3-174 [?]) the suffix ktic; by cit (Pā. 6-1-163 [?]) the final-acute; in the compound the kṛdanta final member keeps its natural accent. jayantam — root ji jāye; in the present sense śatṛ; śap; the guṇa of the root on that account; ay replacement: jayāt; in the accusative singular, since it is ugit, the augment num; the accent of the root remains.

oṣadhīḥ — oṣadhayaḥ oṣaddhayantīti vā | oṣat enā dhayantīti vā | doṣaṁ dhayantīti vā (Ni. 9-27 [?]) | “The author of the Nirukta gives three kinds of derivation. First: the root uṣ (oṣ), which gives the sense ‘to burn’, together with dhe (ṭ) pāne (‘to drink’) — oṣadhi means one that ‘drinks’ [that is, removes] the burning diseases in the body; or, when there is the burning of a disease, living beings drink them (oṣat enā dhayanti). Also: doṣaṃ dhayantīti vā — they ‘drink’ the faults, wind (vāta) and the like; therefore they are called oṣadhayaḥ.”

“In the 97th sūкта of the tenth maṇḍala of the Ṛksamhitā the origin, nature and use of the oṣadhis are all described, and the mutual relation between Soma and the oṣadhis is chiefly set forth. As the 18th and 19th Ṛks there (‘yā oṣadhiḥ somarājñiḥ’, Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-97-18 [?]) say, Soma is the rājā, the lord, of all the oṣadhis. Since Soma is the cause of the growth of all oṣadhis, wherever the word oṣadhi is used, the sense of Soma, its cause, is also present. For example —”

सोमं मन्यते पपिवान्यत्संपिबन्त्योषधिम् ।

somaṃ manyate papivān yat saṃpiṃṣanty oṣadhim / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-85-3 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “He who has drunk thinks he has drunk Soma, when they crush the plant [oṣadhi].”

“— in such Ṛks the close mutual relation between the oṣadhi and Soma is indicated. Soma is the cause of the growth of all grain and oṣadhis. And just as he creates the rasa in the oṣadhis, so too he fills the cows with milk: this too is said in Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-4[4]-2[4] [?].”

tvam apaḥ ajanayaḥ — “Addressing Soma as slayer of Vṛtra, it is described that he, breaking through the flowing waters, hindering the clouds, destroyed Vṛtra, who prevents the rain from falling, and caused the waters of rain to flow. The meaning is that he caused to flow the waters needed for the growth of the oṣadhis.”

saṃ devaiḥ śobhate vṛṣā kavir yonāv adhi priyaḥ / vṛtrahā devavītamāḥ // (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-33-2 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (both): “Flow clear, most Vṛtra-slaying one, to be gladdened by hymns. — The bull, the poet, dear, in his seat shines with the gods; the Vṛtra-slayer, most inviting the gods.”

“— in such Ṛks Soma is described as the slayer of Vṛtra. In such places the word vṛtra is generally to be taken in the sense of ‘cloud’ (Ni. 2-16 [?]).”

uru antarikṣam ātatantha — “‘You made the mid-region spread widely’: this is the meaning. In the Ṛksamhitā —”

Gloss, mine and tentative: “This Soma holds the colostrum [or nectar] in the three high [places], the wide mid-region; this one propped apart heaven and earth, yoked the seven-reined chariot; this one, by his power, holds within the cows the ripened [milk], the spring with ten channels.”

Translation: “O deva, shining one, sahasāvan, mighty Soma: with devena manasā, with your shining mind, your understanding, abhi yudhya — urge, send — to us a bhāga, a portion of wealth, with us in view. Or: abhi yudhya — strike with full force, in confrontation — the enemy who is the bhaktṛ, who takes, who carries off, a portion of our wealth. Let no enemy mā ā tanat — stretch [bind] you, such as you are, with distress, that is, let him not harm you. You īśiṣe, are lord of the strength of ubhayebhyaḥ, of both parties of fighters. Such as you are, pra cikitsa: in gaviṣṭau, in battle, ward off our trouble.”

Grammar tail (partly clotted): rāyaḥ — the case-ending acute by ūḍdam. bhāgam — the suffix ghañ in the passive sense from bhaj; or, by kṛtyalyuḥ to bahulam, in the agent sense; by karṣātvato... the final-acute. sahasāvan — the suffix matup after sahas, with a Vedic elision of ā [clotted (?)]. yudhya — root yudha saṁprahāre; the parasmaipada by vyatyaya. tanat — root tanu vistāre; śap by vyatyaya; by namānyoge (the prohibition of the augment aḥ in connection with mā) the aḥ is absent. īśiṣe — the augment iḥ by īśaḥ se (Pā. 7-2-77 (?)). cikitsa — root kita jñāne; the suffix san by guptikidbhyaḥ san (Pā. 3-1-5 (?)). gaviṣṭau — “that in which there are the iṣṭayaḥ, the goings (eṣaṇāni, gamanāni), of gavāṁ bāṇānām, of the arrows”; a bahuvrihi, the first member keeping its natural accent.

deva — O shining one; sahasāvan — O mighty one; Soma — O Soma-deity; devena manasā — with your radiant mind (willingly); rāyaḥ — of wealth;

(the Pratipadārtha continues:) “bhāgam — a portion; naḥ — to us too; abhi yudhya — cause to reach. [rāyaḥ — of wealth; bhāgam — the portion; apaharantam [as read] — the one who takes away; naḥ (abhi) — to us, our (enemy); abhi yudhya — fight and kill, and] — tvā — such as you; mā ā tanat — let no enemy hurt or obstruct you; ubhayebhyaḥ — (the two ranks engaged in battle); vīryasya — of the strength (to give); īśiṣe — you are the capable lord; gaviṣṭau — in battle; praticikitsa — protect (us).”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.23 (Kannada)

“O shining and mighty Soma-deity, of your wealth endowed with radiance, graciously and willingly send us a portion. May no enemy obstruct you. You are the capable lord to grant strength to the two ranks engaged in battle. Therefore, standing firm for us the sacrificers, protect us, and destroy the enemy in battle.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 91.23)

“Divine and powerful Soma, gracefully give us our portion of wealth ; may none annoy you ; you are superior to two foes combined. Defend us in battle.” — as printed.

sahasāvan — “Since the word sahas is read among the twenty-eight names of strength, ojaḥ, pājaḥ, śaraḥ and so on (Ni. 2-9 [?]), sahas means ‘strength’; sahasāvan means ‘mighty’. Sahasāvan is the vocative singular.”

devena manasā — dyotamānayā tvadīyayā buddhyā | “That is, ‘with your radiant mind’ (that is, ‘willingly’), Sāyaṇa explains. But Skandasvāmin: ‘dīvyatiḥ dānārthaḥ, dānābhimukhena manasā’, that is, ‘with a mind inclined to giving’. According to the Nirukta’s explanation both meanings are possible, since the word deva: ‘devo dānād vā, dīpanād vā, dyotanād vā, dyusthāno bhavatīti vā’ (Ni. 7-15 [?]) — whether it is ‘from giving’, ‘from lighting’ or ‘from shining’, the meanings ‘giving’, ‘shining’ or ‘illuminating’ may be given here, whichever is wanted.”

abhi yudhya — “abhi yudhya means ‘fight and destroy’. Or because the explanation is ‘abhiyudhaḥ gatikarmā’ [as read [?]], abhiḡamaya — ‘cause to come to us’ — is the meaning.

“— both meanings come to the same here: ‘having killed our enemies who have carried off the portion of wealth, bring that wealth to us’ — this is the sense of rāyaḥ bhāgaṃ naḥ abhiyudhya.”

mā ā tanat — “Though ātanin ordinarily means ‘one who spreads’, here ātanet means ‘obstruction’: while you are giving us gifts of wealth, let no one obstruct you, or let no enemy stop you.”

vīryasya īśiṣe — “Here, if ubhayebhyaḥ vīryasya is construed as one construction, then, since you are the lord of the strength of the two ranks engaged in battle, you can give victory to those on whom you are well disposed — this is the sense: because you are the greatest of all heroes, none can conquer him. As described in the Rks 9-66-18 [?] and 12 [?] of the Rksamhitā —”

महाँ असि सोम ज्येष्ठ उग्रामिन्द्र ओजिष्ठः । युध्वा सञ्छ्वज्जिगेथ ॥

mahāṃ asi soma jyeṣṭha ugrāṇām indra ojiṣṭhaḥ | yudhvā sañ chasvaj jigetha // (R. Sam. 9-66-18 [?]; read as printed, the third word indra as read [?])

ये उग्रेभ्यश्चिदोजीयाञ्छूरेभ्यश्चिच्छूरतरः । भूरिदाभ्यश्चिन्मंहीयान् ॥

ye ugrebhyāś cid ojīyāñ śūrebhyāś cic chūratarāḥ | bhūridābhyaś cin maṇhīyān // (R. Sam. 9-66-12 [?]; the last word read maṇhīyān from a clotted print [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (both): “Great are you, O Soma, eldest of the fierce, mightiest [Indra-like]; by fighting you have conquered always. — He who is stronger than the strong, braver than the brave, more bounteous than the bountiful.”

“— the strength and capacity of Soma are exceedingly great. In the same way in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa too, describing Soma’s greatness, it is said that when in the war between the gods and the asuras the gods suffered defeat and were praising [him], after they made Soma king they obtained victory in all the quarters:”

ते सोमं राजानमकुर्वन् । ते सोमेन राज्ञा सर्वा दिशोऽजयन् ॥

te somaṁ rājānam akurvan | te somena rājñā sarvā diśo ’jayan // (Ai. Brā. 1-14 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “They made Soma king; with Soma as king they conquered all the quarters.”

“Skandasvāmin explains the word ubhayebhyaḥ as ‘ātmiyebhyo ’smadiyebhyaś ca ubhayebhyo ’pi śatrubhyo dhanāny āhṛtya’ — ‘from both your own enemies and our enemies, that is, from the enemies of both the sides, taking away the wealth, [bring it] to us’: thus in one way; and further: ‘athavā ubhayaśabdaḥ prayojanavacanaḥ; yāni cāsmākam iha loke prayojanāni yāni ca paratra tebhya ubhayebhyaḥ’ — ‘or the word ubhaya expresses a purpose: for those two sorts of purposes that we have, in this world and in the other’ — meaning that you alone are the lord of, and are able to give, whatever benefits are to be obtained by us in this world and in the next. So he gives the explanation.”

gaviṣṭau — gāvāṁ bāṇānām iṣṭayaḥ eṣaṇāni gamanāni yeṣu | “That is, ‘in the battle in which the goings of arrows occur’. Sāyaṇa takes the word gaviṣṭi to mean ‘battle’; Skandasvāmin: ‘gāvaḥ iṣyante’ —

Special Topics of Rik 91.23, continued from p. 400 (Kannada) — the quotation broken at the foot of p. 400 continues: “— ‘gāvaḥ iṣyante yatra prāpyaṁ sā gaviṣṭiḥ; tatra yajñe ity arthaḥ’ [‘that in which cows are desired to be obtained is gaviṣṭi; that is, in the sacrifice’]: that is, Skandasvāmin explains it as ‘in a sacrifice performed with the wish to obtain cows’.”

(pra) cikitsa — “If gaviṣṭi is taken to mean ‘battle’, the sense of pra cikitsa is ‘asmadiyam upadravaṁ parihara’ — ‘remove our troubles’, that is, ‘destroy our troubles’. If it is taken to mean ‘sacrifice’, [then] kita jñāne: here ‘giving that is accompanied by knowledge of the truth’ is indicated by jñāna; ‘prakarṣeṇa dehity arthaḥ’ — ‘give in abundance’: that is, ‘give generously to us in the sacrifice’ is the meaning.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.23) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

rāyaḥ — the word rai; in the genitive singular the form is rāyaḥ; by ūḍḍaṁ padādi (Pā. 6-1-171) the case-ending takes the acute. bhāgam — root bhaja sevāyām; in the passive sense ghañ; by ata upadhāyāḥ the ṽddhi of the penultimate; by cajoḥ ku ghiṇyatoḥ (Pā. 7-3-52 [?]) the ku substitution for the j. Or, since bahulam is mentioned in kṛtyalyuḥ to bahulam (Pā. 3-3-113 [?]), the suffix ghañ in the agent sense; by karṣātvataḥ (Pā. 6-1-159 [?]) the ñit accent is set aside and the final-acute comes. sahasāvan — in the sense “he has sahas, strength”, by tad asyāsty asminn iti matup (Pā. 5-2-94 [?]) the suffix matup; the word sahas takes a final ā by Vedic usage; since a word beginning with ā follows, by mādupadhāyās ca mator vo 'yavādibhyaḥ (Pā. 8-2-9 [?]) the m becomes v; as a vocative, by āmantritasya ca (Pā. 8-1-19 [?]) the nighāta accent. yudhya — root yudha saṇṇprahāre (divādi); by vṛatyayo bahulam the parasmaipada; loḥ, second person singular, sip, with hi for it; by divādibhyaḥ śyan the śyan; by ato heḥ the luk of hi; the nighāta accent following a word. tanat — root tanu vistāre; laṇ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca the i elided; by vṛatyayo bahulam śap for the u-class suffix; by na māṇyoge (Pā. 6-4-74 [?]) the augment aḥ does not occur, since mā is connected; the nighāta accent. īśiṣe — root īśa aiśvārye; laḥ, second person singular, thās; by thāsaḥ se the replacement se; by īśaḥ se (Pā. 7-2-77 [?]) the augment iḥ for se standing after it; by ādeśapratyayayoḥ the śatva of the suffix.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 91.23, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

[īśiṣe, continued —] since it stands after a finite verb, the nighāta accent is not obtained, because the sūtra prohibits it (atiṇaḥ); the accent of the root remains. cikitsa — root kita jñāne; by guptijkidbhyaḥ san (Pā. 3-1-5 [?]) the suffix san in its own sense; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ the root-name; loḥ, second person singular, sip, with hi for it; by sanyaṇoḥ (Pā. 6-1-9 [?]) the doubling of the first single-vowel part of the san-ending root; in the reduplicative ku-class replaced by the cu-class (kuhoś cuḥ); by ato heḥ the luk of hi; the nighāta following a word. gaviṣṭau — gavāṁ bāṇānām iṣṭayaḥ eṣaṇāni gamanāni eṣu iti gaviṣṭḥ, a bahuvrihi compound; by bahuvrihau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. 6-2-1 [?]) the first member keeps its natural accent; the locative singular. || 23 ||

Translation (the Anukramaṇī line is garbled in the print — “dvyanonapasyaṁ” as printed [?]):
“The eighth sūkta, etā u tyā, of eighteen Ṛks, the vision of Gotama. The first four are Jagatī; the six from the thirteenth are Uṣṇih; the remaining eight are Triṣṭubh. The deity is Uṣas; the last three Ṛks, beginning aśvinā vartiḥ, are addressed to the Āśvins. So it is recorded in the Anukramaṇī. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. Translation: “u is a mere filler. Tyāḥ — those etāḥ Uṣases, the deities who preside over the time of dawn, ketum akrata, made light, which makes known to all the world enveloped in darkness (akṛṣata, ‘they did’). Because it is so, the Uṣases añjate — display, make manifest — bhānum, radiance, rajasaḥ pūrve ardhe, in the eastern half of the mid-region, in the eastern quarter. As dhṛṣṇavaḥ, bold warriors — āyudhānīva, like weapons — burnish their swords and other weapons, so niṣkṛṣṇvānāḥ, making the world bright with their own light, gāvaḥ — of the nature of going — aruṣīḥ, ruddy, shining, mātaraḥ — makers of the sun’s light, mothers of the world — [or the Uṣases] prati yanti, go daily. May such Uṣases protect us: this is the meaning. — Here in the Nirukta: ‘etās tyā uṣasaḥ ketum akṛṣata prajñānam’... tyā etā uṣasaḥ — those well-known (and presiding over the morning) Uṣas deities; ketum — (to the world covered by darkness) light, or knowledge; akrata — made; rajasaḥ pūrve ardhe — in the eastern half of the mid-region; bhānum — radiance; añjate — make manifest; dhṛṣṇavaḥ — warriors (for fighting); āyudhāni iva — as [they] polish and burnish their weapons; niṣkṛṣṇvānāḥ — (making the world bright with their radiance); gāvaḥ — of the nature of moving; aruṣīḥ — of the colour of morning twilight; mātaraḥ — the producers of the sun’s radiance, or the mothers of the world, the Uṣas deities; prati yanti — go about every day.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.1 (Kannada)

“To the world enveloped by the darkness of night, the Uṣas deities gave light. They display their radiance in the eastern quarter of the mid-region. As warriors burnish their weapons and make them shine, the Uṣas deities, making the world bright with their radiance, being of moving nature, red with the twilight of dawn, and the producers of the sun’s radiance, go about daily by their own rule.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.1)

“The celebrated dawn has spread the banner ; In the eastern half of the firmament, light is made manifest, making all things bright, like warriors brandishing their bright weapons. Thus the mother, radiant and advancing, travels daily;” — as printed (the final semicolon is as printed).

॥ विशेषविषयगुल्ल ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.1) (Kannada) tyāḥ uṣasaḥ — “Those well-known Uṣases themselves, who appeared on all the earlier mornings; or, as the author of the Nirukta says, ‘kasyā iva pūjanārthe bahuvacanaṃ syāt’ (Ni. 12-7 [?]), the plural is in the sense of honour. Because the one Uṣas appears every day, she is imagined as many Uṣases, and the plural is used.”

“A full description of the nature and greatness of the deity Uṣas is given in Ṛg. Saṃ. Part [5?], pp. 32–33 [as printed; the part number is read with some doubt [?]].”

ketum — “ketaḥ, ketuḥ, cetaḥ and the like being read among the names for knowledge (Ni. 3-9 [?]), ketum means ‘knowledge of the world’. Or, if the word ketu is taken to mean ‘banner’, it means ‘they displayed a banner-like brightness’.”

bhānum añjate — “‘They manifest the radiance’. Here two constructions are possible. Sāyaṇa: rajasaḥ pūrve ardhe bhānum añjate — ‘in the eastern quarters of the mid-region they display their radiance’; Skandasvāmin: rajasaḥ pūrve ardhe sthitā bhānunā añjate — ‘standing in the eastern half of the mid-region, they make everything manifest by their radiance’. In addition, Skandasvāmin joins the simile that follows, niṣkṛṇvānāḥ dhṛṣṇava iva, with añjate: as warriors make their weapons shine by polishing and the like, so the Uṣases too light all the mid-region with their rays. Sāyaṇa joins this simile with the second half —

“— as ‘yodvāraḥ yathā āyudhāni saṃskurvanti evaṃ niṣkṛṇvānāḥ uṣasaḥ’: as warriors polish their weapons, so the Uṣases, polishing the world by their radiance, go about daily.”

niṣkṛṇvānāḥ — nir ity eṣa sam ity etasya sthāne (Ni. 12-7 [?]) | “That is, the prefix nir has come in the place of sam, and the author of the Nirukta explains that saṁskurvāṇāḥ here means ‘making [it] shine, with propriety’.”

gāvaḥ — gāvo gamanāt (Ni. 12-7 [?]) | “Because they have the nature of moving: hence gāvaḥ.”

aruṣīḥ — aruṣīr ārocanāt (Ni. 12-7 [?]) | “Because they shine attractively: hence aruṣīḥ.”

mātaraḥ — bhāso nirmātryaḥ (Ni. 12-7 [?]) | “Because they are the producers of the lights: hence mātaraḥ; the author of the Nirukta explains that these are epithets of the rays as well. The same sense is explained in the Rk —”

Translation: “The aruṇāḥ, shining bhānavaḥ, the beams of the Uṣases, vṛthā, without effort, of themselves, ut apaptan, rose up. Thereafter the Uṣases svāyujaḥ, easily yoked to the chariot, aruṣīḥ gāḥ, bright-coloured, the previously risen rays — such, being their own vehicles [the middle words clotted [?]] — ayukṣata, yoked to their own chariot. It is said, ‘aruṇo gāvaḥ uṣasām’ [‘the ruddy cows of the Uṣases’]. Having thus mounted the chariot yoked with cows, the Uṣases pūrvathā, as on the days gone by [reading doubtful], vayunāni akran, produced knowledge in all living beings: for when the time of dawn has come, all beings become possessed of knowledge. Thereafter those Uṣases, aruṣīḥ, shining, aśīśrayuḥ, served the ruśantam, white-bright, bhānum, the sun: they become one with him. ‘ruśat’ is a name for colour, from rocate, the root of shining and blazing’, says Yāska (Ni. 2-20 [?]).”

aruṇāḥ — golden-red; bhānavaḥ — (of the Uṣas deities) radiances; vṛthā — without effort; ut apaptan — rose upward. (Thereafter) uṣasaḥ — the Uṣas deities; svāyujaḥ — fit to be easily joined; aruṣīḥ — golden-red; gāḥ — (their earlier-manifested) rays, or (their chariot’s) cows; ayukṣata — yoked (to their chariot); (and) pūrvathā — as was done on earlier mornings; vayunāni — to all beings, consciousness; akran — they produced; (afterwards) aruṣīḥ — the golden Uṣas deities; ruśantam — of auspicious colour; bhānum — the sun; aśīśrayuḥ — served (joined with him).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.2 (Kannada)

“The golden-red radiances of the Uṣas deities rose upward without any effort. Thereafter the Uṣas deities yoked to their chariot their rays or cows, which are easily joined and are of the red of the twilight. And, as they did on the days of earlier mornings, they produced consciousness in all beings. Afterwards, with their own radiance, they united with the sun of auspicious colour.”

“The purple rays fly up quickly ; easy to be yoked, the cows are harnessed ; as of yore, the dieties [sic] of the dawn have restored consciousness; and bright-rayed have attended upon the glorious Sun.” — as printed.

(the Pratipadārtha continues:) “— giver; yajamānāya — to the sacrificer; viśvedaha — all; iṣam — food; vahantīḥ — bringing and giving; viṣṭibhiḥ — with (their natural) rays; samānena yojanena — with an effort made at a single time; apaso na — as men engaged in battle occupy all regions of the battlefield with their weapons; ā parāvataḥ — in the very remote regions of the mid-region too; arcanti — they pervade.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.3 (Kannada)

“The Uṣas deities are guides to all. Bringing all food for the sacrificer who performs pure works, presses Soma-juice at the sacrifices, and gives liberally to the priests, they too, with their natural rays, simultaneously pervade even the very remote regions of the mid-region, as warriors pervade the whole battlefield.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.3)

“The female leaders of the morning illuminate with their inherent radiance, the remotest parts of the heaven, with a sumultaneous [sic] effort, like warriors with their shining arms in the van of the battle, bringing every kind of food to the performer of good works, to the bountiful, and to the worshipper who presents libations.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.3) (Kannada)

nārīḥ — netryaḥ | “‘Guides’: that is, those who free all living beings from the darkness of night, give them brightness and awareness, and show the way so that each does his own works.”

iṣam — “Since andhaḥ, vājaḥ and the like are read among the names for food (Ni. 2-7 [?]), iṣam means ‘food’.”

viṣṭibhiḥ — “Since āpaḥ, āpnaḥ and the like are read among the names for works (Ni. 2-1 [?]), ‘by works’ is the meaning. But here Sāyaṇa gives the sense ‘with lustres’. viśanti praviśantīti viṣṭayaḥ kiraṇāḥ: because they enter and pervade all the world, ‘rays’ is the meaning. Both these meanings are possible here. According to the construction of Skandasvāmin, apaso na viṣṭibhiḥ means ‘like women who, with works such as smearing [the floor] and other household chores, are skilled in work’.”

Translation: “...the Uṣas, vy āvaḥ, opened out the darkness [the clause between ‘uṣāḥ’ and ‘andhakāraṁ’ is clotted in the print (?)]: she made it uncovered, unattached. — Here nṛtūr iva — “like a nṛtū, a barber”: he who with the hair makes men bare. As he cuts the hair completely, so the Uṣas too destroys the darkness down to the root. Or: nṛtor iva — like a dancing woman; peśāṁsi — a name for ‘forms’: the Uṣas adhi vapate, ‘puts on’, forms that all can see; she holds them in excess on her own self. So, first dispelling the darkness with her own rays, she apornute vakṣaḥ, uncovers her own breast, the region of the chest: she makes it uncovered by darkness; she herself becomes manifest. Barjaham — the ‘udder’, the place where milk is produced: as the cow usrā shows it at milking-time. What is she doing? Gāvo na vrajam — as cattle by themselves quickly occupy their pen, so by herself she, having reached the eastern quarter, makes jyotiḥ, light, for viśvasmai bhuvanāya, for the whole world.”

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): nṛtūḥ — turvī has the sense of harming; the suffix kvip; the elision of v, etc. Or from nṛti (‘to dance’) — the suffix kū (U. 1-94 (?)). barjaham — root vṛj saṁbhaktau; ba, ‘milk’: vṛṇīte saṁbhajate gām iti baḥ payaḥ; the suffix vic; “that which gives it up (jahāti) is barjahaḥ”, root ohān tyāge; the suffix khaś by the upasaṁkhyāna with arghaśabda in the upapada (Pā. 3-2-58 (?)) and by kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam; śap elided (ślu) because the root is of the juhotyādi class; doubling etc.; b for v by bavayor abhedaḥ; since it belongs to the divodāsādi group, the first member’s initial acute. āvaḥ — root vṛṇī varāṇe; luṇ; the luk of cli by mantrē ghasa...; the elision by guṇe halṇyādi...; the augment aḍ, seen in Chandas also (Pā. 6-4-73 (?)).”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 92.4) (Kannada)

uṣāḥ — the deity Uṣas; nṛtoḥ iva — as a barber cuts the hair completely; peśāṁsi — (the ones clinging to the world) the darkness [as read]; vapate — cuts off (destroys). [nṛtoḥ iva — like a graceful dancing woman; peśāṁsi — (attractive) her beautiful forms; adhi vapate — (in herself) fully displays.] usrā — a cow; barjaham — (at the time of milking) the udder, showing

[it]; vakṣaḥ — her breast; apornute — uncovers (shows, freeing it from the darkness); gāvaḥ — cattle; vrajaṁ na — as they go to the cow-pen (so Uṣas too, going to the eastern quarter); viśvasmai bhuvanāya — for the whole world; jyotiḥ — light; kṛṇvati — making; tamaḥ — darkness; vi āvaḥ — destroyed completely.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.4 (Kannada)

“As a barber cuts the hair, the Uṣas deity drives away the darkness. Like a dancing woman, the Uṣas deity fully displays her attractive forms. As a cow shows her udder at milking time, she shows her breast. As cows go to the cow-pen, Uṣas, going to the eastern quarter and making light for the whole world, destroys the darkness completely.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.4; the passage continues on p. 416)

“Ushas cuts off the accumulated glooms as a barber cuts off the hair ; she bares her bosom as a cow yeilds [sic] her udder to the milker ; and as cattle —” (continued on p. 416)

“— hasten to their pastures, she speeds to the east, and, shedding light npon [sic] all the world dissipates the darkness.” — as printed (so the whole reads: “Ushas cuts off the accumulated glooms as a barber cuts off the hair ; she bares her bosom as a cow yeilds her udder to the milker ; and as cattle hasten to their pastures, she speeds to the east, and, shedding light npon all the world dissipates the darkness.”).

