Venkata Rao

Piṭhike.

"In explaining the Ṛgveda with the meaning, translation and commentary, it is the method that has come down from the age of the Ārṣeya [ṛṣi-tradition] to state, at the head of every sūkta, the ṛṣi, the deity and the metre belonging to that sūkta, and its application (viniyoga). Following this, the commentator Sāyaṇācārya, at the beginning of every sūkta, gives the ṛṣi, deity and metre as they are in the Anukramaṇī, and states the application as it is stated in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra. Here, 'Anukramaṇī' means the Sarvānukramaṇī spoken by the sage Śaunaka. In it are set out, for each sūkta, the number of Ṛks, the names of the ṛṣis who are the seers of those Ṛks, the deity of the sūkta, the metre of the Ṛks, and so on. Besides this Anukramaṇī there are other Anukramaṇīs — the Ārṣeyānukramaṇī, which gives the matters concerning the ṛṣis, the Chandonukramaṇī, which gives the matters concerning the metres, and others. Following these, the commentator describes the ṛṣi, deity and metre of the sūkta. The order of application he gives according to the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra. The matters of ṛṣis, Anukramaṇīs, Śrauta-sūtras and so on we have already described in the Pūrvapiṭhikā chapter in the first part of the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā; but it will be right, in the interest of readers, to give a brief introduction here to the matter of metres in the present context. For the whole of the Ṛgveda is made up of mantras bound in metre. Unlike the Yajurveda and the like, it has no sentences in the form of prose. All the mantras in it, being subject to the rule of metre, are in a language of verse-form. Such mantras bound in metre are called ṛks. In these Ṛks there are many kinds and sub-kinds according to the number of syllables and the number of pādas (quarter-verses). Since the seers of the Vedic mantras are many, the variety seen in the metres is natural. In the book called Chandas by Piṅgala — famous as a Vedāṅga — the details of metres are set out, but this book is not counted as very ancient.

For in that book, together with the matters of Vedic metres, there are also the descriptions of the metrical characteristics of the verses used in later Sanskrit; therefore the book is not very authoritative. In this matter, since the book called Sarvānukramaṇī, composed by the great sage Kātyāyana, is ancient and authoritative, we give here a brief account of the metres of the Ṛgveda on the basis of the matters stated in it.

In putting the metres in order, only the number of syllables in them is counted. Differences among syllables, such as long, short, conjunct, have no importance. The number of syllables alone is the chief means of determining the order of the metres. In this matter the sage Kātyāyana says:

यदक्षरपरिमाणं तच्छन्दः ।

yad akṣaraparimāṇam tac chandaḥ — "That which is a measure of syllables is the metre." (as printed; the Sanskrit sentence is short and legible; the source it is quoted from is not named on the page).

original p. ii

"Although the chief metres are seven, according to the number of syllables there can be counted fourteen chief metres. The other metres are sub-divisions of these chief metres. The names of the chief metres and the number of syllables in them are given below:

No.	Metre	Syllables	No.	Metre	Syllables
1	Gāyatrī	24	8	Atijagatī	52
2	Uṣṇik	28	9	Śakvarī	56
3	Anuṣṭup	32	10	Atiśakvarī	60
4	Bṛhatī	36	11	Aṣṭi	64
5	Pañkti	40	12	Atyaṣṭi	68
6	Triṣṭup	44	13	Dhṛti	72
7	Jagatī	48	14	Atidhṛti	76

"Of these, the Gāyatrī metre has three pādas, and in each pāda eight syllables. Therefore in all, twenty-four syllables for the Gāyatrī metre. In this metre the first two pādas together are called the pūrvārdha (first half), forming one sentence, and the third pāda alone the uttarārdha (second half).

In the metre called Pañkti there are five pādas of eight syllables. In the first half there are two pādas and in the second half three pādas. In the Śakvarī metre there are seven pādas of eight.

In the metres beginning with Uṣṇik there are four pādas. Two pādas make one half. The number of syllables is in the same way [eight per pāda?] — ¹. In the last metre, Atidhṛti, none of these orders is seen: there are only seventy-six syllables. The detailed description of the number of syllables and the like of the metres has been given in the twelfth chapter of the Pūrvapīṭhikā of the first part of the Ṛg. Saṃ. (pages 221–231).

In the Ṛgveda the greater part consists of Ṛks in the Gāyatrī, Triṣṭup and Jagatī [metres]. As stated in the Chandonukramaṇī composed by the sage Śaunaka, the number of the different metres and Ṛks in the Ṛgveda (the Śākala recension) is as follows —" (the passage breaks off here; the next printed page is iv; see the note above).

² "...in a pāda, if one syllable is short, it is called nicṛt; if it is in excess, bhurik. Likewise, if two syllables are short it is called virāt, if in excess svarāt. In some contexts a conjunct is counted as two syllables according to the order of pronunciation. In the first pāda of the famous Gāyatrī mantra, which is a Ṛk of the Gāyatrī metre, tat savitur vareṇyam, there are only seven syllables, instead of eight. In order to make this good, some think that the conjunct

1. the print reads 'in the same manner'; the table gives 28 and 32 for the first two, so the pādas of the Uṣṇik are 8 + 8 + 12 in the Ṛgveda's usual form; the author does not say this here

2. Resuming mid-sentence.

ṇyam at the end of the pāda contains two syllables, ṇi + aṃ [i.e. vareṇyam]. Since such elisions are needed, the order of the number of syllables is not seen to be observed so strictly. Therefore, since the Gāyatrī mantra has only [23 [?]] syllables, it is called a Ṛk of the nicṛd-gāyatrī metre. Likewise, if a Ṛk of the Gāyatrī metre has one syllable in excess, it is called bhurig-gāyatrī. And in the Pañkti metre, by rule there are forty syllables. If two syllables are short — that is, if a Ṛk of the Pañkti metre has only [38 [?]] syllables — it is called virāt-pañkti; and if two syllables are in excess — that is, if there are [42 [?]] syllables — it is called svarāt-pañkti. As we have said before, the detailed account of the metres was given in the [twelfth [?]] chapter of the Pūrvapīṭhikā of Ṛg. Saṃ. Part [1 [?]].

As seen in the table above, Ṛks of the Triṣṭup metre are many in the Ṛgveda — there are [4253 [?]] Ṛks — so it may be said that this Triṣṭup metre is used most. In later Sanskrit too, the Anuṣṭup metre of [32] syllables has pre-eminence. The many books such as the Purāṇas are written in this Anuṣṭup metre. Following the order of the Vedic metres, with some changes, many metres have been constructed in later Sanskrit. For instance, following the Anuṣṭup metre of [32] syllables, the Anuṣṭup metre of 32 [as printed twice] syllables; following the Triṣṭup metre, with pādas of eleven syllables, the metres called Indravajrā and Upēndravajrā; following the Jagatī metre, with pādas of twelve syllables, the metre Vaṃśastha; and following the Śakvarī metre, the metre Vasantatilakā, have been constructed.

In the combination of syllables of the Anuṣṭup metre, because there is no very strict rule, this metre is used in many modern Sanskrit compositions. In this metre there are four pādas, and in each pāda eight syllables. The seventh syllable of the second and fourth pādas must be short. Likewise the fifth syllable of the first and third pādas must be short. If only this much holds, this metre-composition is possible. There is no need to follow further rules. Therefore this metre is used especially.

The Gāyatrī and other metres described above are very ancient. Even in the Ṛgveda age, the very ancient time, the seers praised the deities in sentences bound in metres, that is, in Ṛks themselves, as may be seen in many Ṛks of the Ṛgveda —" ³

3. Digits read from a 230-dpi enlargement: the syllable-counts "23", "38", "42" and the Triṣṭup total "4253" and the chapter/part numbers are small Kannada numerals read with doubt; none is confirmed. The Triṣṭup total is as the Kannada digits seem to read, i.e. four thousand, two hundred and fifty-three, and is quoted from the missing table's context.

Bṛhaspati the Bṛhatī metre, and from Mitra and Varuṇa the Virāt metre. And since the Triṣṭup metre was discovered by Indra, it is seen that by that very metre the seers especially praised Indra. Likewise the Viśvedevas created the Jagatī metre. The priests who do Sāman singing use the Śakvarī metre especially. On this matter —

ॠचां त्वः पोषमास्ते पुपुष्वान् गायत्रं त्वो गायति शक्वरीषु ।

ṛcāṃ tvaḥ poṣam āste pupuṣvān gāyatraṃ tvo gāyati śakvarīṣu | (R. Saṃ. 10-71-11) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "One sits, thriving in the growth of Ṛks; another sings the Gāyatra in the Śakvarī [verses]."

yac chakvarīṣu bṛhatā raveṇendre śuṣmam adadhātā vasiṣṭhāḥ | (R. Saṃ. 7-33-4 [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "When, with the Śakvarī [verses], with great sound, the Vasiṣṭhas placed vigour in Indra." ⁴

— these Ṛks support this meaning. Therefore it is clear that the Gāyatrī and other metres have been in use from very ancient times.

To publish in simple Kannada language, with explanation, this Ṛgveda Saṃhitā — most ancient, most profound, most extensive, the root of all the sciences — is not an easy task. Yet with the high aim that learned people and common folk alike may gain growth of knowledge through such a great work and become worthy of the grace of God, the lord of the Karnāṭaka throne, patron of Vedic learning, himself a scholar, beloved of his subjects, devoted to God, Śrī Jayacāmarājendra Wodeyar Bahadur, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., the great ruler, supports this publication, which requires much wealth, by his generous patronage — this must be said to be the Sense: "(the metre is) Pañkti; the deity is Indra, by the rule of 'no (other) assignment' (anādeśa-paribhāṣā). On the fifth day of the Prṣṭhya (ṣaḍaha) this sūkta is used in the Niṣkevalya-śāstra; so it is stated in the sūtra: 'predaṃ brahma, indro madāya, satrā madāsaḥ — the Niṣkevalya' (Āśv. 7-12 [?]). In the Ārambhaṇīya on the twenty-fourth day (cāturviṃśika), at the midday pressing, the first triad indro madāya is an optional stotriya in the śāstra of the Brāhmaṇācchamsin; in the section 'for the hotrakas' it is stated: 'indro madāya vāvṛdhe made made hi no dadīḥ' (Āśv. 8-4 [?]). In the Mahāvrate, in the right [uttara] wing of the Niṣkevalya, the one Ṛk indro madāya is to be recited; likewise it is stated in the fifth Āraṇyaka: 'indro madāya vāvṛdha — the pañkti, the sūdohās' (Aitareya Āraṇyaka 5-3-3 [?])."

Anuvāda (Kannada): "In the thirteenth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala, seven sūktas have been completed so far, and the eighth, Indro madāya, begins. It has nine Ṛks. In the Anukramaṇikā it is said 'indro nava' (Anu. 13-[2] [?]); the ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama, the son of Rahūgaṇa. As said before, this sūkta also is in the pañkti metre; the deity is Indra. In the Niṣkevalya-śāstra mantras on the fifth day of the Prṣṭhya sacrifice this sūkta has application, as is explained by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra 'predaṃ brahmendro madāya satrā madāsa iti niṣkevalyam' (Āśv. [7-12] [?]). In the Ārambhaṇīya too, on the twenty-fourth day, at the midday pressing the priest called Brāhmaṇācchaṃsin may optionally recite the three Ṛks beginning indro madāya as the stotriya mantras, as explained in the section hotrakāṇām by the sūtra 'indro madāya vāvṛdhe made made hi no dadiḥ' (Āśv. [8-4] [?]). In the Mahāvrata one Ṛk, indro madāya, is to be recited in the Niṣkevalya-śastra mantras; this is indicated in the fifth Āraṇyaka of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka by the statement 'indro madāya vāvṛdha iti paṅktiḥ sūdohāḥ' (Ai. Ā. [5-3-3] [?])." ⁴ Sense: "Vṛtrahā — the slayer of Vṛtra, the encloser, the cloud that holds back rain, or the asura; or, the slayer of enemies who enclose (us). Indra, for madāya (joy), and for śavase (strength — śavas is a name of strength), was strengthened (vavṛdhe) by the men (nṛbhiḥ), that is, the priests, leaders of the sacrifice: he became increased by praises in the form of stotras and śastras; for gods, once they have received strength through praise, grow further. That very Indra, so, in great (mahatsu) battles (ājiṣu) we call (havāmahe), to protect us; and also (uta īm) in a small (arbhe) battle we call him. "The priests always praise Indra, the slayer of Vṛtra, to give him satisfaction and to increase his strength. By those praises Indra's greatness grows. We call that Indra, praying for protection, in great battles and in small battles alike. May he protect us completely."

English Translation ⁷

"Indra, the slayer of Vritra, acquires vigour by means of men's praises (or is pleased by our praises) We invoke him in great battles as well as in little conflicts ; may he defend us in (all such) battles." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 81.1)

- मुख्याभिप्रायवु (chief intent) — "It is well known that the strength of the gods grows by the stotras and so on that men make. Therefore, even though Indra's strength is exceedingly great, let it grow still more by the praises we men make. Such an Indra, the destroyer of Vṛtra — whether in great battles or in small, trifling disturbances — we call by prayer for our protection. Let Indra protect us in small, great and all kinds of battles."

- मदाय हर्षार्थम् — "so that Indra may be gladdened; the meaning is that Indra is pleased by our prayer or praises."
- शवसे — "for the increase of Indra's strength. Among the twenty-eight names of strength beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ the word śavaḥ is read; so śavase means 'for strength'. The form śavase is the fourth-case singular of the s-ending word śavas."

- अर्भे — "arbha is a name of the small (alpa); it means 'small, minor'."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.1)⁸

- वावृधे — the root vṛdhu vṛddhau, bhṽādi; liṭ in the passive sense; the ātmanepada comes by "bhāvakarmaṇoḥ" (भावकर्मणोः, Pā. Sū. 1-3-13); by "liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya" (लिटि धातोर्नभ्यासस्य, Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) reduplication of the root; by "halādiḥ śeṣaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) only the va of the reduplicative remains; with e added: vavṛdhe. In the Saṃhitā the lengthening of the preceding reduplicative (vāvṛdhe) comes by "anyeṣām api dṛśyate" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137), which is optional-Vedic; the print remarks that in forms like tutujānaḥ the reduplicative lengthening is prescribed by "tujādīnām dīrgho 'bhyāsasya" (तुजादीनां दीर्घोऽभ्यासस्य, Pā. Sū. 6-1-7), and that this word might be included in that group, but then the lengthening would also have to be heard at the Pada-stage, which is not so; hence the lengthening is only in the mantra (Saṃhitā).

- नृभिः — the third-case plural of the stem nṛ; by "sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) the case-ending would take the udātta, but "na ca anyatarasyām" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-172 [?]) makes that optional for nṛ-stems before jhal-initial endings, so the udātta does not arise.
- हवामहे — the root hvedh spardhāyām śabde ca (ह्वेज्), bhvādi; laṭ, first person plural; with the preposition ni, abhi, upa, vi the saṃprasāraṇa of the root would come by "hvaḥ saṃprasāraṇam ca nyabhyupavipu" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[?]); here, "hva" being continued, by "bahulaṃ chandasi" the saṃprasāraṇa comes even without the preposition; the v → u, "saṃprasāraṇāc ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) gives the single prior form; hu+mahe; śap by "kartari śap"; guṇa by "sārvadhātukārdhādhātukayoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) o, then av for o before the a of śap: hava+mahe; by "ato dīrgho yañi" the lengthening (havā-mahe).

Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ; by "itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-97) the i of the leṭ ending tip is dropped; by "sib bahulaṃ leṭi" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-34) the sip affix of the stem; as sip has p-mark and ś-mark it takes Sense: "O hero, Indra, skilled in hurling (down) enemies: you are senya — fit for an army; (that is) you alone are like an army. - पराददिः — "you take as plunder and give (to us)"

- असि — "you are"
- दध्नस्य चित् — "even of a small one — your praiser"
- वृधः — "the one who causes increase"

- यजमानाय — "to the sacrificer"
- सुन्वते — "who presses Soma juice"
- शिक्षसि — "you give (the wealth desired). (Why?)"
- ते — "to you"
- वसु — "wealth"
- भूरि — "is abundant."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.2

"O valorous Indra, though you are alone, you are as strong as a great army. You plunder the enemies' wealth and give it to us. You cause even your small praiser to prosper. Since you have abundant wealth, you give the sacrificer who presses Soma juice and offers it the wealth he desires."

English Translation

"O Indra, you are a hero, you have the strength of an army ; you are the giver of much booty ; though your worshipper is humble you make him great and you bestow riches upon the sacrificer who offers you Soma-libations ; for your wealth is abundant." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगल्लु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 81.2)

- सेन्यः — senārhaḥ — "'You alone are a match for a whole army' — the sense is that the strength of an entire army is in Indra alone."
- भूरि — "bahala — much, abundant."
- परादिः — ḍudāñ dāne — "parasya ādātā: one who gives the wealth that is with the enemies; that is, because Indra, pleased by our praises, brings us victory in battle, the wealth of those enemies comes to us."
- दभ्रस्य — alpasya — "of a small one, of one who is not great, of one who is not famous. The word dabhra is read among the thirteen names of the small beginning ṛhan, hrasvaḥ." ⁹
- शिक्षसि — "since the word śikṣati is read among the ten names of the act of giving beginning dāti, dāśati, śikṣasi means 'you give' (Ni. [3-?] [?])."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.2) ¹⁰

- परादिः — the root ḍudāñ dāne, juhotyādi, ubhayapadī; parā is a preposition; by "ādgamahanajanaḥ kikināu liṭ ca" (आदृगमहनजनः किकिनौ लिट् च, Pā. Sū. 3-2-171) the affixes ki and kin come after ā-ending roots, ṛ-ending roots, and gam, han, jan in the Veda, and they have the properties of liṭ; here, because the root dā ends in ā, ki comes; the k of ki is dropped as a mark ("lakṣaṇa..."); since it has the liṭ property, reduplication of the root; "hrasvaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-59) shortens the reduplicative; with dadā + i, by "āto lopa iṭi ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-64) the ā is dropped before an ārdhadhātuka vowel-initial kit/ñit; being kṛdanta, it has the designation prātipadika; first-case singular.

9. the first words of the list, "ṛhan, hrasvaḥ", as read.

10. grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 9

- वृधः — the root vr̥dhu vr̥ddhau, bhvādi; some roots contain the causative sense within themselves though they have no ṇic — they are called antarbhāvitanyartha roots; the root vr̥dh is also to be taken thus here, according to the context, as 'the one who makes increase'. By "igupadhajñāprikiraḥ kaḥ" (इगुपधज्ञाप्रीकिरः कः, Pā. Sū. 3-1-135) the affix ka after a root with an ik penultimate, and after jñā, prī, kir ¹¹

original p. 9

Grammar of Rik 81.2, continued from p. 8:

- वृधः (continued) — "...upadhā means, by "alo 'ntyāt pūrva upadhā" (अलोऽन्त्यात्पूर्व उपधा, Pā. Sū. 1-1-65), the letter before the last. Here the r (an ik) is the upadhā, so the affix ka comes. The a is dropped (before ka); what remains is a; since ka is k-marked, "kñiti ca" (क्विति च, Pā. Sū. 1-1-5) prohibits guṇa for the r of the root."
- सुन्वते — the root suñ abhiṣave, svādi; after it, śatṛ by "laṭaḥ śatṛśānacāḥ aprathamāsamānādhikaraṇe" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-124); since ś is a mark, śnu (the stem-marker) comes; for the svādi group śnu; as kṛdanta it has the prātipadika designation. Placed before sunvat, fourth-case singular. Here, by "anudāttau suppitau" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) the case-ending would be anudātta, but the exception "śatur anumō nadyajādī" (शतुरनुमो नद्यजादी, Pā. Sū. 6-1-173) says that after a śatṛ without num (here there is no num) the case-endings beginning with a vowel after the final-udātta word, such as śas and the rest, are udātta; since here num is absent, by the affix-accent the final is udātta; hence the fourth-case singular (ñe), being vowel-initial, is udātta. || 2 ||

Sense: "Here is the legend: Gotama, son of Rahūgaṇa, was the purohita (house-priest) of the kings of the Kurus and Sṛñjayas. When those kings were in battle with their enemies, that ṛṣi praised Indra with this sūkta and prayed for the victory of his own side. His being their purohita is recorded by the Vājasaneyins: 'Gotama Rāhūgaṇa indeed was the purohita of both the Kurus and the Sṛñjayas.' — When (yad) ājayaḥ, battles, arise (udīrate — rise, come about), then wealth (dhanā) is placed (dhīyate, nidhīyate) for the bold one (dhṛṣṇave), who is the overcomer of enemies, the conqueror: the conqueror gets wealth — that is the sense. O Indra, in such battles, yoke (yukṣva) to your chariot your two bay horses (harī) which make the pride (mada) of the enemies fall (madacyutā). Having yoked them, strike (hanaḥ) whoever does not serve you; and whoever does serve you, place in wealth (vasau, dadhaḥ). So you are the cause of victory and defeat alike; therefore, O Indra, set us, your kings, in wealth." The grammatical tail (characterized, not transcribed in full): udīrate — root īra gatau, adādi, anudātta-it, so the root's accent remains; no nighāta since yad is connected; dhanā — ḍā substituted for the case-ending by "supāṃ suluk..."; yukṣva — root yujir yoge, with implied causative sense, the luk of the stem-marker by "bahulaṃ chandasi", lengthening in the Saṃhitā by "dvyaco 'tas tiṇaḥ"; hanaḥ — leṭ of han with sip and aṭ; the nighāta is barred (as read, the clause is compressed [?]); vasau — a change of gender; dadhaḥ — the leṭ of dadha dhāraṇe, parasmaipada by vyatyaya.

Sṛñjayas, as said above. The bhāṣyakāra says that the ṛṣi hints at this very matter in this Ṛk. And on the point that Gotama was purohita to the Kuru-Sṛñjayas they cite the Śruti sentence of the Vājasaneyins:

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.3) ¹⁴

- उदीरते — root īra gatau, adādi, ut the preposition (the preposition changes the sense of the root: "upasargeṇa dhātvarthaḥ balād anyañ pratīyate" is quoted as the saying); in the adādi class the luk of the stem-marker; since the root is anudātta-it, by "tāsyānudātenñidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam..." (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the laṭ-substitute with the sārvadhātuka designation is anudātta, and the root's accent remains (final-udātta); though the preceding sūtra enjoins anudātta here, nothing of it is heard; as an exception "yadvṛttān nityam" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66) begins: wherever there is a word with yat (yad), the tiñanta after it is not anudātta — here yad is read in the mantra (yad udīrata), so the yat-connection arises, and the anudātta is therefore barred.

14. grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 12

- धना — the second-case singular of dhana; "supāṃ suluk..." (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) puts ḍā for am; the ḍ is dropped as a mark, leaving ā; the final a of the stem is dropped before it; with the ā joined: dhanā.
- युक्ष्व — the root yujir yoge, rudhādi, ubhayapadī; it contains the causative sense of ṇic (the sense of ṇic is to be added to the root); loṭ in the passive/benedictive sense; śnam is the stem-marker for the rudhādi, but by "bahulaṃ chandasi" its luk arises; by "savābhyāṃ vāmau" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-91) the e of the se ending of the middle second person with ṇit becomes va; the j of the root becomes k by "coḥ kuḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30), and s after the k becomes ṣ; k + ṣ = kṣ; kṣ is not a separate letter; by "dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-135) the final a of a two-syllabled tiṇanta is lengthened in mantras, so here yukṣvā is heard long.
- हनः — the root han hiṃsāgatyoh, adādi, parasmaipadī; the leṭ appears in the sense of loṭ; when sip arises for the second person singular, as said before (3-1-34), the aṭ augment comes for sip; with hanas, as a hal follows, the s is dropped and ru and visarga arise (the print's reasoning is compressed [?]); the accent of the tiṇ: since ca, vā, hā, aha ...

Grammar of Rik 81.3, continued from pp. 11: ¹⁵

- हनः (continued) — "...since the initial letter has been dropped, the tiṇ that has been uttered first is not made anudātta, so that here by 'hanaś ca dadhakṣa...' (the word hanaḥ meaning 'you kill; you should kill', and the sense of ca being understood) the nighāta is considered barred, as the omission of ca (is to be understood). By this the anudātta accent does not arise."

15. The grammar of 81.3 is completed on the head of p. 13 with the entry for dadhaḥ.

- वसौ — the seventh-case singular; the word vasu is neuter in common use; by "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) there is a change of gender and the like in the Veda, so here it takes a masculine form.

- दध् — the root dadha dhāraṇe, bhvādi, ātmanepadī; the form is the second person singular of the leṭ. In the ātmanepada the form would have to be dadhasva; but, as said before, by "vyatyayo bahulam" a parasmaipada ending has come here instead of the ātmanepada; the stem-marker śap arrives; the s of śip becomes ru and visarga. || 3 ||

"Sacrifices make Indra mighty ; he is formidable to the enemies ; partaking of the sacrificial food, Indra has increased his strength ; he has a handsome chin and is pleasing in appearance. Special Topics of Rik 81.4, continued:

- अनुष्वधम् — "svadhā is food (Ni. [2-7] [?]); 'anuṣvadham = annam annam', as Yāska's statement runs (Ni. [2-7] [?]). Here food means the food in the form of the oblation. By taking this food Indra's strength grows."
- ऋष्यः — darśanīyaḥ — "of beautiful appearance."
- उपाकयोः — "upāka means 'near' (Ni. [2-7] [?]). Though the word upākayoḥ is an adjective of the word hastayoḥ, this word, together with the word vajram āyasam, is rightly connected with the sense 'he took in his hand, at his side (near him), the thunderbolt-weapon' of the whole sentence; or one might say that upākayoḥ means 'at the two sides', and hastayoḥ 'in the two hands' — the sense 'in the two arms'."

- आयसम् — "made of iron, or of the metal ukku (steel); the sense 'made of iron'. That Tvaṣṭṛ made Indra's thunderbolt of iron is clear from the Ṛk mahyaṃ tvaṣṭā vajram atakṣad āyasam (Ṛk. Saṃ. 10-[48]-[3] [?])."
- श्रिये वज्रं नि दधे — "'(for our) prosperity he held the thunderbolt' means: Indra, taking the thunderbolt in his hand, destroys our enemies and makes the wealth they have available to us — this is the intent."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.4)

- कृत्वा — the third-case ending follows the word kratu; since kratu is a ghi-designated word, by "ājo nāstriyām" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-120) the nā substitute would come for the third-case ending; but by the vārttika "jāsādiṣu chandasi vā vacanam" the substitutes for jas and the rest are optional in the Veda, so it does not apply here. Or one may say, relying on the yogavibhāga (splitting of a sūtra) in "ṣaṣṭhīyuktaś chandasi vā" (Pā. Sū. 1-4-9), that the optionality is stated: the yogavibhāga means to take one sūtra, according to the context, as two parts, in order to obtain the needed result, and to adopt a different sense; by dividing "chandasi vā" thus the sense becomes that all operations are optional in the Veda. Similarly, in the sūtra "bahulaṃ chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-39 [?]) they also state optionality. By taking the yogavibhāga the ghi-designation too is optional in the Veda, so nā does not occur here. When the case-ending is left as it is, the y-v [yaṇ] sandhi arises ¹⁹. ²⁰

20. This grammar paragraph is the least clear part of the page; sūtra numerals tentative [?].

- आयसम् — second-case singular. In the sense "its product", by "tasya vikāraḥ" (Pā. Sū. 4-3-134) the affix aṇ comes after a sixth-case word; since here the sense 'product of iron' holds, the affix aṇ is added to the word ayas; the ṇ of the affix is a mark; therefore, by "taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-117) when an affix with ñ or ṇ follows, the first vowel of the stem takes vṛddhi, so a becomes ā; by "āder udāttaś ca" [as read: "ādyudāttaś ca", Pā. Sū. 3-1-3] the affix-accent makes the end udātta; when the case-ending am follows, by "ami pūrvaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-107) the single prior form; the case-ending, though anudātta, by "anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161) — when the udātta is lost before an anudātta — makes the following anudātta take the udātta; so the udātta arises here.
- अनुष्वधम् — svadhāyām anu = anusvadam: by "avyayaṃ vibhaktisamīpa..." (Pā. Sū. 2-1-6) the avyayībhāva compound in the sense of the case-ending; by "samāsasya" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223) the compound takes the final-udātta, so it is final-udātta here. || 4 ||

- पप्रौ — the root prā pūraṇe, adādi, parasmaipadī; liṭ, third person singular. When liṭ follows, reduplication of the root: prā-prā; by "halādiḥ śeṣaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) only pā remains in the first part; by "hrasvaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-59) the reduplicative is shortened; in place of the third-person-singular tip of the liṭ, by "parasmaipadānām ṇalatusus..." (Pā. Sū. 3-4-82) ṇal; by "āto ṇalaḥ au" [as read: "āta au ṇalaḥ", Pā. Sū. 7-1-34] for a root ending in ā the ṇal following takes the substitute au. Here, as prā ends in ā, au in place of ṇal gives paprā+au; by "vṛddhir eci" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-88) the vṛddhi arises, so the form is made: paprau.
- पार्थिवम् — in the matter of the sūtra "dityadityādityapatyuttarapadān ṇyaḥ" (दित्यदित्यादित्यपत्युत्तरपदान्यः, Pā. Sū. 4-1-85) the vārttika "pr̥thivyā ṇāṇau" (पृथिव्या जाजौ) is begun: in the sense of 'belonging to it' the affix añ comes after the word pr̥thivī; by "taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ" the first-syllable ṛ takes vṛddhi; by "uraṇ raparaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-51) the ṛ → ār; by "yasyeti ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the ī of pr̥thivī is dropped before the taddhita affix; by "ñnityādir nityam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) the word, though ending in a ñ-affix, is ādyudātta.

- रजः — rajanti asmin gandharvādayaḥ — "in which Gandharvas and the rest move: rajas here means the sky (ākāśa); the divine beings, Gandharvas and others, move there; the path of the gods' movement is the sky. The root rañja rāge; the affix asun in the sense of adhikaraṇa. In rañj + asun the nasal of the root is dropped by the statement 'rajakarajanarajaḥsūpasamkhyānam' (Kā. 6-4-24 [?]). In the affix asun the as remains; with the affix joined, it is an s-ending word."

Grammar of Rik 81.5, continued from p. 18 (grammar page, noted briefly):

- बद्धे — the root badha bandhane, bhvādi; liṭ, ātmanepada, third person singular; when liṭ follows, reduplication of the root: badh+badh+e; by "halādiḥ śeṣaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-60) of the reduplicative only the initial consonant should remain; but since by "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) vyatyaya is accepted in the Veda — and as said before, all operations being optional by yogavibhāga — the remnant-rule did not operate here; for the dh of the reduplicative, by "jhalām jaś jhaśi" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-53) jastva gives d. By "ata ekahalmadhye 'nādeśāder liṭi" (अत एकहल्मध्येऽनादेशादेर्लिटि, Pā. Sū. 6-4-120), when liṭ is the cause, and no substitution has operated at the beginning, a root-vowel a between a single consonant on each side takes e and the reduplicative is dropped; since here the a of the root stands between a conjunct (dh-groups), the e and the loss of the reduplicative are not to be had. By "anudāttam sarvam apādātau" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-18), since the word stands at the beginning of the pāda, the nighāta arises not; the print mentions that the prohibition of nighāta is there.

- त्वान् — by "tad asyāsty asmin" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) the affix matup in the sense 'this has it' or 'it is in this'; but by the vārttika "matup-prakaraṇe yuṣmadasmadbhyāṃ chandasi sādṛśya upasaṅkhyānam" the affix matup comes in the Veda after yuṣmad, asmad in the sense of likeness also. When matup is added to yuṣmad here, the word yuṣmad up to m [ma-paryanta] is replaced by tva, by "pratyayottarapadayoś ca" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-98); tva+ad+mat; by "śeṣe lopah" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-90) the remainder after tva is dropped; by "mādupadhāyāś ca matorvo 'yavādibhyaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-9) the m of matup becomes v after a stem with m or a penultimate that is not yava etc.; by "ā sarvanāmnaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-91) the final of a pronoun before ḍṛk, ḍṛś, vatup is lengthened to ā, so tvā here; with u in the affix, the augment num arises for the case-ending of the sarvanāmasthāna; by "atvasantasya cādhātoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-14) the penultimate is lengthened; tvāvān+t+s: by "hal-nyābbhyo..." (Pā. Sū. 6-1-68) the su is dropped, then the final t by saṃyogāntalopa (which is asiddha in the kāṇḍa, so nalopa by "nalopah prātipadikāntasya", Pā. Sū. 8-2-7, does not arise).

Grammar of Rik 81.5, concluded:

- ववक्षिथ — the root vaha prāpaṇe, bhvādi; the san affix in the sense of desire; when san follows, by "sanyañoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-9) reduplication of the root; of the reduplicative only the initial remains; by "sani" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-79) the a of the reduplicative takes i — though that is obtained here too, by the yogavibhāga "vā chandasi" and following the dictum "sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante" the i-substitution is not made here; for vah+sa, by "ho ḍhaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-31) h becomes ḍh; by "ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-41) the ḍh becomes k before s; since the affix is san, the s after k becomes ṣ, and k+ṣ make kṣ. As vavakṣa ends in san, by "sanādyantā dhātavaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-32) it has the root-designation; for the liṭ, second person singular, the root, having many syllables, would take ām by "kāspratyayād ām amantre liṭi" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-35); but the exclusion amantre in the sūtra bars the ām in the Veda; when liṭ follows, reduplication would arise again, but "anabhyāsasya" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) prohibits it; for sip the substitute thal; since it is ārdhadhātuka with a val-initial, the augment iṭ would come to tha; the a of san is dropped by "ato lopaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-48).

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.6) ²⁴

- पराददाति — parā is a preposition; the root ḍudāñ dāne; of the juhotyādi class, the stem-marker ślu; since ślu follows, reduplication of the root, and the reduplicative is shortened; by "upasargāḥ kriyāyoge" (Pā. Sū. 1-4-59) the preposition has also the designation gati (Pā. Sū. 1-4-60). By "abhyastānām ādiḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-189), though the laṭ- substituted ending is an aniṭ and not vowel-initial, being sārvadhātuka the initial of the reduplicated stem is udātta when it follows; the two parts that have undergone the doubling prescribed by the sūtra of the "ṣaṣṭhādhyāya" are called abhyasta (by "ubhe abhyastam", Pā. Sū. 6-1-5); by this sūtra the initial udātta arises here. Since "tiṇ codāttavati" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-71) says that the gati before a tiṇanta having udātta is anudātta, here for the gati parā the initial udātta by the general sūtra "nipātā ādyudāttāḥ" is overruled and anudātta accent arises.

24. grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 24

- दाशुषे — the root dāśr dāne, bhvādi. By "dāśvān sāhvān mīḍhvāmś ca" (दाश्वान्सह्वान्मीढ्वाँश्च, Pā. Sū. 6-1-12) these three words are irregular forms (nipātana). The kvasu affix is prescribed for the root dāś; the prohibition of iṭ (the augment prescribed for val-initial) and the prohibition of reduplication for the root come from the nipātana itself. When the fourth-case singular is added to the word dāśvas, by "vasoḥ saṃprasāraṇam" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-131) a saṃprasāraṇa is effected on the aṅga ending in vasu, which is called bha, since the vowel-initial affix ne (of the ac-initial kind) follows; this saṃprasāraṇa is the ik letter that takes the place of the yaṇ; here the u substituted for v; before it the a, being an aṭ, by "saṃprasāraṇāc ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-108) takes the single prior form. In dāśsus+e, by "śāsivasighasīnām ca" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-60) the s in the i/ku-group context of śās, vas, ghas gets ṣ; so here the s of vas after the saṃprasāraṇa becomes ṣ; the form dāśuṣe.
- भक्षीय — the root bhaja sevāyām, bhvādi; by "vidhinimantraṇāmantraṇādhīṣṭasaṃpraśnaprārthaneṣu liṇ" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-161) the liṇ in the sense of prayer. The benedictive (āśīrliṇ) is given the ārdhadhātuka designation, but the potential (vidhiliṇ) is not, in the world; however, by "chandasy ubhayathā" the affixes prescribed in the section of roots obtain both designations in the Veda; so here the vidhiliṅ too has the ārdhadhātuka designation; the stem-marker śap that is prescribed for the sārvadhātuka does not come; for the first person singular, by "iṭo 't" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-106) at; by "liṅaḥ sīyutḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-102) the augment sīyutḥ for the liṅ; with bhaj+sīy+a, by "coḥ kuḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30) kutva, so the j becomes g; the g by carva becomes k; then bhak+sīya ²⁵

Grammar of Rik 81.6, continued from p. 23:

- भक्षीय (continued) — "...by 'khari ca' the k of bhak, together with the s, becomes kṣ (the sibilant after a k-class letter becomes ṣ by the rule of ṣatva because sīyutḥ is an augment (āgama) and takes the properties of the affix by the āgama maxim; so "ṣatva" comes after the kavarga as said before). The kṣ arises from k and ṣ, so the form bhakṣīya is complete. Because the affix is called ārdhadhātuka, the loss of the s of the liṅ, which would have to occur, does not occur. After the augment sīyutḥ, the liṅ is valādi ārdhadhātuka; but "ekāca upadeśe 'nudāttāt" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-10) prohibits iṭ: the sūtra means that an ārdhadhātuka beginning with a val consonant does not take iṭ after a root that is monosyllabic and anudātta by teaching; here the root bhaj is both, so iṭ does not come. By "āgamā anudāttāḥ", the augment sīyutḥ is anudātta, so the affix-accent (pratyayasvara), through the śīti-rule, remains as the udātta. By "samānavākye nighātayuṣmadasmadādeśā vaktavyāḥ" (the vārttika on Pā. Sū. 8-1-[?]) — the anudātta substitutes of yuṣmad/asmad occur in the same sentence — here, since the preceding word is not in the same sentence, no anudātta arises. ||6||

śāstra of the Brāhmaṇācchaṃsin, the triad beginning *made-made the hotrakas': 'made-made hi no dadīḥ surūpakṛtnum ūtaye' (Āśv.

8-4 [?]). — At each draught (made-made) of Soma, at each gladdening, that Indra, ṛjukratuḥ (of straight, honest action), dadiḥ — truly the giver of herds of cows (gavāṃ yūthā) — to us. O Indra, such a you, puru — many, śatā — in hundreds, that is, countless — vasu, riches: saṃ gr̥bhāya — take them up fully with both hands (ubhayāhastyā), to give to us; śíśīhi — sharpen us, make us possessed of keen understanding; rāyaḥ — wealth that lies in your hands, ā bhara — bring, give." The grammatical tail (characterized): dadiḥ — ki after ḍudāñ; yūthā — loss of śi by "śés chandasi bahulam"; gavāṃ — the prohibition of the udātta of the case-ending; gr̥bhāya — gr̥ha upādāne, the loṭ with hi, sāyac for sānac (Pā. 3-1-84 [?]); ubhayāhastyā — ḍyā for the third-case dual-ending, lengthening of the first member; śíśīhi — root śo tanūkarane, ślu, reduplicative i by "bahulam chandasi", ī for the root."

- मदेमदे — "(by drinking Soma) again and again full of delight"
- ऋजुक्रतुः — "Indra who performs honest sacrificial acts"
- नः — "to us"
- गवां यूथा — "herds of cows"
- ददिः हि — "(O Indra) do you not give?"
- पुरु — "abundant"
- शता — "of hundreds of kinds"
- वसु — "wealth"
- उभयाहस्त्या — "with both hands"
- सं गृभाय — "take fully"
- शिशीहि — "(our understanding) make keen"
- रायः — "wealth (in your hands)"
- आ भर — "bring and give."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.7 ²⁶

26. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 25

"Indra, filled with exceeding delight at every draught of Soma juice, and of honest sacrificial acts, will give us herds of cows. O Indra,

Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.7, continued from p. 25:

"...take up the abundant wealth, of hundreds of kinds, filling both hands, bring and give it to us. And make our understanding keen."

English Translation

"(Indra) the performer of pious acts is the giver of herds of cattle to us after being exhilarated [sic] with frequent drinking of our Soma ; take up, Indra, with both hands hundreds of wealth ; sharpen (our minds) ; procure us wealth." — as printed ("exhilarated" is a misprint [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 81.7)

- मदेमदे — "full of delight by the drinking of Soma. Since the word made is read twice, the sense is 'many times, or at every step full of delight'."
- ऋजुक्रतुः — "ṛju — truthful; kratu — one who has (does) action: that is, Indra is not one who goes back on his word; one who does good deeds alone, without a break."
- शिशीहि — "śo tanūkarāṇe — 'make our understanding sharp; make us possessed of understanding'."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.7) ²⁷

- ददिः — the root ḍudāñ dāne, juhotyādi; by "ādṛgamahanajanaḥ kikināu liṭ ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-171) the affix ki, since the root ends in ā; it takes the properties of liṭ, so reduplication of the root and shortening of the reduplicative; since kit (an affix with k) follows, by "āto lopa iṭi ca" the ā is dropped; the affix-accent arises.

- यूथा — second-case plural. By "jaśśasoḥ śiḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-20) śi arises in place of the first/second plural endings as a whole-substitute; by "śeś chandasi bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-70) the śi is optionally dropped in the Veda.
- गवाम् — by "sāvekācas ṛṭiyādir vibhaktiḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) the sixth-case ending would take the udātta; but as an exception the sūtra "nagośvan-sāvavarṇarāḍaṅkruṅkrdbhyaḥ" [as read: "nagośvansāvavarṇarāḍaṅkruṅkrdbhyaḥ", Pā. Sū. 6-1-182] is begun: the actions stated before do not occur for these words. So it did not become final-udātta.

Grammar of Rik 81.7, continued from p. 26: ²⁸

- गृभाय — the root graha upādāne, kryādi. By "kryādibhyaḥ śnā" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-81) the stem-marker śnā would come to the kryādi roots; the loṭ, second person singular, sip with the substitute hi; when hi follows, śnā would arise, but by "chandasi śāyajapi" (छन्दसि शायजपि, Pā. Sū. 3-1-84) the substitute śāyac arises; the āya of śāyac remains; with grbhāya+hi, by "hṛgrahor bhaś chandasi" the h of the root gets bh; the a before hi ... by "ato heḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105) the luk of hi; so grbhāya remains.
- उभयाहस्त्या — ubhau ca tau hastau ca ubhayahastau. After the word ubhayahasta the third-case dual: ubhayahasta+bhyām; by "supāṃ suluk-pūrvasavarṇa..." (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the case-ending bhyām gets ḍyā as substitute; the ḍ is a mark; since it is ḍit, the ṭi of the stem ubhayahasta (the final a) is dropped; by "anyeṣām api dṛśyate" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137), though no cause is present, the first member is lengthened — so here the first member ubhaya is lengthened and gives ubhayāhastyā. The case-ending, though anudātta by "anudāttau suppitau", takes the udātta here by the udāttanivṛtti accent; by "samāsasya" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-223) the compound is final-udātta; since the anudātta is lost before it, by "anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161) the case-ending that has the anudātta takes the udātta: ubhayāhastyā stays final-udātta.

- वसु — the second-case plural of vasu; by "supāṃ suluk..." the luk of śas.
- शिशीहि — the root śo tanūkarāṇe, divādi; loṭ, second person singular, hi. From the divādi class śyan would come; relying on "bahulaṃ chandasi" and "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) by which stem-markers change in the Veda, here ślu has come instead of śyan. By "ādeca upadeśe 'ṣiti" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-45) ā for the root ending in an ec by teaching; with ślu following, by "ślau" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) reduplication of the root: śa+śā+hi; "bahulaṃ chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-78) — it continuing from the preceding sūtra — the reduplicative takes i in the Veda; by "ihalyaghoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-113) the ā of śā and of the reduplicative becomes ī because the sārvadhātuka affix, being kit or ñit, follows: śīśīhi; ...

Grammar of Rik 81.7, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- शिशीहि (concluded) — "...the whole that has taken doubling is called abhyasta. Hi has the sārvadhātuka designation and is a val-initial affix; although it comes in place of sip, it is ñit because of the declaration 'ap-it' ... hence for the ā of the root the ī comes, giving śísīhi. Since it stands at the head of the pāda, by the exclusion 'apādāda' the nighāta is prohibited and so the whole is not anudātta."

- रायः — the second-case plural of the word rai; by "ūḍidaṃ padādyap-pum-rai-dyubhyaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171), after those words that are monosyllabic and final-udātta, a case-ending without the sarvanāmasthāna designation is udātta; so here śas gets the udātta; the rest is anudātta, since the śit [affix-accent] rule applies. ||7||

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.8)

- मादयस्व — the root mada tr̥ptiyoge, curādi; by "satyāpapāśa..." (Pā. Sū. 3-1-25) the affix ṇic in its own sense; "ṇicaś ca" (णिचश्च, Pā. Sū. 1-3-74) — though a ṇic-ending root would be ubhayapadī, this root is specially declared ātmanepadī only (as it is taught with akaḥ-class, [the rule] "ākasmīyā" [as read]); by "sanādyantā dhātavaḥ" the root-designation; with ṇic following, lengthening of the penultimate by "ata upadhāyāḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-116); after the ṇic-ending stem, loṭ, second person singular middle: māda+i+sva; with the stem-marker śap, guṇa for the i and ay replacement; by "tāsyānudātenñidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the stem-marker's consonant and the p are marks, so (the print says) it is not a-upadeśa [as read]; since the root has no upadeśa after (it) the lasārvadhātuka is anudātta; then the accent of the ṇic alone remains, since it is śīt-accented.

- ससृज्महे — the root sṛja visarge, divādi; by "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85), in place of śyan, the stem-marker ślu; laṭ, first person plural; when ślu follows, reduplication of the root; the remainder of the reduplicative (sa): sasṛjmahe; since the affix is śīt, the affix-accent arises; the tiñanta has the full anudātta by "..."; but "chandasy anekam api sākāṅkṣam" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-35): several tiñanta verbs that are sākāṅkṣa (mutually dependent) in the Veda are not anudātta; "even by the word hi a single tiñanta is not to be made nighāta"; here, since hi is connected with the preceding vidma, the total anudātta is barred. || 8 ||

- अर्यः — "(you,) the lord of all"
- ख्यः हि — "you indeed know"
- तेषाम् — "of those (who do not sacrifice)"
- वेदः — "the wealth"
- नः — "to us"
- आ भर — "bring and give."

30. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 31

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 81.9

"O Indra, all these sacrificers, who belong to you, cause the oblation that all may enjoy to grow fully. You, lord of all, have seen the wealth that is among the people who do not sacrifice and offer no oblations. Bring the wealth of those who make no sacrifice to us, who use it for sacrifice, so that it may be put to purposeful use."

English Translation

"O Indra, these creatures (men) cherish the libation that may be desired by all ; lord of all, you know what riches these men who make no offerings, possess ; bring their wealth to us." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 81.9)

- ते जन्तवः — "Here the word jantavaḥ conveys the sense 'creatures' but it must be taken as 'men'. Te means 'your', or any sense of ete ('these') may be given: 'people who are sacrificers and others who offer oblations to you', is the intent."
- पुष्यन्ति — "poṣayanti — they cherish; that is, they seek."
- वार्यम् — sarvaiḥ saṁbhajanīyam — "what is desired by all; what all seek."
- ख्यः वेदः — "khyā prakathane, vida jñāne — these two words convey the same sense (are synonyms) [as read; the print's note is compressed]."
- अदाशुषाम् — "of those who do not give, that is, of those who do not make offerings of oblation and the like to Indra; of those who do not perform sacrifices."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 81.9) ³¹

- ख्यः — the root khyā prakathane, adādi; it is also in the sense of seeing. In the Veda the luṇ; by "luṇlaṇlṛṇkṣv aḍudāttaḥ" ... "luṇlaṇliṭaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the three lakāras come in the Veda in every tense because the sense of the root is connected, so the luṇ here is in the sense of the present; when the second person singular is meant, the affix sip arises; by "cli luṇi" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-43) cli in the luṇ; ³²

original p. 33

Grammar of Rik 81.9, concluded:

- ख्यः (concluded) — "...the cli is not replaced by aṇ; for cli, by "asyati-vakti-khyātibhyo 'ṇ" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-52) the substitute aṇ arises; khyā+a+s, by "āto lopa iṭi ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-64) the ā of the root is dropped; in the luṇ the aṭ augment for a root beginning with a consonant would arise; but by "bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) in the Veda, even where there is no mā connection, the augments aṭ and āṭ do not come to the root; so here aṭ does not arise even without mā. By "hi ca" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-34) the tiṇanta connected with hi is not entirely anudātta; here, therefore, the total-anudātta that would arise by "tiṇ atinaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) does not arise." || 9 ||

Sense: "Upo ṣu — the ninth sūkta (of the thirteenth anuvāka), of six Ṛks; the ṛṣi is Gotama; deity Indra; the last Ṛk is in jagatī, the first (five) in pañkti. It is also in the Anukramaṇī: 'upo ṣu — six, ending in jagatī'. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika (by indication). In the Ṣoḍaśin-śastra the first (Ṛk) and two Ṛks beginning susandrśam are applied. It is stated in the section beginning atha śoḍaśī: 'upo ṣu śṛṇuhī giraḥ, and susandrśam tvā vyaṃ maghavan — one, and the two pañktis' (Āśv. 6-2 [?])."

Anuvāda (Kannada): "Upo ṣu — this sūkta is the ninth in the thirteenth anuvāka. It has six Ṛks. The ṛṣi is Gotama. The deity is Indra. The metre is pañkti; only the last Ṛk is in the jagatī metre. The application is laiṅgika. In the special śoḍaśin soma-sacrifice the first Ṛk and the two Ṛks susandrśam and sa ghā taṃ vṛṣaṇam are applied when the pañkti Ṛks are recited in the śāstra mantras. This is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the section atha śoḍaśī by the sūtra 'upo ṣu śṛṇuhī giraḥ susandrśam tvā vyaṃ maghavann ity ekā dve ca pañktī' (Āś. [6-2] [?])." ¹ come near and hear well (upo su śṛṇuhi). Do not be atathā iva — different, opposite to what you were before; as you have been* disposed to favour us before, so be (now) of the same kind. And further, when you make us (karaḥ = karoṣi) possessed of sūnṛta — speech that is pleasing and true — in the form of praise, then (āt) you ask (arthayāse), you request those (praises) — you accept the praises we have offered. Therefore, O Indra, yoke quickly (nu kṣipram yoja) your two bays (harī) to the chariot." The grammatical tail — a long scholastic argument, characterized rather than transcribed: śṛṇuhi (hi not dropped by the vārttika); atathā iva — kvip (Kā. 3-1-11 [?]), the first member keeps its accent; karaḥ — the luṇ of kṛ with aṇ replacing cli; the discussion whether the root should be read in the bhvādi class and why śap by vyatyaya in the laṇ is not needed; the conclusion that the form is explained by the vyatyaya of the laṇ and luṇ being interchanged in the Veda ("chandasi luṇlaṇḍitaḥ"); arthayāse — artha yācñāyām, curādi, ātmanepādī, the leṭ with aṭ; yoja — ṇic-ending, ṇilopa, lengthened in the Saṃhitā by "dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ".⁴

- शृणुहि — the root śru śravaṇe, bhvādi; loṭ, second person singular, with hi for sip; by "śruvaḥ śr ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-74) the root takes the substitute śr and the stem-marker śnu takes the place of śap; here, in śṛṇuhi, by "utaś ca pratyayād asaṃyogapūrvāt" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-106) the hi following an u-ending affix (not preceded by a conjunct) would be dropped (luk); but by the vārttika "utaś ca pratyayāc chandasi vāvacanam" the optionality is stated, so the hi is not dropped here.
- अतथा इव — tathaiva ācarati, anantaram ācarati ("he acts just so") — in this sense the verb tathāti is formed; "sarvaprātipadikebhyaḥ kvib vā vaktavyaḥ" (the vārttika, Kā. 3-1-11 [?]) — kvip comes after all stems in the sense 'acts like it'; since kvip is added in the sanādi group, the stem takes the root-designation; strīyām ktin — under this heading, by "apratyayāt" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-102) the affix a (a kṛt affix) comes after a root ending in a pratyaya; it ends in a, so ṭāp; na tathā iva atathā iva ("not acting so"); by "tatpuruṣe tulyārtha..." (Pā. Sū. 6-2-2) the accent of the first member remains for the indeclinable-first-member compound.

10. grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 38

- कः — the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; luñ, second person singular; cli after luñ, for which sic would be the substitute; here, by "kṛmṛḍruhibhyaś chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-59) the substitute añ for cli; by "vyatyayo bahulam" the guṇa to the root, though añ is ñit; by "bahulaṃ chandasy amāṇyoge 'pi" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come even without mā; kar+a+s — ru and visarga: karaḥ. Here one may doubt that the final should be udātta because añ replaces cli ... (the print's scholastic discussion is long: it asks whether the root kṛ's śap-form is by vyatyaya in the lañ, whether "ḍukṛñ karaṇe" is read in the bhvādi class, and answers that the form karat, karati in Pāṇini's sūtra "kaḥ karat karatikṛdhikṛtapeṣu sadite" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-50) shows the root is only in the Veda; the discussion is characterized, not transcribed.)¹¹

Grammar of Rik 82.1, continued from p. 37:

- कः (concluded) — "...the argument closes with: 'the form karati — Gosvara, the author of the Nyāsa, explains the śap by vyatyaya'; the sūtra is also counted among the Vedic ones, so this root is not read in the bhvādi. There is another proof as well: karat, karati and the like are accounted for by

11. continues on p. 38

'kṛmṛḍṛruhibhyaś chandasi', which enjoins añ for the root kṛ; otherwise that enjoining of añ would be pointless. The doubt that the luñ and lañ differ in sense and so the form should be made in the luñ only is answered by 'chandasi luñlanliṭaḥ' (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6): since in the Veda the luñ, lañ and liṭ are enjoined together, no difference of sense arises. In this way the author sets aside the doubt about the root's status; the matter is settled by "vyatyayo bahulam".¹²

- अर्थयासे — the root artha yācñāyām, curādi; because it is specially enjoined to be ātmanepadī only ("ākusmāt ātmanepadinaḥ"), roots having ñic take only the ātmanepada affixes; leṭ, second person singular; by "leṭo 'dāṭau" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ for the tiñ of the leṭ; stem-marker śap; guṇa and ay replacements.
- योज — the root yujir yoge, rudhādi; in the causative sense, by "hetumati ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-26) the affix ñic; with ñic, by "pugantalaghūpadhasya ca" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) guṇa of the penultimate; the ṇyanta form yoji has the root-designation by "sanādyantā dhātavaḥ"; in the sense of command, loṭ second person singular with the substitute hi; śap; "chandasy ubhayathā" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-117) gives śap the ārdhadhātuka designation; yoji+a+hi, by "ṇer aniṭi" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51) the elision of ṇi, since an aniṭ ārdhadhātuka follows; by "ato heḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105) the dropping of hi after a; yoj+a; the final a of a tiñanta of two syllables is lengthened in the mantra by "dvyaco 'tastiṇaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-135): yojā.

Sense (as far as the page goes): "O Indra, the sacrificers ate (akṣan) the food given by you; having eaten, they were gladdened (amīmadanta) and became satisfied. Priyāḥ — their own beloved (bodies?) they shook (adhūṣata, akampayan): unable to speak from the excess of tasting the savour, they made their bodies tremble. ॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 82.2

"O Indra, your devotees, the sacrificers, having eaten the food given by you, were fully satisfied. And they showed their exceeding delight by the shaking of their bodies — that is, they swayed their heads as a sign of delight. The sacrificers, self-radiant and wise, have praised you with a praise that is wholly new and excellent. To hear that praise, yoke your horses to the chariot and come, carefully and kindly."

English Translation

"Your worshippers have eaten the food which you had given and they are satisfied with it ; they have expressed their satisfaction by the movements of their bodies. Self-inspired and wise men have glorified you with commendable praises ; therefore, Indra quickly yoke your horses." — as printed.

- अक्षन् — ada bhakṣaṇe — "having eaten."
- अधूषत — atiśayitarasāsvādanena vaktum aśaknuvantah śarīrāṇi akaṃpayan — "'unable to speak because of the excess of the savour, they made their bodies shake'. Since the food that Indra gave is very tasty, the sense is that they shook their bodies, or their heads, to show their delight and satisfaction on eating it. In the practice of the world, when we are listening to music and the like, the delight that arises in our minds, which we express in words..." ¹⁶

"...in place of expressing it by speech, we express our delight by shaking the head; this is common. The same is to be understood here too."

- स्वभानवः — svāyattadīptayaḥ — "'those who are self-radiant' means: those who grasp everything by their own intellect; those of much intellect, those of sharp intellect."

- अक्षन् — the root ada bhakṣaṇe, adādi; luṇ, third person plural; when luṇ or san follows, by "luṇsanor ghasḷ" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-37) the root ad is replaced by ghasḷ; the ḷ is a mark; by "cli luṇi" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-43) the stem-marker cli comes in the luṇ, for which, by "mantre ghasa-hvara-ṇaśa-vṛda-..." (Pā. Sū. 2-4-80) the luk in the mantra; for the luṇ plural ending jhi, by "jher jantaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-3) the substitute ant; by "itaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-100) the final i is dropped, leaving an; by "sārvadhātukam apit" it is ñit; ghas+an: by "gamahanajanakhanaghasām lopah kñity anañi" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-98) the penultimate of the root is dropped before the vowel-initial kit/ñit affix; for the gh of ghas, by cartva (the khar following) k arises, and by "śāsivasighasīnām ca" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-60) the s after that k-class letter (of these roots) becomes ṣ, so k+ṣ = kṣ; the augment aṭ comes because luñ follows; being an augment, it is udātta: akṣan, initial-udātta.

- अमीमदन्त — the root mada tr̥ptiyoge, curādī; since it is read in the ākusmīya group it is regularly ātmanepadī; ñic in its own sense; luñ, third person plural, the affix jha whose jh is replaced by ant; mad+i+ant: with luñ following, the stem-marker clī that would arise generally is replaced by cañ by "ñisridrusrubhyaḥ kartari cañ" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-48); madi+i+a+nta: by the ñic as cause, lengthening of the penultimate of the root; by "ner aniṭi" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-51) the ñi dropped before cañ; māda+a+anta; by "ṇau cañy upadhāyā hrasvaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-1) the penultimate of the aṅga is shortened; since cañ follows, by "cañi" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-11) doubling of the root; with the remnant of the hal-initial, mumad+a+anta; by "sanvallahuni cañpare 'nagloṇe" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-93) ...¹⁸

Grammar of Rik 82.2, continued from p. 41:

- अमीमदन्त (concluded) — "...since cañ follows, sanvadbhāva comes; with sanvadbhāva, by "sanyataḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-79) the i that would come to the reduplicative with san following, comes here too, for the reduplicative; by "dīrgho laghoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-94) it is lengthened (mīmad); with the augment aṭ: amīmadanta results."

18. continues on p. 42

- अधूषत — the root dhūñ kampane, svādi; luñ, third person plural; since there is no a after it, the jha is replaced by at [for jha in the ātmanepada]; the generally obtained cli is replaced by sic; by "vyatyayo bahulam" the guṇa of the light penultimate does not arise; since there is an ik before it, the s of sic becomes ṣ; with the augment aṭ the form adhūṣata is made. Here, by "chandasy ubhayathā" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-117) if the sic, being ārdhadhātuka, is also accepted as sārvadhātuka, then by "sārvadhātukam apit" (Pā. Sū. 1-2-4) it is ñit; then, since a ñit affix follows, "kñiti ca" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5) prevents guṇa — this other opinion may also be accepted. Or the root dhū vidhūnane, tudādi, which is also in the kuṭādi group: by "gāṅkuṭādibhyo 'ññin ñit" (Pā. Sū. 1-2-1) the following sic is ñit, and so is not guṇa-bearing, since no ñit-it arises; when the luñ is made in the passive sense of the root, the proper form arises; in the passive lakāra, by "bhāvakarmaṇoḥ" the ātmanepada arises; in this alternative too, the absence of guṇa results from the preceding sūtra.
- नविष्टया — the root ṇu stutau, adādi; the affix ṭṛc in the agent sense on this root. Since kartari continues, "nvul-ṭṛcau" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-133) enjoins it; here, since the sense is 'praise' (an instrument), a doubt arises how the agentive ṭṛc can come when praise is the instrument (karaṇa); but since in the Veda the kāraṇas are pradhāna in their own functions, there is no doubt of the agentive ṭṛc in the agent sense; with ṭṛc following, guṇa of the root; since it is ṇopadeśa the initial becomes n; after a ṭṛn-ending or ṭṛc-ending word, by "tuś chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-59 [?]) the affix iṣṭhan comes in the Veda, and īyasun; nav+ṭṛ+iṣṭha, by "turiṣṭhemeyaḥsu" [as read: "turiṣṭhemeyaḥsu", Pā. Sū. 6-4-154] — when iṣṭhan, imanic, īyasun follow, the ṭṛn/ṭṛc is dropped; so here, with iṣṭhan following, the ṭrc is dropped, giving naviṣṭha; when the feminine is intended, ṭāp; third-case singular gives the said form.

