Translation (mine; the verses are the standard homage verses of this series): "I bow to the elephant-faced one, bowing to whom the good-minded — Vāgīśa [Brahmā] and the rest — become successful at the start of all undertakings. I praise Vidyātīrtha-Maheśvara, whose breath the Vedas are, and who made the whole world from the Vedas. The Veda is Śiva, Śiva is the Veda; one who studies the Veda is Sadāśiva; therefore, with every effort, one should always recite the Veda alone." (The English is my rendering; the Sanskrit is as printed, read from the Kannada script, with a few letters uncertain.)

Translation: "Here, in the First Aṣṭaka, the Second Adhyāya begins. Its first sūkta is the eight-rik sūkta beginning ayaṃ devāya. Its ṛṣi and meter are as before [Medhātithi Kāṇva; Gāyatrī]. That its deity is the Ṛbhus is stated by the Anukramaṇikā [the quotation, read as ayam aṣṭāv ārbhavam, is uncertain [?]]. As for its application, it is to be known from the laiṅgika or smārta usage [the sense of the rik or the Smṛti]. In the first chandoma day of the vyūḍha sacrifice, at the vaiśvadeva-śāstra, the ṛca [a group of three riks] for the Ṛbhus, ayaṃ devāya janmane [Rik 1], is used. And so it is laid down in the Sūtra, in the section beginning atha chandomāḥ: 'the ṛcas abhi tvā deva savitaḥ, pretāṃ yajñasya śambhuvā and ayaṃ devāya janmane' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [8-6])."

|| Anuvāda (Kannada rendering) || In the first sūkta of the second adhyāya of the first aṣṭaka there are eight riks. The ṛṣi and the meter are the same as in the preceding sūkta. The Anukramaṇikā says the deities are the Ṛbhus. The application is both śrauta and smārta. In the vyūḍha sacrifice, when the prathama-chandoma vaiśvadeva-śāstra mantras are recited, the ṛca connected with the Ṛbhus, ayaṃ devāya janmane, is used. The Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra (Āś. 8-6), in the section atha chandomāḥ, directs that the ṛca with Savitṛ as deity, beginning abhi tvā deva savitaḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [1-24-3]) — three riks — the ṛca with Heaven-and-Earth as deity beginning pretāṃ yajñasya śambhuvā (Ṛ. Saṃ. [3-?-?]), and the ṛca with the Ṛbhus as deity beginning ayaṃ devāya janmane (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-20-1) be used as chandomā mantras.

Translation: "The Ṛbhus, being originally men, attained divinity by austerity (tapas); and they are the deities in this sūkta. Their company is here denoted by the word janman in the singular, which means 'the one being born'. For the god — the company of the Ṛbhus — who is born, for his pleasure, this stoma, this particular hymn of praise, has been made (akāri, 'produced') āsayā — with their own mouths — by the viprebhiḥ, the wise priests. Of what sort is the hymn? Ratnadhātamaḥ — giving wealth, such as lovely jewels, in the highest degree. The sense is that the Ṛbhus, pleased with praise, give wealth." The grammar that follows is noted briefly: āsayā (from asya, mukha 'mouth'; the instrumental singular ṭā replaced by yāc by P. 7-1-39 supāṃ sulug...; the y of the stem dropped by vyatyaya; the c-mark gives end accent); ratnadhātamaḥ (ratnāni dadhāti = ratnadhāḥ, with tamap; the accent of the final member of the compound). (Grammar, noted briefly.)

Grammar pages (pp. 4 lower half–5), noted briefly. The Kannada says: āsayā — the word asya is mukha ("mouth"), a variant form (rūpāntara) of āsyā; the dative/instrumental sense "by the mouth"; the ending ṭā is replaced by yāc (P. 7-1-39 [supāṃ sulug-pūrvasavarṇāccheyāḍādyāyājālaḥ]); yāc has the mark c, hence end-accent by P. 1-1-... [cit P. 6-1-163]. Ratnadhātamaḥ — ratna is an eternally neuter noun and so is first-syllable accented by the Phiṭ-sūtra nabviṣayasyāniṣantasya [Phiṭ 2-[?]]; ratnāni dadhāti iti ratnadhāḥ: after the root dhā with the upapada ratna, kvip or viṭ [P. 3-2-71 anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyante / P. 3-2-67 kvip ca], all letters of the suffix dropped; the root accent (end-accent on dhā); after the compound, gatikārapapadāt kṛt P. 6-2-139 retains the accent of the final member; the other letters unaccented; ratnadhāḥ may also have end-accent by samāsasya P. 6-1-223; the tamap suffix is pit so unaccented by P. 3-1-4 anudāttau suppitau; the svarita and pracaya to be supplied. (Numerals as read; pointers only.)

जन्मने (janmane) — for [the deities] called the Ṛbhus, who were born [as gods] | देवाय (devāya) — for the deity (for the company of deities) | रत्नधातमः (ratna-dhātamaḥ) — giving lovely jewels and the like (riches) | अयं स्तोमः (ayaṃ stomaḥ) — this hymn | विप्रेभिः (viprebhiḥ) — by the intelligent, the learned priests and others | आसया (āsayā) — with [their] mouth | अकारि (akāri) — has been made.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The deities called the Ṛbhus, having been men before, attained divinity. Addressing that company of deities who thus took a divine birth, the learned priests and other men have made this hymn with their own mouths. This excellent hymn gives jewels and other precious things to those who praise, through the grace of the Ṛbhu deities.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

This hymn, the bestower of riches has been addressed by the sages with their own mouths to the race (of Ribhus) having divine birth.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 4)

It is said in many places in the Ṛgveda that the Ṛbhus, having been men formerly, attained divinity by their excellent conduct and by the performance of good works. Formerly, to the ṛṣi Aṅgiras there was a son named Nītimañjarī [as read]. In his line there were three sons born to a ṛṣi named Sudhanvan: Ṛbhu, Vibhu and Vāja. By good works — helping the gods and the like — they were born as gods or became gods; so it is believed. Of these three sons of Sudhanvan, Ṛbhu and the rest, the custom is to call them "Ṛbhus"; the three sons are called by the name of the eldest. Because they were pupils of Tvaṣṭṛ, they are also called "divine craftsmen". It is said in various places that they made for Indra and the other gods needed things — that is, they made Indra's chariot, Agni's camasa vessel, and so on. In this sūkta some of the deeds they did are described. It is said everywhere that they have wondrous power and are capable of doing any work; since they have powers and capabilities like those of the gods, the ṛṣis, thinking them to belong to the company of gods, have variously described them and the deeds they did. It is believed that they dwell in the orb of the sun and carry out their works through the sun's rays. More details about them will be given later.

आसया (āsayā) — the singular instrumental word; āsyā — a variant form of the word mukha, "mouth"; the sense: "by the mouth", "by the lips".

रत्नधातमः (ratnadhātamaḥ) — this word occurs in the first rik of the Ṛgveda, agnim īle purohitam (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-1-1). Ratnāni dadhāti (dadāti) iti ratnadhāḥ atisāyena dhanapradaḥ: one who gives wealth, such as gems, in the highest degree.

Translation: "Those Ṛbhus, for Indra — for his pleasure — made by the mind (manasā) the two horses harī — well-trained, which yoke themselves to the chariot (vacoyujā) at a mere word, without any beating or the like. Since the Ṛbhus are of true resolve, [their craftsmanship is such that] by the mere resolve Indra's two horses came into being [the reading tvaṣṭṛtvam is partly unclear, marked [?]]. Those Ṛbhus, by śamī — works in the form of preparing the graha cup, the camasa vessel and the like — pervaded (āśata, 'attained') our sacrifice. Among the thirty-six words for 'action' beginning with apas, the words śamī and śamī are read [Nighaṇṭu 2-1, cited 'ni. 2-1', numerals as read [?]]." The grammar, noted briefly: vacoyujā (vacasā yuñjāte, yuj + kvip; the dual ending replaced by ā; accent of the final member of the compound); tataksuḥ (takṣ 'to make thin, to fashion', the perfect; jhi → us; reduplication); śamībhiḥ (śamyah karmāṇi, 'works which remove sins'; the Uṇādi in, with the feminine in ñiṣ; first-syllable accent through the vṛṣādi list); āśata (aś 'to pervade', śnu, middle voice; the augment ā; unaccented). (Grammar, noted briefly; sūtra numerals as read.)