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.4) (Kannada)

nṛtoḥ iva — “In this simile two kinds of meaning arise: the removal of a blemish, and the display of beauty. The first: nṛtūḥ means nṛñ tūrvati keśena riktīkarotīti nṛtūr nāpitaḥ [as read, doubtful (?)] : because he cuts all the hair of men completely, the barber is called nṛtū, nāpita.”

vapate — chinatti | “She cuts off. As a barber cuts the hair of the head, so the Uṣas too peśāṁsi — the dark glooms that cover the world — adhi vapate, destroys completely. In this sense it is that she displays beauty through the removal of blemish.”

“The second: nṛtoḥ iva — nṛtyantī yoṣid iva: as a beautiful woman who dances makes ready her peśāṁsi, her charming forms and graces, so the Uṣas too adhi vapate — acquires her charming beauty, spreading her radiance all around — this is the meaning.”

usrā — “Since āhnayaḥ, usrā and the like are read among the names of the cow (Ni. 2-9 [?]), usrā means ‘cow’. usrā viśo ‘syāṁ bhogāḥ’ [as read, clotted (?)] : because they hold flowing milk that is a means of comfort, the cow has the name usriyā.”

barjaham — prāṇināṃ bharaṇasamarthatvāt bas iti kṣīram ucyate | taj jahātīti barjaham ūdhaḥ | “Milk, which is able to nourish living beings, is called bas. The place that gives this milk is called barjaham: the udder.”

“Here the simile has great propriety. As the cow shows her udder in order to give milk generously, so the Uṣas too shows her breast: that is, she spreads her radiance, generously, to the world, and creates light and awareness.”

vrajam — vṛṇoter vrajaḥ (Ni. 6-[?] [?]) | “Because it is enclosed [by a fence], it is called vraja. vrajaṃ na — as a cow goes to the pen that is the place of her protection, out of her own pleasure, with no other compulsion, so the Uṣas too goes to her own place —

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 92.4) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

vapate — root ḍuvap bijasantāne; this is also used in the sense of cutting (bhedana); laṭ, third person singular; the nighāta accent. nṛtūriṇa — root turvī hiṃsārthaḥ; by kvip ca the suffix kvip; by rālopa (रात्लोपः, Pā. 6-4-21 [?]) the v standing after r is elided; su following; by vor upadhāyā dirghaḥ (Pā. 8-2-76 [?]) the penultimate vowel of the root ending in r is lengthened: tūḥ. Or from nṛtī gātravināme (‘to dance, to move the limbs’); by nṛtisṛdhyoḥ kūḥ (U. 1-91 [?]) the suffix kū; since it is kit, the guṇa of the light penultimate does not occur; by the suffix accent the final-acute. ūrṇute — root ūrṇuñ ācchādane of the adādi class; laṭ, third person singular; the tiñ-nighāta. barjaham — root vṛj saṃbhaktau; “vṛṇite saṃbhajate gām iti baḥ payāḥ”; the suffix vic; the guṇa of the root on that account; since r follows, the visarga is replaced by r. By the upasaṃkhyāna “khaś prakaraṇe vātaśunītilagardheṣv ajaheṭtudajahātibhya” (Pā. 3-2-28 [?], vārttika as printed) the suffix khaś: here, although the word gardha is not the upapada, the suffix khaś comes by the mention of bahulam in kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam; by tiñ śit sārvaadhātukam (Pā. 3-4-113 [?]) it takes the name sārvadhātuka; then śap by kartari śap; since the root belongs to the juhotyādi class, ślu replaces śap; by ślau the root is doubled; the reduplicative is shortened; by kuhoś cuḥ the cutva; by bavayor abhedaḥ the v becomes b; since it belongs to the divodāsādi list, the first member takes the initial-acute. āvaḥ — root vṛṇ varaṇe; luṇ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca the i is elided; by mantrē ghasahvaraṇa... (Pā. 2-4-80 [?]) the luk of the cli obtained in the luṇ; because of tip the guṇa of the root; since tip [here] is apṛkta after the consonant-ending stem, by halṇyābbhyo dirghāt

sutisy apṛktaṁ hal (Pā. 6-1-68 [?]) [the consonant-elision] and the augment aṭ for the stem; since a finite verb follows a word, the nighāta accent. || 4 ||

“Her brilliant light is first seen towards the east ; it spreads and disperses the thick darkness ; she anoints her body as the priests anoint the sacrificial post in sacrifices ; the daughter of the sky awaits the glorious Sun.” — as printed.

“At the time of reciting the prātaranuvāka mantras, for the mantras connected with the Uṣasya sacrifice, the eight Ṛks beginning pratyarciḥ, and also for the mantras of the Āśvina-śastra, the application of these mantras is shown by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra ‘pratyarcir ity aṣṭau vṛṣā ā vo divijā iti śaḍiti traiṣṭubhaṃ’ (Ā. 4-14 [?]).”

svaram na — “svaru means ‘a stick, a rod’, the stick with which collyrium is applied to the eye. As ghee is smeared with it on the sacrificial post, so the Uṣas deity adorns herself with collyrium, or with a stick applied to the eye: this is the idea.

“Besides, svaru means ‘sacrificial post’ too. In the Rk 7-35-7 [?] the word svarūṇām is explained ‘svarūṇāṃ yūpānām’, and in R. Saṃ. 4-6-4 [?] ‘svarur na yūpaśakalavāji’ — ‘svarur atra yūpaṃ lakṣayati’ [‘here svaru indicates the sacrificial post’]: so the bhāṣya-writers explain it. In general the meaning of the word svaru is ‘sacrificial post’. Some Rks in which this word occurs, for example —”

Gloss, mine and tentative (for the group): “...the measures of the svarus be peace for us; may the vedi be peace for us. — Those gods who stood as svarus [sacrificial posts], may they bestow upon us wealth with offspring. — Like geese in rows, bright, clothed [?], the svarus came to us. — Like horns of the horned, the svarus with their ring-heads were seen on the earth. — The bright Uṣases have stood forth in the east like measured svarus at the sacrifices.” (The Saṃhitā texts above are read from the print and each is doubtful in places [?].)

“The word svaru in these Rks indicates the sense ‘sacrificial post’. Yāska has given no explanation of this word.”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 92.6) (Kannada)

asya tamasaḥ — of this darkness of night-time; pāram — the end; atāriṣma — we have crossed; ucchantī — (removing the darkness) appearing; uṣāḥ — the deity Uṣas; vayunā — (of all beings) the consciousness; kṛṇoti — creates; śriye — for wealth; chandaḥ — one who is able to flatter by praise; smayate na — as he goes to the wealthy and smiles to please him; vibhātī — shining, with the laughter of her radiance; supratikā — beautifully shining in radiance, or one with an attractive face; saumanasāya — for the delight (of the beings); ajīgaḥ — swallowed (the darkness).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.6 (Kannada)

“With the help of the Uṣas deity we have crossed to the end of the darkness of night. The Uṣas deity, appearing by driving away the darkness, creates consciousness in all beings. And as a man able to praise [and so win over], for the acquisition of wealth goes to the wealthy and, to please him, smiles broadly, so she too shines, smiling with the laughter of her radiance, and, beautifully lit and attractive in her radiance, she has swallowed the darkness for the delight of all beings.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.6)

“We have crossed over the boundary of darkness. Ushas restores the consciousness of living beings ; bright-shining, she smiles, like a flatterer, to obtain favour, and lovely in all her radiance, she has swallowed the darkness for our delight.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.6) (Kannada)

ucchantī — “For this word one meaning is ‘removing, destroying’; another meaning may be given: ‘shining, appearing with radiance’. The derivation of the word uṣā too comes from ucchati (Ni. 2-18 [?]). But the word ucchati may be derived from the root uchī vivāse, or from vaś kāntau; the author of the Nirukta also dealt with this matter in section 2-[?]. In the present context either meaning may be taken. ucchantī uṣāḥ may also mean ‘the Uṣas who appears, driving away the darkness’, or ‘the Uṣas who shines’.”

chandaḥ — “rebhaḥ, jaritā, kāruḥ and the like are read among the names of the praiser (Ni. 3-16 [?]). The meaning here is ‘the praiser, who goes to a wealthy man and flatters him to win him over, and in the course of this praise smiles at him: as this praiser becomes smiling-faced, so the Uṣas too, with her radiance, smiles’: this is one meaning. Besides, as Skandasvāmin says: ‘chandas iti kāntikarmasu pāṭhāt chandaśśabdo ’tra kāmivacanaḥ’ [as read, partly clotted [?]] — since ‘chandas’ is read among the names of loveliness (Ni. 3-[?] [?]), the word chandaḥ here may be said to mean a lover (kāmin) — a woman in love, who, smiling a little, with her tooth-rays flashing, shows [them]: yathā kāmīnī īṣat smayantī sphuraddantakiraṇā prakāśayati evam uṣāḥ svakiraṇān āviṣkaroti: as a lovely woman, smiling gently, displays the rays of her teeth, so the Uṣas also displays her rays.”

supratīkā — pratīkaśabdo mukhavacanaḥ darśanaparyāyo vā | sumukhā sudarśanā vā | “pratīka means ‘face’, or ‘seeing, appearance’. Therefore here it means ‘one who has a beautiful face’ or ‘one who has a charming appearance’. In the Rksamhitā:”

यावन्मात्रमुषसो न प्रतीकं सुपण्यो वसते मातरिश्वः ।

yāvan mātram uṣaso na pratikaṁ suparṇyo vasate mātariśvaḥ | (R. Sam. 10-88-19 [?]; the print has suparṇyo 3 vasate, a mark of protraction)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “As much as the [bright] face of the Uṣases, the well-winged [?] wind dwells [in it].” (Reading of the whole citation doubtful [?].)

“— in this Rk too the word pratīka is explained in such a way.”

ājigaḥ — “In explaining the derivation of this word the author of the Nirukta cites a Rk of the Rksamhitā —”

यदा ते मर्तो अनु भोगमानळादिद्यसिष्ट ओषधीरजीगः ।

yadā te marto anu bhogam āna/ ād id grasiṣṭha oṣadhīr ajīgaḥ | (R. Sam. 1-58-2 [?]; the numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “When the mortal has attained your enjoyment, then you, the devourer, have swallowed the plants.”

Special Topics of Rik 92.6, continued from p. 424 (Kannada): “— citing this R̥k [yadā te marto anu bhogam ānaḥ...], the author of the Nirukta gives three meanings: ‘jigarṣtir gīratikarmā vā gṛṇātikarmā vā gṛhṇātikarmā vā’ (Ni. 6-[?] [?]): that is, ‘eating’, or ‘praising’, or ‘seizing’ — any of these may do. But in the R̥k now in hand too, for ājīgaḥ Sāyaṇa explains ‘andhakāraṃ bhakṣitavati’ — ‘she swallowed the darkness’; and Skandasvāmin explains ‘trīṇ api lokān prati gacchati’ [as read [?]] — ‘she goes over the three worlds, pervading them’.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.7 (Kannada)

“We, born in the line of Gotama, praise the Uṣas deity, who is radiant, the cause of speech that is pleasing and true, and born of the heavenly world. O Uṣas deity, graciously give us the foods that are endowed with offspring, with servants and other people, distinguished by horses and filled with cows.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.7)

“The brilliant daughter of the sky, the exciter of pleasant voices, is praised by the descendants of Gotama. Ushas, grant us food associated with progeny and dependants and distinguished by horses and cattle.” — as printed.

Since after Uṣas rises the speech-dealings of all animals, birds and the rest begin, the meaning is that the Uṣases are the originators of all these. Kutsa, Vasiṣṭha and others use this epithet especially in their own hymns. For example —”

“In some places Sāyaṇa explains the word sūnṛtānām as stutīnām, ‘of praises’: ‘the leader of the praises’.”

gotamebhiḥ — “For this word Sāyaṇa says ‘ṛṣibhir asmābhiḥ’, ‘by us, the seers’; and Skandasvāmin says ‘ekasminn eva bahuvacanaṃ | gotamena mayā’ — the plural is used for the singular: ‘by me, Gotama’.”

aśvabudhyān — “Two kinds of meaning are given for this attribute. ‘aśvair yo [yeṣu] boddhavyas te aśvabudhyāḥ tān’ [as read, clotted [?]]: wealth, or food, that is to be known by the existence of horses, that is, [wealth] with abundant horses. Or, as Sāyaṇa says, since the word aśvabudhyān [stands] with y by a change of letter in place of the n, it is aśvabudhnān, from which the sense ‘foods that have horses as their root’ also arises. If the second meaning is given, since kings get wealth and foods by the help of horses, it is called aśvabudhya. In the 8th Ṛk of the same sūkta [1-92-8 [?]] the same word occurs; for that too these two meanings are given.”

Translation: “O Uṣas, deity Uṣas: taṁ rayiṁ aśyām — may I attain that wealth. What kind? Yaśasam — endowed with fame, praised by all. Suvīram — possessed of excellent heroes, sons and the like. Dāsapravargam — pravarga is an excellent varga, a company: he in whom there is a company of servants, of workmen: i.e. endowed with many attendants. Aśvabudhyam — such wealth as that by which horses are to be known [as present]. O subhage, rich in good fortune, Uṣas, delighted by sudaṁsasā śravasā, praise accompanied by good works, you who, impelled by food [the print’s vājaprasūtā clause is clotted (?)], vibhāsi, display bṛhantam, the abundant wealth: may I attain that [wealth] — so it connects with the former.”

Grammar tail (partly clotted): aśyām — root aśū vyāptau; the parasmaipada by vyatyaya; the elision of the stem-suffix by bahulaṁ chandasi. yaśasam — the suffix ac [after the word yaśas, by the arśa-ādi group; the printed rule partial (?)]; by vyatyaya the syllable before the suffix takes the acute. dāsapravargam — dāsa is a servant; the root dasu upakṣaye... [the derivation in the print is clotted (?)]; the final-acute because of jit; that same accent remains in the bahuvrīhi. sudaṁsasā — by sor manasī alomoṣasī [as printed, iti ca (?)] the final-member initial-acute. yā — the replacement ḍā for am by supāṁ sulug.

uṣaḥ — O Uṣas deity; yaśasam — (by all) praised; suvīram — together with excellent sons; dāsapravargam — together with a group of excellent servants; aśvabudhyam — distinguished by horses; taṁ rayiṁ — that well-known wealth; aśyām — may I enjoy; subhage — O Uṣas deity, of auspicious wealth; sudaṁsasā — accompanied with pure works; śravasā — with praise (you, pleased); vājaprasūtā — to us —

(Pratipadārtha of Rik 92.8, continued from p. 430:) “vājaprasūtā — (to us) giving food; bṛhantam — possessing abundance; yā — which wealth; vibhāsi — you cause to shine (may I enjoy that wealth).”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.8 (Kannada)

“O Uṣas deity, rich in priceless wealth: pleased with our praises, accompanied by pure works, you give us food and display your wealth, which has obtained abundance. May I enjoy that well-known wealth which is praised by all, brings us fame, comes with excellent sons, and is distinguished by horses.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.8)

“May I obtain, Ushas, that ample wealth which confers fame, posterity, troops of servants and is accompanied with horses ; you abound in riches and are the giver of food ; you display them when gratified by hymns and holy Sacrifices.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.8) (Kannada)

yaśasam — yaśasā kīrtyā yuktaṃ sarvaiḥ praśasyam | “‘Endowed with fame’, that is, ‘praised by all’, says Sāyaṇa. And since andhaḥ, vājaḥ, payaḥ and the like are read among the names of food (Ni. 2-7 [?]), Skandasvāmin explains yaśasvintamam [as read] — ‘annena sahitam’, ‘accompanied by food’.”

suvīram — śobhanair vīryaiḥ putraiḥ sahitam | “Accompanied by excellent sons who are heroes.”

dāsapravargam — dāso dasyater upadāsayati karmāṇi (Ni. 3-[?] [?]) | “From the root das, which gives the sense ‘to finish, to complete’, the word dāsa: one who completely finishes all tasks such as household chores — a servant, an attendant. In Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-[?]-6 [?] [the print’s numerals], one may see from the word dāsapatnīḥ that the word dāsa is also used in the sense of ‘demon’. pravarga is prakṛṣṭo vargaḥ saṃghaḥ, an excellent company: a company of those most able in the work of the sacrificer.”

aśvabudhyam — “The explanation of this word has been given in the Special Topics of the seventh Ṛk of this very sūkta [p. 428]: ‘that which may be known by horses’, that is, ‘possessed of a great number of horses’.”

subhage — “mahaṃ, rekṇaḥ, rikthaṃ and the like being read among the names of wealth (Ni. 2-10 [?]), subhaga means ‘excellent wealth’. subhage is a vocative: O one who has excellent wealth.”

sudaṁsasā — “āpaḥ, āpnaḥ, daṁsaḥ and the like being read among the names of works (Ni. 2-1 [?]), daṁsaḥ means ‘work’. sudaṁsasā is ‘by excellent works’, that is, ‘through excellent works’. As is said of the deities Indra, the Aśvins and others, so of Uṣas too it is described in many places that she is endowed with works such as the Agnihotra, or is a helper of works. For example —”

स्वर्जनन्ती सुभगा सुदंसा अन्तादिवः पप्रथ आ पृथिव्याः ।

svar janantī subhagā sudaṁsā antād divaḥ paprathā ā pṛthivyāḥ | (R. Sam. 3-61-4 [?]; the Samhitā text as read, doubtful [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Bringing forth svar, the fortunate, skilful one has spread from the end of heaven to the earth.”

“In this Rk the word sudaṁsāḥ [is explained] ‘śobhanāgnihotrakarmā’, that is, ‘performers of excellent Agnihotra rites’. By this too the meaning here is ‘endowed with works’.”

śravasā — “śravaḥśabdaḥ kīrtiyarthaḥ; Skandasvāmin gives the meaning ‘fame’ for the word śravas. The construction then is ‘atiśayavat karmanimitta kīrtiyarthaṁ’ [as read [?]], ‘fame that is gained through excellent works’.”

sudaṁsasā śravasā — “Besides the above meaning, Skandasvāmin explains in yet another way, as follows: ‘daṁśadarśanayor ity asya daṁśaśabdo darśanavacanaḥ | śravaḥśabdo ‘pi jyotirvacanaḥ | sudarśanena jyotiṣā vā’ [as read, partly clotted [?]] — that is, in the sense of ‘sight’ the word daṁsa, and in the sense of ‘light’ the word śravas, are both suitable: so it means ‘possessed of a charming radiance’. Sāyaṇa: ‘śobhanena karmaṇā yuktena śravaṇīyena stotreṇa prītā tvam’ — ‘you, pleased with praise that is accompanied by good works’.”

vājaprasūtā — “Impelled by food in the form of oblations; or ‘she who gives food’: so Sāyaṇa explains the word ‘[vājaprasūtā] asmabhyam annadātrī satī’ [as read, clotted [?]] — ‘being the giver of food to us’. In the compound which Skandasvāmin explains in this Rk, also used in the Rk 1-[?]-[?] [?] earlier, the word prasūtam means preritam, and the whole compound is explained ‘preritaṁ havirlakṣaṇam annaṁ yaiḥ’ [‘those by whom food in the form of oblation is sent’]; so here too the explanation of Skandasvāmin — ‘impelled by food in the form of oblations’ — is possible.”

Translation: “The devī, the shining Uṣas, having illumined viśvāni bhuvanā, all the beings of the world, and made them luminous, thereafter, turned towards the west, urviyā, wide, spread out, with light that makes cakṣuḥ appear [i.e. with her illuminating radiance], vi bhāti, shines. And viśvaṃ jīvam, all living things, carase, to go about, to engage in their own undertakings, bodhayantī, rousing them from sleep, the Uṣas — viśvasya manāyoḥ — of all beings possessed of mind and able to speak, avidat, obtains, hears the vācam, the speech that they have. Hence the Uṣas is rightly called sūnṛtāvātī [possessing true, pleasant speech].”

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): abhicakṣya — root cakṣiṃ vyaktāyāṃ vāci; this has also the sense ‘to illumine’; in a compound not beginning with nañ, lyap replaces ktvā (Pā. 7-1-37 [?]). praticī — from ānc with prati; the suffix kvin by ṛtvigdadhṛk...; the n is elided by aniditām...; nīp by the upasaṃkhyāna for āncati; the elision of the a, and the lengthening by cāv; the nīp takes the acute by the udāttanivṛtti accent. urviyā — after the word urvī, su ... by the upasaṃkhyāna on iṣyādi, yāj... (Pā. 7-1-39 [?]) the replacement ṣṭīyā; because of the replacement’s force the s is not elided. manāyoḥ — “he wishes manas for himself”: manasyati; kyac by supa ātmanaḥ kyac; u by kyāc chandasi; s — ā by a change of letter. Or kyañ in the agent sense and elision of s; the lengthening by akṛtsārvadhātukayoḥ.

devī — the radiant Uṣas deity; viśvāni bhuvanā — all the beings; abhicakṣya — making them luminous; praticī — facing the west; cakṣuḥ — (her own) with radiance; urviyā — spreading widely; vi bhāti — shines; viśvaṁjīvam — all living things; carase — in order to engage (in their dealings); bodhayantī — (from sleep) awakening —

(the Pratipadārtha continues:) “— [bodhayantī,] rousing; viśvasya — of all (and); manāyoḥ — beings endowed with consciousness; vācam — speech in the form of sound; avidat — obtains (hears).”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.9 (Kannada)

“The radiant Uṣas deity, having illuminated all the beings of the world, afterwards, facing the west, spreads with her radiance and shines. Rousing all beings from sleep so that they engage in their dealings, she hears also the speech, in the form of sound, of all beings endowed with consciousness.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.9)

“The divine Ushas having lighted up the whole world, spreads expanding with her radiance towards the west, arousing all living creatures to their labours ; she hears the speech [sic] of all endowed with thought.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.9) (Kannada)

abhicakṣya — darśayitvā | “That is, ‘having illumined’. In the Ṛksaṁhitā the root cakṣ is generally used in the sense ‘look’ or ‘appear’. When it is used joined with the preposition abhi, these two meanings are chiefly seen. For example —”

आपो हि ष्टा मयोभुवस्ता न ऊर्जे दधातन । महे रणाय चक्षसे । āpo hi ṣṭhā mayobhuvas tā na ūrje dadhātana / mahe raṇāya cakṣase / (Ṛ. Saṁ. 10-9-1 [?])

मित्रः कृष्टीरनिमिषाभि चष्टे मित्राय हव्यं घृतवज्जुहोत । mitraḥ kṛṣṭīr animiṣābhi caṣṭe mitrāya havyaṁ ghṛtavaj juhota / (Ṛ. Saṁ. 3-59-1 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “You waters are the bringers of happiness: set us in vigour, for great delight and for sight. — Mitra, with unwinking [eye], looks upon the peoples: offer to Mitra the ghee-rich oblation.”

“In these Ṛks one should compare the word cakṣase, without the preposition, with the word abhicakṣṭe, which has the preposition. cakṣase is explained ‘darśanāya’ (Ni. 7-[?] [?]), ‘for seeing’; abhicakṣṭe ‘abhipaśyati’ (Ni. 10-22 [?]), ‘sarvataḥ paśyati’: ‘he looks on all sides, well’.”

“In many contexts the sense ‘appear, illumine’ is also found for these same words. For example,”

mahat te viṣṇo abhicakṣyam kṛtaṃ paśyema turvaśaṃ yadum / (R. Saṃ. 8-4-2 [?]; the second citation's text is read with doubt from the blotted print [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “By which Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryaman shine, by which the Nāsatyas and Bhaga; — great is your visible deed, O Viṣṇu, [may we see Turvaśa and Yadu].”

“The two verbs caṣṭe and abhicakṣyam in these Rks too mean prakāśayati, prakāśyam: that is, ‘to make manifest, to appear’. Likewise the word abhicakṣya in the Rk now in hand means ‘having illumined all the beings’.”

urviyā — uruśabdāt tṛtīyāikavacane urviyā iti rūpam / uruṇā [as read, clotted [?]] | “From the word uru, when the singular of the third case [instrumental] is used, the form is urviyā: that is, ‘widely’. It is used in the context ‘pervade, spread widely everywhere’. For example —”

वृश्चस्तीर्विया वि क्रयन्तां पतिभ्यो न जनयः शुम्भमानाः । vṛścas tīrviyā vi krayantāṃ patibhyo na janayaḥ śumbhamānāḥ / (R. Saṃ. 10-100-3 [?]; the Saṃhitā text is read from a blotted print and is doubtful [?]) [Correction, made after p. 442: the same Rk is printed clearly on p. 442 as vyacasvatīr urviyā vi śrayantāṃ patibhyo na janayaḥ śumbhamānāḥ* * (R. Saṃ. 10-110-5 [?]); the blotted reading above should be understood as that.]

“— as used in such Rks, here too the meaning is: ‘may the Uṣas shine, pervading and spreading widely’.”

bodhayantī — suptān uttheśayantī [as read [?]] | “Rousing those who are asleep and making them rise, she makes all resume their own works: this is the meaning. The idea that, after the night, the Uṣas wakes all the herds of living things and fills them with consciousness is expressed in the delightful language of many Rks; for example —”

vy u ṣā āvaḥ pathyā janānāṃ pañca kṣitīr mānuṣīr bodhayantī / (R. Saṃ. 7-79-1 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (for the three): “...waking the sleepers, as one who has been absent comes back again and again. — Dawning, rousing the living, the Uṣas awakens even the one who seems dead. — The Uṣas opened up the paths of the people, awakening the five human tribes.”

“— in many places such as these, the description of the benefit that comes to the world from the Uṣas has been given beautifully in the poetic language of the Ṛksamhitā.”

manāyoḥ — manyater arcatikarmaṇo manā stutir ucyate; tatkāmasya manāyoḥ [as read [?]] | “‘manā is called praise’ — from man, a verb of worship. tatkāmasya manāyoḥ: ‘of him who desires that [praise]’. Since arcati, gāyati, rebhati and the like are read among the forty-four names of worship (Ni. 3-[?] [?]), the word manā means ‘praise’, and manāyu means one who desires to be praised. Hence here: ‘by the ṛṣi who desires praise or by the sacrificer who does so — by such a praiser’, Skandasvāmin explains. Sāyaṇa too, in the other places where this word occurs, explains it in this way. For example —”

प्रियः सुकृत्प्रिय इन्द्रे मनायुः प्रियः सुप्रावीः प्रियो अस्य सोमी ।

priyaḥ sukṛt priya indre manāyuḥ priyaḥ suprāviḥ priyo asya somī | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 4-21-3 [?]; the numerals as read [?])

प्रति मनायोरुचथानि हर्यन् तस्मिन्दधदृषणं शुष्ममिन्द्रः ।

prati manāyor ucathāni haryan tasmin dadhad vṛṣaṇaṃ śuṣmam indraḥ | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 4-21-2 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Dear is the good-doer, dear in Indra the praise-desiring one, dear the good helper, dear his Soma-possessor. — Welcoming the hymns of the praise-desiring one, Indra puts into him the bullish strength.”