- मती — the third-case singular ṭā following; by "supāṃ suluk-pūrvasavarṇa..." (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the third-case ending gets the single prior long vowel; the root *man...*¹⁹

original p. 43

Grammar of Rik 82.2, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- मती (concluded) — "the root man... takes ktin by "striyāṃ ktin" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-94); the nasal is dropped by "anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kṛiti" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37), giving the word matī; by "ñnityādir nityam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-197) it would be initial-udātta, being n-ending; but in the mantra, by "mantre vṛṣeṣapacamanavidabhūvīrā udāttaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-96) the affix ktin is udātta for these (roots); so the accent of ktin is udātta; because of the śīti-rule it is final-udātta." || 2 ||

- वशान् — kāmayamānān anyān — "other sacrificers who desire you; that is, in order to go to the sacrificers."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 82.3) ²²

- वन्दिषीमहि — the root vadi abhivādanastutyoh, bhvādi; the benedictive liṅ (āśīrliṅ), first person plural. Since the root has the mark i, by "idito num dhātoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-58) the augment num arises. By "liṅaḥ sīyut" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-102) the augment sīyut for liṅ; by "liṅāśiṣi" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-116), the liṅ that comes in the sense of benediction takes the designation ārdhadhātuka, so here it is ārdhadhātuka; since sīyut has val-initial ārdhadhātuka liṅ, the augment iṭ comes; the y of sīyut is dropped by "lopo vyor vali" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-66), leaving vand+i+sīmahī. The rule of substitution (ādeśa-ṣatva) is applied, and the proper form results. Since the root vad is anudātta-it by teaching, one might doubt that the liṅ would be anudātta by "tāsyānudāttenñidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186); there is no room for it, because, as said before, the āśīrliṅ has the ārdhadhātuka designation and so is not lasārvadhātuka; so no anudātta accent arises. By "ādyudāttaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-3) the affix has the initial udātta accent. "Tiṅ atinaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28): a tiṅanta after an atiṅanta is wholly anudātta; here that would make the affix-accent suppressed and the whole anudātta; but "āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-72) — the preceding āmantrita maghavan is not (counted as) present, so vandiṣīmahi stands at the head of the pāda; by the exclusion "apādādaḥ" the total anudātta is barred, and the word keeps the affix-accent.

Sense: "That Indra indeed (sa gha) tiṣṭhāti — mounts (adhi) that chariot that is vṛṣaṇam, a showerer of desires, govidam, a bringer of cows. (Because the preposition is heard, the sense is: 'let him mount the chariot' — let him ascend.) O Indra, the chariot which makes known (ciketati = jñāpayati) the vessel (pātra) called hāriyोजना — mixed with barley-meal (dhānā), filled with Soma — mount that chariot; and having mounted, yoke quickly your two bay horses." The grammatical tail: gha — lengthened by "ṛci tunughamakṣu..."; ratham — the locus (adhikaraṇa) of adhi-śīsthā-ās takes the karma-designation (Pā. 1-4-46); tiṣṭhāti — the leṭ with aṭ; ciketati — root kita jñāne, juhotyādi, ślu for śap; by the statement 'bahulaṃ chandasī' the prohibition of guṇa of a light penultimate before a pit affix does not apply to the reduplicated stem."

English Translation

"May he (Indra) ascend that chariot which shower blessings, gives cows and which contains vessel filled with the mixture of Soma-juice and barley flour ; Indra, quickly yoke your horses." — as printed.

- घ — "for the sake of the metre this syllable is lengthened in the Saṃhitā-pāṭha."

- हारियोजनम् — "hāri is Soma juice mixed with grain; hāri probably means barley (yava) grain. 'Soma juice mixed with the flour of that grain' is the sense. This word hāriyojana occurs in the Ṛgveda only in the Rk —

एवा ते हारियोजना सुवृक्तीन्द्र ब्रह्माणि गोतमासो अक्रन् ।

evā te hāriyojanā suvṛktīndra brahmāṇi gotamāso akran | (Rk. Saṃ. 1-[61]-[16] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "So, O Indra, the Gotamas have made for you well-turned prayers, (with the) hāriyojana (Soma)."

and nowhere else. There the bhāṣyakāra explains this word as 'haryor aśvayor yojanaṃ yasmin rathe saḥ; of him the owner, hāriyojanaḥ' — that is, he has explained hāriyojana in another way: 'having the chariot in which the two bays, Indra's two horses called hari, are yoked; indra' (as the sense 'the chariot of Indra'). In the Yajurveda, in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, too —

हरिरसि हारियोजनो हर्योः स्थाता वज्रस्य भर्ता पृश्नेः प्रेता तस्य ते देव सोमेष्टयजुषः

Saṃ. 1-[4]-[?] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "You are hari, the hāriyojana, the stander on the two bays, the bearer of the thunderbolt, the goer to Pṛṣni (...); of you, O god, whose Soma-offering and sacrifice are praised, whose recitation is praised in stoma and śastra, I take the cup that has the two bays; you (O grains) are the two bays' food; with Soma, to Indra, svāhā." ²⁵

25. The Taittirīya passage is read with doubt in several words; the reference is [?].

"...In the mantra the word hāriyojanaḥ, Bhaṭṭabhāskaramiśra explains in his bhāṣya:

हरिरसीति । सोम एवोच्यते । हरिरिन्द्रः स एव त्वमसीतीन्द्रात्मना सोमः स्तूयते । यद्वा हरिर्हर्ता अभिमतानां श्रेयसामाहर्ता त्वमसि । हारियोजनः हरिः अश्वविशेषः योजनो वाहनं यस्य स हारियोजनः इन्द्रः तस्य स्वभूतः हारियोजनः ऐन्द्रोऽसीत्यर्थः ।

Translation: "'Harir asi' — Soma alone is meant: Hari is Indra; 'you are that very (Indra)' — so Soma is praised in Indra's form; or: hari = the bringer (hartṛ) of the desired good things; you are such. Hāriyojanaḥ — hari is a particular horse; he whose conveyance (yojana) it is, is hariyojana, Indra; 'one belonging to him, hāriyojana': 'you are Indra's' — that is the meaning."

— so he has given the sense. Here he explains the word hāriyojana as referring to Soma. The chief sense is: for offering to Indra they prepare Soma juice mixed with barley-meal; it may be that such Soma juice, prepared for offering to Indra alone, is by convention called hāriyojana; for that reason, in the present Ṛk, it is proper to explain hāriyojanaṃ pātraṃ pūrṇam as 'a vessel filled with Soma juice prepared especially for Indra with barley-meal mixed in it'."

- रथम् — second-case singular. Although the meaning is 'let him sit in the chariot', by "adhiśīṅsthāsām karma" (Pā. Sū. 1-4-46) the locus of the three roots śīṅ, sthā, ās, when joined with the prepositions adhi, upa, ā ("the adhikaraṇa of the sense of the root and of the action"), takes the karma-designation; having obtained the karma-designation, by "karmaṇi dvitīyā" (Pā. Sū. 2-3-2) the second case arises.
- तिष्ठति — the root ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau, bhvādi; leṭ, third person singular, in the sense of vidhi; by "leṭo 'ḍāṭau" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ; when the stem-marker śap follows, by "pāghrādhmā..." (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) the root takes the substitute tiṣṭha.
- चिकेतति — the root kita jñāne, juhotyādi; leṭ, third person singular. For juhotyādi roots ślu would be the stem-marker, and by "ślau" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) reduplication of the root; if hal-initial remainder, kikit+ti; as said before, by "leṭo 'ḍāṭau" the aṭ ... ²⁷

original p. 49

Grammar of Rik 82.4, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- चिकेतति (concluded) — "...the augment aṭ comes to the tiṅ. For the reduplicative of the first part, by "kuhoś cuḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-62) a cavarga letter would arise for the k; by the antaryā [nearness] principle the c arises: ci-. By "pugantalaghūpadhasya ca" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-86) the guṇa for the i before the t — the light penultimate of the aṅga — arises. Although "nābhyastasyāci piti sārva dhātuke" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-87) prohibits guṇa of a light penultimate for an abhyasta stem when a pit sārva dhātuka beginning with a vowel follows, here the vārttika "bahulaṃ chandasīti vaktavyam" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-87, vārttika 1) means that the prohibition of the light-penultimate guṇa does not arise." || 4 ||

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 82.5)

- मन्दानः — the root madi stutimodamadasvapnakāntigatiṣu (in the senses of praise, delight, intoxication, sleep, beauty, going). Bhvādi; for this root, when liṭ is made, by "liṭaḥ kānajvā" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-106) in the Veda kānac optionally replaces liṭ (the liṭ enjoined for the past in general); in kānac the āna remains. When liṭ follows, the reduplication that would arise by "liṭi dhātor anabhyāsasya" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8) does not arise, by the statement "chandasi vā" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-8, vārttika 1). Since the root has the mark i, the augment num: mand+āna; in the sense 'one who has joy (mada)': mandānaḥ.
- अन्धसः — the root ada bhakṣaṇe, adādi; by "āder num dhaś ca" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[198] [?]) and "sarvadhātubhyo 'sun" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[188] [?]) the affix asun follows; the root takes the augment num and its d becomes dh; in the sense bhaktam, 'food'. The as of asun remains; it is an s-ending word; the sixth-case singular is made by jas...
- उप याहि — by "chandasi parye 'pi" (Pā. Sū. 1-4-81) and "vyavahitāś ca" (Pā. Sū. 1-4-82) there is no rule in the Veda that the prepositions must precede; the combination of prepositions occurs even when separated. || 5 ||

- केशिना — the dual of a stem ending in n, in the second-case dual (śyau...) [as printed: "dual of the n-ending word"]. Keśāḥ asyām santi, 'having hair, tuft': by "vrīhyādibhyaś ca" ... by "ata ini-ṭhanau" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-115) the affix ini in the matup sense after the a-ending stem; by "yasyeti ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the a of keśa is dropped before ini; with keśin+au, by "supām suluk..." (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the case-ending gets the substitute ā; the form is complete.
- रभसा — rabhasa means 'speed': those which have speed. The word rabhasa is among the arśa-ādi words, so by "arśa-ādibhyo 'c" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-127) the affix ac in the sense of matup; by "yasyeti ca" the a of the stem is dropped before it, yet the form remains rabhasa; the first-case plural gives the form.
- आमन्दिषुः — the root madi stutimodamadasvapnakāntigatiṣu, bhvādi, ātmanepadī; by "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) here the parasmaipada affix arises by vyatyaya. (The kārikā adds: 'supām tiṇ-upagraha-liṅga-nara...' — 'by the vārttika Sū. 3-4-109) the substitute jus; of the jus only us remains; in the luñ, sic comes in place of cli, and sic gets the valādi-iṭ augment; the s of sic after the iṇ becomes ṣ; the augment aṭ comes to the root; with num for amad+iṣ+us, ru and visarga result.

- पूषण्वान् — the root puṣa puṣtau; by "śvannukṣanpūṣaṇ..." (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[158] [?]) the affix kanin is added and the form pūṣan is nipātita ('irregular'): nipāta is that by which, after the later (separate) operation, the formation is accepted in the pronounced form only; in this word the kanin affix must be taken in the bhāva sense. Pūṣā asya asti — 'he who has nourishment (strength)': in the sense of 'this has it' the matup by "tad asyāsty asminn iti matup" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94); pūṣan+mat ³²

Grammar of Rik 82.6, concluded:

- पूषण्वान् (concluded) — "...by "mādupadhāyāś ca matorvo 'yavādibhyaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-9) the m of matup becomes v after a stem whose penultimate is m or a and which is not yava-etc.; so here, since matup follows the word pūṣan, the m becomes v. By "anonuṭ" [as read: "ano nuṭ", Pā. Sū. 8-2-16] a nuṭ comes to the matup after a stem ending in an. Here, in pūṣan+vat, by "nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n of pūṣan would be dropped; but whether the substitution (sthānivadbhāva) is accepted or not, the stem is an-ending, so the augment nuṭ arises for the matup; when it is anuvāt (an-ending), the n is heard again. When the first-case singular su follows, by "ugidacāṃ sarvanāmasthāne 'dhātoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-70) num for the ugit matup; by

"atvasantasya cādhātoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-14) the lengthening of the penultimate; since the conjunct-final loss is siddha-by-form, the final n of num is not dropped again. By "hrasvanuḍbhyāṃ matub" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-176) the matup after a short vowel or after nuṭ is udātta; here, since matup follows nuṭ, the udātta accent arises."

- आमदः — the root madī harṣe, divādi; by "chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the laṇ in the sense of prayer; for the divādi, śyan as the stem-marker would arise; by vyatyaya śap comes; for the second person singular sip, mad+a+s; for the root with the laṇ following, the augment aṭ comes to the aṅga. || 6 ||

Sense: "Aśvāvatī — the tenth sūkta (of the thirteenth anuvāka), of six Ṛks; the ṛṣi is Gotama; deity Indra; metre Jagatī; so it is in the Anukramaṇī: 'aśvāvatī — jagatī'. At the Atirātra (sacrifice), in the third paryāya, this sūkta is used in the śastra of the Brāhmaṇācchamsin; it is stated in the sūtra: 'aśvāvatī progrāṃ pītiṃ vṛṣṇa iyarmi satyām — the yājyā' (Āśv. 6-5 [?])."

Anuvāda (Kannada), beginning: "Aśvāvati prathamah — this sūkta is the tenth sūkta in the thirteenth anuvāka; there are six Ṛks in it. For this sūkta Gotama is the ṛṣi, Indra the deity," ¹.

Anuvāda (Kannada) of Sūkta 83, concluded from p. 55: "...the deity is Indra, and the metre is jagatī. In the Anukramaṇikā it is said 'aśvāvati jāgatam'. In the sacrifice called Atirātra, in the third paryāya, this sūkta is applied in the śastra mantras recited by the priest Brāhmaṇacchaṃsin. This is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'aśvāvati progrāṃ pītiṃ vṛṣṇa iyarmi satyām iti yājyā' (Āś. [6-5] [?])."

Sense: "O Indra, the mortal (martyaḥ), the man, who by your protections (ūtibhiḥ) is suprāvīḥ — well protected — he, dwelling in a house aśvāvati — yoked with many horses — goes first (prathamah) to the cows (goṣu) to be obtained: he becomes possessed of cattle before all other sacrificers. You, tam it — that very man, with bhavīyasā, much greater, abundant, wealth (vasunā) in the numbers of hundreds, thousands and so on, pṛṇakṣi — you fill, make fully complete. "O Indra, the man protected by you, living in a house filled with horses, obtains cows before and in greater number than all the rest. You fill that sacrificer, though they have no consciousness (to do so), with wealth of many kinds, as rivers from various directions fill the ocean with water; you make him rich."

"Indra, the man who is well protected by you dwells in a house with plenty of horses ; he is the first to go to the place where there are cows. fill him with plenty of riches as the rivers unconsciously flow in all directions to reach the ocean." — as printed.

- अश्वावति — "'one who lives in a house with many horses' means that his house has as many horses as he needs. Although the word gr̥ha is not in the R̥k, the bhāṣyakāra supplies it by adhyāhāra for the sake of coherence. All the R̥ks in this sūkta are of obscure sense; many words have to be supplied by adhyāhāra to get the sense to hang together.

- सुग्रावीः ऊतिभिः — "here the word tava ('your') has to be supplied: 'protected by your protections', that is, 'the man whom you protect'."
- तमिन् पृणक्षि वसुना — "'you fill that man with wealth or lordship': you give him much wealth."

"...viśiṣṭajñānahetubhūtāḥ — 'waters endowed with all knowledge', or rivers. How can waters that have no consciousness have knowledge? This being impossible, the vi in the word vicetasah must be taken as a negating prefix, 'without' (vigata), and the sense then fits somewhat; so vicetasah means 'rivers devoid of consciousness'; or: though the rivers have no knowledge that they must go and join the sea, yet, flowing through the lands, in the end they join the ocean — this is the sense to be given." - अभितः — "from all sides: whichever direction the rivers flow towards, in the end they reach only the ocean; rivers flowing in all directions reach the ocean alone — this is the intent."

- अश्ववति — aśvāḥ asmin santi ("horses are in this"): by "tad asyāsty asminn iti matup" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) the affix matup; by "mādupadhāyās ca matorvo 'yavādibhyaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-9) the m of matup becomes v after an a-ending stem; by "mantre somāśvendriyāviśvadevyasya matau" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-131) in the mantra the a of aśva is lengthened before matup; the seventh-case singular, ni [by "supāṃ suluk..."], gives aśvāvati.
- सुप्रावी: — su, pra are prepositions; the root ava rakṣaṇe, bhvādi; by "avitṛstṛtantribhya īḥ" (Uṇ. Sū. 3-[158] [?]) the affix ī after ava; since the affix ends in ī, "hal-nyābbhyo dīrghāt sutisy aprktaṃ hal" does not drop the su; ru and visarga: prāvīḥ.
- ऊतिभिः — ava rakṣaṇe; "ūtiyūtijūtisātihetikīrtayaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-97) — the affix ktin is nipātita in these; after ava ktin is added to give ūti; "jvaratvarasrivyaviyamivamām upadhāyās ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-20) turns the v into ūṭh; the form is accounted for by the sūtra, but by "ūtiyūtijūti..." it is stated as a nipātana for the sake of accent; since ktin is n-marked it would be initial-udātta by "ñnityādir nityam", but the nipātana sets the udātta of the affix aside, so it is final-udātta.
- पृणक्षि — the root prcī saṃparke, rudhādi; śnam as the stem-marker; in prnac+si by the vārttika "yuvarṇā..." (as read, "yuvarṇaśnaśatvaṃ vācyam" [?]) the śnam's n ...; by "coḥ kuḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-30) the c becomes k ⁸

- पृणक्षि (concluded) — "...the k of the affix, since the s follows, would have ṣatva, and by the combination of k and s the kṣ arises."
- भवीयसा — the stem bhavīyas, a word ending in s; the third-case singular. After the word bahu, in the sense of superiority, "dvivacanavibhajyopapade tarabīyasunau" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-57) gives the affix īyasun; with īyasun following, "bahor lopo bhū ca bahoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-158) — the imanic and īyasun affixes cause loss, and bhū is the substitute for bahu. (If the operation is made for the following (ablative) element, then, by the paribhāṣā "ādeḥ parasya" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-54) it applies only to the initial part of what follows; so the loss would be only of the ī of īyasun [the sūtra's bahor lopaḥ "loss" being taken as applying to the ī of īyasun] and bhū-substitution for bahu is obtained. But here, by the yogavibhāga "sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante", the sense is accepted, and only the bhū-substitution is made for bahu, and the loss of the ī of īyasun does not occur. So īyas remains in īyasun. In bhū+īyas, by "ñiguṇaḥ" [as read: "oś..."] since a taddhita follows, guṇa arises for the u-ending; bhav+īyas; with the third-case singular ṭā: bhavīyasā. Or the word can be accounted for another way: after the word bhavitṛ, by "tuś chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-59) īyasun comes in the Veda after words ending in tṛn/tṛc; for the root bhū, tṛc with guṇa and av gives bhavitṛ; in bhavitṛ+īyas, by "turiṣṭhemeyaḥsu" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-154) the tṛ is dropped when iṣṭhan, imanic, īyasun follow; the savarṇa-lengthening results in the form bhavīyas." || 1 ||

Sense (as far as the broken print allows): "Prācīḥ — by the eastern ones, or by those who move forward: at the time of the homa (the gods) bring forward (pra ṇayanti), facing the northern altar, the camasa (cup) that is devayu — (that seeks) the gods — and that has been prepared for the oblation; it is brahmapriya — gratified, satisfied, by brahman — by food in the form of Soma; filled. Joṣayante — all the gods attend that cup, like bridegrooms (varāḥ) a maiden (kanyakā): as bridegrooms attend a maiden thinking 'she will be mine, she will be mine', so the gods too stand by it, thinking 'this Soma is mine, this Soma is mine'. This is the sense in accordance with the application in the Aponaptrīya (rite), since a mantra shows the matter to be done. When, however, its application is in the third paryāya of the night-rite, it is to be explained thus: O Indra, as divine waters go to a low place, so the gods, wishing to hear your stotra, come to the hotṛ's dhiṣṇya place (the seat of the hotṛ); and having come, they look down (avaḥ), like a spreading light. All the gods come to this praiser, who desires the gods for himself, and bring him forward in front, they hold him in front; they serve you, who delight in brahman, the praise, who recite, as bridegrooms a maiden." The grammatical tail (the print is broken; I give only what is legible): hotriyam — the affix gha in the sense 'belonging to that' after hotṛ; avaḥ — the affix asi by "pūrvādhārāvarāṇām asi puradhavaś caiṣām" (Pā. 5-3-39 [?]), final-udātta; joṣayante — root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ with ṇic.

- होत्रियम् — "the vessel of the camasa kind, belonging to the hotr"
- देवीः — "shining"
- आपः न — "like holy waters (tīrthas) coming and joining"
- उप यन्ति — "(the deities) come and join"
- विततम् — "spread out widely"
- ज्योतिः — "the radiance of the sun"
- यथा — "as"
- अवः — "(as the sun's light) spreads downward, the vision of the deities too, from above"
- पश्यन्ति — "they look"
- देवयुम् — "this camasa that looks to the deities and is offered to them"
- प्राचैः — "in the front part (of the northern altar)"
- देवासः — "the gods"
- प्र णयन्ति — "take and carry"
- ब्रह्मप्रियम् — "(filled) with food in the form of Soma juice"
- वराः इव — "as bridegrooms are eager to serve a maiden, thinking of her as their own"
- जोषयन्ते — "(thinking 'it is ours') they eagerly attend."

The Kannada then gives an alternative (athavā) construing the R̥k as addressed to Indra: "(O Indra) देवीः — shining; आपः न — like holy waters, flowing into the low places; होत्रियम् — the hotr's dhiṣṇya

Pratipadārtha of Rik 83.2, concluded (the alternative):

- देवयुम् — "(who looks for) the favour of the deities, the praiser"
- प्राचैः — "in the front part (of the eastern portion)"
- प्र णयन्ति — "take along, carrying"
- ब्रह्मप्रियम् — "the praise-loving one, you"
- वराः इव — "like bridegrooms (that serve brides with the thought 'she is mine')"
- जोषयन्ते — "(from that) they attend."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 83.2

"As holy waters, shining, come and join together, the gods also come and join the camasa vessel that belongs to the hotr, taking it as their object. When it has come to the sacrificial ground, just as the radiance of the sun spreads widely and falls downward, so the downward glance of the gods falls upon this camasa filled with Soma. Gazing at the gods, this vessel, which is to be offered to them, is taken (by the priests), according to the injunction of the śāstra, to the front part of the northern altar; after it is taken there, the gods come eagerly to attend this vessel filled with Soma juice, as bridegrooms, each desiring that the new bride be his, eagerly attend upon her, longing for her."

English Translation

"As the bright waters flow to the sacrificial ladle, so the gods look down upon it ; as the sun's rays spread every where and descends to earth so the gods desirous of being presented to them look down upon it ; the (Chamasa) vessel filled with Soma-libations is brought to the altar with proper rites and the gods are eager to obtain it as the would-be bridegrooms long for their intended brides." — as printed.

Although in the R̥k there is merely hotriyam — 'belonging to the hotṛ' — without the word camasa, the bhāṣyakāra has supplied the word camasa."
- आपो न देवीरुप यन्ति होत्रियमवः पश्यन्ति — "In this sentence the word devāḥ ('gods') has been supplied. Just as water, in the form of the Soma-juice, comes and joins the hotṛ's camasa, so the gaze of the gods, eagerly for the drinking of Soma, falls on the camasa filled with Soma-juice — this is the sense."

consecrate them by reciting mantras. So they bring food that is dear to the gods to the east; the gods desire it — this is the chief sense."

- जोषयन्ते वरा इव — "Concerning the gods' desire for oblations, he gives a comparison: just as men who desire a lovely maiden as bride (kanyārthinaḥ), wishing that she may be theirs, make themselves anxious to win her by manifold courtesies, so the gods are eager, and strive, to gain the oblation prepared for them, the Soma juice" ¹³.

- होत्रियम् — the root hu dānādanayoḥ, juhotyādi; with trc added, with guṇa, the word hotṛ is formed. In the sense 'belonging to him', by "tasyedam" (Pā. Sū. 4-3-120) the affix gha (ghaḥ); for gh by "āyaneyīnīyiaḥ phaḍhakhachaghāṃ pratyayādīnām" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-2) the substitute iy; with the substitution made, the word hotriya is formed.
- अवः — "pūrvādharaṇāṃ asi puradhavaś caiṣām" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-39) — a luptaprathamāka word (a word with the nominative elided). To the three words pūrva, adhara, avara, in the sense of 'the quarter', the affix asi is added; with the asi-affix following, the three stems are replaced in order by pur, adh and av. Since the affix is added in the sense of the stem itself, the asi-affix gives the meaning of the stem; the conveying of meaning is a general property of an affix, so even if these (replacements) have no special meaning-conveying power, they are understood to be meaningful with the sense of their original stems; hence here asi is added in the sense 'lower'. For the stem the substitute av arises; av+asi; since the i in the affix is for pronunciation, the word is an indeclinable ending in s; by the affix-accent it is final-udātta.

Grammar of Rik 83.2, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- प्राचैः — "like uccaiḥ, nīcaiḥ, this too is an indeclinable. Or, the root añcu preceded by the preposition pra takes the affix ka in the bhāva sense, whereby the form is made; the k of ka is a mark, the affix being non-taddhita, etc., it takes the designation it; since a kit affix follows, by "aniditām hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-24) the n of the root añc is dropped; with the affix added it is an a-ending word. A doubt arises about adding ka here: by the vārttika "ghañarthe kaviddhānam" (the affix ka is prescribed in the sense of ghañ) ka should be stated in the bhāva sense; but in the bhāṣya, as a remainder of that vārttika, a list is given: 'sthāsnāpāvyadhihaniyudhyarthām' — that is, it is to be understood that ka in the sense of ghañ comes only for the roots read there. If so, how can ka be made when this root is not read there? — a question that arises. But the listing there is not to be taken as a restriction; it is a suggestive (upalakṣaṇa) list: 'one should take also those similar to the roots listed' — as when someone is told 'protect the curds from the crows' (kākebhyo dadhi rakṣyatām), the speaker does not intend that only crows are to be driven off: cats and other creatures that spoil the curds are to be driven off too. Likewise here, taking the similarity with the listed roots, one should surmise that ka in the sense of ghañ comes for other roots also."
- जोषयन्ते — the root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ, tudādi; since the action of the instigator is to be shown, by "hetumati ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-26) the affix ṇic. Here a doubt arises: since only the agent (the gods) shows activity, and the one to be instigated has not been shown, how does the activity of the instigated (prayojya) appear? But in the matter of serving, the gods are themselves the prayojya, and so by accepting the instigatedness that is in them, by "ṇicaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 1-3-74) the ātmanepada arises, since the fruit of the action goes to the agent. With the ṇic, when śap follows, guṇa and ay arise. || 2 ||

Sense: "In the Pravargya (rite) at the abhiṣpa (...) this R̥k adhi dvayoh is used; it is stated in the section spṛṣṭvodakam: 'adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṃ vacaḥ; śukraṃ te anyad yajataṃ te anyat' (Āś. 4-6 [?]). This R̥k is also used at the moving forward of the havirdhāna (the two oblation-carts): it is stated: 'yamo iva yatamāne...'; at the time of coming (yadā etam) he should begin the half-R̥k adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṃ vacaḥ' (Āś. 4-9 [?]). — O Indra, upon the two havirdhānas (carts bearing the oblations), you have placed (adadhāḥ) an ukthya, a śāstra-fitting speech (vacaḥ), a statement of the form of the mantra yuñje vām... and so on. Objection: how can one speech be placed over two havirdhānas? The Brāhmaṇa has explained: 'adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṃ vacaḥ — of the two, this third is to be "placed over": the ukthya speech; for it is said, "the ukthya speech is a rite connected with the sacrifice; by it he prospers the sacrifice" (Ai. Brā. 1-38 [?]). As in the pair of havirdhānas one third (cover-piece of khadira wood) is placed over both, so one stotra is proper for the two. Uktha is the śāstra related to the sacrifice; a speech suited to it is also sacrificial. Because by that placing the two havirdhānas, which are of the nature of the sacrifice, are made into the sacrifice, the sacrifice too is prospered. Of what kind are the two havirdhānas? Yatasrucā — those in which the *sruca*s, the cups (graha, camasa) and the other vessels are bound together (yata). Mithunā — existing as a pair, those two pure havirdhānas that worship (saparyataḥ) you. And further, the sacrificer who has such havirdhānas, asamyattaḥ — not having gone to fight with enemies — dwells (kṣeti) in your (te) rite (vrata); he flourishes (puṣyati), is nourished with children and cattle; and for the sacrificer who presses Soma (sunvate) in the sacrifice dedicated to you there is bhadrā śaktiḥ — auspicious, excellent strength. All this you have done by placing the ukthya speech on the two havirdhānas." The grammatical tail (characterized): yatasrucā — root yamu upame, the nasal dropped in the niṣṭhā; a bahuvrīhi with the first member's accent; in the three words idam... the case-ending is ā by "supām suluk..."; saparyataḥ — sapara pūjāyām, yak of the kaṇḍvādi group; kṣeti — kṣi nivāsagatyoh, luk of the stem-marker; sunvate — the fourth case in the sense of the sixth, by the statement; the case-ending udātta by "śatur anumah".

The meaning of this Ṛk is difficult (toḍakāgīrūvudu).

- द्वयोः — havirdhānayoḥ — "In the Ṛk there is only the word dvayoh; the bhāṣyakāra has explained it as havirdhānayoḥ, 'of the two havirdhānas'. Yāska has given the etymology of the word havirdhāna: 'havirdhāne havīṃṣāṃ nidhāne' — that is, 'the vessel or place in which the oblations — the Soma — are placed: havirdhāna'. The word havirdhāna is not found anywhere in the Ṛgveda. In the Yajurveda it occurs in mantras in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā (1-2-?-?; 6-1-?-?; 6-2-?-...) and so on [numerals as read, all [?]]. There this word conveys the sense of a cart for carrying a load of Soma, or a hut in which the Soma is placed, or a vessel in which the Soma is placed. Soma is loaded into two carts called havirdhāna, and a single covering, of khadira wood (bhadi), is spread over both, and taken from the eastern portion (prācīnavaṃśa) to the northern altar. The bhadi is made of darbha grass [as read; khadira is the printed word, [?]]. The related sacrificial procedure, being lengthy, and its explanation being unnecessary here, I have not given. See the discussion in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (1-[3?]-[?] [?]) for the rest."
- उक्थ्यं वचः — "When the covering called khadira [bhadi, as printed] is placed over the two vessels called havirdhāna in which the oblation is kept, the mantra of the form of a śastra that is said. For this the former half of the present Ṛk — adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyaṃ vaco yatasrucā mithunā yā saparyataḥ — is recited. One covering is used for covering the two havirdhānas; and since the covering is used to join them together, no separate mantras for each of the two havirdhānas are used; only one mantra is said. For that reason the expression ukthyaṃ vacaḥ — 'a speech in the form of a śastra mantra' — is in the singular. While joining these havirdhānas, they recite the mantra yuje vāṃ brahma pūrvyaṃ namobhir viśloka etu pathyeva sūreḥ | śṛṇvantu viśve amṛtasya putrā āye dhāmāni divyāni tasthuḥ || (Ṛk. Saṃ. 10-13-1 [?])" — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "I join your ancient brahman with homages; let the fame (of the singer) go forth like a road of the sun [?]; let all the sons of the immortal hear, who have taken their divine stations." (the gloss is tentative; the verse is garbled in the print at the second pāda [?]).

युजे वां ब्रह्म पूर्व्यं नमोभिर्विश्लोक एतु पथ्येव सूरेः । शृण्वन्तु विश्वे अमृतस्य पुत्रा आ ये धामानि दिव्यानि तस्थुः ॥

yuje vāṃ brahma pūrvyaṃ namobhir viśloka etu pathyeva sūreḥ | śṛṇvantu viśve amṛtasya putrā ā ye dhāmāni divyāni tasthuḥ ||
(Ṛk. Saṃ. 10-[13]-1 [?])

- यतसुचा — "'those holding in the hand the sruc, the wooden ladle for pouring Soma': that is the meaning. The bhāṣyakāra says: yatāḥ saṃbaddhāḥ sruco grahacamasādilakṣaṇāni pātrāṇi yayos te — 'those two in which the sruca, the vessels of the kind of graha and camasa cups, are bound'."
- मिथुना — "two; that is, the two havirdhānas."

- असंयत्तः — "the correct meaning of this word is 'having put down the vessels such as the sruc that were in the hand' (that is, 'with the sruc etc. lowered'). The bhāṣyakāra says: śatrubhiḥ saha yuddhārtham anabhigataḥ san — 'not having gone to fight with enemies'."
- ब्रते — "in the rite of the form of sacrifice."
- क्षेति — nivasati — "he is a promoter, doing the performance of rites."
- पुष्यति — prajayā paśubhiś ca puṣṭo bhavati — "possessed of children, cattle, wealth and so on, he thrives."
- भद्रा शक्तिः — kalyāṇī śaktiḥ, utkr̥ṣṭam balam — "excellent, or great, strength."

Special application: "There is a special application for this Ṛk: in the sacrifice called Pravargya this Ṛk adhi dvayoḥ is recited as stotra. This is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section spr̥ṣṭvodakam, by the sūtra 'adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyam vacaḥ; śukram te anyad yajataṃ te anyat' (Āś. 4-[6] [?]). And it is used when the covering called bhadi is placed over the two havirdhānas; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra indicates it with the sūtra 'yamo iva yatamāne yadaitam adhi dvayor adadhā ukthyam vaca ity ardharcam ārabhet' (Āś. 4-[9] [?])."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 83.3) ¹⁷

- यतसुचा — yatāḥ srucau yayos te ("those two in which the ladles are bound"). The root yamu uparame; with the affix kta, yam+ta; by "anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kñiti" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37) the nasal at the end of the root is dropped, since a jhal-initial kit affix follows; from the word yata, a bahuvrīhi compound with sruc.

Grammar of Rik 83.3, continued and concluded:

- यतस्युचा (concluded) — "...as pointed out, it is a bahuvrīhi compound. By "bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-1) the first member with its udātta-svarita keeps its natural accent; the sense is that by the retention of the natural accent in a first member having an udātta or a svarita, the first member is prakṛtibhāva. By this sūtra the first-member-accent arises here. Then, since yata is final-udātta by the affix-accent, the udātta-then-anudātta of su... "udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-66) turns the anudātta in the s of sruc into svarita; by "svaritāt saṃhitāyām anudāttānām" (Pā. Sū. 1-2-39) the pracaya arises for what follows sruc. When the dual affix is added after the word yatasruc, by "supāṃ suluk..." (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the case-ending gets the substitute ā."
- सपर्यतः — the root sapara pūjāyām; by "kaṇḍvādibhyo yak" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-27) the affix yak is added for its own sense to the kaṇḍvādi roots (a gaṇa read as ākṛtigaṇa); since sapara is read in the kaṇḍvādi group, yak arises after this too; the root-designation by "sanādyantā dhātavaḥ"; the form in the third person dual. Here by the root-accent the y would be udātta, and by the affix-accent the t; but by "tāsyānudātenñidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the lasārvadhātuka after an a-upadeśa root is anudātta, so the accent of the yak wins since it is śit; the y, being udātta by the root-accent, ... by "udāttād anudāttasya svaritaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-66) a svarita comes to the following anudātta.
- क्षेति — the root kṣi nivāsagatyoh, tudādi; kṣi+ti; by "tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77) śa would arise, but by "bahulam chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-73) the luk of the stem-marker; when luk has occurred, by "nelumatāṅgasya" [as read: "na lumatāṅgasya", Pā. Sū. 1-1-63] the stem-marker's operation is not effective but, since sārvadhātuka is the cause, guṇa arises for the aṅga.

- सुन्वते — the fourth-case singular of the stem sunvat, from the root suñ abhiṣave; with śatṛ added, by "svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-73) the stem-marker śnu: su+nu+at; śatṛ being ñit (by "sārvadhātukam apit"), no guṇa for the stem-marker; by yañ-sandhi, sunvat. By "ṣaṣṭhyarthe caturthī vaktavyā" (Pā. Sū. 2-3-62, vārttika 1 [?]) the fourth case is used in the sense of the sixth; by "śatur anumō nadyajādī" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-173) the vowel-initial case-endings after a śatṛ-ending stem without num are udātta, so the fourth-case ending ñe is udātta.
- मिथुना या — by "supāṃ suluk..." (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the first-case dual gets the substitute ā. || 3 ||

Sense: "When the cows had been carried off by the Paṇis, then the Aṅgirasas — the descendants of Aṅgiras — first of all (prathamam), in the beginning, prepared (dadhire) vayas, food in the form of oblation, for Indra. Afterwards those Aṅgirasas, with their fires kindled (iddhāgnayaḥ), offered sacrifice to Indra with śamyā — rite, with a good sacrifice — sukṛtyayā, with good performance. - आत् — "afterwards"
- ये — "those Aṅgirasas who"
- इद्भाग्नयः — "kindling the fire (well)"
- सुकृत्यया — "with excellent equipment"
- शम्या — "with the rite (offering sacrifice addressed to Indra)"
- नरः — "(the Aṅgirasas) who were the ones who set up the sacrifice"
- पणेः — "(belonging to) the demon called Paṇi"

- अश्वावन्तम् — "provided with horses"
- गोमन्तम् — "provided with cows"
- सर्वं भोजनम् — "all wealth (and)"
- पशुम् आ — "other animals as well"
- समविन्दन्त — "obtained."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 83.4

"The Aṅgirasas, harassed by the Paṇi, first of all prepared food in the form of oblation for Indra. Afterwards they kindled the fire and sacrificed with an excellent rite. Such Aṅgirasas, the arrangers of the sacrifice, by Indra's favour, obtained all the wealth of the demon called Paṇi — with horses, with cows, and with other animals as well."

English Translation

"The Angirasas first prepared the sacrificial food for Indra and then with well-kindled fire worshipped him with well-conducted rites ; they, the performers of the sacrifice got all the wealth of Pani, consisting of horses cows and other animals." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 83.4)

- अङ्गिराः — "the ṛṣis called Aṅgirasas: those descended from the famous ṛṣi named Aṅgiras. They are known as expert in sacrifices. Concerning them we have written many times before; see Ṛgveda Saṃhitā Part 1, p. 640."
- शम्या — karmanā — "by rites such as sacrifice. Among the twenty-six names of action beginning apaḥ, apnaḥ the word śamī is read (Ni. [2-1] [?])."

- सुकृत्यया — "śobhanakaraṇopetayā — 'with the best equipment, with all the materials of the rite properly gathered'; well-conducted; according to the rites."
- पणेः — "of the Paṇi, an asura of that name. This Paṇi carried off the cows of the gods and hid them in a cave. It is well known that Indra, with the help of the Maruts, freed and brought them back. About the Paṇi we have already written in detail; see Ṛgveda Saṃhitā Part 2, p. 630."
- भोजनम् — "among the twenty-eight names of wealth beginning maghaṃ reṇkaḥ the word bhojanam is read; so bhojanam means 'wealth' (Ni. [2-10] [?])."
- अश्ववन्तम् — "(wealth) with horses." — गोमन्तम् — "provided with cows."
- पशुम् — "animals other than horses, cows and the like, that is, sheep, goats, buffaloes and so on."
- आ — "'and': this word here conveys the sense of 'together with'."
- नरः — "the first-case plural. Te naraḥ means those Aṅgīrasa ṛṣis who performed the sacrifice."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 83.4)

- अङ्गिराः — the first-case plural jas added to aṅgīras; by "supāṃ suluk..." (Pā. Sū. 7-1-39) the substitute su for jas; since the stem ends in as, by "atvasantasya cādhātoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-14) the penultimate is lengthened; by "sko ḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-29) the initial s of the conjunct is dropped.
- शम्या — śamī is the name of a rite: śāmyaty anayā kriyayā doṣajātam iti śamī ("the faults are quieted by this act"). The root śama upaśame; the affix ghañ in the sense of instrument; when am+a stands, by "ata upadhāyāḥ" (Pā. Sū.

7-2-116) vṛddhi would arise; but "nodāttopadeśasya māntasyānācameḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-34) prohibits vṛddhi for a root ending in m which has an anudātta-upadeśa — so no vṛddhi for the root; since it is read in the gaurādi group, by "ṣiḍgaurādibhyaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 4-1-41) *nīṣ...*¹⁸

Grammar of Rik 83.4, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- शय्या (concluded) — "...by "yasyeti ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the ā [of śama] is dropped. By "kṛṣṭāṣṭhā..." [as read: "karṣātvato ghañño 'nta udāttaḥ", Pā. Sū. 6-1-159] final-udātta would arise; but by "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) the initial-udātta accent comes by vyatyaya."
- सुकृत्या — śobhanaṃ kṛtyaṃ karaṇaṃ yasyāṃ sā sukrtyā ("that in which the performance is good"; the act in which the means is good). By "nañsubhyām" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) in a bahuvrīhi the final member of the compound after nañ and su is final-udātta, so the word sukrtyā is final-udātta. When the third-case singular ṭā is added, by "ājaḥ ṭāpaḥ" [as read: "āṇ nadyāḥ... / ṭāṇasiṇasām inātsyāḥ", Pā. Sū. 7-1-12] the ā-ending stem takes ina ... the substitute ā for the ṭā, the ai... the ya replacement; since it precedes an udātta, the case-ending takes svarita on the anudātta." || 4 ||

"When the Paṇi carried off the cows, the ṛṣi named Atharvan, addressing Indra, made sacrifices; by the help of that sacrifice he discovered, before anyone else, the path by which the cows had been carried off. Thereafter Indra, the protector of the rites and radiant, appeared in the form of the Sun to show that path. Atharvan, by this help, got the cows back. English Translation ¹⁹

"Atharvan first discovered the path of the stolen cattles [sic: "cattle"] by sacrifices ; then the bright Sun (Indra) the protector of pious performances, was born ; Atharvan regained the cattle dropped; here, since the vowel-initial affix śas follows, the stem is bha-designated, so the ṭi is dropped. With the loss of in, path+as; ru and visarga make the form. Here, by "anudāttau suppitau" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) the case-ending would be anudātta; the stem pathin, by "pathimathyṛbhukṣām ā" ... [as read: "phiṣo 'nta udāttaḥ" (Phiṭ. Sū. 1)] being final-udātta by the Phiṭ-sūtra; when the anudātta follows, the udātta is lost (lopa), so by "anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-161) the case-ending receives the udātta accent.

Grammar of Rik 83.5, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- तते — the root tanu vistāre, tanādi, svaritet (marked for either voice). Tan+te: u (the stem-marker u) would be added, but by "bahulaṃ chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-73) the luk of the stem-marker arises; by "anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām anunāsikalopo jhali kñiti" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37) the nasal n is dropped, giving tate. By "tiñ atīnaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28), since it follows an atīnanta, it would be wholly anudātta.
- अजनि — the root janī prādurbhāve, divādi; luñ, third person singular, in the agent sense. Jan+ta: cli arises generally; for it, by "dīpajanabudhapūritāyipyāyibhyo 'nyatarasyām" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-61) when a ta ending of the third singular follows, ciñ is optionally the substitute; with ciñ, by "ciño luk" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-104) the ta affix of the singular is dropped after ciñ; the root ending in ñ-marked [ñ-mark] takes ... ājani, with the augment aṭ: ajani.
- आजत् — the root aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ, bhvādi, with the stem-marker śap; lañ, third person singular; the i of tīp is dropped by "itaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-100); since the root is vowel-initial the augment āṭ arises for the stem: ājat. || 5 ||

"Whether the sacred grass is cut for the sacrifice, in order to bring down the blessings, whether the priest recites the sacred hymn in the brilliant sacrifice, whether the stone used to press the soma plant makes a sound like the priest who repeats the hymn, on all these occasions Indra rejoices." — as printed.

- वृज्यते — the root vṛjī varjane, rudhādi; laṭ in the passive sense; when the lakāra (laṭ) denoting the object follows, by "sārvadhātuke yak" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-67) the affix yak arises for the root; by "bhāvakarmaṇoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 1-3-13) the ātmanepada affix arises. If the accent of the affix were to be heard, then by "tāsyānudātenñidadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) the lasārvadhātuka is anudātta because it follows an a-upadeśa root (vṛj); then the yak accent alone remains, being śit; by "tiñ atīñah" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) total anudātta would arise, but by "nipātair yadyadihantakuvidnetracet..." (Pā. Sū. 8-1-30) the tiñanta is not anudātta when connected with these nipātas; here yat (in yad vṛjyate) is the connection, so the total anudātta did not arise.

- आघोषते — the root ghuṣir viśabdane, bhvādi, with the preposition ā; the ir is a mark; when the stem-marker śap follows, guṇa of the light penultimate. Here too, as before, the affix gets the final-udātta because the root is a-upadeśa; śap is pit, so anudātta; the root-accent (udātta) remains; for the anudātta śap after the udātta syllable svarita arises; the anudātta that follows a svarita is pracaya. As before there is no nighāta (total-anudātta), because of the connection with the preceding yat.
- रण्यति — the root ramu krīḍāyām, bhvādi; since śap is the expected stem-marker, by "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) śyan arises in the Veda; the anudātta-it root also takes the parasmaipada by that very rule; ...it should be ramyati; here, then, ²⁵

Or the root is raṇa śabde; since it is bhvādi, the stem-marker śap is obtained, and, as before, śyan is to be enjoined by vyatyaya; as no Vedic alteration is supposed here, there is economy (lāghava). Sense (as far as legible): "Asāvi — the eleventh sūkta (of the thirteenth anuvāka), of twenty Ṛks. The Anukramaṇī says: 'asāvi — twenty: six Anuṣṭubh, Uṣṇih, and the triads in Paṅkti, Gāyatrī and Triṣṭubh; a prāgātha.' The first six are Anuṣṭubh; from the seventh three are Uṣṇih; from the tenth three are Paṅkti; from the thirteenth three are Gāyatrī; from the sixteenth three are Triṣṭubh; the nineteenth is Bṛhatī and the twentieth Satobṛhatī. The ṛṣi is Gotama, by continuation; the deity is Indra by the rule of 'no (other) assignment'. The application of the sūkta is to be understood by indication [?]. In the Ṣoḍaśin-śāstra (avihṛta, 'unseparated') the first two triads are stotriya and anurūpa; it is stated in the sūtra: 'atha ṣoḍaśi — asāvi soma indra te — the stotriya and anurūpa' (Āś. 6-2 [?]). In the abhiplava ukthya (rites), at the third pressing, these very two triads are optional stotriya and anurūpa of the Acchāvāka (the rest of this sentence is broken in the print [?]); it is stated: 'asāvi soma indra te; imam indra sutam piba' (Āś. 7-8 [?])."

Anuvāda (Kannada): "Asāvi soma — this sūkta is the eleventh in the thirteenth anuvāka. There are twenty Ṛks in it. The Anukramaṇikā says 'asāvi viṃśatiḥ śalanuṣṭubha uṣṇihah paṅktigāyatrītriṣṭubhas tṛcāḥ prāgātha'. That is: the first six Ṛks of this sūkta are in the anuṣṭubh metre; from seven, three Ṛks are in uṣṇik; from ten, three Ṛks in paṅkti; from thirteen, three Ṛks in gāyatrī; from sixteen, three Ṛks in triṣṭubh; the nineteenth Ṛk is in bṛhatī and the twentieth in satobṛhatī. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama; the deity is Indra; the application of the sūkta follows from the sense. In the Ṣoḍaśin-śāstra mantras (avihṛta) the first six Ṛks (two triads) are to be recited as stotriya mantras, as explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'atha ṣoḍaśi: asāvi soma indra te iti stotriyānurūpau'; and also in the Abhiplava and Ṣaḍaha sacrifices the sage called Acchāvāka, in the third-pressing rite, may optionally recite these two triads — the first six Ṛks — as stotriya mantras in the ukthya-śāstra; this is indicated in the section ayūṣu of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'asāvi soma indra te imam indra sutam piba.'" ¹

- धृष्णो — śatrūṇāṃ dharṣayituḥ — "one who subdues the pride of enemies; the valorous."
- इन्द्रियम् — "valour, strength."
- रजः — "since for this word (rajasī) the sense 'heaven and earth' is given (Ni. [?·?] [?]), the sense 'as the sun's rays pervade the earth and the middle region' can also be given where needed."
- न — "the word na here conveys the sense of comparison, 'like' (iva)."

- शविष्ठ — to śavasvin (from śavas) in the superlative sense the affix iṣṭhan by "atīśāyane tamabīṣṭhanau" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-55); śavas means strength; since vin arose by "asmāyāmedhāsrajo vini" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-121) the word śavasvin is formed; with śavasvin+iṣṭha, by "vinmatorluk" [as read: "vinmatorluk", Pā. Sū. 5-3-65] the vin is dropped when iṣṭhan, īyasun follow, so śavas+iṣṭha; by "ṭeḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-155) the ṭi of a bha-stem is dropped before iṣṭhan, imanic, īyasun: the as of śavas is dropped. Since śaviṣṭha stands at the head of the pāda, by the exclusion "apādādaḥ" no nighāta accent arises.
- गहि — the root gamḥ gatau, bhvādi; loṭ, second person singular, with hi for sip: gam+hi; śap would arise, but by "bahulaṃ chandasi" the luk of the stem-marker; as it is luk there is no sthānivadbhāva. For this reason the śap being the cause, the substitute cha by "iṣugamiyamām chaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-77) does not arise. By "anudāttopadeśavanatitanotyādīnām..." (Pā. Sū. 6-4-37) the nasal is dropped; since hi is said to be apit, it is ñīt, so the m of gam (with a nasal) is dropped. Gah+hi ...: by "ato heḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105) the luk of hi would come after an a-ending; but by "asiddhavad atrābhāt" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-22) operations in the bha section are treated as non-effective in respect of earlier ones; the nasal-loss is enjoined in the bhādhikāra, and so is the hi-loss; so, when the hi-loss is made, the nasal-loss is treated as non-effective; therefore, since the m is still present, the a is not before hi, and the hi is not dropped. || 1 ||

- मानुषाणाम् — "by "manor jātāv añyatau ṣuk ca" (मनोजाताविज्यतौ षुक्च, Pā. Sū. 4-1-161 [?]) the two affixes añ and yat come after the word manu; when they follow, the stem gets the augment ṣuk. The stem-and-affix combination should show a sense of jāti (birth, class). The operations that follow come about. Here the affix añ has come; with manu+añ, since ṣuk is kit, it becomes the final element of manu [manus]; the ñ of añ is a mark; since añ has ñ, by "taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-117) the first vowel of the stem takes vṛddhi. When the sixth-case plural ām follows the word mānuṣa, by "hrasvanadyāpo nuṭ" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-54) ām gets the augment nuṭ; by "nāmi" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-3) a vowel-ending stem is lengthened before nām; by "raṣābhyām no ṇaḥ samānapade" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-1) the n after r or ṣ in the same word becomes ṇ, here because it follows the ṣ of the ṣuk."

- शुक्रस्य — 'śukra means water also (Ni. [1-12] [?]). Yāska has given the etymology of the word śukra: 'śukraṃ śocater jvalatikarmaṇaḥ' (Ni. [?-?] [?]) — 'śukra is from śocati, a verb of burning'. In this Rk the sense is 'water that shines', that is, the Soma juice."

10. Rik 84.4; printed in English in the source

- त्वाम् अभ्यक्षरन् — kṣara sañcalane — "they flow to your neighbourhood. Since this Soma juice is made ready for you, the juice that comes flowing wants you alone — that is the intent."
- ऋतस्य — yajñasya — "although the word ṛta has the sense 'truth', it is conventional for it to convey the sense 'sacrifice'. Ṛta means the true action, that is, the sacrifice. Ṛtasya sādane means 'in the sacrificial house in which sacrificial acts are performed'."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.4) ¹¹

- ज्येष्ठम् — after the word praśasya, in the sense of excess, the affix iṣṭhan by "atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-55). "Praśasyasya śraḥ" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-60) — the continuing sense of "ajādī guṇavacanād eva" — the sense 'beginning with a vowel' continues; when an affix beginning with a vowel follows, śra is the substitute for praśasya. By "jyaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-61) when iṣṭhan or īyasun follows, jya is the substitute for praśasya: jya+iṣṭha; by "yasyeti ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148) the dropping of a would be obtained, but by "prakṛtyaikāc" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-163) a monosyllabic stem keeps its natural form before iṣṭhan, etc.; thus no alteration occurs. This prakṛtibhāva, it is stated in the bhāṣya, is enjoined to override all the elisions in the taddhita section. When guṇa (of jya+iṣṭha) is made, jyeṣṭha results.

Grammar of Rik 84.4, continued from p. 90:

- सुतम् — the root suñ abhiṣave; kta in the passive; because it is k-marked no guṇa for the root; by the affix-accent it is final-udātta.

11. grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 91

- पिब — the root pā pāne, bhvādi; by "pāghrādhmā..." (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) the substitute piba when śap follows; piba is a substitute ending in a; hence, when śap follows, the doubt of the light-penultimate guṇa (after i) has no scope; by "ato guṇe" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the single following form results from the a; since it is before an a the sip-substitute hi is dropped by "ato heḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-105); since an atiñanta (sutam) precedes, nighāta (anudātta) arises.
- अक्षरन् — the root kṣara sañcalane, bhvādi; by "chandasi luṅlaṅliṭaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the laṅ in the sense of the present; for the plural jhi the substitute ant; by "itaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-100) a [loss of the i]; the final t drops by conjunct-final loss; the augment aṭ for the stem; with a+kṣar+a+n, by "ato guṇe" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-97) the single form; by "tiñ atiñāḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) total anudātta.
- त्वा — tvām: by "dvitīyāyāṃ ca" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-23) the substitutes tvā and mā come for yuṣmad and asmad in the second case; so here for yuṣmad in the second case the substitute tvā. || 4 ||

- ब्रवीतन — the root brūñ vyaktāyām vāci, adādi; the loṭ second person plural with the affix tha; by "loṭo lañvat" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-85) the lañ-like state arises; in the lañ, for tha by "tasthasthamipām tāṃtāmāḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute ta; with brū+ta, by "taptanaptanathanāś ca" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-45) the substitute tana comes in the Veda for ta of the loṭ (by the continuing word tasya); by vyatyaya the pī-hood arises for tana; by "bruva īṭ" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-93) īṭ is the augment for the root before it; by "sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-84) guṇa, and av replacement: bravītana.
- अमत्सुः — the root madī harṣe, divādi; by "chandasi luñlañliṭaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the luñ in the sense of prayer ('let them make (him) joyful'). Before the plural jhi, cli arises; for it the substitute sic; by "sicaś ca" ... "sijabhyastavidibhyaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-109) the substitute jus for the jhi that follows sic in the luñ; of jus only us remains; the augment aṭ for the stem; with amad+s+us, īṭ would be obtained for sic as a valādi; but "āgamaśāstram anityam" (a paribhāṣā) says the rules enjoining augments are non-universal, so no īṭ arises; "ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-35), being a rule of this īṭ, is therefore non-universal; by "khari ca" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-55) carva for the d of the root, giving amatsuh.
- नमस्यत — a denominative; by "namovarivaścitraṇaḥ kyac" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-19) — the word karaṇa ('doing') continues — the affix kyac comes after namas, varivas, citraṇ in the senses of worship, service, wonder respectively; since kyac is of the sanādi group, the kyac-ending namasya gets the root-designation; the loṭ second person plural, tha replaced by ta, as before.

- सहः — "the word sahas occurs in the sense of strength. Here it is used in the sense 'one who has that'. In the sūtra "matvarthe māsatannoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 4-4-[?]) the vārttika "lugakāreṇa... vaktavyāḥ" is read: the affix enjoined in the matup sense is dropped; here, since the stem ends in as, vin would be obtained in the matup sense; by this vārttika luk of the matup-sense affix arises, though the sense is shown. Yah śiṣyate saḥ... ¹⁵

Sense: "O Indra, since you yoke (yacchase) your two bays, the horses of that name, to the chariot, therefore no one other than you is rathītaraḥ — exceedingly possessed of a chariot (a better charioteer): none (nakiḥ) exists, because others have no chariot yoked with such horses. Looking to you (tvā anu), none is equal in majmanā — strength; none exists. And no other possessed of good horses (svaśvaḥ) has reached (ānaśe = na prāpa) you. ॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha of Rik 84.6 ¹⁶

- इन्द्र — "O Indra"
- यत् — "when"

- रथीतरः — "a charioteer superior to you"
- नकिः — "there is none (not)..."

Pratipadārtha of Rik 84.6, concluded:

- (नकिः) — "(there is) none (not)"
- त्वा — "(looking to) you"
- मज्मना — "equal in strength"
- नकिः — "no one"
- स्वश्वः — "any other with good horses, yoked (to the chariot)"
- नकिः आनशे — "none has overtaken you (driven after you)."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.6

"O Indra, when you yoke your horses called Hari to the chariot, there is no charioteer who surpasses you. There is none who has strength like you. However excellent the horses he drives, none can drive the chariot after you, leaving you behind."

English Translation

16. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 94

"Indra, when you harnessed your horses there is no better charioteer than you ; no one is equal to you in strength ; no one although possessed of good horses has surpassed you." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.6)

- नकिः — "since the nine words beginning hikam, nukam are read among the words in the sense of 'all that is said (sarvapadasamāmnāya)', the word nakiḥ is explained here in the sense of negation. Nakiḥ means 'there is not'."
- रथीतरः — "the best among charioteers."
- मज्जना — "since the word majmanā is read among the twenty-eight names of strength beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ, this word means strength, power."
- स्वश्वः — śobhanāśvayuktaḥ — "one who has excellent horses."
- न आनशे — na prāpa — "he does not obtain, or does not exist."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.6) ¹⁷

- नकिष्टवत् — nakiḥ + tvat (a division of the words). Nakis is an indeclinable ending in s. In nakis+tvat, by "yuṣmattattatakṣuḥṣvantaḥpādam" (युष्मत्तत्तत्तक्षुःष्वन्तःपादम् Pā. Sū. 8-3-103) the s in the middle of a pāda gets ṣatva when it is followed by the substitutes of yuṣmad beginning with t — tvat, tat, tatakṣus [the takṣus forms] — all of which are substitutes for yuṣmad etc.; here tvat is that substitute; when ṣatva has occurred, by "ṣṭunā ṣṭuḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-4-41) the ṣṭutva sandhi follows for the t after ṣ.

- रथीतरः — atiśayena rathī ('exceedingly possessed of a chariot'). By "dvivacanavibhajyopapade tarabīyasunau" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-57) the affix tarap in the sense of excess. Rathī — 'he who has a chariot' — the affix ini after ratha in the matup sense by "ata ini-ṭhanau" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-115); when ini comes, the a of the stem would be dropped by "yasyeti ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-148), and rathī is an n-ending word; as said before, when tarap follows in the superlative sense, rathin+tara: by "nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n of the stem is dropped; "īd rathinaḥ" [as read: "īd athinaḥ", Pā. Sū. 8-2-[?]]—vārttika 1] — before gha the ī-ending substitute for the stem rathin arises; by "tarap-tamapau ghaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-22) the two affixes are called gha; with rathi+tara where gha follows, the ī arises as a final substitute. Here if one were to state the ī as the antādeśa as an exception to the nalopa, there would be economy; but since the ī-substitution is enjoined in the asiddha section, if it were enjoined in place of the n the single-substitute (ekādeśa) in the form of savarṇadīrgha could not arise again; so one must say that after the nalopa the ī is the final substitute for the i. Here the short vowel is heard at the Pada stage, since at the avagraha the Vedic shortening alone is accepted.
- यच्छसे — the root yamu uparame, parasmaipadī, bhvādi; by "vyatyayo bahulam" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-85) by vyatyaya the ātmanepada affix arises; with śap following, by "iṣugamiyamām chaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-77) cha is the final substitute. Or the root is dān dāne, for which, by "pāghrā...", yaccha arises as the substitute; this too being parasmaipadī, the ātmanepada is to be explained by vyatyaya only. In the loṭ [laṭ] second person singular the form is as stated.

- स्वश्वः — śobhanau aśvau yasya saḥ svaśvaḥ ('one who has two good horses'): a bahuvrīhi compound. By "nañsubhyām" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) the final-udātta of the word aśva following su would be obtained; but "ādyudāttaṃ dvyacchandasi" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-119) — a two-syllabled word with initial udātta remains initial-udātta in the Veda after su — so here the accent of the final member (initial-udātta) is retained. By "aśūprūṣiśliṣikaṇikhaṭikāṭipāṭibhyaḥ kvan" [as read: "aśūpruṣi...", Uṇ. Sū. 1-[149] [?]] the word aśva, being kvan-ending, has initial-udātta by nī-accent; being two-syllabled, and su being the preceding member, the initial-udātta is heard.
- आनशे — the root aśū vyāptau, svādi, anudāttet; liṭ, third person singular; when vivakṣā is made for the ātmanepada, the affix ta; by "liṭas tajhayor eśirec" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-81) the substitute eś for ta ... ¹⁸

Grammar of Rik 84.6, concluded:

- आनशे (concluded) — "...eś arises; with liṭ as the cause, doubling of the root; with a hal-remnant: a+aś+e. By "ata ādeḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-70) the initial a of the reduplicative is lengthened; where "ato guṇe" would obtain the single following form, this sūtra is begun as an exception to it. When the reduplicative is lengthened, by "aśnoteś ca" [as read: "aśnoter...", Pā. Sū. 7-4-72] the root aś, with a long-vowel reduplicative, takes the augment nuṭ; with the augment at the beginning of the root, the form ānaśe arises." || 6 ||

"In the sacrifice called Abhiplavaśaḍaha, in the third-pressing rite, the Brāhmaṇācchaṃsin may optionally use the three Ṛks beginning ya eka id vidayate as stotra-mantras; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the section aihyūṣu by the sūtra 'sakhāya āśiṣāmahi ya eka id vidayate' (Āś. [7-8] [?]). In the Mahāvrata also, at the time of reciting the niṣkevalya-śastra mantras, these three Ṛks are to be recited as mantras of the Uṣṇih metre; this is indicated in the fifth Āraṇyaka of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka by the sentence 'ya eka id vidayata āyohādribhiḥ' (Ai. Ā. [5]-[?]-[?] [?])."