Grammar pages (pp. 7 lower half–8), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: vacoyujā (vacasā yuñjāte — the instrumental vacas as upapada of yuj, yujir yoge; satsūdviṣa-druha-duha-yuja-vida-bhida-chida-jī-nī-rājām upasarge 'pi kvip P. 3-2-61; the dual au → ā by P. 7-1-39; the accent of the final member yuj by gati-kāra-kopapadāt kṛt P. 6-2-139; the svarita conversion by udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ P. 8-4-66), tataksuḥ (takṣū tvakṣū tanūkarāṇe; liṭ third plural jhi, replaced by us by P. 3-4-82 parasmaipadānām ṇalatususthalathusaṇalvamāḥ; reduplication P. 6-1-8 liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya; the verb is not made unaccented since it follows the relative ye; and — beginning the second pāda — apādāda P. 8-1-18 bars the loss of accent; tiñ atinaḥ P. 8-1-28 therefore does not make it wholly unaccented), śamībhiḥ (śamu upasame; sarvadhātubhya in Uṇ. 4-[?]; in the feminine kṛdikārād aktinaḥ P. 4-1-45, optional ñiṣ after a kṛt-derived stem in i, the gaṇa being bahulam [so śamī or śamī]; yasyeti ca P. 6-4-148 drops the i of the suffix; the accent is end-accent by the suffix, but first-syllable accent in the vṛṣādi list by P. 6-1-203 vṛṣādīnām ca), and āśata (aśū vyāptau, svādi; lañ [here liñ-like Vedic lun? — the print says lañ third plural middle jha]; svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ P. 3-1-73; śnu dropped by bahulaṃ chandasi P. 2-4-73; āḍajādīnām P. 6-4-72 gives āt; āṭas ca P. 6-1-90 vṛddhi; ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ P. 7-1-5 at for jha: āśata). ॥2॥ (Numerals as read; pointers only.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (p. 6)

ये (ye) — which Ṛbhu deities | इन्द्राय (indrāya) — for Indra's pleasure | वचोयुजा (vacoyujā) — which can be yoked to the chariot simply by a word | हरी (hari) — the two horses called Hari | मनसा (manasā) — by the mere resolve of the mind | ततक्षुः (tataksuḥ) — produced [for him] | (ते ऋभवः) ((te ṛbhavaḥ)) — those Ṛbhus | शमीभिः (śamībhiḥ) — with [works of the kind of] preparing the graha, the camasa and the like | यज्ञम् (yajñam) — our sacrifice | आशत (āśata) — pervaded.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

These Ṛbhus produced, by mere resolve of the mind and for Indra's pleasure, the two well-trained horses called Hari of Indra's chariot. May such Ṛbhus provide for our sacrifice also the graha, the camasa and the other implements.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

The Ribhus who created mentally for Indra his pair of tawny horses that yoke themselves at his command attained the sacrifice by their acts of skill.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 6–7)

वचोयुजा (vacoyujā) — tāḍanādikam vinā vāṇmātreṇa rathe yujyamānau: yoked to the chariot at a mere word, without blows or other punishment. That is, to Indra, his command is enough; without the urging of any charioteer, the two harness themselves to the chariot — "Harnessing themselves at Indra's word (command)" [the print adds the English].

ततक्षुः मनसा (tataṣuḥ manasā) — sampāditavantaḥ, kṛtavantaḥ: "created" [English added by the print]. Being skilled in the craft of building, and being of true resolve, the Ṛbhus created with the power of their intellect [Indra's chariot and horses] — items that serve the sacrifice: weapons and the like, the chariot and other things — and are able to make anything. Those deities' powers are above those of modern craftsmen: they need no tools or materials; by mere mental resolve they are able to make whatever they wish. This is what the word manasā conveys.

हरी (harī) — haraṇāt vahate iti harī: because they carry (vahate) the chariot, Indra's horses are called Hari. This dual word is, in the Ṛgveda, generally used when speaking of Indra's two horses.

शमीभिः (śamībhiḥ) — śamayanti pāpānīti śamyah karmāṇi: among the thirty-six words for 'action' beginning with apas, aḥnaḥ, the word śamī or śimī is read (Ni. [2-1]); hence śamībhiḥ means "by sacrificial acts". The sentence in which it occurs, śamībhir yajñam āśata, can be understood in several ways. [The Ṛbhu deities] pervade [our] sacrifice with their own works — that is, with works of craft; or with works that give the sacrificer what he wishes; i.e. they come to the sacrificial ground. Or: the sacrificer, who is made to perform havis-giving to the Ṛbhu deities, is pleased by these works and accepts the oblations; and so on. The main idea is that these Ṛbhus, with their cunning craftsmanship, make the equipment needed in the sacrifice so that the sacrifice is completed with all its parts, and, pleased with the oblations the sacrificer offers, give him the fruit of the sacrifice.

Translation: "For the Nāsatyas [the Ásvins] — for the pleasure of the Ásvin gods — they fashioned (takṣan) a chariot. The Ṛbhu gods, by fashioning, produced a chariot. Of what sort? Parijmānam — going all round, travelling everywhere; sukham — comfortable [the Sanskrit gloss — 'giving comfort in sitting' — is partly unclear, marked [?]]. Further, they fashioned (produced) a cow (dhenu). Of what sort of cow? Sabardughām — a giver of sabar, i.e. a milker of milk." The grammar, noted briefly: takṣan (the augment aṭ is absent, as 'variously in the Veda'); nāsatyābhyām (na asatya — 'those in whom there is no untruth'; the n of the negative is not dropped by the exception nabhrāṇnapāt... P. 6-3-75); parijmānam (aj 'to go' with the prefix pari and an Uṇādi suffix [Uṇ. 1-152, as read], with first-syllable accent by nipātana); sabardughām (sabar = milk, duh 'to milk' + kap by P. 3-2-70 duhaḥ kab ghaś ca; kap has p, so the root accent remains; the compound has the accent of its final member). (Grammar, noted briefly; the Uṇādi number and the first-gloss words are marked [?].)

Grammar pages (pp. 10 lower half-13), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: takṣan (takṣū tvakṣū tanūkarāṇe — "to make thin, to pare"; by Patañjali's kartary-arthadarśa rule — P. 3-1-76 tanūkarāṇe takṣaḥ — śnu would come after the root in the sense "to make thin", but here the sense "to produce" is intended, so śap is used; lañ, jhi → an by P. 3-4-108 jher jus [jus with s-drop]; saṃyogāntasya lopāḥ P. 8-2-23 drops the t of nt; pūrvatrāsiddham P. 8-2-1 explains why the conjunct-drop does not conflict with the n-drop rule; nalopāḥ prātipadikāntasya P. 8-2-7 does not apply to the n [since takṣan is a verb]; the augment aṭ [by P. 6-4-71 luñlanñṛñkṣv aḍudāttaḥ] would normally precede, but "variously in the Veda" (bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi P. 6-4-75) it is dropped even without mā), nāsatyābhyām (na vidyate satyaṃ yayos tau asatyau; or na asatyau; the Nāsatyas are the two Áśvins, named one Nāsatya and the other Dasra, though the single word nāsatya is used for both [the Kannada's note]; nalopo naññah P. 6-3-73 would drop the n of nañ before a vowel, but P. 6-3-75 na bhrāṇnapānnavedānāsatyānamucinakulanakhanapuṃsakanakṣatranakranāsikeṣa keeps it by prakṛtibhāva; akah savarṇe dīrghah; the ablative-sense use of the bhyām ending is noted: nāsatyābhyām stands in the sense of the dative [or the fourth/sixth case], parijmānam (aj gatikṣepaṇayoḥ with prefix pari; thirteen words ending in kani are given by nipātana in Uṇ. 1-[?] śvanuksan-pūṣan-plīhan-kledan-snehan-mūrdhan-majjan-arya-man-viśva-paśya-pari-jman-ity-ādi [as read, śvan-uksan-pūṣan-plīhan-kledan-snehan-mūrdhan-majjan-aryaman-viśvapsan-parijman-mātariśvan...]: the Kannada explains each word of this list — śvan ["dog"], ukṣan ["bull"], pūṣan, plīhan, kledan, snehan, mūrdhan, majjan, aryaman, viśvapsan, parijman, mātariśvan, maghavan — with their roots and the dropping of the vowel by nipātana; parijman is explained in several ways: from aj + pari with kani, and the vowel a dropped (parijman); or from aj gatikṣepaṇayoḥ with the man suffix [P. 3-2-... śvanuksan...], pari + aj + man, with the a of the root dropped by nipātana, giving parijma, man being nīt, so no first-syllable accent by P. 6-1-197 [barred because the same sūtra gives the first-syllable accent]; or parijman from ju ['to go quickly'] with kani: pari-ju-man, with the anusvāra/nasal... — the Kannada gives Wilson's sense of parijman as "moon" [candra] — parijman = parito gantā, the one that goes round; the commentator's view "going everywhere" is preferred; the accusative singular am; sarvanāmasthāne ca asambuddhau P. 6-4-8 lengthens: parijmānam), mātariśvan (explained as mātari antarikṣe śvayati, "he who goes in the sky [the Mother]": tuvo śvi gativṛddhyoḥ with kani [the Uṇādi kani]; the i dropped by nipātana; the locative-ending luk barred by nipātana, giving mātariśvan; in P. 6-4-133 śvayuvamaghonām ataddhite the word śvan "dog" etc. is included, but not the verbal -śvan of mātariśvan, so no saṃprasāraṇa; so mātariśvānam, mātariśvanaḥ), maghavan (mah pūjāyām, with kani and gh for h, with the augment vuk by nipātana, giving maghavan), sabardughām (sabar is a stem ending in r, meaning 'milk' [the Kannada says the tradition-knowers hold sabar to mean milk]; duhaḥ kab ghaś ca P. 3-2-70 gives kap and gh for h after duh when a subanta is the upapada: sabar + dugh + a → sabardugha; kap is pit so unaccented by P. 3-1-4 anudāttau suppitau; dhātoḥ P. 6-1-162 gives the root u the accent; upapadam atiṇ P. 2-2-19 for the compound; gatiḥ kāra kopapadāt kṛt P. 6-2-139; the feminine ṭāp by P. 4-1-4 ajādyataś ṭāp with savarṇadīrgha, the ā being unaccented by P. 1-1-50 sthāne 'ntaratamaḥ, turned svārīta by P. 8-4-66, and the preceding sound unaccented by P. 1-2-40). ||3|| (A crowded run of three-and-a-half pages; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.)