“In Ṛks such as these manāyuḥ is explained as ‘one who desires praise’, and manāyoḥ as ‘stutikāmasya’. But for the word manāyoḥ in the Ṛk now in hand alone, manasā yuktasya vāgvyavahārasamarthasya prāṇijātasya — ‘of the creature endowed with mind and capable of speech’ — is the explanation, that is: ‘of all the class of living beings who are endowed with a mind and are able to speak’.”

abhicakṣya — root cakṣiṇ vyaktāyāṃ vāci; since roots have more than one sense (dhātūnām anekārthatvam) this is used also in the sense of ‘illuminate’; since it denotes a preceding action, the suffix ktvā is obtained; as it forms a compound with abhi, by samāse ‘nañpūrve ktvo lyap’ (Pā. 7-1-37 [?]) the suffix ktvā is replaced by lyap; since it is pit, it is unaccented, so the accent of the root remains. praticī — the root añcu (in the senses of motion and worship), preceded by prati; by ṛtvigdadhṛk... (Pā. 3-2-59 [?]) the suffix kvin; since it is kit, by aniditāṃ hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti (Pā. 6-4-24 [?]) the nasal of the penultimate is elided; when the feminine is intended, by the upasaṃkhyāna añcateś ca the suffix nīp; since an ac-beginning suffix follows, by yaci bham (Pā. 1-4-18 [?]) the stem receives the name bha, and by aco 'ñcaḥ (Pā. 6-4-138 [?]) the a of the root is elided; by cau (Pā. 6-3-138 [?]) when the root añcu, whose n is dropped, comes after, the previous vowel is lengthened: the i of prati is lengthened: praticī; by anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ (Pā. 6-1-161 [?]), since nīp follows and the root's a is elided though acute, the nīp takes the acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 92.9, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

urviyā — the word urvī; the su follows; by the upasaṃkhyāna iṃyā cīyājīkārāṇaṃ ca (Pā. 7-1-39 [?], vārttika) the replacement cīyāc; since it is cīṭ, the ī is elided; since it is cit, by citaḥ the final-acute. carase — root cara gatibhakṣaṇayoḥ; in the sense of tumun, by tumarthe sesenase... (Pā. 3-4-9 [?]) the suffix ase. avidat — root vi/lābhe; luṇ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca the i is elided; since the root is ḍit, by puṣādīdyutādyḍitaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. 3-1-55 [?]) the replacement aṇ for cli; the augment aṭ for the stem; the nighāta accent. manāyoḥ — “manaḥ ātmana icchati manasyati”: in the sense of wishing, by supa ātmanaḥ kyac (Pā. 3-1-8 [?]) the suffix kyac after the noun manas; after this kyac-ending stem, by kyāc chandasi (Pā. 3-2-170 [?]) the suffix u; since u follows, the s becomes ā by a change of letter. Or by kartuḥ kyaṇ salopaś ca (Pā. 3-1-11 [?]) the suffix kyaṇ with the elision of s by its connexion; when man + ya stands, by akṛtsārvadhātukayor dīrghaḥ (Pā. 7-4-25 [?]) the a is lengthened because of ya; then, as before, the suffix u: manāyu; by the suffix accent the final-acute; the genitive singular. || 9 ||

Translation: “Punaḥ-punar jāyamānā — appearing daily before sunrise, purāṇī, ancient, that is, eternal. Because she shines, samānaṁ varṇam abhi, obtaining always the one same form, through her abiding in one form on all different days [the clause “sarvatra...” is doubtful [?]]. Such a goddess, the devī, Uṣas, is wasting (jarayanti), bringing to decay, the āyuḥ, the life, of every martasya, mortal creature; for with each day’s contact with Uṣas [clause doubtful [?]] the life of all diminishes; and it was said that Uṣas is born again and again; hence she wears out life. The simile: kṛtnuḥ — a cutter — śvaghnī iva, like the wife of a hunter: as she, āminānā, by striking down the birds that vijaḥ, flutter, by cutting their wings and the like, wears out their lives, so she.”

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): purāṇī — from the indeclinable pura, by sāyaṁciraṁprāhṇe... (Pā. 4-3-23 [?]) the suffix ṭyu; in the brāhmaṇa and kalpa texts proclaimed by ancient (sages), by Pā. 4-3-105 [?] the ṭyuḍ is irregular; yu – ana; ṇīp since it is ṭit; by vyatyaya the final-acute. śumbhamānā — root śumbha dīptau; śap unaccented as it is pit; the root’s accent remains with śānac, a lasārvadhātuka. śvaghnī — śunā mṛgān hatavān śvahā; by bahulaṁ chandasi (Pā. 3-2-88 [?]) kvip after han even with an upapada other than brahman and the like; ṇīp by ṇnebhyo ṇīb; the ghatva by ho hanteḥ; the ṇīp takes the acute by the udāttanivṛtti accent. kṛtnuḥ — root kṛti chedane; the Uṇādi suffix knu. vijaḥ — root oviji bhayacalanayoḥ; “they tremble, move: vijaḥ, birds”. āminānā — root mīñ hiṁsāyām of the kṛyādi class; the shortening by sthādīnāṁ hrasvaḥ; with śānac the final-acute.”

(Pratipadārtha of Rik 92.10, continued from p. 439:) “— a form without any change; śumbhamānā — shining; devī — the radiant deity Uṣas; martasya — of all beings subject to death; āyuḥ — the life; kṛtnuḥ — the knower [as printed, ‘jāṇanāda’ [?]]; śvaghnī iva — like a gambler [jūjugāra, as printed].”

Or (a printed alternative): “āminānā — she who injures by tearing apart (the wings and the like); vijaḥ — of the (moving) birds; kṛtnuḥ — she who cuts (the wings); śvaghnī iva — like a hunter’s wife; jarayantī — gives old age and destroys.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.10 (Kannada)

“The radiant Uṣas deity, being beginningless, appears every day in one and the same manner, with a form that has no change at all. And as the wife of a hunter, injuring the birds that move about by tearing off their wings and the like, cuts them and makes them die, so this Uṣas too makes all beings subject to death grow old, causing their life to wear away.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.10)

“The divine and ancient Ushas, born again and again and bright with unchanging hues, wastes away the life of a mortal, like the wife of a hunter cutting up and dividing the birds.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.10) (Kannada)

“In this Ṛk a sort of distress is mixed with joy. By describing the beauty and loveliness of the Uṣas, who fills the whole world with consciousness and light and brings living things to fullness, [the poet] gives expression to the joy of experience; and in the presence of Uṣas, who remains ever in unfailing youth, all creatures, from mortals who reach old age onward, show a slight anxiety in the thought that they are drawing near to death. With the experience of beauty is joined the experience of truth. In this context Professor Max Müller, explaining the intention of this Ṛk, has said certain things about the Uṣas deity which it would be inappropriate not to quote; they are given here:”

“The Dawn, which to us is merely a beautiful sight, was to the early gazer and thinker, the problem of all problems. It was the unknown land from whence rose every day those bright emblems of a divine power which left in the mind of man the first impression and intimation of another world, of power above, of order and wisdom. What we simply call the sun-rise, brought before their eyes every day, the riddle of the riddles, the riddle of existence. The days of their life sprang from that dark abyss which every morning seemed instinct with light and life. Their youth, their manhood, their old age, all were to the Vedic bards the gift of that heavenly mother who appeared bright, young, unchanged, immortal every morning, while everything else seemed to grow old, to change, and drop, and at last to set, never to return. It was there, in that bright chamber, that, as their poets said, mornings and days were spun, or under a different image, where mornings and days were nourished, where life or time was drawn out”. (Lectures on the Science of Language Vol. II (P. 481–482))

(The English quotation is reproduced as printed in the source, including the closing quotation mark, which follows the full stop as printed.)

Kannada, continued: “Thus, in describing, before the eternal Uṣas of the unchanging life of the world, the changing youth and beauty [of mortals] —”

punaḥ punar jāyamānā purāṇī — “this is a delineation of the nature of Uṣas. Here, for jāyamānā, the meaning intended is ‘birth’ in the sense of ‘rising’: pratidivasaṃ sūryodayāt pūrvaṃ prādurbhavantī — ‘appearing every day before sunrise’ [Sāyaṇa]. That is, ‘birth’ does not mean a fresh origin; the meaning is that she appears anew, before sunrise, every day, as a new rising. Purāṇī — cirantani, nityā ity arthaḥ | jagatsṛṣṭīkāla evotpannatvād uṣā purāṇīty ucyate [‘ancient: eternal; since the Uṣas has been produced at the very time of the world’s creation, she is called purāṇī’]. The attribute purāṇī is used because she is beginningless, eternal, and has existed since the time of the creation of the world. This kind of description is seen at every step in the Ṛks that are in praise of Uṣas. For example —”

śumbhamānā — śumbha dīptau | “From the root śumbha, which gives the sense ‘to shine, to be beautiful’, the word śumbhamānā is formed. śumbhamānāḥ — śuśobhiṣamāṇāḥ (Ni. 6-11 [?]): so the author of the Nirukta explains it as ‘those who wish to shine greatly’: ‘shining attractively’. Gloss, mine and tentative: “May the wide-spreading [doors] open widely, like women adorning themselves for their husbands. — Like waters adorning themselves downhill, Agni protects in the lap of his parents. — You bare your breast, adorning yourself, O goddess Uṣas, shining with your splendours.”

“— such Rks may be looked at. Thus, having described the attractive nature of Uṣas, he now explains the part that gives a little distress.”

vijaḥ — vir iti śakuninām veter gatikarmaṇaḥ (Ni. 3-[?] [?]) | “From the root vī, in the sense ‘to move about, to wander’, comes vi, and from it the word vija is formed. Skandasvāmin: ‘vī iti pakṣināma | tato jāte iti vijaḥ’ — ‘the vi is the name of a bird; the one born from it is vija’ [that is, the word vija arises from vi, ‘bird’], following the Nirukta. Sāyaṇa, however, explains the word vijaḥ as derived from the root oviji bhayacalanayoḥ (‘to fear, to tremble’): vijanti calantīti vijaḥ pakṣiṇaḥ — ‘those that move about are vijaḥ, birds’.”

“In general, the use of the word vijaḥ for ‘bird’ in the Ṛksaṃhitā may be said to occur at this one place only; for the word vijaḥ used in Ṛk 1-92-10 [as read] the meaning is udvejakaḥ (‘one who causes alarm’). In all the other places the words viḥ or vayaḥ are used for ‘bird’.”

āminānā — mīṇ hiṃsāyām | balād dhiṃsanti | “For this word, which arises from the root mī with the sense of injury, the meaning ‘one who injures by force’ arises.”

kṛtnuḥ — kṛti chedane | “From the root kṛt, ‘to cut’, the meaning is: one who cuts and injures all the wings.”

śvaghnī — “To this word three meanings can be given: jūjagāra [a gambler, as printed], vyādha [a hunter], and vyādhapatnī [a hunter’s wife]. The first, as the Nirukta writer’s explanation: śvaghnī —

Special Topics of Rik 92.10, continued from p. 442 (Kannada):

śvaghnī — “śvaghnī is kitavo bhavati, svaṃ hanti svaṃ punar āśritaṃ bhavati [as read] — śvaghnī means a gambler: he destroys himself; he ruins himself; and again he becomes dependent on others. [The author of the Nirukta (Ni. 5-[?] [?])] explains in this way and cites the Ṛk of the Ṛksaṃhitā —”

कृतं न श्वघ्नी वि चिनोति देवने संवर्गं यन्मघवा सूर्यं जयत् ।

kṛtaṃ na śvaghnī vi cinoti devane saṃvargaṃ yan maghavā sūryaṃ jayat | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-43-5 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read, doubtful [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “As a gambler gathers the winning throw at the dice, so [Indra] gathers the booty, when the bounteous one wins the sun.”

“If one follows this explanation, here śvaghnī is a gambler. Skandasvāmin explains: ‘śvabhir hantīti śvaghnī lubdhaka ihocyate’ — ‘he who kills by means of dogs, the huntsman, is called śvaghnī here’ — that is, a hunter who kills deer by means of dogs; and Sāyaṇa: ‘śunā mṛgān hatavān śvahā | tasya strī śvaghnī’ — ‘the hunter’s wife, who kills deer by means of dogs’. In the Ṛksaṃhitā, in the five places other than this Ṛk, there is use of the word śvaghnī. In those, Ṛ. Saṃ. 5-[?]-4 [?]; and 10-[?]-5 [?]; 6-[?]-2 [?] [the print’s numerals], the word means vyādha, hunter, and in 10-42-9 [?]; 10-43-5 [?]; 9-[?]-[?] [?], where it occurs, Sāyaṇa explains it as kitava, gambler.”

“Whichever meaning is given, a certain distress is also expressed: the Uṣas, who gives beauty and gives consciousness to the world, brings old age to all creatures without their knowing it, and becomes the cause of destruction.”

Translation: “The Uṣas, vy ūrṇvatī, laying open the divaḥ antān, the edges of the sky, freeing them from darkness, abodhi — was noticed by all beings; became known. Thereupon, at Uṣas’s appearance, svasāram, her sister, the Night, who goes off of herself, sanutaḥ [a word meaning ‘hidden’], apa yuyoti — she sends away, even from the hidden places, separates her. Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): vyūrṇvatī — root ūrṇu ācchādane, with vi; the śatṛ in the laṭ; ṇīp by ugitaś ca; by śatur anumō nadyajādī the nadī takes the acute. sanutaḥ — listed among the svārādi words as a final-acute irregular form; by āto 'vyaye saṁjñāyām... the luk of the locative. yuyoti — root yu miśraṇāmiśraṇayoḥ; ślu for śap by bahulaṁ chandasi. manuṣyā — ḍyā replaces the genitive by supāṁ sulug. yugāni — ghaṇ from yuj in the instrumental or the passive sense; kutva by cajoḥ ku ghiṇyatoḥ; since the word yuga is read among the umbhādi words — in the sense of a particular time and of the apparatus of a chariot and the like — the guṇa of the light penultimate does not occur; final-acute by umbhādīnāṁ ca (Kā. 6-1-160 [?]). jārasya — dāra and jāra are formed irregularly by Pā. 3-3-20 [?] with the ghaṇ and the elision of ṇi.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.11 (Kannada)

“When the Uṣas deity, freeing all the end-portions of the mid-region from darkness, was making them shine, everyone came to know her form. She sends her sister, the night, who had gone away of herself, to a hidden place, so that she is not seen. Bringing to an end the ages of men — Kṛta, Tretā and the rest — which measure their time, she shines with her own radiance as the wife of the Sun, who makes the night end.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.11)

“She has been seen illuminating the boundaries of the sky, and driving into disappearance the spontaneously [sic, as printed: ‘the spontaneously night’] night; wearing away the ages of the human race, she shines with light like the bride of the Sun.” — as printed.

vyūrṇvatī — ūrṇu ācchādane | “The root ūrṇu, which gives the sense ‘to cover, to hide’, forms ūrṇvatī. Here, joined with the preposition vi, the sense is ‘removal of covering’: that is, removal of the covering that is the darkness of the night. vivṛtāṁś tamasā viyuktān kurvaty uṣāḥ — ‘the Uṣas who, with the radiance that has enveloped the world, makes it shine’ — this is the meaning.”

“In some places, when this is used as an epithet of Uṣas, there is the meaning ‘giving’ for vyūrjvati. For example —”

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Opening out choice things for the giver, the young woman has again made the light as of old.”

“— in this Rk, prayacchantī [‘giving’] is explained: ‘as one who gives’; here too it means that she appears and gives. In such Rks as R. Saṃ. 6-[?]-3 [?], the explanation ‘svatejasā ācchādayantī’ is given. In all those places the preposition vi has the special sense of ‘distinctly’; ūrjvana is ‘to cover by spreading out the radiance completely’ — this is the idea.”

svasāram — uṣasaḥ prādurbhāve sati svayam eva sarantīṃ niśām | “‘Night, who, when the Uṣas appears, goes away of herself’: it is explained that with the very rising of Uṣas the night goes away of herself. “In many Ṛks such as these, describing the sister-relation of the Night and the Uṣas, it is explained that both, by their constant and regulated movement, are the cause of the progress of the world. Hence here too it can be said that svasāram means ‘sister’.”

sanutaḥ — “niṇyam, svasaḥ, sanutaḥ and the like being read among the six names of ‘hidden’ (Ni. 3-[?] [?]), it means ‘hidden’, ‘not visible to the eye’. As an example for this word the author of the Nirukta cites the Ṛk —”

स सुत्रामा स्ववाँ इन्द्रो अस्मे आराच्चिद्वेषः सनुतर्युयोतु । sa sutrāmā svavāṃ indro asme ārāc cid dveṣaḥ sanutar yuyotu / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-44-12 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “May Indra, the good protector, the possessor of his own, drive away from us, even far off, [our] hatred, hiding it.”

“Likewise, in many Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-[?]-3 [?]; 5-[?]-[?] [?]; 8-[?]-3 [?]; 10-[?]-6 [?] the word is used in the senses of ‘secret’, ‘hidden’, ‘a place not visible to the eye’. In this context also it is said that the Uṣas drives the night, her own sister, to a hidden place that no one can see.”

yugāni praminatī — yugaśabdaḥ kālavacanaḥ / manuṣyāṇāṃ jīvitādikālān | “The word yuga means a span of time, the time of human life. (His explanation may be seen on page 2[?] of Bāl Gaṅgādhara Tilak’s book The Arctic Home in the Vedas [as printed; the page number is not legible [?]].) She, causing to end the whole period of men’s lives —” cakṣasā vibhātī — “She shines with her own radiance, with her beauty, together with her beloved Sun. In this idea the experience of truth and the sight of beauty are joined together. The truth-seeing idea that the Uṣas brings to an end the whole period of human life is expressed generally in all the descriptions of Uṣas. For example —” aminatī daivyaṇi vratāni praminatī manuṣyā yugāni / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-124-2 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (for both): “Those mortals who saw the earlier Uṣas dawning have gone. — Not infringing the divine laws, bringing to an end the ages of men.”

“— in many such places the picture of the brevity of human life is drawn: all who saw this eternal beauty of the Uṣas in former times and were pleased have passed away; those who come afterwards will be the same; but the Uṣas alone is eternal, ever young: so the idea is expressed.”

jārasya — rātrer jarayituḥ sūryasya | “Of the Sun, who brings the night to an end, or of the beloved Sun: either meaning may be taken; the second meaning is the more acceptable.”

yoṣā — “‘As a wife’: since afterwards there is a relation of husband and wife, the meaning ‘beloved’ is appropriate. This married relationship of Uṣas and the Sun is described in many places. For example —”

सूर्यो देवीमुषसं रोचमानां मर्यो न योषामभ्येति पश्चात् ।

vājinīvātī sūryasya yoṣā citrāmaghā rāya īše vasūnām | (R. Saṁ. 7-75-3 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “The Sun follows the shining goddess Uṣas from behind, like a man [following] a young woman. — The strong, the Sun’s wife, of wonderful gifts, rules over the wealth of goods.”

“— in many such contexts the relation of husband and wife between Sūrya and Uṣas is indicated. The author of the Nirukta also, explaining ‘sūryā sūryasya patnī’, cites the Rk R. Saṁ. 10-[?]-20 [?] (Ni. 12-[?] [?]).”

caḥsasā — ātmīyena prakāśajñena | “By her own sight: with her sight in the form of radiance, being united with the Sun, she shines: this is the meaning.”

*Translation: “Subhagā, of good wealth, citrā, to be honoured, the Uṣas — as a cowherd in the forest spreads out his cattle, so she, pṛthānā, spreading her lights, urviyā, being wide and great, being such vy aśvait, pervaded all the world. The simile: sindhur na kṣodaḥ — as flowing water in a low place pervades [it] quickly, so [she]. That same Uṣas, dṛśānā, seen together with the rays of the sun, ceti — became known. What is she doing? She does not injure the daivyaṇi vratāṇi, the divine rites of the new- and full-moon and the like: that is, she urges the sacrificers to perform them. For it is after the appearance of Uṣas that all rites such as the Agnihotra are performed, not at night. ‘Not in the evening is the deity pleased with it’, says the śruti (R. Saṇ.
3-22-1 [?]).”*

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): pṛthānā — root pṛtha prakhyāne, with the causative sense included; the suffix cānaś in the habitual sense; luk of śap by bahulaṇ chandasi. sindhuḥ — root syandū prasravaṇe; saṇprasāraṇaṇ of the root and dha (U. 1-11 [?]) the suffix u; the accent by the continuing rule nit. aśvait — root tuōś ci gativṛddhyoḥ; in the luṇ sic for cli; the augment iṭ is absent because the rule on augments is not invariable; the vṛddhi before sic (Pā. 7-2-1 [?]); the iṭ-augment prevented by bahulaṇ chandasi (Pā. 7-2-42 [?]); the elision of s by skoḥ saṇyogādyoḥ. ceti — root citī saṇjñāne; the passive luṇ; no aṭ by bahulaṇ chandasy amāṇyoge 'pi. dṛśānā — śānac in the passive laṭṭa from dṛṣ; the luk of the stem-suffix by bahulaṇ chandasi.”

subhagā — one who has excellent wealth; citrā — adorable; the Uṣas deity; paśūn na — as a cowherd lets his cattle spread over a pasture; sindhuḥ na kṣodaḥ — as a flowing river spreads its water; pṛthānā — spreading her radiance; urvīyā — widely; vy aśvait — has pervaded the world; daivyāni — those connected with the gods; vrātāni — sacrificial acts; aminatī — not injuring; sūryasya — of the Sun; raśmibhiḥ — together with the rays; dṛṣānā — becoming visible; ceti — became known.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.12 (Kannada)

“The Uṣas deity, who has excellent wealth and is adorable, has pervaded the world, spreading her radiance widely, as a cowherd lets his cattle spread over the green meadows in all directions, and as a flowing river spreads its water. And without injuring the sacrificial acts connected with the gods, she became visible with the rays of the Sun and perceptible to all.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.12)

“The affluent and adorable Ushas has sent her rays as a cowherd drives the cattle to pasture, and spreads expansive like flowing water ; She is seen associated with the rays of the Sun, unimpeding sacred ceremonies.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.12) (Kannada)

citrā — pūjanīyā | “The adorable Uṣas deity. For the word citra, the meaning ‘delightful, wonderful, or attractive’ is commonly well known (cāyanīya). But here it means ‘adorable’. The author of the Nirukta, citing the Rk that follows this, explains the word citra there as citraṁ-maṇḥanīyam (‘respectable’), ‘to be honoured’; so it should be explained here too.”

sindhuḥ na kṣodaḥ — “Since āvanayaḥ, yahvyaḥ, khāḥ and the like are read among the thirty-seven names of rivers (Ni. 1-[?] [?]), sindhu means ‘river’; since arṇaḥ, kṣodaḥ and the like are read among the hundred names of water, kṣoda means ‘water’. The simile here is apt: as a river spreads its water widely without being obstructed, so the Uṣas too spreads her radiance widely.”

vy aśvait — śvatir gatyārthaḥ | vividhaṁ gacchati trīn api lokān prati | “She spreads her rays in various ways towards all the three worlds.”

urvīyā pṛthānā — “Spreading very widely: this is the meaning. The attribute pṛthānā is an epithet of the Uṣas who spreads over the sky and shows her lustre.”

वहन्ति सीमरुणासो रुशन्तो गावः सुभगामुर्विया पृथानाम् ।

vahanti sīm aruṇāso ruśanto gāvaḥ subhagām urvīyā pṛthānām | (R. Saṁ. 6-64-3 [?]; the Saṁhitā text as read, doubtful [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “The ruddy, shining cows carry her, the fortunate one, spreading widely.”

daivyāni vratāni aminatī — “Not injuring the sacrificial and other rites connected with the gods’: this is the meaning. In the Rk 1-124-2 [?] both the idea of the previous Rk, praminatī manuṣyā yugāni (‘wearing out the ages of men’), and the idea of this Rk, aminatī daivyāni vratāni (‘not infringing the divine laws’), are brought together:”

अमिनती दैव्यानि व्रतानि प्रमिनती मनुष्या युगानि । ईयुषीणामुपमा शश्वतीनामायतीनां

aminatī daivyāni vratāni praminatī manuṣyā yugāni / īyuṣīṇām upamā śaśvatīnām āyatīnāṃ prathamōṣā vy adyaut // (R. Saṃ. 1-124-2 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Not infringing the divine laws, wearing out the ages of men — last of the endless [dawns] that have gone, first of those that are to come, the Uṣas has shone forth.”

“Explaining the poetic idea of this Rk and its style of composition, a critic named Bloomfield has greatly praised it. In his own language, describing the beauty of this Rk, he says:”

“Stanza I. 124-2. is the high-water mark of Vedic composition. The relation of the two pairs of words may be expressed in the proportion: aminatī : āyatīnām = praminatī : īyuṣīṇām. That is to say: The dawns preserve the laws of the Gods, aminatī, by their regular appearance, āyatīnām; the ages of men waste away, praminatī, as the dawns fade day by day, īyuṣīṇām.” (Rig-Veda Repetitions I. P. 108)

Kannada (the printed English quotation is as printed; the two Sanskrit-script words are given in Kannada in the print): “...‘īyuṣīṇām’ may be said. In this way, putting together into this one Rk the ideas of the two Rks 1-92-11 and 1-92-12 [as read], he praises greatly the order of the contrasts, in the excellent poetic style, and the expression of the idea.” (The Kannada sentence after the quotation, ending ‘ಶೃಷ್ಠಿಃಪ್ರಾಪ್ತೌ’, is read as given here, partly obscured by the English insertions [?].)

pṛthānā — root pṛtha prakhyāne; since the sense of ṇic is included in the meaning of the root, after the ṇic-ending sense, in the habitual sense the suffix cānaś; by bahulaṃ chandasi the luk of śap; since it is cit, by cit the final-acute.

sindhuḥ — root syandū prasravaṇe; by syandeḥ saṃprasāraṇaṃ dhaś ca (Uṇādi 1-11 [?]) the suffix u; because of its connexion, the d of the root becomes dh, and the y takes saṃprasāraṇa; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. 6-1-108 [?]) the preceding form; since nit continues from the preceding sūtra, because the suffix u is nit, by ñnityādir nityam the initial-acute. urviyā — explained in the fifth Rk of this very sūkta [92.9 [?]]. āsvait — root ṣuośvi gativṛddhyoḥ; luṇ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca the i is elided; by vibhāṣā ‘*ñ-śveḥ’ (Pā. 3-1-49 [?], printed ‘३-१-४४, ४९’) the optional añ; since there is a choice, by *cleḥ sic the cli is replaced by sic; by āgamaśāstram anityam the augment iṭ, which by ārdhadhātukasyeḍvalādeḥ would come, does not come; since the sic is not iṭ-beginning, by hmyantakṣaṇaśvasajāgrṇīśvyedhitām... (Pā. 7-2-5 [?]) the prohibition of ṛddhi does not apply; by sici vṛddhiḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. 7-2-1 [?]) the ṛddhi of the ik vowel of the root; by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 7-3-97 [?]) since the tip is apṛkta the augment iṭ does not come; since the sic is followed by a consonant cluster beginning with s, by skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca (Pā. 8-2-29 [?]) the initial s is elided; the augment aṭ for the stem; since it follows a word, the nighāta. aminatī — root mīñ hiṇṣāyām, of the kryādi class; in the present sense śatṛ; by kryādibhyaḥ śnā the stem-suffix; since it belongs to the sthādi list, by sthādināṃ hrasvaḥ the shortening of the root; since śatṛ is jī, by śnābhyastayor ātaḥ (Pā. 6-4-112 [?]) the ā of śnā is elided; in the feminine, since śatṛ is ugit, by ugitaś ca the suffix ñip; since it is a nañ-tatpuruṣa, the first member (a-) keeps its natural accent. ceti — root citī saṃjñāne; in the passive luṇ, third person singular, ta; for the cli, ciṇ; because of it, the guṇa of the light penultimate; by ciṇo luk the elision of the ta; by bahulaṃ chandasya amānyoge ‘pi’ the aṭ does not come to the stem; the nighāta. dṛśānā — root dṛśir prekṣaṇe; in the passive, in the present sense, śānac; by bahulaṃ chandasi the luk of the stem-suffix (śap); in the feminine, since it ends in a, ṭāp; by cit the final-acute. || 12 ||

Translation: “In the prātaranuvāka, in the Uṣasya kratu, in the Uṣṇih metre, the three Ṛks beginning uṣas tac citram are applied; and in the Āśvina-śastra. In the section athoṣasya it is prescribed: ‘uṣas tac citram ā bhareti tisra auṣṇihaṁ’ (Ā. 4-14). — O vājīnīvati: vāja is food in the form of oblation; the action that has it is vājīnī; O Uṣas deity, who are united with that action: citraṁ, that wonderful, desirable wealth, ā bhara, bring, give to us, by which wealth we hold, dhāmahe, bear, tokaṁ, our son, and tanayam, his son too. Here in the Nirukta: ‘uṣas tac citraṁ cāyanīyaṁ dhanam āharāsmabhyam annavati yena putrāṁś ca pautrāṁś ca dadhīmahi’ (Ni. 12-6): ‘O Uṣas, bring us that wonderful, desirable wealth, you who have food, by which we may support our sons and grandsons.’ Dhāmahe — in the laṭ of dadhāti, the luk of śap by bahulaṁ chandasi; by vyatyaya the initial-acute. Or, in the loṭ, the augment āṭ [read: aṭ] for the first-person by loṭy aḍuttamasya pic ca, and the suffix is treated as pit; so the suffix being pit and unaccented, the accent of the root remains. [The bhāṣya’s final clause on aitva (Pā. 3-4-93) and the ye-connexion preventing nighāta is clotted in the print [?].]”