- अङ्ग — "In this Ṛk, and in the next two Ṛks as well, in the last pāda the words indro aṅga ('Indra, aṅga') are read. For the word aṅga Yāska says: 'aṅgeti kṣipranāma; aṅgam aṅcanād vā aṅgitaṃ ca kṣaṇena bhavati gatam ity arthaḥ; aṅcanād vā aṅceḥ...' (Ni. [?]-[?] [?]) — 'aṅga is a name for "quickly"; or from aṅcana (going), what is "gone" in an instant' — the print gives the explanation 'the word aṅga also is derived from one of two roots of the sense of going, aṅganāt and aṅcanāt; both these roots mean going; hence the sense 'going quickly' must be given to aṅga'. The bhāṣyakāra has explained this word as kṣipra, 'quickly'. Western scholars, because the word occurs here in this Ṛk and in the next two with the word indra, and because no meaning fits it elsewhere, take the word aṅga as an exclamation of wonder."
- अप्रतिष्कृतः — paryair apratiśabditaḥ pratikūlaśabdarahitaḥ — "one against whom no one speaks: undisputed, unopposed, with no one to oppose what he says."

- विद्यते — vi is a preposition; the root daya dānagatirakṣaṇahimśādāneṣu, bhvādi, ātmanepadī; had the stem-marker śap been made, dayate would result; since śap is pit, by "anudāttau suppitau" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-4) it is anudātta; if the accent of the affix ta were udātta, then by "tāsyānudāttennīdadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186) it would be anudātta, being lasārvadhātuka; then the root-accent alone remains, and, by "dhātoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-162), the root's final vowel is udātta; when the a-vowel of ya is udātta, the y [ya] before an udātta syllable is svarita, and the anudātta syllables after the svarita become pracaya. By "tiñ atīṇaḥ" the total anudātta would arise; but "nīpātaiṛ yadyadihantakuvit..." (Pā. Sū. 8-1-30) bars the nighāta, since yaḥ in the previous pāda is connected.
- अप्रतिष्कृतः — na pratiṣkutaḥ apratiṣkutaḥ; prati is a preposition; the root ku śabde, adādi; the affix kta in the passive; because it is k-marked no guṇa for the root; "what is made to sound (kūyate) against" is pratiṣkuta, one 'spoken against'; the word apraṭiṣkuta is made in the sense 'one who is not (spoken against)'. By "pāraskaraprabhṛtīni ca saṃjñāyām" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-157) the words listed in this gaṇa take suṭ and are nīpātita when they are names. This is an ākṛtigāṇa: that is, words that are likewise suṭ-bearing by other śāstras may be understood to be included in this gaṇa. Thus pratiṣkuta is found with suṭ; for this there is no other rule, so one must understand that it is read in the pāraskara gaṇa. Suṭ ...

Grammar of Rik 84.7, concluded:

- अप्रतिष्कृतः (concluded) — "...since suṭ is neither a substitute nor an affix, ṣatva does not come by "ādeśapratyayayoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-59); hence, since suṣāmādi words are read in the suṣāmādi group, "suṣāmādiṣu ca" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-98) gives ṣatva. Na pratiṣkutaḥ apratiṣkutaḥ: a nañ-compound; the n of nañ is dropped by "nalopo nañ" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-73) before a following member that begins with a vowel [a-initial?]; only a remains. By "avyaye nañ kunipātānām" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[?]) the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its natural accent: a is udātta; since it precedes an udātta, the a of pra in prati becomes svarita; the remaining anudāttas after the svarita become pracaya." ||7||

Sense: "Arāḍhasam — one lacking rādhas, wealth in the form of oblations: that is, a non-sacrificer. When will Indra sphurat — will he kick, strike down (vadhiṣyati) such a mortal with his foot, like a kṣumpa — a toadstool-like mushroom (ahicchatraka, 'snake's umbrella')? As someone effortlessly kicks with the foot an ahicchatra lying in a round shape, so when will Indra slay our enemies? (sphurati is a verb of slaying: it is read among the verbs of slaying — sphurati, skhalati.) When will that Indra śuśravat — hear (it is conjectured: śroṣyati) quickly (aṅga) our (the sacrificers') girah, speeches of the form of praise? Here the Nirukta: 'kṣumpam is the ahicchatraka, that which is crushed (kṣubhyate). When will he strike with his foot a mortal who does not worship, like a mushroom (kṣumpa)? When will Indra hear our speeches, aṅga?' Aṅga is a name for 'quickly' (Ni. 3-18 [?])." The grammatical tail (characterized): padā — the substitution of pad for pād; the case-ending udātta by "ūḍidam..."; kṣumpam iva — the root kṣubha sañcalane with ghañ, the augment num by the word bahulam, bh becoming p; sphurat — the root sphura sañcalane, a Vedic laṇ in the future sense, no augment aṭ; śuśravat — the leṭ of śru, with aṭ; ślu for śap."

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha of Rik 84.8

- अराधसम् — "devoid of wealth in the form of oblations (one who does not perform sacrifice)"
- मर्तम् — "the man"
- इन्द्रः — "Indra"
- पदा — "with the foot"
- कदा — "when"
- क्षुम्पम् इव — "as one tramples a coiled snake-mushroom (so as to crush it easily)"

- स्फुरत् — "will he trample?"
- नः — "our"
- गिरः — "words of the form of praise"
- कदा — "when"
- अङ्ग — "quickly"
- शुश्रवत् — "will he hear?"

original p. 101

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.8

"When will Indra, as one effortlessly tramples a coiled snake-mushroom, trample the man who offers no oblations? When will he, quickly (aṅga), hear the words of praise of us, the sacrificers?"

English Translation

"When will Indra trample, with his foot, unsacrificing mortal like a coiled up snake ? when will Indra hear our praises ?" — as printed ("coiled np snake" is a misprint for "coiled up snake" in the print as scanned, [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.8)

- अराधसम् — havirlakṣaṇena rādhasā dhanena rahitam, ayaṣṭāram — "one who is devoid of wealth in the form of oblation, that is, one who does not perform sacrifices. Rādhas: rādha is a name of wealth; arādhasam means one with no wealth — or, since he has no wealth, and is therefore poor, one unable to perform sacrifice: so the meaning is given. This explanation is not very coherent; the bhāṣyakāra's explanation is the right one."

- क्षुम्पमिव — kṣumpam ahicchatrakam bhavati (Ni. [5-12] [?]) — "a snake-mushroom (ahicchatra) growing in a round shape."
- स्फुरत् — sphuratir vadhakarmā — "sphurati, sphalati (Ni. [2-?] [?]): 'he will kill'. For this Ṛk Yāska has given the etymology — 'kadā martam anārādhayantaṃ pādena kṣumpam ivāsphuriṣyati kadā naḥ śroṣyati giras indro 'nga | aṅgeti kṣipranāma | añcitam ivāñcitam bhavati' (Ni. [3-18] [?]). That is: 'as someone treads on the mushroom growing coiled on the ground, and kills it with his foot, when will Indra kill the man who does not worship him with sacrifices? And when will he hear the words of praise that we make?' The word aṅga means 'quickly'."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.8)

- पदा — the third-case singular of the word pād; with tā following, by "padd annṛnniśasan..." [as read: "pad-dan-no-mās-hṛn-niś-asan-yūṣan-doṣan-yakañ-chakan-udan-āsan-chu-prabhṛtiṣu", Pā. Sū. 6-1-63] the substitute pad for pād; so the form is padā; by "ūḍidaṃ padādi..." (Pā. Sū. 6-1-171) the case-ending is udātta.
- क्षुम्पमिव — the root kṣubha sañcalane; ghañ in the sense of the object; since ghañ follows, by the word bahulam the augment num arises for the root though no cause is present; by vyatyaya, p is the substitute for the bh of the root; the form kṣumpa.
- स्फुरत् — the root sphura sañcalane; by "chandasi luṅlaṅliṭaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-6) the laṅ in the sense of the future (lṛṭ); by "bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come; the stem-marker śa by "tudādibhyaḥ śaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-77), being ñit by "sārvadhātukam apit" the guṇa of the root is barred by "kñiti ca" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-5); by "itaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-100) the i of the affix is dropped; the form sphurat; by "tiñ atīṇaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-28) the nighāta accent.

- शुभ्रवत् — the root śru śravaṇe; the leṭ, third person singular, the affix ti; by "itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-97) the loss of the i; by "bahulaṃ chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-76) ślu for śap; by "leṭo 'dātau" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-94) the augment aṭ for the affix; by "ślau" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-10) reduplication of the root; with the hal-remnant, the ik of the root takes guṇa; av replacement; the form śuśravat. || 8 ||

Sense: "Among many men, whichever sacrificer (yaś cid dhi), possessed (sutāvān) of pressed Soma, serves (āvivāsati = paricarati; vivāsati is a verb of service) you, O Indra — to that sacrificer Indra quickly (aṅga) brings (patyate = pātayati, prāpayati) that fierce (ugram), uplifted strength (śavaḥ)." The grammatical tail: tat — the fourth-case ending is dropped by "supāṃ suluk..."; patyate — the root patḷ gatau, with its causative sense included, and śyan by vyatyaya."

- बहुभ्यः — "from among many men"

- आविवासति — paricarati; vivāsatiḥ paricaraṇakarmā (Ni. [3-?]) — "he serves, he does service."
- उग्रम् — udgūrṇam — "formidable: that is, very great."
- पत्यते — patḥ gatau; pātayati prāpayati — "he causes to reach: that is, he gives."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.9)

- त्वा — from the stem yusmad in the second-case singular, by "tvāmau dvitīyāyāḥ" [as read: "tvāmau dvitīyāyāḥ", Pā. Sū. 8-1-23] the final of the stem with the case-ending is replaced by the anudātta substitute tvā.
- सुतावान् — by "dīrghād aṭi samānapāde" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-9) the n, since a follows (in the next word), becomes ru; by "ato 'cī nityam" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[?]) the nasalization of the vowel before the ru arises.
- आविवासति — the root vivāsa upasevāyām, loṭ [laṭ], third person singular. Since yaḥ is in the preceding connection, no nighāta accent arises. Since śap is anudātta, the lasārvadhātuka after it, by "tāsyānudātenñīdadupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-186), is anudātta; the root-accent remains.
- तत् — the stem tad, the fourth-case singular; by "supām suluk..." the case-ending is dropped.
- पत्यते — the root patḥ gatau; since the sense of causation is included in the root (antarbhāvitanyartha) the laṭ, third person singular, ātmanepada, with the affix ta; by "ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-79) e; by "vyatyayo bahulam" the śyan stem-marker: patyate; by "tiñ atinaḥ" the total anudātta. || 9 ||

Sense: "On the twenty-fourth day, at the midday pressing, the triad beginning svādor itthā viṣūvataḥ is an optional stotriya of the Acchāvāka: stated in the section hotrakāṇām — 'yaḥ satrāhā vicarṣaṇīḥ svādor itthā viṣūvataḥ' (Āś. 7-4 [?]). On the fifth day of the Prṣṭhya (ṣaḍaha), in the Niṣkevalya, this triad is the anurūpa; stated in the section stome vardhamāne: 'svādor itthā viṣūvata upa no haribhiḥ sutam' (Āś. 8-12 [?]). — Svādoḥ — of the sweet, flavourful madhu, the sweet-juiced Soma, viṣūvataḥ — that in this way pervades all sacrifices (itthā): of such Soma the white (gauryaḥ) cows drink (pibanti). (The genitive stands in the sense of the fourth case, because 'the object is the sampradāna', by the statement 'the verb must be taken'.) Those cows that, for splendour (śobhase), go (sayāvarīḥ) together with the showerer of desires (vṛṣṇā) Indra, become glad (madanti): they drink the remainder of the Soma drunk by Indra. Vasvīḥ — those cows that, by giving milk, give dwelling; svarājyaṃ anu — following (heeding) the sovereignty (rājya) of their own Indra." The grammatical tail (characterized): viṣūvataḥ — the root viṣ! vyāptau with an Uṇādi ku-affix, then matup (udātta), the lengthening in the Saṃhitā, va for ma by vyatyaya; madhvaḥ — yaṇ in place of u when no guṇa; gauryaḥ — ñiṣ in the gaurādi group; sayāvarīḥ — vanip after yā, ñip and r; madanti — śap for śyan by vyatyaya; vasvīḥ — from vasa nivāse with the u-affix; the discussion of the ñiṣ after u-ending adjectives (Kā. 4-1-44, vārttika 1 [?]); svarājyam — final-udātta of the compound's last member."

"White-coloured cows drink the sweet Soma juice, full of flavour and pervading all sacrifices in one and the same way. The cows follow Indra, who fulfils their desired objects, in order that their splendour may grow; having drunk the Soma juice drunk by him, they obtain satisfaction. And, giving milk, they dwell in their cow-sheds, heeding the sovereignty of Indra, their own."

English Translation

"The white cows drink of the sweet Soma-juice prepared in every sacrifice ; the cows that go with bountiful Indra appear beautiful and are beneficent [sic] in accordance with his sovereignty." — as printed ("beneficent" as printed [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.10)

"On the last day of the twenty-four-day sacrifice (cāturviṃśa), at the midday pressing, the priest called Acchāvāka may optionally recite the triad svādor itthā viṣūvataḥ (three Ṛks); this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section hotrakāṇām, by the sūtra 'yaḥ satrāhā vicarṣaṇiḥ svādor itthā viṣūvataḥ' (Āś. [7-4] [?]). And on the fifth day of the Prṣṭhya sacrifice the application of this triad (three Ṛks) is for the niṣkevalya-śāstra mantras; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the section stome vardhamāne by the sūtra 'svādor itthā viṣūvata upa no haribhiḥ sutam' (Āś. [8-12] [?])."

- विषूवतः — viṣṭ vyāptau; sarvayajñeṣu vyāptiyuktasya — "pervading all sacrifices: that is, prepared in all sacrifices for offering to the gods."
- मध्वः — "of the sweet portion of Soma juice. Although the word somasya is not here, for the word madhvaḥ the sense 'tasty Soma juice' is to be given. To indicate the sense of Soma juice the use of the word madhu alone is conventional in the Ṛgveda."
- गौर्यः — gauravarṇā gāvaḥ — "white-coloured cows; or cows of auspicious (bright) colour."

- सयावरी: — sahagacchantyaḥ — "going together with Indra, being with Indra."
- वृष्णा — kāmābhivarṣakeṇa — "from Indra, who showers desired things."
- वस्वी: — vasa nivāse; payaḥpradānena nivāsakārīṇyaḥ — "dwelling (in the cow-sheds); by giving milk they make what is favourable to dwelling. Hence the cows are called vasvīḥ."
- स्वराज्यम् — "what svarājya means here the bhāṣyakāra has not stated clearly. He explains: 'These cows, by giving milk, are the means of providing habitation.' Under Indra's overlordship, cows giving milk at will are suitable for people to dwell by; this prosperous sovereignty may be said to be in Indra's nourishing. At the end of this Ṛk and of the next two Ṛks the words vasvīr anu svarājyam are read again and again; in these usages the ṛṣi's intention is not clear."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.10) ²⁶

- विषूवतः — the root viṣṭ vyāptau; the Uṇādi affix ku; because it is k-marked, no guṇa of the light penultimate; the word viṣu. Viṣuḥ asya asti iti viṣūvat: by "tad asyāsty asminn iti" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-94) matup; by vyatyaya, though no cause is present, v for the m of matup; by "hrasvanuḍbhyām matup" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-176) since it follows a short vowel, matup is udātta; by "anyeṣām api dṛśyate" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-137) the first part of matup is lengthened in the Saṃhitā; in the sixth-case singular viṣūvataḥ results.
- मध्वः — madhu+jas [as printed; sixth-case singular is meant]. When the sixth-case singular follows, by the word vā of "jasādiṣu chandasi vāvacanam" (vārttika) the u does not take guṇa as it would by "gher ñiti" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-111); since guṇa is absent, yaṇ for the ik by "iko yaṇaci" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-77); ru and visarga for the s of the affix: madhvaḥ. Since "kriyāgrahaṇaṃ kartavyam" is said in the bhāṣya, even though the root dā is absent, here the object takes sampradāna-designation, and so the sixth case arises in the sense of the fourth.

26. grammar page, noted briefly; runs to p. 109

- पिबन्ति — the root pā pāne; laṭ, third person plural; by "pāghrādhmāsthā..." (Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) piba is the substitute; anta for jhi; since an atiñanta precedes, nighāta accent.
- गौर्यः — "ṣiḍgaurādibhyaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 4-1-41) ñiṣ in the feminine; "yasyeti ca" drops the a; with gaurī+jas, "dīrghājasi ca" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[-?]) forbids the single prior long; so yaṇ; then, since the udātta ī is replaced by yaṇ, by "udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito'nudāttasya" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) the anudātta of the case-ending jas that follows becomes svarita.
- सयावरीः — the root yā prāpaṇe; by "āto maninkvanipvanipaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-74) the affix vanip; in the feminine by "vano ra ca" (Pā. Sū. 4-1-7) ñīp and r for the n; saha yāntyah; with jas, by "supāṃ suluk-pūrvasavarṇa..." the lengthening; vanip is pī so it is anudātta; the root-accent remains; by "gatikārakopapadāt kṛt" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-139) the first member keeps its natural accent in the compound.
- मदन्ति — the root madī harṣe, divādi; laṭ, third person plural; śyan is to arise, but by "vyatyayo bahulam" śap; since yaḥ [yāḥ] was in the previous pāda by connection, by "yad dhṛttān nityam" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-66) the nighāta is barred, so by the root-accent it is initial-udātta.

- शोभसे — the root śubha dīptau; in the sense of the infinitive (tumun), by "tumarthe sesenasen..." [as read: "tumarthe sesenasenasekasenasadhyaisadhyaiśadhyaikadhyaikhānkhy...", Pā. Sū. 3-4-9] the affix se; by the affix-accent the word śobhase is as stated.
- वस्वीः — the root vasa nivāse; by "śvasvasnihi..." [as read: "kṛsr̥bhṛvṛṣiñ...", Uṇ. Sū. 1-[10] [?]] the affix u; with "nit" continuing, by "dhātvaḥ nit" [as read: "dhātoḥ nit", Pā. Sū. 6-1-[?]] it is initial-udatta, so vasu is initial-udatta. In the feminine, by the statement "vāto guṇavacanāt" — the nīṣ affix is to be said to come after a guṇavacana word with initial udatta — "guṇavacanāt nīṣ ādyudattārtham" (Kā. 4-1-44, vārttika 1 [?]) nīṣ comes and is initial-udatta; with vasvī+jas, by "vā chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-106) the single prior long form (optional).
- स्वराज्यम् — svasya rājyaṁ svarājyam; by "akarmadhāraye rājyam" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-130) the final member is initial-udatta.

- सायकम् — "the thunderbolt-weapon of Indra, the destroyer of enemies."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.11)

- पृशनायुवः — in the sense 'desiring the touch': by "supa ātmanaḥ kyac" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-8) the affix kyac after the word prśana; prśanāyati iti prśanāyuh: by "kyāc chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-170) the affix u; by the affix-accent the word is final-udātta. In the first-case plural, by "jasi ca" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-109) guṇa and av replacement: prśanāyuvah.
- श्रीणन्ति — the root śrīṇ pāke, kryādi; laṭ, third person plural; the ā of the stem-marker śnā, which comes by "kryādibhyaḥ śnā" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-81), is dropped by "śnābhyastayor ātaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-112); since an atiñanta precedes, the nighāta accent.
- हिन्वन्ति — the root hivi prīṇane, bhvādi; by "idito num dhātoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-58) the augment num; in the laṭ, third person plural, the form hinvantī; the tiñanta nighāta accent.

- सायकम् — the root ṣo antakarmanī, divādi; with the affix ṇvul, by "ādeca upadeśe 'ṣiti" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-45) ā for the root; by "ato yuk ciṇ-kṛtoḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-33) the augment yuk after the ā; because it is k-marked it comes at the end; by "yuvor anākau" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-1) aka for the affix; the word sāyaka; by "ati" [as read: "..."] the accent comes to the syllable before the affix. || 11 ||

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.12

"The cows, being of excellent understanding, honour Indra's strength by offering their milk and so increase it. Wishing to fight with Indra, they praise Indra's numerous heroic deeds, for the instruction of enemies who may be slain in the future. Dwelling in their cow-sheds, they heed his universal sovereignty with reverence."

English Translation

"Those intelligent cows worship his prowess with the adoration of their milk ; they proclaimed his many exploits as an example to later enemies and are benificent [sic] in accordance with his sovereignty." — as printed ("benificent" as printed [sic]).

- नमसा सपर्यन्ति — svakīyena payorūpeṇānnena paricaranti — "they serve Indra with their milk."
- व्रतान्यस्य — "vratāni means deeds of daring; the various works done by Indra."
- सञ्चिरे — saśca gatau; jñāyante — "they are made known: that is, made so that all may know."

- पूर्वचित्तये — citī saṃjñāne — "to give notice beforehand to enemies who desire to fight."

- सपर्यन्ति — the root sapara pūjāyām; by "kaṇḍvādibhyo yak" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-27) the affix yak; the yak accent.
- सश्चिरे — the root saśca gatau; by "vyatyayo bahulam" the ātmanepada affix; in the liṭ, by "liṭas tajhayor eśirec" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-81) irec for jha; by "tiṇ atīṇaḥ" the nighāta accent.
- पूर्वचित्तये — the root citī saṃjñāne; by "striyām ktin" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-94) the affix ktin in the bhāva sense. By the accent of a kṛt-ending final member the compound would take the accent of the last member; but, since it is read in the marudvṛdhādi group (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[?]), the first member's final-udātta accent arises. In the fourth case singular, by "gher ñiti" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-111) guṇa, and ay replacement: pūrvacittaye. || 12 ||

Sense: "On the twenty-fourth day, at the morning pressing, in the śastra of the Brāhmaṇācchamsin the triad indro dadhīcaḥ is called the padagaha-stotriya; it is stated in the sūtra: 'ādaha svadhām anu punargarbhatvam erire — one (Ṛk), and the two indro dadhīco asthabhiḥ' (Āś. 7-3 [?]). — Here the Śātyāyanins tell this legend: 'When Dadhyañc, son of Atharvan, was alive, the asuras were defeated by the very sight of him. Then, when he had gone to heaven, the earth was filled with the asuras. Indra, unable to fight them, heard that the ṛṣi had gone to heaven, and asked those there whether anything of him remained. They told him: "There is this horse's head, with which head he taught the Aśvins the madhuvidyā; but we do not know where it is." Indra said, "Seek it." They sought it and found it at Śaryaṇāvat — a lake that lies in the rear half of Kurukṣetra. With the bones of that head Indra slew the asuras.' — Apratiṣkutaḥ — undisputed by anyone. Indra, with the bones (asthabhiḥ) of the ṛṣi Dadhyañc, son of Atharvan — bones belonging to the horse's head — slew (jaghāna) navatīr nava, 'nine times ninety' — eight hundred and ten of the vṛtras, the enveloping asura-born things. The reckoning: to conquer the gods who see the three worlds, the asuras' māyā is at first threefold — according to past, future and present; then each of these is trebled for each of the three times; thus nine; again, by trebling according to the three powers (of earth and so on), twenty-seven; again, by trebling according to the three guṇas beginning with sattva, eighty-one; and then, the māyā thus multiplied by four threes, being present in each of the ten directions, makes nine times ninety. Indra slew the vṛtras in the form of such māyā." The grammatical tail (outlined): dadhīcaḥ — from dadhyañc, kvin after añc; asthabhiḥ — anañ as the substitute of asthi even before a non-vowel-initial case-ending in the Veda (Pā. 6-1-26 [?]), udātta." ³⁰

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.13

"Indra, endowed with irresistible strength and without opposing sound, with the bones of the ṛṣi Dadhīci destroyed the power of the enemies, in the form of māyā — eight hundred and ten kinds, spread out and covering the three worlds."

English Translation

"Indra with the bones of Dadhyanch, slew, ninety times nine, Vritra" — as printed (the sentence ends without a full stop; "ninety times nine" is as the print has it).

॥ विशेषविषयगुलु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.13)

- दधीचः — "dadhyañc, or the ṛṣi named dadhīci, known in the Purāṇas and elsewhere. The bhāṣyakāra tells an upākhyāna here: when the ṛṣi named Dadhyañc, the son of Atharvan, was alive, the asuras fled in fear at the mere sight of him. After he died and went to heaven, the asuras spread fearlessly over the whole earth. Then Indra, desiring to fight these asuras, searched for that ṛṣi, and learned that the ṛṣi had gone to heaven. Then Indra asked those nearby whether any part of the ṛṣi's limbs remained; they said: 'The ṛṣi Dadhīci had once taught the Aśvin deities the madhuvidyā with the head of a horse; only that horse's head remains, and we do not know where it is.' Then Indra told them to search for it; they found it lying in the lake called Śaryaṇāvat, near Kurukṣetra, and brought it."

"Indra conquered the asuras with the bones of that horse's head. This means that he destroyed the māyā-webs of the asuras 'nine times ninety'. In explaining the number 'nine times ninety' the bhāṣyakāra says: the asuras first had three kinds of māyā for conquering the deities of the three worlds; each of these existed in the three modes — past, present and future — making nine kinds in all. Those nine māyās, joined with the three powers utsāha (energy), mantra (counsel) and prabhu (authority), become $9 \times 3 = 27$; joined with the three guṇas beginning with sattva, $27 \times 3 = 81$ (the numerals as read: '९×३=२७', '२७×३=८१'). Since these eighty-one māyās are practised in the ten directions, the total is $81 \times 10 = 810$ — or nine times ninety, $9 \times 90 = 810$ (as read). Thus, he explains, Indra rendered fruitless the māyā-webs of the asuras in the form of Vṛtra." ³¹

"Skandasvāmin tells another itihāsa: in the old days there were asuras called Kālakañja. They were very powerful, and were killing the gods and giving them great trouble. Then the gods went to Brahmā and prayed that they should be told a means to destroy these asuras. Brahmā said: 'O gods, there is a ṛṣi called Dadhyañc. Go to him; he will tell you a fitting means for the destruction of the asuras.' As Brahmā said, the gods went to the ṛṣi Dadhīci and told him that Brahmā had sent them. The ṛṣi, understanding by his yogic vision the work for which they had come, gave up his life by yogasamādhi. Then Indra destroyed the asuras with the bones. Skandasvāmin says that this matter itself is described in this Ṛk."

"The name of this ṛṣi occurs in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā at 1-[80]-[16]; 1-[84]-[13]; 1-[84]-[14]; 1-[116]-[12]; 1-[117]-[22]; 1-[139]-[4] [?] and so on, and in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, the Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (several places), and the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (2-5-22 [?]) and other places." ³²

31. This is the same legend and reckoning as in the Special Topics of Rik 80.16 [Vol. 6, pp. 615–616], here given again in the bhāṣya; the Kannada page repeats it.

32. All reference numerals are given as read from the small Kannada print and are uncertain [?].

Sū. 6-3-138) the first member is lengthened since the root añc follows ... ³⁴

- दधीचः (continued) — "...since this is a cau-situation (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[?]), the accent of the first member would be final-udātta; setting that aside, since the case-ending asarvanāmasthāna follows, by "añcheś chandasy asarvanāmasthānam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-170) the case-ending again takes udātta; so it is a word with final-udātta."
- अस्थभिः — "for the word asthi, though the substitute anañ is stated for a vowel-initial case-ending, by "chandasy api dṛśyate" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-26 [?]) the substitute anañ arises also before bhis, which begins with a consonant; this too is udātta because it has the mark ñ, and as a final substitute it is final. By "nalopaḥ prātipadikāntasya" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-7) the n is dropped; thus asthabhiḥ is a word with the middle udātta."

- अश्वस्य शिरः — "the horse's head: it is believed that the head of the ṛṣi Dadhīci became a horse's head, and that it was given to him by the Aśvin deities. After Dadhīci's death Indra searched for the horse's head with which he had been furnished, and found it. In this Rk it is described that it was found hidden behind a mountain, in a lake called Śaryaṇāvatī."
- ³⁵ — "On the question how the horse's head came to the ṛṣi Dadhīci, Skandasvāmin tells a story: Indra taught to Dadhīci, the son of Atharvan, the nature of the supreme Brahman called Madhu," ³⁶

"...and told him not to tell it to anyone, saying that if he did his head would fall off. After some time the Aśvin deities came to the ṛṣi Dadhīci and asked about the Brahman-nature that Indra had taught him; Dadhīci told them that Indra had said that his head would fall off if he spoke of it, and that from fear he would not tell. The Aśvins said, 'Do not worry about it; if your head falls off we will give you ours.' Dadhīci agreed. So when Dadhīci's head fell off, the Áśvins cut off the head of a horse, fitted it on and joined it to the body of the ṛṣi Dadhīci; therefore it is described that the ṛṣi Dadhīci's head became a horse's head. This matter is described by the ṛṣi Kakṣivān in the Ṛk 1-[116]-[12]."

- अपश्रितम् — apagatya sthitam — "hidden, out of sight behind (a mountain)."
- शर्यणावति — "the seventh-case singular of śaryaṇāvat, the name of a lake. This word occurs in the Ṛgveda in the Ṛks 1-[84]-[14]; 3-[?]-[?]; 5-[?]-[?]; 8-[?]-[?]; 10-[?]-[?] and others [numerals as read, all [?]]. In all these places the bhāṣyakāra explains it as the name of a lake. Today it is understood that this lake is in the region called Kurukṣetra, in the area of present-day Delhi [the English word is printed in the Kannada text as "Delhi"]. Western scholars give various meanings for this word. Śaryaṇa may be the name of a place, and the lake there may have been called śaryaṇāvān, as they suppose; others suppose that śaryaṇa means 'tall reeds' [jondū hullu], and that a lake in which such tall grass grows is called śaryaṇāvān; others hold that it may be one of the many lakes in the middle of the mountains in the land of Kashmir."

- विदत् — the root vida jñāne; the luñ, third person singular; when it follows, by vyatyaya the substitute a for cli (añ); since it is ñit, no light-penultimate guṇa; by "bahulaṃ chandasy amāñyoge 'pi" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) no augment aṭ.

Grammar of Rik 84.14, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

- शर्याणावति — "Śaryaṇā is the name of a region. The lake not far from the śaryaṇās is śaryaṇāvat. Since the word śaryaṇa is read in the madhvādi group, by "madhvādibhyaś ca" (Pā. Sū. 4-2-86) the affix matup arises in the fourth (cāturarthika) sense as an exception to aṇ. Since it is a name (saṃjñā), by "saṃjñāyām" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-11) va is the substitute for the m of matup; with śaryaṇāvat standing, by "matau bahvaco 'nacirādīnām" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-119) the first member is lengthened when matup follows. "In the sacrifice called Atimūrṭi, which is performed on a single day, the Saurya and Cāndramasa offerings (iṣṭi) are to be performed for one month beforehand. When the Cāndramasī iṣṭi is first performed, this Ṛk atrāha gor amanvata is to be used as the puronuvākyā mantra; this is explained in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section atimūrṭinā, by the sūtra 'atrāha gor amanvata navo-navo bhavati jāyamānaḥ' (Āś. [9-8] [?])."

- अत्र आह — "right here, in this region."
- गोः — gantuḥ — "of the moving (moon)."
- त्वष्टुः — "of the shining sun; tvaṣṭr is also one of the names of the twelve Ādityas."
- आपीच्यम् — apigate nigate bhavam āpīcyam; āpīcyo 'prakāśa (Bhaṭṭabhāskaramiśra) — "light that is without brightness. The sun's rays fall on the orb of the moon and are reflected; then those rays do not have the very bright light of the direct sun, but are with a common light. Yāska's explanation:

अत्र ह गोः समुमुंसताऽदित्यरश्मयः स्वं नामापीच्यमपचितमुपगतमपिहितमन्तर्हितं वामुत्र चन्द्रमसो गृहे ।

atra ha goḥ samumumsatādityaraśmayah svam nāmāpīcyam apacitam upagatam apihitam antarhitam vāmutra candramaso grhe | (Ni. [4-23] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative (the print of this quotation is partly clotted [?]): "Here, in the house of the moon, the rays of the sun [made themselves] their own name, āpīcyā — gone, approached, covered, hidden."

Here Yāska explains the word āpīcyam as apacitam, apagatam, apihitam, antarhitam vā ('gone away, covered, hidden'). The rays of the sun, issuing from the solar orb, enter the lunar orb and are hidden within it; that is, being inside, they are not seen by the eye; yet the light of those rays is seen by us as an ordinary, not exceedingly bright, light. Āpīcyam means antarhitam — 'hidden inside'."

- इत्था — "'in this way' — the meaning is that the rays of the sun fall on the orb of the moon and are reflected. At night the sun is not seen. Then the radiance belonging to that sun, falling on the orb of the moon — water-like — and moving as the sun does in the daytime, dispels the darkness and gives light. Therefore people suppose that the moon, which has such light, is itself the sun (since the moon's light has come from the sun). Since Indra is counted among the twelve Ādityas and gives light by day and night, the bhāṣyakāra says that this Ṛk should be understood as addressed to Indra. Since in this Ṛk the chief emphasis is on the moon's radiance, this Ṛk has application in the Cāndramasa offering."

Yāska says in his Nirukta:

अथास्यैको रश्मिश्चन्द्रमसं प्रति दीप्यते तदेतेनोपेक्षितव्यम् । आदित्योऽस्य दीप्तिर्भवति ।
सुषुम्नः सूर्यरश्मिश्चन्द्रमा गन्धर्व इत्यपि निगमो भवति ।

athāśyaiko raśmiś candramasaṃ prati dīpyate tad etenopekṣitavyam | ādityo 'sya dīptir bhavati | suṣumnaḥ sūryaraśmiś candramā gandharva ity api nigamo bhavati | (Ni. [2-6] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "One ray of his shines towards the moon; that is to be understood in this way: the sun is the source of its light. 'The ray of the sun, Suṣumna, is the moon, a Gandharva' — so too says a Nigama (Vedic quotation)."

"That is: one ray of the sun, called Suṣumna, falls on the orb of the moon and lights it. This is to be understood by the vision of the mantra. Since the moon shines by the sun's ray, it is to be understood that the light in the moon comes from the sun alone. Because it is said, 'ādityo 'pi gaur ucyate' (Ni. [2-6] [?]) — 'the sun too is called go' — here go is a name of the sun; and 'sarve 'pi raśmayo gāva ucyante' (Ni. [2-6] [?]) — 'all rays are called gāvaḥ': gāvaḥ is a name of the sun's rays too."

- अमन्वत — the root manu avabodhane, divādi; lañ [luñ-like], third person plural, ātmanepada; by "ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-5) the substitute at for the affix jha; the form amanvata; nighāta accent of the tiñanta.
- अपीच्यम् — the root ciñ cayane; with the preposition api preceding, by "āśvāghasyā..." [as read: "āśvāghyādayaś ca", Uṇ. Sū. 4-[101] [?]] the affix yat by nipātana; the desired form is accomplished by the nipātana itself. Or, for the root añcu preceded by api, the affix kvin by "ṛtvigdadhr̥k..."; by "aniditām hala upadhāyāḥ..." the loss of the nasal; api-gate ni-gate bhavam = āpīcyam: by "bhava chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 4-4-110) the affix yat; by "acaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-138) the a of the root is dropped; then, by "cau" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-138) the preceding member is lengthened; by "tit svaritam" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-185) the svarita accent. Āpīcyo 'prakāśaḥ — 'the āpīcyā is "without brilliance" — says Bhaṭṭabhāskaramiśra.

Grammar of Rik 84.15, concluded:

- इत्था — "the sense of 'manner' is shown after the word idam: by "thāhetau ca chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-26) the affix thā. By the other view, in that sūtra the word idam does not continue; then, by "idamas thamuh" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-24) the affix thamu. By "svarādinipātam avyayam" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-37) a word ending in this affix is called avyaya; then the sup- elision that would arise by "avyayād āpsupaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-82) is set aside by vyatyaya, and the case-ending is replaced by ḍā by "supāṃ suluk..."; by the affix-accent it is final-udātta."

- चन्द्रमसः — "candram āhlādanaṃ mimīte nirmimīte iti candramāḥ: with candra as the upapada, the root māṇ [mā], by "candre māño ḍit" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[222] [?]) the affix asi. The word is candramas; the sixth case singular is the form. By the accent of the kṛt-ending final member [the compound would take its accent]; but since it is read in the dāsibhārādi group, the first-member's own accent arises; since the first member candra is formed by the affix rak enjoined by "sphāyitañcivañcy..." (Uṇ. Sū. 2-[13] [?]), it is final-udātta." ||15||

Sense: "In the Sarvaprṣṭhyā offering (iṣṭi), for the oblation to Ka (kāya), the two Ṛks ko adya are the yājyā and anuvākyā; so it is stated: 'kāyaṃ daśamaṃ — ko adya yuñkte dhuri gā ṛtasya — the two' (Āś. [?]). — Who (kaḥ) today yokes (yuñkte) in the pole-place (dhuri) of the chariot of Indra, which goes to the sacrifice (ṛtasya), the horses that are gāḥ — swift — śīmīvataḥ (endowed with heroic action), bhāmīnaḥ (blazing with radiance), durhṛṇāyūn (full of an unbearable wrath — hṛṇīyati is a verb of being angry), āsanniṣūn (having arrows fixed in their mouth-region for the slaying of enemies), hṛtsvasaḥ (who hurl their own darts into the hearts of enemies), mayobhūn (causing happiness to their own)? Who is able to yoke such horses? No one. The sacrificer who supports (rṇadhāt, makes successful) the bhr̥tyā — the care, the work of drawing the chariot — of such horses, that is, praises them: that sacrificer would live (jīvāt). Or: Ka is called Prajāpati ('Ka is indeed the name of Prajāpati,' says the śruti). Ṛtasya — of the sacrifice, in carrying it through, gāh — the Vedic mantras, all of them, adya — now, he yokes (joins) — mantras śimīvataḥ (joined with the rites they teach), bhāminah (shining), durhṛṇāyūn (impossible to abandon, since the study of the Veda is a constant duty), āsanniṣūn (those whose iṣu, 'going out, utterance', is in the mouth), hṛtsvasaḥ (shining in the hearts), mayobhūn (producing the unseen mayas, happiness, that is born of study). "In this sacrifice, to the pole of Indra's chariot — endowed with deeds of valour, full of brilliance, of irresistible anger, with arrows set in their mouths, stepping with the foot upon the hearts of enemies, producing happiness for friends — those horses: who yokes them? The sacrificer who praises the extraordinary labour of those horses in drawing Indra's chariot lives a long life."

English Translation

"Who yokes to-day to the pole of the chariot (of Indra) his vigorous and radiant [sic] horses, whose fury is unbearable, who have arrows in their mouths, who trample on the hearts of enemies and who give happiness to friends? The sacrificer who praises the performance of these horses obtains long life." — as printed.

- हृत्स्वसः — hr̥tsu śātrūṇām hr̥dayeṣu svasaṃti svakīyaṃ pādāṃ kṣīpantīti hr̥tsvasaḥ tān — "those that, as it were, hurl their own feet on the hearts of the enemies, that is, those that trample on the enemies in battle."
- मयोभून् — "mayah means happiness (Ni. [3-?] [?]); those who bring happiness to their own people; towards their own folk they act with a gentle nature, without anger and the like."

The editor's remark: "Many words in this Ṛk are obscure (kliṣṭa); the meaning does not fit well. The bhāṣyakāra has therefore given two kinds of meaning for this Ṛk: following the meaning that kaḥ is a common word ('what man'), and the meaning kaḥ = Prajāpati, he has given separate explanations, accordingly."

Sū. 1-[?] [?]); the final accent by the accent of the affix; accusative plural.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 84.16, continued from p. 128 (grammar page, noted briefly; every sūtra read is given in three layers, the numerals as read [?]):

- आसन्निषून् — by "पद्दन्नोमास्..." (paddanno-mās-hṛn-niśasan..., Pā. Sū. 6-1-63 [?]) āsan is substituted for the word āśya; iṣ in the sense of motion, to which by "इषेः किच्च" (iṣeḥ kic ca, Uṇ. Sū. 1-[13?] [?]) the affix u (made kit) is added; since it is kit, the laghūpadha guṇa does not occur; āsani iṣavaḥ yeṣām — in the bahuvrīhi compound by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" (bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam) the first member keeps its own accent.

- हृत्स्वसः — asu kṣepaṇe, or the root asa gatidīptyādāneṣu; by "क्विप् च" (kvip ca) the affix kvip; when compounded as hṛtsu asaḥ, by "तत्पुरुषे कृति बहुलम्" (tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam) the case-ending is not elided (aluk); by "गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्" (gatikāraḥkopapadāt kṛt) the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent.
- मयोभून् — by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" (vyatyayo bahulam) the shortening of bhū by vyatyaya; or, since this word is in the class of mitadru- etc., by "मितद्र्वादिभ्य उपसंख्यानम्" (mitadrvādibhya upasaṁkhyānam, Pā. Sū. 3-2-180-1 [?]) the affix ḍu; by ṭi-loss the form as given; here too the kṛduttarapada keeps its base accent. Accusative plural.
- भृत्याम् — the root bhrñ bharāṇe; by "संज्ञायां समजनिषद..." (saṁjñāyāṁ samajaniṣada..., Pā. Sū. 3-3-99 [?]) the affix kyap in a name; by "ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक्" (hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk) the augment tuk for the short vowel; the accent of pit is set aside because "udāttaḥ" runs on from the kyap-rule, so the affix is acute.
- ऋणधत् — the root ṛdhu vṛddhau; leṭ, third person singular, the affix ti; by "इतश्च लोपः" (itaś ca lopaḥ) the loss of its ī; by "लेटोऽडाटौ" (leṭo 'ḍāṭau) the augment aṭ; by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" the śnam in place of śap [as read]; the nighāta of the tiñanta is barred because "yaḥ" stands before it, and the accent of the vikaraṇa remains.
- जीवात् — the root jīva prāṇadhārāṇe; the leṭ form as before, the only peculiarity the augment aṭ; because it stands after an atiñanta (a word that is not a tiñanta), the nighāta accent comes.

Translation of the bhāṣya (so far): "When Indra, the helper, has come, who goes away? — who, fearful of the enemy, departs? None whatever. Tujyate — who is injured? There is nobody whom the enemies can injure. Which sacrificer is afraid? When Indra is the protector, there is not even fear, still less any harm from enemies. Who thinks of Indra, who is so near, being near to us as our protector? That is, who knows? We alone know, no other. (Here one kaḥ is a mere filler.) When Indra has come in battle to help, which sacrificer will speak on behalf of a son (tokāya)? — 'O Indra, protect my son!' — as one might speak on behalf of a Brahmin out of partiality: which sacrificer would make a plea of this kind? The idea is that Indra protects of his own accord. Who will speak for an elephant (ibhāya)? And who will speak for wealth (rāyaḥ) that is being carried off by enemies? ..."

Translation: "...which sacrificer would plead, 'protect our wealth that is being carried off'? None. And further, who will plead for his own body (tanve), for his people, for his retinue? No plea to Indra is needed to protect one's own body or one's retinue: Indra, pleased by praise, protects of his own accord. But when the word ka is applied to Prajāpati, in a rite that belongs to him, then, by the possession of supreme lordship, it is Prajāpati alone who is denoted by the word Indra; just as, according to the application 'aindryā gārhapatyam upatiṣṭhate' ('with the Aindrī [Rk] one approaches the Gārhapatya fire'), Indra, who is present in the R̥k, is taken as referring to the Gārhapatya — so here too." ⁵⁰

(When Indra, the protector, is near) kaḥ — which sacrificer (himself); īṣate — flees far, afraid of the enemy; kaḥ — who; tujyate — is injured (by the enemy); kaḥ — who; bibhāya — is afraid; anti — near us; santam — being (as protector); indram — Indra; kaḥ — (other than ourselves) who; maṃsate — knows; kaḥ — which sacrificer; tokāya — for offspring; adhi-bravat — (need) press (Indra) [there is no need to press him; he himself favours];

51. The sūtras partly read: "udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svaritaḥ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-4); the others named are given without numbers, none being legible. Noted briefly: īṣate — root īṣ (going, injuring, seeing), Bhvādi, ātmanepada; tujyate — root tuj (to injure), yak in the passive sense, the accent of the yak alone remaining; maṃsate — leṭ with the augment aṭ, sip by "sibbahulaṃ leṭī"; anti — loss of the ka/ika element of āntika; bravat — leṭ of brū; tanve — dative singular of tanū, yaṇ substitution, svarita accent of the ending.

ibhāya — for an elephant; kaḥ — who (is compelled to insist); uta — and; rāye — for wealth (carried off by enemies) (who need press?); tanve — for one's own bodily protection; janāya — for retinue; kaḥ — which sacrificer himself (need press Indra?).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.17

"When Indra, the protector, is near, which sacrificer, afraid of the enemy, runs far away? Which is injured by the enemy? Which is afraid? Who, other than ourselves, can know Indra, who stands near us as protector? Which sacrificer need press Indra, whether for offspring, for an elephant, for wealth stolen by enemies, for the protection of his own self, or for his dependants? Without that pressing, Indra himself favours everything."

English Translation ⁵²

"When Indra is at hand who flees through fear of enemies ? who is harmed ? who is terrified ? who is aware that Indra is present though he is near ? what need is there that any one should importune Indra for his son, his elephant, his property, his person, or his people ?" — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 84.17)

"In this R̥k too the word kaḥ is explained as 'Prajāpati', and the bhāṣyakāra, following that, has given a different sense."

- ईषते — īṣa gatihimśādarśaneṣu | bhauvādika ātmanepadī —
 "'goes'; that is, runs away through fear of enemies. Since Indra is near us and protects us, no man need run away in fear of an enemy — such is the intention."

- मंसते सन्तमिन्द्रं को अन्ति — "Though Indra is near us for our protection, who can know this matter of himself? That Indra is near is known to no one. Yet the meaning is that Indra is nearby."
- इभाय — gajāya — "the bhāṣyakāra has explained this word as 'elephant'. In the Ṛgveda the elephant is nowhere mentioned in particular; and it is unlikely that ordinary people would have elephants. Western scholars therefore hold that it is fitting to give this word the sense 'without fear'. The bhāṣyakāra too has given this sense in many places."
- अधि ब्रवत् — adhivacanam kuryāt jñāpayatīndram ity arthaḥ — "there is no need to make Indra aware in order that sons and the like be protected; he himself knows everything and protects."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.17) ⁵³

- ईषते — the root īṣa gatihiṃsādarśaneṣu, Bhvādi, ātmanepada; laṭ, third person singular; by "दित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे" (ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e) the ending e; the vikaraṇa śap; by "तिङ्ङितिङः" (tiṅ atīnaḥ) the nighāta accent.
- तुज्यते — the root tuja hiṃsāyām; laṭ in the passive, third person singular, e as before; by "सार्वधातुकेयक्" (sārvadhātuke yak) the affix yak in place of the vikaraṇa; since it is kit, no laghūpadha guṇa (continued on p. 133).

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 84.17, continued from p. 132 (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read are given in three layers):

- तुज्यते (cont.) — by the prohibition "अतिङः" (atīnaḥ) in the sense of exclusion, the nighāta accent does not come; since the root has ad-upadeśa (a-ending in the enunciation), by

"तास्यनुदात्तेऽङिदुपदेशाल्लसार्वधातुकमनुदात्तमहन्वनोर्.." (tāsyānudāttenñidupadeśāl lasārvadhātukam anudāttam..., Pā. Sū. 6-1-186 [?]) the lasārvadhātuka ending (te) is unaccented, so the acute accent of the yak alone remains.

- बिभाय — the root ṇibhī bhaye; liṭ, third person singular, ṇal as substitute; reduplication of the root; the reduplicate loses its aspiration/gets hrasva-jaś [as read: "abhyāsasya hrasvajaśtva"]; for the ī of the root vrddhi, then āy-substitution; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta.
- मंसते — the root mana jñāne; leṭ, third person singular; by "लेटोऽडाटौ" (leṭo 'ḍāṭau) the augment aṭ; by "सिब्वहुलं लेटि" (sibbahulaṃ leṭi, Pā. Sū. 3-1-34) the affix sip; by "नश्छव्यप्रशान्" or the sūtra named in the print ("naś ca padāntasya jhali" [as read: "naśchapada..."]) the anusvāra in place of the n of the root; nighāta accent.⁵⁴
- अन्ति — in the word āntika, by "कादिलोपो बहुलम्" (kādilopo bahulam) the loss of the k-element.
- ब्रवत् — the root brūñ vyaktāyāṃ vāci; leṭ, third person singular; as before the augment aṭ and loss of the ī; guṇa to the root because of the sārvadhātuka; av-substitution; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta.
- तन्वे — the word tanū, dative singular (ñe) following; by "जसादिषु छन्दसि वा वचनम्" (jasādiṣu chandasi vā vacanam) and "घेर्ङिति" (gher ñiti) guṇa does not occur; then by "इको यणचि" (iko yaṇaci) the yaṇ-substitution; since yaṇ has been substituted for an acute, by "उदात्तस्वरितयोर्यणः स्वरितोऽनुदात्तस्य" (udāttasvaritayor yaṇaḥ svarito 'nudāttasya, Pā. Sū. 8-2-4) the unaccented case-ending following gets the svarita.

Translation: "What sacrificer praises Agni? Having prepared an oblation for Indra, he praises Agni. Even the preparing of the oblation for Indra cannot be done properly, because Indra is hard to know. Or: who, for the sake of the sacrifice to Indra, would sacrifice to Agni with the ladle (sruc, i.e. juhū), with ghee marked by the dhruva — the fixed, settled — seasons (ṛtu), spring and the rest, with an oblation (yajātai, from yaj, let)? Or else: the seasons are the deities of the prayāja offerings, for the Śruti says 'the seasons are the prayājas'. Who would sacrifice with those unmoving seasons — which are to be observed in the model and in the modified rites — together with Agni, the deity of the ājyabhāga, with ghee as oblation? Nobody. To what sacrificer do the gods swiftly bring homa, the oblation to be offered, worthy of praise, wealth? (āvahanti = they give.) To none. Indra alone is the giver of wealth, not the other gods — thus is Indra praised. Vītihotraḥ — one who has attained the sacrifice; sudevaḥ — having good deities: what sacrificer maṃsate, knows Indra properly? None. The meaning is that Indra becomes manifest by manifold praise and long worship, and not by another way."

which deities; ā vahān — bring? ; vītihotraḥ — one who has performed the sacrifice; sudevaḥ — one having the favour of auspicious deities; kaḥ — which sacrificer; mamsate — knows (Indra completely).

अथवा — Or (second arrangement)

The same words, with dhruvebhiḥ — "immovable" and ṛtubhiḥ — "together with the season-deities", ghṛtena — "of the form of ghee", the rest as above.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 84.18

"Which sacrificer can, for Indra, kindle Agni and praise him by offering? Which one, with the eternal seasons — spring and the rest — and with the oblation in the form of ghee, can worship through the ladles? Which other deities, besides Indra, can bring the wealth that has been prayed for to any sacrificer who performs a sacrifice? Which sacrificer, who has performed a sacrifice and obtained the favour of other auspicious deities, can know Indra completely? That is: Indra alone is more excellent than all the deities. If he is to be realised directly, it is not possible without the highest worship."

"Who praises Agni or sacrificial fire lighted for Indra or worships him with the oblation of clarified butter, presented in the ladle according to the seasons ? to whom the gods quickly bring the wealth that has been called for ? what sacrificer, engaged in offering oblations and favoured by the gods, thoroughly knows Indra ?" — as printed ("praises" misprinted "priases"; "called for" misprinted "calle1" at the page-foot) [sic].

'ṛtavo vai prayājāh' — 'the seasons are the prayājas' (a Śruti sentence) — that is, the seasons, or the deities presiding over the seasons. ॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 84.18)

- इट् — the root īḍa stutau, Adādi; laṭ, third person singular; for the affix ta, by "टित् आत्मनेपदानां टेरे" (ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭere) the e; by "अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शप्ः" (adiprabhṛtibhyaḥ śapaḥ, Pā. Sū. 2-4-72) the elision (luk) of śap; by ṣṭutva/ṭutva the t of the affix becomes ṭ; the form īṭṭe; the nighāta accent of the tiṇanta.
- सुचा — instrumental singular of the word sruc; by "सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः" (sāv ekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ, Pā. Sū. 6-1-168) — since it is a monosyllable, the case-ending takes the acute.

- यजाते — the root yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu; leṭ, third person singular; by "लेटोऽडाटौ" (leṭo 'dāṭau) the augment aṭ; by "वैतोऽन्यत्र" (vaito 'nyatra, Pā. Sū. 3-4-96) the substitution of ai as the ending; the nighāta accent.
- वहान् — the root vaha prāpaṇe; leṭ, third person plural; by "झोऽन्तः" (jho 'ntaḥ) the substitute ant for jhi; by "लेटोऽडाटौ" the aṭ augment; by "इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु" (itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu) the loss of the final i; then by "संयोगान्तस्य लोपः" (saṃyogāntasya lopah) the loss of the final t; the form vahān; nighāta because it follows an atiṅanta word.

- होमम् — the root hveñ spardhāyām śabde ca; by "आतो मनिन्क्वनिब्बनिपश्च" (āto manin-kvanib-vanipāś ca, Pā. Sū. 3-2-74 [?]) the affix manin after a root ending in ā; by "आतो लोप इटि च" (āto lopa ṭi ca) the loss of ā; when hvā+man — as "hvaḥ" runs on, by "बहुलं छन्दसि" (bahulaṃ chandasī) the saṃprasāraṇa; by "संप्रसारणाच्च" (saṃprasāraṇāc ca) the former form; guṇa to the u because of the ārdhadhātuka; the word homan. Or, in "नामन्सीमन्.." (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[150] [?]) the word homan is fixed by nipātana with the affix manin; because it ends in a nit affix, by "ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्" (ñnityādir nityam) it has the acute on the first syllable.
- मंसते — the root mana jñāne; leṭ, singular; by "लेटोऽडाटौ" the aṭ augment; by "सिब्वहुलं लेटि" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-34) the affix sip; by "नश्चापदान्तस्य झलि" (naś cāpadāntasya jhali) the anusvāra for the n; by "तिङ्ङितिङः" the nighāta accent.
- वीतिहोत्रः — the root vī in the sense of motion and the rest; to it, by "मन्त्रे वृषेषपचमनविदभूवीरा उदात्तः" (mantre vṛṣeṣapacamanavidabhūvīrā udāttaḥ, Pā. Sū. 3-3-96 [?]) the affix ktin in the passive sense, acute; being kit, no guṇa. Hotram = homa: by "हुयामाश्रुभसिभ्यस्त्रन्" (huyāmāśrubhasibhyas tran, Uṇ. Sū. 4-[162] [?]) the affix tran after the root hu; guṇa to the root's u by "सर्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः" (sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ); vītiḥ prāptaḥ hotraṃ homaḥ yena saḥ vītihotraḥ ("he who has obtained homa") — by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" the first member keeps its own accent.

- सुदेवः — śobhano devo 'sya saḥ sudevaḥ; by "नञ्सुभ्याम्" (nañsubhyām, Pā. Sū. 6-2-172) the acute is on the final syllable of the second member.

 O śaviṣṭha, most powerful Indra, shining god, you pra śaṃsiṣaḥ —

In the Abhiplava ṣaḍaha, on the fourth day, in the Āgnimāruta, this sūkta is to be used at the mārutanividdhānīya; and it is prescribed in the sūtra: 'pra ye śumbhante janayo na saptayaḥ — this is the Āgnimāruta' (Āś. 8-2 [?])."

अनुवादवु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

"From this sūkta the fourteenth anuvāka begins. In this anuvāka there are nine sūktas (Sūktas 85–93). In the first of them, the sūkta beginning pra ye śumbhante, there are twelve Ṛks. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. The deities are the Maruts. The fifth and the twelfth Ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre; the remaining Ṛks are in the Jagatī metre. In the Anukramaṇī it is said: 'pra ye dvādaśa mārutaṃ ha pañcamy antye triṣṭubhau'. The use of the word ha in this sentence ... [the Kannada runs on to p. 144: the next four sūktas, beginning with this one, are addressed to the Maruts].

Anuvāda of the introduction to Sūkta 85, continued from p. 143 (Kannada): "...the use of the word ha in this sentence indicates that the four sūktas beginning with this one are addressed to the Maruts. In the sacrifice called Abhiplava-ṣaḍaha, on its fourth day, at the time of the Āgnimāruta śāstra and the recitation of the mantras, this sūkta has an application for the mārutanividdha mantras. This matter is set out in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'pra ye śumbhante janayo na saptayaḥ ity āgnimārutam' (Āś. 8-2 [?])." ²

Translation: "O Maruts! When there is occasion for going (yāman), they adorn (pra śumbhante) their own limbs, exceedingly — janayo na, as wives do: as women adorn their own limbs, so do these. What are the Maruts like? Saptayaḥ — given to moving swiftly; rudrasya sūnavah — sons of Rudra (Rudra is the Supreme Lord who makes all weep at the end-time); sudamśasaḥ — of good works. This he now justifies: for the Maruts have made rodasī, heaven and earth, to grow (vr̥dhe), by giving rain and so on; hence they are sudaṃsasahaḥ. Vīrāḥ — heroes, especially given to hurling down enemies; ghṛṣvayaḥ — given to crushing, that is, breakers of trees, mountains and rock-heaps. Being such, the Maruts, in the vidathas (vidathā = sacrifices, in which gods are to be worshipped [?]), rejoice, delighting in the drinking of Soma."

4. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 145

5. cakrire — they have made yāman — in the time of their going; janayo na — like (beautiful) women; pra śumbhante — adorn (their bodies) well (such Maruts); vidatheṣu — at the sacrifices; madanti — are satisfied (by drinking Soma-juice).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.1 ⁶

"The Maruts — swift movers, sons of Rudra, who by making both heaven and earth grow through the giving of rain and so on are doers of auspicious works, who are valiant and who crush mountain rocks — adorn themselves, in the time of their going, as women adorn their own bodies; and at sacrifices they are satisfied with the drinking of Soma."

English Translation ⁷

"The Maruts who are going forth decorate themselves like females; they are the brave sons of Rudra and the doers of good work by which they promote the welfare of earth and heaven; they are heroes who crush the solid rocks and they delight in sacrifices." — as printed.

"For the word marutaḥ, Yāska's explanation runs thus:

मरुतो मितराविणो वा मितरोचिनो वा महद्द्रवन्तीति वा ॥

Mita means suśliṣṭa ('well compacted'): since they sound compactly, that is, since they blow while making a sound; or since they shine finely; or since they sound abundantly: hence the name Marutaḥ. Here some, at the place maruto mitarāviṇo vā, divide the word as marutaḥ amitarāviṇaḥ and, doing so, explain amita as 'abundant' and rāviṇaḥ as 'sounding': 'those who sound abundantly'. In the same way, dividing amitarociṇaḥ again, the meaning 'with much light' can be said."

"The deities called Maruts are in many contexts praised together with Indra. Because the praise of Indra occurs in 'marudbhir indra sakhyam te astu' (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-[?]-[?] [?]), these too have a greatness like Indra's. In the Ṛgveda thirty-three sūktas are wholly addressed to the Maruts." original p. 147

Special Topics of Rik 85.1, continued from p. 146 (Kannada prose; Ṛgveda reference numerals in Kannada numerals, read with doubt [?]):

"Besides this, seven sūktas are addressed to Indra jointly with them, and one each is addressed to Pūṣan and to Agni jointly with them. These Marut deities are many. In several places they are called trisaptaiḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[133-6] [?]) — 'three groups of seven', or companies of twenty-one; and in some other places, 'śaṣṭiḥ... marutaḥ' (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-[96-8] [?]) — it is said that there are three times sixty, that is, a hundred and eighty, Marut deities. Because they are the sons of Rudra, they are well known to be called by the name Rudriyāḥ [= Rudriyāsaḥ]. As Prṣṇi (the name of the sky-world / heaven) is said to be their mother, they are also called Prṣṇimātaraḥ, a word that means 'those whose mother is Prṣṇi'. Here Prṣṇi may be the clouds. When clouds drive the rain, the wind ordinarily blows swiftly and with sound; so this name has probably come to these deities. In places it is also said that they are born of fire and of lightning, and born of Vāyu and of heaven, and 'self-born'. It is hinted in places that Rohasī (Rodasī) is their wife, and that Indrāṇī and Sarasvatī too have a special connexion with them."

"The abode of the Marut deities is the three worlds, heaven, atmosphere and earth. Because their connexion is special with rain which moves with lightning, they are well known as 'those who shine greatly, those who are resplendent'. Lightning is their weapon. There are many descriptions: that they wear golden ornaments on the head, the feet, the heart and other parts of the body, that they hold a golden axe in the hand; that they ride a chariot yoked with the spotted deer (pr̥ṣatī), or with fawns (spotted deer, in English in the print), and travel."

"These Marut deities are big, excellent, young; cruel like lions; yet, like children, fond of play. The chariot in which they travel is as fearful as lightning. They bring rain, that is, water, along with them. A famous river, the Marudvṛdhā, is said to be helped by their might. The rain they give has various names: honey, milk, ghee. Along with the rain they are also said to bring a whirlwind. Their song gives Indra strength at the time of the slaying of Vṛtra. In places there are descriptions that they drink Soma, sing, and increase sacrifices — manifold descriptions."

"The Marut deities' chief heroic act is helping Indra in the slaying of Vṛtra. In some places they are called the sons or brothers of Indra, but at a critical moment they left Indra without helping; therefore Indra became wroth against them, took to retaliation (see below)..."⁸

"...— and Agastya, the ṛṣi, is described, in one or two sūktas, as having had to pacify Indra with great effort (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[165]; 1-[170] [?]). In connexion with Rudra being with the Maruts, there are descriptions that these Marut deities use their weapons (the axe, the bhṛjji [as read]) (Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-[34-9]; 2-[34-12]; 2-[34-3]; 1-[?]; 1-[?]; 1-[?]; 1-[?]; the numerals are cramped and are not completed [?])."