नासत्याभ्याम् (nāsatyābhyām) — for the Aśvin deities | परिज्मानम् (parijmānam) — going all round (able to travel in all directions) | सुखम् (sukham) — comfortable (easy to sit in) | रथम् (ratham) — a chariot | तक्षन् (takṣan) — [the Ṛbhus] fashioned (produced) | (और) सबर्दुघाम् ((aur) sabardughām) — giving milk | धेनुम् (dhenum) — a cow | तक्षन् (takṣan) — produced.

By their skill the Ṛbhu deities produced for the Aśvin deities a chariot that can travel anywhere, easy to ride in; and one cow that gives good milk.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

They constructed for the Nasatyas, an easy-moving chariot which is capable of moving everywhere, and a cow that gives milk.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 9–10)

As said in the earlier rik, the extraordinary craftsmanship done by the Ṛbhu deities is also described in this rik, and in the following riks.

तक्षन् (takṣan) — ataksan; for the sake of the metre in the Veda the a of the verb ataksan is dropped and only takṣan is used. Ataksan means sampāditavantah, kṛtavantah — [they] fashioned; the senses "chipped, fabricated, fashioned, constructed, carved" [the print gives these English words] can be given. As said in the earlier rik, the sense is that they did not make the chariot by mere mental resolve; rather, by lifting [the materials] with their weapons and tools, they built it according to the science of craftsmanship.

नासत्याभ्याम् (nāsatyābhyām) — na asatyau nāsatyau: those who do not speak untruthful words are nāsatyau, the name of the Aśvin deities (the print adds: "nāsatyau or nāsatyā"). These Aśvin deities are two; though the custom is to call one of them Nāsatyā and the other Dasra, the custom also exists of using the single word nāsatyā for both. So here nāsatyābhyām means "for the two Aśvin deities". Here nāsatyābhyām is a fourth-case form, though in use as a fifth-case form [by the print's remark: though the bhyām ending is the one of the fifth case, it may be given the sense of the fifth or of the sixth case].

परिज्मानम् (parijmānam) — parito gantāram — "going everywhere"; i.e. able to move in the earth, the sky, the sea and other places. This word is an adjective of the word ratham.

सुखम् (sukham) — comfortable ("easy-moving" [the print's English]); not tiresome to those who sit in the chariot; moving as in a kula [cradle?]; or fitted with a third (spare) seat [the Kannada's alternative, partly unclear].

धेनुम् (dhenum) — gām: a cow. In general, the word dhenu in the Ṛgveda denotes a cow that gives milk.

तक्षन् (takṣan) — here too, ataksan is intended. A doubt arises here: since takṣan means "they carved, they fashioned," is it not impossible to make a cow with weapons and the like? Here the commentator's sense, "they produced (sampāditavantah)", is consistent.

सबर्दुघाम् (sabardughām) — sabaḥ kṣīrasya dogdhrīm, amṛtasya dogdhrīm: the one who yields milk (called "amṛta"), or the cow that yields milk or ambrosia [the print adds the English "the cow that yields milk or ambrosia"].

Application (opening lines): "In the second chandoma, at the vaiśvadeva-śāstra, the Ṛbhu ṛca yuvānā pitarā punaḥ is used. It is laid down in the Sūtra, in the section of the second [day] beginning agnim vo devam: 'the two ṛcas mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ and yuvānā pitarā punaḥ' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [8-10])."

Translation: "The gods called the Ṛbhus akrata — made — their own parents, who had been old, young (yuvānā) again. Of what sort? Satyamantrāḥ — having the unfailing power of mantras: since their mantras are perfected by puraścaraṇa and other ritual practices, whatever fruit a mantra is applied to obtain, that fruit is obtained exactly so. Hence the sense: they were able to give youth to their aged parents. Ṛjūyavaḥ — desiring straightness for themselves: free of [crooked] designs; therefore their performed mantras succeed. Viṣṭī — viṣṭayaḥ — pervading: here 'pervading' is said of the unobstructed power of their mantras in all works. Yāska explains the word ṛbhu so: 'ṛbhavaḥ — they shine greatly (uru bhānti), or they shine by truth, or they are [what they are] by truth' (Nirukta [11-15], numerals as read [?])." The grammar, noted briefly: yuvānā (yuvan from yu with kanin, first-syllable accent through the n; the dual ending replaced by ā); pitarā (the same); satyamantrāḥ (a bahuvrīhi, first-member accent); ṛjūyavaḥ (ṛju in the abstract sense, "desire straightness for oneself": kyac, the lengthening by P. 7-4-25, then the Vedic u suffix); viṣṭī (viṣṭ 'to pervade'...). (Grammar, noted briefly; the bhāṣya breaks off here at the foot of p. 14 and continues on p. 15.)

Grammar pages (pp. 14 lower half–15, and 18–19), noted briefly. The bhāṣya's grammar on viṣṭī continues on p. 15: viṣṭ vyāptau + kvic/ktic: kric-ktau ca saṃjñāyām P. 3-3-174 [as read 3-3-174] gives ktic in a noun-sense; titutratatha... P. 7-2-9 bars iṭ; ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ P. 8-4-41 gives ṭ for t: viṣṭi; the nominative dual au → ī by the Veda: the Vārttika iyāḍiyājīkārāṇām upasaṃkhyānam P. 2-1-... [as read], which allows īkāra for jas [here jas → ī by P. 1-1-... alo 'ntyasya]; ād guṇaḥ P. 6-1-87 and prathamayoḥ pūrvasavarṇaḥ P. 6-1-102 give viṣṭī; akrata (ḍukṛñ karaṇe, luṇ; cli luṇi P. 3-1-43 gives cli, whose s is dropped; mantre ghasahvaraṇaśavṛdahādvṛc-kragamijanibhyo leḥ P. 2-4-80 drops cli [luk] in the Veda; ṛ of the middle ending jha → at by P. 7-1-5 ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ; iko yaṇaci; aḍāgama P. 6-4-71; all unaccented by P. 8-1-28). || Prati-padārthaḥ || (p. 15)

सत्यमन्त्राः (satyamantrāḥ) — [those] whose mantras are true | ऋजूयवः (ṛjūyavaḥ) — desiring to remain on the straight path | विष्टी (viṣṭī) — [by the power of the mantras] pervading | ऋभवः (ṛbhavaḥ) — the deities called the Ṛbhus | पितरा (pitarā) — their [aged] mother and father | पुनः (punaḥ) — again | युवाना (yuvānā) — young | अक्रत (akrata) — made.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The Ṛbhus go always on the right path; therefore their mantras are never in vain, and are fruitful. By the power of such mantras they made their aged father and mother young again.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

The honest Ribhus repeating true prayers made (their) parents young again by their skilful acts encountering no opposition through their infallible mantras.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 15-17)

When the mantras of the Ṛbhu deities are recited at the time of reciting the vaiśvadeva-śāstra mantras, this mantra is said as the dvitīya-chandomā mantra. This matter is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section of the second [day], agniṃ vo devam, in the sūtra mahī dyauḥ pṛthivī ca no yuvānā pitarā punar iti tṛcau (Āś. 8-10).