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 92.13) (Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 454)

vājīnīvati — O one united with the action of oblations; uṣaḥ — O Uṣas deity; vena — by which; tokaṁ ca — a son; tanayaṁ ca — his son too (grandson also); dhāmahe — (we) might be able to support; citraṁ — (desired) various; tat — wealth; asmabhyam — to us; ā bhara — bring.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.13 (Kannada)

“O Uṣas deity, united with sacrificial acts in which oblations are offered: bring us in many ways wealth of that kind — wealth we desire — by which we may sustain our children and grandchildren.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.13)

“Ushas, possessor of food, bring us that various wealth by which we may sustain sons and grandsons.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.13) (Kannada)

“In reciting the Ṛks of the Uṣṇih metre, belonging to the Uṣasya kratu at the time of reciting the prātaranuvāka mantras, these three Ṛks beginning uṣas tac citram are to be recited; and these Ṛks are applied at the time of reciting the mantras of the Āśvina-śastra too: so it is stated by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section athoṣasya, in the sūtra uṣas tac citram ā bhara (Ā. 4-14).”

tokaṃ ca tanayaṃ ca — “tuk, tokam, tanayaḥ and the like are read among the fifteen names of offspring (Ni. 3-[?] [?]); so the meaning of both words is ‘son’. Looked at crudely, the meaning of these two words is one. But in usage there is the custom of speaking of ‘son and grandson’ together. Not only that: the author of the Nirukta, in tokaṃ tudyateḥ [‘toka from tud’] and tanayaṃ tanoteḥ [‘tanaya from tan’], has shown the technical difference in the two. Explaining this, the commentators say: ‘tokam iti putraḥ sa hi nityaṃ pitrā vinayitā tudyate idaṃ kuru idaṃ mā kāṣṭhī iti | tanayaṃ — tanoteḥ pautram | tadvyṭtitarāṃ pituḥ sakāśāt tatam bhavati’ — ‘toka means a son: for he is constantly goaded by his father, “do this, do not do that”; tanaya is from tan, a grandson: he becomes wider [more extended] than the father’: that is, the father who gives instruction, giving a fixed injunction of conduct and so regulating the son’s life, is the reason why the son is called toka, and the grandson, as the means of extending and prospering the line, is called tanaya: so the meaning arises (Ni. 10-[?] [?]).”

dhāmahe — dadhīmahi (Ni. 12-6 [?]) | “‘To support’: that is, ‘we protect’. By what wealth we shall be able to protect our sons, grandsons and the like —”

citram — maṃhanīyam (Ni. 12-6 [?]) | “‘Bring us wealth that is to be honoured’: this is the sense of the prayer.”

“After this same prayer of the same order, the Ṛk composed by the ṛṣi Vāmadeva, in which Uṣas is addressed, [is cited:]

[By hṛgrahor bhaś chandasi (Vārttika) the h is replaced by bh — printed: the rule is cited for hṛ; hence the root's form here [?].] The tiñ-nighāta. vājinivati — as a vocative, by āmantritasya ca (Pā. 8-1-19 [?]) the nighāta accent. dhāmahe — root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; la ṭ, first person plural, with the suffix mahiñ; by ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e the final e; by bahulam chandasi the luk of ṣap. Or, in the lo ṭ, by āḍuttamasya picca (Pā. 3-4-92 [?]) the augment ā ṭ for the suffix; the suffix is treated as pit; hence by anudāttau suppitau the suffix is unaccented, and the accent of the root remains. If we take it to be a lo ṭ form, then by eta ai (Pā. 3-4-93 [?]) the ai-substitution is to be understood as not occurring, by vyatyaya. Since vena (“by which”) precedes and is connected, by yadvṛttānnityam the nighāta does not occur. || 13 ||

Here both are used as vocatives. The explanation of the attributes sūnṛtāvati and sūnṛtānāṃ netri [was given] in the commentary on the seventh Rk of this very sūkta [92.7, p. 428]. For vibhāvati: vividhā bhā vibhāḥ | vibhāyuktā vibhāvati — ‘a mass of various radiances is vibhā; one who has such [radiances] —

Translation: “In the prātarānuvāka, in the Āśvina kratu, in the Uṣṇih metre, this triplet beginning āśvinā vartīḥ is applied; and in the Āśvina-śāstra. So it is prescribed: ‘āśvinā vartir asmad āśvināv eha gacchatam iti tṛṇau’ (Ā. 4-14 [?]). — [Because of their association with the Uṣas, the two Āśvins, held in mind, are praised by this triplet beginning with idam (the reading of this clause is doubtful [?]).] O Āśvins, possessed of horses or of pervading nature, divine dasrā, destroyers of foes, ā, all around, in such a way that our vartīḥ — our house, the means of our dwelling — may become gomat, abounding in many cows, and hiraṇyavat, endowed with wealth that is good and delightful: so, being samanasā, of one mind [that is, well-disposed], do you ni yacchatam — turn and drive — your chariot arvāk, in the direction of, towards our house.”

Grammar tail of the bhāṣya of Rik 92.16 (concluded from p. 461; noted briefly): āśvinā — the ending replaced by ā by supāṇ sulug. vartīḥ — “that in which one dwells (vartate) is vartīḥ, the house”; the Uṇādi suffix isi. asmat — the luk of the ablative (read in the print as ‘śaṣṭhyā’, where a pañcamī would be expected [?]) by supāṇ sulug. samanasā — “those two whose minds are alike are samanasau”; by samānasya chandasi the replacement sa for samāna.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 92.16) (Kannada)

dasrā — destroyers of foes; āśvinā — O Āśvin deities; asmat — our; vartīḥ — house, our dwelling-place; ā — all around; gomat — so as to be full of cows; hiraṇyavat — so as to be filled with wealth that is good and delightful; samanasā — with a mind of favour; ratham — your chariot; arvāk — (towards our house) facing; ni yacchatam — turn and drive.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.16 (Kannada)

“O Āśvin deities, destroyers of foes: so that our house may be filled all around with cows, and also with abundant wealth, with a mind of favour towards us, turn your chariot and drive it toward our house.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 92.16)

“Aswins [sic], destroyers of foes, turn your chariot towards our abode, so that with your favour it may become full of cattle and gold.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.16) (Kannada)

“At the time of reciting the prātarānuvāka mantras, when reciting the Ṛks in the Uṣṇih metre belonging to the Āśvina kratu, the three Ṛks beginning āśvinā vartīḥ are to be recited, and in the recitation of the Āśvina-śāstra mantras too these Ṛks are to be recited; this is shown by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra ‘aśvinā vartir asmadāśvināveha gacchatam iti tṛṇau’ (Ā. 4-14 [?]).”

“The origin of the Áśvin deities, their nature and their place were explained in detail earlier: see Part 4, page 75 [as printed].”

dasrā — dasu upakṣaye — śatrūṇām upakṣapayitārau | “Dasu means ‘to destroy’: those who destroy enemies. Or, as divine physicians (devavaidya), the destroyers of diseases. The meaning ‘destroyers of enemies’ or ‘destroyers of disease through being divine physicians’ is given to dasrā; it may also mean darśanīyau, ‘beautiful in form’. In this Ṛk the bhāṣya-writer explains it as destroyers of enemies. Of the Áśvins, the sons of Saraṇyū, one is named Dasra and the other Nāsatya; but it is well known that both together are commonly called dasrā.”

vartiḥ — vartanahetubhūtaṃ gṛham | “Sāyaṇa explains ‘the house that is the basis for living’; Skandasvāmin, ‘vartiṣā [or similar; the printed Sanskrit before it is clotted [?]] prasiddhena pathā’ — ‘by the well-known road’, that is, ‘by the well-known or excellent road’. Wherever the word vartiḥ occurs, Sāyaṇa generally explains it as ‘house’, and Skandasvāmin as ‘a well-known or excellent road’. For example, in Ṛks such as 1-34-9 [?]; 1-112-[?] [?]; 1-[?]-3 [?]; 1-[?]-4 [?] the two commentators have given different meanings in the same way. It is also a special point that the sūktas in which these Ṛks occur are all addressed to the Áśvin deities.”

arvāg ratham samanāsā ni yacchatam — “‘With a mind of favour towards us, turn your chariot and come towards our house.’ The chariot of the Áśvin deities is exceedingly well known, both for its beauty and for its marvellousness; so in prayers to these deities there is a description of them together with their chariot, which is endowed with greatness, and a prayer to them. For example, in the seventh maṇḍala, by Vasiṣṭha, and in the eighth, by Śyāvāśva Ātreya, in the very same order of this Ṛk, the Áśvin deities are prayed to in this way —”

अर्वाग्रथं समनसा नि यच्छतं पिबतं सोम्यं मधु ।

arvāg rathaṃ ni yacchataṃ pibataṃ somyaṃ madhu / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-35-23 [?]; numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, mine and tentative (for both): “With one mind turn your chariot this way, and drink the Soma-sweet.”

“— thus, in all the prayers made to them, the ‘turning of the chariot to face this way’ is praised.”

uṣarbudhaḥ — uṣasi prabuddhā ásvāḥ | “‘Horses awakened at the time of dawn.’ This word is used in general for sacrificers who are awake at dawn for the sacrifice, and for the deities invited to receive the oblation, and in particular as an epithet of Agni. In the whole Ṛksaṃhitā there are only two places where it means the horses of the Ásvin deities: in this Ṛk, and in the Ṛk 4-45-4 [?] [numerals as read, doubtful]; in both it means the horses of the Ásvin deities.”

devā — “Shining ones, or those whose nature is generosity and the like.”

mayobhuvā — “śimbātā, śatarā [as read, doubtful [?]] and the like being read among the twenty names of happiness (Ni. 3-11 [?]), mayas means ‘happiness’. The epithet mayobhuvaḥ is applied generally to other deities too: all of them are, in some way or other, givers of happiness to sacrificers. But among the Ásvin deities there is one special feature —”

“— from śruti-sentences such as this the Ásvin deities are well known as the physicians of the gods, and as bestowing a happiness in the form of health even on the sacrificers who have secured the favour of the gods. Therefore here: mayasaḥ ārogyapradasya sukhasya bhāvayitārau — ‘those who give happiness in the form of health’.”

hiraṇyavartanī — “vartanī means the chariot, or the fellow of the chariot wheel (the outer rim), or the road of the chariot. hiraṇyavartanī: in most places it is explained as ‘a golden chariot’. Here it means ‘those who have a golden chariot’. Except for the Ṛk 6-[?]-2 [?] of the Ṛksaṃhitā, this epithet in all other places is applied to the Ásvin deities. In some places the two epithets dasrā hiraṇyavartanī occur together. For example —

दस्रा हिरण्यवर्तनी सुषुम्ना सिन्धुवाहसा माध्वी मम श्रुतं हवम् । dasrā hiraṇyavartanī suṣumnā sindhuvāhasā mādhvī mama śrutaṃ havam / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 5-75-2 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as printed [?])

वावृधाना शुभस्पती दस्रा हिरण्यवर्तनी । vāvṛdhānā śubhas patī dasrā hiraṇyavartanī / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-5-11 [?])

दस्रा हिरण्यवर्तनी पिबतं सोम्यं मधु ।

dasrā hiraṇyavartanī pibataṃ somyaṃ madhu / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-8-1 [?])

दस्रा हिरण्यवर्तनी शुभस्पती पातं सोममृतावृधा ।

dasrā hiraṇyavartanī śubhas patī pātaṃ somam ṛtāvṛdhā / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-87-5 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (for the group): “O Dasras of the golden path, gracious, carried by the river [?], sweet, hear my call. — Growing strong, lords of splendour, Dasras of the golden chariot. — Dasras of the golden chariot, drink the sweet Soma. — Dasras of the golden chariot, lords of splendour, drink the Soma, increasers of Ṛta.” (The Saṃhitā texts and numerals of these four are read from the print and are doubtful in places [?].)

“— in all these Ṛks the two attributes dasrā and hiraṇyavartanī together describe the form and the beauty of the Ásvin deities.”

Translation: “The ninth sūkta, agnīṣomau, of twelve Ṛks, the vision of Gotama. The first three are Anuṣṭubh; the three beginning with the ninth are Gāyatṛī; the eighth is Jagatī or Triṣṭubh; the remaining five are Triṣṭubh. The deity is Agnīṣomau. So it is recorded in the Anukramaṇī: ‘agnīṣomau dvādaśa; agnīṣomīyam; the first three Anuṣṭubh; the three before the last Gāyatṛī; the eighth Jagatī or [Triṣṭubh]’. For the oblations of the vapā and the puroḍāśa of the Agnīṣomīya animal, the first three Ṛks are the anuvākyaḥ in order [reading doubtful [?]]. It is prescribed: ‘agnīṣomāv imaṃ su me yuvam etāni divi rocanāni iti tṛcau’ (Ā. 3-8 [?]).”

अनुवादवु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

“The sūkta agnīṣomau is the ninth sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka. There are twelve Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. The first three Ṛks are in the Anuṣṭubh metre. The three from the ninth are in the Gāyatṛī metre. The eighth Ṛk is in the Jagatī or the Triṣṭubh metre. The remaining five Ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre. Agni and Soma are the deities of this sūkta. In the Anukramaṇī it is said ‘agnīṣomau dvādaśāgnīṣomīyam ādyās tisro 'nuṣṭubha upāntyās tisro gāyatryo 'ṣṭamī jagatī veti’. In the animal sacrifice connected with Agnīṣoma, when the oblations of the vapā and the puroḍāśa are offered in the fire, the first three Ṛks of this sūkta are to be used in order as puronuvākyaḥ mantras; so the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra explains it by the sūtra ‘agnīṣomāv imaṃ su me yuvam etāni divi rocanāni iti tṛcau’ (Ā. 3-8 [?]).”

vr̥ṣaṇā — “Although this attribute is used many times in respect of other deities too, there is a special sense in calling Agni and Soma vr̥ṣaṇā. [The Sanskrit phrases printed here, ‘dedhaprtnāni dāśuṣe’ (garbled in my reading [?]; corrected after p. 475, where the same phrase is clearly printed: dadhad ratnāni dāśuṣe, “bestowing jewels on the giver”) and ‘parṣi rādho maghonām’, are cited as examples:] a prayer of one and the same order occurs in many contexts: in Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 4-13-3 [?]; 8-101-2 [?], and, of Agni, 9-3-6 [?]; 9-1-3 [?], the same manner of aiming at both Agni and Soma is found. The meaning is that they are the givers of special wealth.”

haryatam — “vaṣṭi, uśmasi and the like, and also haryati, being read among the words for ‘wishing’ (Ni. 2-6 [?]), and since there is also the explanation ‘haryatiḥ prepsākarmā’ (Ni. 7-17 [?]), haryatam means ‘wish, desire’ —

“— that is, ‘wish, desire’. In this Ṛk, just as the prayer ‘imaṃ havaṃ śṛṇutaṃ sūktāni prati haryatam’ is made to both jointly, so there are prayers of one and the same order made separately, at other places. For example —” imaṃ yajñam idaṃ vaco jujuṣāṇa upāgahi / (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-91-10 [read in the print; this is Rik 91.10, p. 359 above])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Accepting this sacrifice and this speech, come near.”

“— as in the prayer to Agni, so, with not the least difference, in the Ṛk 1-91-10 a prayer is made to Soma. In this Ṛk both are included: ‘accept our sacrifice, and with the greatest regard accept our prayer too.’” mayah — “śarma, śyomakam and the like being read among the names of happiness (Ni. 3-6 [?]), mayah means ‘happiness’. Here the sense is ‘giver of happiness’. What the nature of the happiness that is obtained from this is, has been explained in detail in the commentary on the Ṛk 1-91-9 [Rik 91.9, pp. 356–358 above].”

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 93.2) (Kannada)

“In the Paur̥ṇamāsyēṣṭi, for invoking the deities in the upāṇśuyāja offered to the deities Agni and Soma, the Rk agnīṣomā yo adya is to be used as the puronuvākya mantra; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows this, in the section uktā devatā, by the sūtra ‘agnīṣomā yo adya vāmānyaṃ divo mātariśvā jabhāra’ (Ā. 1-6 [?]).”

saparyati — “irajyati, vidhema, saparyati and the like being read among the names of acts of attendance (Ni. 3-13 [?]), it means respectful worship. Citing the example ‘rodasī saparyataḥ’ (R. Saṃ. 10-30-1 [?]), the author of the Nirukta (Ni. 10-10 [?]) explains ‘paricarataḥ’, that is, ‘pūjayataḥ’, ‘they worship’. So here too it means respectful worship, an offering.”

suvīryaṃ svaśvyaṃ gavāṃ poṣam — “It has been described in many places that Agni and Soma, both these deities, are lords of all wealth. As in ‘dadhad ratnāni dāśuṣe’ (R. Saṃ. 1-12-3 [?]), said of Agni, so of Soma too (R. Saṃ. 9-3-6 [?]) it is addressed. The kind of jewels that are meant is explained:”

गोजिन्नः सोमो रथजिद्धिरण्यजित्स्वर्जिदब्जित्पवते सहस्रजित् । gojin naḥ somo rathajid dhiraṇyajit svarjid abjit pavate sahasrajit / (R. Saṃ. 9-[?]-4 [?]; the print is blurred in places: abjit pavate read with doubt [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Soma, winner of cows for us, winner of chariots, of gold, of heaven, of the waters, flows clear, winner of thousands.”

“— as this Rk explains, the power and the generosity of Soma are described: he is the one who grants to sacrificers many kinds of wealth, namely cows, chariots, gold and the like.”

वसुर्वसूनां क्षयसि त्वमेक इद्द्यावा च यानि पृथिवी च पुष्यतः । vasur vasūnāṃ kṣayasi tvam eka id dyāvā ca yāni pṛthivī ca puṣyataḥ / (R. Saṃ. 10-41-3 [?]; numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “You alone, the good of goods, rule over those [goods] which heaven and earth nourish.”

“— as in this Rk, in many places Agni is praised: ‘Agni alone is the lord of all kinds of wealth, and both heaven and earth are nourished by the wealth that this giver gives.’ So the deities Agni and Soma, the lords of all wealth, are prayed to — as is customary — for wealth in the form of excellent cattle, horses and the like, to be granted.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 93.2) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

agnīṣomā — for the ending au of this [word], by supāṃ sulug the replacement ā; the formation of the form was explained in the previous mantra. vacaḥ — root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; by sarvadhātubhya asun (Uṇādi 4-189 [?]) the suffix asun; since it is nit, the initial-acute accent. saparyati — root sapara pūjāyām [as printed; a nominal verb-stem [?]]; since it is read in the kaṇḍvādi list, by kaṇḍvādibhyo yak (Pā. 3-1-27 [?]) the suffix yak in its own sense; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ it takes the name of a root; laṭ, third person singular; since yaḥ (“who”) is related, the nighāta does not occur; the accent of yak remains. dhattam — root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, of the juhotyādi class; loṭ, second person dual; the replacement tam; ślu for the stem-suffix; the root is doubled; by śnābhyastayor ātaḥ (Pā. 6-4-112 [?]) the elision of the root’s ā; by khari ca (Pā. 8-4-55 [?]) the dh becomes t; since it follows a word, the nighāta accent. —

gavām — the word go, in the genitive plural; by sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ (Pā. 6-1-168 [?]) the acute on the case-ending would be obtained; since the prohibition na goṣvansāvavarṇarā ḍaṅkrutkṛdbhyaḥ (Pā. 6-1-182 [?]) applies, the natural accent of the stem remains. || 2 ||

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 93.3) (Kannada)

agnīṣomā — O Agni and Soma deities; yaḥ — whichever sacrificer; āhutim — the oblation of ghee (and); yaḥ — whichever sacrificer; haviṣkṛtim — the oblation of caru, puro dāśa and the like; dadyāt [dāśāt] — offers; saḥ — that sacrificer; prajayā — together with sons, grandsons and others; suvīryam — excellent strength; viśvam āyuḥ — (his) full life (or all kinds of food); vy aśnavat — may he obtain.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.3 (Kannada)

“O Agni and Soma deities, may the sacrificer who offers you the oblation of ghee and the oblation of caru, puro dāśa and the like obtain, together with sons, grandsons and others, excellent strength and a full lifetime.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 93.3)

“Agni and Soma, may he who offers you the oblation of clarified butter, enjoy sound strength with progeny, through all his life.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 93.3) (Kannada)

haviṣkṛtim — “The oblation in the form of caru, puro dāśa and the like.”

viśvam āyuh — “andhaḥ, vājaḥ and the like being read among the names of food (Ni. 2-7 [?]), here it can be ‘all kinds of food’; or, if we take āyus in the sense of ‘life’, as said in places such as pra ṇa āyūṁṣi tāriṣat (R. Saṁ. 10-[?]-[?] [?]), it means ‘in our lifetime completely’, or ‘in our whole life’. Or the meaning may be given ‘may we obtain a full life’.”

prajāyā suvīryaṁ viśvam āyuh — “That Soma, and Agni too, are increasers of life and favour those who have offspring, is described in many places, and their generosity is described. For example —”

वयोवन्तं पुष्यति क्षयमग्ने शतायुषम् । vayovantaṁ puṣyati kṣayam agne śatāyusaṁ / (R. Saṁ. 6-2-5 [?]; the Saṁhitā text as read, doubtful)

आतूर्तं श्रावयत्पतिं पुत्रं ददाति दाशुषे । ātūrtaṁ śrāvayat patiṁ putraṁ dadāti dāśuṣe / (R. Saṁ. 5-23-5 [?]; the Saṁhitā text as read, doubtful)

त्वं च सोम नो वशो जीवातुं न मरामहे ।

tvaṁ ca soma no vaśo jīvātuṁ na marāmahe / (R. Saṁ. 1-91-6 [read in the print; this is Rik 91.6, p. 347 above])

Gloss, mine and tentative (for the first two, which are doubtful in reading): “[Agni] nourishes a household possessed of vigour, living a hundred years. — [He] gives a quick-going [?] son to the giver, who makes the master famous.” (Both first citations are read with considerable doubt [?].)

“— in all such places it is said that Agni and Soma both favour the sacrificer who offers oblations with the prosperity of offspring in the form of sons, grandsons and the like, with a long life, and with freedom from death; and showing this support, they pray in this way that all this wealth be given to such a giver of oblations.”

(vi) aśnavat — “‘May he obtain in many ways’: this is the meaning.”

“Just as in this Rk, the order of words viśvam āyur vyaśnutaḥ occurs in other places in the Rgveda too. For example —”

पुत्रिणा ता कुमारिणा विश्वमायुर्व्यश्नुतः । putriṇā tā kumāriṇā viśvam āyur vyaśnutaḥ / (R. Saṁ. 8-31-8 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (for both): “Those two, with sons and with children, attain the full life. — Remain just here, do not be parted; attain the full lifespan, playing with sons and grandsons, rejoicing in your own house.”

“— as said in such Rks, it is described in many places that for the donor of oblations the gain of all sons, grandsons and the rest, and the delight arising from them, as well as a long life, is obtained.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 93.3) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

āhutim — root hu dānādanayoḥ, with the preposition ān; in the abstract sense, by striyāṃ kti (Pā. 3-3-94 [?]) the suffix kti: huti; by tādaḥ ca niti kṛty atau [as printed: tādaḥ ca niti] (Pā. 6-2-50 [?]) the preverb (ān) keeps its natural accent. dāsāt — root dāśṛdāne; leṭ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu the elision of the i; by leṭo 'dāṭau (Pā. 3-4-94 [?]) the augment aṭ for it; since yaḥ is connected earlier, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta does not occur; because the suffix is unaccented, the accent of the root remains. haviṣkṛtim — “haviṣaḥ kṛtiḥ karaṇaṃ yasyām āhutaḥ haviṣkṛtiḥ”; by nityaṃ samāse 'nuttarapadaṣṭhasya (Pā. 8-3-45 [?]) the visarga in haviḥ takes ṣatva in the compound; by bahuvriḥau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam the first member keeps its accent in the compound. suvīryam — “śobhanaṃ vīryaṃ yasya”; in the bahuvriḥi compound, by vīravīryau ca (Pā. 6-2-120 [?]) the final member takes the initial-acute. —

Translation (the whole bhāṣya, begun on p. 479): “O Agni and Soma, we have come to know that vīryam, prowess, of yours — that capacity which is about to be told — yaḍ, by which you amuṣṇitam, carried off [apāhārṣṭam], gāḥ avasam, the cows, [that are] food in the form of cattle, paṇim, from Paṇi [the case-ending is varied: from the asura of this name]. And likewise bṛsayasya — bṛsi has the sense of enveloping; he who envelops all is bṛsaya, the asura Tvaṣṭṛ.
Śeṣaḥ, the offspring of that asura (‘śeṣa is a name for offspring; it is left behind, it is sent forth’, says Yāska, Ni. 3-2 [?]) — Vṛtra, born of Tvaṣṭṛ [reading doubtful [?]] — avātiratam: you slew; avatirati is a verb of killing. Since, being of the nature of prāṇa and apāna [the in- and out-breaths], you two were established in Vṛtra, his death occurred. So it is handed down: ‘From him, as he yawned, Agni and Soma went out; or the prāṇa and apāna abandoned him then’ (Tai. Sam. 2-5-2-4 [?]). Then, after the slaying of Vṛtra, you avindatam, obtained jyotiḥ, the one shining luminary, the Sun, going in the sky, bahubhyaḥ, for the sake of many people; alapsāthām [you two have obtained]. Tat vīryam ceti — that prowess by which all this is done has been known by us: this is the meaning.”