"In the matter of rites of sacrifice, there are many differences, even in the Soma sacrifice, between the Marut deities and the Vāyu deity. It is the usage to invoke Vāyu at the morning pressing, and the Maruts at the midday and third pressings. In the sacrifice called Cāturmāsyā the part played by the Maruts is special."

"We shall consider briefly the nature of the Marut deities. The difference between them and Vāyu is this: Vāyu is the ordinary wind that blows; the Maruts are the wind that blows swiftly and fearfully, together with great noise, in the rainy season accompanied by thunder, hail and lightning, when rain falls. Therefore descriptions are found that the Marut deities are resplendent, that they sound, that they are cruel, that they have much strength and power, that they are sons of the atmosphere (heaven), and that, since they always blow in the atmosphere, they are ever devoted to play (to sports)."

- जनयः — jāyante āspatyānīti janayo jāyāḥ — "since they bring forth offspring such as sons, janayaḥ means jāyāḥ, 'wives', women, young women."

- सप्तयः — sarpaṇaśīlāḥ — "of a moving, swiftly blowing nature."

- रुद्रस्य सूनवः — "To call the Marut deities sons of Rudra is the established usage. In Ṛks like 'satyaṃ śrīhā amavanto dhanvan cid ā rudriyāsaḥ' (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[64-2] [?]) the Maruts are explicitly called Rudra's sons — rudriyāsaḥ. Or, as the bhāṣyakāra says here: rudrasya sūnavaḥ | rodayati sarvam antakāla iti rudraḥ parameśvaraḥ | tasya putrāḥ — ⁹

- वृधे — the root vṛdhu vṛddhau; by the statement "सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्" (sampadādibhyaḥ kvip), since it is read in that list, the affix kvip; the word vṛdh; dative singular; the later word (ekāc) so, by "सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः" (sāv ekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ) the case-ending acute.
- मदन्ति — the root madī harṣe, Divādi; laṭ, third person plural, the substitute ant; śap as vikaraṇa in place of śyan by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्"; since madanti stands at the beginning of a pāda, the nighāta does not occur; by the root's accent the first syllable acute.

Translation: "The Maruts, who possess the qualities just described, ukṣitāsaḥ — sprinkled (consecrated) by the gods — attained (āśata) greatness. Rudrāsaḥ — sons of Rudra (the word 'father' being used figuratively). Those sons of Rudra, the Maruts, made (adhi cakrire) their abode (sadaḥ) high up, in the shining sky — that is, made it the highest of all. Arcantaḥ — worshipping Indra, who is to be worshipped (arkam), indriyam janayantaḥ — generating the vigour, the sign, of Indra: encouraging him by speech such as 'strike, O Lord, slay, show your heroism' (Ai. Brā. Pratipadārtha of Rik 85.2, continued from p. 151:

"...whose mother is the earth, the Maruts; śriyaḥ — lordly powers; adhi dadhire — took on in abundance."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.2

"The Maruts, consecrated by the gods, attained greatness. The Maruts, sons of Rudra, firmly established their abode excellently in the shining sky. The Maruts, sons of Pṛśni, worshipping Indra the worshipful and inspiring his valour, took on abundant lordly powers."

English Translation

"They (Maruts) inaugurated by the Gods have attained majesty; the Sons of Rudra have established their dwelling above the sky; glorifying him (Indra) who merits to be glorified they have inspired him with vigour; the Sons of Pṛśni (earth) have acquired glory." — as printed ("Pṛśni" in the print).

॥ विशेषविषयगु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.2)

- उक्षितासः — ukṣa secane devair abhiṣiktāḥ — "consecrated by the gods; made to attain the status of anointed ones."
- रुद्रासः — rudraputrāḥ — "Here the word rudrāsaḥ gives the name of Rudra; but, in order to indicate honour, by a figurative use (upacāra) the sons are addressed by the father's name."

- अधि चक्रिरे सदः — "the abode of the Maruts is in the highest parts of the atmosphere — so the meaning."
- अर्चन्तो अर्कइन्द्रियम् — "those who offer praise connected with Indra, that is, they are praising Indra."
- पृश्निमातरः — "pr̥śni means the earth, the cow. Pr̥śnimātaraḥ means the sons of the earth or the sons of the cow. The bhāṣyakāra explains this word as 'the sons of the earth, which has many kinds of colour'. And as an example:

पृश्नेः पुत्रा उपमासो रभिष्ठाः स्वया मत्या मरुतः सं मिमिक्षुः ॥ pr̥śneḥ putrā upamāso rabhiṣṭhāḥ svayā matyā marutaḥ saṃ mimikṣuḥ ॥ (R. Saṃ. 5-[57?]-[?] [?]; numerals not legible) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "The sons of Pr̥śni, the most vigorous, of fine quality, the Maruts, have mingled [with the offering] by their own thought."

Special Topics of Rik 85.2 (the entry on pr̥śnimātaraḥ), continued from p. 152:

"...having given this R̥k, in explaining it he explains the words pr̥śneḥ putrāḥ ('sons of Pr̥śni') by 'gorūpāyā antarikṣasya vā putrasthānīyāḥ' (goḥ rūpāyā antarikṣasya vā putrasthānīyāḥ) — that is, 'those who stand in the place of sons of the earth, which has the form of a cow, or of the atmosphere'. And Skandavāmin says: 'pr̥śnir iti dyunāma | dyaur mātā yeṣāṃ marutāṃ te pr̥śnimātaraḥ | divaḥ putrā ity arthaḥ' — 'Pr̥śni is a name of the sky. Those Maruts whose mother is the sky are pr̥śnimātaraḥ; the meaning is "sons of the sky"'. [The editor:] Pr̥śni is said to mean heaven, and the sons of the atmosphere. Since the Maruts move in the atmosphere itself, it is fitting to say that they are born from it. Yāska explains this word thus:

स्वः । पृश्निः । नाकः । गौः । विष्टपम् । नभ इति षट् साधारणानि ॥ साधारणान्युत्तराणि दिवश्चादित्यस्य च ॥

svaḥ | prśniḥ | nākaḥ | gauḥ | viṣṭapam | nabha iti ṣaṭ sādharmaṇāni || sādharmaṇāny uttarāṇi divaś cādityasya ca || (Ni. 2-[14] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Svar, prśni, nāka, go, viṣṭapa, nabhas — these six are common [names]; the later ones are common to the sky and to the sun."

— that is, the six words svaḥ, prśniḥ, nākaḥ, gauḥ, viṣṭapam, nabhaḥ are common words that denote heaven (divaḥ) and the Āditya (the sun). And again:

पृश्निरादित्यो भवति । प्राश्नुते एनं वर्ण इति नैरुक्ताः । संस्पृष्टा रसान् । संस्पृष्टा भासं
ज्योतिषाम् । संस्पृश्यो भासेति वा ॥ अथ द्यौः संस्पृष्टा ज्योतिर्भिः पुण्यकृद्भिश्च ॥

prśnir ādityo bhavati | prāśnute enaṁ varṇa iti nairuktāḥ | saṁsprṣṭā rasān | saṁsprṣṭā bhāsaṁ jyotiṣām | saṁsprśyo bhāseti vā || atha dyauḥ saṁsprṣṭā jyotirbhiḥ puṇyakṛdbhiś ca || (Ni. 2-[14] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Prśni is the Āditya: the etymologists say that colour pervades him [or: colour reaches him]; (he is) the toucher of the juices, the toucher of the radiance of the luminaries, or 'to be touched by his lustre'. Then dyaus ('heaven') is 'touched' by lights and by doers of good deeds."

"Prśni means the Āditya (the sun). Because his excellent splendour pervades all around him, the Nirukta-writers say that prśni means the Āditya. Samṣprṣṭā rasān — he is always in contact with the juices (rasa), that is, with waters; his work is the taking-up of the juices; since he is the cause of giving the rasa (water) in the form of rain, the Āditya is called prśni. Or saṁsprṣṭā bhāsaṁ jyotiṣām — the radiance of planets, constellations, the moon and the rest is obscured by the sun; or saṁsprśyo bhāsaṁ iti vā — since he pervades everywhere with his own radiance, prśni means the Āditya."

"Now prśni means dyauḥ, for saṁsprṣṭāḥ jyotirbhiḥ puṇyakṛdbhiś ca — since it is touched by light and by the doers of meritorious works, prśni means dyauḥ (heaven)."

"This is Yāska's explanation. Therefore, accepting the meaning that pr̥śni is dyauh — heaven, the atmosphere — it is fitting to explain the word pr̥śnimātaraḥ as divasputrāḥ — 'born in the atmosphere'."

Special Topics of Rik 85.2, continued from p. 153. The first line closes a quotation begun at the foot of p. 153's discussion:

यद्यूयं पृश्निमातरो मर्तासः स्यातन ॥

yad yūyaṃ pr̥śnimātaro martāsaḥ syātana || (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[38]-[4] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "If you, O sons of Pr̥śni, were mortals..."

"— in explaining this Ṛk the bhāṣyakāra has explained the word pr̥śnimātaraḥ as pr̥śni-nā-maka-dhenuputrā marutaḥ [Kannada: "sons of the cow named Pr̥śni", as the Kannada text gives it, in the Kannada words: pr̥śni-nāmaka-dhenu-putrāḥ marutaḥ]. In the many contexts of praising the Marut deities, the use of the word pr̥śnimātaraḥ is especially frequent. It may therefore be said confidently that a certain fixed sense had become established for this word. The Ṛks in the Ṛgveda in which this word occurs are given below:

"All the Ṛks in which the word prśnimātaraḥ occurs have been given above. In these Ṛks, since the word prśnimātaraḥ is explained in reference to the Maruts alone, it may be said confidently that this word has been used, in connexion with these deities only, in one fixed sense." ¹⁵

- आशत — the root aśū vyāptau; lañ, third person plural, the jha, substitute ata, since a-ending after the root; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the vikaraṇa is elided; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

- रुद्रासः — as before, in the jas: by "आज्जसेरसुक्" the augment asuk.
- अर्चन्तः — the root arca pūjāyām; the affix śatr in the sense of laṭ; the root accent remains; in the nominative plural, as it is ugit (a u-marked nasal-taking), the augment num.
- इन्द्रियम् — indriyam indraliṅgam indradr̥ṣṭam... — by "इन्द्रियमिन्द्रलिङ्गमिन्द्रदृष्टमिन्द्रसृष्टमिन्द्रजुष्टमिन्द्रदत्तमिति वा" (Pā. Sū. 5-2-93 [?]) the word is fixed by nipātana with the affix gha; by "आयनेयीनीयियः फढखछघाम्" (āyaneyīnīyiyah phad̥khachaghām, Pā. Sū. 7-1-2) iya for gha.
- दधिरे — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoh; liṭ, third person plural (cf. before); the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- पृश्निमातरः — prāśnute sarvāṇi rūpāṇīti pr̥śniḥ bhūmiḥ ("that which pervades all forms: the earth"); 'iyam vai pr̥śniḥ' (Tai. Brā. 1-6-[?] [?]) — thus it is heard in the Śruti. By nipātana in "pr̥ṣu...pr̥śniḥ" the form pr̥śni is established; pr̥śnir mātā yeṣām te pr̥śnimātarah; in the bahuvrīhi, "ṛtaś chandasi" (Pā. Sū. 5-4-[153] [?]) forbids the kap that would come at the end of the compound; because the rule "aṣṭṛkṛt..." [as read, "aṣṭṛtkṛt"] has fixed the restriction, the lengthening of the penultimate does not occur.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.2, concluded (grammar, noted briefly):

- जनयन्तः — the root janī prādurbhāve; the affix śatr after the ñijanta (causative); śap as the vikaraṇa; on account of śap the guṇa of the ñic, and ay-substitution; since śap is pit, unaccented; as the lasārvadhātuka (śatr) is unaccented by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्" (tāsyānudāttet), by the accent of ñic the a after n is acute; in the nominative plural, since it is ugit, the augment num comes.

- गोमातरः — "gauḥ means the earth (Ni. [1-1] [?]). 'Those whose mother is the earth': that is, the sons of the earth, or of the cow (dhenu) of the world of the gods called Ṛṣni. The Maruts are also called by the name ṛṣnimātaraḥ."

- अञ्जिभिः — añjū vyaktimrakṣaṇagatiṣu rūpābhivyañjakair ābharaṇaiḥ — "with ornaments and the like, such as collyrium (kajjala), used to enhance beauty of form and the like."
- शुभ्राः — śubha dīptau — "shining; brightly shining with excess of beauty."
- विरुक्मतः — viśeṣeṇa rocamānān alaṃkāṛān — "ornaments and jewels that shine greatly."
- अप बाधन्ते विश्वमभिमातिनम् — "they destroy the enemies (trees and the like) who stand obstructing the way they move; the intention is that when the wind blows swiftly it rolls away the trees and such as stand in front."
- एषां अनु रीयते घृतम् — "ghṛta means water (Ni. [1-12] [?]); the intention is that behind the gust blown by the Maruts the water flows — that is, the rain comes."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.3)

- शुभयन्ते — "तत्करोति तदाचष्टे" (tat karoti tad ācaṣṭe) the affix ṇic; since the rule that has a technical term as antecedent is not invariable, the laghūpadha guṇa of the root does not occur on account of the ṇic; laṭ, third person plural, jha substituted by anta; śap; by "सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः" the guṇa before śap; ay-substitution; since yat is in connexion, no nighāta; by the accent of ṇic the a after bh is acute.

- अज्जिभिः — the root añjū vyaktimrakṣaṇakāntigatiṣu; by "खनिकषिकस्यज्जिसिवसि..." (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[137] [?]) the affix i; by the affix-accent the final acute; instrumental plural.
- शुभ्राः — the root śubha dīptau; by "स्थाय्यतंचेतः" (sthāyitaṃ ca..., Uṇ. Sū. 2-[120] [?]) the affix rak; since kit, no laghūpadha guṇa; the final acute; nominative plural.
- विरुक्मतः — viśiṣṭā ruk viruk — virug eṣām asti iti virukmantaḥ; the root ruc dīptau, the affix kvip; by "तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप्" (tad asyāsty asminn iti matup) the affix matup; by "आयस्मयादीनि छन्दसि" (āyasmayādīni chandasi) since this is included there, it has the status of pada, so by "चोः" (coḥ kuḥ) the c is replaced by a guttural: k; since it has the bha designation, jaśtva does not come to it; matup is pit, so unaccented; by "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" (gatikārakopapadāt kṛt) the u after r is acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.3, concluded from p. 158 (grammar; noted briefly):

- बाधन्ते — the root bādhṛ loḍane, Bhvādi; laṭ, third person plural; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, there is no nighāta; by the root's accent the first syllable is acute.
- शीयते — the root rīñ sravaṇe, Divādi; laṭ, third person singular; by "दित् आत्मनेपदानां णे" (ṭita ātmanepadānāṃ ṇe) the e; by "दिवादिभ्यः श्यन्" (divādibhyaḥ śyan) the vikaraṇa śyan; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta accent.

Translation: "Sumakhāsaḥ — those with good sacrifices; the Maruts, who with their spears (ṛṣṭi, weapons) shine forth specially, they pracyāvayantaḥ — shaking, impelling — even the acyutā, the firm things that cannot be moved, mountains and the like, by their own strength (ojas). The latter half is addressed directly. O Maruts, swift as thought, whose movement is as fast as the mind, a host (vrāta) of seven (companies [?]) able to pour out rain-water, prṣatīḥ — prṣatī is the name of the Maruts' steeds (the Nirukta [?]) says 'the prṣatīs of the Maruts' — when you yoke to your own chariots the does that are marked with white spots, prṣat — then the mountains and the rest are shaken out of place — so the meaning." Grammar tail, noted briefly: sumakhāsaḥ — since all rules are optional in the Chandas, "nañsubhyām" does not apply, and so in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its accent; acyutā — loss of śi by "śeś chandasi bahulam"; manojuvaḥ

21. Kannada script; the clause "prṣatya iti marudvāhanānām saṃjñā" is followed by a short Nirukta-like phrase that is not clear in the print [?]; the sūtra number at the end is not read with certainty.

— ju is a sautra root in the sense of motion; kvip by "kvib vacī...", lengthening; ayugdhvam — yujir yoge, luñ with dhvam, loss of s by the sūtra "dhi ca" [Pā. 8-2-25 [?]].

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.4)

sumakhāsaḥ — those who have excellent sacrifices; ye — which Maruts; ṛṣṭibhiḥ — with weapons; vi bhrājante — shine specially; (they) acyutā cit — even mountains and the like, which are not to be shaken; ojasā — by their strength; pracyāvayantaḥ — shake; maruta — O Maruts; manojuvaḥ — swift as the mind; vṛṣavrātāsaḥ — intent on duties such as pouring rain; ratheṣu — in your chariots; prṣatīḥ — the spotted does; yat — when; ā ayugdhvam — you yoke (towards the chariot) (then mountains and the rest all shake).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.4

"The Maruts, who are endowed with excellent sacrifices and shine specially with their weapons, make the mountains and the like, which are unshakable, shake with their strength. O Maruts, swift as the mind, intent on duties such as giving rain, when you yoke the spotted does to your chariots, all the mountains and the rest are made to move."

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.4)

- सुमखासः — śobhanayajñāḥ — "those who are worshipped in the finest sacrifices."
- ऋष्टिभिः — āyudhaiḥ — "with weapons, with bhrjji [as read]."

- प्रच्यावयन्तः — "prakarṣeṇa cyāvayitāraḥ prerayitāro bhavanti — those who impel by their strength, who shake."
- अच्युता — "mountains and the like, which cannot be shaken."
- ओजसा — "by their strength and power."
- मनोजुवः — "ju is a sautra root in the sense of motion: of the speed of the mind. Just as we see in an instant, with the mind, a thing that is very far off, so they have a surpassing speed — that is the meaning."
- वृषत्रातासः — "those capable of the work of raining."
- पृषतीः — "the vehicles of the Marut deities are called prṣatī. Prṣatī means 'does marked with white spots'. Different deities have different vehicles. In this connexion Yāska has said:

— so he has said."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.4)

- भ्राजन्ते — the root bhrāji dīptau, Bhvādi; since ye stands before it, by "यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्" (yadvṛttānnityam) the nighāta is prevented; the root-accent remains.²²

original p. 162

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.4, continued from p. 161 (grammar, noted briefly):

- सुमखासः — śobhanāḥ makhāḥ yeṣāṃ te sumakhāsaḥ; by "नञ्सुभ्याम्" (nañsubhyām) the accent of the final syllable of the latter member would in fact come in the bahuvrīhi; but by the statement "सर्वे विधयश्छन्दसि विकल्प्यन्ते" (sarve vidhayaś chandasi vikalpyante), got through the yogavibhāga of the sūtra "षष्ठीयुक्तश्छन्दसि वा" (ṣaṣṭhīyuktaś chandasi vā), the above-mentioned accent is barred here, and by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" the first member's own accent, which ordinarily comes, alone comes; in the nominative plural, by "आज्जसेरसुक्" the augment asuk for jas.
- प्रच्यावयन्तः — the root cyuñ gatau; the affix ṇic in the sense of impelling; after the ṇijanta, the affix śatr in the sense of laṭ; śap as vikaraṇa; on account of śap, guṇa of the ṇic and ay-substitution; on account of ṇic, vṛddhi of the root and āv-substitution; the accent of ṇic.
- अच्युता — in the neuter plural accusative, śas replaced by śi; by "शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्" (śeś chandasi bahulam) its loss.
- मनोजुवः — ju is a sautra root, in the sense of motion; by "क्विब्वचिप्रच्छयायतस्तुकटप्रुजुश्रीणां दीर्घोऽसम्प्रसारणं च" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[177] vārttika 2 [?]) the affix kvip; by its connexion the root is lengthened; the word manojū; the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent; in the nominative plural, by "अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवां य्वोरियडुवडौ" (aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor iyañuvañau) the substitute uv.
- वृषत्रातासः — in the jas, by "आज्जसेरसुक्" the augment asuk.
- अयुध्वम् — the root yujir yoge; luñ, second person plural, the affix dhvam; by "च्लेः सिच्" (cleḥ sic) sic in place of cli; by "धि च" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[25] [?]) the loss of the s of sic, since an affix beginning with dh follows; by "चोः कुः" (coḥ kuḥ) the j of the root becomes a guttural; since yat is in connexion, there is no nighāta accent; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.5)

marutaḥ — O Maruts; vāje — for the sake of food; adrim — the cloud; raṃhayantaḥ — (in order to make it rain) impelling; prṣatīḥ — the spotted does; ratheṣu — (your) chariots; yat — when; pra ayugdhvam — you yoke well; uta — then; aruṣasya — of the radiant sun, or of the fire in the form of lightning (from the sky: the streams of rain); vi śyanti — fall; dhārāḥ — those streams of rain; udabhiḥ — with waters; carmeṇa — like a bit of hide (without effort, wetting); bhūma — all regions of the earth; vyundanti — they make wet.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.5

"O Maruts, for the sake of food, impelling the cloud so that it rains, when you yoke the spotted does to your chariots, the rain falls in streams from the radiant sun's [or the lightning's] ray. Those streams of rain drench all regions of the earth without effort, as with a little water one wets a hide."

- वाजे — anne nimittabhūte — "for the sake of food, or of the obtaining of nourishment: so that it rains."
- अद्रिम् — megham — "'cloud'. Among the thirty names of cloud, since adri, grāvā and the rest are read, adrim means 'the cloud' (Ni. [1-10] [?]). The word adri has other senses too: 'lightning' (Ni. [2-?] [?]) and 'mountain' (Ni. [3-?] [?])." ²⁵

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.5, continued from p. 165 (grammar, noted briefly):

- वि ष्यन्ति — the root ṣo antakarmanī, Divādi; by "धात्वादेः षः सः" (dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ) the ṣ becomes s; laṭ, third person plural, the substitute anta; by "दिवादिभ्यः श्यन्" the śyan vikaraṇa; it being followed by śyan, by "ओतः श्यनि" (otaḥ śyani, Pā. Sū. 7-3-[71] [?]) the loss of the o of the root; by "अतो गुणे" the following form (pararūpa); the form syanti; owing to the connexion with the preposition vi (and its visarga), by "उपसर्गात्सुनोति..." (upasargāt sunoti..., Pā. Sū. 8-3-[65] [?]) ṣatva for the s of the root; the nighāta accent of the tiṇanta.
- उदभिः — when the word is udaka + bhis, by "पदन्मोमास्हन्निशसन्..." (paddann-omās-hṛn-niśasan..., Pā. Sū. 6-1-[63] [?]) the substitute udan for the base; as it has the status of pada, by "नलोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य" the loss of n; being asiddha, the ī-lengthening etc. do not occur.
- व्युन्दन्ति — the root undī kledane; third person plural; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.
- भूम — when bhūmi + am, by "सुपां सुलुक्.." (supāṃ suluk...) the substitute ḍā in place of ami; by the force of the ḍit, the loss of the ṭi part (i) of the base; the shortening comes as a Vedic feature.

Translation: "O Maruts, may your swift horses bring you here — may they convey you to our sacrifice. How are the horses? Raghuṣyadaḥ — light, swiftly flowing, i.e. going with speed. You, raghupatvānaḥ — flying lightly, quickly — come forward, bringing with your own hands the wealth we are to be given. O Maruts, your seat (sadaḥ) has been made wide (uru). Pratipadārtha of Rik 85.6, continued from p. 167 (Kannada):

²⁸. Kannada script; the sūtras cited in the last part of the tail are cramped, and the exact wording and the number are given with doubt [?]; the form "raghuṣyadaḥ" is the print's own: the Saṃhitā has raghuṣyado, the Pada raghu-syadaḥ.

²⁹. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 167

"...(O Maruts) filling (with the wealth to be bestowed on us) pra jigāta — come at once; marutaḥ — O Maruts; vaḥ — for you; sadaḥ — the seat in the form of the altar-platform (vedi); uru — spaciously; kṛtam — has been made (made ready); barhiḥ — on the sacred grass; ā sīdata — sit; madhvaḥ — of the sweet; andhasaḥ — of food (in the form of Soma-juice) by drinking; mādayadhvam — be satisfied."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.6

"O Maruts, may your horses, easily and swiftly going, bring you to our sacrificial ground. Come at once, with your hands filled with the wealth to be bestowed on us. A seat in the form of the altar has been made spacious for you. Come and sit on the sacred grass and be satisfied with the sweet drinking of the Soma-juice."

English Translation

"Let your swift-going horses bear you hither; and moving swiftly come with your hands (filled with good things); sit, Maruts upon the broad seat made of clipped sacred grass and be delighted with the sweet sacrificial food." — as printed.

- सप्तयः — sarpaṇaśīlā aśvāḥ — "swiftly moving horses. Here it should be understood as the spotted does (prṣatīḥ), the vehicles of the Marut deities."
- रघुस्यदः — "raghu means laghu, light; by the interchange of letters, r is used for l. Laghu śīghraṃ syandamānāḥ vegena gacchanta ity arthaḥ — 'quickly flowing'; that is, going with speed."

- रघुपत्वानः — "the meaning of this word is the same as of raghuṣyadaḥ, but this word refers to the Marut deities: laghu śīghraṃ patanto gacchanto yūyam — 'you, the Marut deities who move swiftly'."
- जिगात — gā stutau | jauhotyādikaḥ | jigātīti gatikarmasu pāṭhād atra gatyarthaḥ — "'come' or 'go'."

- वहन्तु — the root vaha prāpaṇe; loṭ, third person plural; by "एरुः" (er uḥ) the substitute u for the i of the ending: antu; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.
- रघुस्यदः — raghu syandante iti raghuṣyadaḥ; the root syandū prasaravaṇe; by "क्विप् च" (kvip ca, Pā. Sū. 3-2-[76] [?]) the affix kvip; since it is kit, by "अनिदितां हल उपधायाः क्ङिति" the loss of the nasal; since raghu belongs to the kāsilakādi [?] group, optionally l for r; the word raghuṣyad; by "गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्" the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent; nominative plural.
- रघुपत्वानः — raghu patantaḥ raghupatvānaḥ; the root paṭlṛ gatau; by "अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यन्ते" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[75] [?]) the affix vanip; the word raghupatvan; since vanip is pit, the root accent remains; in the compound, as before, the kṛdutarapada's base accent; jas following, by "सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ" the lengthening of the penultimate.

30. the second alternative is printed in a clotted line and is read with doubt [?]

- जिगात — the root gā stutau; Juhotyādi; jigāti (Ni. [2-?-?] [?]) is read among the roots of motion, hence here it comes in the sense of going; for the second person plural of lot, by "तप्तनप्तनथनाश्च" (taptanaptanathanās ca, Pā. Sū. 7-1-[45] [?]) the substitute ta; since it is pit there is no ñit-ness and so no changes like ī; when ślu is present, the duplications etc. come; by "ई हल्यघोः" (ī halyaghoḥ, Pā. Sū. 6-4-[113] [?]) the ī for the ā is not made, and by "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[78] [?]) the i in the reduplicate comes; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- सीदत — the root ṣadl viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu; lot, second person plural; since lañ/luñ-like ñit-ness is present, by "तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः" (tasthasthamipāṃ tāntantāmaḥ, Pā. Sū. 3-4-101) the substitute ta; by "प्राग्ग्राध्मा..." (pāghrādhmā..., Pā. Sū. 7-3-78) the substitute sīda for the root; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; the affix is unaccented by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्", so the root-accent remains.
- सदः — sadaḥ + kṛtam, the root ḍukṛñ following; by "अतः कृकमिकंसकुम्भपात्रकुशाकर्णीष्वनव्ययस्य" (ataḥ kṛkamikaṃsa..., Pā. Sū. 8-3-46) the visarga is replaced by s (satva).³²

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.6, concluded from p. 169 (grammar, noted briefly):

- मादयध्वम् — the root mada tṛptiyoge, Curādi, ātmanepada; by "सत्यापपाश..." (satyāpapāśa..., Pā. Sū. 3-1-25) the affix ñic in its own sense; by "अत उपधायाः" (ata upadhāyāḥ) vṛddhi

31. grammar page, noted briefly; every sūtra read is in three layers, the numerals as read [?]

32. The sūtra number is read as given, with a numeral in doubt [?].

(lengthening) for the penultimate of the root; loṭ, second person plural, the affix dhvam; śap as vikaraṇa; on its account guṇa of the ṇic, and ay-substitution; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the accent of ṇic, the ā after d is acute.

33. Kannada script. On this page the bhāṣya is printed in small, heavily compressed type; two or three clauses of its grammatical tail are not legible enough to transcribe and are marked as omitted [?]; the clause beginning yady ebhyo is read with doubt.

Translation (of the sense of the bhāṣya, so far as read): "The Maruts avardhanta — attained growth. How? Svatavasah — having strength of their own support; they need not look to the strength of anyone else. Having attained growth, by their greatness (mahitvanā) they ascended (ā tasthuḥ) nākam, heaven; and they made wide (uru) their dwelling (sadaḥ), a place in the form of the sky, for their own abode. For these Maruts, for whose sake Viṣṇu protects the sacrifice that rains down desires, that sheds delight (mada) — Viṣṇu himself, coming, guards it — may those Maruts, as birds come swiftly, so, coming swiftly, sit (sīdan = sīdantu, 'let them sit') on the dear (priye), delight-giving sacred grass at this sacrifice of ours." Grammar tail, noted briefly: te 'vardhanta — the single substitute (ekādeśa) at the beginning of a pāda gets the svarita by the sūtra "svarito vānūdāte padādau" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-6 [?]); āvat — a Vedic laṅ in the sense of the present; vṛṣaṇam — no lengthening of the penultimate in the Veda after a word beginning with ṣ (vā ṣapūrvasya nigame); madacyutam — madam cyotayatīti madacyut, from cyuti āsecane, with kvip; sīdan — leṭ in the sense of liṅ, with the augment aṭ."

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.7)

te — those Maruts; svatavasah — (without support from another) having strength of their own (by the support of their own strength); avardhanta — attained growth; mahitvanā — (by their) greatness; nākam — heaven; ā tasthuḥ — reached; sadaḥ — (a dwelling-place of the nature of the atmosphere), their abode; uru — widely; cakrire — made for themselves; yat — for whom; vṛṣaṇam — which showers (what is desired); madacyutam — which gives delight; that sacrifice; viṣṇuḥ — Viṣṇu; ha āvat — (comes and) protects (those Maruts); vayaḥ na — like birds, swiftly (coming); priye — beloved; barhiṣi adhi — excellent, on the sacred grass; sīdan — may they sit.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.7

"Those Maruts attained growth without any support of others, by the support of their own strength. By their own greatness they reached heaven and extended their dwelling-place. May those Maruts, for whose sake Viṣṇu comes and protects the sacrifice that gives what is desired and gives delight, come swiftly like birds and sit on the dear and excellent sacred grass."

original p. 172

English Translation

"Having confidence [sic] in their own strength they have increased in power; they have attained heaven by their greatness, and have made for themselves a spacious dwelling; may they (Maruts) for whom 'Vishnu' gave his aid in the sacrifice that bestows all desires and confers delight, come quickly like birds, and sit down upon their beloved Kusa grass." — as printed.

From then on the sacrificers perform sacrifices on their behalf, and they, coming swiftly like birds to the sacrifice of the sacrificers, sit upon the sacred grass."³⁴

[The editor:] "The Marut deities came with Viṣṇu and helped Indra in the work of slaying Vṛtra. Therefore the greatness of these Marut deities increased. Their strength grew, and they made their dwelling in heaven among the first of the gods. Therefore the sacrificers who sacrifice make sacrifices for the pleasure of these Marut deities. These deities too, to favour the sacrificers, sit like birds, swiftly, on the sacred grass spread out for them at the sacrifices they perform. Here the Marut deities are friends of Indra; passages like 'marudbhir indra sakhyam te astu' support this matter. That Viṣṇu helped Indra, a friend of such Marut deities:

34. The first word after yadā is printed viṣṇunā saha marute; read here as marutaḥ with doubt.

heaven, O Indra, all the might has been placed on you by the gods, when, O lord of the soma-strainings, you slew the serpent Vṛtra who encompassed the waters, joined with Viṣṇu."

and tentative:* "His greatness [and] that stream of honey Viṣṇu holds in his strength, he proclaims [or: shouts forth]; with the gods who go together, Indra the bountiful, having slain Vṛtra, became the choicest."

"In such Ṛks the matter of Viṣṇu helping Indra is brought up.
Apart from this, in the Ṛks Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-[32-?]; 8-[?]; 10-[?]; 6-[?]; 6-[?]; 6-[?]; 2-[?]; 7-[?]; 7-[?]; 7-[?] (the numerals are small and read with doubt, so none is given as certain [?]), Viṣṇu is invoked, together with the Marut deities or with other deities, for the sake of drinking Soma."

- विष्णुः — "As to Viṣṇu we have already written; see pages 119, 124, 125 of Ṛ. Saṃ. Part 3 [as printed: 'Ṛ. Saṃ. bhāga 3, pp.
119, 124, 125' — i.e. of an earlier volume of this edition].

For the word viṣṇu in this Ṛk, Skandasvāmin explains it as 'sacrifice': there is the Śruti sentence yajño vai viṣṇuḥ — 'sacrifice indeed is Viṣṇu'."

- वयो न — "vayo na means 'like a bird': the ṛṣi prays that they should come swiftly, as a bird flies swiftly."
- बर्हिषि प्रिये — "To invite the gods to a sacrifice, so that they come and sit, they spread a seat (āsana) of kuśa grass, cut at the tips, on the ground, like a soft mattress. The ṛṣis in many Ṛks pray that the deities come and sit on this seat. Here the word priye shows that such a seat is dear to the gods, a thing in which they take pleasure."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.7)

- ते वर्धन्त — te + avardhanta; by "एङः पदान्तादति" (eṅaḥ padāntād ati, Pā. Sū. 6-1-109) the earlier form (pūrvavarūpa) is the single substitute; then by "स्वरितो वानुदात्ते पदादौ" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[6] [?]): "when an unaccented follows at the beginning of a pada, the svarita is optional with the single substitute that arises from an acute..." — here, as the single substitute arises with an acute, it becomes svarita; the root vr̥dhu vr̥ddhau; lañ, third person plural.
- स्वतवसः — svakīyaṃ tavaḥ yeṣāṃ te svatavasah; by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" the first member keeps its own accent.
- महित्वना — the affix tva in the abstract sense; the ā of the following jas is lost by vyatyaya; the acute accent too is by vyatyaya. Or, by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute ā for the case-ending, and the augment n; since mahitvanā is cit [as read], by "चित्" the final acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.7, continued from p. 173 (grammar; noted briefly):

- तस्थुः — the root ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau; liṭ, third person plural; by "परस्मैपदानां णलतुसुस्.." (parasmaipadānāṃ ṇalatususthalathusaṇalvamāḥ, Pā. Sū. 3-4-82) the substitute us; after duplication, by "शर्पूर्वाः खयः" (śarpūrvāḥ khayaḥ) the th is kept in the reduplicate; by "अभ्यासे चर्च" (abhyāse care ca) the t in place of the th; by "आतो लोप इति च" the loss of the ā. Since here the construction is "nākam ā tasthuḥ ca, sadaś ca vistīrṇaṃ cakrire", by "चादिलोपे विभाषा" (cādilope vibhāṣā, Pā. Sū. 8-1-[63] [?]) the prohibition of nighāta comes to the tiñ-ending that stands first; then, by the affix-accent, the final acute.
- यत् — a dative plural, the ñe-bhyas that follows; by "सुपां सुलुक्" its luk.
- आवत् — in the sense of the present, the root av rakṣaṇe; by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" (chandasi luṅ-laṅ-liṭaḥ) lañ; third person singular; tip; by "इतश्च" the loss of the final; by "आडजादीनाम्" the augment āt; by "आटश्च" vṛddhi; since ha is in connexion, no nighāta occurs; since the augment is acute, the first syllable is acute.
- वृषणम् — vṛṣan ends in the affix kanin and so has the first syllable acute and a final n; in the accusative singular, since am follows, by "वा षपूर्वस्य निगमे" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[9] [?]) the lengthening of the penultimate does not occur in Samhitā; by "अट्कुप्वाङ्नुम्व्यवायेऽपि" the ṇ for the n.
- मदच्युतम् — madaṃ cyotati iti madacyut; the root cyutir āsecane; by "क्विप् च" the kvip; the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent; accusative singular.

- सीद्न् — the root ṣadl̥ viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu; leṭ, third person plural; by "पाप्नाध्मा..." the substitute sīda for the root; by "इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु" the loss of the i of the affix; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta.

35. Kannada script; the bhāṣya's grammatical tail is in small, compressed type; the sūtra wording and number after "ādṛgamahanajanaḥ" and the clause on nittvād ādyudāttatvam are read with doubt [?]; one clause after bhayante is omitted as illegible.

Translation: "Id is in the sense of 'and' (conjunction). Like heroes — fighters endowed with valour — and like warriors (yuyudhayaḥ) fighting with enemies, like men going quickly (jagmayaḥ), the Maruts, like men who wish for fame (śravas, food) for themselves, yetire — strive in battles (pṛtanāsu), engage in war with sons and the rest [as read]. From such Maruts all the worlds, all beings, are afraid — and the men who are the guides of rain and the rest, the Maruts, who like kings are shining, who are tveṣasaṃdrśaḥ — of blazing appearance — cannot be looked at, on account of their terrible form: from them, that is, the meaning." Grammar tail, noted briefly: yuyudhayaḥ — root yudha saṃprahāre, the affix kin by the sūtra cited; the reduplication as if in liṭ; no guṇa because of kit-ness; jagmayaḥ — by the same sūtra, the affix kin, with the loss of the penultimate by "gamahana...", and reduplication by sthānivadbhāva; śravasyavaḥ — śrava icchati śravasyati, with the affix u after kyac in the Chandas; yetire — root yatī prayatne, Vedic liṭ in the present sense; bhayante — root ṇibhī bhaye, with no ślu for śap by the doctrine "bahulaṃ chandasi"; tveṣasaṃdrśaḥ — tviṣa dīptau with ac (the pacādi class); drśīr prekṣaṇe preceded by sam, the affix kvip in the abstract sense (the sampadādi class); in the bahuvrīhi the first member's base accent."

Close of the grammatical tail of the bhāṣya of Rik 85.8, continued from p. 175 (Kannada script):

...शपः श्लोरभावः । त्वेषसंदृशः । त्विष दीप्तौ । पचाद्यच् । दृशिर् प्रेक्षणे ।

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 85.8)

śūrā iva — like heroes; yuyudhayaḥ na — the Maruts, who are like warriors; śravasyavaḥ na — like folk desiring food; jagmayāḥ — of swift movement; prtanāsu — in battles; yetire — they strive; naraḥ — guides of rain and the rest; rājāna iva — like shining kings; tveṣasaṃdrśaḥ — (the Maruts) of fierce splendour; marudbhyaḥ — from such Maruts; viśvā bhuvanā — all the beings of the world; bhayante — are afraid.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.8

"The Maruts, who are like heroes, like warriors, like folk who desire food, of swift movement, strive in battles. Being guides of rain and the rest, and, like shining kings, of fierce splendour who strike fear into others, all the beings of the world go about in fear of these Maruts."

English Translation

"Like heroes, like warriors, like men eager for food, the swift-moving (Maruts) have engaged in battles; all beings fear the Maruts who are the leaders (of the rain) and who are of awful appearance like kings." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.8)

- युयुधयः — yudha saṃprahāre | yuyutsavaḥ puruṣāḥ — "men who wish for battle; warriors, soldiers, warriors, combatants etc. (English, as printed)."
- श्रवस्यवः — "śravaḥ means food (Ni. [10-?] [?]); śrava icchati śravasyati — 'one who wishes food'."

36. So the remaining clause on p. 175's "..." is the one that runs "...the replacement of the ś by the ślu is not made" — as printed: "...śapaḥ ślor abhāvaḥ". The Rk's closing numeral "॥ ८ ॥" follows the bhāṣya, as in the preceding Rks.

- पृतनासु — saṃgrāmeṣu — "since the word prtanā is read among the forty-six names of battle — raṇaḥ, vivāk and the rest (Ni. [2-17] [?]) — prtanāsu means 'in battles'. This word is always used in the plural."
- राजाने इव — "as people fear on seeing kings."
- त्वेषसदृशः — tviṣa dīptau | dīptasaṃdarśanā ugrarūpatayā draṣṭum aśakyā bhavanti — "those of shining appearance, who on account of terrible form cannot be looked at; that is, since they are of a cruel form, they are fearful to look at..."

Special Topics of Rik 85.8, continued from p. 176:

"...Because the Marut deities, when they move with great force (when they blow), are of a terrible form, people are afraid on seeing them — that is the intention."

- नरः — vr̥ṣṭyāder netāraḥ — "the foremost in tasks like causing rain, 'the leaders'; without the help of the Marut deities it is impossible for rain to fall."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.8) ³⁸

- युयुधयः — the root yudha saṃprahāre; by "आदृगमहनजनः किकिनौ लिट् च" (āḍṛgamahanajanaḥ kikināu liṭ ca), where "utsargaś chandasī" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[171] [?]) applies, the affix kin comes here too; since liṭ has been said to be like it (liḍvadbhāva), the root is reduplicated; because it is kit, no guṇa because of the ārdhadhātuka affix; the word yuyudhi; since it ends in a nit affix, by "ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्" the first syllable is acute; in the nominative plural, by "जसि च" the guṇa; ay-substitution.

37. the entry runs on to p. 177

38. grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]

- जग्मयः — the root gamḥ gatau; by the preceding sūtra, the affix kin; reduplication; in the reduplicate, the hal-initial ādi [as read, "halādiśeṣa"]; by "कुहोश्चुः" (kuhoś cuḥ) cutva; by "गमहनजन..." (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[98]) the loss of the penultimate; since it is the inner operation, the loss of the penultimate comes first, and so the reduplication etc. is to be said through sthānivadbhāva; the word jagmi; as before, the first syllable acute; nominative plural.
- श्रवस्यवः — śravaḥ ātmanaḥ icchati śravasyati; by "सुप आत्मनः क्यच्" (supa ātmanaḥ kyac) the affix kyac; by "श्रवस्यतीति श्रवस्युः क्यच्छन्दसि" (kyāc chandasi, Pā. Sū. 3-2-[170] [?]) the affix u after what ends in kyac; by "अतो लोपः" the loss of the a of kyac; by the affix-accent the word śravasyu has its final syllable acute; in the jas, by "ह्रस्वस्य गुणः" the guṇa; av-substitution.
- येतिरे — the root yatī prayatne; in the present sense by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" the affix liṭ; for the plural, the substitute irec; since reduplication has come, by "अत एकहल्मध्येऽनादेशादेर्लिटि" (ata ekahalmadhye 'nādeśādor liṭi, Pā. Sū. 6-4-[120]) the e (ettva) and the loss of the reduplicate (abhyāsalopa); since it stands after an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- भयन्ते — the root ñibhī bhaye; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" ślu is not the vikaraṇa for śap, so śap remains; in the plural, by śap the guṇa of the i of the root; since ac follows, ay-substitution; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, there is no nighāta; since the lasārvadhātuka ending (anti) is unaccented by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्", the root-accent, the first syllable, is acute.
- विश्वा भुवना — by "शेशछन्दसि बहुलम्" the loss of śi, which came as a substitute in the neuter. ³⁹

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.8, concluded from p. 177 (grammar, noted briefly):

- त्वेषसंदृशः — the root tviṣa dīptau; since it is read in the pacādi class, by "नन्दिग्रहिपचादिभ्यो ल्युणिन्यचः" (nandigrahipacādibhyo lyuṇinyacah, Pā. Sū. 3-1-134) the affix ac; since the affix is pit [?], by "पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च" (pugantalaghūpadhasya ca) the guṇa of the laghūpadha: tveṣa; the root dṛśir prekṣaṇe, preceded by sam; by the statement "सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्" the kvip in the abstract sense; in the bahuvrīhi, by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" the first member keeps its base accent.

Translation: "Svapāḥ — the skilful worker, tvaṣṭā — the maker of all things — when he avartayat — made [the thunderbolt] come to Indra, that is, gave it. What kind? Sukṛtam — well made, hiraṇyayam — golden, sahasrabhṛṣṭim — furnished with many streams [points]: that thunderbolt Indra dhatte — holds. For what purpose? Nari — here, by connexion with men (nṛ), the word nṛ means the battle; in battle, apāṃsi — deeds of the nature of slaying enemies, kartave — to do. Thus, having taken the thunderbolt, with that thunderbolt he ahan — slew vṛtram, the cloud that holds back the rain-water — arṇavam, joined with its water; and the waters stopped by it he niraubjat — wholly threw down head-foremost; that is, he made them rain." Grammar tail, noted briefly: sukṛtam — kṛ preceded by su, with niṣṭhā in the passive; the gati keeps its base accent by "gatiṃ anantaraḥ"; hiraṇyayam — a form fixed by nipātana with the affix mayat; svapāḥ — first member's accent as in "sormanasi..."; kartave — the affix tavenn in the sense of tumun; apām — the genitive in the sense of the dative, since the object is the recipient (sampradāna); the case-ending acute by "ūḍidam..."; aubjat — ubja ārjave; arṇavam — the va affix in the sense 'having that', with the loss of s (of arṇas)."

svapāḥ — of excellent actions; tvaṣṭā — the divine craftsman; sukṛtam — excellently made; hiraṇyayam — golden; sahasrabhṛṣṭim — with many edges; yat vajram — which thunderbolt; avartayat — gave (to Indra); indrah — Indra; nari — in battle; apāṃsi — the deeds (of killing enemies and the like); kartave — to perform; dhatte — holds (that thunderbolt); vṛtram — the cloud that covers the rain, etc.; aṇavam — that cloud filled with water; ahan — he struck; apām — the waters; niḥ aubjat — made flow fully.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.9 ⁴¹

"The divine craftsman, of excellent actions, gave Indra a thunderbolt that is excellently made, golden and of many edges. Indra holds that thunderbolt in battle in order to do the deeds of killing enemies and the like. And with it he struck the cloud that covers the rain and the like, and let the waters pour down in streams." ⁴²

English Translation ⁴³

"Indra wields the well-made, golden and thousand edged thunderbolt, which the skillful Twashtri has framed for him that he may achieve great exploits in war. He has slain Vritra and sent down a flood of waters." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 85.9)

- त्वष्टा — "the divine craftsman. See what we have written on the discussion of Tvaṣṭṛ in R. Saṃ. Part 3, p. 25 [as printed: 'bhāga 3, pēju 25']."
- सहस्रभृष्टिम् — anekābhir dhārābhir yuktam — "furnished with many streams: with a thousand edges."
- स्वपाः — śobhanakarmā — "one who does good works; skilful in works."

41. Kannada; ends at the foot of p. 179

42. An earlier note that this ran on to p. 180 was mistaken: it is complete on p. 179.

43. printed in English in the source; Rik 85.9

- नरि — "in the matter of men; that is, in the context where it is used against men or enemies; in battle."
- कर्तवे — "in order to do deeds of daring; in order to fight with enemies."
- निः औब्जत् — ubja ārjave | niḥśeṣeṇādhomukham apātayat — "made them flow downward, well."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.9)

- सुकृतम् — when su precedes, the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; to it niṣṭhā (kta) in the passive; by "गतिरनन्तरः" (gatiṛ anantarahaḥ, Pā. Sū. 6-2-[49] [?]) su has the designation gati, hence it keeps its base accent.
- हिरण्ययम् — hiranyasya vikāraḥ: the affix mayat in the sense of 'modification'; when hiranya + maya, by "ऋत्व्यवास्तव्यवास्त्वमाध्वीहिरण्ययादिति च्छन्दसि" (rtvyavāstvyavāstvamādhvīhiranyayād iti chandasi, Pā. Sū. 6-4-[175] [?]) the loss of the m of mayat is fixed by nipātana.
- स्वपाः — by "सोर्मनसी अलोमोषसी" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[117] [?]) the first syllable of the latter member is acute.
- अवर्तयत् — the root vṛtu vartane; after the ṇijanta, laṇ, third person singular, the form as stated; since yat is in connexion, the nighāta does not occur; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.9, continued from p. 180 (grammar, noted briefly):

- धत्ते — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, Juhotyādi; laṭ, third person singular; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the affix-accent the final acute.

- कर्तवे — the root ḍukṛñ karāṇe; in the sense of tumun, by "तुमर्थे सेसेनसेअसेन्..." (tumarthe seseasenase..., Pā. Sū. 3-4-[9] [?]) the affix tavai [as read, tavenn]; by "सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः" the guṇa of the ik of the root, because of that affix; the form kartave; since it ends in a nit affix, the first syllable is acute.
- अहन् — the root han hiṃsāgatyoh; lañ, third person singular; by "अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः" the luk of śap; by "हल्ङ्याब्भ्यो..." the luk of the affix; the form as stated is accomplished; by the position at the beginning of a pāda, nighāta is prohibited; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.
- अपाम् — by the statement "कर्मणा यमभिप्रैति स सम्प्रदानम्" with "क्रियाग्रहणं कर्तव्यम्" the object also receives the designation sampradāna; so the genitive (ṣaṣṭhī) stands in the sense of the dative; genitive plural; by "ऊडिदम्पदाद्यप्पुमैद्युभ्यः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[171]) the case-ending is acute.
- औब्जत् — the root ubja ārjave; lañ, third person singular; since it stands after an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- अर्णवम् — arṇāṃsi asmin santi iti arṇavaḥ; in the sense of matup, by "अर्णसो लोपश्च" (Kā. 5-2-[109] [?]) the affix va; in connexion with it, the loss of the s of arṇas; by the affix-accent the final acute.

trough (āhāva) at its touch, drew the water of the well into that trough, and satisfied the sage with that water. This matter is set forth by this Ṛk and the next. Te maruto 'vatam — avata means well ('what is guarded?'); among the names of the well the Nighaṇṭu reads avataḥ, avaṭaḥ. They nunudre — impelled it upward, that is, in whatever way it comes up, by their own strength; they threw it up. So, having uprooted the well and carrying it toward the sage's hermitage, the Maruts on the way even split (bibhiduḥ) a mountain that stood grown huge (dāḍrḥāṇam) blocking the path — or a hill of rocks. Sudānavaḥ — bountiful; they, blowing (dhamantaḥ) the vāṇa — a special lute with a hundred strings — making it sound, in the exhilaration of Soma, that is, in joy from drinking Soma, make raṇyāni — worthy of praise, delightful — riches: they do it for those who praise them." Grammar tail, noted briefly: dāḍrḥāṇam — dṛha dṛhi vṛddhau, with kānac for liṭ; dhamantaḥ — dhmā with the substitute dham by "pāghrā..."; vāṇam — from aṇa/raṇa/vaṇa in the sense of sound, with ghaṇ in the passive, and the final acute by "karṣātvataḥ"; raṇyāni — from raṇ, with ap by an upasaṃkhyāna (Pā. 3-1-[123] [?]), then yat in the sense 'being in it' in the Veda, with the first syllable acute by "yato 'nāvaḥ".

te — those Maruts; avatam — the well; ūrdhvam — (so that the water) is at the top; nunudre — they raised; dāḍrḥāṇam — (their) obstructing, in the way of their movement; parvatam cit — even the mountain with its rocks; bibhiduḥ — they split well; sudānavaḥ — the excellent givers; marutaḥ — those Maruts; vāṇam — the lute of a hundred strings; dhamantaḥ — playing; somasya — by (drinking) the Soma-juice; made — when satisfaction arose; raṇyāni — praiseworthy riches; cakrire — gave (to the devotees).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.10

"Those Maruts, for the sake of the sage Gotama, raised the well so that its water was at the top. With their rocks they split the mountain regions which obstruct their movement. Those excellent givers, the Maruts, playing their lute of a hundred strings, and satisfied by drinking the Soma-juice, gave their devotees such riches as are praiseworthy and delightful."

English Translation

"By their power they bore the well and clove asunder the mountain that obstructed their path; the liberal Maruts blowing upon their pipe have conferred desirable gifts upon the sacrificer, when exhilarated by the Soma-juice." — as printed.

"The bhāṣyakāra here tells a narrative: The sage Gotama, at one time, being very thirsty, prayed to the Marut deities to give him water for drinking. Then the Marut deities lifted a well from a place not very far away, brought it, set it in the hermitage of the sage Gotama, and satisfied the sage with water: this is the idea that is set forth in this Ṛk and in the following Ṛk."

- अवतम् — avastrāta iti bhavaty avataḥ kūpaḥ — "kūpaḥ, kātuḥ and so on: among the fourteen names of the well the word avataḥ is read; so avatam means 'the well'. Probably the cloud is intended here." ⁴⁶

- धमन्तो वाणम् — śatasamkhyābhis tantrībhir yuktaṃ vīṇāviśeṣaṃ vādayantaḥ — "playing a lute furnished with a thousand [as printed: sāviraṃ = 'a thousand'] strings; that is, as the wind blows violently they make various sounds, as it were an instrument sounding: so the intention."
- रण्यानि चक्रिरे — ramaṇīyāni dhanāni stotṛbhyaḥ kurvanti — "they give excellent riches to those who praise: so the intention."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.10)

- नुनुद्रे — the root ṇuda prerane; liṭ, third person plural; by "लिटस्तझयोरेशिरेच्" (liṭas tajhayor eśirec) the substitute irec; by "इरयोरे" (irayor re, Pā. Sū. 6-4-[76] [?]) in the Chandas the substitute re for ire; reduplication of the root; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; the form nunudre.
- दादृहाणम् — the root ḍrha ḍrhi vṛddhau; by "लिटः कानज्वा" (liṭaḥ kānaj vā) the affix kānac; reduplication of the root; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; by "उरत्" (ur at) the a; when r follows, then again the hal-initial remains, so the d remains; since it is kit, the affix is the occasion for the prohibition of laghūpadha-guṇa; by "अट्कुप्वाङ्नुम्व्यवायेऽपि" the ṇ for the n; in the accusative singular the form dāḍṛhāṇam; by "चितः" the final acute.
- बिभिदुः — the root bhidir vidāraṇe; liṭ, third person plural; the nighāta accent of the tiṇanta.
- धमन्तः — the root dhmā śabdāgnisaṃyogayoḥ; the affix śatr in the sense of laṭ; by "पान्नाध्मास्थाम्नादाणदृश्यर्त्तिसर्तिसदसदां पिबजिघ्रधमतिष्ठमनयच्छपश्यर्च्छधौशीयसीदाः" (Pā. "अनुस्वारस्य ययि परसवर्णः" the homorganic nasal; by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्" the lasārvadhātuka (ñit) is unaccented, and by the root's accent the word's first syllable is acute.

- वाणम् — aṇa, raṇa, vaṇa in the sense of sound; the affix ghaṇ in the passive; by "अत उपधायाः" the vṛddhi of the penultimate of the root; though the first syllable would have been acute, by "कर्षात्वतो घञोऽन्त उदात्तः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[159] [?]) the final acute comes.

original p. 185

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.10, concluded from p. 184 (grammar, noted briefly):

- रण्यानि — the root has been stated before; in the abstract sense, by "वशिरण्योरुपसंख्यानम्" (Pā. Sū. 3-[3]-[58] [?]) the affix ap; the form raṇā; then, in the sense of "being in it", by "भवे छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 4-4-[110]) the affix yat; by "यस्येति च" the loss of the a; the form ranya; by "यतोऽनावः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[213]) the first syllable acute, overriding the svarita; accusative plural.
- चक्रिरे — the root ḍukṛñ karṇe; liṭ, third person plural; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.

47. Kannada script; this page's bhāṣya is printed in small type; the clause on tayā, one sentence after tṛṣṇaje, and the citation in the clause on dhāmabhiḥ are cramped and are read with doubt or omitted.

jihmam — crooked; avatam — the well they had raised; tayā diśā — (in the direction where the sage Gotama was living) in that direction; nunudre — made it go; ⁴⁸; tr̥ṣṇaje — to the thirsty; gotamāya — for Gotama the sage; utsam — the stream of water; asiñcan — they poured; citrabhānavaḥ — the Maruts of many kinds of radiance; īm — this (devout) sage; avasā — with (such) protection; ā gacchanti — approach; viprasya — of the wise Gotama; kāmam — wish; dhāmabhiḥ — with waters that sustain life; tarpayanta — satisfied.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 85.11

"The Maruts made the well which they had raised go, crooked, in the direction where the sage Gotama lived. Then, having set it at the sage's hermitage, they poured out a stream of water for the thirsty sage Gotama. The Maruts, of various radiance, approached their devotee Gotama with such protection, and satisfied the wise man's wish with waters that sustain life."

original p. 187

English Translation

"They brought the crooked well to the place (where Gotama was) and sprinkled the water upon the thirsty Gotama; the variously radiant Maruts come to his succour, gratifying the desire of the Sage with life-sustaining waters." — as printed.

- जिह्वम् — vakram — "crooked, not straight."
- उत्सम् — "a stream of water."
- तृष्णजे — tr̥ṣitāya gotamāya — "to the thirsty (Gotama)."
- चित्रभानवः — "those of many kinds of radiance."
- धामभिः — dhāarakair udakaiḥ — "with waters that flow in streams."

48. then, placing it in the hermitage of the sage

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 85.11)

- तया — the word tad; in the feminine instrumental singular the form tayā; since by "सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः" the case-ending would have the acute, the prohibition comes, by "न गोश्वन्साववर्णराडङ्कुङ्कृद्भ्यः" (na goścan-sāvavarṇa-rāḍaṅ-kruṅkṛdbhyaḥ, Pā. Sū. 6-1-[182] [?]).
- दिशा — the word diś; always feminine; instrumental singular; being "supara" [i.e. followed by the case-ending], by "एकाचः" etc. [as read: "eko 'ca..."], the case-ending acute by "सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः".
- असिञ्चन् — the root ṣica kṣaraṇe, Tudādi; lañ, third person plural; by "झोऽन्तः" the substitute ant; the loss of the final a; by "शे मुचादीनाम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[59]) the augment num; the vikaraṇa (śa); loss of the final consonant of the conjunct; the augment aṭ; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, there is no nighāta; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.
- तृणजे — the root ñitrṣā pipāsāyām; to it, by "स्वपितृषोर्नजिङ्" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[172] [?]) the affix najiñ; by "रञ्जेः..." [as read: "rakṣāpām..."] the ṇ of the affix, the acute accent of the affix; since the root trṣ's penultimate (r) is followed by a jī affix, no guṇa; the word trṣṇaj; by the ṇa acute through the affix-accent, the a of the ṇa is acute; in the dative singular the form trṣṇaje.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 85.11, continued from p. 187 (grammar, noted briefly):

- तृणजे (cont.) — "In the analysis of this word the padakāra Śākalya has a different view: by the sūtra "अन्येष्वपि दृश्यते" (anyeṣv api dṛśyate, Pā. Sū. 3-2-101), by the inclusion of the word dṛśi, the affix ḍa comes after the bare root jan;

by the force of the ḍit, the loss of the ṭi part (an) of jani; tr̥ṣṇā jātā yasya sa tr̥ṣṇajah; by "ज्यापोः संज्ञाछन्दसोर्बहुलम्" (jyāpoḥ saṃjñāchandasor bahulam) the shortening of the ā at the end of the first member in the compound; since it is a bahuvrīhi compound, by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" the first member keeps its accent."

- गच्छन्ति — the root gamḥ gatau; laṭ, third person plural; the substitute anti; śap; by "इषुगमियमां छः" (iṣugamiyamām chaḥ) the substitute ccha; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- चित्रभानवः — citrāḥ bhānavo yasya saḥ; by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" the first member keeps its accent.
- तर्पयन्त — the root tr̥pa tr̥ptau; laṇ, third person plural [in the Veda in the sense of laṭ]; by "बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्गयोगेऽपि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-75) the augment aṭ does not come; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- धामभिः — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoh; by "आतो मनिन्वनिब्वनिपश्च" the affix manin; the word dhāman; since it ends in a nīt affix, the first syllable is acute; in the instrumental plural, by "नलोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य" the loss of n.

- या — in the neuter, since the substitute śi comes, by "शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्" the loss of śi.
- शर्म — the word śarman is neuter always; jas follows it, and by "सुपां सुलुक्" the luk of jas comes.
- शशमानाय — the root śaśa plutagatau; by "ताच्छील्यवयोवचनशक्तिषु चानश्" (tācchīlyavayovacanaśaktiṣu cānaś, Pā. Sū. 3-2-[129]) the affix cānaś in the sense of habit; by "आने मुक्" (āne muk) the augment muk, since the affix follows; because the affix has the marker c, by "चितः" the final acute; in the dative singular, śaśamānāya.
- यच्छत — the root dāṇ dāne; in the sense of loṭ, by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" laṇi; by "पान्नाध्मास्था..." the substitute yaccha for the root; for the second-person plural, by "तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः" the substitute ta; by "बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्ग्योगेऽपि" the augment aṭ does not come; since it stands after an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- यन्त — the root yama uparamē; loṭ, second person plural; by "तप्तनप्तनथनाश्च" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[45]) the substitute ta; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of śap; since the substitute ta is pit, there is no nit-ness, so the m of the root, being nasal, is not dropped by

"अनुदात्तोपदेशवनतितनोत्यादीनाम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[37]); by "नश्चापदान्तस्य झलि" the anusvāra for the m; since yay follows, the homorganic nasal; the nighāta of the tiñanta.

- धत्त — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoh; loṭ, second person plural; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- वृषण — the word vṛṣan ends in the affix kanin, and so has the first syllable acute; the vocative plural, jas following, by "सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ" the lengthening of the penultimate would have come; but by "वा षपूर्वस्य निगमे" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[9]) in the Chandas the lengthening of the penultimate is optional, so it does not occur here; by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" the nighāta accent.
- सुवीरम् — śobhanāḥ vīrāḥ yasya sa suvīraḥ tat; the first member's base accent is set aside by "नञ्सुभ्याम्", which by its rule gives the accent on the last syllable of the latter member; but this too is set aside by "बहुव्रीहौ वीरवीर्यौ च" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[120] [?]), by which the first syllable of the latter member is acute; accusative singular.