युवाना (yuvānā) — yuvānau: youthful; those who are in the state of youth, not in old age.

पितरा (pitarā) — svakīyau mātāpitarau — their aged parents.

पुनः (punaḥ)

— again; as they were formerly in the state of youth.

सत्यमन्त्रः (satyamantrāḥ) — avitathamantrasāmarthyopetāḥ. By performing the puraścaraṇa and similar rites, those who have obtained mantra-siddhi: if one performs the recitation of the mantra for the sake of a given fruit, the fruit is certainly obtained.

ऋजूयवः (ṛjūyavaḥ) — ṛjukāmāḥ; ṛjutām ātmana icchanti: those who rely on justice or the path of truth; or those who wish to be establishers of the path of truth.

ऋभवः (ṛbhavaḥ) — Yāska has given three derivations of the word ṛbhu: (1) ṛbhava uru bhāntīti vā — "because they shine (bhānti) greatly (uru)"; hence they are called ṛbhavaḥ; some hold that the word ṛbhu or ṛbhu comes of joining the final r of the word uru [read as ru] and the first letter of bhānti — as ahaḥ + rātriḥ = hora [i.e. horā]. (2) ṛtena bhāntīti vā — those who shine by ṛta — truth or sacrifice. (3) ṛtena bhavanti iti vā — "those who are [what they are] by ṛta, i.e. by capacity"; some say that the initial ṛ of ṛtena and the bha of bhavanti joined together and became ṛbhu.

विष्टी (viṣṭī) — viṣṭī, viṣṭ vyāptau: among the twenty-six words for karman beginning with apas, aḥnaḥ, the word viṣṭī is read (Ni. 2-1); it therefore means "action". Viṣṭī — vyāptiyuktāḥ: those who have pervasion. By "pervasion" is meant: sarveṣu kāryeṣv etadīyasya mantrasāmarthyasyāpratighāto 'tra vyāptir ucyate — in all works their power of mantra is not hindered.

The Ṛbhus — the Kannada here says — were formerly men; the manner in which they afterwards attained divinity this rik explains in detail:

विष्टी शमी तरणित्वेन वाघतो मर्तासिः सन्तो अमृतत्वमानशुः । सौधन्वना ऋभवः सूरचक्षसः
संवत्सरे समपृच्यन्त धीतिभिः ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-११०-४])

*viṣṭī śamī taraṇitvena vāghato martāsaḥ santo amṛtatvam
ānaśuḥ | saudhanvanā ṛbhavaḥ sūracakṣasaḥ saṃvatsare
samapṛcyanta dhītibhiḥ | | (ṛ. saṃ. [1-110-4])*

(Read from the Kannada print; the reference numerals read as "०-०००-४" and are given with a query. The Kannada gives no English gloss of the rik beyond the commentary, which follows; the gloss is mine and tentative:) "Being mortals, by action (viṣṭī), by works (śamī), by swiftness [or: by the speed of the sun], the Sudhanvan-born Ṛbhus, the sacrificer-offering [vāghataḥ] and sun-eyed, attained immortality; in the course of a year they were united with the acts [of their works]." Yāska explains it:

कृत्वा कर्माणि श्रिप्रत्वेन वोढारो मेधाविनो वा मर्तासः सन्तोऽमृतत्वमानशिरे ऋभवः सूरख्याना
वा सूरप्रज्ञा वा संवत्सरे समपृच्यन्त धीतिभिः कर्मभिः ॥ kṛtvā karmāṇi śriprat- vena voḍhāro medhāvino vā martāsaḥ santo 'mṛtatvam ānaśire ṛbhavaḥ sūrakhyānā vā sūraprajñā vā saṃvatsare
samapṛcyanta dhītibhiḥ karmabhiḥ ||

(The first words of Yāska's text are partly garbled in the print; I give them as read and without translating.) The chief sense: the sons of Sudhanvan, these Ṛbhus, formerly were men. By means of the sun-like brilliance of their intelligence, or their power of reason, speedily — that is, in a single year — they completed all sacrifices and so obtained amṛtatva, divinity (freedom from death). Yāska gives another sense of the word ṛbhu:

आदित्यरश्मयोऽप्यृभव उच्यन्ते ॥ ādityaraśmayo 'py ṛbhava ucyante ||

— "the rays of the sun also are called ṛbhavaḥ"; as in the example

उद्वत्स्वस्मा अकृणोतना तृणं निवत्स्वपः स्वपस्यया नरः । अगोह्यस्य यदसस्तना गृहे तदद्येदमृभवो नानु गच्छथ ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-१६१-११]) udvatsv asmā akṛṇotanā tṛṇaṃ nivatsv apaḥ svapasyayā naraḥ | agohyasya yad
asastanā gr̥he tad adyedam ṛbhavo nānu gacchatha || (ṛ. saṃ.
[1-161-11])

(The Sanskrit of this rik is read from the Kannada print with uncertainties; its reference numerals are marked [?].) Yāska comments: agohya ādityo 'gūhanīyas tasya yad asastha gr̥he yāvatrātrir bhavati na tāvad iha bhavatheti [partly garbled] —

"Agohya is the sun, the [one] not to be hidden; as many nights as the Ṛbhus spend in his house, they are not here." The commentator Sāyaṇa, in explaining the rik, takes ṛbhavaḥ as uru prabhūtaṃ bhāsamānāḥ ṛtena-ādityena bhāsamānā vā ṛtenodakenodakārtham utpannā vā — "those who shine greatly; or those who shine by the sun; or those who arose by water, for the sake of water".

Translation: "O Ṛbhus! Your madāsaḥ — the intoxicating soma-juices — have been united (samagmata) with Indra and with the Ādityas. The Ṛbhus' drinking of soma with Indra and the Ādityas takes place at the third pressing; therefore Āśvalāyana reads it thus: '[bring] Indra with the Ādityas, with the Ṛbhus, with Vibhu, with Vāja, with Brhaspati, with the Viśvedevas' (Āś. [5-3]). With what Indra? Marutvatā — accompanied by the Maruts; so another mantra reads: 'marudbhir indra sakhyam te astu' — 'may your friendship be with the Maruts, O Indra' (Ṛgveda [8-92-2]). With what Ādityas? Rājabhiḥ — shining ones." The rest is grammar, noted briefly: madāsaḥ (mad + ap by P. 3-3-67 mado 'nupasarge'; the suffix is pit, so the root accent stays; the jas augment asuk by P. 7-1-50); agmata (gam with sam, the aorist; middle voice by P. 1-3-29 samo gamyṛcchibhyām; the cli dropped; penultimate dropped by P. 6-4-98 gamahanajanakhanaghasām lopah kñity anani; the separated sam); marutvatā (matup after marut; the bha-name by P. 1-4-19 tasau matvarthe overrides the pada-name; va for ma by P. 8-2-10 [jhayaḥ]); ādityebhiḥ (bhis does not become ais: "variously in the Veda"; e by P. 7-3-103); rājabhiḥ (rāj + Uṇādi kanin, first-syllable accent). (Grammar, noted briefly; P. 3-3-67, 1-3-29, 6-4-98, 1-4-19 as read agree with the standard numbering.)