Grammar tail: ceti — root citī saṃjñāne; in the passive luṅ the ciṇ for cli by Pā. 3-1-66 [?]; the luk of the ta after ciṇ. amuṣṇitam — root muṣa steye of the kryādi class. avasam — the Uṇādi suffix asac from av. šeṣaḥ — the replacement su for the accusative by supāṇ sulug. ekam — root iṇ gatau; the suffix kan by iṇśin... (U. 3-43 [?]); since it is nit, the initial-acute.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 93.4) (Kannada)

agnīṣomā — O Agni and Soma deities; vām — your; yat — by which prowess; gāḥ avasam — the food in the form of cattle; paṇim — from the demon named Paṇi; amuṣṇitam — you carried off; (and) bṛṣayasa — of the demon named Bṛṣaya (Tvaṣṭṛ); šeṣaḥ — the son, Vṛtra; avātiratam — you slew; (not only that) jyotiḥ ekam — the one shining Sun; bahubhyaḥ — for the benefit of many people; avindatam — you obtained; tat vīryam — that capacity; ceti — was known (by us).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.4 (Kannada)

“O Agni and Soma deities: that capacity of yours, by which you carried off the food in the form of cattle from the demon named Paṇi, and slew Vṛtra, the son of the demon Bṛṣaya, and, moreover, made the one radiant Sun move in the mid-region for the benefit of all human beings — we all have well understood.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 93.4)

“Agni and Soma, that prowess of yours by which you have carried off the cows that were the food of Pani, is well known to us ; you have slain the offspring of Brisaya, and you have acquired the one luminary (the Sun) for the benefit of the many.” — as printed.

avasam — “The author of the Nirukta (Ni. 1-17 [?]) shows that the word avasam arises from the root av, which has the sense of motion, and, giving the example of the last pāda of the Rk 10-[?]-10 [?] [numerals as read, doubtful], ‘avasāya padvate rudra mṛṇā’, explains ‘padvad avasaṃ gāvaḥ’, that is, food for the time when cattle roam. In the same way here too the meaning is ‘food in the form of cattle’.”

paṇim — “The wicked nature of the demon named Paṇi, or of the group of demons — what sort of harm came from them to the Vedic worshippers who were intent on performing sacrifices — and how chiefly Indra, as helper, brought back the stolen cows to prevent the harassment of these demons, and so helped the sacrificers, has been explained in detail in the previous volumes. That Agni too was a helper in these contexts is described in the Rks —” tvaṃ dasyūṃ r okaso agna āja uru jyotir janayann āryāya | (R. Saṃ. 7-5-6 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (for both): “Agni drove away [or confounded] those enemies of Paṇi — faithless, of weak speech, fettered, unworshipping, non-sacrificing — and made the former ones [lower] than the latter, the non-sacrificers. — You, Agni, drove the Dasyus from their dwelling, producing wide light for the Ārya.”

“— as described in these Rks, it becomes known that Agni too freed the Āryas from the oppression of the asuras named Paṇi and furnished them with light.”

bṛsayasya — bṛsiḥ veṣṭanārthaḥ | bṛsayati sarvaṃ veṣṭayatīti bṛsayaḥ asuraḥ tvaṣṭā | “Sāyaṇa explains that the word bṛsaya arises from the word bṛsi, which gives the sense ‘to cover all, to surround and enclose’; that it is the name of a demon who covers and encloses; and that this is the name of the asura called Tvaṣṭṛ.”

bṛsayasya śeṣaḥ — “tuk, tokam, tanayaḥ and the like being read among the names of offspring (Ni. 3-2 [?]), śeṣaḥ means ‘son’: ‘śeṣa ity apatyānāma śiṣyate prayuteḥ’ (Ni. 3-2 [?]). It is well known that Vṛtra is the son of Bṛsaya.”

avātiratam — “dabhnōti, śṛṇathi and the like being read among the names of acts of slaying (Ni. 2-10 [?]), it means ‘you slew’. According to the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, these two deities, Agni and Soma, killed Vṛtra by causing the absence of the chief principles in the form of prāṇa and apāna — tasmāj jṛmbhamānād agnīśomau nirakrāmatāṃ prāṇāpānau vā enaṃ tad ajahitām / (Tai. Saṃ. 2-5-2-4 [?]; numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “From him, as he yawned, Agni and Soma went out; or the prāṇa and apāna abandoned him then.”

“— And not only that: in the Ṛksamhitā too, in many different places, it is described that the deities Agni and Soma destroyed Ṛtra and gave light to the world. For example —”

Gloss, mine and tentative: “I shall proclaim the greatness of the bull, whom the Pūrus attend as the Ṛtra-slayer. — Him, the greatest slayer of Ṛtra, you who shake off the Dasyus.”

Not only here: in many other places in the Ṛksamhitā too, it is described that both Agni and Soma gave light. For example —”

Gloss, mine and tentative: “O Agni, you raised the unageing star and the sun in the sky, giving light to the peoples. — He who, skilful, measured out the realms, Vaiśvānara, the seer, [measured] the lights of heaven.”

“— in many such places it is said that Agni created the orbs of light; and again —”

“— in many such places it is described that Soma removed the darkness and afterwards made the light and gave it to the world. Remembering this greatness of Agni and Soma and their benefit to the world, here the author [of the Rk] shows the remembrance of the benefit with the words jyotiḥ ekaṃ bahubhyaḥ avindatam.”

tat vīryaṃ ceti — citī saṃjñāne | “Using ceti in the sense of knowledge, he indicates, in an idea that shows gratitude, that the benefit to the world, and the heroic act, of Agni and Soma, and that work of creating light, have been understood by all.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 93.4) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

ceti — root citī saṃjñāne; in the passive luṇ, third person singular, the suffix ta; by ciṇ bhāvakarmaṇoḥ (Pā. 3-1-66 [?]) ciṇ for cli; by ciṇo luk (Pā. 6-4-104 [?]) the luk of the ta that follows ciṇ. Since a vocative (agnīṣomā) stands before, by āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat (Pā. 8-1-72 [?]) it counts as non-existent; and since it is non-existent, the word does not become as if it followed a finite verb; therefore by tiñ atiñāḥ the nighāta accent does not occur; the accent of the root remains. By bahulaṃ chandasy amāṇyoge ’pi the augment aṭ does not occur. amuṣṃtam — root muṣa steye, of the kṛyādi class; lañ, second person dual, with the replacement tam for thas; by kṛyādibhyaḥ śnā the stem-suffix śnā; by īhalyaghoḥ (Pā. 6-4-113 [?]) the ā of śnā is replaced by ī; since ṣ precedes, by raṣābhyāṃ no ṇaḥ samānapade (Pā. 8-4-1 [?]) ṇatva of the n of the suffix; the augment aṭ; since yat (“which”) precedes and is connected, by yadvṛttān nityam the nighāta is prohibited; since the augment is acute, the word is initial-acute. avasam — root ava rakṣaṇe; the Uṇādi suffix asac; by cit the final-acute. atiratam — the root tira, used with ava as preposition, is a verb of killing; lañ, second person dual; the tiñ-nighāta accent. śeṣaḥ — the accusative singular ending am following [read: with the stem]; by supāṃ sulug the replacement su. avindatam — root vi dīlābhe; by śe mucādīnām (Pā. 7-1-59 [?]) the augment num; lañ, second person dual; since it stands at the head of the pāda, no nighāta; since the augment aṭ is acute, the word is initial-acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 93.4, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

ekam — root iṇ gatau; by iṇśiṃspāśalyatimarcibhyaḥ kan (Uṇādi 3-33 [?], as read) the suffix kan; because of it, the guṇa of the root; by ñnityādir nityam the suffix being nit, the initial-acute accent. || 4 ||

Translation: “O Soma, you and Agni, sakratū, being of one work, yuvam, you two adhattam, set in the sky, in the world of heaven, these rocanāni, shining lights — the stars, planets and the like seen by us at night. — This is the narrative for the latter half: Indra, having slain Vṛtra and fearing the sin of Brahma-murder (brahmahatyā), lodged that sin in the earth, in the trees, in women and in the waters; the purification of those waters was accomplished by Agni and Soma. Gṛbhītān — seized, overcome, sindhūn, the rivers in particular, by a part of the Brahmahatyā — abhiśasteḥ, from the reviled [evident] avadyāt, from the base (?) sin, amuñcatam, you two released [the clotted words of the print are given as read (?)]. Or: Vṛtra, killed by Indra, fell into the rivers; and all the rivers were fouled by the dead body of Vṛtra. So the Taittirīya says: ‘Indra slew Vṛtra; he [the dead Vṛtra] fell [or: was dying] into the waters; what was pure and fit for sacrifice in them, together with their divinity, departed from the waters’ (Tai. Brā. 3-2-5-1 (?)). The rivers seized by that defect — from that defect Agni and Soma released them.”

Grammar tail: rocanāni — root ruca dīptau; the suffix yuc after a root that is anudāttet and begins with a consonant (anudāttetaś ca halāder). sindhūn — by dīrghād aṭi samānapāde the n becomes ru; by atrānunāsikaḥ the nasalization. gṛbhītān — by hṛgrahor bhaḥ the replacement bha [for ha].

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 93.5) (Kannada)

soma — O Soma deity; agniḥ ca — and O Agni; sakratū — having one and the same kind of action; yuvam — you two; rocanāni etāni — these shining orbs of stars (visible to our eyes); divi — in the world of heaven; adhattam — have lifted and set; agnīṣomau — O Agni and Soma deities, you [Vṛtra-slaying sin — the print adds in brackets: ‘from the sin of Brahma-murder arising from the slaying of Vṛtra’]; gṛbhītān — enveloped; sindhūn — the rivers in particular; abhiśasteḥ — evident all around (or reviled); [avadyāt — from sin; gṛbhītān — (since the dead body of Vṛtra fell, defiled), enveloped by fault;] sindhūn — the rivers in particular; abhiśasteḥ — evident on all sides; avadyāt — from the fault; amuñcatam — released (purified).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.5 (Kannada)

“O Agni and Soma deities, you two have one and the same kind of action. These shining orbs of stars that are visible to our eyes you two together lifted up and set in the world of heaven. And you freed from that fault, purified, the rivers in particular that had been enveloped by the sin of brahmahatyā and by the pollution arising from the slaying of Vṛtra.”

“Agni and Soma, you two acting together have sustained these constellations in the sky ; you have liberated the rivers that had been defied from the notorious imputation.” — as printed.

“In the animal sacrifice connected with the Agniṣomiya deity, when the oblations of the vapā and the puroḍāśa are offered, the three Ṛks beginning yuvam etāni are in order yājyā mantras. The sūtra regarding this was stated earlier (Ā. 3-8 [?]); and in the paurṇamāsyā sacrifice too, for the offering of the puroḍāśa connected with the Agniṣomiya deity, the Ṛk yuvam etāni is to be used as the yājyā mantra; this is shown by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section uktā devatā, by the sūtra ‘yuvam etāni divi rocanānīndrāgnī avasā gatam’ (Ā. 1-6 [?]).”

sakratū — samānakarmāṇau | “Having the same kind of action: that is, sharing the principal part in sacrificial and other rites; as explained in the Ṛks above, they cause satisfaction by sharing the oblations with Indra and the other deities, they grant the sacrificers the favour of these, they destroy the darkness that envelops the world and spread light. Thus those who accomplish the work by sharing equally in many kinds of world-benefitting acts: this is the meaning.”

rocanāni etāni divi adhattam — “That work, in which the two lift the shining orbs of stars in the world of heaven and spread light over the world, is well known as the beneficent work of these two. For example —” avadyāt — “From the sin in the form of the slaying of Vṛtra. From the fault in the form of slaying Vṛtra, ‘you removed that fault, when all the rivers had been filled with sin by being enveloped’: this is the meaning.”

“Here, explaining sindhūn as ‘rivers in the form of flowing waters’, Sāyaṇa says that, at the slaying of Vṛtra, the dead body of Vṛtra fell into the rivers, and then all the rivers were filled with fault; and quoting the sentence of the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 3-2-[5]-1 [?] —”

“But Skandasvāmin explains here the word sindhūn as ‘syandanāt sindhavo raśmaya ihocyante’ [as read [?]] — ‘by reason of flowing, sindhus are here called rays’ — that is, flowing rays; and citing the sentence ‘na sindhavo rajaso antam ānaśuḥ’ (R. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?]), he says that, as in that [verse], here too the meaning ‘rays’ should be given. In that case it is explained that Agni and Soma freed these rays, which had been enveloped by the asura Vṛtra, from the sin in the form of Vṛtra’s slaying, by the slaying of Vṛtra, and made them clearly visible all around.”

The Pada’s vāvṛdhānā, as I read it from the print, and the Saṃhitā’s vāvṛdhānā differ in the length of the first vowel; the bhāṣya explains the Saṃhitā’s lengthening of the reduplicative as Vedic [?]. Translation: “For the upāṁśuyāja of the Agnīṣomīya, this R̥k anyaṁ divaḥ is the yājyā. The sūtra is quoted at agnīṣomā yo adya vām. — O Agni and Soma, of you two anyam, one — Agni — mātariśvā, Vāyu, divaḥ, from the world of heaven, ā jabhāra, brought for Bhṛgu the sacrificer. So another mantra: ‘Mātariśvan brought, like a treasure, the twice-born, praiseworthy gift to Bhṛgu’ (R̥g. 1-60-1 [?]). Śyenaḥ — the śyenī, the Gāyatrī in the form of a bird, of praiseworthy flight, amathnāt, took by force anyam, the other, Soma, adreḥ pari, from heaven, which is situated above the mountain Meru. Thus, such as you are, great ones, being vāvṛdhānā, grown, by brahmaṇā, by the praise in the form of mantra, or by food in the form of oblation, you two made for the sacrifice of the other gods uru, a wide, extended lokam, place. U is a mere filler. Agni and Soma, the deities of the two ājyabhāgas, are offered to in the northern half and in the southern half; so all the oblations of the other deities are offered [the clause is clotted [?]]; so the place is made by Agni and Soma. So the Taittirīya says: ‘These two, Agni and Soma, are the kings of the gods: they are worshipped in between the deities, to keep the deities apart [in their order].”

Grammar tail: vayṛdhānā — kānac in the liṭ of vṛdh; the lengthening of the reduplicative is Vedic; the ending replaced by ā by supāṃ sulug.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 93.6) (Kannada)

agnīṣomā — O Agni and Soma deities; anyam — one of you two, Agni; mātariśvā — Vāyu; divaḥ — from the world of heaven; ājabhāra — brought (for Bhṛgu the sacrificer); śyenaḥ — Gāyatrī in the form of a hawk; anyam — the other, the Soma deity; adreḥ pari — from the heaven at the summit of the mountain Meru; āmathnāt — snatched and brought. (Such greatly glorious ones as you,) brahmaṇā — by praise in the form of mantra, or by food in the form of oblation; vayṛdhānā — grown; yajñāya — for the sacrifice of the other deities; uru — broad; lokam — the place (of sacrifice); cakrathuḥ — you made.

“O Agni and Soma deities, Vāyu brought one of you two, Agni, from the world of heaven for Bhṛgu the sacrificer. Gāyatrī in the form of a hawk snatched and brought the other, the Soma deity, from heaven at the summit of the mountain Meru. English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 93.6)

“Agni and Soma, the wind brought one of you from heaven, a hawk carried off the other by force from the summit of the mountain ; growing vast by praise you have made the world wide for sacrifice.” — as printed.

mātariśvā — mātariśvā vāyur mātary antarikṣe śvasiti mātary āśvanitīti vā | “Because he breathes (śvasiti) in the mid-region, or because he moves (āśvaniti) about, Vāyu has acquired the name mātariśvā. In the Rk 1-96-4 [?] they explain this word as Agni, and in 1-190-3 [?] as the sacrificer; but apart from one or two such places, everywhere else mātariśvā means ‘Vāyu’.”

anyaṃ mātariśvā diva ājabhāra — “Agni, who is the soul of the sacrifice, has been described in many ways, both his supernatural manifestation and his worldly origin. He is the banner of sacrifices, the means of knowledge, the dispenser of sacrifices, the sacrifice-bearer, the king of rites [see the descriptions in Rks such as 3-2-3 [?]; 3-11-2 [?]; 4-2-3 [?]]. Gloss, mine and tentative (for the group): “Mātariśvan brought for Bhṛgu the twice-born one, like a prized treasure. — Whom Mātariśvan [brought] for Manu from afar, the god, the radiance from afar. — Mātariśvan brought him, churned out for the gods, from afar. — The messenger Agni brought Vaiśvānara, Mātariśvan [brought him] from afar, for the shining one. — The gods fashioned the adorable first one, whom Mātariśvan [brought], for Manu.”

“— in many such Rks it is well known in the śruti that Mātariśvan, for the benefit of the sacrificers Bhṛgu and Manu, called Agni who had been hidden in a distant place and benefitted all the creatures of the earth. This story will be explained in detail later.”

śyenaḥ anyam adreḥ pari amathnāt — “The Gāyatrī in the form of a hawk snatched [Soma] from the peak of the mountain and brought him. As Mātariśvan brought Agni, who was in a very distant place, so too the story of the hawk bringing Soma to the earth is described in many śrutis.”

यं सुपर्णः परावतः श्येनस्य पुत्र आभरत् ।

yaṁ suparṇaḥ parāvataḥ śyenasya putra ābharat | (R. Saṁ. 10-144-4 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “The wise knew the form of the delightful one when the hawk brought the andhas from afar. — Whom the well-winged son of the hawk brought from afar.”

“The chief part of this story is described in the form of a dialogue in the 26th and 27th sūktas of the fourth maṇḍala of the Ṛksamhitā. But since the different words śyena, suparṇa and gāyatrī are used in these contexts, these contexts become meaningful only after one has learnt the details of this story.”

“In explaining this Ṛk, Skandasvāmin cites the story told in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. According to it (Ai. Brā. 3-25 [read: 3-[?]] to 3-26 [?]), the ṛṣis, wishing to obtain Soma, who was in the world of heaven, as king, prayed to the Chandas — the metres — to bring that King Soma to them. Then they agreed, and, because this work was accomplished by a change into the form of a suparṇa [bird], this episode is well known as the Sauparṇākhyāna. Thereupon, in the form of birds, the metres exerted themselves; but because the Jagatī, going by the way, fell short [lit.: gave out] in the middle of the road, the Triṣṭubh metre was sent out. This too —

“— was unable to complete the way, going beyond the half-way, and had to return. Then the Gāyatrī flew upward, and, having terrified the Soma-guards, seized Soma with her beak and her feet. Then one of the Soma-guards, Kṛśānu, shot an arrow, and it cut off one claw of this bird. Even so the Gāyatrī accomplished her task. The part that she held in her right foot became the prātaḥsavana, the part in her left foot the mādhyandinasavana, and the part in her beak the tṛtīyasavana.”

“In the same way, in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa too (1-7-2-10 [?]) it is said: ‘tad dvai kaniṣṭhaṁ chandaḥ sad gāyatrī prathamā chandasāṁ yujyate tad tad dvir erkyaiḥ yajñair eno bhūtvā divaḥ somam ābharat’ [as read, clotted [?]] — in the Chandas, though the Gāyatrī is the smallest in the number of syllables, she attains the first place of all the metres. By her own power, taking the form of a hawk, she brought Soma from the world of the gods. At the time of the oblations too the praise of the Gāyatrī as a hawk is well known (Śat. Brā. 3-4-1-13 [?]; 3-9-4-10 [?]). In this very context the point that Agni and Gāyatrī are the same in nature, [as in] ‘agnir vai gāyatrī tad gāyatrī etam imam īte sā yad gāyatrī śyeno bhūtvā’, will be explained later.”

“This same narrative, with a little change, is found in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā (Tai. Saṃ. 6-1-6-1 [?]): once, there was a wager between Kadrū and Suparṇī; since Kadrū won, Suparṇī had to become her servant. Then Kadrū said to Suparṇī, ‘bring Soma from the mid-region, disguised as a thief, and give him as the ransom, then you will be freed.’ Then Suparṇī, to seek the help of her children, the metres, [commissioned them]; the efforts of the Jagatī and the Triṣṭubh both failed, and the Gāyatrī accomplished the work: so runs the story of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā.”

brahmaṇā vavṛdhānā — “Since andhaḥ, vājaḥ, payāḥ and the like are read among the names of food (Ni. 2-7 [?]), here it can be ‘by food in the form of oblation’; or else, since the word brahman is explained as ‘work’ or as ‘mantra’ (Ni. 3-[?] [?]), the meaning may be ‘by rites such as sacrifice or by mantras’: ‘having obtained increase by these’. Or, since the root vṛdh is generally used in the Ṛksaṃhitā in the sense ‘praise’ [praśaṃsā], it may also be ‘those who have been praised’.”

vajñāya uru lokaṃ cakrathuḥ — “‘You made a broad place of sacrifice for the sacrifice performed with reference to the other deities’: this is the meaning.”

In tac chaṃyoraṃvṛṇīmahe (Tai. Saṃ. 2-6-10-2 [?]) śaṃyu means ‘son of Bṛhaspati’, but here it only means ‘giver of happiness’.”

haviṣaḥ — in the sūtra laying down the name saṃpradāna, the statement “kriyāgrahaṇaṃ kartavyam” gives the name saṃpradāna to the object, so the genitive stands in the sense of the dative. vītam — root vī gatiprajanakāntyaśanakhādaneṣu, adādi; loṭ, second person dual; by tas thas thamipāṇā tāntantāmaḥ the replacement tam; by adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ the luk of śap; when connecting vītaṃ ca haryataṃ ca, the sense of ca is evident, and by cādilope vibhāṣā (Pā. 8-1-63 [?]) the prohibition of nighāta for a verb standing first applies; the final-acute by the suffix accent.

haryatam — root harya gatikāntyoḥ, bhvādi; kānti means ‘wish’; as before, loṭ second person dual; since it stands at the head of the pāda, no nighāta; śap is unaccented as it is pit; the lasārvadhātuka after the udāttopadeśa root is unaccented by tāṣyanudāttetṇ...; the accent of the root remains. vṛṣaṇā — the nominative dual au, by supāṇā sulug replaced by ā; by bahulaṃ chandasi the lengthening of the penultimate does not occur. juṣethām — root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ, ātmanepada since it is anudāttet; loṭ, second person dual; since the vocative vṛṣaṇā stands before, it counts as non-existent (āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat), and since a verb precedes ... by atiṇaḥ the nighāta does not occur; by the suffix accent the middle syllable is acute. suśarmāṇā, svavasā — both are bahuvrīhis, ending in man and as; by sor manasī alomoṣasī the final member’s initial-acute. bhūtam — root bhū sattāyām; loṭ, second person dual; the replacement tam; by bahulaṃ chandasi the luk of śap; since tam is pit by the rule sārvadhātukam apit, the guṇa of the root vowel does not occur; since hi (“for”) is connected, by hicca (Pā. 8-1-34 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited, and by the suffix accent the final-acute. ॥ 7 ॥

Translation: “The sacrificer who, O Agni and Soma, devadrīcā, with a mind that goes towards the gods, devoted to the deities and endowed with faith, saparyāt, serves you with an oblation such as caru or puroḍāśa; and the sacrificer who serves Agni and Soma with ghee: tasya vrataṁ rakṣatam — protect that sacrificer’s rite; pātam amhasaḥ — protect him from sin. Viśe janāya — to the man who enters upon the rites, to the sacrificer, yacchatam, give mahi śarma, great happiness.”

Grammar tail (partly clotted): agnīṣomā — in a deity-dvandva the natural accent of both members. saparyāt — root sapara pūjāyām of the kaṇḍvādi group; the augment aṭ in the leṭ. devadrīcā — “the one who goes to the gods”: devadryāñc; kvin after añc; the n elided; devadryāñc by the rule viśvagdevayoś ca ṭer adryāñcatāv apratyaye (Pā. 6-3-92 [?]); the lengthening in the instrumental; the final-acute of dri by an irregular rule against the kṛt accent. viśe — the case-ending acute by sāvekācas....

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.8 (Kannada)

“O Agni and Soma deities, protect all the rites of every sacrificer who, with extreme faith and devotion to the gods, worships with caru, puroḍāśa and the like, and of the one who worships the deities with the oblation of ghee, and free them from sin. To the sacrificer who has entered the sacrificial rites give abundant happiness.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 93.8)

“Agni and Soma, protect his sacrifice and defend him from ill, who with a mind devoted to the gods, worships you with clarified butter and oblations ; grant to the man engaged in devotion extreme happiness.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 93.8) (Kannada)

devadrīcā — devān añcatā devatāparāyaṇena śraddhāyuktena | “‘With a mind of one wholly devoted to the deities’: that is, with a mind that, having faith and devotion only to the deities, is intent on their service and attaches itself solely to them.”

vrataṁ rakṣatam — “Protect the rites such as sacrifice from the harm of the asuras, so that the sacrifice is brought to fulfilment.”

pātam aṁhasaḥ — “Many kinds of defects, whether in the sacrifice or at other times, are all sinful deeds; the sense is: save the sacrificer from such defects that may befall him beyond his own control, and free him from sin. Since the fear of sin is great in sacrificers, there are many examples of praying to Agni and Soma in this manner at every step —”

“— in such R̥ks it is seen that Agni and Soma are prayed to for protection from the sin that may arise, whether from lapse in a rite or from some other cause.”

viśe janāya — “Here there is room for two meanings. Sāyaṇa explains: viśe yogeṣu praviśate / janāya yajamānāya — ‘to the sacrificer who, having entered the sacrificial acts, worships the deities, give [happiness]’. Skandasvāmin explains: viśe / manuṣyanāmaitat / putrādīmanuṣyajātasvabhūtāya yajamānāya — ‘since viś is read among the names of men, manuṣyāḥ, naraḥ, dhanāḥ and the like (Ni. 2-2 [?]), viśe means ‘to the sacrificer who has men — sons, grandsons and the rest — in his household’.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 93.8) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

agnīṣomā — by supāṁ sulug the dual ending is replaced by ā; by devatādvandve ca (Pā. 6-2-141 [?]) the natural accent of both members. saparyāt — root sapara pūjāyām, of the kaṇḍvādi group; leṭ, third person singular; the i of tip is elided by itaś ca lopaḥ; by leṭo 'ḍāṭau the augment aṭ; by kaṇḍvādibhyo yak (Pā. 3-1-27 [?]) yak in its own sense; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ the stem is a root, so the leṭ is spoken of afterwards; since yaḥ is connected, no nighāta; the accent of yak remains. devadrīcā — “devān añcati iti devadrīyāñc”; root añcu gatipūjanayoḥ; when deva is the upapada, by ṛtvigdadhṛk... the suffix kvin; by aniditāṁ hala upadhāyāḥ the nasal of the penultimate is elided; since the root añc stands after it without a suffix, by viṣvagdevayoś ca ṭer adrīyāñcatāv apratyaye (Pā. 6-3-92 [?]) adri for the ṭi of deva; the instrumental singular takes ṭā; when devadrī + añc + ā stands, by aco 'ñcaḥ (Pā. 6-4-138 [?]) the a of the root is elided; by cau (Pā. 6-3-138 [?]) the preceding vowel is lengthened since the añc whose nasal is lost follows: devadrī; hence devadrīcā. By gatikārapapadāt kṛt the kṛdanta final member would keep its accent, but by adrisathyor...antodāttanipātanam [as read, clotted [?]] the irregular final-acute — dāśati — root dāśṛdāne; laṭ, third person singular; since śap is pit, and tip likewise unaccented, the accent of the root remains; because yaḥ precedes, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited. dīdayatam — the root dīdaya has the sense of shining; loṭ, second person dual; since it follows a word, the nighāta. ॥ 10 ॥ havyā — in the neuter plural the replacement śi came; by śeś chandasi bahulam the elision of śi.juḥṣatam — root ju.ṣi prītisevanayoḥ; lo ṭ, second person dual; the replacement tam; by vyatyayo bahulam śap is the stem-suffix, with Vedic doubling and halādiḥ śeṣaḥ in the reduplicative; because of śap, the guṇa of the light penultimate. Or, by bahulaṃ chandasi the stem-suffix is ślu, then by vyatyaya śap; though the root is doubled and so abhyasta, by the saying bahulaṃ chandasīti vaktavyam the prohibition of guṇa by nābhyastasyāci pīti sārvaadhātuke (Pā. 7-3-87 [?]) does not apply; since it follows a word, the nighāta. yātam — root yā prāpaṇe; lo ṭ, second person dual; the tiñ-nighāta. ॥ 11 ॥

Translation (the printed text is garbled in the Anukramaṇi portion; given as read [?]): “In the fifteenth anuvāka there are twelve sūktas. Of these the first, imaṁ stomam, has sixteen Ṛks; the vision of Kutsa Āṅgīrasa. The fifteenth and sixteenth are Triṣṭubh, the rest Jagatī. The deity is Agni. In the first half [of Ṛk 7?], the three pādas devā bhavatu sunvato rathaḥ are addressed to the gods; the half-Ṛk tan no mitro varuṇaḥ is addressed to the deities named by the words Mitra, Varuṇa and the rest. Or: the deity of the whole is Agni alone, and Mitra, Varuṇa and the others are subordinate, taking a share by mention only. All this is recorded in the Anukramaṇi: ‘imaṁ ṣoḍaśa kutsa āgneyaṁ...’. This sūkta is applied in the Āgneya kratu of the prātaranuvāka, in the Jagatī metre, and in the Āśvina-śastra; so it is prescribed: ‘imaṁ stomam arhate saṃjāgravadbhiḥ (Ā. 4-13 [?]). It is also applied, as a jātavedasya nividdhāna, on the other Agni-Māruta day of the abhiplava śaḥa; prescribed: ‘prayajyava imaṃ stomam ity agnimārutam’ (Ā. 8-8 [?]). At the third pressing it is the prasthitayājyā of the Agnīdh; prescribed: ‘imaṃ stomam arhate jātavedasa iti tārtīyasavanikyaḥ’ (Ā. 5-3 [?]).”