Translation: "The second sūkta, maruto yasya — ten Ṛks — is the vision of Gotama, Gāyatrī, addressed to the Maruts; the Anukramaṇī says 'maruto daśa gāyatram'. In the vyūḍha chandoma of the third day, this sūkta is used in the Āgnimāruta śāstra; it is prescribed in the section ṛtīyasyāgan ma maha [as read]: 'maruto yasya hi prāgnaye vācam — the Āgnimāruta' (Āś. [8-11] [?]). In the Aindrāmāruta principal offering (havis), this Ṛk maruto yasya is the anuvākyā; it is prescribed: 'aindrāmārutiṃ bhedakāmā maruto yasya hi kṣaye' (Āś. [2-11] [?]). It is also the anuvākyā of the Marut oblation of curds (āmikṣā) in the Varuṇapraghāsa offerings; it is prescribed: 'maruto yasya hi kṣaye 'rā ived acaramā aheva' (Āś. [2-12] [?]). And at the morning pressing it is the Potṛ's prṣṭhitayājyā, as prescribed: 'maruto yasya hi kṣaye 'gne patnīr ihā vaha' (Āś. [5-5] [?])." ¹

"The sūkta maruto yasya is the second sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka of the first maṇḍala. There are ten Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. The metre is Gāyatrī; the deities are the Maruts. In the Anukramaṇī it is said: 'maruto daśa gāyatram'. In the vyūḍha Ṛtu-type sacrifice, called chandoma, on the third day, at the time of reciting the Āgnimāruta śāstra with its mantras, this sūkta has an application. This matter is set forth in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section beginning ṛtīyasyāgan ma maha, by the sūtra 'maruto yasya hi prāgnaye vācam ity āgnimārutam' (Āś. [8-11] [?]). In the principal homa called Aindrāmāruti, when the offering is being laid out, this Ṛk maruto yasya is to be used as the puronuvākyā, and the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows this by the sūtra 'aindrāmārutiṃ bhedakāmā

1. The sūtra citations are cramped in the print and read with doubt.

maruto yasya hi kṣaye' (Āś. [2-11] [?]). Also, in the Varuṇapraghāsa sacrifice, in the curds-offering that belongs to the Maruts, this Ṛk is to be used as the puronuvākya mantra; this is set out in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra 'maruto yasya hi kṣaye 'rā ived acaramā aheva' (Āś. [2-12] [?]). And at the morning pressing, the Potṛ priest is to use this Ṛk as the prṣṭhitayājya mantra: the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra says 'maruto yasya hi kṣaye 'gne patnīr ihā vaha' (Āś. [5-5] [?])." ²

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 86.1) ⁴

vi mahasaḥ — endowed with special brilliance; marutaḥ — O Maruts; divaḥ — (coming) from the atmosphere; yasya hi — whichever; sacrificer's; kṣaye — in the (sacrificial) house; pātha — you drink (the Soma-juice); sa janaḥ — that man, the performer of the sacrifice; sugopātamaḥ — is endowed with excellent protections.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 86.1

"O Maruts, of exceeding brilliance: whichever sacrificer's sacrificial house you come to from the atmospheric world and drink the Soma-juice there, that man has excellent protections."

English Translation ⁵

"O resplendent Maruts, that man in whose house you drink the Soma-libation is provided with most able protectors." — as printed.

- विमहसः — viśiṣṭaparakāśāḥ — "extremely resplendent."

- पाथ — the root pā pāne; laṭ, second person plural, the affix tha; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of the śap vikaraṇa; since the affix is śit-less [as printed: śit-pratyaya parad-lilladiruvudarinda], the substitute piba by "पान्नाध्मा..." does not come; since yasya precedes, by "यद्धृत्तान्नित्यम्" the nighāta does not occur; by the affix-accent the final acute; by "व्यचोऽतस्तिङः" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[135] [?]) in the mantra the lengthening occurs because of the Veda: the ā is long.
- दिवः — by "ऊडिदम्पदाद्यप्पुत्रैद्युभ्यः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[171]) the case-ending is acute.

- विमहसः — viśiṣṭaṃ mahaḥ (tejaḥ) yeṣāṃ te vimahasah; in the vocative plural too the form vimahasah; by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" the nighāta accent.
- सुगोपातमः — śobhano gopā rakṣako yasya saḥ sugopāḥ (one who has capable protection); atīśayena sugopāḥ sugopātamaḥ: by "अतिशयने तमबिष्ठनौ" (atīśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau) the affix tamap; since it is pit, by "अनुदात्तौ सुप्पितौ" (anudāttau suppitau) it is unaccented; when sugopāḥ is a bahuvrīhi compound, by "नञ्सुभ्याम्" (Pā. English Translation

- यज्ञवाहसः — "those who carry out the sacrifice; priests who bear a share in sacrifices."
- मतीनाम् — stutīnām — "connected with praises; those who are invoked by praises."
- यज्ञैर्वा — "the sacrificer who performs a sacrifice, or one who performs an invocation in the same way without a sacrifice: the word vā indicates the sense that attention should be given to both."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.2)

- यज्ञवाहसः — "गतिकारकयोरपि पूर्वपदप्रकृतिस्वरत्वं च" (the statement, Uṇ. Sū. 4-[222] [?]): since the kāraka yajña stands as the first member, the affix asun comes after the root vah by "वहिहाधाज्भ्यश्छन्दसि" (vahihādhāñbhyaś chandasī)¹⁰

original p. 197

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 86.2, continued from p. 196 (grammar, noted briefly):

- यज्ञवाहसः (cont.) — (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[222]) — the affix asun after the root vah; by "वसेर्णित्" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[232] [?]) the ṇit is carried on, so the affix asun is ṇit, and vṛddhi comes to the root; then by "अत उपधायाः" the lengthening of the penultimate of the root; the word yajñavāhas; in the vocative plural: yajñavāhasaḥ; by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" the nighāta accent.
- मतीनाम् — the root mana jñāne; by "स्त्रियां क्तिन्" (striyām ktin) the affix ktin in the sense of instrument; with mati + nām, by "अनुदात्तोपदेशवनतितनोत्यादीनाम्..." (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[37]) the nasal n of the root is dropped; in the genitive plural, by "ह्रस्वनद्यापोर्नुट्" (hrasvanadyāpor nuṭ) the augment nuṭ for ām; by "नामि" (nāmi) the lengthening of the preceding vowel: matinām; by "नामन्यतरस्याम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[177]) the case-ending nām is acute.
- शृणुत — the root śru śravaṇe; loṭ, second person plural; because it is lañ-like [ṇit], by "तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः" the substitute ta; by "श्रुवः शृ च" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[74]) the śnu vikaraṇa and the substitute śr for the root śru; for śap, the śnu-vikaraṇa; by "सार्वधातुकमपित्" the ṇit-ness, so no guṇa for the u; by the rule "सति शिष्टस्वरबलीयस्त्वमन्यत्र विकरणेभ्यः" the accent of the vikaraṇa is set aside, so the accent of the tiñ ending remains; the word has a final acute; although it follows an atiñanta it would have the nighāta; however, since maruta is an āmantrita, by "आमन्त्रितं पूर्वमविद्यमानवत्" the earlier word āmantrita is taken as non-existent, so that there is no previous word before pada (the pada does not come after) and the nighāta does not apply.

- हवम् — the root hveñ spardhāyām śabde ca; by "भावेऽनुपसर्गस्य" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[75]) the affix ap in the abstract sense and saṃprasāraṇa; by "सम्प्रसारणाच्च" the earlier form for the vowel of the root; hu + a, by "सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः" the guṇa; av-substitution; since ap is pīṭ, unaccented; the root's accent remains.

- श्रोषन्तु — the root śru śravaṇe; loṭ, third person plural; the substitute anta; u (uttama [as printed: "uttva"]); by "सिब्बहुलं लेटि" (Pā. - सस्रुषीः — the root sru gatau; liṭ follows and in its place, by "क्वसुश्च" the affix kvasu; reduplication of the root; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; the word sasruvas; since the feminine is intended...²⁰

- पूर्वीभिः — "puru means 'many'. Bahvībhiḥ means 'numerous, abundant'."
- शरद्विः — "Although this word means 'by autumns (the season śarad)', since the autumn season comes only once in a year, in the R̥gveda and in the other Vedas too this word is often used to denote a year. Hence here the meaning 'by years' must be given to śaradbhiḥ. A couple of R̥ks in which this word is used in that sense are given below as examples:

तच्चक्षुर्देवहितं शुक्रमुच्यरत् । पश्येम शरदः शतं जीवेम शरदः शतम् ॥

tac cakṣur devahitaṃ śukram uccarat | paśyema śaradaḥ śataṃ jīvema śaradaḥ śataṃ || (R. Saṃ. 7-66-16 [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "That eye, set by the gods, bright, rises: may we see a hundred autumns, may we live a hundred autumns."

शतं जीव शरदो वर्धमानः शतं हेमन्ताञ्छतमु वसन्तान् । शतमिन्द्राग्नी सविता बृहस्पतिः शतायुषा हविषेमं पुनर्दुः ॥

śataṃ jīva śarado vardhamānaḥ śataṃ hemantāñ chatam u vasantān | śataṃ indrāgnī savitā bṛhaspatiḥ śatāyusā haviṣemaṃ punar duḥ || (R. Saṃ. 10-161-4 [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Live a hundred autumns, growing; a hundred winters, a hundred springs: may Indra and Agni, Savitr, Bṛhaspati, with an oblation of a hundred years of life, give him back again."

"...and so on. In the second example the vasanta (spring) season has also been used. Ordinarily, it is the usage to use the śarad season to denote the year." - ददाशिम — dāśa dāne | havīmṣi dattavantaḥ — "we have offered oblations."

original p. 206

Special Topics of Rik 86.6, concluded from p. 205:

- चर्षणीनाम् — sarvasya draṣṭṛñāṃ sarvajñānāṃ bhavatām — "of you who see everything, or know everything: all-knowing."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.6)

- पूर्वीभिः — the word puru; to it, in the feminine, by "वोते गुणवचनात्" (voto guṇavacanāt, Pā. Sū. 4-1-[44]) the affix nīṣ; by "इको यणचि" the yaṇ-substitution; by "हलि च" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[77]) the lengthening of the vowel before the r; instrumental plural; by the affix-accent the ī is acute.
- ददाशिम — the root dāśr dāne; liṭ, first person plural, the affix mas; by "आर्धधातुकस्येड्वलादेः" the augment iṭ; the root is reduplicated by liṭ; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; short; the form dadāśima; since the particle hi precedes, by "हि च" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-[34]) the nighāta is prohibited; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- अवोभिः — the root ava rakṣaṇe; since asun comes after all roots, the affix asun; the word avas; in the instrumental plural, s becomes ru, then u, with guṇa; since it ends in a nit affix, the first syllable is acute.
- चर्षणीनाम् — in the genitive plural the augment nuṭ for ām; by "नामि" the lengthening of the stem-final; by "नामन्यतरस्याम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[177]) the case-ending nām is acute.

- प्रयांसि — "among the twenty-eight names of food — andhaḥ, vājaḥ and the rest — the word prayaḥ is read; hence prayāṃsi means foods endowed with the nature of oblations (Ni. 2-[7] [?])."

- पर्वथ — prṣu, vṛṣu, mṛṣu secane | siñcatha | prāpnuthā | svīkarasi — "you pour; you obtain': the meaning is 'you accept'."
- सुभगः — "maghaṃ, reknaḥ and the rest — among the twenty-eight names of wealth, the word bhagaḥ is read (Ni. 2-[10] [?]); so subhagaḥ means one who has excellent wealth."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.7)

- सुभगः — śobhano bhago (dhanam) yasya subhagaḥ; the accent that would come by "नञ्सुभ्याम्" is set aside, and by "क्रत्वादयश्च" (kratvādayaś ca, Pā. Sū. 6-2-[118]) the first syllable of the latter member is acute.
- प्रयज्यवः — by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" the nighāta accent.
- अस्तु — the root as bhuvi, Adādi; loṭ, third person singular; by "एरुः" the u; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- पर्वथ — the root prṣu vṛṣu mṛṣu secane, Bhvādi; laṭ, second person plural; since śap follows, the guṇa of the laghūpadha of the root; since yasya precedes, by "यद्धृत्तान्त्यम्" the nighāta is prohibited; since the root has an unaccented upadeśa, the lasārvadhātuka ending (tha) is unaccented by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्", so the root accent remains.

satyaśavaśaḥ — those of unfailing strength; naraḥ — O Maruts, who are leaders; śaśamānasya — (you) who worship with praises; svedasya — who toils (with the exertion of your worship) and sweats; venataḥ — who longs for (your favour); kāmasya — the wish; vida — knowing (and favour it).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 86.8

25. Kannada script; the grammatical tail of this bhāṣya is cramped; "jhādeśaḥ" and "vyecotes trja" are read with doubt [?].

"O Maruts, of unfailing strength, who are leaders: knowing the wish of your devotee — who worships you with praises, always toils in your service of worship, and longs for your favour — grant it."

English Translation

"Possessors of true vigor, pay attention to the wishes of him who praises you and toils in your service desiring your favour." — as printed.

- सत्यशवसः — "among the twenty-seven names of strength — ojaḥ, pājaḥ and the rest — the word śavas is read; śavaḥ means strength. Satyam śavo yeṣāṃ te satyaśavasah — those who have true, or excellent, strength: that is the intention."
- स्वेदस्य — "sveda means perspiration. Svedasya means: of the sacrificer who has worshipped you with praises and the like, and who is covered with the sweat that arose from the exertion."
- वेनतः — venatiḥ kāntikarmā — "one who desires: that is, the sacrificer who desires to praise you."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.8)

- शशमानस्य — the root śaśa plutagatau; in the sense of habit, by "ताच्छील्यवयोवचनशक्तिषु चानश्" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[129]) the affix cānaś; by "आने मुक्" the augment muk; since it is cit, by "चितः" the final acute; genitive singular.

- स्वेदस्य — the root ñiṣvidā gātrapraksaraṇe; when the sense of ñic (impelling) is included in the meaning of the root, the affix ghañ in the passive; because the affix is ārdhadhātuka, the guṇa of the laghūpadha of the root; the ṣ of the root becomes s; by "ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्" the first syllable acute.
- सत्यशवसः — satyaṃ śavo yeṣāṃ te satyaśavasah; the vocative plural; by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" the nighāta accent.
- विदा — the root vidl lābhe; loṭ, second person plural, for the affix by vyatyaya the substitute jha; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of the vikaraṇa; by "आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः" (ātmanepadeṣv anataḥ) the at substitute for jha, because the preceding letter is not a; by "सार्वधातुकमपित्" since the affix is ñit, no guṇa for the laghūpadha; the word vinta? [as read: "vinata"]; by "लोपस्त आत्मनेपदेषु" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-41) the loss of the t of the affix; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the affix-accent the a after n is acute; since the form is vida, by "व्येचोऽतिङः" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[135] [?]) the final syllable is lengthened because the word is two-syllabled [dvyac].²⁶

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 86.8, concluded from p. 210:

- कामस्य — genitive singular; since it is read in the vr̥ṣādi list, by "वृषादीनां च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[203]) the first syllable acute; by the statement "क्रियाग्रहणं कर्तव्यम्" in the sūtra that gives the rule for the sampradāna, the object receives the designation sampradāna; so the genitive (ṣaṣṭhī) comes in the sense of the dative.

Closing of Rik 86.8: "॥ ८ ॥" (8), followed by a printer's ornament.

26. The sūtra and the reasoning on vidā are read with doubt [?]; the clipped print does not allow a closer reading.

When āviḥ (adverb) precedes, the s of the visarga becomes ru, visarga; by "इदुदुपधस्य चाप्रत्ययस्य" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[41] [?]) the ṣatva of the visarga that is connected with something other than an affix; the form āviṣkarta."
- महित्वना — when mahitva + ṭā, by vyatyaya the nā of the instrumental singular does not appear [as printed] and the acute accent comes; or, by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute ā for the instrumental ending, and the augment n; since it is cit [as printed], by "चितः" the final acute.
- विध्यता — the root vyadha tāḍane; loṭ, second person plural; by "तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः" the substitute ta; by "दिवादिभ्यः श्यन्" the vikaraṇa śyan; since the affix is pit-less (sārvadhātukam apit) it is ñit, and by "ग्रहिज्यावयिव्यधिवष्टिविचतिवृश्चतिपृच्छतिभृज्जतीनां डिति च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[16]) the saṃprasāraṇa of the root (the y); by "सम्प्रसारणाच्च" the earlier form; the form vidhyata; since the affix is ñit, by "ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[133]) the lengthening in the Samhitā; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; since the unaccented upadeśa follows, the affix is unaccented, and the root's accent remains.

32. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 214

"For this Ṛk the bhāṣyakāra has given two different meanings. He explains the word tamaḥ, taking the common meaning 'darkness' and then the meaning 'ignorance', and explains each accordingly."

- गूह्यम् — guhāyāṃ sthitam, sarvatra vyāpyamānam — "situated in a cave; pervading everywhere. When hidden, in secret places where no one is able to see it. In the Ṛgveda and the other Vedas, the use of the words guhyam, guhā hitam is especially frequent in contexts that show the meaning 'secret'."
- गूह्यत — saṃvṛtaṃ kuruta | guhū saṃvaraṇe | apanayeta ity arthaḥ — "make it hidden; remove it; make it go through concealment."
- अत्रिणम् — sarvam attāraṃ rākṣasādikam — "the Rākṣasas and the like who eat all beings."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 86.10)

- गूह्यत — the root guhū saṃvaraṇe, Bhvādi; loṭ, second person plural, the substitute ta; by "कर्तरि शप्" (kartari śap) the vikaraṇa śap; since it is sārvadhātuka the guṇa of the laghūpadha would come by "पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च", but by "ऊदुपधाया गोहः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[89]) the substitute ū for the penultimate; the form gūhata; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the root's accent the first syllable is acute.
- यात — the root yā prāpaṇe; since the sense of ṇic (causing) is included in the meaning of the root, loṭ; second person plural, the substitute ta; by "अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शप्" the luk of the vikaraṇa; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- अत्रिणम् — the root ada bhakṣaṇe; by "अदेस्त्रिणि च" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[68] [?]) the affix trini; the word atrin; the affix-accent; accusative singular.

- उश्मसि — the root vaśa kāntau, Adādi; laṭ, first person plural, the affix mas; since the affix is sārvadhātuka and apit, it is ñit, so by "ग्रहिज्यावयिव्यधि..." (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[16]) the saṃprasāraṇa (v → u) of the root; since it belongs to the adādi class, the luk of śap; by "इदन्तो मसि" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[46]) the augment i for the affix mas: the form uśmasi; since yat is in connexion, the nighāta ...³³

2. Kannada script; the grammatical tail is compressed and several sūtra wordings and numerals are read with doubt [?]; the first alternative on virapśīnaḥ and the sūtra on ānajre are least certain.

Translation: "Pratvakṣasaḥ — those who thin out (tanūkartāraḥ) their enemies to the utmost: that is, slayers of enemies. Since they are pratavasaḥ — possessed of outstanding strength — they are therefore virapśinaḥ — endowed with various cries [of praise] [?]. Or: this is a name for 'great': the great are praised with many words; for that very reason anānatāḥ — unbowed, the best of all; avithurāḥ — not separated, that is, banded together as the group of seven; ṛjīṣinaḥ — since the ṛjīṣa is pressed at the third pressing, and the Maruts are praised there, they have the quality of ṛjīṣa; or 'those who bring forth the juices'. Juṣṭatamāsaḥ — most served by the sacrificers; nṛtamāsaḥ — foremost guides of cloud and the like. Such Maruts vy ānajre — become visible, shine forth, in the sky with añjibhiḥ — ornaments that manifest their form — and str̥bhiḥ — coverings of their body; as some rays of the sun (usrāḥ) shine in the sky, so they. Grammar tail, noted briefly: pratvakṣasaḥ — tvakṣū 'to make thin' with asun; pratavasaḥ — tavas is a name of strength; virapśinaḥ — rapa 'to speak'; anānatāḥ — ānata = bowed; with the negative; avithurāḥ — vyatha 'to fear, to move', with urac and saṃprasāraṇa; juṣṭatamāsaḥ — juṣṭa is acute on its first syllable, tamāsa is unaccented because pit; ānajre — añjū with Vedic liṭ in the present sense; str̥bhiḥ — str̥ñ ācchādane with kvip, no augment tuk since the rule of augments is not invariable."

pratvakṣasaḥ — destroyers of enemies; pratavasaḥ — those endowed with surpassing strength; virapśinaḥ — makers of various cries of victory, or possessed of greatness praised with various words (for that reason); anānatāḥ — bowing to none (the best of all); avithurāḥ — ever together (not separate); ṛjīṣinaḥ — those who drink Soma together at the third pressing; juṣṭatamāsaḥ — those most served (by the sacrificers); nṛtamāsaḥ

— the Maruts, who are chief guides of the clouds; str̥bhiḥ — covering their bodies; añjibhiḥ — with ornaments that display their beauty; kecit usrā iva — like certain well-known rays of the sun; vy ānatre — (in the atmosphere) appear prominently.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.1

"The Maruts are destroyers of enemies and have surpassing strength. Making various cries of victory they traverse the highest places, bowing to none. Always united, not single, and above all they gather at the third pressing and drink Soma. Most served by the sacrificers, and the foremost guides of the clouds, those Maruts appear in the atmosphere, with ornaments that display the beauty with which they cover their bodies, prominent like certain well-known rays of the sun in the sky."

original p. 219

English Translation ⁴

"Annihilators of adversaries, endowed with great strength, loud-shouting unbending, unseperable [sic] partakers of the evening oblations, constantly worshipped and leaders of the clouds, the Maruts, by their personal decorations are conspicuous in the sky like some rays of the Sun." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 87.1)

"Although the word marutaḥ is not in this Ṛk, the eight words pratvakṣasaḥ, pratavaśaḥ, virapśinaḥ, anānatāḥ, avithurāḥ, ṛjīṣinaḥ, juṣṭatamāsaḥ, nṛtamāsaḥ are adjectives that state the qualities of the Marut deities."

- प्रत्वक्षसः — takṣū tvakṣū tanūkaraṇe | prakarṣeṇa tvakṣante tanūkurvantīti pratvakṣasaḥ | śatruṇām prakarṣeṇa tanūkartāraḥ — "destroyers of enemies."

4. printed in English in the source; Rik 87.1

- प्रतवसः — "tavas means strength (Ni. [2-9] [?]); prakṛṣṭaṃ tavo yeṣām — those of great or of excellent strength."
- विरप्शिनः — rapa lapa jalpa vyaktāyām vāci | virapaṇaṃ virapśaḥ | tadvanto virapśinaḥ vividhena jayaghoṣeṇopetāḥ — "those furnished with various shouts of victory. Or, since virapśin is a name of the great (Ni. [3-3] [?]), virapśinaḥ means the mighty ones, the excellent."
- अनानताः — ānatā avanatāḥ prahvibhūtāḥ | na ānatā anānatāḥ | anatirahitāḥ | sarvotkṛṣṭā ity arthaḥ — "ānata or avanata means those who bow in salutation; anānata means 'those who bow to no one', that is, the supreme."
- अविथुराः — vyatha bhayacalanayoḥ | aviyuktāḥ — "those who are not separate: these Maruts have joined together, are united in the form of a company of seven. The meaning 'fearless' may also be given to this word."
- ऋजीषिणः — ṛjīṣasyābhiṣavaṇāt tatra ca marutaḥ stūyanta iti teṣām ṛjīṣitvam | yadvā ṛjīṣinaḥ prārjayitāro rasānām — "since ṛjīṣa is pressed at the third pressing and the Maruts are praised there, they are ṛjīṣinaḥ; or 'those who bring forth the juices'. Yāska explains this word:

॥ ऋजीषी सोमो यत् सोमस्य पूयमानस्यातिरिच्यते तदृजीषमपार्जितं भवति तेनर्जीषी सोमः ॥

ṛjīṣī somo yat somasya pūyamānasyātiricyate tad ṛjīṣam apārjitaṃ bhavati tenarjīṣī somaḥ || (Ni. [?] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Ṛjīṣī is Soma: what remains over of Soma that is being purified is ṛjīṣa, the residue that is strained off; hence Soma is ṛjīṣī." ⁵

"...thus he gave the explanation. Ṛjīṣī means Soma: since, having separated the dregs and the like that remain in the leather bag after the pressing of Soma, only the sap that is the essence is taken specially, Soma is called ṛjīṣī. Here, as the bhāṣyakāra says, the word ṛjīṣiṇaḥ means the Marut deities who drink Soma at the third pressing."

- जुष्टतमासः — juṣṭī prītisevanayoḥ | atīśayena yaṣṭṛbhiḥ sevitāḥ — "served in the highest degree by the sacrificers who perform sacrifices; or, objects of affection to the sacrificers."
- नृतमासः — atīśayena meghāder netāraḥ — "those who are in the highest degree the cause of the movements of cloud and the like, leaders, chiefs: that is, the clouds move as the wind blows."
- अञ्जिभिः — añjū vyaktimrakṣaṇakāntigatiṣu | rūpābhivyañjakair ābharaṇaiḥ — "with materials of beauty, collyrium and the like, that increase the lustre of the body; with ornaments."
- स्तृभिः — strīṇ ācchādane — "covering, concealing the body. This word is an adjective of añjibhiḥ. Skandasvāmin explains this word as 'stars' (nakṣatras): as stars shine in the sky, so these Marut deities shine adorned with ornaments and the like — that is the intention."
- आनज्रे — nabhasi vyaktā dṛśyante — "they shine well in the atmosphere."
- उसा इव — "like rays of the sun; as the rays of the sun are clearly visible in the atmosphere, so are these Maruts seen clearly: so the intention."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 87.1) ⁶

- प्रत्वक्षसः — prakarṣeṇa tvakṣante tanūkurvanti iti pratvakṣasaḥ; the root takṣū tvakṣū tanūkaraṇe; by "गतिकारकयोरपि पूर्वपदप्रकृतिस्वरत्वं च" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[222] [?]) the affix asun; by its connexion the first member keeps its base accent; here the first member is a gati; nominative plural.
- प्रतवसः — tavas is a name for strength; prakṛṣṭaṃ tavo yeṣāṃ te pratavasaḥ; in the bahuvrīhi, by "बहुव्रीहौ प्रकृत्या पूर्वपदम्" the first member's base accent.
- विरप्शिनः — the root rapa lapa vyaktāyāṃ vāci; virapaṇaṃ virapśaḥ; by "णादिकाः शक्" the affix śak [as read]; virapśo yeṣāṃ asti iti virapśinaḥ; in the sense of matup, by "अत इनिठनौ" the affix ini; by the affix-accent the i of ini is acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.1, continued from p. 220 (grammar, noted briefly):

- अनानताः — anatāḥ avanatāḥ prahvībhūtāḥ; when preceded by the preposition ān, the root ṇam with the affix kta; by "अनुदात्तोपदेशः..." the loss of the nasal; na anatāḥ anānatāḥ — a tatpuruṣa in the sense of non-equality [as read: tatpuruṣe tulyārtha... (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[2])] by which the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its base accent.
- अविथुराः — the root vyatha bhayasaṃcalanayoḥ; by "व्यथेः सम्प्रसारणं थः किच्च" (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[40] [?]) the affix urac; th for the dh [as read]; here, because of the word bahula in the Uṇādi, vṛddhi is not made; saṃprasāraṇa of y to i; by "सम्प्रसारणाच्च" the earlier form; the word vithura; na vithurāḥ — as before, the first member (an indeclinable) keeps its accent.

6. grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]

- जुष्टतमासः — the root juṣī prītisevanayoḥ; the affix kta; by "नित्यं मन्त्रे" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[210]) the word is acute on its first syllable; atiśayena juṣṭaḥ juṣṭatamaḥ; by "अतिशायने तमबिष्ठनौ" the affix tamap; since it is pit it is unaccented, so the earlier accent remains; the nominative plural, with jas following, by "आज्जसेरसुक्" the augment asuk; likewise in nṛtamāsaḥ.
- आनज्रे — the root añjū vyaktimrakṣaṇakāntigatiṣu; in the present sense by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" liṭ; third person plural, by "लिटस्तङ्गयोरेशिरेच्" the substitute irec; by "लिङ् निमित्त" the root is reduplicated; the reduplicate's hal-initial remains; by "अत आदेः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[70]) lengthening; then, by "तस्मान्नुङ् द्विहलः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[71]) the augment nuṭ to the two-consonant root after the lengthened vowel made before; by vyatyaya the loss of the nasal n of the root's penultimate; by "इरयोरे" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[76]) the substitute re for the affix; the form ānajre; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- स्तृभिः — the root strñ ācchādane; by "क्विप् च" the affix kvip; although the augment tuk is possible after a short vowel, by the statement "आगमशास्त्रमनित्यम्" (the rule of augments is not invariable) the tuk does not come here.

Translation: "O Maruts, when, in the upahvareṣu — the winding places of the sky that are close to us — you acidhvam — gather up yayim, the moving cloud, make it swell with the power of raining; doing what? Going swiftly like birds (vaya iva) by some path (kena cit pathā), by some sky-route. The meaning: the clouds are gathered by the Maruts who hasten across the sky for rain. Then the kośāḥ — a name of cloud — attached to your chariots, drip, release water. Since it is so, O Maruts, for me, the sacrificer who worships you with oblations, ā ukṣata — sprinkle on every side the ghṛtam, rain-water, honey-coloured, clear, honey-like in appearance: bring about the rain we desire."

marutaḥ — O Maruts; vaya iva — like birds; kena cit pathā — by some path or other (going swiftly); upahvareṣu — in the regions of the sky near you; yayim — the moving mass of clouds; yat — when; acidhvam — you gather together; kośāḥ — the clouds; vaḥ — your; ratheṣu — on the chariots (pressing close); ścotanti — pour (water); (therefore, O Maruts) arcate — for the one who worships you (with oblations); madhuvarṇam — of honey's hue; ghṛtam — the rain-water; ā ukṣata — sprinkle all around.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.2

"O Maruts, like birds, moving swiftly along some path or other in the sky, when you gather the moving mass of clouds in the regions of the sky near you, the clouds press on your chariots and pour rain. Therefore, O Maruts, sprinkle on all sides, for the sacrificer who worships you with oblations, rain-water of the colour of honey."

English Translation ¹⁰

8. Kannada script; the clause "upagantavyeṣv asmākaṃ sannikṛṣṭeṣu" and the word before meghāḥ ścotanti are read with doubt [?]; the tail runs on to p. 223.

9. Kannada script; "tuna..." wording and the sūtra after ñittve are read with doubt [?]. The printed numeral at the end of this bhāṣya-tail is "॥३॥"; since this is Rik 87.2, it is probably a misprint [sic?]; noted rather than corrected.

10. printed in English in the source

"O Maruts, when, flying like birds along a certain path (of the sky), you collect the moving passing clouds in the nearest portion (of the firmament), then coming into collision with your cars, they pour forth the waters; therefore, shower upon your worshipper the honey-coloured rain." — as printed.

- ययिम् — acidhvam gatimantaṁ meghamacidhvam kuruta — "make the moving clouds, going in various directions, gather in one place (as if to make it rain)."
- वयो इव केन चित्पथा — "like birds going in the atmosphere, by some one path of their own choice."
- कोशाः — "among the thirty names of cloud — adriḥ, grāvā and the rest — the word kośaḥ is read; so kośāḥ means the clouds (Ni. [1-10] [?])."
- उप वो रथेषु — "close to your chariots; that is, the meaning is that when the chariot comes into friction, the cloud pours rain. Skandasvāmin says: 'yatra pradeśe yuṣmadīyā rathā vayaṁ tiṣṭhanti [as read] tatra rathacakradhārābhir vidyamāno meghāḥ prakṣarantīty arthaḥ' — 'in whatever

- घृतम् — "among the hundred and one names of water — aṛṇaḥ, kṣodaḥ and the rest — the word ghṛtam is read (Ni. [1-12] [?]); ghṛtam means water. In the Ṛgveda this word is especially used in this sense."
- उक्षत — ukṣa secane — "sprinkle; shower."
- मधुवर्णम् — "of the colour of honey: that is, clear, pure."
- अर्चते — "for the sacrificer who praises you."

- उपहरेषु — the root hvr kauṭilye; upahvaranti kauṭilyena tiryag gacchanty eṣu iti upahvarāḥ [meaning] "the winding regions of the sky"; by "पुंसि संज्ञायां घः प्रायेण" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[118]) the affix gha in the locative sense; for it the guṇa of the r of the root; by "उरणपरः" (uraṇ raparaḥ) with r; by the affix-accent the final acute; locative plural.
- अचिध्वम् — the root ciñ cayane; in the present sense by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" lan; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the vikaraṇa elided; second person plural; since yat is in connexion, no nighāta; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.
- ययिम् — the root yā prāpaṇe; by "आदृगमहनजनः किकिनौ लिट् च" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[171]) the affix kin; since liṭ is stated to be like it, the root is reduplicated; the reduplicate gets hrasva by "ह्रस्वः" ¹³

13. the page ends mid-entry; it continues on p. 225

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.2, concluded from p. 224 (grammar, noted briefly):

- ययिम् (cont.) — "...since the affix kit follows, by "आतो लोप इटि च" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[64]) the loss of the ā of the root; by the affix-accent the final acute; accusative singular."
- पथा — the word pathin; in the instrumental singular the case-ending tā; by "यचि भम्" (yaci bham) the bha designation; so by "भस्य टेलोपः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[144]) the loss of the ṭi part (in); since aj-initial unaccented follows, by "अनुदात्तस्य च यत्रोदात्तलोपः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[158]) the case-ending is acute.
- श्रोतन्ति — the root ścyutir kṣaraṇe; laṭ, third person plural, the affix jhi, for it by "झोऽन्तः" the substitute ant; by Vedic usage the y of the root is dropped; since the verb stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; since by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्" the lasārvadhātuka is unaccented, the root's accent remains.
- उक्षत — the root ukṣa secane; loṭ, second person plural; since lan-like ṇit-ness is there, by "तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः" the substitute ta; since it is not pit [as printed "sārvadhātukam apit"], jī-ness [?]; in the Samhitā text, by "ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[133]) the final syllable is lengthened [hence ukṣatā]; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta accent.

14. Kannada script; the grammatical tail is compressed; the Uṇādi sūtra and its number; the Kāśikā reference and the clause on vibhāva are read with doubt [?].

Translation: "When these Maruts yuñjate — yoke, assemble the clouds, śubhe — for good, for raining water, then, in their ajmeṣu — the cloud-hurling [movements] — yāmeṣu, in the courses that restrain the clouds, the bhūmiḥ, the earth, pra rejate — trembles greatly. Or: when the Maruts yoke their own chariots, harness them with horses, then in the going of these chariots that hurl up mountains and the like, the earth, frightened, trembles. The illustration: vithureva — as a wife separated from her husband, helpless when the king's troubles and the like occur, trembles. Those Maruts, such as these: krīlayaḥ — sportive; dhunayaḥ — of a shaking nature; bhrājadṛṣṭayaḥ — with gleaming weapons; dhūtayaḥ — making the mountains and the rest tremble — mahitvam, their own greatness, svayam eva panayanta — they themselves display. Grammar tail, noted briefly: ajmeṣu — aja gatikṣepaṇayoḥ with the affix man; rejate — rejṛ kampaṇe (Yāska: bhyasate rejate — 'to be afraid'); yāmeṣu — yam uparame with ghañ (first-syllable acute because the word is in the vṛṣādi list); śubhe — kvip in the passive; panayanta — pana vyavahāre with āya (Pā. 3-1-28) and Vedic lañ; shortening by vyatyaya."

move) swift; yāmeṣu — in times of going; bhūmiḥ — the earth; vithurā iva — like a wife without her husband; pra rejate — trembles greatly.]

te — such; krīlayaḥ — fond of play; dhunayaḥ — of a moving nature; bhrājadṛṣṭayaḥ — with shining weapons; dhūtayaḥ — (shaking mountains and the rest) the Maruts; mahitvam — their greatness; panayanta — display.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.3

"Whenever these Maruts gather all the clouds together in order to do good to the world, then, with the going of these swift Maruts, the earth trembles like a wife left without her husband. Such swift ones, fond of play, of moving nature, with shining weapons, the Maruts, shaking mountains and the rest, display their greatness."

English Translation

"When they assemble the clouds for the good work, earth trembles at their impetuous movements like a wife whose husband is away; sportive capricious, armed with bright weapons, and agitating (even the solid rock) they manifest their inherent might." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 87.3)

- अज्मेषु — aja gatiḥsepanayoḥ — "that make things move, that make them go about."
- विथुरेव — bhartrā viyuktā jāyā — "like a wife while she has no husband; that is, like a woman alone in the house when her husband has gone away to another place."

- रेजते — rejṛ kampane | bhyasate rejate iti bhayepēpanayoḥ (Ni. [2-?] [?]) — "'to tremble'; Yāska says 'bhyasate rejate' — it means moving from fear."
- यामेषु — yama uparame; yadvā yā prāpaṇe — "two meanings may be given: 'joining' or 'going'. When the clouds are in the sky, by the stroke of the wind they gather in one place and rain; the name yāma is given to that gathering. Or yāma means 'goings': when the wind blows with force, the clouds move on — or move forward, away — that is the intention."
- भ्राजद्दृष्टयः — dīpyamānāyudhāḥ — "those with shining weapons. For the Marut deities the swift movement, that is, the swift blowing, is itself the weapon; since they blow swiftly they shake trees and the like."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 87.3)

- अज्मेषु — the root aja gatiḥsepāṇayoḥ; in the Uṇādi there is the statement bahula, so the affix man, enjoined by "अर्तिस्तुसुहुसृष्टृक्षिभूभायावापदियक्षिनीभ्यो मन्" (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[140] [?]), comes here too; since an ārdhadhātuka beginning with a val-letter follows, the substitute vī for the root would have come by "अजेर्व्यघजपोः" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-[56]); but since "valādāv ārdhadhātuke vikalpa iṣyate" (Kā. 2-4-56 [?]) is stated, vī does not come here; the word ajma; since it is nit, by "जित्यादिर्नित्यम्" the first syllable acute.
- विथुरा — explained under Rk 87.1 [as printed: "in the first Rk of this sūkta"].
- रेजते — the root rejṛ kampane; bhyasate rejate iti bhayavepanayoḥ (Ni. [2-?] [?], Yāska — which shows that the word has the sense of fear as well); laṭ, third person singular; since it follows an atiṇanta, the nighāta accent.

- यामेषु — the root yamu uparame; ghañ in the abstract sense, with ñit; so by "अत उपधायाः" the ṽddhi of the penultimate; the ñit-accent is set aside and by "कर्षात्वतो घञोऽन्त उदात्तः" the final acute would have come; since it is read in the list, by "वृषादीनां च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[203]) again the first syllable is acute. Or the root yā prāpaṇe, with the affix man by "अर्तिस्तुसु...", and since it ends in a nit affix the first syllable is acute; locative plural.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.3, concluded from p. 228 (grammar, noted briefly):

- युञ्जते — the root yujir yoge, Rudhādi; laṭ, third person plural; since yat is in connexion, no nighāta; by the accent of the vikaraṇa the middle [syllable] is acute.
- शुभे — the root śubha dīptau; in the passive, by "सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्" the affix kvip, since it is read there; the word śubh; dative singular; since it is supara, by "एकाचः" ... the case-ending acute by "सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[168]).
- पनयन्त — the root pana vyavahāre; by "गुपूधूपविच्छिपणिपनिभ्य आयः" (gupūdhūpavicchīpanīpanibhya āyaḥ, Pā. Sū. 3-1-28) the affix āya in its own sense; by "सनाद्यन्ता धातवः" the root-status for what ends in āya; in the present sense, by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" laṇ; by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" the shortening in panāya; in the third person plural, by "झोऽन्तः" the substitute ant; śap; by "अतो गुणे" the pararūpa; by "बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्योगेऽपि" the augment aṭ does not come; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

whose horses are spotted does marked with white spots. Yuvā — ever young. Taviṣībhiḥ āvṛtaḥ — surrounded by powers, strengths not common to others. Satyaḥ — worthy of good deeds. Ṛṇayāvā — one who brings what is owed to those who praise; the giver of abundant wealth. Anedyah — a name meaning 'praiseworthy': unblamed by all. Vṛṣā — the shower of waters. Being such, the Marut host asyā dhiyaḥ — of this work of ours, the rite done by us — protects it, after its rising [its performance], fully."

svasṛt — (without the help of others) moving by itself; prṣadaśvaḥ — having spotted does as the horses; yuvā — ever young; taviṣībhiḥ — (not obtainable from others) by strengths; āvṛtaḥ — surrounded on every side; saḥ hi — that very Marut host; ayā — of all this world; īśānaḥ — lord; satyaḥ — fit for good works; ṛṇayāvā — (to the devotees) one who removes by the gift of wealth; anedyah — ...

Pratipadārtha of Rik 87.4, continued from p. 230:

"...anedyah — one not blamed by anyone; vṛṣā — the Marut host that showers rain; asyāḥ dhiyaḥ (atha) — of this our sacrificial work; prāvitā asi — becomes the protector."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.4

"All the other beings of the world, for their movement, look for the help of the Maruts. But the Maruts alone move of themselves, with no help from anyone else. The host of those Maruts — possessing such power, having spotted does for horses, endowed with youth, possessed of strength that cannot be obtained from others — is lord of this whole world. Fit for good deeds, freeing their devotees from debt by the gift of wealth and the like, and blamed by none, that host of Maruts becomes the protector of this our sacrificial work."

English Translation

"The troop of Maruts is self-moving, deer-borne, ever young, lords of this earth, and invested with vigour; you who are sincere liberators from debt, irreproachable and shedders of rain, are the protectors of this our rite." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 87.4)

- स्वसूत् — svayam eva saran — "moving of themselves, without any impulse from another."
- पृषदश्वः — prṣatyah śvetabindubhir aṅkitā mṛgyo 'śvasthānīyā yasya — "since these spotted does, marked with white spots, are the horses of the Marut deities, 'one having such horses'. 'prṣatyo marutām' (Ni. [2-28] [?]) — so it is explained."
- युवा — "ever young. Since the strength of the Maruts is always extreme, without increase or decrease, they are mighty like youths: that is the intention."
- सत्यः — satkarmārhaḥ — "worthy of being honoured with good works such as sacrifice."
- ऋणयावा — stotṛṇām ṛnasyopagamayitā — "one who removes the debts of those who praise."
- अनेद्यः — ṇidi kutsāyām | sarvair aninditaḥ — "blamed by none; that is, praised by all."
- धियः — karmaṇaḥ — "the word dhī here means 'work' (Ni. [2-1] [?]): after the performance of the sacrifice and similar works that we do."
- ईशानः — īśa aiśvarye — "master, lord of the world."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 87.4)

- स्वसृत् — the root sr̥ gatau; by "क्विप् च" the affix kvip; by "ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक्" (hrasvasya piti kṛti tuk) the augment tuk for the short r̥; by "गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्" the kṛdutarapada keeps its base accent.
- अया — the word idam; in the genitive singular; for the case-ending, by "सुपां सुलुक्.." the substitute yā; since a case-ending beginning with a consonant follows [as printed: halādi], by "हलि लोपः" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[113]) the loss of the id of idam; by "त्यदादीनामः" the a; by "अतो गुणे" the pararūpa; the form ayā; by "चितः" the final acute.
- ईशानः — the root īśa aiśvarye; in the sense of habit, by "ताच्छील्यवयोवचनशक्तिषु चानश्" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[129]) cānaś; since the lasārvadhātuka is stated to be unaccented by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्", here by "चितः" the final acute; when ayā + īśānaḥ, the guṇa sandhi would have come, but since īśā is read in the akṣādi [as printed], by "ईषाक्षादीनां छन्दसि प्रकृतिभावो वक्तव्यः" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[128] vārttika) the prakṛtibhāva comes.
- असि — the root as bhuvi; by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" laṭ, third person singular for the second-person singular affix sip; when as + si, by "तासस्त्योर्लोपः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[50]) the loss of the s of the root because an affix beginning with s follows; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; sip is pīṭ, so unaccented; the root's accent remains.
- ऋणयावा — the root yā prāpaṇe; since the sense of ṇic is included in the root's sense, to it by "आतो मनिन्वनिब्वनिपश्च" the affix vanip; the word yāvan; since vanip is pīṭ, unaccented, the root's accent, the first syllable acute; ṛṇasya yāvā ṛṇayāvā; by "गतिकारकोपपदात् कृत्" the kṛdutarapada's base accent.

- अनेद्यः — the root ṇidi kutsāyām; by "ऋहलोर्ण्यत्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[124]) the affix ṇyat; since it is idit, the augment num by "इदितो नुम् धातोः" would come, but by "आगमानुशासनमनित्यम्" it does not come here; then by "पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च" the guṇa of the laghūpadha, using ṇyat as the occasion; by "न नेद्यः" [?] and "नञ्त्तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थः..." (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[2]) the accent of the first member, an indeclinable.
- प्रावितः [as printed: prāvitā] — the root ava rakṣaṇe; in the agent sense the affix trc; the word avitṛ; su following, by "ऋदुशनस्पुरुदंसोऽनेहसां च" the substitute anan; by "अप्तृन्तृच्स्वसृनप्तृ..." the lengthening of the penultimate; by "हल्ङ्याभ्यो..." ¹⁷

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.4, concluded from p. 232:

- प्रावितः (cont.) — "...by "हल्ङ्याभ्यो दीर्घात्सुतिस्यपृक्तं हल्" the elision of su; by "नलोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य" the loss of n; by "चितः" [as printed] the final acute."
- वृषा — the word vṛṣan ends in the affix kanin and so is acute on its first syllable; the nominative singular.

Closing of Rik 87.4: "॥ ४ ॥" (4), followed by a printer's ornament.

Translation: "...we declare, is the meaning. What is that account?
It is told: the jihvā — the tongue, the speech of the form of praise — accompanied by the cakṣasā, the shining oblation, of the Soma pressed at the sacrifices, pra jigāti — goes forth, goes especially to the Marut host. At the sacrifices the Soma-oblation and praise are made to the Maruts, because īm enam indram — this Indra, in the śami, the action of the nature of the slaying of Vṛtra, the Maruts, ṛkvāṇaḥ — bound with praise of the form 'strike, O Lord, slay, show your valour' — āśata — reached him. Āt it — immediately after attaining Indra, they, having received from Indra such names as yajñiyāni — worthy of sacrifice [?], dadhire — bore them. Therefore for them, at the sacrifice, the Soma-oblation and praise are made. Grammar tail, noted briefly: śami — śamu 'work', locative with Vedic loss of i; ṛkvāṇaḥ — ṛca stutau with kvip in the abstract sense, then vanip in the sense 'possessing it'; yajñiyāni — gha after yajña and ṛtvij (Pā. 5-1-71)."

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 87.5)

pratnasya — of the ancient; pituḥ — from our father (named Rahūgaṇa, who gave us birth); vadāmasi — (the truth he taught us in brief) we now make known; somasya — (at sacrifices, pressed earlier) of the Soma-juice; cakṣasā — together with the shining oblation; jihvā — the speech of the form of praise; pra jigāti — joins (the Maruts — the Soma-oblation and the praise are offered together to the Maruts); īm indram — this Indra; śami — (in the work of slaying Vṛtra and the like); ṛkvāṇaḥ — [the Maruts], with praises ("prahara..." and the like); āsata — (having praised Indra) joined together with him; āt it — immediately after; yajñiyāni — worthy of the sacrifice; nāmāni — names; dadhire — obtained (by the grace of Indra).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.5

"Our father, the ancient one named Rahūgaṇa, who gave us birth, taught us a certain truth in brief. We now make it known: at the sacrifices the Soma-oblation, shining, and the praise are offered together to the Maruts. For the Maruts, in the work of the slaying of Vṛtra and the like, joined Indra, the one who began it, with a verse of encouragement such as 'prahara...' and, immediately on joining him, obtained from Indra's grace names that are fit to be recited at sacrifices."

original p. 235

English Translation

"We declare by our birth from our ancient (late) father, that the tongue of praise accompanies the manifesting invocation of the Maruts at the libations of the Soma; for, as they stood by, encouraging Indra in the conflict they have acquired names that are to be recited at sacrifices." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 87.5)

- प्रत्नस्य पितुः — cirantanasya pitur asmākaṃ janakasya rahūgaṇasya sakāśāt — "from our ancient father, our begetter Rahūgaṇa: from the ancient, or from the father named Rahūgaṇa, the sage."
- वदामसि — brūmaḥ — "we say. Although there is only one Gotama here, it is the established custom, when poets and authors speak, to use the plural form 'we'; hence the plural vadāmasi is used here."
- जिह्वा — "tongue: that is, the speech of the form of praise, uttered by the tongue."
- जिगति — gacchati — "goes and joins the Marut hosts; that is, it is made to be heard by them."
- शमि — "śami means 'action' (Ni. [2-1] [?]): in actions such as the slaying of Vṛtra."
- ऋक्वाणः — ṛca stutau — "possessed of praises of the form of Ṛks."
- नामानि यज्ञियानि दधिरे — "your names are recited at the sacrifices; that is, because you encouraged Indra in the slaying of Vṛtra and the like with sentences such as 'prahara bhagavo jahi' ('strike, O Lord, slay'), and helped him, your names became fit to be recited at sacrifices: that is the intention."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 87.5)

- वदामसि — the root vada vyaktāyām vāci; laṭ, first person plural, the affix masi [= mas]; śap; by "अतो दीर्घो यजि" (ato dīrgho yañi) the lengthening of the a-ending stem because the affix mas follows; by "इदन्तो मसि" the augment i for the affix; since it follows an atiñanta [as printed], the nighāta accent.
- जिगाति — the root gā stutau, Juhotyādi; laṭ, third person singular, the affix; for śap the substitute ślu; by "श्लौ" the reduplication of the root; by "ह्रस्वः" the shortening of the reduplicate; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the i in the reduplicate; by "कुहोश्चुः" cutva; ji; here too the nighāta accent comes.

original p. 236

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.5, continued from p. 235 (grammar, noted briefly):

- शमि — śamī is a name for action; in the locative singular, since the case-ending i follows, the ī is lost in the Chandas: śamī.
- ऋक्वाणः — the root ṛca stutau; since the abstract sense, by "सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्" the affix kvip; the word ṛc; ṛg asya asti iti — in the sense of matup, by "छन्दसीवनिपौ च वनिपौ" [as read] the affix vanip; the change of the final letter is Vedic, that is, k in place of c: the word ṛkvan; in the nominative plural, with jas following, the lengthening of the penultimate by "सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ"; by "अट्कुप्वाङ्नुम्व्यवायेऽपि" the ṇ for n: ṛkvāṇaḥ. Or, because the statement "अयस्मयादीनि छन्दसि" (ayasmayādīni chandasi) — and the rule "क्वचिदुभयं भवति" (Kā. 1-4-[20] [?]) — both pada-status and bha-status come; as in "sa suṣṭubhā sa ṛkvatā" where the kutva occurs because of pada-status, so here too by pada-status the kutva occurs; since bha-status is also there, jaśtva does not come to the k.

- आशत — the root aśū vyāptau; lañ, third person plural, the affix jha; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of śnu [as printed: śnu] the vikaraṇa; since a-ending comes after, by "आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः" the substitute at for jha; by "आडजादीनाम्" the augment āt; the form āśata; since yat is in connexion, no nighāta occurs; since the augment is acute, the first syllable is acute.
- यज्ञियानि — in the sense of 'fit for it', after yajña, by "यज्ञर्त्विग्भ्यां घखजौ" (Pā. Sū. 5-1-[71]) the affix gha; by "आयनेयीनीयियः फढखल्लघाम्" the substitute iy for gha; by "यस्येति च" the loss of the a of the stem; in the plural neuter, the substitute śi; by "नपुंसकस्य झलचः" the augment num; since śi has the designation sarvanāmasthāna, by "सर्वनामस्थाने चासम्बुद्धौ" the lengthening of the penultimate of the stem ending in n; by the affix-accent the i of the substitute iy is acute.

te — those Maruts; bhānubhiḥ — with the shining; raśmibhiḥ — with the rays of the sun; kam — rain-water; śriyase — for the use of creatures; saṃ mimikṣire — they wish to pour out plentifully with a will; te — after that those Maruts; ṛkvabhiḥ — with the priests who praise; sukhādayaḥ — eaters of delicious oblations; vāśīmantāḥ — possessing speech in the form of praise; iṣmīnaḥ — of the nature of moving; abhīravaḥ — free from fear; te — those Maruts; priyasya — beneficial to all; mārutasya — fit for the Maruts; dhāmnaḥ — an excellent place; vidre — obtained.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 87.6

"The Maruts, joining the shining rays of the sun, pour rain-water abundantly for the use of living creatures. After that they eat delicious oblations along with the priests who praise. Those Maruts, possessed of speech in the form of praise, of a moving nature, free from fear, obtained an excellent place, beneficial to all and fit for them."

English Translation

"Combining with the solar rays, they have willingly poured down (rain) for the welfare of mankind, and praised by the priests, have been pleased partakers of the sacrificial food; addressed with praises, moving swiftly and exempt from fear, they have become possessed of a station agreeable and suitable to the Maruts." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 87.6)

- श्रियसे — sevitum — "for being served, resorted to, attained. Skandasvāmin explains 'satyasampattilakṣaṇāyai śriyai' — 'for the prosperity that is of the nature of the wealth of truth', or for the obtaining of wealth."²³
- कम् — "water (Ni. [1-12] [?]): rain."²⁴

- भानुभिः रश्मिभिः — dīpyamānaiḥ sūryaraśmibhiḥ saha athavā vidyullakṣaṇābhiḥ — "with shining rays, or with lightning: furnished with shining rays, or with lightning."
- ऋक्वभिः — stutimadbhir ṛtvigbhiḥ — "with the priests who praise with Ṛks."
- सुखादयः — khāḍr bhakṣaṇe | śobhanā khādir bhakṣaṇaṃ yeṣāṃ te | sukhasya śobhanasya haviṣo bhakṣayitāraḥ — "those who eat the excellent oblation. Skandasvāmin explains this word as 'śobhanāḥ khādayaḥ āyudhaviśeṣā yeṣāṃ' — those who have good khādi, a special weapon: khādi means a special weapon of the Marut deities, so 'having such weapons'. To support this meaning he gives two examples —

त्वेष्टं गणं तवसं खादिहस्तं धुनिव्रतं मायिनं दातिवारम् ।

tveṣaṃ gaṇaṃ tavaśaṃ khādihastam dhunivrataṃ māyinaṃ dātivāram | (R. Saṃ. 5-[52]-[?] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "The blazing, strong host, with khādi [rings or weapons] in hand, of shaking ways, wonder-working, giver of the choice [wealth]."

अंसेषु व ऋष्टयः पत्सु खादयो वक्षःसु रुक्मा मरुतो रथे शुभः ।

24. Continues on p. 239.

aṃseṣu va ṛṣṭayaḥ patsu khādayo vakṣaḥsu rukmā maruto rathe śubhaḥ | (R. Saṃ. 5-[54]-[11] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "On your shoulders are spears, on your feet khādis, on your breasts golden ornaments, O Maruts; on the chariot there is splendour." ²⁵

- वाशीमन्तः — vāśīti vāñnāma | śobhanayā stutilakṣaṇayā vācopetāḥ — "vāśī means speech (Ni. [1-11] [?]); those who are praised by words in the form of praise. Skandasvāmin explains the word vāśī too as a special weapon, and gives the example —

वाशीमेको बिभर्ति हस्त आयसीमन्तर्देवेषु निध्रुविः ।

vāśīm eko bibharti haste āyasīm antar deveṣu nidhruviḥ | (R. Saṃ. 8-29-[3] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "One carries in his hand an iron vāśī [axe], steady among the gods."

— and he gives also the meaning 'speech'." - इष्णिणः — iṣa gatau | gatimantaḥ — "swift movers; of a moving nature." - अभीरवः — "fearless, those who have no fear." - प्रियस्य मारुतस्य धाम्नः — "the own place that is a delight to the Marut deities. Skandasvāmin explains the word dhāman as 'place, name or birth' (sthānam vā nāma vā janma vā) — place, or name, or birth."

- श्रियसे — the root śriñ sevāyām; in the sense of tumun, by "तुमर्थे सेसेनसेअसेन्..." (tumarthe sesenase..., Pā. Sū. 3-4-[9]) the affix kasen [as read, kasen]; since it is kit, no guṇa comes. By the ac-ñit... ²⁷

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 87.6, continued and concluded from p. 239 (grammar, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]):

- श्रियसे (cont.) — "...by "अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवां य्वोरियङ्बडौ" (aci śnudhātubhruvām yvor iyañuvaṇau) the iyañ substitute because an affix beginning with a vowel follows; by "कृन्मेजन्तः" (kṛṇ mejantaḥ) it gets the designation of an indeclinable."
- मिमिक्षिरे — the root miha secane; by "धातोः कर्मणः समानकर्तृकादिच्छायां वा" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-7) the affix san in the sense of desire; by "सन्यङोः" (sanyaṇoḥ) the root is reduplicated, in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; when mimih + sa, by "हो ढः" the ḍha for the h; by "षढोः कः सि" (ṣaḍhoḥ kaḥ si) the k for the ḍh that arose; by "आदेशप्रत्यययोः" the ṣatva for the s of the affix; k + ṣ together form kṣ: the stem mimikṣa receives the designation dhātu by "सनाद्यन्ता धातवः"; in the liṭ, since the sūtra "अमन्त्रे" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[35]) forbids it for amantra [as printed], the augment ām does not come; for the third-person plural, by "लिटस्तङ्गयोरेशिरेच्" the substitute irec; the form mimikṣire; although it is a parasmaipada root, by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" the ātmanepada affix comes; the nighāta accent of the tiṇanta.
- सुखादयः — the root khāḍṛ bhakṣaṇe; by the Uṇādi the affix i; śobhanā khāḍir bhakṣaṇam yeṣām te sukhādayaḥ; nominative plural; by "नञ्सुभ्याम्" the final syllable of the latter member is acute.
- वाशीमन्तः — vāśī means speech; in the sense 'it is in him', by "तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मतुप्" the affix matup; since it is pit, unaccented; nominative plural.

- इष्मिणः — the root iṣa gatau; by "इषियुधीन्धिदसिश्थाधूसूभ्यो मक्" (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[147] [?]) the affix mak; since it is kit, no laghūpadha-guṇa; the word iṣma; iṣmo yeṣām asti iṣmiṇaḥ; in the sense of matup, by "अत इनिठनौ" the affix ini; by the affix-accent the i of ini is acute; nominative plural.
- विद्रे — the root vidḥ lābhe; liṭ, third person plural, the substitute irec; since it is ṇic-like [liṇ-like] the reduplication of the root would arise, but by the statement "द्विर्वचनप्रकरणे छन्दसि वेति वक्तव्यम्" the reduplication does not come here; by "इरयोरे" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[76]) the substitute re for the ire of the ending; since liṭ is kit-like, no guṇa of the laghūpadha; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; by the affix-accent the final acute.

Translation: "The fourth sūkta, ā vidyunmadbhiḥ, of six Ṛks. The Anukramaṇī says here: 'ā vidyunmadbhiḥ — the first and the last are prastārapaṅkti, the fifth virāḍrūpā'; the ṛṣi and deity are as before. The first and the sixth are two prastārapaṅkti Ṛks. That Ṛk whose first two pādas are Jagatī and third and fourth Gāyatrī is a prastārapaṅkti; it is prescribed [in Piṅgala] 'prastārapaṅktiḥ purataḥ' (Piñ. 3-[40] [?]); here the sense is: 'Jagatī' and 'Gāyatrī' are carried on; if two Jagatī pādas stand in front and the last two Gāyatrī, that is a prastārapaṅkti. The fifth, etat tyat, is virāḍrūpā: in it the first three pādas are of eleven syllables and the last of eight; this is called virāḍrūpā. The application is laiṅgika [by the sense of the verse]."

"The sūkta ā vidyunmadbhiḥ is the fourth sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka. There are six Ṛks in it. In the Anukramaṇī it is said 'ā vidyunmadbhir ādyānte prastārapaṅktī pañcamī virāḍrūpā'. The ṛṣi and deity are as in the preceding sūkta. The first and the sixth Ṛks of this sūkta are in the prastārapaṅkti metre. In the metre called prastārapaṅkti, the first and second pādas are like the Jagatī metre, the third and fourth like the Gāyatrī metre. Such a metre is called prastārapaṅkti. This is said in Piṅgala's khaṇḍa sūtra (Piñ. Sū. 3-[40] [?]) 'prastārapaṅktiḥ purataḥ': that is, a Ṛk in which the first two pādas are like the Jagatī metre and the last two pādas like the Gāyatrī metre is said to be of the prastārapaṅkti metre. The fifth Ṛk of this sūkta, etat tyat, is of the metre virāḍrūpā: a Ṛk in which the first three pādas have eleven syllables each and the last pāda eight is said to be of the virāḍrūpā metre. The application of this sūkta is laiṅgika." ¹

Translation: "O Maruts! They are marutaḥ because they, reaching the mita (measured, formed) sky, ruvanti — make a sound; or because they make a great sound (amitam); or because, reaching the cloud (mita, formed by themselves), they shine in the form of lightning; or because they run (dravanti) in the great sky. All the groups of gods enumerated in the middle region are called Maruts; so the elders' rule says: 'every goddess of the middle region, and Vāyu the man who goes everywhere, and all the troops — [all] are Maruts.' The Paurāṇikas say that from Kaśyapa son of Marīci were born the Maruts, of seven troops, forty-nine in number. Such Maruts, come in your chariots to our sacrifice. What chariots? Vidyunmadbhiḥ — with lightning; svarkaiḥ — with good going (or: with those who have good praise); ṛṣṭimadbhiḥ — with spear-like weapons; aśvaparnaiḥ — with horses that fly, with wing-like speed; or [the chariots are] swift clouds. अथवा — Or sumāyāḥ — Maruts of excellent actions or of excellent knowledge; varṣiṣṭhayā — exceedingly abundant; iṣā — (the food to be given to us); naḥ — towards us; vayo na — like birds (swiftly); ā paptata — come.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.1

"O Maruts, come to our sacrifice with your chariots — of special brilliance, of easy movement, borne with weapons, with swift horses. O Maruts of excellent actions, bring us abundant food and come swiftly to us like birds."