Grammar pages (pp. 22 lower half-23), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: madāsaḥ (madī harṣe, mado 'nupasarge' P. 3-3-67 gives ap when a subanta that is not a prefix is the upapada: mad + a; ap has p, so unaccented [anudāttau suppitau P. 3-1-4]; the root accent stays; nominative plural jas with asuk by P. 7-1-50 āj jaser asuk — the k of asuk makes it the final part of the stem [ādyantau ṭakitau P. 1-1-46]; savarṇadīrgha; ru, visarga), agmata (*gam*ḷ gatau with sam, luṅ; samo gamyṛcchibhyām [P. 1-3-29] — with the following akarmakāc ca P. 1-3-26 and anudāttaṇita ātmanepadam P. 1-3-12 continuing — gives the middle voice for gam and r after sam and for roots without objects; luṅ third plural middle jha → at by P. 7-1-5; cli dropped by mantrē ghasahvaraṇaśavṛdahādvṛc-kragamijanibhyo leḥ P. 2-4-80; gam + a-t + a: the a of gam dropped by P. 6-4-98 [gamahanajanakhanaghasām lopah kñity anañi] as the suffix is kit/ñit; the aṭ-augment would apply [P. 6-4-71] but "variously in the Veda" [bahulam chandasy amāñyoge 'pi P. 6-4-75] it is not added; sam + agmata; the prefix sam separated from the verb — chandasi pare 'pi P. 1-4-81 and vyavahitās ca P. 1-4-82; the verb unaccented by P. 8-1-28), marutvatā (maruto 'sya santi; tad asyāsty asminn iti matup P. 5-2-94; the case-ending of the stem dropped; marut would be a pada by P. 1-4-14 suptiñantam padam and take jaś by jhalām jaśo 'nte P. 8-2-39, but P. 1-4-19 tasau matvarthe makes it a bha-stem when matup follows, which overrides the pada-name, so t does not become d; jhayaḥ P. 8-2-10 [the Kannada: jhayaḥ, by which va for ma of matup after a stem ending in a letter of the jhay group]; instrumental singular ṭā: marutvatā), ādityebhiḥ (bahulam chandasi P. 7-1-10 prevents bhis from becoming ais; bahuvacane jhaly et P. 7-3-103 gives e), and rājabhiḥ (rāj dīptau, kanin by Uṇ. 1-154 [as read, kaninyuvrṣitakṣirājidhanvidyupratidivah], nit, so first-syllable accent by P. 6-1-197; bhis is sup, a pada-ending by svādiṣv asarvanāmasthāne P. 1-4-17; nalopah prātipadikāntasya P. 8-2-7; ru, visarga: rājabhiḥ). ||5|| (Numerals as read from small print; pointers only.)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (p. 20)

(हे ऋभवः) ((he ṛbhavaḥ)) — O Ṛbhu deities | मरुत्वता (marutvatā) — accompanied by the deities called the Maruts | इन्द्रेण च (indreṇa ca) — with Indra also | राजभिः (rājabhiḥ) — shining | आदित्येभिः च (ādityebhiḥ ca) — with the Ādityas also | वः (vaḥ) — your | मदासः (madāsaḥ) — the intoxicating [soma-juices] | सम् अगमत (sam agmata) — have been joined (assembled).

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ (p. 21)

O Ṛbhu deities! For you — joined with Indra, the Maruts, and the shining Ādityas — the intoxicating soma-juice has been got ready.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

O Ribhus, the exhilarating [sic] Soma juices are ready to be offered to you along with Indra accompanied by the Maruts and along with the brilliant Adityas.<sup>6</sup>

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḷu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 21–22)

In the evening, at the third pressing (tr̥tīya-savana), when the soma-juice is offered to the Ṛbhus, it is offered by addressing — together with the Ṛbhus — Indra accompanied by the Ādityas, and the deities Ṛbhu, Vibhu, Vāja, Bṛhaspati and the Viśvedevas. This matter is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra: indram ādityavantam ṛbhumantaṃ vibhumantaṃ vājavantaṃ bṛhaspatimantaṃ viśvedevyāvantam āveti (Āś. 5-3 [?]).

सं अग्नत (saṃ agmata) — Skandasvāmin explains these words as saṃgacchadhvam, "unite" — [taking agmata as] "may [the soma] come together for the sake of drinking soma".

मदासः (madāsaḥ) — mādyanty ebhir iti madāḥ somāḥ: since the soma-drinking gives intoxication (mada), the soma-juice is called madāḥ.

मरुत्वता (marutvatā) — maruto 'sya santīti marutvān: with Indra, who is accompanied by the Marut deities.

आदित्येभिः (ādityebhiḥ) — Yāska has given these derivations of the word āditya (Ni. [2-13]): (1) ādityaḥ kasmād ādatte rasān ādatte bhāsaṃ jyotiṣām ādīpto bhāseti vādites putra iti vā — "Why is [the sun] Āditya? Because he takes (ādatte) the juices; or takes the light of the luminaries; or because he is lit up [from all sides] and shines; or because he is the son of Aditi." That is, ādatte means he who takes or draws: he draws up the water (rasān) by his rays; the water thus drawn up becomes cloud and produces rain; hence, because he draws up water by his rays from the sea and other water-bodies, he is called Āditya. (2) Or: ādatte bhāsaṃ jyotiṣām — because at his rising the sun's light dims the light of all other things (the moon and so on) and takes it up; hence the name. (3) Or: ādīpto bhāseti vā — because he is lit up on all sides, shining everywhere around. (4) Or: aditeḥ putra iti vā — he is the son of the goddess Aditi, mother of the gods; hence Āditya.

राजभिः (rājabhiḥ) — dīpyamānaiḥ — shining, brilliant, etc. [the print adds the English "brilliant, shining &c."].

Translation: "And further — [the work] of the god Tvaṣṭṛ, namely his act of carving: navam — new; tyam camasam — that camasa, a kind of wooden vessel able to hold soma — niṣkṛtam — completely fashioned: [Tvaṣṭṛ] made it. That one camasa, made by Tvaṣṭṛ, skilled in carving, [the Ṛbhus, his pupils, took up] and again (punaḥ) akarta — made four (caturaḥ): they made four camasas, divided into four. This sense — making one thing four-fold — is plain in another mantra also: 'ekaṃ camasaṃ caturaḥ kṛṇotana' — 'make the one camasa into four' (Ṛgveda [1-161-2])." The grammar, noted briefly: navam (nu 'to praise', ap in the passive sense; ap being an exception to ghaṇ, applies to the abstract sense everywhere; the ghaṇ of P. 3-3-19 akartari ca kārake saṃjñāyām applies to any case-relation other than the agent; and though 'in a name' is stated there, the ca shows it applies even to what is not a name); tvaṣṭuḥ (takṣ + the Uṇādi trṇ; because the root is ūdit, the it is optional by P. 7-2-44 [svarati-sūti-sūyati-dhūñūdito vā], here absent; the k dropped by P. 8-2-29 [skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca]); niṣkṛtam (kṛ + kta in the object sense; the śatva by P. 8-3-45 [nityaṃ samāse 'nuttarapadasthasya]; the genitive devasya — in P. 2-3-65 karṭṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti the genitive is permitted after a kṛt for agent or object, though barred by P. 2-3-69 for kta etc.; here the agent is taken as 'remaining' [śeṣa], so the sixth case [P. 2-3-50 śaṣṭhī śeṣe]); akarta (kṛ aorist, middle; jha → ta by vyatyaya; the cli dropped; the guṇa explained by 'in the Veda both ways'); caturaḥ (catur + śas: the a of the ending is accented by P. 6-1-167); punaḥ (accented as in the svarādi list). (Grammar; noted briefly; the sūtra numerals are as read; those I could compare against the standard numbering agree, the rest are pointers.)

Grammar pages (pp. 25 lower half–30 upper), noted briefly.

The Kannada's Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā treats navam (ṇu stutau, the root's ṇ → n by P. 6-1-65 ṇo nah; ap after a root ending in u/ṛ by P. 3-3-57 rdor ap, in the object-sense [karṭṛvyatirikta-kāraḥ]; the suffix is pīṭ, so unaccented; the root accent stays; guṇa and av by eco 'yavāyāvaḥ P. 6-1-78; su, am, ami pūrvaḥ P. 6-1-107; with a long note on the ghaṇ suffix P. 3-3-18 bhāve and P. 3-3-19 and their exceptions), tvaṣṭuḥ (takṣū tvakṣū tanūkaṇe; the Uṇādi tṛn [Uṇ. 2-95 tṛn-trjau śaṃsi-kṣadādibhyaḥ saṃjñāyāṃ cānidau? — as read: tṛn-trjau śaṃsi-kṣadādibhyaḥ saṃjñāyāṃ cānimittau], with saṃjñā; or, by bahulam anyatrāpi Uṇ. 2-[?], tṛn in this form; the ūdit root takes iṭ optionally by P. 7-2-44, so the optional-iṭ case is dropped here; skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca P. 8-2-29 drops the k of kṣ; ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ P. 8-4-41 gives ṭ: tvaṣṭṛ; genitive singular ṇas, rta ut P. 6-1-111 gives u in place of a + ṛ when jas/ṇas follows a stem ending in ṛ, then uraṇ raparaḥ P. 1-1-51 gives ur; rātsasya P. 8-2-24 drops the s of the conjunct after r; tvaṣṭur + visarga: tvaṣṭuḥ), niṣkṛtam (niṣ + kṛ + kta; kugatiprādayaḥ P. 2-2-18 compound; sasajuṣo ruḥ P. 8-2-66 and kharavasānayor visarjanīyaḥ P. 8-3-15 for the visarga; nityaṃ samāse 'nuttarapadaasthasya P. 8-3-45 gives s for the visarga when it belongs to is or us in a compound, with the Mahābhāṣya and the Vārttika discussion of iduduphadhasya cāpratyayasya P. 8-3-41 and isusoḥ sāmārthye P. 8-3-44 — the Kannada gives the full scholastic argument whether śatva is optional in this compound and whether vyapekṣā-sāmārthya, 'mutual dependence', is present; it concludes that niṣkṛtam takes ṣa by P. 8-3-41; and on the genitive devasya niṣkṛtam: P. 2-3-65 karṭṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti allows the genitive after a kṛt for the agent or object; the kta-ending is excluded by P. 2-3-69 [na