अनुवादु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

“With this sūkta the fifteenth anuvāka of the First Maṇḍala begins. In this anuvāka there are twelve sūktas (94–105 [?]). Of these, the first sūkta, beginning imaṃ stomam, has sixteen Ṛks. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Kutsa, son of Āngiras; the deity is Agni. The fifteenth and sixteenth Ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre; the remaining Ṛks are in the Jagatī metre. In the Anukramaṇī it is said: ‘imaṃ śoḷāśa kutsa āgneyaṃ tad dviṣ triṣṭubbantaṃ pūrvo devās trayāḥ pādā dvaivās tan no mitro ’rdharco liṅgoktadevato yad vevatyāṃ vā sūktam iti’ [as printed, garbled [?]]. In the eighth Ṛk of this sūkta the first three pādas are addressed to the gods and the last pāda to Agni. For the second half of the sixteenth Ṛk the six deities Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi, Sindhu, Pṛthivī and Dyaus are named; or it may be said that Agni is the principal deity. Varuṇa and the others are not principal. It is shown by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the sūtra ‘imaṃ stomam arhate saṃjāgravadbhiḥ’ (Ā. 4-13 [?]), that this sūkta is applied in reciting the Jagatī mantras belonging to the Āgneya kratu in reciting the prātaranuvāka mantras, and for the mantras of the Āśvina-śāstra; and, as the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra explains by the sūtra ‘prayajyava imaṃ stomam ity agnimārutam’ (Ā. 8-8 [?]), on the sixth day of the abhiplava sacrifice this sūkta is to be used, as a nivid-containing hymn connected with Jātaveda, for the Agni-Māruta śāstra mantras. At the third pressing the Ṛtvij called Āgnīdhra is to use the first Ṛk of this sūkta, imaṃ stomam, as the prasthitayājyā mantra” (continued on p. 510)

Translation: “To Agni, arhate, the worthy, jātavedase, the knower of all that is born, or one of born wisdom, or of born wealth: manīṣayā, with a sharpened understanding, imam stomam, this praise in the form of a sūkta, ratham iva, as the carpenter fashions a chariot, so saṃ mahema — we make it well-honoured, we fashion it. In Agni’s saṃsadi, in the assembly [or: in the company, the worship] of Agni, asya naḥ pramatiḥ, that excellent understanding of ours is bhadrā, auspicious, capable. Therefore with that understanding we praise: this is the meaning.

O Agni, tava sakhye, in your friendship — we being in friendship with you — vayam mā riṣāma, may we not be harmed. Protect us.”

Grammar tail: arhate — root arha pūjāyām, with the sense of praise; śatṛ for the laṭ (Pā. 3-2-133 [?]); the root’s accent remains. mahemā — root maha pūjāyām. riṣāma — root riṣa hiṃsāyām; śa by vyaṭyaya. tava — the initial acute by yusmadasmador ṇasi....

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 94.1) (Kannada)

arhate — to the worthy of worship; jātavedase — to Agni, who knows all that has been born, or who has wealth, or who has wisdom; manīṣayā — with our (keen) understanding; imaṃ stomam — this praise in the form of a sūkta; rathamiva — as a chariot-maker builds a chariot; saṃ mahema — we build with great skill; asya — of this Agni; saṃsadi — in the assembly of worship; naḥ — our; pramatiḥ — excellent understanding; bhadrā hi — is auspicious indeed; agne — O Agni; tava — your; sakhye — in friendship (for the sake of); vayam — we; mā riṣāma — may we not be injured (favour us).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 94.1 (Kannada)

“To Agni, who is worthy of worship and possesses knowledge that knows everything: as a chariot-maker fashions a chariot for a king, so we too, with our keen understanding, skilfully fashion this praise in the form of a sūkta. In the worship of this divine Agni our understanding is auspicious. O Agni, because of friendship with you, favour us so that we are not harmed by enemies.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 94.1)

“To him who is worthy of praise, and all-knowing, we construct, with our minds, this hymn, as (a workman makes) a car; happy is our understanding when engaged in his adoration ; O Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 94.1) (Kannada)

jātavedase — jātāni veda; jātāni vainaṃ viduḥ; jāte jāte vidyate iti vā; jātavitto vā jātadhanaḥ; jātavidyo vā jātaprajñaḥ (Nī. 7-19 [?]) | “The author of the Nirukta explains it thus: [Agni is] ‘one who knows all that is born’; or ‘all that is born knows him’; or ‘he is present in everything born’; or ‘one who has wealth that is born’; or ‘one whose wisdom is born’: that is, he who knows all that has arisen; or all that has arisen knows him; or he abides in all that has arisen; or he has all the wealth that has arisen; or he has knowledge of everything. In the Bṛhaddevatā too he explains in detail the nature and the places of Jātavedas:”

इहाग्निर्भूतैस्त्वृषिभिलोके स्तुतिभिरीळितः । जातवेदास्तु तोमध्ये स्तुतो वैश्वानरो दिवि ॥

ihāgnir bhūtais tr ṛṣibhir loke stutibhir īḥitaḥ | jātavedās tu to madhye stuto vaiśvānaro divi // (Br. De. 1-[?] [?]; the text of the second pāda is garbled in the print and read as given [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative: “Here in the world Agni is praised by the seers with hymns; in the middle region Jātavedas; in heaven Vaiśvānara.”

“— in this verse the ṛṣis are said to praise the Agni who is on the earth as Agni, the one in the mid-region as Jātavedas, and the one in the heavenly world as Vaiśvānara; and he continues the same idea:”

वैश्वानरं श्रितो ह्यग्निरग्निं वैश्वानरः श्रितः । अनयोरजातवेदास्तु तथ्यैते जातवेदसी ॥

vaiśvānaraṁ śrito hy agniṁ vaiśvānaraḥ śritaḥ | anayor jātavedās tu tathyaite jātavedasī // (Bṛ. De. 1-[] []; read as printed, doubtful [])

“— Agni abides in Vaiśvānara and Vaiśvānara in Agni; Jātavedas is in both of these; and he explains both as the two portions of Jātavedas. Thus, having first told the places of Jātavedas in the first chapter, in the second chapter he gives the explanation of his nature:”

भूतानि वेद यज्ञातो जातवेदाथ कथ्यते ।

bhūtāni veda yaj jāto jātavedātha kathyate | (Bṛ. De. [] []; read as printed, continued on p. 513)

vidyate sarvabhūtair hi yad vā jātaḥ punaḥ punaḥ | tenaiṣa madhyabhāgendro jātavedā iti stutaḥ // (Bṛ. De. [] []; as printed)

Gloss, mine and tentative: “...and because he has become knowing of all that is born, or has wealth, or is known [or found] among the born; or because he is known by all beings, or is born again and again — therefore he, the Indra of the middle region, is praised as Jātavedas.”

“— in the Bṛhaddevatā it is explained that Agni is praised as Jātavedas, like Indra, being a dweller in the middle world: because he knows everything the moment it comes into being, or because knowledge arises in him, or because, the moment he is born, he obtains all wealth, or because he is known by all beings again and again, being born anew each time. Jātavedase means: to Agni of such nature.”

imaṁ stomaṁ ratham iva saṁ mahema — yathā takṣā rathaṁ saṁskaroti tathā samyak pūjitaṁ kurmaḥ | “As a chariot-maker, for the delight of the king, makes a chariot in a way that gives delight to those travelling in it, so we too, with finely wrought speech, a speech that is pleasant to hear, and with a feeling of faith, fashion in a fitting manner these hymns, which bring delight to you, for offering to you: this is the meaning. In many contexts the poetic composition of a hymn is compared to the building of a chariot, to show how much skill is the chief thing in the making of the hymn. Here are some examples —

अस्मा इदु स्तोमं सं हिनोमि रथं न तष्टेव तत्सिनाय । asmā id u stomaṁ saṁ hinomi rathaṁ na taṣṭeva tatsināya / (R. Saṁ. 1-61-4 [?]; numerals as read, doubtful)

वस्त्रेव भद्रा सुकृता वसूयू रथं न धीरः स्वपा अतक्षम् । vastreva bhadra sukṛtā vasūyū rathaṁ na dhīraḥ svapā atakṣam / (R. Saṁ. 5-[?]-[?] [?])

एवेन्द्राय वृषभाय वृष्णे ब्रह्माकर्म भृगवो न रथम् । evendrāya vṛṣabhāya vṛṣṇe brahmākarma bhṛgavo na ratham / (R. Saṁ. 4-16-20 [?])

एतं वां स्तोममश्विनावकर्मातक्षाम भृगवो न रथम् ।

etaṁ vāṁ stomam aśvināv akarmātakṣāma bhṛgavo na ratham / (R. Saṁ. 10-39-14 [?])

Gloss, mine and tentative (for the group): “For him I fashion this hymn, as a carpenter [fashions] a chariot for the hirer. — Like a fair, well-made garment, I, the wise one, skilful, fashioned [the hymn] as a chariot. — So for Indra the bull, the showerer, we have made the prayer, as the Bhṛgus [made] a chariot. — This hymn for you, O Aśvins, we have made, we have fashioned it, as the Bhṛgus a chariot.”

“— in such Rks, the skill in fashioning a hymn of poetic form and the skill in fashioning a chariot are shown as alike, and the greatness of hymns is praised.”

tava sakhye vayaṁ mā riṣāma — “If, having made friendship with Agni, one performs sacrifice with faith, directed to him, then because Agni’s help is assured, no enemy can harm him, nor can any harm of another sort occur.”

Gloss, mine and tentative: “No mortal foe can prevail, even by guile, over him who has given to Agni with gifts of oblations. — May we, your friends, never be harmed; grant happiness and protection to our sons and grandsons.”

“— in such Rks, in prayers at all times, the idea is seen that no harm can come to the sacrificer who has obtained Agni’s friendship. In this sūkta, down to its end, this same order, like a refrain, is read in each Rk as its fourth pāda.”

“O Agni, the sacrificer for whom you perform sacrifices with reference to the deities obtains his desired ends. Free from the fear of enemies’ attack, he lives without care. He obtains wealth that is a means to excellent strength, and obtains prosperity. Poverty never touches him. O Agni, through friendship with you, favour us and protect us so that we are not harmed.”

“He for whom you sacrifice, accomplishes (his objects), abides free from aggression, and enjoys (wealth, the source of) strength ; he prospers and poverty never approaches him ; let us not suffer injury, through your friendship.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 94.2) (Kannada)

tvaṁ yasmai āyajase sa sādhati — “The sacrificer for whom you, performing sacrifice with reference to the deities, act, obtains his desired ends’: this is the meaning. Agni, as soon as he is born, creates the sacrifice and performs sacrifice for men with reference to the deities.

Accepting the prayer of the householder, according to his need he is the purohita, the ṛtvij, the hotṛ and the brahman, and, offering oblations to the deities, causes their favour to be obtained for the sacrificer in his house. In about two hundred contexts in Ṛks that praise Agni, such as Ṛ. Saṁ. 1-1-1 [?]; 1-13-1 [?]; 1-31-1 [?]; 1-[?]-2 [?] and so on, Agni is described as the principal in the sacrifices. Because he is himself the sacrifice-soul, and because he is the full cause of the satisfaction of the deities, the idea is that the favour of the deities of every kind can be achieved through him.”

anarvā — anarvā apratyṛtaḥ [apratyṛto ’nyasmin] (Ni. 6-[?] [?]) | “This word is used in many contexts in the sense ‘one who has no other refuge or subjection’. In Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṁ. 3-40-6 [?]; 4-[?]-10 [?]; 5-[?]-3 [?]; 6-20-[?] [?]; 10-[?]-3 [?] it gives the sense that the deities, unopposed by enemies and not subject to them, show their prowess. So here too: the sacrificer who has obtained Agni’s favour lives independently, neither conquered by enemies nor subject to them.”

kṣeti — “Living independently, dwelling at his own dwelling-places, he lives in happiness: this is the idea.”

tūtāva — “From the root tu, which gives the sense of ‘growth’ or ‘strength’, tūtāva. ‘He has obtained growth’ or ‘he has obtained strength’: this is the idea.”

aṁhatiḥ — aṁhatiś cāṁhaś cāṁhuś ca hanteḥ (Ni. 4-[?]) | “From the root han the word aṁhati is formed. It means ‘to injure, to afflict’. Here it is affliction in the form of poverty. The meaning is that for the sacrificer who has Agni’s favour, aṁhatiḥ nāśnoti — poverty does not touch him.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 94.2) (Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly)

yajase — root yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu; la ṭ, second person singular; since yasmai is connected, the nighāta does not occur; since the suffix follows an udāttopadeśa root it is unaccented; then the accent of the root remains. sādhati — root ṣidhu saṁrāddhau; since the sense of the instigator is shown, by hetumati ca the suffix ṇic; by ciñi siddhyater aparalaukike (Pā. 6-1-49 [?]) the ā [for the root's i]; by chandasy ubhayathā, as the stem-suffix is ārdhadhātuka, the elision of ṇi by ṇer ani ṭi; the nighāta following a word. kṣeti — root kṣi nivāsagatyō ḥ, bhvādi; li ṭ [as printed; the form is the la ṭ] third person singular, tip; by bahulaṁ chandasi the luk of the stem-suffix (śap); because of the suffix the guṇa of the root's i; the nighāta following a word. dadhate — root dadha dhāraṇe, bhvādi, with an ātmanepada because it is anudāttet; la ṭ, third person singular; since a finite verb stands after a word, the nighāta does not occur; since śap is pit it is unaccented; since the lasārvadhātuka (te) follows an udāttopadeśa root, by tāṣyanudāttetn... it is unaccented; the accent of the root remains. —

suvīryam — in the bahuvrīhi the accent of su is set aside by vīravīryau ca (Pā. 6-2-120 [?]), and the final member takes the initial-acute. tūtāva — tu is a sautra root, in the sense of growth; in the present sense, by chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ (Pā. 3-4-6 [?]) the li ṭ, because of it the root is doubled; since ṇit follows, by ata upadhāyā ḥ the vṛddhi of the penultimate; since it belongs to the tujādi group, by tujādināṁ dirgho 'bhyāsasya (Pā. 6-1-7 [?]) the reduplicative is lengthened; since it follows a word, the nighāta. āsnoti — root asū vyāptau; by vyatyayo bahulam the parasmaipada; la ṭ, third person singular; the tiṅ-nighāta. aṁhati ḥ — root hana hiṁsāgatyō ḥ; by hanter aṁha ca (U. 4-[?] [?]) the suffix ati; because of it the root is replaced by aṁha; by vahiśriyusvidrū... [as read, partly clotted [?]] cit continues, so by citaḥ the final-acute.

Translation: “O Agni, may we be able to make you samidham, well kindled; may we be capable. And you, sādhaḥya, accomplish dhiyaḥ, our rites such as the new- and full-moon. For all sacrifices are accomplished in you. Because tve, in you, in Agni, āhutam, the oblation cast in by the priests — the havis such as caru and puroḍāśa — the gods adanti, eat: therefore accomplish: this is the meaning. Moreover bring ādityān, the sons of Aditi, all the gods, for our sacrifice; tān hi uśmasi, we desire them, now. The rest as before.”

Grammar tail: śakema — root śak! śaktau; the āśirliṅ, with aṇ [as read]. samidham — root indhī dīptau; kvip in the passive sense. tve — še for the locative singular. uśmasi — root vaśa kāntau; masi with i; luk of śap (adādi); saṃprasāraṇa by grahijyā....

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 94.3) (Kannada)

agne — O Agni; tvā — you; samidham — blazing; (to make [you]) śakema — may we be able; dhiyaḥ — our (new- and full-moon and other) rites; sādhaḥya — accomplish [one after another] (because); tve — in you; āhutam — offered, cast in; haviḥ — oblations (caru, puroḍāśa etc.); devāḥ — the deities; adanti — eat; tvam — you; ādityān — all the deities, sons of Aditi; ā vaha — (to the sacrifice) bring and come; hi — because; tān — them; uśmasi — we desire; agne — O Agni; tava — with you; sakhye — through friendship; vayam — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer any harm.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 94.3 (Kannada)

“O Agni, give us the power to make you blaze. Because the deities eat the caru, puroḍāśa and the like offered in you, accomplish our new- and full-moon and other rites. Bring all the deities, the sons of Aditi, whom we love and desire, to our sacrifice. O Agni, through friendship with you, may no harm come to us.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 94.3)

“May we be able to kindle you ; make the rite perfect, for through you the gods partake of the offered oblations ; bring hither the Aditayas [sic], for we love them ; let us not suffer injury, through your friendship.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 94.3) (Kannada)

dhiyaḥ — “āpaḥ, āpnaḥ, daṁsaḥ and the like being read among the names of works (Ni. 2-1 [?]), dhiyaḥ means ‘works’. In this context, it is the prayer: ‘help our new- and full-moon and other rites to be accomplished’.”

uśmasi — “vaṣṭi, uśmasi, veti and the like being read among the eighteen names of acts of wishing (Ni. 2-6 [?]), the meaning here is ‘we long for’.”

ādityān — ādityaḥ kasmād ādatte rasān ādatte bhāsaṁ jyotiṣām dīpto bhāseti vādites tu putra iti vā (Ni. 2-13 [?]) | “From what is āditya? He takes (ādatte) the juices; he takes the lustre of the lights; he shines with lustre; or he is the son of Aditi’: the author of the Nirukta explains the meaning of the word āditya as one who takes up the juices (draws them up), or who takes the radiance of the orbs of light (takes in their splendour), or who shines with his own splendour, or as the son of Aditi. For the Sun the word is a name of Parjanya [as read [?]]. But since the plural ādityān occurs in this Rk, it is to be understood that the word āditya applies not only to the Sun but also to the other deities. The author of the Nirukta himself, explaining this, says: vayam anyāsām api devatānām ādityaprapādā stutayo bhavanti tad yathaitan mitrasya varuṇasyāryamṇo dakṣasya bhagasyāṁśasyeti (Ni. 2-13 [?]): ‘the praises of the Ādityas, too, are those of other deities’: he explains that praises addressed to the Ādityas apply to Mitra, Varuṇa, Aryaman, Dakṣa, Bhaga and Aṁśa, and gives examples. In the Rksaṁhitā, in the hymns addressed to the Ādityas —

“— from the root pṛi (‘to please’) or tṛp (‘to satisfy’) the origin of the word parva can be told: [the parvan, the juncture] is the time at which the deities are gratified by oblations or by praises; one fortnight-juncture; and in the other sense, ‘by the new- and full-moon and other rites that are to be performed regularly at the junctures of the new-moon and full-moon times’.”

citayantaḥ — prajñāpayantaḥ | “Making known; or: ‘making known to you the fortnightly junctures, by the rites to be performed at the junctures’ — one meaning; or, as Skandasvāmin says, yajñakarmatvanyāhātmyaṁ vā jñāpayantaḥ [as read, doubtful (?)]: ‘making known the greatness of sacrificial acts and of you’; and so another meaning may be given: ‘having understood together the sacrificial rites to be performed at the junctures and your greatness’.”

Translation: “Asya, of this Agni, jantavaḥ — the born ones, the rays — viśāṃ gopāḥ — protectors, guardians, of all beings — caranti, go forth. Thereafter dvipāt, whatever biped there is, men and the like; uta ca catuṣpāt, and whatever quadruped there is, cows and the like — both of these aktubhiḥ, by the rays which colour the earth, become coloured, touched. O Agni, citraḥ, of varied lustre, praketaḥ, the one who makes known, shows, all that is enveloped in the darkness of night, you are mahān, great, superior in qualities, even than uṣasaḥ, the goddess Uṣas: for Uṣas shines in the last part of the night; but Agni shines through the whole night: that is his superiority in quality.”

Grammar tail (characterized): gopāḥ — root gupū rakṣaṇe; the suffix āya by gupūdhūpavicchi... (Pā. 3-1-28 [?]); kvip after it; elision of the ā; since the kvip is apṛkta its elision takes place first; dvipāt — in the bahuvrihi “of which there are two feet”, pāda loses its final by saṃkhyāsupūrvasya (Pā. 5-4-140 [?]); pad for pāda by padbhāva (Pā. 6-4-130 [?]); the final-acute by dvitribhyāṃ pāddanmūrdhasu (Pā. 6-2-197 [?]). catuṣpāt — as before, with ṣatva of the visarga; the initial-acute of catur by dryaḥ... (Pā. 5-2-35 [?], numerals doubtful); that accent remains by the bahuvrīhi accent.

asya — this Agni’s; jantavaḥ — rays; viśām — (of all) living beings; gopāḥ — as protectors; caranti — spread; yat — whichever; dvipat — beings with two feet, men and the like; uta — and; catuṣpat ca — beings with four feet, cows and the like also; aktubhiḥ — by the rays (of this Agni), they gain consciousness; agne — O Agni; citraḥ — of varied lustre; praketaḥ — making all [that is enveloped in darkness] bright; uśasaḥ — than the Uṣas deity; mahān asi — you are superior; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayam — we; mā riśāma — may we not be afflicted by harm.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 94.5 (Kannada)

“The rays of this Agni spread all around as protectors of all beings. Those with two feet, men and the like, and those with four feet, cows and the like, gain consciousness by the rays of this Agni. O Agni, you are of varied lustre, illuminating all the world covered by darkness, and are superior in greatness even to the Uṣas deity who shines only by day [read: at the close of night]. Through friendship with you, may we be afflicted by no harm of any kind.”

English Translation (printed in English in the source; Rik 94.5)

“His genial (flames), the preservers of mankind, spread around and both bipeds and quadrupeds are enlivened by his rays ; Shining with various lustre, and illuminating (the world by night) you are superior to the dawn ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.” — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 94.5) (Kannada)

viśām — “manuṣyāḥ, naraḥ and the like being read among the twenty-five names of men (Ni. 2-[?]), it means ‘men’; but here it should be explained as sarveṣāṃ prāṇinām, ‘of all living beings’.”

Special Topics of Rik 94.5, continued from p. 526 (Kannada):

jantavaḥ — jātāḥ raśmayaḥ | “‘The rays born of Agni’: the rays of Agni that have arisen from him. This word, like the words jantu, jantavaḥ, jantubhiḥ, is used as an epithet in the Ṛksaṃhitā, suiting the context for whatever kind of born thing may be meant: ṛtviks, sacrificers, enemies, all creatures and so on, so that the sense is taken to apply to all things possessed of birth in the various contexts (see Ṛks Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?]; 1-[?]-3 [?]; 3-[?]-2 [?]; 6-[?]-[?] [?]; 10-[?]-4 [?] and so on).”

aktubhiḥ — “śyāvī, kṣapā, śarvarī, aktuḥ and the like are read among the twenty-two names of night (Ni. 1-[?]); in many places the word aktu means ‘night’. But in some contexts the word is used in the senses of ‘ray’, ‘weapon’, ‘darkness’, and so on. Since the root añj has the senses of ‘cover’, ‘anoint’, ‘be bright’ and so on, the meanings ‘darkness that anoints’, ‘rays that cover everything’, ‘night that is dark’, ‘weapon that covers the body’ arise. For example, for the word aktu in Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?], they explain ‘weapon’; for the word in Ṛk 3-[?]-3 [?], ‘darkness’; but in most places the meaning is ‘night’.”

“If in this Ṛk the meaning ‘night’ is taken, one kind of construction arises; if ‘rays’, another. According to Skandasvāmin: aktubhiḥ — rātrināmaitat | iha tu sāhacaryād annaṃcareṣu rakṣaḥpiśācādiṣu vartate | rātricaraiḥ saha ity arthaḥ — ‘aktu is a name of night; but here, by association, it refers to those who move at night, such as the Rākṣasas and Piśācas: the meaning is ‘together with the night-wanderers’. Since aktu is read among the names of night, it ought to mean ‘night’; but here, by association, it is explained that all living beings, men and the rest, are known with the night-wandering Rākṣasas, Piśācas and others. Hence uṣasaḥ (api) mahān asi — ‘you are superior even to the goddess Uṣas’: Uṣas shines only in the last part of the night, making the beings of the world visible; but you, making everything visible throughout the night, are therefore superior to Uṣas. Sāyaṇa’s explanation: ‘all bipeds, men and the like, and quadrupeds, cows and the like, are made known by the covering rays [aktubhiḥ]’.”

gopāḥ — root gupū rakṣaṇe; by gupūdhūpavicchīpaṇīpanibhṡya āyaḥ (Pā. 3-1-28 [?]) the suffix āya in its own sense; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ the āya-ending stem takes the name of a root, since āya belongs to the sanādi group; after it the suffix kvip; by ato lopaḥ (Pā. 6-4-48 [?]) the a of the root-stem is elided because of it —

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.5, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

[gopāḥ, continued —] “...for the v of kvip, which stands after it and is apṛkta, the elision should be done; but first, by the statement ver apṛktasya and lopād vali lopo baliyān — ‘the elision before val is stronger than the elision [of a]’ — by lopo vṡor vali (Pā. 6-1-66 [?]) the y is elided because of the v. When the y is elided, it might be doubted that the ā does not have the status of the replaced [sthānivadbhāva]; but by na padāntadvirvacana... (Pā. 1-1-58 [?]) the sthānivadbhāva is prohibited in the matter of y-elision. Thereafter, by ver apṛktasya (Pā. 6-1-67

[?]) the elision of the v of kvip. The word gopā ends in ā.” caranti — root cara gatibhakṣaṇayoḥ; laṭ, third person plural; since it follows a word, the nighāta. dvipāt — “dvau pādāv asya”; in the bahuvrihi, by saṁkhyāsupūrvasya (Pā. 5-4-140 [?]), since a numeral stands before, the final of pāda is elided, as a samāsānta; by ayasmayādīni chandasi (Pā. 1-4-20 [?]) it receives the name bha, and by pādaḥ pat (Pā. 6-4-130 [?]) the replacement pad; since in pāt only the short [pad] has come, by the paribhāṣā ekadeśavikṛtam ananyavat it is treated as pād itself; by dvitribhyāṁ pāddanmūrdhasu (Pā. 6-2-197 [?]) the final member takes the final-acute. catuṣpāt — as before, since it is a compound, the samāsānta elision and the padbhāva; when catur + pat stands, by idudupadhasya cāpratyayasya the visarga takes ṣatva. catuḥ — by nraḥ saṁkhyāyāḥ (Phit-sūtra 2-[?] [?]) numerals ending in n and r take the initial-acute; since catur ends in r, it takes the initial-acute; by bahuvrihau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam the same accent remains in the compound. || 5 ||

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “... ‘one of favourable conduct’. Or: in all rites you are placed in the Āhavanīya fire in the eastern quarter. Or, the purohita is the Brahman priest, as the deputy of Bṛhaspati, the purohita of the gods. And as another mantra has it: ‘Bṛhaspati is the Brahman of the gods, I of men.’ So, abiding in the Brahman as before and taking that form, you, being learned in all the priestly duties — the Adhvaryu duties and the rest — O wise Agni, you cause the rite to thrive: you perform them complete, without lack or excess. The rest is as before.” Grammatical tail: januṣā from jan with the Uṇādi suffix usi; purohitaḥ from dadhāti with the participial suffix (niṣṭhā) in the passive, the si suffix and the word pur(s) as read, final-acute; puras as an indeclinable by the rule on taddhita and non-all-case-endings, a gati by ‘puro ‘vyayam’, hence the accent of the prior member by ‘gatiṛ anantaraḥ’; ārtvijyā with ṣyañ by the brāhmaṇādi group, first-vowel acute through the ñ-marker. (The print of the grammatical tail is clotted in places; the sūtra numbers are not legible at this size and are not supplied; one clause after “si-pratyayā” is lost in the print [?].)

or by birth the family priest ; thus conversant with all the priestly functions, you make the rite perfect ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयः ॥ — Special Topics (Kannada)

adhvaryu, hotṛ, praśāstṛ, purohita — “The varieties of priests named in ‘adhvaryu, hotṛ, praśāstṛ, purohita...’ have been explained in detail in earlier volumes. Since Agni, the god, is the king of the rites (adhvara), since he bears the whole burden of carrying them through, since he invites the gods so that they come to the sacrifice, since he makes the offered oblation into portions, and since he supplies to the gods and to the sacrificers, each according to their wish, the fruits that satisfy them, he is praised in the words viśvā ārtvijyā vidvān dhīra agne puṣyasi — that he knows well the duties of all the priests and carries the sacrifice through in full without the least lack or excess.”