English Translation ⁸

"O Maruts, come with your chariots full of lightnings [sic], full of splendors, full of spears and with quick-moving horses. Performers of good deeds, descend like birds and bring abundant food." — as printed.

- मरुतः — "The bhāṣyakāra has given two or three different derivations for this word and explained the meaning: mitaṃ nirmitaṃ antarikṣaṃ prāpya ruvanti śabdaṃ kurvantīti marutaḥ — 'since they make a sound on reaching the formed sky' — yadvā amitaṃ bhr̥śaṃ śabdakāriṇaḥ — 'or those who make an exceeding sound' — athavā mitaṃ svair nirmitaṃ meghaṃ prāpya vidyudātmanā rocamānāḥ — 'or those who shine as lightning on reaching the cloud made by themselves' — athavā mahaty antarikṣe dravantīti marutaḥ — 'or since they run in the great atmosphere'. Because they blow and make a sound in the atmosphere, these deities are called Maruts; or because they make much sound; or because they shine in the form of lightning in the midst of clouds; or because they move in the vast atmosphere, they are called Maruts. And so on. Yāska, in his Nirukta, has classified the deities in three ways, as those in heaven, atmosphere and earth. These Marut deities, who move in the middle region, the atmosphere, are called atmospheric deities. On this matter —" ⁹

"The view of the ancients is that all female deities and male deities such as Vāyu, and the Marut hosts, are said to be deities of the middle-region atmosphere. The Paurāṇikas say that the forty-nine Marut deities were born from the sage Kaśyapa, son of Marīci. When Yāska, the great sage, derived this word, he said 'maruto mitarāviṇo vā mitarociṇo vā mahad dravantīti vā' (Ni. [11-13] [?]). Their meaning we shall explain below."¹⁰

- ऋष्टिमद्भिः — "with weapons of the nature of śakti; these Marut deities, who blow swiftly, have a strength of just that kind; that kind of strength is their weapon."
- अश्वपर्णैः — aśvaṃ vyāptaṃ parṇaṃ patanaṃ gamanaṃ yeṣām — "those whose going is in the atmosphere, who move through the atmosphere."

"The explanation of the remaining words is as the bhāṣyakāra has given it above."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 88.1) ¹²

- विद्युन्मद्भिः — vidyut yeṣām asti iti vidyunmantaḥ; by "तदस्यास्त्यस्मिन्निति मत्तुप्" the affix matup; since jhay (t) precedes, by "झयः" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[10]) the change of the m of matup to v would have come; but since yavādi is an ākṛtigāṇa, vidyut is counted in it, and since "अयवादिभ्यः" runs on, the va-substitution does not come.

- रथेभिः — the word ratha, instrumental plural; bhis following, by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the substitute ais does not come; by "बहुवचने झल्येत्" (bahuvacane jhaly et) the e.
- यात — the root yā prāpaṇe, Adādi; loṭ, second person plural; by "तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः" the substitute ta; by "अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शपः" the luk of śap; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.
- ऋष्टिमद्भिः — ṛṣṭayo yeṣāṃ santi; matup; instrumental plural; by "ह्रस्वनुङ्भ्यां मतुप्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[176]) the acute on matup after a short vowel.
- अश्वपर्णे — the root aśū vyāptau; by "अशिपुषिकुटिकणि..." (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[151] [?]) the affix kvan; the form aśva; aśvaṃ vyāptaṃ parṇaṃ patanaṃ gamanaṃ yeṣāṃ te aśvaparnāḥ; instrumental plural; a bahuvrīhi, first member keeps its accent.
- वर्षिष्ठया — the word vṛddha; in the sense of excess, by "अतिशायने तमबिष्ठनौ" the affix iṣṭhan; since it follows, by "प्रियस्थिरस्फिर..." (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[157]) the substitute varṣ for vṛddha; by "यस्येति च" the loss of the a; since it ends in a nit affix, by "जित्यादिर्नित्यम्" the first syllable acute; in the feminine, ṭāp; instrumental singular.
- पप्तत — the root patḥ gatau; ḷdit; in the sense of loṭ, Vedic luṇ; second person plural, by "तस्थस्थमिपां..." the substitute ta; by "क्लि लुङि" cli, and for it, since the root is ḷdit, by "लृदित्..." the substitute aṇ (puṣādidyutādi, Pā. Sū. 3-1-[55]); pat + a + ta, by "सतः पुम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[19]) the augment puk with the aṇ;

by "मिदेर्गुणः"... the final-[a] ; by "बहुलं छन्दस्यमाङ्गयोगेऽपि" the augment aṭ does not come; the form paptata; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.1, concluded:

- सुमायाः — śobhanāḥ māyāḥ (karmāṇi) yeṣāṃ te sumāyāḥ; vocative plural; by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" the nighāta accent.

Translation: "Those Maruts go (ā yānti) to kam — the one who praises, the sacrificer — with aruṇebhiḥ (ruddy) and piśaṅgaiḥ (tawny, or of both colours) horses that urge on the chariot, to varam, the chooser of the gods. For what? Śubhe — to make his splendour; or śubhe = for water, that is, for rain. The host of those Maruts is rukmo na — like shining gold — citraḥ, exceedingly beautiful to see, svadhitīvān — svadhiti is a name for the thunderbolt: possessed of a weapon that cuts enemies. Such a host, the Maruts jañghananta — strike mightily — bhūma, the earth, with pavyā — the rim of the wheel of the chariot. The meaning: the earth, unable to bear the weight of the Maruts who have come to protect the praiser, was sorely pressed. Grammar tail, noted briefly: varam — 'by whom the gods are chosen'; kam — kai gai śabde; rathatūrbhiḥ — tura tvaraṇe, with kvip, lengthening before bhis; pavyā — Yāska: 'the felly (pavī) is the rim of the chariot' (Ni. [5-5] [?]); jañghananta — frequentative of han, Vedic lañ; bhūma — ḍā-substitution for am, shortening Vedic."

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 88.2)¹⁵

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.2¹⁶

14. Kannada script; the sūtra after varam and the clause on jañghananta are cramped and read with doubt [?]; "ubhayavarṇopetai" is read thus.

15. Kannada; set at the head of p. 249 in the print before the English — read here from the Special Topics' flow; the Pratipadārtha and Bhāvārtha of this Ṛk stand at the foot of p. 248 and are given there in the Kannada: "te — those Maruts; aruṇebhiḥ — with ruddy; piśaṅgaiḥ — tawny; rathatūrbhiḥ — chariot-urging; aśvaiḥ — with horses; varam — the chooser of the gods; kam — the praising sacrificer; śubhe — for his good, or for sending rain; ā yānti — come; rukmo na — like shining gold; citraḥ — attractive; svadhitīvān — armed with weapons; rathasya pavyā — with the wheel-rim of the chariot; bhūma — the earth; jañghananta — they strike."

"Those Maruts, with horses of ruddy and tawny colour that speed the chariot, come to the sacrificer who praises and chooses the gods, to do him good. Attractive like shining gold and armed with thunderbolts, those Maruts, as a host, trample the earth with the wheels of their chariots and enter it."

English Translation

"To what glorifier of the gods do they repair with their ruddy, tawny car-bearing horses for his advantage? bright as burnished gold and armed with the thunderbolt they break the earth with their chariot-wheels." — as printed.

- अरुणेभिः पिशङ्गैः — "with horses of red and tawny (Kannada: piṅgala, yellowish) colours, of mixed colour. ¹⁷"
- वरम् — devānāṃ varītāram — "one who calls the gods, or one who invites; the sacrificer."
- कम् — kai gai śabde | kāyatīti kaḥ taṃ | śabdayitāram stuvantam — "the one who sounds, that is, the sacrificer who praises. The meaning 'questioning' may be given to this word." ¹⁸
- शुभे — "for the sake of prosperity; or śubha means water (Ni. [1-12] [?]): to serve water, to give rain."
- रथतूर्भिः — tura tvarāṇe | ratham tuturati tvarāyuktaṃ kurvantīti rathaturaḥ — "those that make the chariot go swiftly: horses that make it move as with haste."
- रुक्मो न — rocamānaṃ suvarṇam iva — "like shining, glittering gold: endowed with lustre."
- चित्रः — atiśayena darśanīyaḥ — "exceedingly beautiful to look at."

16. Kannada, foot of p. 248

17. The English words 'red and tawny horses' are added in the print.

18. The English translation above takes it so: "To what glorifier...?"

- स्वधितिवान् — "among the eighteen names of thunderbolt — vidyut, nemiḥ and the rest — the word svadhitiḥ is read; so svadhitiṽān means 'furnished with weapons (vajra) for destroying enemies'."
- पव्या — cakradhārayā — "by the wheel-rim (Ni. [5-5] [?])."
- जङ्घनन्त भूम — "they strike the earth: that is, when the Marut deities come to the earth to protect those who praise, the earth is oppressed, unable to bear their weight."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 88.2) ¹⁹

- अरुणेभिः — by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the substitute ais does not come for bhis in the instrumental plural; by "बहुवचने झल्येत्" the e.

original p. 250

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.2, continued (grammar, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]):

- वरम् — vriyante devā anena iti varaḥ; the root vṛñ varaṇe; by "ग्रहवृद्धिनिश्चिगमाश्च" (grahavṛddhiṁścigamaś ca, Pā. Sū. 3-3-[58]) the affix ap in the instrumental sense; the guṇa of the ik of the root because of the affix; raparaḥ; since ap is pit, unaccented; the root's accent remains.
- शुभे — the root śubha dīptau; the affix kvip; dative singular; by "सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः" the case-ending acute.
- कम् — the root kai gai śabde; kāyati iti kaḥ; by the statement bahula, the affix ka comes even where the root is igupadha; by "आदेच उपदेशेऽशिति" the ā for the root; since ka is kit, by "आतो लोप इति च" the loss of the ā; the word ka; accusative singular; by the affix-accent ka is acute on its last syllable; when the case-ending is joined, the single substitute is acute by "उदात्तयणो हल्पूर्वात्.." [as printed: ekādeśa udāttēnodāttaḥ].

19. grammar page, noted briefly; begins here

- रथतूर्भिः — the root tura tvarāṇe; ratham tuturati; by "क्विप् च" the affix kvip; rathatur; instrumental plural; bhis following, by "हलि च" (Pā. Sū. 8-2-[77]) the lengthening of the ik penultimate of the root; by "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" the base accent of the kṛdutarapada.
- पव्या — pavī rathanemir bhavati (Ni. [5-5] [?], Yāska — 'the rim of the chariot is called pavī'); the root pūñ pavane; by "अचि इः" (Uṇ. Sū. 4-[142] [?]) the affix i; by the affix the guṇa; av-substitution; in the instrumental singular the case-ending ṭā; yañ-substitution; since a case-ending follows the yañ substituted for an acute, by "उदात्तयणो हल्पूर्वात्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[174]) the case-ending is acute.
- जङ्घनन्त — the root han himsāgatyoh; in the sense of intensity, by "धातौरेकाचो हलादेः क्रियासमभिहारे यङ्" the affix yañ; then lañ in the present sense; third person plural, by "ङोऽन्तः" the substitute ant; since yañ is ārdhadhātuka-like, by "अतो लोपः" the loss of the a of yañ; the root is reduplicated; by "कुहोश्चुः" cutva; by "अभ्यासाच्च" the kutva for the h of the reduplicate-following root, producing gh; by "नुगतोऽनुनासिकान्तस्य" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[85]) the augment nuk to the reduplicate of a root with nasal ending; anusvāra from nuk; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.
- भूमा — bhūmi + am; by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute ḍā for am; by the ḍit-ness the loss of the ṭi (the i); the shortening in the Samhitā is Vedic.

vaḥ — O Maruts, your; tanūṣu — in the bodies (arms); vāśīḥ — weapons that sound (so as to frighten enemies); śriye kam — (they are) for the sake of obtaining prosperity; (those Maruts) vanā na — like groups of trees that are made to grow; medhā —

21. the bhāṣya runs on to p. 252

22. The middle of this tail is clotted in the print; read in part, the doubtful words left out [?]. Noted briefly: vanā — loss of śi; kṛṇavante — the root kṛvi ("to injure, to do"), ātmanepada by vyatyaya, the affix u; ūrdhvā — as before, ā-substitution;
dhanayante — ṇic after dhana in the sense
'makes it'.

the sacrifices; ūrdhvā — growing prosperous; kṛṇavante — (the sacrificers) cause to be done; sujātāḥ — of excellent birth; marutaḥ — O Maruts; yuṣmabhyam — for you; kam — pleasant; adrim — the stone (that presses Soma); tuvidyumnāsaḥ — sacrificers possessed of abundant wealth; dhanayante — make rich (with Soma-juice).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.3

"O Maruts, in your arms there are weapons that strike terror into enemies. Make the sacrifices grow into prosperity, as trees and the like grow tall. O Maruts of excellent birth, for you the sacrificers make the stones that press the Soma wealthy — that is, with the stones they crush the Soma-plant and prepare the Soma-juice for your drinking."

English Translation

"O Maruts, the threatening weapons are in your bodies (hands) able to win; to you they raise lofty sacrifices like tall trees; well born Maruts, for you, the wealthy worshippers enrich the stone (that presses the Soma plant)." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 88.3)

- तनूषु — "in bodies: that is, in arms."
- वाशीः — "a class of weapons: weapons and the like furnished with sounds that cause fear to enemies."
- मेधा — "sacrifices."

- तुविद्युम्नासः — "sacrificers possessed of abundant wealth."
- धनयन्ते अद्रिम् — somābhiṣave pravṛttaṃ grāvāṇaṃ dhanam kurvanti — "they make wealthy the stones used for pressing Soma; that is, they cause the juice to flow well."

- कम् — "In this Rk the word kam occurs twice. The kam in the first half is used merely as a metrical filler (pādapūraṇa). Yāska's statement is 'athāpi pādapūraṇaḥ kam īm it u' (Ni. [1-4] [?]) — that is, the words kam, īm, it, u are mere fillers of the pāda: when the syllables that the pādas need are too few, these words are added to make them up; in such contexts these words have no meaning of their own. For the word kam in the second half the bhāṣyakāra has given the meaning 'giving happiness'."

- श्रिये — by "सावेकाचस्तृतीयादि:" the dative case-ending is acute.
- वाशीः — śatrūṇām bhayotpādanenākrośasabdakaraṇam vāśaḥ; vāśo 'syā asti — in the sense of matup, by "छन्दसीवनिपौ" the affix ī [as printed]; by the affix-accent the final acute would have come, but by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" the first syllable is acute.
- मेधा — medha + śas; by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute ḍā for śas.
- वना — the word vana, always neuter; the śi that comes as a substitute in the plural is lost by "शेश्छन्दसि बहुलम्".
- कृणवन्ते — the root kṛvi hiṃsākaraṇayoś ca; laṭ, third person plural, the affix jha; by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" the ātmanepada; by "धिविकृण्व्योर च" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[80]) the a as the final and the affix u in place of śap; by "इदितो नुम् धातोः" the augment num for the root; kṛṇv-, by "आलोपोऽन्त्यस्य" ... the a in place of the v [as read]; kṛṇu + a [?]; by "अतो लोपः" the loss of the a; although since the form ends in a non-a the jha ought to take at by "आत्मनेपदेष्वनतः", yet by vyatyaya the substitute ant by "झोऽन्तः" comes; by "छन्दस्युभयथा" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[117]) the ārdhadhātuka-status of the affix, so by "सार्वधातुकमपित्" the nit-ness does not come; by "सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः" the guṇa of the u; av-substitution; the form kṛṇavante; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

original p. 254

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.3, concluded:

- ऊर्ध्वा — as before, for the śas case-ending, by "सुपां सुलुक्" the ḍā substitute.
- सुजाताः — by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" (Pā. Sū. 8-1-[19]) the nighāta accent.
- धनयन्ते — dhanam kurvanti dhanayante; by "तत्करोति तदाचष्टे" the affix ṇic in the sense of the root's meaning after a nominal stem; by "इष्ठवत्..." (as read: iṣṭhavat) the extension that iṣṭha gives, so that, with ṇic following, the ṭi-loss occurs; by "सनाद्यन्ता धातवः" it gets the designation of a root; laṭ, third person plural, the substitute ant; śap the vikaraṇa; because of śap the guṇa of ṇic, and ay-substitution; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 88.4

26. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 255

"O sons of Gotama, you earnestly desired water. Days endowed with the water you needed have come to meet you. And you made manifest the rite — of the nature of the Jyotiṣṭoma and the like — that must be accomplished with water. On such days, you sons of Gotama, offering the food that is oblation to the Maruts, with chants in the form of mantras, raised up and brought the well that is the abode of water, that the water might come up for your drinking. The Maruts, too, from a distant place, raised that well and brought it for you."

English Translation

"Fortunate days have befallen you, (sons of Gotama), when thirsty and having sung about you in the sacrifice for which water was essential; the sons of Gotama, offering oblations with sacred hymns have raised aloft the well provided for their dwelling." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 88.4)

"The Maruts, praised by the sage Gotama, who was in need of water, and by his sons, lifted a well full of water from a distant place and brought it and gave it to the sage Gotama. A certain sage who saw this spoke this R̥k."

- वार्कार्याम् — ḍukṛñ karaṇe | vābhiḥ kāryā vārkāryā tām — "that which is to be done with water; the necessary [rite that requires water]."
- धियम् — "work: the Jyotiṣṭoma and similar sacrificial works. Among the twenty-six names of work — apaḥ, aṣṭaḥ and the rest — the word dhīḥ is read; hence dhiyam means 'work' (Ni. [2-1] [?])." ²⁷

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 88.4)

- गृध्राः — the root grdhu abhikāṅkṣāyām; by "सुसूधाग्रिधिभ्यः क्रन्" (Uṇ. Sū. 2-[25] [?]) the affix kran; since it is kit, no laghūpadha-guṇa; the word grdhra; by "सुपां सुलुक्.." [as read: "supām suluk"], the jas comes for śas; since kran is ṇit, the first syllable is acute.
- आगुः — the root iñ gatau; in luñ, by "इणो गा लुङि" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-[45]) the substitute gā for the root; third person plural, the affix jhi; by "आतः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[110]) when jhi follows a root ending in ā, the substitute jus for jhi; by "उस्यपदान्तात्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[96]) the pararūpa; the augment aṭ for the aṅga; by "तिङ्ङितिङः" the nighāta accent.
- इमाम् — the word idam, feminine, accusative singular; by "ऊडिदम्पदाद्यप्पुमैद्युभ्यः" the case-ending acute.
- वार्कार्याम् — the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; by "ऋहलोर्ण्यत्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[124]) the affix nyat; since it is ṇit, by "अचो ङ्गिति" the vṛddhi; by "उरण् रपरः" with r; when the feminine is intended, by "अजाद्यतष्टाप्" the affix ṭāp; vābhiḥ kāryā vārkāryā; since it belongs to the tricakrādi group the final syllable of the latter member is acute.

- गोतमासः — in the nominative plural, by "आज्जसेरसुक्" the augment asuk for jas.
- नुनुद्रे — the root ṇuda prerane; liṭ, third person plural, by "लिटस्तझयोरेशिरेच्" the substitute irec; for it, in the Chandas, by "इरयोरे" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[76]) the re... ²⁸

original p. 258

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.4, concluded from p. 257 (grammar, noted briefly):

- नुनुद्रे (cont.) — "...the substitute re for ire; for the n of the root, by "णोनः" [as read: ṇo naḥ] the n-form; since liṭ is the occasion, the root is reduplicated; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; by "असंयोगाल्लिट्किट्" (asaṃyogāl liṭ kit, Pā. Sū. 1-2-[5]) the kit-ness of the affix, so no laghūpadha-guṇa for the root; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent."
- उत्सधिम् — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; by "कर्मण्यधिकरणे च" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[93]) the affix ki in the locative sense; utsaḥ asmin dhīyate iti utsadhiḥ; since the affix is kit, by "आतो लोप इटि च" the loss of the ā of the root; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- पिबध्यै — the root pā pāne; in the sense of tumun, by "तुमर्थे सेसेनसेअसेन्..." (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[9]) the affix śadhyai; since it is śit, by "पाप्राध्मास्थाम्नादाण्..." (Pā. Sū. 7-3-[78]) the substitute piba for the root; since the affix is nit, the first syllable is acute.

That tyat, like some other famous, excellent hymn, aceti — is known by all. This hymn-form of praise which the sage Gotama has uttered (sasvar ha) for you — doing what? Seeing such Maruts well, Gotama made the hymn at the sacrifice; that hymn, excellent as it is, is known to all of us — that is the sense. On this Yāska (Ni. "Marutś, this hymn is known to be the same as that which Gotama recited, in your praise, when he beheld you seated in your chariots with golden wheels, armed with iron weapons, hurrying hither and thither and destroying your mightiest foes." — as printed ("Marutś" as in the print [sic]).

- विधावतः — the root dhāvu gatiśuddhyoh; the affix śaṭṛ; as before the root's accent remains; accusative plural.
- वराहून् — the root hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ, or hrñ haraṇe, preceded by āṇ ...³⁴: when the word vara stands as the first member, the form hu is obtained; or from hvā spardhāyām, or hu dānādanayoḥ: since some say it is from the root hu, only the sense of eating need be given; with all these roots the form is obtained by the doctrine of pṛṣodarādi; accusative plural.

And like the voice (vāñī) of the priest (vāghataḥ) — na here is in the sense of 'now' (sampratyartha): Yāska says 'the word na in the sense of comparison also occurs in the sense of "now"' (Nī. Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.6 (grammar page, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]):

- स्या — the word tyad; to it, in the nominative, the case-ending following, by "त्यदादीनामः" the substitute a; in the feminine, by "अजाद्यतष्टाप्" the affix ṭāp since it ends in a; when tyā, by "तदोः सः सावनन्त्ययोः" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[106]) the substitute s for the t; by "हल्ङ्याब्भ्यो..." the loss of su; the form syā.
- अनुभर्त्री — the root bhṛñ bharaṇe; the affix ṭrc; because of the affix the guṇa of the root; the word bharṭṛ; when the feminine is intended, by "ऋन्नेभ्यो ङीप्" (Pā. Sū. 4-1-[5]) the affix nṭp, since it ends in r; the yaṇ substitution; since ṭrc is cit, by "चित्" the final acute, so in the place of the acute a yaṇ arose; by "उदात्तयणो हल्पूर्वात्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[174]) since a consonant (t) precedes the yaṇ, the ī that has the designation nadī takes the acute.
- स्तोभति — the root ṣṭubhu stambhe; here used in the sense of praising; laṭ, third person singular; the nighāta accent of the tiñanta.

38. The grammar page of this Rik, if the print has one, is not on p. 263: after the Special Topics, p. 263 ends; the Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 88.6 begins on p. 264, PDF 279.

- अस्तोभयत् — the root with the sense of ṇic in its own meaning; after the ṇijanta laṅ, third person singular; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, the nighāta does not come; since the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute.

Translation (as read; the text of this introduction is compressed and some wording is doubtful [?]): "The fifth sūkta, ā no bhadrāḥ, of ten Ṛks, the vision of Gotama, to the Viśvedevas. The first five and the seventh are Jagatī; the sixth, svasti na indra, is virāṭsthānā; the [last] nine [as printed: 'navakā'] ... and Triṣṭubh [Ṛks]. From the application of the rule stated [anu-5] [?] the eighth and the two following are Triṣṭubh. So it is recorded in the Anukramaṇī: 'ā no daśa vaiśvadevaṃ tu pañcādyāḥ saptamī ca jagatyāḥ śaṣṭhī virāṭsthānā'. In the Agniṣṭoma, in the Vaiśvadeva śāstra, this sūkta, with its last Ṛk, is used at the vaiśvadeva-nividdhāna; it is the concluding (paridhānīyā) Ṛk of the Vaiśvadeva śāstra both in the model and the modified rites. It is prescribed: 'ā no bhadrāḥ kratavo yantu viśvata — the nine are Vaiśvadeva' (Āś. [5-18] [?]), and 'aditir dyaus aditir antarikṣam — one should conclude with this, in every Vaiśvadeva' (Āś. [5-18] [?]). The Brāhmaṇa says: 'at once one should conclude with the pañcajanīyā' (Ai. Brā. [3-10] [?]). At the Mahāvraṭa, in the niṣkevalya, this sūkta is used; so it is prescribed in the fifth Āraṇyaka: 'ā no bhadriyaṃ ca tasya sthāne' (Ai. Brā. [5-3-2] [?])."

अनुवादु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

"The sūkta ā no bhadrāḥ is the fifth sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka. There are ten Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama; the deities are the Viśvedevas. The first five Ṛks and the seventh are in the Jagatī metre; the sixth Ṛk, svasti na indro, is in the metre called virāṭsthānā; the three Ṛks from the eighth to the tenth are in the Triṣṭubh metre. In the Anukramaṇī it is said: 'ā no daśa vaiśvadevaṃ tu pañcādyāḥ saptamī ca jagatyāḥ ṣaṣṭhī virāṭsthāna'. In the Agniṣṭoma sacrifice, at the time of reciting the mantras of the Vaiśvadeva śāstra, this sūkta is to be used, leaving aside its last Ṛk, for the Vaiśvadeva-nividdhāna mantras; and the remaining [last] Ṛk is to be used in the model and modified sacrifices as the paridhānīyā mantra of the Vaiśvadeva śāstra. This is set forth by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra 'ā no bhadraḥ kratavo yantu viśvata iti nava vaiśvadevam' (Āś. [5-18] [?]) and also in 'aditir dyaur aditir antarikṣam iti paridadhyāt sarvatra vaiśvadeve' (Āś. [5-18] [?]). On this there is the word of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa 'sadyaiva pañcajanīyeyā paridadhyāt' (Ai. Brā. [3-10] [?]); and, in the Mahāvrata, at the time of reciting the niṣkevalya śāstra mantras this sūkta is applied; the sentence 'ā no bhadriyaṃ ca tasya sthāne' of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa's Pañcamāranyaka (Ai. Brā. [5-3-2] [?]) shows it." ¹

Translation (main sense): "May kratavaḥ — the great sacrifices, the Agniṣṭoma and the rest — come to us from every quarter. What kind? Bhadrāḥ — auspicious, as the means to good fruit, or fit to be resorted to; adabdhāsaḥ — not harmed by the Asuras; aparītāsaḥ — not surrounded by enemies, that is, unobstructed; udbhidaḥ — breakers-out against enemies. May sacrifices of this kind come to us; and may all the gods, who, not departing (aprāyuvāḥ), not abandoning what is theirs to guard, are therefore our protectors day by day, be for our growth, at once and ever."

growth — in that way, may the great sacrifices such as the Agniṣṭoma, auspicious, unharmed by enemies, unobstructed, and destroyers of enemies, come to us from all quarters."

॥ विशेषविषयगळु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.1)

"The deities of this sūkta and of the following sūkta are the Viśvedevas. Some say that 'Viśvedevas' means a group belonging to one particular deity; others that it means all the deities. Yāska says 'viśve devāḥ sarve devāḥ' (Ni. [12-?] [?]). On this matter see what we have written in R. Saṃ. Part 3, pp. 49–50. This sūkta has been used for the recitation of the śānti mantras [as printed, "śāntika"?]."

Special Topics of Rik 89.1, continued from p. 267:

"In the Ṛgveda there are, besides the Ṛks in various places that are addressed to the Viśvedevas, a number of whole sūktas with the Viśvedevas as their deity: in the first maṇḍala, the sūktas numbered [as read] 3, 14, 23, 30, 89, 90, 186 ... [?]; in the second maṇḍala, sūktas 3 and 31; in the third maṇḍala, sūkta 54 [?]; in the fourth maṇḍala, sūkta 55 [?]; in the fifth maṇḍala, sūktas [41, 42, 43 ...] [?]; in the sixth maṇḍala, [49, 50, 51, 52 ...] [?]; in the seventh maṇḍala, [34, 35, 36, 37 ...] [?]; in the eighth maṇḍala, [27, 28, 29, 30 ...] [?]; in the tenth maṇḍala, [56, 57, 58 ... and others] [?] — these sūktas are addressed to the Viśvedevas." ⁸

- अदब्धासः — dambhu dambhe | dambho hiṃsā | adabdhāso
'suraiḥ ahiṃsitāḥ — "not harmed by the Asuras; those by whom the Asuras cannot do harm."

7. printed in English in the source

8. The long run of sūkta numbers is in small Kannada numerals, read only partly; the above list is the sense and is not given as a verified enumeration [?].

- अपरीतासः — iṇ gatau | śatrubhir aparigatāḥ — "free from obstruction by enemies; hard for enemies to approach."
- उद्भिदः — śatrūṇām udbhettāraḥ — "destroyers of enemies. Skandasvāmin explains this word: 'udbhinnā ity ekāhaḥ, tat prabhṛtayaḥ | athavā udbhindanti phalāntīty udbhidaḥ | janayitāraḥ phalānām' — 'udbhid is a day-sacrifice, one of the ekāhas, and those beginning with it; or those who split forth fruits: producers of fruits.' So he explains: the one-day sacrifice of the name udbhid, and the like, or 'those who bring forth the fruit of sacrificial acts'." ⁹
- सदमित् — sadyaiva — "always, at all times."
- अप्रायुवः — iṇ gatau | apragacchantaḥ svakīyaṃ rakṣitavyam aparityajantaḥ — "not abandoning the sacrificers they must protect, not neglecting them."

- अदब्धासः — the root dambhu dambhe; dambha means harm; by "निष्ठा" the affix kta; since "यस्य विभाषा" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[15]) applies, the augment iṭ does not come; by "अनिदितां हल उपधायाः क्ङिति" the loss of the penultimate nasal; na dabdhāḥ adabdhāḥ; in the nañ-tatpuruṣa, by "अव्ययं नञ् कुत्सितापदानाम्" ... the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its accent; in the nominative plural, by "आज्जसेरसुक्" the augment asuk; ru and visarga.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.1, concluded from p. 268 (grammar, noted briefly):

- अपरीतासः — the root iṇ gatau; as before, kta in the passive; pari + ita; first member an indeclinable, as before; asuk in the nominative plural.
- वृधे — the root vr̥dha vr̥ddhau; since it is read in the sampadādi list, by "सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्" the affix kvip in the abstract sense; the word vr̥dh; dative singular; since it is a monosyllable, by "सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिः" the case-ending is acute.
- असन् — the root as bhuvi; leṭ, third person plural, the affix jhi; by "झोऽन्तः" the substitute ant; by "इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु" the loss of the i; by "लेटोऽडाटौ" the augment aṭ; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of śap does not occur; since it is *jī*t [as printed], śnasor allopaḥ (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[111]) does not take away the a of the root; since it stands at the beginning of a pāda, no nighāta; śap is pit, unaccented; by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्" the lasārvadhātuka is unaccented; the root's accent: first syllable acute.
- अप्रायुवः — the root iṇ gatau, with the preposition pra before it; by "छन्दसीणः" (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[3]) the affix uṇ in the Samhitā; since it is ṇit, by "अचो ङ्गिति" the vr̥ddhi of the root; āy-substitution; the word prāyu; na prāyuḥ aprāyuḥ; in the nañ-tatpuruṣa, by "तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थः..." the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its accent; with jas following aprāyu, by "जसादिषु छन्दसि वा वचनम्" the guṇa is optional, and since guṇa does not come here, by its being in the tanvādi list the uvaṇ substitute; the form aprāyuvah.

Translation: "May there be for us bhadrā — auspicious, giving happiness, or to be resorted to — devānāṃ sumatiḥ, the good mind, the gracious thought, of the gods. Of what gods? Ṛjūyatām — those who desire the sacrificer who is straight, upright, who performs rightly. And may the rātīḥ, the gift, of the gods turn towards us, bestowing the fruit desired. - रातिः — rā dāne — "the favour or the gifts of the gods, such as wealth and the like."

kyac since a following ... (the y is the occasion, hence the lengthening of the preceding aṅga); by "सनाद्यन्ता धातवः" it gets the designation of a root; in the present sense, the affix śatr; śap; by "अतो गुणे" the pararūpa; the word ṛjūyat; genitive plural; since it lacks num, when the ajādi case-ending follows, by "शतुस्नुमो नद्यजादी" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[173]) the case-ending ām is acute.

- रातिः — the root rā dāne; by "स्त्रियां क्तिन्" the affix ktin in the abstract sense; since it would be first-syllable acute, by "मन्त्रे वृषेषपचमनविदभूवीरा उदात्तः" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[96]) the affix ktin is acute.
- वर्तताम् — the root vrtu vartane; loṭ, third person singular, the affix ta; by "आमेतः" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[90]) the substitute ām for the e of the affix, which came by the ṭit; the nighāta of the tiñanta.
- सख्यम् — sakhyuḥ bhāvaḥ sakhyam; by "सख्युर्यः" (Pā. Sū. 4-1-[126]) the affix ya in the abstract sense or the sense of action; by "यस्येति च" the loss of the i; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- सेदिम — the root ṣadḥ viśaraṇagatyavasādaneṣu; by "छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः" in the sense of prayer, liṭ; by "धात्वादेः षः सः" the s for the ṣ; since liṭ is the occasion, the root is reduplicated, and here, since no substitute at the start of the root appears, by "अत एकहल्मध्येऽनादेशादेर्लिटि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[120]) the e for the a of the root and the loss of the reduplicate, the root standing between two single consonants [s...d]; for the first-person plural mas the augment iṭ; by "अन्येषामपि दृश्यते" the lengthening of the final in the Saṃhitā.
- प्र तिर्न्तु — the root tira [tr] with the preposition pra has the sense of increasing; Yāska explains it in just this way: 'devānāṃ sakhyam upasedima vayaṃ devā na āyuh pravardhayantu ciraṃ jīvanāya' (Ni. [12-41] [?]) — 'may we obtain the friendship of the gods; may the gods increase our life, for living long'; laṭ [as printed, in the sense of loṭ], third person plural; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta accent.

Translation: "Those all-gods we invoke with the ancient, eternal nivid, i.e. speech of the nature of the Veda (nivid is a name of speech); or with the Vaiśvadeva nivid beginning 'viśve devāḥ somasya matsan'. 'The gods' being said in general, it is now made specific. Bhagam — the one to be resorted to, one of the twelve Ādityas; Mitra — the deity presiding over the day, the saviour from death ('the day belongs to Mitra', Tai. Brā. [1-2-10-1] [?]); Aditi — the unbroken, the mother of the gods; Dakṣa — Prajāpati, able to make the whole world; or Hiranyagarbha, pervading all living things as breath ('breath is Dakṣa' — Śruti); Asridh — not liable to wasting, always in one form: the Marut host; Aryaman — he who restrains enemies, Asuras like the Mandehas — the sun ('that Āditya is Aryaman'); Varuṇa — the deity presiding over night, who binds evildoers with his nooses ('Night is Varuṇa's'); Soma — dividing himself into two, living on earth as the plant and in heaven as the moon; the Aśvins — possessed of horses, or pervading all; Yāska says (Ni. [12-1] [?]): 'the Aśvins — because one pervades all with moisture, the other with light; [or] with horses; [some say] heaven and earth; some, day and night; some, sun and moon; the historians say, two virtuous kings.' All such gods we invoke for our protection. May Sarasvatī, invoked by us, endowed with fine wealth, make mayas — happiness — for us. Grammar tail, noted briefly: hūmahe — hve with saṃprasāraṇa by 'bahulaṃ chandasi', lengthening; asridham — sridhu śoṣaṇe with kvip; first member nañ keeps...; mayaskarat — leṭ of kṛ with aṭ, śap elided, s for the visarga." ¹⁵ vayam — we; bhagam — Bhaga; mitram — Mitra; aditim — Aditi; dakṣam — Dakṣa; asridham — Asridh (the Maruts); aryamaṇam — Aryaman; varuṇam — Varuṇa; somam — Soma; aśvinā — the two Aśvin deities; tān — all these deities; pūrvayā — of ancient times (eternal); nividā — by speech that is the Veda; hūmahe — we invoke with prayer; subhagā — endowed with fine wealth; sarasvatī — Sarasvatī; naḥ — for us; mayah — happiness; karat — let her make.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.3

"We gather the whole group of gods — Bhaga, Mitra, Aditi, Dakṣa, Asridh (the Maruts), Aryaman, Varuṇa, Soma and the Aśvin deities — and invoke them with the eternal Vedic speech. May Sarasvatī, endowed with fine wealth, make happiness for us."

English Translation

15. Correction of the layout note: the bhāṣya of 89.3 begins on p. 273 and breaks off at "asau vā ādityo..."; it continues on p. 274, where the passages on Aryaman, Varuṇa, Soma and the Aśvins, with Yāska's quotation, and the grammatical tail (hūmahe, asridham, mayaskarat) stand. The whole bhāṣya is given above in one piece, as read across the two pages.

"We invoke them with an ancient speech Bhaga, Mitra, Aditi, Daksha, Asridh, Aryaman, Varuna, Soma, the Aswins; and may the gracious Saraswati grant us happiness." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.3)

- निविदा — "among the seven names of speech — ślokaḥ, dhārā and the rest — the word nivid is read; so nividā means 'with speech', 'with Vedic speech' (Ni. [?/?] [?]); or with the mantra called nivid used at the recitation of the Vaiśvadeva śāstra."
- भगम् — bhajanīyam — "fit to be resorted to; or one among the twelve Ādityas."
- मित्रम् — "Mitra is the deity of the day. On this matter there is a Śruti sentence 'maitraṃ vā ahaḥ' ('the day is Mitra's') (Tai. Brā. [1-2-10-1] [?]). Yāska on this word: 'mitraḥ pramīter trāyate saṃmitrāno dravatīti vā | medayater vā' — the deity is called Mitra because he saves from death, or because, uniting, he runs, or from medayati ('to love'). Or, since he sprinkles well in the atmosphere rain-water and makes everything moist, he is called Mitra: 'he who wets all with water is Mitra.' As an example of this meaning he gives:

मित्रो जनान् यातयति ब्रुवाणो मित्रो दाधार पृथिवीमुत द्याम् । मित्रः कृष्टीरनिमिषाभिचष्टे मित्राय हव्यं घृतवज्जुहोत ॥

mitro janān yātayati bruvāṇo mitro dādāhā pr̥thivīm uta dyām | mitraḥ kṛṣṭīr animiṣābhicaṣṭe mitrāya havyaṃ ghṛtavaj juhota ॥ (R. Saṃ. 3-59-1) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Mitra, calling, sets men to their tasks; Mitra upholds earth and heaven; Mitra watches the peoples with unwinking eye: offer to Mitra the oblation with ghee." - अदितिम् — devamātaram — "Aditi, the mother of the gods. Yāska's explanation of this word is as follows:

अथातो मध्यस्थानाः स्त्रियः । तासामदितिः प्रथमागामिनी भवति । अदीना देवमाता ॥

athāto madhyasthānāḥ striyaḥ | tāsām aditiḥ prathamāgāminī bhavati | adīnā devamātā || (Ni. [?·?] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Now the women (goddesses) of the middle region: among them Aditi comes first — she who is not poor, the mother of the gods."

That is, of the female deities of the middle region (the atmospheric deities), Aditi is the first; Aditi means 'the mother of the gods, who is not diminished'. And on the matter of Aditi's greatness —

अदितिर्द्यौरदितिरन्तरिक्षमदितिर्माता स पिता स पुत्रः । विश्वे देवा अदितिः पञ्चजना अदितिर्जातमदितिर्जनित्वम् ॥

aditir dyaaur aditir antarikṣam aditir mātā sa pitā sa putraḥ | viśve devā aditiḥ pañcajanā aditir jātam aditir janitvam || (R. Saṃ. 1-89-10) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Aditi is heaven, Aditi the atmosphere; Aditi is the mother, she the father, she the son; Aditi is all the gods, the five peoples; Aditi is what is born, Aditi what will be born."

— Yāska says 'ityaditer vibhūtim ācaṣṭe | enā nasyādīnā iti vā' (Ni. [4-22] [?]): thus he declares the greatness of Aditi." ¹⁶ - दक्षम् — "Prajāpati, able to make the whole world; or Hiraṇyagarbha, who pervades all beings in the form of breath: 'prāṇo vai dakṣah' — 'breath indeed is Dakṣa' — so says the Śruti. Dakṣa means 'breath': that [meaning] ¹⁷

"...since he pervades all beings in the form of breath, he may also be called Hiraṇyagarbha. Yāska has given another meaning of the word dakṣa:

16. This Ṛk is the tenth Ṛk of this very sūkta.

17. continues on p. 276

ādityo dakṣa ity āhur ādityamadhye ca stutaḥ || (Ni. [11-23] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "They say that the Āditya is Dakṣa; and he is praised among the Ādityas."

— dakṣa is also a name of an Āditya, for Dakṣa is counted among the twelve Ādityas. As an example he gave the Ṛk —

अदितेर्दक्षो अजायत दक्षाद्वदितिः परि ॥

aditer dakṣo ajāyata dakṣād v aditiḥ pari || (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-72-4) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "From Aditi Dakṣa was born, and from Dakṣa Aditi [was born] besides."

- अर्यमणम् — arīn mandehādīn asurān pracchati niyacchatīty aryamā sūryaḥ — "since this deity restrains enemies, Asuras by the name of Mandehas and others, he is called Aryaman. 'asau vā ādityo 'ryamā' — 'that Āditya is Aryaman' — says a Śruti sentence: Aryaman is the sun, one of the twelve Ādityas."
- असिधम् — śoṣaṇarahitaṃ sarvadaikarūpeṇa vartamānaṃ marudgaṇam — "the Marut host, which does not dry up and is ever in one form."
- वरुणम् — *vṛṇoti pāpakṛtaḥ svakīyaiḥ pāsair āvṛṇotīti
rātryabhimānidevo varuṇaḥ | śrūyate ca | vāruṇī rātriḥ*
(Tai. Brā. [1-2-10-1] [?]) — "one who encloses the evildoers with his nooses; and there is a Śruti sentence that this Varuṇa is the deity of the night."
- सोमम् — *dvedhātmānaṃ vibhajya pṛthivyāṃ latārūpeṇa divi

Soma, who has divided himself into two and exists on earth in the form of the creeper called Soma and in heaven (the atmosphere) in the form of the deity called the moon."
- अश्विना — aśvināśvavantau | yadvā sarvaṃ vyāpnuvantau — "possessed of horses', hence the name aśvinī-deities; or those who pervade everything. Yāska:

 tentative*: "The Aśvins — because the one pervades all with moisture, the other with light; [or], says Aurṇavābha, 'with horses'. Who are the two Aśvins? Some say heaven and earth; some, day and night; some, sun and moon; the historians say, two virtuous kings."

That is, since the Aśvin deities pervade all with water, they are called Aśvins, say some; others, since they pervade everything with light; the sage Aurṇavābha says they are called Aśvins because they have horses. Who are these Aśvin deities? Some say heaven and earth, some day and night, some sun and moon; the historians say two kings who did meritorious deeds." - सरस्वती —
 "As to the deity Sarasvatī, see what we have written at length in R.
 Saṃ. Part 3, pp. 69–77." - मयः — "among the twenty-seven names of happiness — śaṃbhūḥ, śatarā and the rest — the word mayah is read; so mayah means happiness (Ni. [3-6] [?])."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.3)

- हूमहे — the root hveñ spardhāyāṃ śabde ca; laṭ, first person plural, the affix mahiñ; by "टित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे" the e; by "हः सम्प्रसारणम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[32]) hvaḥ running on, by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the saṃprasāraṇa of the root; by "सम्प्रसारणाच्च" the earlier form; when hu + mahe, by "हलः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[2]) the lengthening of the saṃprasāraṇa vowel that stands before a consonant [as read: aṅgasya halaḥ ...]: so the u is lengthened; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of śap; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.3, continued from p. 276 (grammar, noted briefly):

- असिधम् — the root sridhu śoṣaṇe; since it is read in the sampadādi list, by "सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्" the affix kvip in the abstract sense; the word sridh; na vidyate sridh yasya sa asridh — in the bahuvrīhi compound, by "नञ्सुभ्याम्" the final syllable of the latter member is acute; accusative singular.
- अश्विना — the word aśvin; in the dual after it, by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute ā for the case-ending.
- मयस्करत् — mayah karat; the root ḍukṛñ karane; leṭ, third person singular; the affix tip; by "इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु" (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[97]) the loss of its i; by "लेटोऽडाटौ" the augment aṭ; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of the vikaraṇa u; by "सार्वधातुकार्धधातुकयोः" the guṇa of the ik of the root because of the affix; mayah + karat, when the jihvāmūlīya would come... ¹⁸

original p. 278

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.3, concluded from p. 277:

- मयस्करत् (cont.) — "...it comes; but by "अतः कृकमिकंसकुम्भपात्रकुशाकर्णीष्वनव्ययस्य" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[46]) since a precedes, the s for the visarga; in mayaskarat by "तिङ्ङितिङः" the nighāta accent for the tiñanta."

- माता पृथिवी पिता द्यौः — "The practice of calling the earth 'mother' and heaven (dyauḥ) 'father' is special to the Ṛgveda. Since the earth produces grain and the like, and the sky (the atmosphere) pours rain, both nourish the beings in the world — that is the intention."
- ग्रावाणः सोमसुतः — "the stones used for crushing the Soma creeper."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.4)

- मयोभु — mayasaḥ bhūḥ mayobhūḥ; the root bhū sattāyām; after the ṇijanta, the affix kvip; by "णेनिति" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[51]) the loss of ṇi; when mayobhū, by "ह्रस्वो नपुंसकेप्रातिपदिकस्य" (Pā. Sū. 1-2-[47]) the shortening in the neuter; since it is supara, by "स्वमोर्नपुंसकात्" the luk of su; by "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" the base accent of the kṛdutarapada.
- वातु — the root vā gatigandhanayoḥ, Adādi; when the sense of ṇic (impelling) is contained in the root, loṭ in the sense of prayer; by "एरुः" the u for the i; by "अदिप्रभृतिभ्यः शप्ः" the luk of śap; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- सोमसुतः — the root ṣuñ abhiṣave; by "धात्वादेः षः सः" the s for the initial; by "सोमेसुजः" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[90]) the affix kvip in the past sense, since soma is the object [upapada]; since kvip is pit, by "ह्रस्वस्य पिति कृति तुक्" the augment tuk after the u; the word somasut; by "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" the base accent of the kṛdutarapada; nominative plural.

- अश्विना — for the nominative dual, by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute ā.
- शृणुतम् — the root śru śravaṇe; loṭ, second person dual; by "तस्थस्थमिपां तान्तन्तामः" the substitute tam; by "श्रुवः शृ च" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[74]) the śnu vikaraṇa and śr for the root; by "ऋवर्णान्नस्य णत्वं वाच्यम्" the ṇ for the n; since "सार्वधातुकमपित्" makes the affix ñit, the guṇa does not come; the nighāta of the tiṇanta.

original p. 281

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.4, concluded from p. 280:

- धिष्या — the word dhiṣṇā; to it, in the sense 'worthy of it', by "छन्दसि च" (Pā. Sū. 5-1-[67]) the affix ya; by the Vedic omission of a letter, the a after ṇ is lost; in the vocative dual, by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute ā; by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" the nighāta accent.
- युवम् — the word yuṣmad; after it, since the nominative dual follows, by "जसः प्रथमयोरम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[28]) the substitute am; by "युवावौ द्विवचने" the substitutes yuvā for the portion of the base up to m; by "प्रथमायाश्च द्विवचने भाषायाम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[88]) the ātva [= long ā] is stated for the spoken language, so it does not come in the Chandas; by "शेषे लोपः" the loss of the portion after m.

protector; yathā asat — in whatever way he is; adabdhah — unharmed by anyone; svastaye — for our welfare; pāyuh — may he be our protector.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.5

"We call in prayer, for protection, Indra, who is lord of all beings that move and do not move, who is possessed of lordship, and who is to be pleased with excellent deeds. And may the deity Pūṣan, in whatever way he is our protector for the increase of our riches, in the same way, unharmed by anyone, be our protector for our welfare."

English Translation ²⁴

"We invoke that lord of living beings, that protector of things immovable, Indra, who is to be propitiated by pious rites for our protection; as Pushan has ever been our defender for the increase of our riches, [so he] may continue to be the unmolested guardian of our welfare." — as printed ("as Pushan..." at the head of p. 283).

25. English Translation of Rik 89.5, concluded: "...as Pushan has ever been our defender for the increase of our riches, so he may continue to be the unmolested guardian of our welfare."

- वेदसाम् — "among the twenty-eight names of wealth — maghaṃ, reknaḥ and the rest — the word vedas is read; so vedasām means 'of riches' (Ni. [2-10] [?])."
- धियंजिन्वम् — "dhī is a word for 'work'; jivi prīṇanārthaḥ — to be pleased with works; fit to be satisfied with sacrificial works and the like."
- पायुः — pā rakṣaṇe | rakṣitā — "protector, guardian."
- स्वस्तये — avināśāya — "for non-destruction, for welfare, for the bringing of what is good or auspicious, for our welfare (English, as printed)."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.5)

- तस्थुषः — the root ṣṭhā gatinivṛttau; liṭ follows, and by "क्वसुश्च" the affix kvasu for it; the root is reduplicated; by "शर्पूर्वः खयः" in the reduplicate the th is kept; by "अभ्यासे चर्च" the substitute t for th; by "आर्धधातुकस्येड्वलादेः" the augment iṭ for the affix beginning with v; by "आतो लोप इटि च" the loss of the ā of the root; the word tasthivas; with nas following, by "वसोः सम्प्रसारणम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[131]) the saṃprasāraṇa of the v; by "सम्प्रसारणाच्च" the earlier form; by "आङ्गं..." [as read: ālntavyūhāḥ] since the iṭ has been lost with the saṃprasāraṇa, the iṭ-augment does not come; by "शासिवसिघसीनां च" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[60]) the ṣatva for the s of vas; tasthuṣ + as, by "षष्ठ्याः पतिपुत्र..." (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[53]) since pati follows, the s for the visarga [tasthuṣaḥ patim, with the visarga turned to s].
- धियंजिन्वम् — the root jivi prīṇanārthaḥ; by "कृत्यल्युटो बहुलम्" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[113]) since bahula is stated, the affix khac; by "इदितो नुम् धातोः" ... ²⁶

original p. 284

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.5, concluded from p. 283 (grammar, noted briefly):

- धियंजिन्वम् (cont.) — "...the augment num for the root; by "इच एकाचोऽम्प्रत्ययवच्च" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[68]) the augment am for the first member ending in ik that is a monosyllable, before a khit-affix word; it comes like the ām of a case-ending; by "विभक्तिभाव..." the am for the word dhi; by "अचि श्नुधातुभ्रुवां..." the substitute iy for the ī; the word dhiyaṃjinva has the final acute by "चितः".
- अवसे — the root ava rakṣaṇe; the affix asun; since it is nit, the first syllable is acute; dative singular.
- हूमहे — as explained under the third Rk.
- असत् — the root as bhuvi; leṭ, third person singular, the affix tip; by "इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु" the loss of its i; by "लेटोऽडाटौ" the augment aṭ; by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of śap does not come; so the a of śap is not elided; since "निपातैर्यद्यदि..." (Pā. Sū. 8-1-[30]) yathā is in connexion, the nighāta is prevented, so the root's accent remains.
- वृधे — the root vṛdhu vṛddhau; the affix kvip; the word vṛdh; dative singular.
- पायुः — the root pā rakṣaṇe; by "कृवापाजिमिस्वदिसाध्यशूभ्य उण्" (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[1]) the affix uṇ; by "आतो युक्चिण्कृतोः" (Pā. Sū. 7-3-[33]) the augment yuk after the ā; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- स्वस्तये — the root as bhuvi; since su precedes, to it in the abstract sense the affix ktin; although the root, since the affix is ārdhadhātuka, ought to take bhū by "अस्तेर्भूः" (Pā. Sū. 2-4-[52]), since by "छन्दस्युभयथा" the affix has sārvadhātuka status too, the bhū substitution does not come; the author of the Vṛtti gives this very solution.

vṛddhaśravāḥ — endowed with abundant praise, or with food in the form of oblation; indraḥ — Indra; naḥ — to us; svasti — imperishable welfare; dadhātu — let him make; viśvavedāḥ — knowing all, or possessing all knowledge; pūṣā — Pūṣan; naḥ — to us; svasti — welfare (make); ariṣṭanemiḥ — with unbent weapons, or with a chariot wheel that is not broken; tārṁśyaḥ — Tārṁśya (Garutmān)...

Skandasvāmin: 'agnau prakṣiptaṁ havir devā aśnanti tenaiṣām agnir jihvāsthānīyaḥ | vakṣyamāṇānām viśveṣām devānām etad viśeṣaṇaṁ na marutām' — 'the gods eat the oblation put in the fire; so for them Agni is as the tongue. Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.7, concluded from p. 290 (grammar, noted briefly; sūtras read in three layers, numerals as read [?]):

- शुभयावानः — the root yā prāpaṇe; by "आतो मनिन्क्वनिब्बनिपश्च" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[74]) the affix vanip, since the root ends in ā; the word yāvan; śubhaṃ yānti iti śubhaṃyāvānaḥ; by "तत्पुरुषे कृति बहुलम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[14]) the word bahula is included, so the luk of the accusative case-ending does not occur in the compound; by "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" the base accent of the kṛdutarapada.
- जग्मयः — the root gamḥ gatau; by "आदृगमहनजनः किकिनौ लिट् च" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[171]) the affix kin; by the statement that liṭ-like status holds, the root is reduplicated; in the reduplicate the hal-initial remains; by "कुहोश्चुः" cutva; by "गमहनजन..." the loss of the penultimate because the affix is kit; the word jagmi; in the nominative plural with jas following, by "जसि च" the guṇa; ay-substitution; since the affix is nit, the first syllable is acute.
- अवसा — the root ava rakṣaṇe; the affix asun; the word avas; instrumental singular.

If his own reflection is not clearly seen in that ghee, then this R̥k bhadraṃ karṇebhiḥ, which is relevant here, is to be recited, as it is pointed out in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section tvaṃ soma, by the sūtra 'rājñā somena tad vayam asmāsu dhārayāmasi bhadraṃ karṇebhiḥ śṛṇuyāma devā iti ca' (Āś. [5-18] [?]). Also, at the Mahānāmnī vrata, when touching the earth, this R̥k is to be muttered; it is set forth in the section etad vidam by the sūtra 'bhadraṃ karṇebhiḥ śṛṇuyāma devāḥ śaṃ na indrāgnī bhavatām avobhiḥ' (Āś. [8-14] [?])." ⁴¹

- भद्रम् — "'good', 'an auspicious matter'. When the word bhadraṃ is construed with the verb śṛṇuyāma it must be taken as 'an auspicious message, or word'; when it is joined with the verb paśyema it must be taken as 'auspicious things (events)'."
- यजत्राः — yāgeṣu ca puroḍāśādibhir yaṣṭavyā devāḥ — "gods who are worshipped in sacrifices with substances such as puroḍāśa."

41. this entry runs on to p. 294

- व्यशेम — aśū vyāptau | prāpnuyāma — "may we obtain, may we experience, may we live."
- देवहितं यदायुः — devena prajāpatinopakalpitaṃ kṛtsnaṃ ṣoḍaśādhikaśatapramāṇaṃ viṃśatyadhikaśatapramāṇaṃ vā āyuh — "the life appointed by the god Prajāpati: that is, the full term of life determined by Brahmā for men — as the bhāṣyakāra says, a hundred and sixteen, or a hundred and twenty years of life. In the next Ṛk the hundred years are said to be the measure of man's life."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.8)

- कर्णेभिः — the word karṇa, instrumental plural; bhis following, by "बहुलं छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 7-1-[10]) the ais substitution does not come; then by "बहुवचने झल्येत्" the e for the final a of the stem; the s of bhis gets ru and visarga.
- शृणुयाम — the root śru śravaṇe; liṅ, first person plural, the affix mas; by "नित्यं डितः" the loss of the s of the affix; by "श्रुवः शृ च" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[74]) the substitute śṛ for the root and the śnu vikaraṇa; by "लिङः सलोपोऽनन्त्यस्य" the loss of the non-final s [of yāsuṭ]; yāsuṭ augment; since it follows an atiṅanta, the nighāta.
- अक्षभिः — the word akṣi; instrumental plural; bhis following, by "छन्दस्यपि दृश्यते" the substitute anaṅ, with the acute left on the last syllable by the anaṅ rule; since it is ṇit, the substitute is final; akṣan + bhis, by "नलोपः प्रातिपदिकान्तस्य" the loss of the n.
- यजत्राः — the root yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu; by "अमिनक्षियजिवधिपतिभ्योऽत्रन्" (Uṇ. Sū. 3-[105] [?]) the affix atran; vocative plural; by "आमन्त्रितस्य च" the nighāta.
- तुष्टुवांसः — the root ṣtuṅ stutau; by "क्वसुश्च" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[107]) the affix kvasu in the place of liṭ; since the root is reduplicated by it, by "शर्पूर्वाः खयः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[61]) the t is kept in the reduplicate as the khay-letter; the word tuṣṭuvas; in the nominative plural, by "उगिदवां सर्वनामस्थानेऽधातोः" the augment num; by "आत्वसन्तस्य चाधातोः" the lengthening of the penultimate; n becomes anusvāra; by the affix-accent the ā is acute.

- अशेम — the root asū vyāptau; by "आशिषि लिङ्" the liṅ; first person plural, mas; the loss of the s; since āśirliṅ follows, by "लिङ्याशिषि अङ्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[86]) the affix aṅ; if the enumeration of the other verbs in that sūtra is for exclusion, then by "व्यत्ययो बहुलम्" śap for śnu; since it follows an atiñanta, the niḥāta accent.
- देवहितम् — the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; the affix ka in the passive; by "दधातेर्हिः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[42]) the substitute hi for the root; by "तृतीया कर्मणि" (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[48]) the first member keeps its base accent.

Translation: "O gods, a hundred autumns, years — śatam in nu — truly a hundred, are appointed by you as the term of life of men, very near to men. Since you, at the time of creation, have ordained a hundred years as the life of men, therefore no āyur gantoḥ — before the going [end] of our appointed life, madhyā — in the middle — mā rīṛiṣata — do not harm [us]. Of what kind? [We] whose bodies you have made liable to jarasam — old age — yatra, at that stage [of life]; and where putrāsaḥ, sons, become our protectors, as fathers — that is, those who have reached such a state. Grammar tail, noted briefly: anti — loss of the ka of antika (bahula); yatra — lengthening in the Saṃhitā; cakra — liṭ second plural; jarasam — jarasa is substituted for jarā (Pā. 7-2-[101] [?]); madhyā — the locative ending replaced by ḍā; rīṛiṣata — riṣa ruṣa hiṃsāyām, in the causative, with luñ after mā, cañ for cli, with the reduplication and shortening; gantoḥ — tosun after gam."

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 89.9)

devāḥ — O gods; anti — (in the lives of men) as determined; śaradaḥ — years; śatam it nu — a hundred indeed (by you); naḥ — our; tanūnām — of bodies; jarasam — weakness (of old age); yatra — at which time of our life; cakra — you have made (as appointed by you); yatra — at which time of our life; putrāsaḥ — our sons; pitarāḥ — as fathers, protectors (or, protecting their own sons like fathers); bhavanti — they become — (make it so); naḥ — us; āyur gantoh — before the end of our whole life; madhyā — in the middle; mā rīṣata — do not harm, hindering us.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.9

"O gods, a hundred years of life are indeed fixed for men. But at the time when we are enjoying that life of a hundred years to the full, do not, in the middle, cause weakness to arise in our bodies and thereby make us dependent, with the burden of protecting our bodies falling on our sons; do not hinder our growth and harm us in the middle of our life."

original p. 297

English Translation ⁴⁴

"O Gods, since only a hundred years were appointed for the life of man at the close of which you cause old age to our bodies and at the close of which the sons become fathers, may you never destroy our life while it is yet running its course." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.9)

- शतं शरदः — "a hundred years. Since the śarad season comes only once in a year, a hundred śarad seasons means a hundred years. In the Ṛgveda and in the other Vedas the use of the word śarad is special for indicating a year."
- अन्ति — antike — "in the body, the old age (vṛddhāpya) that arises according to the nature of age, an affliction that has come to the head, the weakness."
- जरसं तनूनाम् — "near, in the body."
- पुत्रासो यत्र पितरो भवन्ति — "The bhāṣyakāra, for this sentence — yatra ca putrāḥ pitaro 'smākaṃ rakṣitāro bhavanti — says: 'at which stage of old age our sons have to protect us — may we not have such weakness': let us not become so feeble and infirm as to be, as it were, and to require the paternal care of our own sons (English, as printed). Rather than this kind of meaning, the sense that is evident in this Ṛk is: 'in the time of our life, or in the last part of life, those who are our sons — those whom we begot — become fathers' — that is, old age: may we not have it."