lokāvyayaniṣṭhākhalarthatṛnām] — which excludes u, uk, avyaya, kta/ktavatu, khalārtha and tṛn, and lādeśa [a long note on whether kta here, given as ñit-less, counts]; so the genitive is not by kartṛkarmaṇoḥ kṛti but by ṣaṣṭhī śeṣe P. 2-3-50, the genitive of 'remainder' — the Kannada gives as example māṣān aśnīyāt ['one should eat beans'] versus māṣāṇām aśnīyāt; the instrumental of the agent by P. 2-3-18 kartṛkaraṇayos tṛtīyā is in principle also available, but since the agent is intended as śeṣa, the genitive stands; the accent: gatiṃ anantaraḥ P. 6-2-49 gives niṣ its own accent in the compound, and by upasargāś cābhivarjam [Phiṭ 1- [?]] it is first-syllable accented), akarta (ḍukṛñ karaṇe; luṅ third plural middle jha; ṛ... by P. 7-1-5 ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ jha → at, but 'variously' [vyatyayo bahulam P. 3-1-85] ta is substituted instead; the cli of P. 3-1-43 dropped by mantrē ghasahvaraṇaśavṛdahādvrckragamijanibhyo leḥ P. 2-4-80 [lug]; aṭ augment; kṛ + ta; tiṅ śīt sārva dhātuka P. 3-4-113 gives the name sārva dhātuka to tiṅ and śīt suffixes; 'in the Veda both ways' [chandas ubhayathā P. 3-4-117] gives the ārdha dhātuka name too, so here it is ārdha dhātuka, and sārva dhātuka ārdha dhātukayoḥ P. 7-3-84 gives guṇa: kar-ta, the aṭ [P. 6-4-71 luṅlanṛñkṣv aḍudāttah] accented; wholly unaccented by P. 8-1-28), caturaḥ (cit + uran, Uṇ. 5- [?] cāter uran [as read]: from cat 'to beg' with the uran suffix, a only for pronunciation; catur; first-syllable accent by the suffix's n; śas → caturaḥ, the u accented by P. 6-1-167 caturaḥ śasy udāttah), and punaḥ (accented on the first syllable in the svarādi list; the Phiṭ list). ||6|| (A crowded run of five pages; outline only; numerals as read from small print; pointers only.)

उत (uta) — and further | त्वष्टुः (tvaṣṭuḥ) — [the deity named] Tvaṣṭṛ | देवस्य (devasya) — the divine craftsman | निष्कृतम् (niṣkṛtam) — fashioned perfectly | नवम् (navam) — new | त्वं चमसम् (tyaṃ camasam) — that camasa [soma-vessel], a wooden vessel capable of holding soma | चतुरः (caturah) — as four camasas | पुनः (punah) — again | अकर्त (akarta) — [the R̥bhus] made [it so].

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

The god Tvaṣṭṛ made only a single wooden vessel, called the camasa. The R̥bhus, by their own power, made four of it and so rendered [it] more useful.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

Besides, the Ribhus again made into four that new ladle, the work of the divine Twashtri.

॥ Viśeṣa-viśayaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ (p. 25)

Tvaṣṭṛ is well known as the carpenter or artisan of the gods [the print adds in English: "Twashtri is the carpenter or artisan of the gods"]. Since the implements of sacrifice — the instruments used in the sacrificial work such as yāga — are essential, Tvaṣṭṛ, who makes them, has a highly honoured position among the gods. The R̥bhus are pupils of this divine craftsman Tvaṣṭṛ. In this rik the power of the R̥bhus is praised: the camasa, a sacrificial vessel made by their teacher, was a single one, and they made four of it.

उत्त (uta)

— and; further; and what is the further matter — not the matter spoken of before, but another matter.

त्वं (tyam) — tam, "that".

Application (opening lines): "In the third chandoma, at the vaiśvadeva-śāstra, the two Ṛbhu riks te no ratnāni dhattana [Riks 7 and 8] are used. It is laid down in the Sūtra, in the section of the third [day] beginning agniṃ mahi: 'indra iṣe dadātu naḥ, and te no ratnāni dhattana — the one and the two' (Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra [8-11])." (The sūtra's wording is read from small print and the numeral is uncertain [?].)

Translation: "You Ṛbhus, spoken of in the preceding riks, joined with our good praises (suśastibhiḥ) — dhattana — bestow upon us, upon the sacrificer who presses the soma (sunvate), ratnāni — lovely riches such as gold, gems and pearls — ekam ekam, one by one, in order, each one. The words ekam ekam are said with the intention that of each kind — gold and the rest — as much as is needed be given. Of what sort are the riches? Trirā — repeated thrice: the best, the middle and the lowest; so the riches come in three sets. And further, bestow (accomplish) sāptāni — works that take the form of groups made of seven. Of what sort are the sāptāni? Trirā — thrice repeated: one group of seven haviryajñas — agnyādhya, darśapūrṇamāsa and the rest; a second group of seven pākayajñas — aupāsana-homa, vaiśvadeva and the rest; a third group of seven soma-samsthās — agniṣṭoma, atyagniṣṭoma and the rest. Suśastibhiḥ — by śastayaḥ, 'those by which [the gods] are praised': riks." The grammar, noted briefly: ratnāni (ram 'to play', the Uṇādi na with t for the m; first-syllable accent); dhattana (dhā, loṭ, the substitute tana for ta by P. 7-1-45); sāptāni (saptan + añ in the Veda by P. 5-1-61 in the sense 'group' [varga]; ṭi dropped by P. 6-4-144; vṛddhi of the first syllable; first-syllable accent; the word varga denotes the members of the group, hence the plural); ekam ekam (doubling in the sense of distribution; the second ekam is āmreḍita, unaccented); suśastibhiḥ (śaṃs + ktin, the nasal dropped; su + śasti; the final-member accent). (Grammar, noted briefly; sūtra numerals as read; those unmarked agree with the standard numbering.)

Grammar pages (pp. 33 lower half–37), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: ratnāni (ramu krīḍāyām; Uṇ. 3-14 rameś ca ta ca [as read; the print shows the sūtra rameḥ stuc in one place] — the suffix na with t for the final m; the ṇic alternative [ramayati, with ata upadhāyāḥ P. 7-2-116 vṛddhi, and ñidhātu..., the long list of Uṇ. 3-[?] janiḥ jaṣṇasurañjo 'mantās ca [jani, jṣ, knas, rañj], with the roots jan, jṣ 'to decay', knas 'to shine', raj, in the bhvādi and the divine classes, each giving na with t for m]; mitām hrasvaḥ P. 6-4-92 shortens the ā of rām...; neṭ P. 7-2-8 bars iṭ before ārdhadhātuka beginning with a vowel [neḍ vaśi kṛti] — the iṭ-less rat-na, with the accent first-syllable by ñnityādir nityam P. 6-1-197; ratna is a neuter and in the accusative plural becomes ratnā + ni by napuṃsakasya jhalacaḥ P. 7-1-72 [num] — as printed — then sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau P. 6-4-8 lengthening: ratnāni), dhattana (ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; loṭ middle-person plural tha; loṭo lañvat P. 3-4-85; tasthasthamipām tāmtaṃtāmaḥ P. 3-4-101; tapta-ṇap-tana-thanās ca P. 7-1-45 gives tana; juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ P. 2-4-75; ślau P. 6-1-10 doubling: dhā-dhā-tana; hrasvaḥ P. 7-4-59; abhyāse carca P. 8-4-54 and khari ca P. 8-4-55 give da for the first dh; ī hali aghoḥ P. 6-4-113 would give ī before a consonant-initial sārvadhātuka, but the reduplicated stems [abhyasta] of dhā — which are not ghu by P. 1-1-20 dādhā ghv adāp — are excluded by the aghoḥ clause, so no ī;