Citations of the Ṛgveda (Kannada script, read letter by letter; the small numerals as read, doubtful [?]):

केतुं यज्ञानां विदथस्य साधनं विप्रासो अग्निं महयन्त चित्तिभिः । ketuṃ yajñānāṃ vidathasya sādhanam viprāso agniṃ mahayanta cittibhiḥ | (Ṛ Saṃ 3-[?]-[?] [?], as read “३-३-३”)

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “the sages honour Agni with their thoughts — the banner of the sacrifices, the accomplisher of the assembly’s rite”.)

स केतुरध्वराणामग्निर्देवेभिरा गमत् । sa ketur adhvarāṇām agniḥ devebhir ā gamat | (Ṛ Saṃ 3-10-4 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “he, the banner of the rites, Agni, may come with the gods”.)

आ वो राजानमध्वरस्य रुद्रं होतारं सत्ययज्ञं रोदस्योः । ā vo rājānam adhvarasya rudraṃ hotāraṃ satyayajam rodasyoḥ | (Ṛ Saṃ 4-3-1 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “to you, the king of the rite, Rudra, the Hotṛ of true sacrifice for the two worlds”.)

होतारं चित्ररथमध्वरस्य यज्ञस्य यज्ञस्य केतुं रुशन्तम् । hotāraṃ citraratham adhvarasya yajñasya yajñasya ketuṃ ruśantam | (Ṛ Saṃ 10-1-5 as read [?])

(The print reads citraratham as given; presumably citraratham [?]. Gloss, mine and tentative: “the Hotṛ of the bright chariot, of the rite, the banner of every sacrifice, the shining one”.)

सद्यो जातो व्यमिमीत यज्ञमग्निर्देवानामभवत्पुरोगाः । sadyo jāto vy amimīta yajñam agniḥ devānām abhavat purogāḥ | (Ṛ Saṃ 10-110-11 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “at once on being born Agni measured out the sacrifice and became the forerunner of the gods”.)

“Thus in the Ṛksaṃhitā, in hundreds of contexts, Agni is praised in many ways as the king of the rites, as the one who accomplishes the duties of all the priests, and as the helper by whom the sacrifice is brought to completion with all its parts.”

januṣā — “Meaning janmanā, ‘by birth’, that is, by nature. As in the Ṛk Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-110-11 [?] [just cited], the scriptural sentence says that Agni, as soon as he was born, made manifest the power of carrying the sacrifice through, and became the purohita of the gods.”

praśāstā — “prakarṣeṇa śāstā, śikṣakaḥ: ‘you are the instructor’ — one who gives the best instruction to the priests and to the sacrificers. Or, praśāstṛ is the priest in the Maitrāvaruṇa station, the assistant of the Hotṛ.” (continues on p. 532) potā — yajñasya pāvayitā: “the purifier of the sacrifice; one who makes the sacrifice pure; or the assistant of the priest in the Brahman’s station.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (grammar page, noted briefly)

hotā — root hu (giving, eating), suffix tṛn in the agent sense, guṇa of the root; initial acute by ñnityādir nityam. praśāstā — root śās (instruct), suffix tṛc, final acute by cit-ness. januṣā — root jan (to be born), Uṇādi suffix usi; the u acute by the suffix accent. puroḥitaḥ — dhāñ (holding, nourishing) with kta, replaced by hi by dadhāter hiḥ (Pā. [?]); pur by the suffix asi in the sense of pūrvādhārāvarāṇām asipuradhavaś caiṣām (Pā. [?]), giving the word puras, final-acute; indeclinable status by taddhitaś cāsarvavibhaktiḥ (Pā. 1-1-38 [?]) and puro 'vyayam (Pā. 1-4-67 [?]); gati status, hence the accent of the first member by gatiṃ anantaraḥ (Pā. 6-2-49 [?]); the o of puroḥitaḥ acute. viśvā — neuter plural: śi in place of śas, elided by śeś chandasi bahulam. ārtvijyā — “the priest’s (rites)”: by inclusion in the brāhmaṇa group, ṣyañ by guṇavacanabrāhmaṇādibhyaḥ karmaṇi ca (Pā. 5-1-124 [?]); vṛddhi of the first vowel by taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ; r turned to ra as read; initial acute by ñit; elision of śi as before. vidvān — root vid (to know), śatṛ in the sense of the present, replaced by vasu by vido laṭo vā / vide śatur vasuḥ (Pā. 3-2-[?] [?]); the stem vidvas; the nominative su following, lengthening of the vowel by sāv anantasya; num augment by ugit-ness; elision of su by hal ṇyābbhyaḥ..., elision of the final consonant by saṃyogāntasya lopaḥ. Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “O Agni, you who, being of fair limbs (supratika), are sadṛk from every side — like to us [the word as printed is doubtful, [?]] — though you are far off, you shine surpassingly as if near (taḥit is a word for ‘near’). This was said by Yaska: ‘Though far off, you are seen as if near’ (Nirukta, numeral as read [?]). rātryāś cit — even of the night, you see (paśyasi) even the great darkness belonging to the night, O shining god, and shine beyond it. The rest as before.” Grammatical tail: supratika — fair limbs; the first member of the compound gets the acute on its first syllable by kratvādayaś ca; sadṛk — dṛṣ with samāna in the preceding position, kvin, sa-substitution for samāna, num augment in the Veda, loss of the conjunct final, ku-substitution for the kvin suffix; accent of the earlier member in a kṛdanta compound; rātryāḥ — ṅīp by the rule on rātri. (The bhāṣya of this Rik is clotted at asmānaḥ, and the sūtra numbers read from small figures are doubtful [?]; the print’s num is read from the Kannada note on p. 535, the bhāṣya’s own letter being suṁ-like [?].)

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Kannada)

“agne — O Agni; yaḥ — you who; supratikaḥ — of beautiful, lovely limbs; viśvataḥ — in all directions; sadṛk asi — are (without the least difference) equal in appearance (such a one are you); dūre cit san — though far away, also; taḥid iva — as if near; ati rocase — you shine exceedingly; deva — O shining Agni, (you); rātryāḥ cit andhaḥ — even the darkness of the time of night; ati paśyasi — piercing it, you shine; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaṃ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer harm.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

“O Agni, you, being of lovely form, are of one aspect in every direction, without the least difference. Though far off, you shine as if near. By your radiance you pierce even the darkness of the night and shine. Because of friendship with you, may we suffer no harm of any kind.”

English Translation (as printed)

You are of graceful form and alike on every side, and although remote, shine as if near ; O divine Agni, you can see beyond the darkness of night ; Agni, let us not suffer jinury [sic] through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयाः ॥ — Special Topics (Kannada)

supratikaḥ — śobhanamukhaḥ: “śobhanamukhaḥ, ‘one of lovely face’. ‘One with a charming face’; this epithet is used very commonly of Agni, Sūrya, Uṣas, and in the main in connection with them; they are said to be those whose form is endowed with lustre, (continues on p. 535)”

“...so the epithets supratikaḥ and susandīṣaḥ are found much used in their regard.”

taḥit — “taḥit, āsāt, ambaram — among the eleven last names read in the list of words, which in the Nirukta (Ni. 2-9 [?]) mean ‘near’: ‘in the vicinity’. That is, Agni, though far off, shines as lovely as if near, in his great radiance.”

andhaḥ — “tamo ’sy andha ucyate nāsmīn dhyānaṃ bhavati na darśanam andhatama ity abhibhāṣante [as read, doubtful [?]]” — Ni. 3-1 [?]:

तमोऽस्यन्ध उच्यते नास्मिन् ध्यानं भवति न दर्शनमन्धन्तम इत्यभिभाषन्ते । tamo ’sy andha ucyate nāsmīn dhyānaṃ bhavati na darśanam andhantama ity abhibhāṣante

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “Darkness is called* andha: in it there is no seeing and no sight; they say ‘the blindest dark’.” The Kannada adds: “Because one cannot look, or cannot go forward, in it. The word *andha means ‘darkness’. The expression of the people, ‘it is dark (blinding) darkness’, is well known.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (grammar page, noted briefly)

viśvataḥ — to the word viśva in the ablative sense the suffix taṣil by pañcamyās taṣil (Pā. [?]); acute on the syllable before the suffix by the lit rule. supratikaḥ — “the one whose limb (pratika) is lovely”; the first member’s accent per kratvādayaś ca (the later member gets the initial acute). sadīṣk — root dīṣ (seeing) when the word samāna is the upapada, kvin by samānānyayoś ceti vaktavyam (Pā. 3-2-60 [?]); sa-substitution of samāna by dṛgḍṛśavatuṣu (Pā. 6-3-89 [?]); sadṛś; then, with su following, nuṃ by dṛk-svaḥ-svatavasāṃ chandasi (Pā. 6-1-83 [?]); saṃyogāntasya lopaḥ removes the ś; the elision of su to be stated by hal-nyābbhyo...; ku-substitution (kvin's n → ñ) by kuṃ... (Pā. 8-2-62 [?]); form sadṛñ; accent by gatikārapapadāt kṛt (the kṛt member). asi — root as (to be), ādādi class, laṭ second person singular sip, tāsasty or lopaḥ removes the s of the root (Pā. 7-4-50 [?]); the nighāta accent does not arise since the verb is joined by yad; sip being pit is unaccented; the root's accent remains. rātryāḥ — rātri is a feminine stem in i; ñas/ñi by rātreś cājasau (Pā. 4-1-31 [?]) takes ñip; a variant of the genitive singular. || 7 || (Grammar page, noted briefly.)

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “O gods, all you who are the members of Agni: let the chariot of the sacrificer who presses the Soma be foremost, chief above the chariots of the other, non-sacrificing, men. And let our śaṃsa — the praiseworthy (that is, curse-like) ‘sin’ — overwhelm our enemies, who are evil-minded and bent on doing us harm. Understand this word of mine, O gods; apprehend it as it faces you; and make this speech of mine thrive by acting in accord with it. O Agni, who are the self of all gods — as before.”
 Grammatical tail: sunvataḥ (the case-ending acute by the rule on śatr without num, numeral and wording as read, doubtful [?]); śaṃsaḥ — ghañ in the passive of śaṃsu, first-syllable acute by the ñ; dūḍhyaḥ — durdhiyaḥ, kvip after dhyai, saṃprasāraṇa; by the pṛṣṭadarādi group the r of dur is lengthened with u and the initial dh of the second member becomes ḍh (as read, doubtful [?]). “devāḥ — O gods (who are the limbs of Agni), all of you; sunvataḥ — of the sacrificer who presses the Soma-juice; rathaḥ — the chariot; pūrvaḥ — ahead of (all the others’); bhavatu — may it be; asmākaḥ — our; śaṃsaḥ — the blame-like undesired thing, the ‘sin’; dūḍhyaḥ — the evil-minded enemies; abhyastu — may it harm; tat — this (my) hymn; ā jānīta — understand well, apprehend; uta — and; vacaḥ — my prayer; puṣyata — fulfil; agne — O Agni; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaḥ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not be harmed.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

“O gods, all of you are limbs of Agni. By your grace let the chariot of the sacrificer who presses the Soma-juice go ahead of all others’. May our blame-like undesired thing harm the enemies of sinful mind. Understand well this hymn of mine, and all of you fulfil my prayer. O Agni, through friendship with you may we suffer no harm of any kind.”

English Translation (as printed)

Gods, let the chariot of the offerer of the libation be foremost ; let our, denunciations overwhelm the wicked : understand and fulfil my words ; Agnil [sic] let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयाः ॥ — Special Topics (Kannada)

dūḍhyaḥ — durdhiyaḥ (Ni. 3-? [?], numeral as read “३-२” [?]): “evil-minded, of sinful thought — our enemies who speak ill and are inclined to sin; that is the sense.”

śaṁsaḥ — abhiśāparūpaṁ pāpam: “the blame-like sin: may our censuring sin go against and harm our enemies, the sinful ones, and overwhelm them.”

sunvataḥ — root ṣuñ (pressing), śatṛ in the present sense; śnu as the vikaraṇa by svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ (as read); ṣ → s for the root’s initial; sārvadhātukam apit makes the suffix ñit-like so that guṇa does not arise...

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.8, continued (grammar, noted briefly): for the śatṛ and the śnu, guṇa does not arise because of the jñ-type ñit-ness as printed. sunvat is the stem; the genitive singular (the fourth-case form as read) has the case-ending acute by śatur anumō nadyajādī (Pā. 6-1-[?] [?]; the stem lacks num and the ending begins with a vowel). śaṁsaḥ — root śaṁsu (praise); ghañ in the passive sense; ñ-ness gives the first syllable acute by ñnityādir nityam. dūḍhyaḥ — “they think ill”: root dhyai (thinking), kvip by kvip ca; here the dṛṣ-heading is carried forward by anyebhyo pi dṛṣyate (Pā. 3-2-178 [?]) so that the rule applies to this root also, and saṁprasāraṇa arises; by the reading dhyai ca in the pṛṣṭadarādi group, the r of dur before it and the dh of the root take the changes noted in the bhāṣya. jānīta — root jñā (knowing), loṭ second person plural, ta-substitution; jā for jñā by jñājanor jā (Pā. 7-3-79 [?]); śnā by kṛyādibhyaḥ śnā; i for śnā before a consonant-initial ending by ihalyaghoḥ (Pā. 6-4-113 [?]); it takes nighāta accent (following a word that is not a verb [?]). puṣyata — root puṣa (thriving), divādi, loṭ second person plural; tiñanta, nighāta accent; the lengthening in the Samhitā (puṣyatā) by anyeṣām api dṛṣyate (as read). ॥ 8 ॥ (Grammar page, noted briefly; sūtra numbers small and doubtful [?].)

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “O Agni, with your death-dealing weapons strike the evil-speaking ones (those who are hard to speak of), the evil-minded: bring them to death. Whichever eaters (atriṇaḥ — ogres and the like) there are, far off or near at hand, strike those as well. Then, for the sacrificer who praises you, the master of the sacrifice, make a fair path. The rest as before.” Grammatical tail: vadhaiḥ — from han in the instrumental sense with ap and substitution of vadha, ending in a, final-acute; duḥśaṃsān — khal in the passive; jahi — loṭ, hi, ja for han, with the loss of the hi as treated as non-operating [?]; anti — from antika by loss of ka; atriṇaḥ — the suffix trin, whose i is for the preservation of the n; gṛṇate — case-ending acute; sugaṃ — gam with ḍa after su/dur in a locative sense; kṛdhi — hi — dhi in the Veda after kṛ (the rule on śru, śṛṇu, pṛ, kṛ, vṛ), with elision of the vikaraṇa (u) by bahulaṃ chandasi. (The grammatical tail is clotted at nivṛttisvareṇa and lugbhāvaḥ; the sūtra numeral is as read, doubtful [?].)

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Kannada)

“agne — O Agni; vadhaiḥ — with the weapons that cause death; duḥśaṃsān — those known as evil-speaking ones (wicked ones); dūḍhyaḥ — the enemies of sinful mind; apa jahi — destroy; ye kecit — whichever enemies; dūre — far off; vā — or near at hand; vā — whether; atriṇaḥ — such rākṣasa-like, evil enemies (destroy); atha — then; yajñāya — to the sacrificer; gṛṇate — (who praises you) the praising one; sugaṃ — a lovely path; kṛdhi — make; agne — O Agni; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaṃ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer harm.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

“O Agni, destroy with your death-dealing weapons the evil-minded enemies, known as wicked ones, whether they are far off or near. Destroy our wicked enemies, the ogres. Make a lovely path for the sacrificer, the praiser of you. Through friendship with you, favour us so that we suffer no harm of any kind.”

English Translation (as printed)

Overcome with your fatal (weapons) the wicked and the impicus [sic], all who are enemies whether distant or near, and then provide an easy (path) for the sacrificer who praises you ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयः ॥ — Special Topics (Kannada)

vadhaiḥ — hananasāadhanair āyudhaiḥ: “with weapons that are the means of killing, that is the sense. In the Rksamhitā in general the word vadhaiḥ is used in the sense vadhasāadhanair āyudhaiḥ. For example —”

कुत्साय यत्र पुरुहूत वन्वञ्छुष्मनन्तैः परियासि वधैः । kutsāya yatra puruhūta vanvañ chuṣṣam anantaiḥ pariyāsi vadhaiḥ | (R Saṃ 1-121-9 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “when, much-invoked one, for Kutsa you go about, smiting Śuṣṣa with unending blows”.)

स्वयं सो अस्मदा निदो वधैरजेत दुर्मतिम् । svayaṃ so asmad ā nido vadhair ajeta durmatim | (R Saṃ 1-129-6 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “may he himself drive from us, with blows, the reviling and the ill-intentioned”.)

“Likewise in 1-133-6; 2-31-2; 6-20-4 [all as read, doubtful [?]] and other Rks, the word vadhaiḥ is used throughout in the sense of ‘means of killing’.”

atriṇaḥ — “attāraḥ, bhakṣitāraś ca: the devourers, who eat men, or the rākṣasas who rend bellies (the Kannada word as read, doubtful [?]).”

sugaṃ — śobhanaṃ mārgaṃ: “a lovely path. From the point of view of travel, it means a path that is easily passed along; from the moral point of view, it means the best, the most glorious path. The word is used in both senses. For example —”

देवयानान् सुगान् पथः कुरुष्व सुमनाः स्वयम् । devayānān sugān pathaḥ kuruṣva sumanāḥ svayam | (Bṛhaddevatā 7-6-5 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “make the god-travelled paths easy to go, yourself of good mind”.) “In this verse the sense is of paths along which the gods travel easily. In the same sense in the Rksamhitā also:”

शं नः कर्त्यवर्ते सुगं मेषाय मेष्ये । नृभ्यो नारिभ्यो गवे ॥ śaṃ naḥ karaty arvate sugaṃ meṣāya meṣye | nṛbhyo nāribhyo gave // (R Saṃ 1-43-6 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “may he make welfare and an easy path for our horse, for the ram and the ewe, for men, for women, for the cow”.)

“In this Rk, and in Rks such as 9-63-10 [?] and 10-?-5 [?], it is said to be an easily traversed path; and in the sense of the moral view —”

बृहस्पते अप तं वर्तया पथः सुगं नो अस्यै देववीतये कृधि ॥ bṛhaspate apa taṃ vartayā pathaḥ sugaṃ no asyai devavītaye kṛdhi // (R Saṃ 2-[?]-[?] [?], as read “२-३३-२” [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “Bṛhaspati, turn that path away; make for us an easy way for this divine feast”.)

“— in Rks such as this, the word sugaṁ, from the moral standpoint, means ‘what is to be gone to well’ (suṣṭhu gantavyaṁ): ‘yajñānuṣṭhānāya sumatiṁ dehi’, ‘give a good mind for the performance of sacrifice’; it is also understood as the good sense that performs sacrifice and the like. Moreover, in places such as 1-103-4 [?]; 6-109-2 [?], the word sugaṁ is explained as ‘happiness’.”

“Skandasvāmin explains this last sense as to be taken in this Rk also, saying āsetitam api sukhanāmaitat; iha draṣṭavyaṁ [read as printed, doubtful [?]; gloss, mine and tentative: ‘this too is a name for happiness; to be seen here’], and cites the Rk —”

अस्मभ्यमिन्द्र वरिवः सुगं कृधि प्र शत्रूणां मघवन् वृष्या रुज । asmabhyam indra varivaḥ sugaṁ kṛdhi pra śatrūṇāṁ maghavan vṛṣyā ruja | (R Saṁ 1-102-4 [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “for us, Indra, make wide room and an easy way; break the vigour of the foes, bounteous one”.) “Having cited this Rk, they explain that, just as the sense is there, so here too the word suga, though not read among the names of happiness (sukha), has the meaning ‘happiness’.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (grammar page, noted briefly; continues on p. 542) vadhaiḥ — root han (to strike, go); ap in the instrumental sense by hanaś ca vadhaḥ (Pā. 3-3-76 [?]); vadha as substitute for the root; the word ends in a and has the final acute; ato lopaḥ (as read) elides the a for the suffix ap...

vadhaiḥ, concluded: the suffix ap being pit is unaccented, and with the unaccented suffix’s acute vowel dropped, anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ (Pā. 6-1-161 [?]) gives the acute to the suffix. — duḥśaṁsān — root śaṁsu (praise); with the word duḥ as upapada (in the sense of ‘with difficulty’), khal in the passive by iṣaddussuṣu (Pā. 3-3-126 [?]); stem duḥśaṁsa; liti (Pā. 6-1-193 [?]): the syllable before the suffix, being lit, takes the acute; accusative plural duḥśaṁsān; with āṭ-type vowel following, dīrghād aṭi samānapāde (as read) gives ru for the n, and āto ‘ṭi nityam (as read) gives nasalization of the preceding ā. — jahi — root han (striking, going); loṭ, second person singular, sip — hi; hanter jaḥ (Pā. 6-4-36 [?]) gives ja; because of asiddhavad atrābhāt (Pā. 6-4-22 [?]) the substitute is treated as not effected, so the elision of hi by ato heḥ does not take place; nighāta accent (following a tiṇanta, the verb as read). — anti — the word antika, with loss of the final ka by kādilopo bahulam. — atriṇaḥ — root ad (eating); trin by ādeś ca ni ca (Uṇ. 4-[?] [?], as read “अ-य-३७” [?]); the i after n is read in the suffix to prevent loss of the n (it would be elided as final by halantyaṁ [as read]), so the stem atrin; nominative plural atriṇaḥ; the i acute by the suffix accent. — gṛṇate — root gṛ here in the sense of praise; śatṛ in the present sense; śnā by kṛyādibhyaḥ śnā; sārvadhātukam apit makes the suffix nit-like; śnābhyastayor ātaḥ (Pā. 6-4-112 [?]) elides the ā of śnā; gṛṇat; dative singular; with no num, the case-ending is acute by śatur anumō nadyajādī (Pā. 6-1-173 [?]). — sugam — root gam (going), with su as upapada, ḍa in the locative-type sense by sudurorādhikaraṇe (Pā. 3-2-48 [?]); ḍāt-ness elides the ḍi of the root; stem suga; suffix accent; accusative singular. — kṛdhi — root ḍukṛñ (making); loṭ second person singular, sip — hi; dhi by śruṣṛṇupṛkṛvṛbhyaś chandasi (Pā. 6-4-102 [?]); the vikaraṇa elided by bahulaṇ chandasi; nighāta accent. || 9 || (Grammar page, noted briefly; sūtra numerals small and doubtful [?].)

(The grammar of Rik 94.9 ended on p. 542 with kṛdhi and its || 9 ||; on p. 543 only the closing words of the entry on sugam and the entry on kṛdhi remain, as above: after nighāta in the last line, the stem suga takes final acute by the suffix accent, and the accusative singular ending is the second-case singular form.)

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “O Agni, the two shining (aruṣā), red (rohitā, ‘red-coloured’) [horses]. Rohitā is a name of the horses of Agni, as seen in the saying ‘the rohita of Agni’; and in the mantra-wording ‘Agni, with the rohita, may he bring you to the deity’ (Taittirīya Saṁhitā, as read 1-6-4-3 [?]); ‘these are the gods’ horses’ — so it is explained there. vātajūtā — those two whose speed (jūta) is like the speed (vega) of the wind. When you have yoked such a pair to your chariot, then, burning the forests, your roar is deep like the roar of a proud great bull. And after that, with a banner of smoke — that is, the smoke is the ketu (the sign) of him — you pervade the trees that belong to the forest. The rest as before.” Grammatical tail: ayukthāḥ — yuj (joining) in the aorist, with elision of the s as printed [?]; aruṣā — the dual case-ending is replaced by ā by supāṁ suluk...; ravaḥ — root ru (sound), ap in the sense of the action by ṛdor ap; invasi — root ivi (pervading), class bhvādi, the i-marker gives num. (The bhāṣya is clotted at the Taittirīya Saṁhitā quotation rohitena tvāgnir devatām gamayetu and its two numerals; at raśminenvasi; and at the aorist elision clause; marked [?].)

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Kannada)

“agne — O Agni; aruṣā — shining; rohitā — golden-coloured; vātajūtā — wind-swift; (your) horses [Kannada: kuduregaḥ]; rathe — to the chariot; yat — when; ayukthāḥ — are yoked (then); te — (forest-burning) your; ravaḥ — sound; vṛṣabhasyeva — like the bellow of a bull (is deep); āt — after that; vaninaḥ — all the trees in the forest; dhūmaketunā — with the flame made known by a banner-like smoke; invasi — you envelop; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaṁ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer harm.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

“O Agni, as soon as you yoke to your chariot your shining, golden-hued, wind-swift horses, your roar, as you burn the forest, is deep like the bellow of a bull. After that you envelop all the trees in the forest with a flame that has the smoke for its banner. Through friendship with you, may we suffer no harm of any kind.”