- आयुर्गन्तोः — kṛptasyāyuso gamanāt pūrvam — "before the end of the appointed hundred-year measure of life."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 89.9)

- अन्ति — the word antika; for its final ka, by the statement "कादिलोपो बहुलमिति वक्तव्यम्" the loss comes.
- यत्र — the word yad; in the locative, by "सप्तम्यास्त्रल्" (Pā. Sū. 5-3-[10]) the affix tral; since it has the designation vibhakti, by "त्यदादीनामः" the a for the d, with pararūpa; by "ऋचि तुनुघमक्षुतङ्कुत्रोरुष्याणाम्" (Pā. Sū. 6-3-[133]) the lengthening in the Saṃhitā.
- चक्र — the root ḍukṛñ karaṇe; liṭ, second person plural, the substitute a for the affix tha; the root is reduplicated; in the reduplicate uraṭ [the a for the ṛ]; cutva; kr + a, the yaṇ substitution; since yatra is connected before, no nighāta; by "द्यौश्चोत्तिसः..." [as read] the lengthening in the Saṃhitā; by the affix-accent the final acute.
- जरसम् — the word jarā; in the accusative singular, am following, by "जरायाः जरसन्यतरस्याम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[101]) the substitute jaras.
- पुत्रासः — the word putra; with jas following, by "आज्जसेरसुक्" the augment asuk.

- भवन्ति — the root bhū sattāyām; third person plural; since yatra is connected before it, no nighāta; śap is unaccented; the lasārvadhātuka anti too, coming after a root with no vowel-initial, is unaccented by "तास्यनुदात्तेत्"; so the root's accent remains.
- मध्या — in the locative, madhya + ni, by "सुपां सुलुक्" the substitute ḍā.

original p. 298

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 89.9, continued from p. 297 (grammar, noted briefly):

- जरसम् (cont.) — "...the word jarā; with the second case-ending am following, by "जरायाः जरसन्यतरस्याम्" (Pā. Sū. 7-2-[101]) the substitute jaras."
- पुत्रासः — the word putra, with jas following, by "आज्जसेरसुक्" the augment asuk for jas.
- रीरिषत — the root riṣa ruṣa hiṃsāyām; in the sense of impelling, by "हेतुमति च" the affix ṇic; by "पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च" the guṇa of the laghūpadha; by "सनाद्यन्ता धातवः" it gets the designation of a root; in the sense of the past, luṇ, third person plural [as read: "prathamapuruṣa ekavacana", the ta affix]; by "णिश्चिद्रुसुभ्यः कर्तरि चङ्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[48]) caṇ in place of cli; by "चङि" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[11]) the reduplication of the first single-vowel part of the root; the reduplicate keeps its hal-initial; by "णौ चङ्युपधाया ह्रस्वः" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[1]) the shortening of the penultimate of the root; then, since sanvat [laghuni caṇpare nau] — the reduplicate's vowel is light, with caṇ following ni — the sanvadbhāva; by "सन्यतः" the i in the reduplicate; by "दीर्घो लघोः" the lengthening; by "णेरनिति" the loss of ni because of caṇ; since it is in connexion with mā, by "न माङ्गयोगे" the augment aṭ does not come; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta; by Vedic usage a shortening at the pada-stage [is not] made.

- गन्तोः — the root gamḥ gatau; by "भावलक्षणे स्थेणकृञ्..." (Pā. Sū. 3-4-[16]) the affix tosun in the abstract sense; by "क्त्वातोसुन्कसुनः" (Pā. Sū. 1-1-[40]) it gets the designation of an indeclinable; since it ends in a nit affix, by "ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्" the first syllable acute.

Translation: "Aditi — the not-poor, the unbroken one, or the earth, or the mother of the gods — is herself dyauḥ, heaven, the shining nāka; she herself is antarikṣam, the sky seen between heaven and earth; she herself is mātā, the maker of the world, the mother; she herself the father, the begetter; and she is also putraḥ, the son born of mother and father. Viśve devāḥ — all the gods are Aditi herself. Pañca janāḥ — the five peoples: the four castes with the Niṣādas as the fifth; or the Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras and Rākṣasas. Yāska has said (Ni. [3-8] [?]): 'the Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras, Rākṣasas', say some; 'the four castes and the Niṣāda as fifth', says Aupamanyava. In the Brāhmaṇa it is said: 'this is the uktha of all the five peoples — gods, men, Gandharvas and Apsarases, serpents, and Pitṛs' (Ai. Brā. Such five peoples too are Aditi. Jātam — birth, the birth of creatures, is Aditi; janitvam — the place of birth, that too is Aditi. Thus Aditi is praised as the self of all the world. And Yāska has said (Ni. ॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 89.10)

aditiḥ — Aditi; dyauḥ — the shining heaven; aditiḥ — Aditi; antarikṣam — the atmosphere; aditiḥ — Aditi; mātā — mother (of the whole world); saḥ pitā — she herself is the father (of the world), the begetter; saḥ putraḥ — she herself is the son (born to the parents); viśve devāḥ — all the deities; aditiḥ — Aditi herself; pañca janāḥ — the four castes together with the Niṣādas, or the five classes — Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras and Rākṣasas; aditiḥ — Aditi; jātam — what has been born; aditiḥ — Aditi; janitvam — what will be born (in future), or the place of origin (Aditi).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 89.10

"The unbroken Aditi is the giver of birth to the whole universe. She herself is the mother of the world and the father of the world. Everything that is born is she herself; Aditi is the place of origin.

The five classes of people, of the nature of castes and including the Niṣādas, are she herself. Aditi herself is all the gods; she herself the shining heaven, she herself the atmosphere, she herself the whole universe, she herself the regulator of the universe."

English Translation

"Aditi is heaven; Aditi is firmament; Aditi is mother, father and son; Aditi is all the gods; Aditi is the five classes of men; Aditi is what is born, Aditi is what shall be born." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 89.10)

"This Ṛk aditir dyaur aditiḥ, which has Aditi as its deity, is to be used as the yājyā mantra for offering the oblation in the animal sacrifice that has Aditi as its deity; this is set forth in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'aditir dyaur aditir antarikṣaṃ na te viṣṇo jāyamāno na jātaḥ' (Āś. [3-9] [?])."

- अदितिम् — "see what has been written in the special topics of the third Ṛk of this sūkta regarding Aditi."
- पञ्च जनाः — "five classes of people. The matter of the five classes of people, well known from Ṛgveda times, is not merely indicated here in the Ṛgveda; it has come down in places such as the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa [3-?; 4-?], the Taittirīya Saṃhitā [1-?-?], the Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā [?-?] and the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad [4-4-17] [?] (numerals read with doubt [?]). In the Ṛgveda, besides the words pañcajanāḥ, the words that give the same sense — pañcamānuṣāḥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. [?]), janāḥ, kṛṣṭayaḥ, kṣitayaḥ, carṣanayaḥ — are used in many places (each with a run of small Kannada reference numerals, which are given in the print and are not verified here [?])." ⁴⁹

"Among Western scholars some take pañcajanāḥ to mean the five well-known Āryan tribes who dwelt on the banks of the river Sarasvatī: Anu, Druhyu, Yadu, Turvaśa and Puru. To support their view they quote Ṛks such as R. Saṃ. [1-108-8] [?] and [8-10-5] [?]. In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa too (Śa. Brā. [13-5-4-14] [?]) and in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (Ai. Brā. [8-23] [?]) it is stated that these five peoples are the sons [or tribes] of Bharata [as printed, 'bharataru' — sic?]."

"For the word pañcajanāḥ the bhāṣyakāra explains it as niṣādapañcamāḥ, and Skandasvāmin as gandharvāḥ pitaro devāḥ [sic: devāḥ asurā rakṣāṃsi]; and Veṅkaṭamādhava explains: 'manuṣyāṇāṃ pañcānāṃ kṣitīnāṃ niveśatāṃ gandharvāḥ pitaro devā asurā rakṣāṃsīti pañcatvam' [as read, partly clotted [?]]. According to Sāyaṇa's view, pañcajanāḥ means five classes of people — Brāhmaṇa, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya, Śūdra and Niṣāda. Niṣāda means the people who lie outside the four castes, Brāhmaṇa and the rest, and live by the hunting of beasts — the Gonds, Kolas, Bhillas and others, the earlier inhabitants of this land, who belong to this class; even now these live in large numbers in forests and hills in some places such as the central provinces, as uncivilised folk. As examples of Ṛks in which the words pañcajanāḥ and pañcakṛṣṭayaḥ occur, we give a couple —

तेदध्य वाचः प्रथमं मसीय येनासुराँ अभि देवा असाम । उर्जाद उत यज्ञियासः पञ्चजना मम होत्रं जुषध्वम् ॥

tad adya vācaḥ prathamam masīya yenāsurāṃ abhi devā asāma | urjāda uta yajñiyāsaḥ pañcajanā mama hotraṃ juṣadhvam ॥ (R. Saṃ. 10-53-4) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Today may I measure [out] that first of speech, by which we gods overcame the Asuras; O eaters of strength, and worthy ones, O five peoples, take pleasure in my offering."

पञ्च जना मम होत्रं जुषन्तां गोजाता उत ये यज्ञियासः ॥ pañca janā mama hotraṃ juṣantāṃ gojātā uta ye yajñiyāsaḥ ॥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-53-5) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "May the five peoples take pleasure in my offering, those born of the cow and the worthy ones."

सद्यश्चिद्यः शवसा पञ्चकृष्टीः सूर्य इव ज्योतिषापस्ततान ॥

sadyaś cid yah śavasā pañcakṛṣṭīḥ sūrya iva jyotiṣāpas tatāna ॥ (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-[178]-[?] [?], as read "००-०४३-३" — uncertain) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "He who at once, with might, spread out the five peoples, as the sun spreads the waters with light."

— For the words pañca janāḥ and pañcakṛṣṭayaḥ in these Ṛks, Yāska has explained the meaning in his Nirukta thus —

पञ्चम इत्यौपमन्यवः । निषादः कस्मान्निषदनो भवति निषण्णमस्मिन् पापकमिति नैरुक्ताः

pañca janā mama hotraṃ juṣadhvaṃ gandharvāḥ pitaro devā asurā rakṣāmsīty eke | catvāro varṇā niṣādaḥ pañcama ity aupamanyavaḥ | niṣādaḥ kasmān niṣadano bhavati niṣaṇṇam asmin pāpakam iti nairuktāḥ ॥ (Ni. [3-8] [?]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "'O five peoples, take pleasure in my offering': some say, the Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras, Rākṣasas; Aupamanyava says, the four castes, and the Niṣāda is the fifth. Why is the Niṣāda so called? Because he is a 'sitting-place' — evil is seated in him, say the etymologists." ⁵⁰

original p. 302

Special Topics of Rik 89.10, concluded from p. 301:

"That is, some say pañcajanāḥ means five kinds of people — Gandharvas, Pitṛs, gods, Asuras and Rākṣasas. The view of Aupamanyava and others is that the five kinds are the people of the four castes, Brāhmaṇas and the rest, together with a people of the hunter-tribe called Niṣāda. Sāyaṇa has approved this very view. Because the Niṣādas kill living beings, or because sin is thick in them, the Nirukta-writers call them niṣāda [niṣadana, 'seat of']. Apart from this, there may be a settled usage in that age in which pañcajanāḥ meant 'five tribes' — by collecting the names of the five chief Āryan tribes then well known, Anu, Druhyu, Yadu, Turvaśa and Puru. Be that as it may, in this matter it is clear that there was a difference of opinion even in the age of Yāska, the author of the Nirukta."

- अदितिः — the root do avakhaṇḍane; in the passive, by "स्त्रियां क्तिन्" the affix ktin; since it follows, by "द्यतिस्यतिमास्थामिति किति" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[40]) the substitute i for the root's ā. On Yāska's view: the root dīṇ kṣaye; to it, in the abstract sense, the same affix ktin as before; by vyatyaya, since the affix follows, a shortening of the root. na ditiḥ aditiḥ — a nañ-tatpuruṣa; by "तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थ..." (Pā. Sū. 6-2-[2]) the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its base accent.
- स पिता — here one has to take over what was said earlier in the word saḥ, as the antecedent; it is devamātā and so on; she is feminine. Then the doubt arises why here too it is not said sā, in the feminine. Those who know make this solution: "pronouns, when they establish the identity of the thing pointed to and the thing referred to, take in turn the gender of the one indicated" — uddeśyaliṅgatayā pulliṅgatvam, 'masculine by the gender of the subject-term'. Pronouns convey the sameness of the subject and the predicate; then, depending on what is intended, sometimes the gender of the predicate and sometimes of the subject comes; here, following the gender of the subject-term, the masculine is said.

- जनित्वम् — the root janī prādurbhāve; in the locus sense, by the Uṇādi the affix tvān; by "आर्धधातुकस्येड्वलादेः" the augment iṭ; since it ends in a nit affix, by "ञित्यादिर्नित्यम्" the first syllable is acute.

Translation (as read; doubtful words noted): "The sixth sūkta, ṛjunītī, of nine Ṛks, is the vision of Gotama. The Anukramaṇī says here: 'ṛjunītī — nine, Gāyatrī, the last Anuṣṭubh.' As in the preceding sūkta it is Vaiśvadeva [the deity is the Viśvedevas]; by the rule beginning with hi, this sūkta too has many deities [as printed, bahudevātāka] [?]. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. On the Cāturviṃśika day, at the morning pressing, the Ṛk ṛjunītī no varuṇa is the ārambhaṇīyā [opening verse] of the Maitrāvaruṇa; it is prescribed in the section caturviṃśa: 'ṛjunītī no varuṇa indraṃ vo viśvatas pari' (Āś. [7-2] [?]). In the ahargaṇa sacrifices too, from the second day on, this is to be used as the opening, recited; and it is prescribed: 'ārambhaṇīyāḥ ... the Hotrakas, on the second and following days' (Āś. [7-1] [?])." ¹

"The sūkta ṛjunītī is the sixth sūkta of the fourteenth anuvāka. There are nine Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. In the Anukramaṇī it is said 'ṛjunītī nava gāyatrām antyānuṣṭub' — that is, of the nine Ṛks in the sūkta ṛjunītī, the first eight are in the Gāyatrī metre and the last Ṛk in the Anuṣṭubh metre. The deities of this sūkta too are the Viśvedevas. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. At the morning pressing of the twenty-fourth day of the sacrifice, the Mitrāvaruṇa priest is to begin with the Ṛk ṛjunītī: the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra sets this forth in the section called Caturviṃśa by the sūtra 'ṛjunītī no varuṇa indraṃ vo viśvatas pari' (Āś. [7-2] [?]); and the mantras beginning with this Ṛk, from the second day of the Ahargaṇa sacrifice onward, are to be used — the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows this by the sūtra 'ārambhaṇīyāḥ paryosān kadvato 'paraḥ śasyānīti hotrakā dvitīyādiṣv eva' (Āś. [7-1] [?])." ²

"The deities Mitra, Varuṇa and the rest are distributors of wealth to the whole world. Without being negligent even a little, they guard every day, with attention, their duty of the nature of sustaining the world, and shine with their lustre."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 90.2, continued from p. 307 (grammar, noted briefly):

- वसवानाः — the root vasa ācchādane; since the sense of ṇic is contained in it, śānac in the sense of laṭ; since it is adādi [as printed; read: as the root is not in the adādi list], by "बहुलं छन्दसि" the luk of śap does not come; when vas + āna, by "आनेमुक्" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[130]) the augment muk [as read, ānemuk] after the a-final aṅga; by letter-substitution the m becomes v; since the affix is cit, by "चितः" the final acute; nominative plural.
- अप्रमूराः — the root murchā mohasamucchrāyayoh; by "सम्पदादिभ्यः क्विप्" the affix kvip in the abstract sense; by "राल्लोपः" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[21]) the ch and v after r are lost, since kvip, which is jhal-initial [as read], is a nasal-like affix and follows; here, since kvip is present, the ch is lost; prakṛṣṭā mūḥ pramūḥ; after pramū, in the sense 'having it', by the Vedic ra affix; since rephā is followed by repha, by "रे रि" (Pā. Sū. 8-3-[14]) the loss of the r; na pramūrāḥ apramūrāḥ, a nañ-tatpuruṣa, so by "तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थः..." the first member, an indeclinable, keeps its base accent.

Translation: "Rtāyate — for the sacrificer who desires ṛta, the rite, for himself: vātāḥ — the winds madhu — sweet, with a fruit endowed with sweetness — kṣaranti — pour, rain down; that is, give. Likewise sindhavaḥ — the flowing rivers, or oceans — pour their own madhu, sweet juice. Likewise, oṣadhīḥ — plants whose end is the ripening of the fruit, and crops — mādhvīḥ — endowed with sweetness — santu — may they be to us. Grammar tail, noted briefly: madhu — loss of the matup after it by the statement cited (Pā. 4-4-[121] [?]); ṛtāyate — kyac from ṛta; mādhvīḥ — añ after 20. Kannada script; the Pāṇini numerals and the clause "ṛty akaḥ" are read with doubt [?].

madhu in the sense 'having it'; oṣadhīḥ — ōṣa ('burning') + dhā with ki in the locus sense; feminine nīp; first member keeps its accent."

original p. 316

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 90.6)

ṛtāyate — to the sacrificer who desires the sacrifice; vātāḥ — the winds; madhu — sweet fruits of work; kṣaranti — pour; sindhavaḥ — the rivers of flowing form; madhu — their juice, endowed with sweetness; kṣaranti — pour out; naḥ — to us; oṣadhīḥ — crops and roots and the like; mādhvīḥ — endowed with sweetness; santu — let them be.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 90.6

"For the sacrificer who performs sacrifices and is devoted to the worship of the gods, the winds pour sweet fruits of work; the rivers of flowing form increase their sweet juice. May the crops and roots and the like be sweet for us, the performers of sacrifices."

English Translation

"The winds bring sweet (rewards) to the Sacrificer; the rivers bring sweet waters; may the herbs yield sweetness to us. Or: Sweetly do the winds blow for the pious Sacrificer; sweetly do the rivers flow, sweet may the plants be for us." — as printed.

- ऋतायते — yajñam ātmana icchate yajamānāya — "for the sacrificer who performs the sacrifice: for his pleasure."

- मधु — "sweet, pleasing." ²¹

Special Topics of Rik 90.6, continued from p. 316:

- क्षरन्ति — varṣanti — "pour; make (rain)."
- सिन्धवः — syandanaśīlā nadyaḥ samudrā vā — "rivers, or oceans."

"The main intention: for the pleasure of the sacrificer who performs sacrifices, may the wind blow gladdening; may the rivers flow, filled with cool or sweet water; may crops, plants and trees (grain, fruits and so on) be full of sweet-tasting fruits and the like."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 90.6)

- मधु — in the matup affix that follows these, by the statement "लुगकारेकाररेफाश्च वक्तव्याः" (Pā. Sū. 4-4-[121]-3 [?]) the luk; the second case-ending am following, by "स्वमोर्नपुंसकात्" the luk of it.
- ऋतायते — ṛtam ātmana icchati ṛtāyate; by "सुप आत्मनः क्यच्" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-8) the affix kyac in the sense of wishing; kyac following, by "न छन्दस्यपुत्रस्य" (Pā. Sū. 7-4-[35]) the ī-substitution and lengthening for the a of ṛta do not come; by "अन्येषामपि दृश्यते" the lengthening of the t [i.e. of the vowel after t] in the Samhitā; the form ending in kyac, by "सनाद्यन्ता धातवः" gets the designation of a root; after it, in the sense of laṭ, the affix śatr; the word ṛtāyat; in the dative singular, since śatr has no num, with a vowel-initial case-ending following, by "शतुर्नुमो नद्यजादी" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[173]) the case-ending is acute.

- क्षरन्ति — the root kṣara sañcalane [as read: kṣara prastravaṇe]; laṭ, third person plural; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- माध्वीः — in the sense 'is sweet to it' (madhu asyā asti), by "मधोरञ्च" (Pā. Sū. 4-4-[126]) the affix añ; since añ follows, by "ऋत्व्यवास्तव्यवास्त्वमाध्वीहिरण्ययादिति छन्दसि" (Pā. Sū. 6-4-[175]) the yaṇ substitution is fixed by nipātana; since the affix is ñit, vṛddhi of the initial; when the feminine is intended, by "टिङ्हाणञ्..." the affix nīp; in the nominative plural, jas following, by "वा छन्दसि" the lengthening of the preceding homorganic; the s becomes ru and visarga: mādhvīḥ.
- सन्तु — the root as bhuvi; loṭ, third person plural; the substitute ant; u; by "श्नसोरल्लोपः" the loss of the a of the root; since it follows an atiñanta, the nighāta.
- ओषधीः — oṣaḥ pākaḥ asu dhīyate iti oṣadhayaḥ, the root dudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoh; in the locus sense, by "कर्मण्यधिकरणे च" (Pā. Sū. 3-3-[93]) the affix ki; by "आतो..." ²²

original p. 318

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 90.6, concluded from p. 317 (grammar, noted briefly):

- ओषधीः (cont.) — "...by "आतो लोप इति च" the loss of the ā of the root, since an affix beginning with i follows [ki being kit]; the word oṣadhi; in the feminine, by "कृदिकारादक्तिनः" (Pā. Sū. 4-1-[45]) the affix nīp; with jas following, as before, by "वा छन्दसि" the lengthening of the preceding homorganic vowel; since it is read in the dāsībhārādi list, the first member keeps its base accent; since the word dāsībhāra ends in gha [ghaṇ], and is acute on the first syllable, this word too is acute on the first syllable."

English Translation

- पार्थिवं रजः — "rajas means a world: 'lokā rajāṃsy ucyante' (Ni. [4-19] [?]); pārthivaṃ rajāḥ means the world of earth, or the earth."
- द्यौः पिता — "heaven (dyauḥ), who is as it were a father to us — that is, the world of heaven. In the Ṛgveda the word dyāvāpṛthivī is used in many places; it means heaven and earth. There is a convention of calling heaven the father and the earth the mother. For, just as father and mother nourish us with food and the like, so heaven — that is, the atmosphere — pours down the rain needed for the production of our food; the earth, by the help of the rain, produces crops and the like and supplies us the food we need. Hence the convention of calling heaven and earth father and mother."

"This R̥k is used as the śānti-pāṭha (peace-chant) of the first chapter, the Śikṣāvallī, of the Taittirīya Upaniṣad."

- शंनो मित्रः भवतु — "may Mitra, the deity presiding over the day, make happiness for us."
- वरुणः — "Varuṇa, the deity who presides over the night."
- बृहस्पतिः — br̥hatām devānām pālayitā — "the great, or excellent, Bṛhaspati, the protector of many gods."
- अर्यमा — "the sun, who divides day and night."
- विष्णुः उरुक्रमः — kramu pādavikṣepe | uru vistīrṇaṃ krāmati pādau vikṣipatīty urukramaḥ | viṣṇur hi vāmanāvatāre pr̥thivyādīn lokān padatrayarūpeṇākrāntavān — "'urukrama' means one who steps over a wide expanse, a long way: it is said that Viṣṇu, at the time of the Vāmana incarnation, strode over the worlds, earth and the rest, with three steps. Several R̥ks that indicate this kind of prowess of Viṣṇu —

अतो देवा अवन्तु नो यतो विष्णुर्विचक्रमे । पृथिव्याः सप्तधामभिः ॥

ato devā avantu no yato viṣṇur vicakrame | pr̥thivyāḥ saptadhāmabhiḥ ॥ (R. Saṃ. [reference not printed on p. 323 (?)]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "From where Viṣṇu strode out with the seven stations of the earth, from there may the gods protect us."

इदं विष्णुर्विचक्रमे त्रेधा नि दधे पदम् । समूळहमस्य पांसुरे ॥

idaṃ viṣṇur vicakrame tredhā ni dadhe padam | samūlham asya pāmsure ॥ (R. Saṃ. [reference not printed on p. 323 (?)]) — Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Viṣṇu strode across this; thrice he set down his foot; it is gathered in his dust-filled [footstep]." ²⁸

28. Correction: on p. 323 the print gives these two citations without any reference numerals — the page ends after the second citation — and the numerals are therefore not supplied here. The list of such R̥ks continues on p. 324, where the later citations do carry numerals.

"In many such R̥ks the striding of the feet of Viṣṇu is described. See what has been written in R̥. Saṃ. Part 3, pp. 125 and 126."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 90.9)

- अर्यमा — the root mān preceded by ari [as printed: ārya-preceded] — aryaman is fixed by nipātana by "श्रन्क्वनिन्" (Uṇ. Sū. 1-[?]) [the sūtra wording as read: śrannkvanin].
- बृहस्पतिः — br̥hatām patih̥ br̥haspatiḥ; by "तद्धृतोः करपत्योश्चोरदेवतयोः सुट् तलोपश्च" (Pā. Sū. 6-1-[157], the vārttika as read) the augment suṭ, and the loss of the t of br̥hat; as before, both members keep their base accent.
- उरुक्रमः — the root kramu pādavikṣepe; since it is read in the pacādi list, by "नन्दिग्रहिपचादिभ्यो ल्युणिन्यचः" (Pā. Sū. 3-1-[134]) the affix ac; or, urūn krāmati iti urukramaḥ: by "कर्मण्यण्" (Pā. Sū. 3-2-[1]) the affix aṇ when a word denoting the object stands as upapada; by "अत उपधायाः" the vṛddhi would have come, but by "नोदात्तोपदेशस्य मान्तस्य..." (Pā. Sū. 7-3-[34]) the vṛddhi is prohibited for a root with an unaccented upadeśa ending in m; by the affix-accent kramaḥ is acute on the last syllable; by "गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्" the kṛdutarapada's base accent in the compound.

Translation (as read; the Anukramaṇī line is garbled in the print: "tryadhikā", "pañcamādyi", "dvādaśoṣṇik" are as printed and not corrected [?]): "The seventh sūkta, tvaṃ soma, of twenty-three Ṛks, the vision of Gotama, addressed to Soma. The twelve Ṛks from the fifth to the sixteenth are Gāyatrī; the seventeenth is Uṣṇih; the remaining ten are Triṣṭubh. So it is recorded in the Anukramaṇī. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. At the animal sacrifice of the Saumya (Soma-deity) in the ekādaśinī, the two Ṛks tvaṃ soma are the anuvākyā for the vapā and the puroḍāśa; prescribed: 'tvaṃ soma pra cikito manīṣeti dve' (Āś. [3-2] [?]). At the Mahāpitṛyajña, each oblation has two anuvākyās; of these, for Soma Pitṛmat, 'tvaṃ soma' is the first anuvākyā; prescribed in the section dakṣiṇāgner agnim: 'tvaṃ soma pra cikito manīṣā somo dhenum' (Āś. [2-19] [?]). It is also the anuvākyā of the Saumya in the prāyaṇīyā offering of this same rite; prescribed: 'tadahaḥ prāyaṇīyeṣṭiḥ' — 'tvaṃ soma pra cikito manīṣā yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyāṃ' (Āś. [4-3] [?])."

अनुवादु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

"The sūkta tvaṃ soma is the seventh sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka. There are twenty-three Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. The deity is Soma. Of these, twelve Ṛks, from the fifth to the sixteenth, are in the Gāyatrī metre; the seventeenth Ṛk in the Uṣṇih metre. The remaining ten Ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre. In the Anukramaṇī it is said 'tvaṃ soma tryadhikā saumyaṃ pañcamādyi gāyatro dvādaśoṣṇik ceti' [as printed]. The application of the sūkta is laiṅgika. In the Soma sacrifice called Ekādaśina, when the vapā (omentum) and the puroḍāśa of the animal are offered in the fire, the two Ṛks of this sūkta, tvam soma, are to be used as anuvākyā mantras; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra says this by the sūtra 'tvam soma pra cikito manīṣeti dve' (Āś. [3-2] [?]). In the Mahāpitṛyajña, for each oblation there are two anuvākyā mantras; of these, the Ṛk tvam soma is the first anuvākyā mantra for the oblation to Soma Pitṛmat; this is set forth in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section dakṣiṇāgner agnim, by the sūtra 'tvam soma pra cikito manīṣā somo dhenum' (Āś. [2-19] [?]). Besides, the first Ṛk of this sūkta is also to be used as the puronuvākyā mantra of the Soma deity in the Prāyaṇīyā offering, as is shown in the section tadahāḥ prāyaṇīyeṣṭiḥ by the sūtra 'tvam soma pra cikito manīṣā yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām' (Āś. [4-3] [?])." ¹

Translation: "O Soma, you are pra cikitaḥ through our manīṣā — through our own understanding — that is, you are known thoroughly; the meaning is, we praise you with hymns. Therefore you lead us along the straightest, the least crooked path — the road that is the means of obtaining the fruit of ritual — following us, and bring us along in due order. Further, O indo, you who moisten [undana] the whole world with the nectar, Soma: by your praṇīti, by your leading — [the words pravr̥ttyarthakeṇa in the print are doubtful (?)] — by an excellent guidance, our fathers, wise (dhīrāḥ), possessed of ritual, or possessed of insight, abhajanta — enjoyed, obtained — among the gods, Indra and the rest, delightful wealth (ratnam). Therefore grant us too such wealth: this is the sense."

Grammar tail of the bhāṣya (compressed, read in part, characterized not transcribed): pra cikitaḥ from the root kit "to know" (kita jñāne), in the passive/karmaṇi with the niṣṭhā suffix, the doubling (dvirvacana) being Vedic (chāndasa); an alternative explanation through yajuḥ (?) is clotted in the print and not read. gātiranantara — the preverb retains its accent. manīṣā — the instrumental ending replaced by ḍā (supāṃ sulug [sūtra as cited]). rajiṣṭham — from rju, the suffix iṣṭhan optionally, in Chandas (Pā. 6-4-163 [?]); the ṭi-elision is cited. neṣi — from nī, in the present tense, the śap elided by "bahulaṃ chandasi". paṃthām — pathimathyrbhukṣām āt (Pā. 7-1-85 [?]); the accent of pathi and mathi as initial-acute in the strong cases. praṇīti — tādaucā (the preverb keeps its own accent); the instrumental by supāṃ sulug, preceding-similar long vowel. ⁵

"This sūkta, beginning with tvaṃ soma, is addressed to the deity Soma. Because all the mantras addressed to the deity Soma in the Ninth Maṇḍala are in that Maṇḍala, this sūkta ought, by rule, to have been placed in that Maṇḍala. It is not so. In the Anukramaṇī too it is said: 'saha-tvaṃ soma tryadhikā saumyaṃ pañcamyādi gāyatro dvādaśoṣṇik ceti' [as printed]. And the deity of the Ninth Maṇḍala is called pavamānaḥ somaḥ. Although the Soma-deity is one, the Soma-deity qualified by the attribute pavamāna ("purifying") is regarded as a separate deity and praised. Therefore this sūkta, whose deity is Soma, was not included among the sūktas of the deity pavamānaḥ somaḥ. In the Ṛgveda such an arrangement is a special feature. For example, the words Savitr, Āditya and Sūrya ordinarily indicate one deity, yet there are separate sūktas for Savitr, for Āditya and for Sūrya. Like them, agniḥ and agniḥ pāvakaḥ, draviṇodāḥ and the other deities are praised separately. In the same way this sūkta was not included in the Ninth Maṇḍala but was placed in the First Maṇḍala together with the sūktas of other deities such as Agni and Indra — this should be understood." ⁹

Kannada: "(By our understanding) you are known — that is, by the power of our understanding we praise you, and through those praises we come to know you: this is the sense. Skandasvāmin explains this word: 'prakarṣeṇa jñāsi yad yāvat jñātavyam' — you know in full everything that is to be known; so he explains [as read]."

— by the power of our understanding; by the praises that we make.

pra cikitaḥ — root kita jñāne; the cta suffix in the passive; chāndasa doubling; the reduplicative syllable keeps halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; cutū / alternatively yaj in the sense of intensity; the luk by yajoci... [sūtra as printed, clotted (?)]; sanyaṇoḥ for the doubling of the root; saṃjñāpūrvako vidhir anityaḥ (the paribhāṣā, cited), so that guṇo yaṇluk-oḥ (Pā. 7-4-82 [?]) does not give guṇa to the reduplicative; alternatively chandasy ubhayathā and kartariśap; because the root belongs to the juhotyādi class, śap is replaced by ślu (śau), and the root is doubled; by the suffix-accent cikitaḥ is final-acute. gatiranantaraḥ (Pā. 6-2-49 [?]) — the preverb keeps its own accent. manīṣā — a feminine in -ā; the instrumental singular, which follows, receives ḍā by supāṃ sulug (the sūtra as cited). rajiṣṭham — atiśāyane tamabiṣṭhanau, the suffix iṣṭhan after rju when the superlative sense appears; ṭeḥ — ṭi-elision; vibhāṣarjōś

10. Kannada; grammar page, noted briefly, not transcribed chandasi (Pā. 6-4-162 [?]) gives ratva; as the suffix is nit, the initial-acute accent follows. neṣi — root nīñ prāpaṇe; ṇo naḥ (nasal replaced); siP in the second person singular of laṭ; bahulaṃ chandasi — luk of śap; sārvadhātukārdhahdhātukayoḥ — guṇa of the root vowel ī; the suffix s becomes ṣ; the accent nighāta, since it follows the preverb.¹¹

paṃthām — stem pathin; since am follows, by pathimathyrbhukṣām āt (पथिमथ्यृभुक्षामात्, Pā. 7-1-85 [?]) there is the ā even though the su is absent; tho nthah (थो न्यः, [?]) — the tha is replaced by nth; pathimathoh sarvanāmasthāne (पथिमथोः सर्वनामस्थाने, Pā. 6-1-199 [?]) — initial-acute accent. praṇītī — root nīñ prāpaṇe; striyām ktin — the ktin in the sense of the action; tādaḥ ca niti (ताडौ च निति, Pā. 6-2-50 [?]) — because a suffix beginning with t and nit follows, the preverb pra keeps its natural accent; the stem followed by the instrumental singular, from supām sulug, the preceding-similar long vowel becomes the single replacement. abhajanta — root bhaja sevāyām; lañ, third person plural; nighāta accent, since it follows the preverb. || 1 ||

Translation: "At the Marutvatīya (Marut-offering) of the Agniṣṭoma, the Ṛk tvam soma kratubhiḥ is the dhāyyā. And it is prescribed: 'agnīr netā tvam soma kratubhiḥ pinvanty apah' — these are the dhāyyās (Āś. 5-14 [?], numeral as read, doubtful). O Soma, you are sukratuḥ — of good works or of good understanding — through your kratubhiḥ, your own acts such as the Agniṣṭoma and the like, or through your own knowledge; you bhūḥ, you are. And you, viśvavedāḥ — master of all wealth — are sudakṣaḥ, of good strength, through your own strengths (dakṣaiḥ). And you through your vṛṣatvebhiḥ, your showers of desired things, and through mahitvā, greatness and majesty, are vṛṣā — the rainer of desires — and great. And you, being nṛcakṣāḥ — the one who shows to the leaders of the sacrifice, the sacrificers, the fruit they desire — through the dyumnēbhiḥ, the praise-given offerings in the form of food presented to you, are dyumnī: you have abundant food."

Grammar tail of the bhāṣya (compressed, partly read): sukratuḥ — in the bahuvrīhi "kratvādayaś ca", the final-acute (uttarapadādyudāttatva) [sūtra as cited, clotted [?]]. sudakṣaḥ — root dakṣa vrddhau, "that by which one grows": dakṣaḥ, strength; ghaṇ in the instrumental sense; the initial-acute accent [details clotted [?]]; the prefix su in the bahuvrīhi is initial-acute. viśvavedāḥ — viśvāni vedāṃsi yasya; bahuvrīhau viśvaṃ saṃjñāyām (the pre-member keeps the final-acute). vṛṣatvebhiḥ — vṛṣaṇo bhāvo vṛṣatvam; bahulaṃ chandasi — bhis becomes *ais-*less (aisabhāvaḥ). mahitvā — from mahi with the Uṇādi itvā suffix; the case-ending lengthened to ā after a bhāva-suffix by supāṇ sulug.¹²

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; kratubhiḥ — by your Agniṣṭoma and other acts, or by knowledges; sukratuḥ — one of excellent acts, or of excellent insight; bhūḥ — you become;

viśvavedāḥ — knower of all (possessed of all wealth); tvam — you; dakṣaiḥ — by [your] strengths; sudakṣaḥ — of excellent strength; tvam — you; vṛṣatvebhiḥ — by the showering of desires [liberally]; mahitvā — by greatness; vṛṣā — a rainer of wishes; nṛcakṣāḥ — a guide for men (the sacrificers); dymnebhiḥ — by the food in the form of offerings, [offered] by them; dymnī — a possessor of food (a strong one); abhavaḥ — you became.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.2

"O Soma-deity, by your Agniṣṭoma and other acts you are always a performer of pure acts. You who know everything are, by your own strength, one of excellent strength. As you liberally grant the desired things, you are an exceedingly liberal giver. Being a guide for the sacrificing men, you are nourished by the food in the form of the offerings presented by them."

"In the Agniṣṭoma sacrifice, at the time of reciting the Marutvatīya-śāstra mantras, this Ṛk tvam soma kratubhiḥ is to be used as the dhāyyā mantra; this is stated by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'agnīr netā tvam soma kratubhiḥ pinvanty apa iti dhāyyāḥ' (Ā. 5-14 [?], numerals as read)."

kratubhiḥ — "The word kratu has been used in many senses: act, understanding, resolve, strength. But for the phrase saha kratubhiḥ it is only the meaning 'karmabhiḥ prajñayā vā — by acts or by understanding — that is established; and so here too the explanation is given: 'saha tvatsaṃbandhibhir agniṣṭomādikarmabhir ātmīyair jñānair vā'. In R. Saṃ. 10-[?]-1 alone, [Sāyaṇa] makes the meaning 'karmapaiḥ puruṣaiḥ' [as read, doubtful [?]]."

dakṣaiḥ sudakṣaḥ — "Since the word dakṣa is included among the 'twenty-eight names of strength' beginning ojaḥ, pājaḥ (Ni. 2-9 [?]), the meaning of the word dakṣa is 'strength'; the sense is 'one possessed of excellent strength through his own strength'. Or the word may also be said to be a synonym of growth: 'vṛddhibhiḥ suvṛddha ity arthaḥ' (Ska. Bhā.)" ¹⁴

15. the Saṃhitā text is as read from the print; dipsanta and idripavaḥ doubtful [?]

mahitvā — māhātmyena ca | "And by greatness. Here, if mahitvā is taken as qualifying vṛṣatvebhiḥ, the meaning would be 'one who showers desired things of greatness'. 'tvam varṣitā mahadbhir varṣanaiḥ' (Ska. Bhā.)."

Translation: "O Soma — rājñāḥ, of the lord of the Brāhmaṇas. 'Soma is the king of us Brāhmaṇas', according to the śruti (Tai. Brā. 1-8-5-2 [?]). Soma, brought for the sacrifice, purchased, covered with a cloth, is Varuṇa — from the mantra-sign 'varuṇo 'si dhṛtavrata' ['you are Varuṇa, of firm vows']. All the vratāni — the acts such as the Agniṣṭoma — are indeed yours, the purchased one: so in all the combinations (yogeṣu) it is you alone who are the instrument; this is the meaning. Therefore your dhāma, your own lustre, is bṛhat — great, extended — and gabhīram, endowed with depth. Or: this nu is in the sense of comparison; so Yāska has said: 'And again, it has the sense of comparison: vṛkṣasya nu te puruhūta vayāḥ' (Ni. 1-4 [?]). [Thus:] O Soma, your vratāni, your acts, are beneficial to the world, like those of Varuṇa, the shining king. The rest as above. O Soma, you are śuciḥ, the purifier of all. The example: priyo na mitraḥ — as the god Mitra, the friend of all and presiding over the day, is the purifier, so are you. And as Aryaman [aryamevāsi] — the sun that we see — you are dakṣāyyaḥ, the one who makes all grow: as the sun by day makes all grow by light, so by the Soma-rays, niśmṛtamayyaiḥ [as read, doubtful [?]], the whole world, moving and unmoving, being nourished, grows."

Grammar tail of the bhāṣya (noted briefly): śuciṣṭvam — the visarga becomes s [the cited rule, yuṣmat-tat-takṣuḥṣv antahpādam or similar, doubtful [?]]. dakṣāyyaḥ — root dakṣa vṛddhau; the suffix āyya by the Uṇādi sūtra śṛdakṣispr̥higrahibhya āyyaḥ (U. 3-96 [?]).

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.3) ¹⁹

Soma — O Soma-deity; te nu vratāni — all your acts, together; rājñah — of the lord, or of the shining one; varuṇasya — like the acts of Varuṇa (beneficial to the world) —

original p. 336

Or (the Kannada Pratipadārtha gives an alternative): "[vratāni — all the acts; rājñah — of the sovereign; varuṇasya — of Varuṇa, covered with the cloth taken for the sacrifice; te nu — are indeed yours alone (you are the cause of all)]."

tava — your; dhāma — lustre; brhat — vast; gabhīram — endowed with depth; soma — O Soma; tvam — you; priyo na mitraḥ — like a friend who is favourable; śuciḥ asi — you are the purifier of everything; āryamā iva — like Aryaman; dakṣāyyaḥ asi — you are the augments of all.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.3

"O Soma-deity, all your acts are, like the acts of the sovereign Varuṇa, beneficial to the world. Your lustre is vast and endowed with depth. O Soma-deity, like a friend favourable to all, you purify everything. Like Aryaman, you bring everyone to growth."

English Translation ²⁰

"Your acts are like those of king Varuna ; Soma, your glory is great and profound ; you are the purifier of all like the beloved Mitra ; you are the augments [printed "angmenter", sic] of all like Aryaman." — as printed.

सोमोऽस्माकं ब्राह्मणानां राजा ।

somo 'smākaṃ brāhmaṇānāṃ rājā | (Tai. Saṃ. 1-8-10-2 [?], numerals as printed, doubtful)

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Soma is the king of us Brāhmaṇas."

"— the word rājan means 'king of the Brāhmaṇas'; and, as in 'yāgārthamāhṛtaḥ krīto vastreṇāvṛtaḥ somo varuṇaḥ', the Soma purchased for the sacrifice and covered with cloth is well known as Varuṇa. So if it is taken as āvṛtta (turned back [to Varuṇa]), then it means: 'your acts — all the acts such as the Agniṣṭoma — are, in short, the acts of the lord of us all, Varuṇa'. Or, if the indeclinable nu is used in the sense of iva ('like'), taking upamārthe ('in the sense of comparison'), then rājñah — of the sovereign of all the worlds — varuṇasya — of Varuṇa — vratāni nu — 'like the acts that benefit the world', te — your acts too benefit the world."

haṃti rakṣo bādgate paryarātīr varivaḥ kṛṇvan vrajanasya rājā | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-[?]-10 [?], numerals as printed, doubtful; vrajanasya as read [?])

pavitrebhiḥ pavamāno nṛcakṣā rājā devānām uta martyānām | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-[?]-[?] [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Purifying himself through the filters, the beholder of men, the king of gods and of mortals."

"In such places the epithet rājā is applied directly to Soma."

dhāma — "The word dhāman has various meanings, such as lustre, dwelling-place and so on. Here any meaning may be given."

gabhīram — "Deep, impenetrable. Both the dwelling-place and the greatness of the Soma-deity are gabhīra — never wholly comprehended by anyone, and deep in their very nature. This same description in the form of praise, 'brhad gabhīraṃ tava soma dhāma', is also found in R. Saṃ. [9-?]-? [?], in the same order, the sūkta's printed in full there [as read, doubtful [?]]."

śuciḥ — "śocatir jvalati karmaṇaḥ (Ni. 6-[?] [?]) — from the root śuc, which gives the sense 'to shine', the noun śuci is formed. The word śuci has the meanings 'brightness, light'; and 'pure, clean' is also given; the word is produced from the same root. And the Nirukta writer's statement, niśi-kram-asmāt-pāpakam (Ni. 6-[?] [?]) ['sin has been ...(?) from him'; as read, doubtful [?]], is also well known. On these authorities, śuciḥ here is to be understood as 'purity'. As Mitra, the god who presides over the day, purifies all the world by removing darkness and sin, so Soma too is the purifier of all, the remover of sin."

अवस्यतं मुंचतं यन्नो अस्ति तनूषु बद्धं कृतमेनो अस्मत् ।

avasyataṃ muṃcataṃ yan no asti tanūṣu baddhaṃ kṛtam eno asmat | (R. Saṃ. 6-[?]-3 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Desiring [our welfare], release whatever sin done by us is bound in our bodies."

dakṣāyyaḥ — dakṣa vṛddhau | "Although the word dakṣa is used among the names of strength that are instruments of growth, here the meaning is growth itself. dakṣāyyaḥ means 'the author of such growth'. As the sun, in the form of Aryaman, makes the worlds grow with his rays throughout the day, so Soma too, with his rays full of nectar, makes the whole world, moving and unmoving, grow."

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "O king Soma, extend our lives, as the sun extends the days."

Translation: "In the Āgrayaṇa offering, for the oblation to Soma, 'yā te dhāmāni' is the yājyā; prescribed in the section 'āgrayaṇam vrīhiśyāmākayavānām': 'soma yās te mayobhuvo yā te dhāmāni divi yā prthivyām' (Ā. 2-9 [?]). This same Ṛk is the yājyā for the vapā of the animal of the Saumya of the ekādaśina; prescribed: 'yā te dhāmāni divi yā prthivyām uṣālham yutsu prtanāsu papriṃ' (Ā. 3-2 [?]). At the prāyaṇīyā offering it is the yājyā of this same Soma; prescribed: 'tvaṃ soma pra cikito manīṣā yā te dhāmāni divi yā prthivyām' (Ā. 4-3 [?]). — O Soma, whatever dhāmāni, lustres, of yours are in heaven; likewise whatever are on earth; likewise whatever are on the mountains, the rock-heaps that have the nature of hills; likewise whatever are in the plants such as rice and in the waters: with all those lustres united, sumanāḥ — well-minded — aheḷan, not angry, O king Soma, shining Soma, being such, prati grbhāya — receive in return the oblations offered by us."

Grammar tail (noted briefly): yā — the elision of śi by "śe chandasi bahulam"; prthivyām — the case-ending acute by udāttayaṇo hal-pūrvāt; oṣadhīṣu — the lengthening (Pā. 6-3-132 [?]); apsu — the case-ending accent by ūdidam...; sumanāḥ — the final-member initial-acute accent; gr̥bhāya — root grah upādāne; in Chandas the śnā suffix is replaced by śāyac [the cited rule śāyajapi..., partly read [?]]. ²²

"When the oblation belonging to the Soma deity is offered in the Āgrayaṇeṣṭi, this Ṛk, yā te dhāmāni, is to be used as the yājyā mantra; this is shown in the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section called 'āgrayaṇaṃ vr̥hiśyāmākayavānām', by the sūtra 'soma yās te mayobhuvo yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām' (Ā. 2-9 [?]); and in the sacrifice called ekādaśina, at the vapā-offering of the animal for the Soma deity, it is to be used as the yājyā mantra; this is explained by the sūtra 'yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām uṣālhaṃ yutsu pṛtanāsu papriṃ' (Ā. 3-2 [?]). In the Prāyaṇīyeṣṭi also, at the time of offering the oblation to Soma, it is to be used as the yājyā; this is explained by the sūtra 'tvaṃ soma pra cikito manīṣā yā te dhāmāni divi yā pṛthivyām' (Ā. 4-3 [?])."

ahelān — "reḷate, heḷate — since it is included among the 'names of anger' (krodhakarmanāmāni) beginning reḷate, heḷate in the Nirukta (Ni. 2-[?] [?]), heḷan means 'being angry', and ahelān means 'being not angry'. Because of the belief that Agni, Varuṇa, Soma and the other deities punish those who commit sin, and because they know that the favour of those deities will not be obtained [by the sinful], the sacrificers all pray, out of fear of great sin, that those deities not be angry and, not disregarding them, show them favour and do them good."

Translation: "At the full-moon offering, this R̥k tvam soma is the anuvākyā for the ājyabhāga of the Saumya. It is prescribed: 'agnir vṛtrāṇi jaṃghanat' is the anuvākyā of the former ājyabhāga, 'tvam somāsi satpatiḥ' of the latter (Ā. 1-3 [?]); and wherever there is an ājyabhāga with the Vṛtra-slaying R̥ks, this has application in all such places. At the forenoon upasad, it is the anuvākyā for the principal Saumya offering; at the afternoon upasad it is the yājyā of the same. It is prescribed: 'tvam somāsi satpatir gayasphāno amīvahā' — the inversion of the yājyā and anuvākyā (Ā. 4-8 [?]). —

O Soma, you are satpatiḥ: you are the lord of the Brāhmaṇas who abide in sacrificial acts. 'Therefore the Brāhmaṇas have Soma as their king': so says the śruti (Tai. Brā. 1-8-4-1 [?]). Or: you are such a Soma as has the good ones — Svāna and the rest — as his lords, his guardians. So it is handed down: 'He says svāna bhrāja; these indeed guarded Soma in that world' (Tai. Saṃ. 6-1-10-3 [?]). And you, rājā, shining, are vṛtrahā, the slayer of the asura Vṛtra or of enemies. Bhadraḥ, auspicious, kratuḥ, this sacrifice, the Agniṣṭoma and the others: you yourself become that form, since the sacrifices have you as their means."

Grammar tail: satpatiḥ — in the bahuvrīhi the first member keeps its natural accent; in the tatpuruṣa alternative, by patyāv aiśvārye the first member likewise keeps its natural accent.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.5)

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; satpatiḥ asi — you are the lord of the good people who perform sacrificial acts (their protector); uta — and; rājā — the shining one; tvam — you; vṛtrahā — you are the destroyer of the demon Vṛtra.

Or (printed alternative): "[tvam — you; satpatiḥ — the protector of good people, and rājā — sovereign, asi — you are.]" bhadraḥ — the auspicious one; kratuḥ — the sacrifice such as the Agniṣṭoma; tvam (eva) asi — you yourself are.

original p. 345

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.5

"O Soma-deity, you are the lord of the good people who perform sacrifice. And you, the shining one, are the slayer of the demon Vṛtra. You yourself are the sacrifice, such as the Agniṣṭoma, that is auspicious."

"Soma, you are the protector, the sovereign of the pious or even the slayer of vṛitra ; you are holy sacrifice." — as printed.

"When the portion of ghee belonging to the Soma deity is offered in the Paurṇamāseṣṭi (full-moon sacrifice), this R̥k, tvaṃ soma, is to be used as the puronuvākyā mantra; this is explained by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'agnir vṛtrāṇi jaṃghanad iti pūrvasyājyabhāgasyānuvākyā tvaṃ somāsi satpatir ity uttarasya' (Ā. 1-3 [?]). In this way this R̥k has application wherever the oblation is made with reference to Indra in connection with the slaying of Vṛtra. In the upasad sacrifice performed in the morning, in the mantras of the Soma deity, the principal puronuvākyā is this R̥k; this matter is pointed out by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra by the sūtra 'tvaṃ somāsi satpatir gayaspḥāno amīvahā iti viparyāso yājyānuvākyānām' (Ā. 4-8 [?])."

satpatih — satām patih | "Or satām pālayitā; one can take it as a tatpuruṣa; or as a bahuvrīhi, 'santaḥ patayaḥ yasya'."

Translation: "In the Agnicayana rite with the Agni-building, after the animal-offering (puroḍāśa) of the Agnīśomīya, the oblations of the devasuvām ('impellers of the gods') are measured out. There, for the oblation of Soma Vanaspati, tvaṃ ca soma is the anuvākyā; prescribed in the section athāgnīśomīyeṇa: 'tvaṃ ca soma no vaśo brahmā devānāṃ padavīḥ kavīnām' (Ā. 4-11 [?]). — O Soma, if you, our life-medicine (jīvātu), the means of life for us the praisers, vaśaḥ — would desire [us], then we shall not die. How are you? Priyastotraḥ — he whose praises are dear; the sense is that you are to be praised by many. Vanaspatiḥ — you are the lord, the protector, of the forests, in the form of plants and trees. 'Soma is the king of the plants', says the śruti (Tai. Saṃ. 6-1-9-1 [?])."

Grammar tail (clotted; characterized, not transcribed): vaśaḥ — root vaśa kāntau, in the leṭ with sip, the augment aḍ; since the augments are unaccented the accent of the root remains; the ca in tvaṃ ca is the particle caṇ, here in the sense of ced ("if") [as read, doubtful [?]], and from its connexion the nighāta is prohibited [the cited rule nipātair yad yadi hanta... partly read [?]]. jīvātum — root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; the suffix ātu (jīver ātuḥ, U. 1-80 [?]). marāmahe — root mṛṇ prāṇatyāge, śap by vyatyaya.

Soma — O Soma-deity; priyastotraḥ — one who is attached to praise; vanaspatiḥ — the lord of plants and of grains; tvam — you; naḥ — to us; jīvātum — the life-sustaining substance (to give); (tvam) ca — vaśaḥ — if you (graciously) desire it; na marāmahe — we do not die.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.6

"O Soma-deity, you who are fond of praise and are the lord of the plants and of the grains: if you graciously desire to give us the life-sustaining substance, then we do not die at all."

English Translation ³¹

"O Soma, fond of praise, the lord, of plants, you are life to us ; if you wish we will not die." — as printed [the stray comma after "lord" is as printed].

At that time, when the offering is made with reference to the Soma deity and the Vanaspati deity, this mantra tvam ca soma is to be used as the puronuvākyā; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra states it in the section athāgniṣomiyeṇa by the sūtra 'tvam ca soma no vaśo brahmā devānām padavīḥ kavīnām' (Ā. 4-11 [?])."

vaśaḥ — root vaś kāntau; leṭ, second person singular, sip; by itaś ca lopah parasmaipadeṣu (इतश्च लोपः परस्मैपदेषु) the i is elided; by leṭo 'ḍātau (लेटोऽडाटौ) the augment aṭ comes; the s → ru, visarga; by āgamā anudāttāḥ (आगमा अनुदात्ताः) the accent of the root remains. Here ca in tvam ca is the particle caṇ in the sense of ced; its junction with vaśaḥ, a finite verb, would bring nighāta; the nighāta is prevented by nipātail yad yadi hanta... (निपातैर्यद्यदिहन्त — , printed thus; Pā. 8-1-30 [?]). jīvātum — root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; jīver ātuḥ (जीवेरातुः) — the suffix ātu (U. 1-[?] [?]); accusative singular; by the suffix accent the ā is acute. marāmahe — root mṛñ prāṇatyāge; laṭ, first person plural, mahiñ; by ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e (टित आत्मनेपदानां टेरे) the final e; by vyatyayo bahulam (व्यत्ययो बहुलम्) śap — ³²

Translation: "O Soma, to the mahe — the great, the old — ṛtāyate, the person who desires for himself ṛta, the sacrifice, jīvase, in order to live, you bestow bhagam, wealth [fit for enjoyment (the print here is clotted [?])]. Vidadhāsi means 'you make'. And likewise to the young (yūne) who desires the sacrifice you give wealth in order to live."

Grammar tail: mahe from mahat, the loss of the final t being Vedic; the case-ending acute by the vārttika "bṛhanmahator upasaṃkhyānam". yūne — the saṃprasāraṇa by śvayuvamaghonām ataddhite. ṛtāyate — "he wishes ṛtam for himself", the suffix kyac by supa ātmanaḥ kyac; the prohibition of ī and lengthening by na chandasy aputrasya; the lengthening in the Saṃhitā by anyeṣām api dṛśyate; śatr after the laṭ of the kyac-ending stem; the case-ending acute by śatur anumō nadyajādī. jīvase — root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; the suffix ase in the sense of the infinitive [citing tumarthe sesenase..., partly read [?]].

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.7)

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; ṛtāyate — to him who desires the sacrifice; mahe — to the old one too; jīvase — in order to live; dakṣam — fit to be enjoyed; bhagam — wealth; dadhāsi — you graciously give (so); tvam — you; yūne — to the young one too (who desires to perform sacrifice), you give wealth in order to live.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.7

"O Soma-deity, you graciously give wealth, which they need for living and are fit to enjoy, both to the old who desire to bring the sacrificial works to fulfilment and, in the same way, to the young who so desire."

"Soma, you bestow upon him who worships you whether old or young, wealth that he may enjoy and live." — as printed.

ṛtāyate — yajñam ātmana icchate puruṣāya | "Only to the sacrificer who fulfils the sacrifice and desires its fruit are wealth and strength obtained. To the one who does not, there is nothing: this is the meaning. Here: ṛtāyate mahe, ṛtāyate taruṇāya ca dakṣam upabhogasamarthaṃ dhanam vidadhāsi — whether the sacrificer is old or young, you graciously give him wealth fit for enjoyment: so Sāyaṇa explains; mahe bhagaṃ, ṛtāyate yūne balaṃ —

"— vṛddhāya dhanam vā dadāsi": to the old you graciously give wealth, and to the young who desire to perform sacrifice, strength or growth — so Skandasvāmin explains. 'vṛddhāya dhanam dadhāsi | yūne ca balaṃ ca yacchasi' [as printed]: Mādhava too, like Skandasvāmin, explains in this way, and, not making the word dakṣa an attribute of bhaga, gives separate meanings [as read]."

jīvase — "For living." ³⁵

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.7)

mahe — the stem mahat; in the dative singular the form is mahe; in the Saṃhitā the t is elided, Vedic; by the vārttika bṛhanmahator upasaṃkhyānam the case-ending takes the acute. yūne — the stem yuvan; after the dative singular, by śvayuvamaghonām ataddhite (श्रयुवमघोनामतद्धिते, Pā. 6-4-133 [?]) the va would take saṃprasāraṇa, but since the va is followed by a vowel the ya is not changed; va becomes u; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (संप्रसारणाच्च, Pā. 6-1-108 [?]) the preceding form; hence yūne. ṛtāyate — ṛtam ātmana icchati; by supa ātmanaḥ kyac (सुप आत्मनः क्यच्, Pā. 3-1-8 [?]) kyac after the noun ṛta in the desiderative sense; by na chandasy aputrasya (न छन्दस्यपुत्रस्य, Pā. 7-4-35 [?]) neither ī nor lengthening appears; by anyeṣām api dṛśyate (अन्येषामपि दृश्यते, Pā. 6-3-137 [?]) the lengthening

35. printed in English in the source: "for long life."

in the Saṃhitā; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ (सनाद्यन्ता धातवः) the kyac-ending is a root; śatṛ in the sense of the present participle gives ṛtāyat; the dative singular; as the stem has no num, by śatur anumō nadyajādī (शतुस्नुमो नद्यजादी, Pā. 6-1-173 [?]) the case-ending takes the acute. dadhāsi — root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoh; laṭ, second person singular; the nighāta accent. jīvase — root jīva prāṇadhāraṇe; when the sense is that of the infinitive, by tumarthe sesenase... (तुमर्थे सेसेनसेसेन..., Pā. 3-4-9 [?]) the suffix ase; since it ends in a vowel, by kṛn mejantaḥ (कृन्मेजन्तः, Pā. 1-1-39 [?]) it is an indeclinable; by the suffix accent the middle syllable is acute. || 7 ||

Translation: "In the Svastyayanī [offering], this Rk tvam naḥ soma is the anuvākya of the second ājyabhāga. It is prescribed: 'svastyayanyām rakṣitevaṃtāvagne rakṣāṇo aṃhasas tvam naḥ soma viśvataḥ' [as read] (Ā. 3-10 [?]). — O Soma, O king, you who are shining by nature: from all quarters, from every man who wishes to do us agha — evil, and the suffering that is its cause — protect us, guard us. The friend of one like you, tvāvataḥ — of one who is your equal — the man who has attained your friendship, would not perish; surely he would not be destroyed. ॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.8)

Soma — O Soma-deity; rājan — O shining one; tvam — you; aghāyataḥ — from those who, seeking our evil, wish to harm us; viśvataḥ — from all enemies; naḥ — us; rakṣa — protect; tvāvataḥ — of a deity equal to you; sakhā — the friend, the person; na riṣyet — will not be harmed.³⁶

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.8

"O shining Soma-deity, with your power destroy all enemies who wish to harm us by seeking our evil, and protect us. No deity of virtues equal to yours can be harmed. That being so, for us who are directly your friends there is no such thing as destruction."