śnābhyastayor ātaḥ P. 6-4-112 drops the ā before an unmarked ending: dadh-tana; dadhastathoś ca P. 8-2-38 gives dh for t after a reduplicated dhā; then the long dispute on bhaṣ-bhāva [P. 8-2-37 ekācaḥ... and sthānivadādeśo 'nalvidhau P. 1-1-56, pūrvatrāsiddham P. 8-2-1]: whether the ā-drop is sthānivat so that dadh is not an ekāc root and bhaṣ-bhāva cannot occur — Vāmana and Mādhava hold that sthānivat does not apply since the bhaṣ-bhāva rule itself is made operative by the capacity of the rule; others, that sthānivat does not apply to an adhikāra in the tripādī; hence dhattana is established), sāptāni (saptano 'ñ chandasi P. 5-1-61 gives añ after saptan in the sense 'group of that number', in the Veda; saptan + su + añ; the suffix, being taddhita, gives the stem the name prātipadika; the case-ending of saptan dropped by supo dhātuprātipadikayoḥ P. 2-4-71; nas taddhite P. 6-4-144 drops the ṭi, i.e. an, of saptan; ñ-marker gives ādi-vṛddhi [taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ P. 7-2-117] and first-syllable accent [ñnityādir nityam P. 6-1-197]; the a-substitute for... [the Kannada's explanation of ṭi: the last vowel with the consonants after it, P. 1-1-64 aco 'ntyādi ṭi]; the singular is not used since the word varga shows that the individual groups are signified; accusative plural śas with śi by jaśśasoḥ śiḥ P. 7-1-20; śi sarvanāmasthānam P. 1-1-42; napuṃsakasya jhalacaḥ P. 7-1-72 gives num; sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau P. 6-4-8 lengthens), suvate (ṣuñ abhiṣave; dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ P. 6-1-64; laṭaḥ śatṛśānacau P. 3-2-124 gives śatṛ; svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ P. 3-1-73; su + nu + at; huśnuvoḥ sārva dhātuke P. 6-4-87 gives yaṇ: suvat; dative singular ñe; here the śatṛ is, by the extension sārva dhātukam apit P. 1-2-4, ñit, and follows śnu; therefore tāsyānudātenñid-adupadeśāt P. 6-1-186 would make śatṛ unaccented — in that sūtra ñit means the aupadeśika ñit, which śnu is not, so śatṛ is not unaccented; the suffix accent remains; śatur anumō nady-ajādī P. 6-1-173 accents the case ending, since śatṛ, being without num, is a śatṛ of the right kind; so the ending is udātta), ekam ekam (nityavīpsayoḥ P. 8-1-4 — tadā abhikṣṇye vartate tasyedaṃ grahaṇam — the sūtra, per the Mahābhāṣya, gives doubling in the sense of repetition [abhīkṣṇya, 'again and again'] and of vīpsā, 'pervasion'; the Kannada discusses the Kaiyaṭa gloss on vīpsā — the desire of the speaker to express the pervasion of actions by qualities and the like, which is shown by the doubling; and on cikīrṣati-type desideratives which, by their own meaning, express pervasion without doubling; sarvasya dve P. 8-1-1 governs here, and padasya P. 8-1-16 is limited; the doubling of eka in ekam ekam shows the application of this rule to the distribution of dhattana over each individual; eka is from iṇ gatau with the Uṇādi kan [Uṇ. 3-[-?] iṇbhīkāpāśalyatimarcibhya ḥ kan] — iṇ, bhī, kā, pā, śal, ati [at], marc take kan; with guṇa, eka; first-syllable accent [ñnityādir nityam]; the second eka is āmreḍita by P. 8-1-2 tasya param āmreḍitam, and by anudāttaṃ ca P. 8-1-3 unaccented), and suśastibhiḥ (śasyate ābhir iti śastayaḥ ṛcaḥ; śaṃsu stutau; striyāṃ ktin P. 3-3-94; anidītāṃ hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti P. 6-4-24 drops the penultimate nasal before a kit/ñit ending; the Kannada notes that though the nasal looks like an anusvāra, in making this drop one must treat the anusvāra as asiddha, so that it is a na; śasti; śobhanāḥ śastayaḥ su-śastayaḥ; kugatiprādayaḥ P. 2-2-18 for the compound; śasti has first-syllable accent from ktin's n, and the compound-accent rule gati-kāra-kopapadāt kṛt P. 6-2-139 would keep the final member's accent, but this is overridden by man-ktin-vyākhyāna-śayana-āsana-sthāna-yājaka-ādi-kṛta-atibhyaḥ P. 6-2-151 [as printed 6-2-152], which gives the final member's end accent: su-śastí; the ti accented, so in suśastibhiḥ the ṭi... of bhis is unaccented, and by udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ P. 8-4-66 it is svarita; ru for s, visarga). ॥7॥ (A very crowded run of five pages; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.)

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥ (p. 32)

Pleased by our hymns of praise, may the Ṛbhu deities grant to the sacrificer who prepares the soma-juice jewels of the three kinds — best, middle and lowest — and may they favour him with one after another of the threefold [groups] of the sevenfold works.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

Confer, therefore, Ribhus, moved by our praises, the three-fold riches upon our sacrificer, one by one; accomplish the thrice seven-fold works (Sacrifices).

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayagaḥ (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 32–33)

At the time of reciting the mantras of the vaiśvadeva-śāstra, this rik and the next are recited for the third chandomā mantra. This matter is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section of the third [day] beginning mahi [agniṃ mahi], in the sūtra indra iṣe dadātu naḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [8-93-?]) te no ratnāni dhattaneti ekā dve ca (Āś. 8-11). In this rik the power of the Ṛbhu deities is not described; rather it is a prayer that the Ṛbhus should favour the sacrificer with jewels and the other forms of wealth, and with the fruits of sacrificial rites such as yāga.

त्रिरा साप्तानि (trirā sāptāni)

— "three times seven", that is, the repetition of seven, or twenty-one. These are chiefly twenty-one kinds of sacrifices in the sacrificial order. They are divided into three groups.

1. agnyādheya-darśapūrṇamāsādīnām saptānām
haviryajñānām eko vargaḥ — "one group of seven haviryajñas, agnyādheya, darśapūrṇamāsa and the rest." The name haviryajña is given to one group of seven sacrifices beginning with the agnyādheya and darśapūrṇamāsa. Since the thing offered to the deities is mainly havis, these are called haviryajñas. Agnyādheya, agnihotra, darśapūrṇamāsa, āgrayaṇa, cāturmāsya, dākṣāyaṇa-yajña and sautrāmaṇī — these seven belong to this group (Ai. Brā. [3-2]).
2. aupāsana-homa vaiśvadevam ity-ādīnām saptānām
pākayajñānām vargo dvitīyaḥ — "the second group is that of seven pākayajñas, aupāsana-homa, vaiśvadeva and the rest." The name pākayajña is given to the group of seven sacrifices beginning with aupāsana and vaiśvadeva; these are also called grhyayajñas. Of them the thing offered chiefly to the deities is cooked food. Aupāsana, vaiśvadeva, pārvaṇa, aṣṭakā, māsiśrāddha, sarpabali and īśānabali belong to this group (according to the explanation of Dhūrtasvāmin on the Āpastamba-paribhāṣā-sūtra).
3. agniṣṭomo 'tyagniṣṭoma ity-ādīnām saptānām
soma-saṃsthānām vargas tṛtīyaḥ — "the third group is the seven soma-saṃsthās, agniṣṭoma, atyagniṣṭoma and the rest." The seven soma-sacrifices — agniṣṭoma, atyagniṣṭoma, ukthya, ṣoḍaśin, vājapeya, atirātra and aptoryāma — form the third group, called somayajñas or soma-saṃsthās; in these, what is offered to the deities is the soma-juice.

We have given the account of these three kinds of groups in Part [1] of the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā, at pp. [?]-[?] and [?]-[?] [the page numerals in the print are partly unreadable].

एकमेकम् (ekam ekam) — krameṇa pratyekam: of the things we wish for — wealth, grain, cattle and the like — either one or all, each one by one they should give; that is the sense.

सुशस्तिभिः (suśastibhiḥ) — śasyate ābhir iti śastayaḥ rcaḥ: because the gods are praised by riks, these are called śastayaḥ; suśastayaḥ means excellent riks or hymns of praise.