English Translation (as printed)

When you have yoked the bright red horses, swift as the wind to your car, your roar is like that of a bull, and you envelope [sic] the forest trees with a banner of smoke ; Agni, let us not suffer injury, through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयाः ॥ — Special Topics of Rik 94.10 (Kannada)

aruṣā — “Although the word aruṣa has the ordinary sense ‘reddish-brown’, here, since the epithet rohitā is also present, it has been explained as ‘shining’ (prakāśamāna).”

rohitā — “rohito ‘gneḥ (Ni. 2-28 [?], as read) — the Nirukta-author thus gives the form of Agni’s horse: ‘golden-coloured’, that is the sense.”

vātajūtā — vātasya vāyo ḥ jūtaṃ javaḥ vega iva vego yaṇo ḥ tau: “Horses whose speed is like the speed of the wind”; here the word vātajūta is an epithet of Agni’s horses. In some places it is also used as an epithet of Agni himself.”

वि वातजूतो अतसेषु तिष्ठते वृथा जुहूभिः सृण्या तुविष्वणिः । vi vātajūto atiseṣu tiṣṭhate vṛthā juhūbhiḥ sṛṇyā tuviṣvaṇiḥ | (R̥ Saṃ 1-58-5 as read [?])

(The print’s word before tiṣṭhate is read atiseṣu as printed, and is the Kannada-script reading of atasesu; doubtful [?]. Gloss, mine and tentative: “wind-driven, he stands apart among the bushes, with ladles, with the sickle, loud in sound”).

यद्वातजूतो वना व्यस्थादग्निर्ह दाति रोमा पृथिव्याः । yad vātajūto vanā vy asthād agniḥ ha dāti romā pṛthivyāḥ | (R̥ Saṃ 1-65-4 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “when, wind-driven, he spread through the forests, Agni shears the hair of the earth”). “In places such as these, the word is an epithet of Agni, meaning ‘Agni urged on by the wind (vātena preritaḥ)’.”

vaninaḥ — vanasaṃbaddhān vṛkṣān: “the trees belonging to the forest.”

invasi — “invati, nakṣati and so on, ten [words] being read among the roots that mean ‘pervasion’ (Ni. 2-10 [?]); so invasi means ‘you pervade’.”

dhūmaketunā — “They explain the word dhūmaketu in two ways. Ketuḥ patākākāraḥ; ketuḥ patākāsthāniyo yasya saḥ: ‘ketu means a standard (dhvaja); one whose banner is the smoke’ — thus Agni, in one way; or, ketuḥ jñānaṃ vā: ‘ketu means knowledge’ — ‘one who is known by the smoke’ (dhūmena yaḥ jñāyate sa iti vā) — in another way. The commentators explain it thus.”

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “O Agni, adha — after your entering the forest to burn it — svanāt, from your loud, deep roar (uta here has the sense ‘even’): the winged ones (patatriṇaḥ), the birds also, are afraid. If even birds, able to go to another place by flying up, are afraid, what is to be said of the fear that arises in the other creatures there, the wolves and the like? So the sense is that when you enter the forest, all creatures fall into fear. When your sparks (drapsāḥ — portions of flame), the eaters of grass (yavasādaḥ), spread out in many ways, then for you the whole forest is easy to travel (sugaṁ): so that forest becomes easy for your chariots also. The sense is that when the grass and the like have been burned by the flame-tips that spread first, your chariots follow after without obstruction. The rest as before.” Grammatical tail: bibhyuḥ — jibhī (fear), the Vedic perfect, with y for the vowel by eranekāca...; vyasthiran — the ātmanepada of sthā after sam, ava, pra, vi by the rule on sthā; ran in place of jhi by the transposition of terms in the luṅ; i for the root vowel by sthāghvor ic ca; elision of s [clotted, the rule’s wording and number doubtful [?]]; tāvakebhyaḥ — tavaka as substitute for yuṣmad in the singular (the rule number doubtful [?]). (The bhāṣya is clotted at saṁkocayad yadā and at prasvādaṅgāt; marked [?].)

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Kannada) (begun at the foot of p. 547; continues on p. 548)

“agne — O Agni; atha — after you have entered the forest; svanāt — (by your) sound; patatriṇaḥ uta — even the birds; bibhyuḥ — are afraid; te — your; drapsāḥ — the parts of Pratipadārtha of Rik 94.11, concluded from p. 547: “...(it is possible to enter easily) — it becomes [so]; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayam — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer (any) harm.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

“O Agni, as soon as you have entered the forest, even the birds are afraid at your roar. When the portions of your flame, burning up all the grass, spread in all directions, the entry of the forest becomes very easy for you and for your chariots. Through friendship with you, may we suffer no harm of any kind.”

English Translation (as printed)

At your roaring even the birds are terrified ; when your flames, consuming the grass, have spread in all directions, (the wood) is easy of access to you and to your chariots ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयः ॥ — Special Topics of Rik 94.11 (Kannada)

drapsāḥ — “The word drapsa ordinarily means ‘that which flows’ (dravaṇa-śīla), that is, ‘what is to be run, flowing’, or it has been used in the sense ‘the drops of Soma-juice, like water-drops’. But in some contexts it means ‘a ray of Agni’, ‘a banner’, ‘the moon’. For the word drapsāḥ in this Ṛk they explain jvālaikadeśāḥ, ‘portions of the flame’. Skandasvāmin takes it as drapsasabdaḥ kaṭhinavacanaḥ kaṭhināḥ bahularūpāḥ [as read, doubtful [?]]: ‘the word drapsa gives the meaning “hard”, and says it is to be understood here as the hard and abundant flame of Agni.”

vyasthīran — tiṣṭheḥ idaṃ rūpaṃ | vitiṣṭhante | sarvaṃ vyāpnuvantī arthaḥ: “this is a form of sthā: they stand in various ways, they pervade everything’ — that is the sense: ‘occupy all’, or ‘pervade’. The flame of Agni pervades everything and spreads.”

sugam — “The various senses of this word have been given already, in explaining the 9th Ṛk of this very Sūkta.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.11 (grammar page, noted briefly; continues on p. 549)

adha — in the word atha the tha becomes dha by Vedic variation. — bibhyuḥ — root ñibhi (fear); in the present sense, liṭ by chandasi lunlanliṭaḥ; reduplication of the root; the reduplicate takes jaś (the bh → b); third person plural jhi → us; asaṁyogāl liṭ kit... (continues on p. 549)

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.11, continued (grammar, noted briefly): bibhyuḥ — ... by asaṁyogāl liṭ kit (Pā. 1-2-5 [?]) it is kit, so the root takes no guṇa; eranekāco ‘saṁyogapūrvasya’ (Pā. 6-4-82 [?]) turns the i to y; nighāta accent, following a tiṇanta. — vyasthiran — root ṣṭhā (cessation of motion), usually parasmaipada, but by samavapravibhyaḥ sthaḥ (Pā. 1-3-22 [?]) it takes the ātmanepada; luṇ, third person plural, jha; by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. 3-1-85 [?]) ran replaces jha; sthāghvor ic ca (Pā. 1-2-17 [?]) gives i for the root’s vowel in luṇ; then, the sic following a short vowel being elided by hrasvād aṅgāt (Pā. 8-2-27 [?]) — the print’s clotted prasvādaṅgāt of the bhāṣya (p. 547) is to be read hrasvād aṅgāt, with the number as read here, not the 8-3-12 of the bhāṣya’s tail [?]; the augment aṭ for the stem. Because the word yat stands before it, the nighāta accent is blocked by yadvṛttān nityam (as read); as the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute. — tāvakebhyaḥ — “these (are) yours”: tava ime tāvakāḥ, in the sense of relationship; by yuṣmadasmador anyatarasyāṁ khañ ca (as read) the suffix aṇ follows; with that suffix following, tavakamamakāv ekavacane (Pā. 4-3-3 [?]) gives tavaka for yuṣmad; taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ gives vṛddhi of the first vowel; the suffix accent falls on the last syllable; the form is the dative plural. || 11 || (Grammar page, noted briefly; sūtra numerals small and doubtful [?].)

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “May this praiser of Agni be [fit] for the support (dhāyase) belonging to Mitra, the god who presides over the day, and Varuṇa, who presides over the night: that is, may Mitra and Varuṇa sustain this praiser of Agni. The anger (heḷaḥ) of the Maruts, the gods so named, who dwell in the atmosphere below the world of heaven (avayātām — ‘those who go below’), is adbhuta, great; (adbhuta is a word for ‘great’); from that anger may Mitra and Varuṇa protect this praiser of Agni, so the sentence is completed. And, O Agni, su mṛḷa, make us well content; and let the mind of these Maruts be again [kindly], let it become gracious once more. The rest as before.” Grammatical tail: dhāyase — the suffix asun in the sense of the action after the roots vah, hā, dhā and the like in the Veda, with the augment yuk; avayātām — yā (reaching), śatṛ in the present of that root with the prefix ava, with the case-ending acute by the rule on śatṛ; mṛḷa — mṛḍa (pleasing); śap taken as ārdhadhātuka, with ṇi-elision; lengthening in the Saṃhitā (mṛḷā); bhūtu — elision of śap by bahulaṃ chandasi. Pratipadārtha of Rik 94.12, concluded from p. 550: “...punaḥ — again; bhūtu — (graciously) let it be; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaṃ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer (any) harm.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

“May this sacrificer who praises Agni be fit to obtain the support of Mitra and Varuṇa, and receive their protection. The anger of the Maruts, who move in the lower part of the world of heaven, is terrifying. May Mitra and Varuṇa protect the sacrificer from this anger. O Agni, make us thoroughly content; may the mind of these Maruts be gracious once more. Through friendship with you, may we suffer no harm of any kind.”

English Translation (as printed)

May this (your adorer) enjoy the support of Mitra and [sic] of Varuṇa ; wonderful is the fury of the Maruts ; (dwellers in the region) below (the heavens) encourage us ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयः ॥ — Special Topics of Rik 94.12 (Kannada)

dhāyase — “This word may be derived from the root dhā, which gives the sense ‘hold, support’ (dhāraṇa), or from the root dheṭ ‘to drink’ (dheṭpāne, as read), which gives the sense ‘drinking’. dhāyase here means either ‘for the support of the sacrificers, by protection and so on’ or ‘for the drinking of the Soma-juice’. In other places also both senses are used. In places such as R. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?]; 1-[?]-[?] [numerals illegible] they explain poṣaṇāya (‘for nourishment’) and jagataḥ dhāraṇāya (‘for the support of the world’); in 1-[?]-[?]; 3-[?]-[?] [numerals illegible], somapānāya (‘for the drinking of Soma’). So here also either of the two senses may be taken. Sāyaṇa explains dhāraṇāya, avasthāpanāya bhavatu (‘may it be for support, for establishment’), and Skandasvāmin explains somapānāya.”

“Skandasvāmin, to explain the setting of this R̥k, cites a story. It is this:” (continues on p. 552)

“Once Mitra, Varuṇa and the Maruts together came to Kutsa’s sacrificial house; Kutsa, wholly absorbed in the praise of Agni, did not notice them, and they went away angry. Then he, in this Ṛk, prays to Agni. Its meaning is that the anger of the gods who departed in wrath is very strong, and that Agni should pacify them and bring them back for the drinking of Soma.”

avayātām — apagacchatām: “those who go away, departing in anger.”

heḷaḥ — krodhaḥ: “reḷate, heḷate, bhāmate and others are read among the ten roots in the sense of ‘become angry’ (Ni. 2-6 [?], as read), so the word means ‘anger’. The word is used in the sense of anger in many Ṛks: Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?]; 1-[?]-[?]; 1-[?]-1 [numerals illegible] and others.”

Pratipadārtha of Rik 94.13, concluded from p. 553: “...cāruḥ — you of lovely form; adhware — in the sacrifice; vasūnāṁ — of (all) treasures; vasuḥ asi — you are the establisher;

“O Agni, you, the shining one, are the great friend of all the gods. You, of lovely form, are in the sacrifice the establisher of all treasures. In your sacrificial house, which is spread most widely, may we be free from care; and through friendship with you may we suffer no harm of any kind: favour us thus.”

English Translation (as printed)

You brilliant (Agni) are the especial friend of the gods ; you who are graceful in the sacrifice are the confirmer of all riches may we be present in your most spacious chamber of sacrifice [sic]; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयः ॥ — Special Topics of Rik 94.13 (Kannada)

devānām adbhutaḥ mitraḥ asi — “You are the great friend of all gods’: this shows the relationship of Agni with the other gods. Because Agni, by distributing the oblations through the sacrifice to all the gods who long for oblations, is the friend of all of them, and above all the friend who stands in front [the print’s last words read as given, doubtful [?]].”

// (R Saṃ 6-15-8 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “you, Agni, the immortal messenger, bearer of oblations, protector, to be praised, they have set down, age after age; gods and mortals with homage sat down by you, the watchful, the all-pervading, the lord of the clans”.)

“In many such contexts, which show the close relationship between Agni and the gods, and that the satisfaction of all the gods is effected through Agni alone, Agni is said to be the friend of all.”

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “you alone, the Vasu of the Vasus, rule over those treasures which heaven and earth nourish”.) “— Agni is praised as the sole lord of every kind of wealth needed for the protection of the heavenly world and the growth of the earth; therefore he is said to be vasūnāṃ vasuḥ asi.”

saprathastame — sarvataḥ pṛthutamaḥ: “‘extremely extended on all sides’, the sense is ‘most spread out’. The word in this sense is used in many contexts, such as 3-6-3 [?] and others.”

śarman — “‘In the sacrificial house.’ Since it is read among the twenty-two names of ‘house’ — gayaḥ, kṛdaraḥ, garttaḥ and the rest (Ni. 3-[?] [?]) — the sense here is ‘house’. In many contexts the word śarman also has the senses ‘protection’ and ‘refuge’. The Nirukta-author, with the sense of ‘refuge, protection’, cites the Rk —”

यच्छा नः शर्म सप्रथः । yacchā naḥ śarma saprathaḥ | (R. Saṃ 1-22-15 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “grant us a wide refuge.”) — and explains the word śarma as śaraṇam, ‘refuge’. Thus this word is used abundantly in both senses. Here it means ‘in the exceedingly spacious house’.”

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “...‘the Uttaravedī is the navel’ (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, as read 1-29 [?]) — so says the scripture. On that Uttaravedī, kindled, fully blazing, and gratified by the Soma-juice that has been offered, you are praised (jarase) by the priests: whatever there is that is so, is bhadra, to be sought, praiseworthy. Thus praised, being most gladdening, a giver of ease to us, you bestow the delightful fruit of rites (ratna) and wealth (draviṇa) on the worshipper who has given the oblation. The rest as before.”

Grammatical tail: samiddhaḥ — indhī (shining), past participle in the passive; the iṭ augment forbidden by śvidito niṣṭhāyām; the gati (sam) retains its natural accent by gatiṃ anantaraḥ; somāhutaḥ — ‘offered by Soma’, the instrumental determinative, first-member accent by tṛtiyā karmaṇi; jarase — jarati is a verb of praise; the agent suffix in the passive by vṛatyaya; no nighāta because of the connexion with yat; dadhāsi — the reduplicate takes the initial acute by anudātte ca.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Kannada)

“agne — O Agni; sve dame — (ordained by the śāstra) in your dwelling-place; samiddhaḥ — well blazing, kindled (and); somāhutaḥ — one to whom the Soma-juice has been offered; jarase — (by the priests) praised; te — your; tat — that kindling and the hymn also; bhadraṃ — (for you) productive of a lovely satisfaction (you, who have obtained such satisfaction); mṛḍayattamaḥ — (us) greatly gladdening; ratnaṃ — the delightful fruit of rites; draviṇaṃ ca — and wealth too; dāsuṣe — to the sacrificer who has offered oblations; dadhāsi — you give; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaṃ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer harm.”

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

“O Agni, in your dwelling-place ordained by the śāstra you are well kindled, and after the offering of the Soma-juice you are praised by the priests: that kindling of yours and the hymn are a lovely satisfaction to you. Having obtained such satisfaction, you greatly gladden us, and give the delightful fruit of rites and wealth to the sacrificer who has offered oblations. Through friendship with you, may we suffer no harm of any kind.”

English Translation (as printed)

It is pleasant to you when you are lighted in your own abode and propitiated by libations are praised (by the priests) ; then, much delighted, you give rewards and riches to the worshipper ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

in the form dāśvān, irregular (dāśvān sāhvān mīḍhvāṇś ca, Pā. 6-1-12 [?]); with the dative ending following, the stem has the bha-designation, so vasoḥ samprasāraṇam (Pā. 6-4-131 [?]) turns the v of vas into u; samprasāraṇac ca (Pā. 6-1-108 [?]) gives the earlier form; ṣ by śāsi vasi ghasināṇ ca (Pā. 8-3-60 [?]); the form dāśuṣe. || 14 || (Grammar page, noted briefly; sūtra numerals small and doubtful [?].)

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

“O Agni, possessing lovely wealth and indivisible: the sacrificer to whom, abiding with faith in all sacrificial rites, you give the fitness for rites that is free of sin, and the sacrificer whom you join with strength that does good — he surely prospers. May we too, through your favour, be possessed of wealth together with sons, grandsons and the like.”

English Translation (as printed)

Fortunate is the worshipper to whom (assiduous) in all pious works, you possessor of riches, indivisible Agni, grant exemption from sin, whom you associate with auspicious strength, may he be (enriched) by you with wealth that comprehends progeny.

॥ विशेषविषयाः ॥ — Special Topics of Rik 94.15 (Kannada)

sudraviṇaḥ — śobhanadhanaḥ: “one who has lovely wealth’, that is, ‘one whose wealth is excellent’. In the Rksamhitā this epithet is used only as a synonym of Agni. In the Rk 10-61-21 [?], too, this epithet shows the excellence of Agni’s wealth.”

adite — “akhaṇḍanīyāgne — ‘indivisible Agni’; or aditeḥ putra agne — ‘O Agni, son of Aditi’: it can be explained in two ways. In the first, aditi is taken to mean ‘not poor’ (adīnā), that is, ‘not wasting away’: Agni is said in many places to be free of decay and free of death.”

अग्ने त्रातारममृतं मियेध्य यजिष्ठं हव्यवाहन । agne trātāram amṛtaṁ miyedhya yajīṣṭhaṁ havyavāhana | (R Saṁ 1-44-5 as read [?])

(Glosses, mine and tentative: “O Agni, saviour, immortal, worthy of offering, best sacrificer, bearer of oblations”; “never does the immortal, born of strength, fail, when as Hotṛhe became the messenger of Vivasvat”). “In many such contexts Agni is called deathless; so he may be called aditi. In the second sense, aditi is devamātā (Ni. 4-22 [?]), the ‘mother of the gods’, so Agni too is a son of Aditi; therefore, by adite is to be understood ‘O son of Aditi’, Skandasvāmin says. Or, since the Nirukta-author says agnir asyāditir ucyate (Ni. 11-23 [?]), aditi is a synonym (paryāya) of Agni;” (continues on p. 562) sarvatātā — “The Nirukta-author, citing this very Rk when explaining the word sarvatātā, gives the meaning sarvāsu karmatatiṣu, ‘in the multitude of all sacrificial acts’ (Ni. 11-23 [?]). The word sarvatātā is used generally as a synonym for ‘sacrifice’. For example —”

(The middle quotation is clotted in the print and the words are read as given, doubtful [?].
Glosses, mine and tentative, for the first and third: “may he, the messenger of the gods, sent forth in many places, speak for us, sinless, in the rite”; “for riches, Mitra and Varuṇa, I invoke at the sacrifice, for the offspring, for weal and welfare.”) “In Rks like these also, and in 1-[?]-[?]; 2-[?]- [?] and many other Rks, the word sarvatātā is used as a synonym of ‘sacrifice’. In this context it can be taken to mean ‘in the midst of all rites’.”

anāgāstvam — “Freedom from sin’, or ‘fitness for rites that is free from sin’. From ignorance, through any sort of lapse in the rites or any other kind of deficiency, with the faith ‘Agni will release us from this fault’, a prayer of this kind is made to Agni at every step. For example —” sudraviṇaḥ, concluded: guṇa and av-substitution of the root’s vowel through the suffix; since there is an r as cause, the n of the suffix becomes ṇ by aḥkupvān... (Pā. 8-4-2 [?], the sūtra’s end clotted); the form draviṇa. In the Saṁhitā an s-augment arises at the end of the word draviṇa in the Vedic manner (so the Kannada page, as read; the bhāṣya says makāropajana, see p. 560 [?]). In the vocative, because of the designation āmantrita, the nighāta accent arises by āmantritasya ca (Pā. 8-1-19 [?]). — dadāśaḥ — root dāśr (giving); leṭ, second person singular, ‘*ḍaṭtau (Pā. 3-4-94 [?]); ślu for śap by bahulaṁ chandasi (Pā. 2-4-76 [?]); reduplication of the root by ślau (Pā. 6-1-10 [?]); the reduplicate shortened and beginning with the single consonant by halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; in dadāśas the s becomes ru and visarga; initial acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ (Pā. 6-1-189 [?]); because the word is connected with yat, no nighāta. — sarvatātā — after the word sarva the suffix tātīl by sarvadevāt tātīl (Pā. 4-4-142 [?]); by liti (Pā. 6-1-193 [?]) the syllable before the suffix is acute. On Yāska's view, the bahuvrīhi sarvāḥ stutayaḥ yeṣu yāgeṣu, 'in which all praises are', sarvatātā; the ā* comes by the Vedic substitution of letters, and by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. 6-2-1 [?]) the first member keeps its natural accent. On both views ḍā replaces the seventh-case ending by supāṇi suluk... — codayāsi — root cud (urging); leṭ second person singular sip; since it belongs to the curādi class, ṛic in the sense of the root itself by satyāpapāśa... (Pā. 3-1-25 [?]); guṇa of the light penultimate vowel by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca (Pā. 7-3-86 [?]); the augment aṭ by leṭo 'ḍāṭau; guṇa of the ṛic's i, then ay; because yat stood earlier and is connected with it, the nighāta does not arise; by the suffix accent the ā after the d is acute. — prajāvatā — "they have progeny": prajāvān; the suffix matup by tad asyāsty asminn iti matup (as read), added after a stem ending in a [as read]; m turns to v by mādupadhāyās ca... Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): “O god Agni, endowed with qualities such as generosity, you of the qualities named before, knowing the nature of good fortune (saubhagatva), prolong (pra tira, ‘increase’: the root tir with pra has the sense of growth) our life in this rite. That life of ours, increased by you, may the six deities, Mitra and the rest, honour (māmahantām) — that is, protect. Mitra is the protector from death; Varuṇa the averter of ills; Aditi the not-poor, the indivisible, the mother of the gods; Sindhu the flowing, of the nature of open space [?], a goddess; Pṛthivī the widely spread, the earth-goddess; uta (‘and’) is in the sense of joining; Dyauḥ the shining, the goddess who is the heavenly world. All these are to be construed with ‘may they honour the life increased by Agni’ in the preceding.”

Grammatical tail: saubhagatvasya — from subhaga; the printed derivation is clotted and not reproduced [?]; māmahantām — mah (honour), bhāvādi; in the imperative śap is elided by bahulaṁ chandasī, and the reduplicate’s vowel is lengthened because the root belongs to the tuj-type group. (The tail of the bhāṣya on saubhagatvasya is clotted at several words, marked [?].) saubhagatvasya vidvān — subhagasya bhāvaḥ saubhagaṃ | tasya bhāvaḥ |: “That is, one who knows all good fortunes and possessions. Since by epithets such as jātavedāḥ (‘knower of all that is born’) the omniscience of Agni is described, he knows fully the faith and devotion of the sacrificers, and their diligence in what is to be done, and the fruits proper to their good works, and bestows on them all good fortune and possessions.”

asmākam āyuḥ pra tira — “‘Make our life grow.’ The Nirukta-author explains the words pra tira as pravardhaya, ‘increase’ (Ni. 10-40 [?], as read), and cites the Ṛk of the Ṛksamhitā —”

असुनीते मनो अस्मासु धारय जीवातवे सु प्र तिरा न आयुः । asunīte mano asmāsu dhāraya jīvātave su pra tirā na āyuḥ / (Ṛ Saṃ 10-59-5 as read [?])

(Gloss, mine and tentative: “O Asunīti, set your mind on us; for our living, prolong our life well”.)

“— and so shows it. In many contexts like these the meaning ‘increase our life; may we live long’ is given. In the same way here, asmākam āyuḥ pra tira means ‘make our life grow’, that is the sense.”

tan no mitro varuṇo māmahantām aditiḥ sindhuḥ pṛthivī uta dyauḥ — “In these deities also, by Agni’s grace, may they increase our good fortune and possessions, and make [us] honoured [the Kannada word read as pūjyāmānasa, doubtful (?)]; may they make them beneficial to our share. This is the last prayer of this Sūkta. From the beginning of the Sūkta up to here it has had Agni as its deity; but in the last half of the last Ṛk this prayer, addressed to all the gods, in this way, is the peculiarity of the composition of the seer Kutsa. This peculiarity is found also in the compositions of the seers Bharadvāja, Gṛtsamada and the rest. For this there is a well-known technical word, udarka (‘closing’, ‘sequel’). The Bṛhaddevatā describes the udarka of the seer Kutsa in this way:”

III. 126–128, as printed in the source in Roman reference)

(The three stanzas are transcribed from the Kannada script of the print; several words are clotted and are read as given, doubtful (?); especially ṣoḷaśarcam, sto 'rdham, vātra ṣaḍbhiḥ prakṛtābhyāḥ, nodhasy agastye and nodarkā. The source gives no translation of the stanzas; the Kannada that follows on p. 567 explains their sense.)

“The seer Kutsa Āṅgirasā received the vision of this Sūkta (1-94) and hymned it, sixteen Ṛks, as concerned with Jātavedas. The first three pādas of the 8th Ṛk, which begins pūrvo devāḥ, and the latter half of the last Ṛk are addressed to many deities. In the Sūktas of Bharadvāja, Gṛtsamada, Vasiṣṭha, Nodhas, Agastya, Vimada and Nabhāka also, although there are such udarkas, whether they are of many deities or of two deities, they do not have the same characteristic as the refrain (pallavi) in the udarka of the seer Kutsa; thus the peculiarity in the composition of the seer Kutsa is shown.”

“Altogether, in the compositions of eight seers such udarkas are found at the ends of Sūktas. In none of them is the last half of the Sūkta addressed to many deities [as read, doubtful (?)]. This matter will be considered in detail, with examples, in the exposition of the next Sūkta.”

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.16 (grammar page, noted briefly) saubhagatvasya — subhagasya bhāvaḥ saubhagam; because subhagān mantre is read as such in the udgātrādi group (as read), a suffix (the Kannada print gives phiñ [?]) arises in the sense of ‘state’; being ñit, it gives vṛddhi of the first vowel. saubhaga itself means ‘state’ [of being subhaga]; where the sense of ‘state’ is to be shown again, the suffix tva has to be added to the word saubhaga, in the Vedic manner; by the suffix accent the word is final-acute. — tira — the root tir with the prefix pra, in the sense of increase; loṭ, second person singular; tiñanta, nighāta accent. — mamahantām [Saṃhitā māmahantām] — root maha (honouring), bhvädi; loṭ, third person plural, jha — anta by jho ‘ntaḥ’ (as read); āmetaḥ (Pā. 3-4-90 [?]) turns the e produced in the loṭ into ām; śap gets ślu by bahulaṃ chandasi; reduplication of the root by ślau; the reduplicate keeps the first consonant by halādiṣeṣa; since the root belongs to the tuj-type group, the reduplicate’s vowel is lengthened by tujādināṃ dirgho ‘bhyāsasya’ (Pā. 6-1-7 [?]); nighāta accent, since it follows a tiñanta. || 16 || (Grammar page, noted briefly.)