Translation: "The vahnayaḥ — the Ṛbhus, carriers of the sacrifice by their making of the camasa and other implements — adhārayanta: they sustained [themselves]: though they were formerly men liable to death, by the gain of immortality they kept their lives. So another mantra reads: 'martāsaḥ santo amṛtatvam ānaśuḥ' — 'being mortals, they attained immortality' (Ṛgveda [1-110-4]). And further, these [Ṛbhus], standing among the gods by their sukṛtyā — their lovely work in the form of making the substances used in sacrifice — abhajanta — obtained, enjoyed — the yajñiya bhāga, the share worthy of the sacrifice, in the form of the oblation. This is plain in other mantras too: 'ayur martyaḥ saudhanvanā yajñiyam bhāgam ānaśa' (Ṛgveda [3-60-1]) and so on; the Brāhmaṇa also says: 'the Ṛbhus indeed, by austerity, won the right to drink soma among the gods' (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa [3-30])." The grammar, noted briefly: vahnayaḥ (the Uṇādi ni after vah, first-syllable accent); abhajanta (not made unaccented, since it begins the pāda); sukṛtyayā (kṛ + kyap by P. 3-1-120 vibhāṣā kṛvr̥ṣoḥ, with the tuk augment by P. 6-1-71 hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk; 'that in which the work of acquiring is lovely'; a bahuvrīhi whose first-member accent is overridden by the end-accent of P. 6-2-172; the feminine kṛtyā by P. 3-3-100 kṛñāḥ śaś ca); bhāgam (end-accent by P. 6-1-159 karṣātvato ghañ anta udāttah); yajñiyam (yajña + gha by P. 5-1-71 yajñartvigbhyām ghakhañau 'that which deserves the sacrifice'; gh → iya by P. 7-1-2). (Grammar, noted briefly; sūtra numerals as read; the Ṛgveda reference [3-60-1] is as I read the small print [?].)

॥ Prati-padārthaḥ ॥ (p. 39)

वह्नयः (vahnayaḥ) — these Ṛbhus, who make implements like the camasa and so carry the sacrifice through | अधारयन्त (adhārayanta) — [obtained immortality] sustained themselves | सुकृत्यया (sukṛtyayā) — by good work | देवेषु (deveṣu) — among the gods | यज्ञियम् (yajñiyam) — belonging to the sacrifice | भागम् (bhāgam) — the share of the oblation | अभजन्त (abhajanta) — obtained.

॥ Bhāvārthaḥ ॥

These R̥bhus, having made the implements of sacrifice and so been helpers of the sacrificial work, obtained immortality. By doing works proper to a sacrifice they obtained, along with the gods, a share of the oblation.

॥ English Translation ॥ (as printed in the source)

Ribhus by their skill in fashioning sacrificial utensils and their pious acts lived for ever or became immortal ; they even obtained a share of the sacrifice along with the Gods.

॥ Viśeṣa-viṣayaḡaḡu (Special Topics) ॥ (pp. 39–40)

These R̥bhus, by the skill of their craft, made the implements — the camasa and so on — that are needed for the sacrifice. In a single year they performed all the sacrifices and became worthy of the gods' grace. By such good works the R̥bhus became able always to sustain their lives; they attained amṛtatva like the gods (freedom from death); and like the gods themselves they won the right to receive the share of the sacrifice — that is, the oblation offered to the gods in the sacrifice.

अधारयन्त (adhārayanta) — the meaning of this word is "they sustained" — sustained what? They sustained their lives; or, as the commentator explains, they obtained immortality. Although in this rik there are no words which explain the sense "obtained immortality", since in many riks it is said that the R̥bhus, formerly men, obtained divinity by their good works, it seems proper that the commentator here too has taken that same idea and explained the word adhārayanta as above. On this the rik states this sense plainly.

विष्टी शमी तरणित्वेन वाघतो मर्तासः सन्तो अमृतत्वमानशुः ॥ (ऋ. सं. [१-११०-४]) viṣṭī śamī taraṇitvena vāghato martāsaḡ santo amṛtatvam ānaśuḡ

वहयः (vahnayaḥ) — camasādi-sādhana-niṣpādanena yajñasya voḍhāraḥ ṛbhavaḥ: because they made implements such as the camasa and so helped the sacrifice, these Ṛbhus are vahnayaḥ — voḍhāraḥ, "those who carry through the sacrificial work".

यज्ञियम् (yajñiyam) — yajñārhaṃ bhāgam: the share of havis offered to the gods in the sacrifice. Those who are to receive a share fit for the sacrifice must have honour and position among the gods; the Ṛbhus gained such honour. This matter is also supported in the rik

Grammar pages (pp. 40 lower half–43 upper), noted briefly. The Kannada treats: vahnayaḥ (vahi-śri-śru-yu-dru-gnā-tvaribhyo niḥ Uṇ. 4-[?], with nit carried over from the preceding sūtra [vījyājariviś-... niḥ; the print shows two versions of the Uṇādi sūtra]; vah + ni; the sūtra's nit is a doubtful word, which, according to the Kannada, is a slip of the printers of Ṛg. Saṃ. 3-[?]; the suffix has n so first-syllable accent by P. 6-1-197), abhajanta (at the start of the pāda, hence P. 8-1-18 bars the loss of accent, and P. 8-1-28 tiṇ atīnaḥ does not apply), sukṛtyayā (vibhāṣā kṛvṛṣoḥ P. 3-1-120 — kyap after kṛ and vṛṣ in the object-sense, optionally; kṛ + ya; hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk P. 6-1-71: kṛ-t-ya → kṛtya; kyap has k and p, so no guṇa [kṇiti ca P. 1-1-5]; su + kṛtyā — the bahuvrīhi śobhanaṃ kṛtyaṃ yasyāṃ bhajanakriyāyāṃ sā;

first-member accent by P. 6-2-1 would make su [accented on the first syllable by the Phiṭ rule upasargāś cābhivarjam] the only accented part; but nañsubhyām P. 6-2-172 gives the final member's end accent, which overrides it; the Kannada raises a doubt: kyap is pit, so the a is unaccented [anudāttau suppitau], and the root kṛ is accented on the ṛ by dhātoḥ P. 6-1-162, so kṛtya has the accent on kṛ, giving the first-syllable accent; in the bahuvrihi [by P. 6-2-119 ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi, 'a two-syllable word in the Veda takes first-syllable accent'] the final-member kṛtyā must be first-syllable accented; and though nañsubhyām is read in the sixth chapter, after ādyudāttaṃ dvyac, by vipraṭiṣedhe paraṃ kāryam nañsubhyām [which comes after] would win; but since ādyudāttaṃ dvyac chandasi is an exception to nañsubhyām, and a rule that applies in the case where the other is not yet applied [yena nāprāpte yo vidhir ārabhyate sa tasya bādhako bhavati] is the stronger, the accent of kṛtyā stands first-syllable; the second sūtra kṛñāḥ śaś ca P. 3-3-100 gives the feminine śa and kyap after kṛñ in the abstract sense [the ca takes in kyap]; hence kṛtyā, kriyā, kṛtiḥ — the Kannada notes that kṛtiḥ is not obtained by this sūtra but by striyāṃ ktin P. 3-3-94; ṭāp by ajādyataṣ ṭāp P. 4-1-4, with savarṇadīrgha; the instrumental ṭā → ā with āñ; ājjasor... P. 7-3-105 āṇ nadyāḥ... [as read, āṇo 'nāpaḥ? — the print gives ājjasor ...]: ā → ay... giving sukṛtyayā; the ending accented as svarita by P. 8-4-66), bhāgam (bhaj sevāyām; halas ca P. 3-3-121 ghaṇ; coḥ kuḥ P. 7-3-52 kutva; ata upadhāyāḥ P. 7-2-116 vṛddhi; the accent by ñnityādir nityam would be first-syllable, but karṣātvato ghaṇ anta udāttaḥ P. 6-1-159 gives end accent; hence bhāgam is end-accented), and yajñiyam (yajñam arhati; yajña-ṛtvigbhyām ghakhaṇau P. 5-1-71: gha after yajña, khaṇ after ṛtvij; yajña + gha; āyaneyīnīyiaḥ phadḥakhachaghām pratyayādīnām P. 7-1-2 gives iya for gha; yasyeti ca P. 6-4-148; suffix accent: yajñiyam). ||8|| (A crowded run; outline only; sūtra numerals as read from small print; pointers only.)

Close of Sūkta 20.

The sūkta ends at the head of p. 43, with the last line of the Rik 8 grammar; no large colophon is printed. The twenty-first sūkta begins on the same page.