English Translation³⁷

"O King Soma, defend us from every one seeking to harm us ; the friend of one like you can never perish." — as printed.

aghāyataḥ — aghaṃ pāpaṃ taddhetukaṃ duḥkham asmākaṃ kartum icchataḥ | "Those who wish to cause us suffering, the cause of which is sin, and to injure us."

viśvataḥ

— "From all enemies (protect us)."

tvāvataḥ sakhā — tvāvataḥ | "To one equal to you, sakhā — a friend [is not subject to harm]. kimu vaktavyaṃ tvatsakhā na vinaśyatīti — if even a friend of a deity like you is not harmed, then directly, we who are your friends need hardly say it — there is no harm from enemies: this is the meaning."

na riṣyet — riṣa hiṃsāyām | "The meaning is that there is no possibility of being subject to harm. And so —"

rakṣa — root rakṣ pālana; loṭ, second person singular, ṣip; by serhy apicca (सेह्यपिच्च, Pā. 3-4-87 [?]) hi is the replacement; the śap suffix; by ato heḥ (अतो हेः) the luk of hi; by dvyacos tastiṇaḥ

(द्व्यचोऽतस्तिडः, Pā. 6-3-135 [?]) the vowel is lengthened in the Saṃhitā, since the verb is of two syllables (hence the Saṃhitā's rakṣā) —

"As said in R̥ks such as these, the satisfaction of all the deities, which is the means to the final end of the sacrifice, arises from the drinking of Soma; so Soma himself is the chief cause of the growth of our sacrifice. Therefore there is the prayer 'cause our sacrifice to grow'. Moreover, as described in the R̥ks R. Saṃ.

jujuṣāṇaḥ — root juṣī prītisevanayoh; in the present sense, by chandasi luṇlaṇliṭaḥ (छन्दसि लुङ्लङ्लिटः, Pā. 3-4-6 [?]) the liṭ; by liṭaḥ kānajaṇvā (लिटः कानज्वा, Pā. 3-2-106 [?]) kānac for the liṭ; the root is doubled, the reduplicative keeps halādiḥ śeṣaḥ; by aṭkupvāṇnumvyavāye 'pi [the sūtra read as "āṭkupvāj...", partial] the ṇatva of the n; by cit (चितः, Pā. 6-1-163 [?]) the final-acute.
upāgahi — upa + ā, the preverbs (gatis ca); root gam gatau; loṭ, second person singular, sip; by serhy apicca (सेर्ह्यपिच्च) hi is the replacement; by bahulaṃ chandasi the luk of śap; since by the prescription of non-pit the hi is ñit, by anudāttopadeśa...

asiddhavad atrābhāt (असिद्धवदत्राभात्, Pā. 6-4-22 [?]) the m-elision counts as not having occurred, so the elision of hi by ato heḥ (अतो हेः) does not come; since upa is a gati and ā [a preverb with the same name] follows, by gatiṛ gatau (Pā. 8-1-70 [?]) the preceding preverb (upa) takes the nighāta accent. vr̥dhe — root vr̥dhu vr̥ddhau; after the suffix kvip the word is vr̥dh; the dative singular; by sāvekācas tṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ (सावेकाचस्तृतीयादिर्विभक्तिः, Pā. 6-1-168 [?]) the case-ending takes the acute. || 10 ||

Special Topics of Rik 91.12, continued from p. 364 (Kannada) — the sentence broken at the foot of p. 364 continues: "tuk, tokam, tanayaḥ and the like, since the word gayaḥ is read among the names for offspring (apatya) (Ni. 3-2 [?]), gayaḥ may mean offspring; since it is read among the names for wealth, such as mīlhaṃ, rekṇaḥ (Ni. 2-10 [?]), it may mean wealth; and since it is read among the names for house, such as gayaḥ, kṛvaram, harmyam (Ni. 3-4 [?]), it may mean house. Sāyaṇācārya, in explaining the Ṛk 3-10-3 [?] of the Ṛksaṃhitā, says 'gamyate nivāsāya iti gayam grham, gīyate stūyate iti vā gayam dhanam' ['that to which one goes for dwelling is gaya, the house; or that which is sung, praised, is gaya, wealth']. Besides, he explains gaye in the Ṛk 6-24-2 [?] as 'grham grhagataṃ prāṇijātaṃ vā' ['the house, or the creatures belonging to the house']. Of these three meanings here, any one may be taken. In Skandasvāmin's bhāṣya too: 'sphāyir vṛddhyarthaḥ | apatyasya dhanasya grhasya vā vardhayitā gayasphānaḥ' ['sphāyī has the sense of growth; gayasphānaḥ is the one who makes grow offspring, wealth or house']. Soma too has the epithet gayasādhana, as in —"

saṃī vatsaṃ na mātṛbhiḥ sṛjatā gayasāadhanam | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-104-2 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Release him [Soma] like a calf with the mothers [the waters], the accomplisher of the house [or wealth]."

"— and in this Ṛk too all three meanings may be given."

amīvahā — amu rogeḥ [as read] | "From the word amu that gives the sense 'disease', the word amīva is derived; he who destroys it is well known as amīvahā. Prayers to Soma for the destruction of disease are found in many places, for example —"

इन्द्राय सोम सुषुतः परि स्रवापामीवा भवतु रक्षसा सह ।

indrāya soma suṣutaḥ pari sravāpāmīvā bhavatu rakṣasā saha | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-85-1 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Well pressed, O Soma, flow clear for Indra; let disease be driven off together with the Rakṣas."

सोमारुद्रा वि वृहतं विषूचीममीवा या नो गयमाविवेश ।

somārudrā vi vṛhataṃ viṣūcīm amīvā yā no gayam āvivesa | (R. Saṃ. 6-74-2 [?]; the final word of the citation is printed āveśa, read as āviveśa [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "O Soma and Rudra, tear apart the spreading disease that has entered our house [or wealth]."

"— in these Ṛks Soma is prayed to for help in destroying disease. Amīvahā also means the destroyer of harmful enemies."

vasuvit — dhanasya prāpayitā | "One who brings wealth together. The word vasu also means food (Ni. 2-9 [?]); therefore he may also be the giver of food. The names vasuvit, hiraṇyavit, govit are well known of Soma, for example —"

govit pavasva vasuvid dhirāṇyavid retodhā indo bhuvaneṣv arpitah | (R. Saṃ. 9-86-39 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Flow clear, finder of cows, finder of wealth, finder of gold, bearer of seed, O Indu, placed in the worlds."

"— in this Ṛk all three of these epithets occur. In the Ṛk 3-40-6 [?] he is called rayipatiḥ ('lord of wealth')."

original p. 366

puṣṭivardhanah — puṣṭeḥ saṃpado vardhayitā | "Because he destroys all diseases and grants wealth and prosperity, 'he who increases nourishment of every kind' is the meaning."

sumitraḥ — śobhanāni mitrāṇi yasya saḥ | "One who has excellent friends: this is the meaning. Or śobhanānām mitrāṇām kartā: one who provides good friends."

gayasphānaḥ — root sphāyī vṛddhau, a root with the causative sense included (the sense of impelling is contained in it); the suffix lyuṭ; when a y is intended, by vyatyayo bahulam (बहुलम्) the y of the root is elided; gayasya sphānaḥ; by gati-kāra-kopapadāt kṛt (Pā. 6-2-139 [?]) the final member, a kṛdanta, keeps its natural accent. Since in this mantra the four words beginning with this one all have a kṛdanta final member, the same sūtra gives the natural accent of the final member everywhere. amīvahā — amīvānām hantā; root han himsā-gatyoh; by anyebhyo 'pi dṛśyate (अन्येभ्योऽपि दृश्यते, Pā. 3-2-178 [?]) the suffix kvip; the stem amīvahan; the nominative singular. vasuvit — root vidḷ lābhe; this too has the causative sense included; the suffix kvip. puṣṭivardhanaḥ — puṣṭeḥ vardhayitā; root vṛdhu vṛddhau; the sense of the causative included; then lyuṭ; by yuvor anākau (युवोरनाकौ, Pā. 7-1-1 [?]) ana for yu. sumitraḥ — śobhanāni mitrāṇi yasya saḥ; by nañsubhyām (नञ्सुभ्याम्, Pā. 6-2-172 [?]) the final syllable of the final member is acute. ॥ 12 ॥

Translation: "O Soma, in our hṛdi — our heart — rārandhi, delight; here the comparison is given: gāvo na — as cows delight, facing [the food], in the yavaseṣu, the good pastures; marya iva — or as a mortal man, one subject to death, delights in his own okye, his own house, with his sons and others: so, satisfied with the oblation we give, abide with us alone, and go nowhere else — this is the intention of the two comparisons."

Grammar tail (clotted in the print; characterized, not transcribed): rarandhi — root ramu krīḍāyām; the parasmaipada by vyatyaya; bahulaṃ chandasi — ślu for śap; by chandasy ubhayathā the hi is ārdhadhātuka, and not being ñit, hi becomes dhi [the cited rule añitka... partly read [?]]; by ser hy apicca, since hi is non-pit, its own accent remains; the lengthening of the reduplicative is Vedic. āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat — the preceding vocative counts as non-existent, so the nighāta, which presupposes a preceding word, does not occur. marya iva — the word marya, ending in the suffix yat, is irregularly formed [in the section beginning chandasi niṣkarkya...]; by yato 'nāvaḥ the initial-acute. okye — root uca samavāye; "ucyate samaveyate prāpyata ity okyaṃ grhaṃ"; the suffix nyat by ṛhaloṇ yat; the ku substitution by cajoḥ ku ghīṇyatoḥ; tī — svarita.

Soma — O Soma-deity; yavaseṣu — in green pastures; ā — all around; gāvo na — like cows who delight; sve okye — in his own house; marya iva — like a man (with his sons and others), in contentment delighting; tvam — you; naḥ — our; hṛdi — in the heart; rarandhi (rārandhi) — delight.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.13

"O Soma-deity, as cows, entering the rich green pastures, without going out, delight there; and as a man in his own house, with his sons, grandsons and the rest, delights in contentment without wishing to go elsewhere: so you, abiding in our heart, with no other going, delight in contentment." ⁴⁴

original p. 368

English Translation ⁴⁵

"Soma, dwell happy in our hearts, like cattle in fresh pastures, like men in their own abodes." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.13)

okye — oka iti nivāsanāmocyate [as read] (Ni. 3-3 [?]) | "A dwelling-place is called oka. sve okye means 'in one's own house'. To show that a man has complete self-regard (abhimāna) in his own house, the author of the Nirukta gives an example (R. Saṃ. 6-4-8 [?]): 'atha sa okaḥ punar eva tad eti yata āgato bhavati' (Ni. 3-3 [?]) [as read]. Even if one has gone abroad, one's self-regard is in the house; one returns there; so one's own house is the object of complete self-regard. In this Rk the ṛṣi prays to Soma to keep that very self-regard and independence in our heart and to show affection."

maryaḥ — martyo manuṣyo maraṇadharmā (Ni. 2-[?] [?]) | "One whose nature is to die: hence the name marya."

rarandhi (rārandhi) — ramu krīḍāyām | "'Sport and experience delight' is the meaning: as delight is obtained by cattle in green pastures, and by a man in his own house, so may you obtain that very delight in our heart."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.13)

44. The English translation and Special Topics of 91.13 begin on p. 368.

45. printed in English in the source; Rik 91.13

rarandhi — root ramu krīḍāyām; by vyatyayo bahulam (व्यत्ययो बहुलम्) the parasmaipada; loṭ, second person singular, sip; hi for it; by bahulam chandasi ślu for śap; by ślau (श्लौ, Pā. 6-1-10 [?]) the root is doubled; in the reduplicative halādiḥ śeṣaḥ. When rarama + hi has come, by chandasy ubhayathā (छन्दस्युभयथा, Pā. 3-4-117 [?]) hi has the name ārdhadhātuka, and, not being ñit [print: "jit"?], by ajantāc ca (as read, Pā. 6-4-103 [?]) hi has dhi as its replacement; on this account, because it is not ñit, the nasal m of the root is not elided by anudāttopadeśa...; by naś cāpadāntasya jhali (नश्चापदान्तस्य झलि) the m becomes anusvāra [i.e. n]: hence rarandhi. As soma, a vocative, stands before, by āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat (Pā. 8-1-72 [?]) it counts as non-existent, and by tiṅ atīṇaḥ (Pā. 8-1-28 [?]) there is no nighāta. Since the non-pit (apit) was prescribed, the suffix accent comes; then the final syllable of rarandhi is acute. In the Saṃhitā, the lengthening of the reduplicative is Vedic.

hr̥di — the word hr̥daya; the locative singular follows; by padd annomās hr̥n... (पदन्नोमास्हृन्..., as printed, Pā. 6-1-63 [?]) the replacement hr̥d; by ūḍidaṃ padādi (Pā. 6-1-171, numerals read "६-१-१७१" in the print) the case-ending takes the acute.⁴⁶ marya iva — by chandasi niṣkarkyadeva... (as printed, Pā. 3-1-123 [?]) the word marya is formed irregularly, ending in the suffix yat; by yato 'nāvaḥ (यतोऽनावः, Pā. 6-1-213 [?]) the svārīta is set aside and the initial-acute accent comes. okye — root uca samavāye; "ucyate samaveyate prāpyate iti okyaṃ gr̥ham" (the house, a dwelling-place); by ṛhaloṇ yat (ऋहलोर्ण्यत्, Pā. 3-1-124 [?]) the suffix nyat; by pugantalaghūpadhasya ca the guṇa of the light penultimate

46. This clears the doubt recorded on p. 343 over the number of the same sūtra.

before the suffix; by cajoḥ ku ghinyatoḥ (चजोः कुघिण्यतोः, Pā. 7-3-52 [?]) the ku substitution of the root's c, caused by the ṇit suffix: hence okya. As the suffix is tit, by tit svaritam (तित्स्वरितम्, Pā. 6-1-185 [?]) the svarita accent. The locative singular. || 13 ||

deva — O shining one; Soma — O Soma-deity; tava — your; sakhye — in friendship [as its cause]; yaḥ martyaḥ — whichever sacrificer; rāraṇat — praises you with a hymn in the form of the sūkta; taṃ — that sacrificer; kaviḥ — one of divine sight; dakṣaḥ — you, capable of every task; sacate — you serve (you favour).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.14

English Translation ⁴⁸

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.14)

rāraṇat — raṇati etatsūktarūpeṇa tvāṃ stauti | "Sāyaṇa gives the meaning 'he praises you in the form of this sūkta'. From the root raṇa śabde, which gives the sense of sound, he shows this form's derivation and takes the word to be 'a sound in the form of a hymn'. But Skandasvāmin's meaning seems more apt than this: 'rāraṇat — atyantaṃ ramate', 'he delights exceedingly'. If one looks at the context, the sense that 'we experience the happiness that is the fruit of friendship with you' is natural. Such senses of delight are found in Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-[?]-[?] [?], and also —" martyaḥ — "Like the word marya: 'one subject to death, a human being'."

taṃ dakṣaḥ sacate kaviḥ — "For this latter half of the R̥k, Sāyaṇa's construction is one way, and Skandasvāmin's is another. kaviḥ — the wise, or far-seeing; dakṣaḥ — you, capable of every task; taṃ — that sacrificer; sacate — you serve, that is, you favour: so Sāyaṇa. Skandasvāmin explains: kaviḥ — the sacrificer, the intelligent one; taṃ dakṣaḥ — that strength, or that growth; sacate — he enjoys, that is, he experiences."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.14)

sakhye — sakhyuḥ bhāvaḥ sakhyam; by sakhyur yaḥ (सख्युर्यः, Pā. 5-1-126 [?]) the suffix ya; by the suffix accent the final syllable is acute. raraṇat — root raṇa śabde; leṭ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca lopaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. 3-4-97 [?]) the i is elided; by bahulaṃ chandasi ślu for śap; by ślau the doubling of the root; the reduplicative keeps its first consonant and vowel (ādir halaḥ śeṣaḥ); by leṭo 'dātau the augment aṭ for the suffix. Since yaḥ ("who") precedes and is related, by yadvṛttān nityam (यद्वृत्तान्नित्यम्, Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited; by chandasy ubhayathā the suffix has the name ārdhadhātuka, so that for the non-iṭ sārvadhātuka beginning with a vowel the initial-acute that abhyastānām ādiḥ (Pā. 6-1-189 [?]) would give does not come; the accent of the root remains; the reduplicative is short in the Pada by Vedic usage [the Saṃhitā prints it long]. sacate — root śaca samavāye; by dhātvādeḥ ṣaḥ saḥ the initial ṣ becomes s; by vyatyayo bahulam the third-person singular suffix replaces the second-person singular; by ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e the final e; by kartari śap the śap; the nighāta since a finite verb follows a word. || 14 ||

Translation: "O Soma, protect us from abhiśasti — from reproach, from censure in the form of curses: uruṣya, guard. 'The root uruṣya is a verb of protecting', says Yāska (Ni. 5-23 [?]). And from aṃhas, the sin committed by us, ni pāhi — guard us thoroughly. Having thus removed our sin, be, suśevaḥ, endowed with the excellent happiness that is to be given to us; edhi, be a well-wisher."

Grammar tail: abhiśasteḥ — root śaṃsu stutau; the suffix ktin in the abstract sense; tādau ca — the preverb keeps its natural accent. edhi — root asa bhuvi; the hi replaces sip in the loṭ; since it is a jī [as read], by śnasor allopaḥ the a is elided; by ghvasor eddhāv abhyāsalopas ca the s becomes e; by asiddhavad atrābhāt that [elision] counts as not having occurred, and by hujhalbhyo her dhiḥ the replacement dhi for hi.

uruṣya — uruṣyatī rakṣākarmā (Ni. 5-23 [?]) | "uruṣya means 'protect'. In many Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-[?]-3 [?]; 8-[?]-[?] [?] this word occurs in the sense of 'protect'."

"The three Ṛks beginning ā pyāyasva sametu te are used at the grāvastotra, that is, when the pressing stones that crush the Soma-creeper are praised; so says the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra 'ā pyāyasva sametu te saṃ te payāṃsi sam u yantu vājā' (Ā. 1-10 [?]). Also, at the filling of the camasa vessel with Soma-juice, there is application for this Ṛk; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra makes it clear in the sūtra 'ā pyāyasva sametu te saṃ te payāṃsi sam u yantu vājā iti camasānādyopādyaṇ'."

vājasya — "The word vāja is read in the Nirukta among the names of food and among the names of battle. The distinctive feature of this word has been told earlier. Here vājasya means 'of food'."

saṃgathe — "This word is read in the Nirukta (Ni. 2-[?] [?]) among the names of battle. The meaning 'coming together', i.e. 'joining', beyond that 'battle', is one view. But here saṃgathe means 'in the gathering', or 'in the bringing and joining together for us'."

Translation: "...this Ṛk is also applied at the [swelling] of the camasa cups; it is prescribed: 'saṃ te payāṃsi sam u yantu vājā iti camasān ādyopādyān' (Ā. 5-6 [?]). — O Soma, abhimātiṣāhaḥ, the slayer of the abhimātis, the enemies: let the payāṃsi, the milks that serve to feed, saṃ yantu, come together to you who are such. And let vājāḥ, the foods in the form of oblations, come together to you. And let vṛṣṇyāni, the potencies, come together. O Soma, being āpyāyamānaḥ, growing on every side, for our immortality, for our undying, dhiṣva — hold, in heaven (divi, in the sky, in svarga), the uttamāni śravāṃsi, the highest, the choicest foods that are to be enjoyed by us, or the foods in the form of oblations."

Grammar tail: te — "the mention of the action should be made [by vārttika]"; since the object is a recipient (saṃpradāna), the genitive stands in the sense of the dative. abhimātiṣāhaḥ — root śaha abhibhavane; in Chandas the suffix ṇvi (by chandasi sahaḥ); ṣatva because it belongs to the suṣāmādi group. amṛtāya — by nañ jaramaramitramṛtāḥ the final member's initial-acute. uttamāni — tamap in the superlative sense, after the word ut, expressing the means of 'highest' action; by uttamaśaśvattamau sarvatra (Pā. 6-1-160 [?]) the final-acute, since it is listed in the uñchādi group. dhiṣva — by sudhita vasudhita nemadhita dhiṣva dhiṣīya ca (Pā. 7-4-45 [?]) the dhi formation is irregular.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.18)

abhimātiṣāhaḥ — O Soma-deity, destroyer of enemies; te — to you (towards you); payāṃsi — (protective) milks; saṃ yantu — flow all around and come together; vājāḥ u saṃ — may the foods in the form of oblations also come together to you; vṛṣṇyāni saṃ — may potencies also fill you; Soma — O Soma-deity; amṛtāya — so that there may be no death for (us); āpyāyamānaḥ — growing all around; divi — in heaven; uttamāni — excellent; śravāṃsi — foods; dhiṣva — obtain.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.18

"O Soma-deity, may protective streams of milk flow all around to you who destroy your enemies. May the foods in the form of oblations and the potencies also come and fill you. So that we may be free from death, growing all around, obtain for us excellent foods in heaven."

English Translation ⁵⁶

"May the milky [printed "milky uices", the j of "juices" lost] flow around you ; may sacrificial offerings and vigour be concentrated in the destroyer of foes ; and, being fully nourished, Soma, provide excellent foods in heaven for our immortality." — as printed (the first line is rendered "may the milky uices flow around you"; the missing j is a misprint [sic]).

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.18)

"When the offering to the Soma deity is made in the homas called patnīsaṃyāja, this Ṛk, saṃ te payāṃsi, is to be used as the yājyā mantra; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra explains it by the sūtra 'saṃ te payāṃsi sam u yantu vājā iha tvaṣṭāram agriyam' (Ā. 1-10 [?]). The Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows the application of this Ṛk in the camasāpyāyana as well, by the sūtra 'saṃ te payāṃsi sam u yantu vājā iti camasān ādyopādyān' (Ā. 5-6 [?])."

abhimātiṣāhaḥ — abhiṭaḥ hiṃsantīty abhimātayaḥ | teṣāṃ abhibhavitā | "Those who harm on every side are abhimātis, enemies; their conqueror: the destroyer of enemies who injure from every side — this is the meaning."

पाप्मा वा अभिमातिः ।

pāpmā vā abhimātiḥ | (Tai. Saṃ. 2-1-3-5 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Sin indeed is the enemy [abhimāti]."

"— by such śruti-sentences the sinner, too, is abhimāti. The enemy too, who does not perform sacrifice and the like, is a sinner."

— "Protective milks, or waters in the form of rain."

amṛtāya — "So that there may be no death. Or the word amṛta is the name of the deities: 'devatārtham' (Ska. Bhā.) — 'for the sake of the deities' — is the meaning he gives."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.18)

te — in the sūtra that lays down the name saṃpradāna, from the statement "kriyāgrahaṇaṃ kartavyam" (the mention of the action must be made) the name saṃpradāna arises here, and so the genitive stands in the sense of the dative; by te mayāveka vacanasya (ते मयावेकवचनस्य, Pā. 8-1-22 [?]) te is the replacement for the singular of yuṣmad. yantu — root iṇ gatau; loṭ, third person plural; anta for jhi; utva; by iko yaṇ the yaṇ replacement; the tiñ-nighāta. vṛṣṇyāni — explained in the sixteenth Ṛk of this very sūkta. abhimātiṣāhaḥ — root saha abhibhave; by chandasi sahaḥ (Pā. 3-2-63 [?]) the suffix ṇvi; in ṇvi, the whole of the suffix is elided (sarvalopa); since it is ṇit, by ata upadhāyāḥ (Pā. 7-2-116 [?]) the penultimate a of the root is lengthened [vṛddhi]: sāh; abhimātīnām sāt — abhimātiṣāt; since it is read in the suṣāmādi list, the s takes ṣatva; the plural [form] ...

Translation: "In the somapravahana, this is the Ṛk yā te dhāmāni; prescribed: 'yā te dhāmāni haviṣā yajantīmām dhiyam śikṣamāṇasya deveti nihite paridadhyāt' (Ā. 4-4 [?]). It is also the yājyā for the oblation of the animal of the Saumya of the ekādaśin; prescribed in the section pradānānām: 'aśālham yutsu pṛtanāsu papriṃ yā te dhāmāni haviṣā yajanti' (Ā. 3-2 [?]). — O Soma, whichever of your dhāmāni, lustres, that are established in heaven and elsewhere, the sacrificers yajanti, worship with oblations such as the caru and the puroḍāśa: may all those lustres of yours paribhūḥ astu, surround and fill our sacrifice, the adhvara [the parito bhāvayitryaṇi clause is clotted [?]]. Or: may our sacrificer be the paribhūḥ of all those lustres of yours, the one who receives and accepts, by sacrifice, the sacrifice — 'paripūrṇo bhavati': the meaning is 'accepting'. Endowed with such lustres, pra cara, go forth to duryān, our houses marked by the eastern hall and the like — 'houses are indeed duryāḥ', says the śruti. How are you? Gayasphānaḥ — the augments of house, of wealth; prataraṇaḥ — the one who carries over from sin; suvīraḥ — endowed with excellent heroes, men; avīrahā — vīrāḥ are sons; the non-killer of them."

Grammar tail (partly clotted): paribhūḥ — the root bhū prāptau; the suffix kvip; by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. 3-1-85 [?]) a change of number and gender [the verb astu taking the singular for a plural subject]. gayasphānaḥ — gaya is a name of the house and of wealth; the augments of them; the lyuṭ in the agent sense by kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam, with the Vedic loss of y. avīrahā — vīrāṇām hantā vīrahā; na vīrahā avīrahā.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.19) ⁵⁹

Soma — O Soma-deity; te — your; yā dhāmāni — (spread over the heavenly world and the others) whichever lustres; haviṣā — with the caru, puroḍāśa and the like; yajanti — (sacrificers) worship —

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.19

"O Soma-deity, whichever of your lustres that are spread over the heavenly world and the rest, which the sacrificers worship with caru, puroḍāśa and the like — may all those lustres surround and fill our sacrifice. You, the augments of our wealth, who carry us

59. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 383

60. the Pratipadārtha continues:

across sin and difficulty, who are together with excellent heroes, and the non-killer of our heroic sons: come, with all those lustres of yours, to these our ancient houses."

English Translation ⁶¹

"Whichever of your glories, men worship with oblations, may our sacrifice be invested with them all ; Soma, come to our houses, you are the bestower of wealth, the transporter of difficulties ; you are attended by valiant heroes, the non-destroyer of progeny." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 91.19)

"In the rite called Somapravahaṇa, this Ṛk, yā te dhāmāni, is to be used; so it is explained by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra 'yā te dhāmāni haviṣā yajantīmāṃ dhiyaṃ śikṣamāṇasya deveti nihite paridadhyāt' (Ā. 4-4 [?]). In the sacrifice called ekādaśin, in the animal offering for the Soma deity, this Ṛk is to be used as the yājyā mantra; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section pradānānām, shows it by the sūtra 'aśālhaṃ yutsu pṛtanāsu papriṃ yā te dhāmāni haviṣā yajanti' (Ā. 3-2 [?])."

dhāmāni — "The word dhāman has such meanings as place, name, birth, lustre. Their explanation has been learned in detail in the commentary on Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?]."

paribhūḥ astu — "'May [they] surround and fill': that is, may all your powers surround and fill our sacrificial ground — this is the sense. paribhūḥ has this one meaning —

original p. 385

"— 'complete': by the rule 'paripūrṇo bhavati; sarvatra parigrahārthe' [as read [?]], let it be accepted accordingly: that is, 'you come with all your powers and accept this sacrifice of ours' is the idea. 'yāni tava yaṣṭṛṇi dhāmāni taiḥ sarvair imaṃ yajñam parighāṇe ty arthaḥ' (Ska. Bhā.) [as read]. Besides this, Sāyaṇa,

61. printed in English in the source; Rik 91.19

keeping the sense parigraha, makes another construction: 'sarveṣāṃ dhāmnāṃ yajamānaḥ svikartā astu' — that is, he explains that the sacrificer may be the receiver of all those powers of yours. For a detailed discussion of this word see Ṛg. Saṃ. Part 1, pp. 633–634 [as printed]."

gayasphānaḥ

— "The augments of house or of wealth; the commentary on this word was learned in detail in the commentary on Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?]."

prataraṇaḥ — prakarṣeṇa duriāt tārayitā | "Sāyaṇa gives the sense 'one who carries over fully from sin'. Skandasvāmin explains 'tiratir atra vṛddhyarthaḥ | vardhayitā ca sarvārthānām' — 'the root tṛ here has the sense of growth: and the one who causes all desired things to grow'. This meaning is the more acceptable, because in other places too, when the preverb pra is joined to the root tṛ, the sense 'make [it] grow' is generally seen. For example —"

सोम राजन्प्र ण आयूंषि तारीरहानीव सूर्यो वासराणि ।

soma rājan pra ṇa āyūṃṣi tārīr ahānīva sūryo vāsarāṇi | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-48-2 [?]; the same Ṛk as cited on pp. 337 and 349 — the three numerals read differently [?])

क्रत्वे दक्षाय नो हि नु प्र ण [?] आयूंषि तारिषः ।

kratve dakṣāya no hi nu pra ṇa [?] āyūṃṣi tāriṣaḥ | (Vā. Saṃ. 34-8 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read, doubtful [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for both): "Extend our lives, as the sun extends the days; ... for strength and skill [extend] our lives."

"— in such places everywhere, pravardhaya — 'cause to grow' — is the meaning (Ni. 11-10 [?])."

duryān — "gayah, kṛvaram, gartah [read gayah, kṛdarah, gartah] and so on being read among the names of houses (Ni. 3-13 [?] — the numeral read as "३-१३", whereas the same list was given on p. 365 as "३-४" [?]), this word means 'houses'."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 91.19)

yajanti — root yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu; laṭ, third person plural; since yā precedes and is related, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited; by the accent of the root, the initial-acute. tā — the word tad; in the neuter plural, by śeś chandasi bahulam the śi is elided; so also viśvā.

paribhūḥ — root bhū prāptau; by kvip ca (क्विप् च, Pā. 3-2-76 [?]) the suffix kvip; by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. 3-1-85 [?]) a change of gender and number of the qualified word has come: in place of the neuter plural the singular common to feminine and masculine; by gatikārapadāt kṛt (गतिकारकोपपदात्कृत्) the kṛdanta final member keeps its natural accent. astu — root as bhuvī; loṭ, third person; by vyatyayo bahulam the singular suffix for the plural; the nighāta since it follows a word. gayasphānaḥ — gaya is a name of house or of wealth; gayānām sphāyitā vardhayitā; root ohpyāyī vṛddhau; by kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam (Pā. 3-3-113 [?]) the suffix lyuṭ; in Chandas the y of the root is elided; by yuvor anākau the replacement ana; by gatikārapadāt kṛt the final member's natural accent. suvīraḥ — by nañsubhyām the final-member final-acute would be obtained, but by vīravīryau ca (वीरवीर्यौ च, Pā. 6-2-120 [?]) the final member takes the initial-acute. avīrahā — vīrāṇām hantā vīrahā; when vīra is the upapada, kvip after han; na vīrahā avīrahā; by tatpuruṣe tulyārthatṛtiyā... (तत्पुरुषे तुल्यार्थः..., Pā.

6-2-2 [?]) the first member (nañ) keeps its natural accent. cara — root cara gatibhakṣaṇayoḥ; loṭ, second person singular; the tiñ-nighāta. || 19 ||

Translation: "At the mahāpitṛyajña, in the offering of Soma Pitṛmat, somo dhenum is the second anuvākyā; for each oblation two anuvākyās are prescribed together; so it is prescribed in the section dakṣiṇāgneḥ: 'somo dhenum somo arvantam āsum tvam soma pitṛbhiḥ saṃvidānaḥ' (Ā. 2-19 [?]). — The sacrificer who dadāsat, gives to Soma foods in the form of oblations: to that sacrificer Soma gives a milch-cow with her calf; likewise he gives āśum, a swift-going arvantam, a horse; and likewise a vīram, a son, to this sacrificer. What sort of son? Karmanyam — skilled in worldly works; sadanyam — sadana is the house: fit for it, i.e. skilled in the affairs of the house; vidathyam — the vidathāḥ are sacrifices, 'in which the gods are known': fit for them, i.e. devoted to the performance of such sacrifices as the new-moon and full-moon; sabheyam — good in the assembly, i.e. versed in all the śāstras; pitṛśravaṇam — the son through whom the father is heard of, becomes famous."

Grammar tail: karmanyam — karmasu sādhuḥ karmanyaḥ; the suffix yat in the sense 'good at that' (Pā. 4-4-98 [?]); by ye cābhāvakarmaṇoḥ the prakṛtibhāva; by tit svaritam the svarita. Likewise the suffix yat in the later words. sabheyam — by ḍhaś chandasi (Pā. 4-4-106 [?]) the suffix ḍha in the sense 'good there'. dadāśat — root dāśa dāne; in the leṭ the augment aṭ; by bahulaṃ chandasi ślu for śap.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.20) ⁶²

yaḥ — whichever sacrificer; dadāśat — (oblations) offers; asmai (tasmai) — to that sacrificer; somaḥ — Soma-deity; dhenum — (together with the calf) a milch cow; dadāti — gives; somaḥ — Soma-deity; āśum — swiftly; arvantam — a horse; dadāti — gives; somaḥ — Soma-deity —

original p. 388

"karmanyam — one skilled in (worldly) tasks; sadanyam — one expert in house-affairs; vidathyam — (devoted to new-moon and full-moon) sacrificial works; sabheyam — (through knowledge of all śāstras) an ornament of the assembly; pitṛśravaṇam — one who makes his father's name well known; vīram — a worthy son — he gives."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.20

"To the sacrificer who offers oblations, the Soma-deity graciously gives a milch cow together with her calf, a swift-running horse; and also a worthy son, skilled in worldly tasks, expert in house-affairs, devoted to such sacrificial works as the new-moon and full-moon, an ornament of the assembly of the learned through the knowledge of all the śāstras, and one who makes his father's name well known and brings his father honour."

English Translation ⁶³

"To him who presents offerings, Soma gives a milch-cow, a swift horse, and a son who is able in affairs, skilful in domestic concerns, diligent in worships, eminent in Society and who is an honour to his father." — as printed.

"In the mahāpitṛyajña, with reference to the deity Soma Pitṛmān, when the oblation is made, this Ṛk somo dhenum is to be used as the puronuvākyā mantra, and for each separate oblation two puronuvākyā mantras are to be applied together; so the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra indicates in the section tathaiva dakṣiṇāgneḥ by the sūtra 'somo dhenum somo arvantam āśum tvam soma pitṛbhiḥ saṃvidānaḥ' (Ā. 2-19 [?])."

arvantam — "atyaḥ, hayaḥ, arvā, and so on: it is read among the names of the horse (Ni. 1-12 [?])."

vidathyam — vidanty eṣu devān iti vidathāḥ | "Since in the sacrifices the nature of the deities is well known, vidatha means 'sacrifice'; one who is engaged in sacrifices of the kind of the new-moon and full-moon is called vidathya. In explaining the Ṛk 'vidathāni pracodayan' (Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-32-2 [?]; the numerals read "२-३२-७" [?]), the author of the Nirukta says 'vidathāni vedanāni (Ni. 2-3 [?]), 'knowledges' — as he has explained. Therefore one engaged in sacrifices that are means of such knowledge is called vidathya."

sabheyam — "vidvatsabhāyāṃ yogyaḥ — one fit for the assembly of the learned; that is, skilled in all the śāstras: this is the meaning."

vidathyam sabheyam

— "Skandasvāmin explains these two words together, one as the attribute and the other as the qualified, as 'one fit for the assembly in which there are scholars', that is, 'one who is versed in the śāstras'."

pitṛśravaṇam — "One who causes his father's name to be heard by all — that is, one who makes his father's name well known: so the bhāṣya-writer; Skandasvāmin explains: 'one who hears what the fathers say, and so is well-trained [vinīta]'. "

arvantam — root ṛ gatau; the suffix vanip; the guṇa of the root on that account; the stem arvan; since the accusative singular follows, by arvaṇas trasāvanañah (अर्वणस्त्रसावनञः [?], Pā. 6-4-127 [?]) the replacement ṭṛ for the final; since it is ugit the augment num; the nasal becomes anusvāra by parasavarṇa: arvantam. karmanyam — karmasu sādhuḥ karmanyah; by tatra sādhuḥ (तत्र साधु; Pā. 4-4-98 [?]) the suffix yat in the sense 'good at that'; when karman + ya are formed, by ye cābhāvakarmaṇoḥ (Pā. 6-4-168 [?]) the prakṛtibhāva of the an-ending stem; by tit svaritam (Pā. 6-1-185 [?]) the svarita accent. Likewise the suffix yat in sadanyam, vidathyam; the svarita accent. dadāti — root ḍudāñ dāne, of the juhotyādi class; laṭ, third person singular; the nighāta accent. sabheyam — sabhāyāṃ sādhuḥ sabheyah; by ḍhas chandasi (Pā. 4-4-106 [?]) the suffix ḍha in the sense 'good there'; by āyaneyīniyayaḥ phadḥakhachaghām (आयनेयीनीययः..., Pā. 7-1-2 [?]) the replacement eya for ḍha; by yasyeti ca (यस्येति च, Pā. 6-4-148 [?]) the ā of sabhā is elided; by the suffix accent the e is acute. dadāsat — root dāśa dāne; leṭ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca lopah the i is elided; by leṭo 'dāṭau the augment aṭ; by bahulaṃ chandasi ślu for śap; by ślau the doubling of the root; in the reduplicative ādir halaḥ śeṣaḥ; shortening. Since yaḥ precedes and is related, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited; by abhyastānām ādiḥ (Pā. 6-1-189 [?]) the initial-acute. || 20 ||

65. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 391

aṣālham — saha abhibhave | "sālha means 'one who is defeated'; aṣālha means one who is not defeated, that is, one who is apratipatita [as read, 'not fallen' [?]] — such is the meaning."

prtanāsu — "Since raṇaḥ, vivāk, vikhādaḥ and the like are read among the names of battle (Ni. 2-[?] [?]), prtanāḥ means 'battle'. prtanāsu — in battles; this word is always used in the plural."

papriṃ — "From the root pyā, which gives the sense of 'to fill' (pyā pālanapūraṇayoh) [as read [?]], the word papri is formed: 'the filler', that is, one who makes full. Sāyaṇa explains this word as jayasya pūrayitāram — one who fills [for us] with victory. Skandasvāmin takes the first meaning and explains, saṃgrāmeṣu yaṣṭṛṇām stotṛṇām ca pālayitāram — the protector, in battles, of sacrificers and praisers. The Ṛgarthadīpikā too has pālayitāram. Whichever meaning is taken here makes no difference. In Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-3 [?] the phrase papriḥ randhasaḥ ['the giver of food'] also occurs, so papri means 'giver of food' as well."

svarṣām — svargasya sanitāram dātāram | "One who makes heaven obtainable, the giver of heaven."

apsām — apām vṛṣṭilakṣaṇānām udakānām dātāram | "One who gives the waters that are rain. Or, from psā bhakṣaṇe: psāti bhakṣayatīti psāḥ; na vidyate psā asyeti: he who has no devourer, and therefore is the favourer of all — such is the sense they give. In Ṛks where the epithet apsāḥ generally occurs, such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-[?]-[?] [?]; 7-[?]-[?] [?]; 9-[?]-1 [?] and the like, apsāḥ means apām dātā, the giver of waters. Therefore the same meaning is natural here too."

vṛjanasya gopām — "vṛjana means 'strength' (Ni. 2-9 [?]): the protector of strength."

bhareṣujām — "The word bhara is read among the names of battle (Ni. 2-17 [?]); bhareṣu means 'in battles'. 'janir atra sāmartyāj jayater arthe' [as read] — 'here jan in the sense of ji, to conquer': saṃgrāmeṣu jetāram, 'conqueror in battles', so Skandasvāmin explains; and Sāyaṇa, 'bhriyante eṣu havīmṣīti bharāḥ yāgāḥ; teṣu prādurbhavantam': bharāḥ are sacrifices, because the oblations are borne (bhr) in them; bhareṣujām is 'one who is born in them', that is, 'manifest in the sacrifices'."

Or, from the root psā bhakṣaṇe: psāti bhakṣayati iti psāḥ; by kvip ca the suffix kvip; na vidyate psā asya iti apsāḥ, a bahuvrīhi; by nañsubhyām (Pā. 6-2-172 [?]) the final-member final-acute. bhareṣujām — root janī prādurbhāve; the viṭ as said before; ātva; bhareṣu jāyate prādurbhavati iti bhareṣujāḥ; by tatpuruṣe kṛti bahulam (Pā. 6-3-14 [?]) the aluk of the locative in the compound; the final-member kṛdanta keeps its natural accent. sukṣitim — root kṣi nivāsagatyoḥ; by ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām (Pā.

3-3-174 [?]) the suffix ktic; by cit (Pā. 6-1-163 [?]) the final-acute; in the compound the kṛdanta final member keeps its natural accent. jayantam — root ji jaye; in the present sense śatr; śap; the guṇa of the root on that account; ay replacement: jayat; in the accusative singular, since it is ugit, the augment num; the accent of the root remains.

Soma — O Soma-deity; tvam — you; imāḥ viśvāḥ oṣadhīḥ — (on the earth) all these plants; ajanayaḥ — have created; tvam — you; apaḥ — (for their growth) the waters; (have created); tvam — you; gāḥ — all the cattle (created); uru — wide; antarikṣam — the mid-region; tvam — you; ā tatantha — (further) have made to spread; tamaḥ — darkness; tvam — you; jyotiṣā — (by your) light; vi vavartha — have driven far away and destroyed.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.22

"O Soma-deity, you have created all these plants on the earth; you have created the waters needed for their growth. You have created the cattle. You have made the wide mid-region spread further. With your own light you have destroyed all the darkness that is in the mid-region and the other worlds."

English Translation ⁶⁷

"O Soma, you have created these herbs, the water and the cows ; you have spread out the spacious firmament ; you have dispelled the darkness with your light." — as printed.

oṣadhīḥ — oṣadhayaḥ oṣaddhayantīti vā | oṣat enā dhayantīti vā | doṣaṃ dhayantīti vā (Ni. 9-27 [?]) | "The author of the Nirukta gives three kinds of derivation. First: the root uṣ (oṣ), which gives the sense 'to burn', together with dhe (ṭ) pāne ('to drink') — oṣadhi means one that 'drinks' [that is, removes] the burning diseases in the body; or, when there is the burning of a disease, living beings drink them (oṣat enā dhayanti). Also: doṣaṃ dhayantīti vā — they 'drink' the faults, wind (vāta) and the like; therefore they are called oṣadhayaḥ."

original p. 396

"In the 97th sūkta of the tenth maṇḍala of the Ṛksaṃhitā the origin, nature and use of the oṣadhis are all described, and the mutual relation between Soma and the oṣadhis is chiefly set forth. As the 18th and 19th Ṛks there ('yā oṣadhīḥ somarājñīḥ', Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-97-18 [?]) say, Soma is the rājā, the lord, of all the oṣadhis. Since Soma is the cause of the growth of all oṣadhis, wherever the word oṣadhi is used, the sense of Soma, its cause, is also present. For example —"

सोमं मन्यते पपिवान्यत्संपिषन्त्योषधिम् ।

somaṃ manyate papivān yat saṃpiṃṣanty oṣadhim | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-85-3 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "He who has drunk thinks he has drunk Soma, when they crush the plant [oṣadhi]."

"— in such Ṛks the close mutual relation between the oṣadhi and Soma is indicated. Soma is the cause of the growth of all grain and oṣadhis. And just as he creates the rasa in the oṣadhis, so too he fills the cows with milk: this too is said in Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-4[4]-2[4] [?]."

tvam apah ajanayaḥ — "Addressing Soma as slayer of Vṛtra, it is described that he, breaking through the flowing waters, hindering the clouds, destroyed Vṛtra, who prevents the rain from falling, and caused the waters of rain to flow. The meaning is that he caused to flow the waters needed for the growth of the oṣadhis."

पवस्व वृत्रहन्तमोक्थेभिरनुमाद्यः ।

pavasva vṛtrahantamokthebhir anumādyah | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-24-6 [?])

सं देवैः शोभते वृषा कविर्योनावधि प्रियः । वृत्रहा देववीतमः ॥

saṃ devaiḥ śobhate vṛṣā kavir yonāv adhi priyaḥ | vṛtrahā devavītaṃ || (Ṛ. Saṃ. 9-33-2 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (both): "Flow clear, most Vṛtra-slaying one, to be gladdened by hymns. — The bull, the poet, dear, in his seat shines with the gods; the Vṛtra-slayer, most inviting the gods."

"— in such Ṛks Soma is described as the slayer of Vṛtra. In such places the word vṛtra is generally to be taken in the sense of 'cloud' (Ni. 2-16 [?])."

uru antarikṣam ātatantha

— "'You made the mid-region spread widely': this is the meaning. In the Ṛksaṃhitā —"

अयं पीयूषं तिसृषु प्रवत्सु सोमो दाधारोर्वन्तरिक्षम् ।

ayaṃ pīyūṣaṃ tiśṛṣu pravatsu somo dādihārora antarikṣam | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-42-4 [?]; the numerals as read, doubtful)

अयं द्यावापृथिवी वि ष्कभायदयं रथमयुनक्सप्तरश्मिम् । अयं गोषु शच्या पक्वमन्तः सोमो दाधार दशयन्त्रमुत्सम् ॥

ayaṃ dyāvāprthivī vi śkabhāyad ayaṃ rathaṃ ayunak saptaraśmim | ayaṃ goṣu śacyā pakvam antaḥ somo dādihāra daśayantram utsam || (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-44-24 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "This Soma holds the colostrum [or nectar] in the three high [places], the wide mid-region; this one propped apart heaven and earth, yoked the seven-reined chariot; this one, by his power, holds within the cows the ripened [milk], the spring with ten channels."

original p. 397

"— in Ṛks such as these there is a description that Soma lifted up and held all the worlds, beginning with the mid-region, and made them all spread widely. That very point is spoken of here too."

tamaḥ (vi) vavartha

— "'You destroyed the darkness': this is the meaning. Of Soma who destroyed the darkness of the mid-region and brought in light, there are many śruti-sentences:"

पवमान ऋतं बृहच्छुक्रं ज्योतिरजीजनत् । कृष्णा तमांसि जड्घनत् ॥

pavamāna ṛtaṃ br̥hac chukraṃ jyotir ajījanat | kṛṣṇā tamāṃsi jaṅghanat ॥ (R. Saṃ. 9-66-24 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "The purifying one produced the great, bright light of Ṛta, smiting the black darkness."

"— Ṛks such as this support the matter."

apaḥ — the word ap; the accusative plural; by ūḍidaṃ padādi (Pā. 6-1-171) the case-ending takes the acute. ajanayaḥ — root janī prādurbhāve; since there is the action of an instigator (causative), by hetumati ca (Pā. 3-1-26 [?]) the suffix ṇic; by janīṛṣknasurañjo 'mantāś ca [print: "janīṛṣ...", the gaṇa-sūtra as printed partly read [?]] the root has the name mit; by mitām hrasvaḥ (Pā. 6-4-92 [?]) the lengthening caused by ṇic is shortened; lañ, second person singular; the nighāta of a finite verb. tatantha — root tanu vistāre; liṭ, second person singular, with the replacement thal; the absence of iṭ by Vedic usage; since liṭ is the cause, the root is doubled; the reduplicative keeps ādir halaḥ śeṣaḥ; the nasal of the root becomes anusvāra by parasavarṇa; the finite-verb nighāta. This is also accomplished by the nipāta spoken of below. vavartha — root vṛñ varāṇe; when the thal of the liṭ is the replacement, by babhūthātatanthajagṛmbhavavartheti nigame (Pā. 7-2-64 [?]) the form is irregularly set. ॥ 22 ॥

Translation: "O deva, shining one, sahasāvan, mighty Soma: with devena manasā, with your shining mind, your understanding, abhi yudhya — urge, send — to us a bhāga, a portion of wealth, with us in view. Or: abhi yudhya — strike with full force, in confrontation — the enemy who is the bhaktr, who takes, who carries off, a portion of our wealth. Let no enemy mā ā tanat — stretch [bind] you, such as you are, with distress, that is, let him not harm you. You īśiṣe, are lord of the strength of ubhayebhyaḥ, of both parties of fighters. Such as you are, pra cikitsa: in gaviṣṭau, in battle, ward off our trouble."

Grammar tail (partly clotted): rāyaḥ — the case-ending acute by ūḍidam. bhāgam — the suffix ghañ in the passive sense from bhaj; or, by kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam, in the agent sense; by karṣātvato... the final-acute. sahasāvan — the suffix matup after sahas, with a Vedic elision of ā [clotted (?)]. yudhya — root yudha saṃprahāre; the parasmaipada by vyatyaya. tanat — root tanu vistāre; śap by vyatyaya; by namāñyoge (the prohibition of the augment aṭ in connection with mā) the aṭ is absent. īśiṣe — the augment iṭ by īśaḥ se (Pā. 7-2-77 [?]). cikitsa — root kita jñāne; the suffix san by guptikidbhyaḥ san (Pā. 3-1-5 [?]). gaviṣṭau — "that in which there are the iṣṭayaḥ, the goings (eṣaṇāni, gamanāni), of gavām bāṇānām, of the arrows"; a bahuvrīhi, the first member keeping its natural accent.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 91.23) ⁶⁹

deva — O shining one; sahasāvan — O mighty one; Soma — O Soma-deity; devena manasā — with your radiant mind (willingly); rāyaḥ — of wealth;

original p. 399

"bhāgam — a portion; naḥ — to us too; abhi yudhya — cause to reach. [rāyaḥ — of wealth; bhāgam — the portion; apaharantam [as read] — the one who takes away; naḥ (abhi) — to us, our (enemy); abhi yudhya — fight and kill, and] — tvā — such as you; mā ā tanat — let no enemy hurt or obstruct you; ubhayebhyaḥ — (the two ranks engaged in battle); vīryasya — of the strength (to give); īśiṣe — you are the capable lord; gaviṣṭau — in battle; pracikitsa — protect (us)."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 91.23

69. Kannada; begins at the foot of p. 398

"O shining and mighty Soma-deity, of your wealth endowed with radiance, graciously and willingly send us a portion. May no enemy obstruct you. You are the capable lord to grant strength to the two ranks engaged in battle. Therefore, standing firm for us the sacrificers, protect us, and destroy the enemy in battle."

English Translation ⁷⁰

"Divine and powerful Soma, gracefully give us our portion of wealth ; may none annoy you ; you are superior to two foes combined. Defend us in battle." — as printed.

sahasāvan — "Since the word sahas is read among the twenty-eight names of strength, ojaḥ, pājaḥ, śaraḥ and so on (Ni. 2-9 [?]), sahas means 'strength'; sahasāvan means 'mighty'. Sahasāvan is the vocative singular."

devena manasā — dyotamānayā tvadīyayā buddhyā | "That is, 'with your radiant mind' (that is, 'willingly'), Sāyaṇa explains. But Skandasvāmin: 'dīvyatiḥ dānārthaḥ; dānābhimukhena manasā', that is, 'with a mind inclined to giving'. According to the Nirukta's explanation both meanings are possible, since the word deva: 'devo dānād vā, dīpanād vā, dyotanād vā, dyusthāno bhavatīti vā' (Ni. 7-15 [?]) — whether it is 'from giving', 'from lighting' or 'from shining', the meanings 'giving', 'shining' or 'illuminating' may be given here, whichever is wanted."

abhi yudhya — "abhi yudhya means 'fight and destroy'. Or because the explanation is 'abhiyudhaḥ gatikarmā' [as read [?]], abhigamaya — 'cause to come to us' — is the meaning. —

original p. 400

"— both meanings come to the same here: 'having killed our enemies who have carried off the portion of wealth, bring that wealth to us' — this is the sense of rāyaḥ bhāgaṃ naḥ abhiyudhya."

mā ā tanat — "Though ātanin ordinarily means 'one who spreads', here ātanet means 'obstruction': while you are giving us gifts of wealth, let no one obstruct you, or let no enemy stop you."

vīryasya īśiṣe — "Here, if ubhayebhyaḥ vīryasya is construed as one construction, then, since you are the lord of the strength of the two ranks engaged in battle, you can give victory to those on whom you are well disposed — this is the sense: because you are the greatest of all heroes, none can conquer him. As described in the Rks 9-66-18 [?] and 12 [?] of the Rksamhitā —"

महाँ असि सोम ज्येष्ठ उग्राणामिन्द्र ओजिष्ठः । युध्वा सञ्छश्चज्जिगेथ ॥

mahām asi soma jyeṣṭha ugrāṇām indra ojiṣṭhaḥ | yudhvā sañ chaśvaj jigetha ॥ (R. Sam. 9-66-18 [?]; read as printed, the third word indra as read [?])

ये उग्रेभ्यश्चिदोजीयाञ्छूरेभ्यश्चिच्छूरतरः । भूरिदाभ्यश्चिन्मंहीयान् ॥

ye ugrebhyas cid ojīyāñ sūrebhyas cic chūratarah | bhūridābhyas cin maṃhīyān ॥ (R. Sam. 9-66-12 [?]; the last word read maṃhīyān from a clotted print [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (both): "Great are you, O Soma, eldest of the fierce, mightiest [Indra-like]; by fighting you have conquered always. — He who is stronger than the strong, braver than the brave, more bounteous than the bountiful."

"— the strength and capacity of Soma are exceedingly great. In the same way in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa too, describing Soma's greatness, it is said that when in the war between the gods and the asuras the gods suffered defeat and were praising [him], after they made Soma king they obtained victory in all the quarters:"

ते सोमं राजानमकुर्वन् । ते सोमेन राज्ञा सर्वा दिशोऽजयन् ॥

te somaṃ rājānam akurvan | te somena rājñā sarvā diśo 'jayan ||
(Ai. Brā. 1-14 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "They made Soma king; with Soma as king they conquered all the quarters."

"Skandasvāmin explains the word ubhayebhyaḥ as 'ātmīebhyo 'smadīebhyaś ca ubhayebhyo 'pi śatrubhyo dhanāny āhṛtya' — 'from both your own enemies and our enemies, that is, from the enemies of both the sides, taking away the wealth, [bring it] to us': thus in one way; and further: 'athavā ubhayaśabdaḥ prayojanavacanaḥ; yāni cāsmākam iha loke prayojanāni yāni ca paratra tebhya ubhayebhyaḥ' — 'or the word ubhaya expresses a purpose: for those two sorts of purposes that we have, in this world and in the other' — meaning that you alone are the lord of, and are able to give, whatever benefits are to be obtained by us in this world and in the next. So he gives the explanation."

gaviṣṭau — gavāṃ bāñānām iṣṭayaḥ eṣānāni gamanāni yeṣu |
"That is, 'in the battle in which the goings of arrows occur'. Sāyaṇa takes the word gaviṣṭi to mean 'battle'; Skandasvāmin: 'gāvaḥ iṣyante' —

original p. 401

Special Topics of Rik 91.23, continued from p. 400 (Kannada) — the quotation broken at the foot of p. 400 continues: "— 'gāvaḥ iṣyante yatra prāpyaṃ sā gaviṣṭiḥ; tatra yajñe ity arthaḥ' ['that in which cows are desired to be obtained is gaviṣṭi; that is, in the sacrifice']: that is, Skandasvāmin explains it as 'in a sacrifice performed with the wish to obtain cows'."

(pra) cikitsa — "If gaviṣṭi is taken to mean 'battle', the sense of pra cikitsa is 'asmadīyam upadravaṃ parihara' — 'remove our troubles', that is, 'destroy our troubles'. If it is taken to mean 'sacrifice', [then] kita jñāne: here 'giving that is accompanied by knowledge of the truth' is indicated by jñāna; 'prakarṣeṇa dehīty arthaḥ' — 'give in abundance': that is, 'give generously to us in the sacrifice' is the meaning."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik ११.२३)

rāyaḥ — the word rai; in the genitive singular the form is rāyaḥ; by ūḍidaṃ padādi (Pā. 6-1-171) the case-ending takes the acute. bhāgam — root bhaja sevāyām; in the passive sense ghaṇ; by ata upadhāyāḥ the vṛddhi of the penultimate; by cajoḥ ku ghinyatoḥ (Pā. 7-3-52 [?]) the ku substitution for the j. Or, since bahulam is mentioned in kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam (Pā. 3-3-113 [?]), the suffix ghaṇ in the agent sense; by karṣātvataḥ (Pā. 6-1-159 [?]) the ñit accent is set aside and the final-acute comes. sahasāvan — in the sense "he has sahas, strength", by tad asyāsty asminn iti matup (Pā. 5-2-94 [?]) the suffix matup; the word sahas takes a final ā by Vedic usage; since a word beginning with ā follows, by mādūpadhāyāś ca mator vo 'yavādibhyaḥ (Pā. 8-2-9 [?]) the m becomes v; as a vocative, by āmantritasya ca (Pā. 8-1-19 [?]) the nighāta accent. yudhya — root yudha saṃprahāre (divādi); by vyatyayo bahulam the parasmaipada; loṭ, second person singular, sip, with hi for it; by divādibhyaḥ śyan the śyan; by ato heḥ the luk of hi; the nighāta accent following a word. tanat — root tanu vistāre; laṇ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca the i elided; by vyatyayo bahulam śap for the u-class suffix; by na māṇyoge (Pā. 6-4-74 [?]) the augment aṭ does not occur, since mā is connected; the nighāta accent. īśiṣe — root īśa aiśvārye; laṭ, second person singular, thās; by thāsaḥ se the replacement se; by īsaḥ se (Pā. 7-2-77 [?]) the augment iṭ for se standing after it; by ādeśapratyayayoḥ the ṣatva of the suffix. —

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik ११.२३, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

[īśiṣe, continued —] since it stands after a finite verb, the nighāta accent is not obtained, because the sūtra prohibits it (atiṇaḥ); the accent of the root remains. cikitsa — root kita jñāne; by guptikidibhyaḥ san (Pā. 3-1-5 [?]) the suffix san in its own sense; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ the root-name; loṭ, second person singular, sip, with hi for it; by sanyañoḥ (Pā. 6-1-9 [?]) the doubling of the first single-vowel part of the san-ending root; in the reduplicative ku-class replaced by the cu-class (kuhoś cuḥ); by ato heḥ the luk of hi; the nighāta following a word. gaviṣṭau — gavāṃ bāṇānām iṣṭayaḥ eṣaṇāni gamanāni eṣu iti gaviṣṭiḥ, a bahuvrīhi compound; by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. 6-2-1 [?]) the first member keeps its natural accent; the locative singular. || 23 ||

Translation: "u is a mere filler. Tyāḥ — those etāḥ Uṣases, the deities who preside over the time of dawn, ketum akrata, made light, which makes known to all the world enveloped in darkness (akṛṣata, 'they did'). Because it is so, the Uṣases añjate — display, make manifest — bhānum, radiance, rajasah pūrve ardhe, in the eastern half of the mid-region, in the eastern quarter. As dhṛṣṇavaḥ, bold warriors — āyudhānīva, like weapons — burnish their swords and other weapons, so niṣkṛṇvānāḥ, making the world bright with their own light, gāvaḥ — of the nature of going — aruṣiḥ, ruddy, shining, mātarah — makers of the sun's light, mothers of the world — [or the Uṣases] prati yanti, go daily. May such Uṣases protect us: this is the meaning. — Here in the Nirukta: 'etās tyā uṣasaḥ ketum akṛṣata prajñānam'... [Yāska's explanation as quoted, in the printed text:] kasyā iva pūjanārthe bahuvacanam syāt, pūrve 'rdhe 'ntarikṣalokasya samañjate bhānunā niṣkṛṇvānā āyudhānīva dhṛṣṇavaḥ; nir is here in the place of saṃ; 'emīd eṣāṃ niṣkṛtaṃ jāriṇīva' is also a scripture-text [of this sense]; 'prati yanti gāvo gamanād aruṣīr ārocanān mātaro bhāso nirmātryaḥ' (Ni. 12-7 [?])."

Grammar tail: akrata — the luṇ of kṛ, the luk of cli by mantre ghasahvara.... niṣkṛṇvānāḥ — root kṛvi hiṃsākaraṇayoḥ; the suffix cānaś in the habitual sense; the suffix u by dhinvikṛṇvyor a ca; by idudupadhasya cāpratyayasya the ṣatva of the visarga; the kṛdanta final member keeps its natural accent.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 92.1) ⁸

tyā etā uṣasaḥ — those well-known (and presiding over the morning) Uṣas deities; ketum — (to the world covered by darkness) light, or knowledge; akrata — made; rajasah pūrve ardhe — in the eastern half of the mid-region; bhānum — radiance; añjate — make manifest; dhṛṣṇavaḥ — warriors (for fighting); āyudhāni iva — as [they] polish and burnish their weapons; niṣkṛṇvānāḥ — (making the world bright with their radiance); gāvaḥ — of the nature of moving; aruṣiḥ — of the colour of morning twilight; mātarah — the producers of the sun's radiance, or the mothers of the world, the Uṣas deities; prati yanti — go about every day.

original p. 405

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.1

"To the world enveloped by the darkness of night, the Uṣas deities gave light. They display their radiance in the eastern quarter of the mid-region. As warriors burnish their weapons and make them shine, the Uṣas deities, making the world bright with their radiance, being of moving nature, red with the twilight of dawn, and the producers of the sun's radiance, go about daily by their own rule."

English Translation ⁹

"The celebrated dawn has spread the banner ; In the eastern half of the firmament, light is made manifest, making all things bright, like warriors brandishing their bright weapons. Thus the mother, radiant and advancing, travels daily;" — as printed (the final semicolon is as printed).

tyāḥ uṣasaḥ — "Those well-known Uṣases themselves, who appeared on all the earlier mornings; or, as the author of the Nirukta says, 'kasyā iva pūjanārthe bahuvacanaṃ syāt' (Ni. 12-7 [?]), the plural is in the sense of honour. Because the one Uṣas appears every day, she is imagined as many Uṣases, and the plural is used."

"A full description of the nature and greatness of the deity Uṣas is given in R̥g. Saṃ. Part [5?], pp. 32–33 [as printed; the part number is read with some doubt [?]]."

9. printed in English in the source; Rik 92.1

ketum — "ketah, ketuḥ, cetaḥ and the like being read among the names for knowledge (Ni. 3-9 [?]), ketum means 'knowledge of the world'. Or, if the word ketu is taken to mean 'banner', it means 'they displayed a banner-like brightness'."

bhānum aṅjate — "'They manifest the radiance'. Here two constructions are possible. Sāyaṇa: rajasah pūrve ardhe bhānum aṅjate — 'in the eastern quarters of the mid-region they display their radiance'; Skandasvāmin: rajasah pūrve ardhe sthitā bhānunā aṅjate — 'standing in the eastern half of the mid-region, they make everything manifest by their radiance'. In addition, Skandasvāmin joins the simile that follows, niṣkṛṇvānāḥ dhṛṣṇava iva, with aṅjate: as warriors make their weapons shine by polishing and the like, so the Uśases too light all the mid-region with their rays. Sāyaṇa joins this simile with the second half —

original p. 406

"— as 'yodvāraḥ yathā āyudhāni saṃskurvanti evaṃ niṣkṛṇvānāḥ uśasaḥ': as warriors polish their weapons, so the Uśases, polishing the world by their radiance, go about daily."

niṣkṛṇvānāḥ — nir ity eṣa sam ity etasya sthāne (Ni. 12-7 [?]) | "That is, the prefix nir has come in the place of sam, and the author of the Nirukta explains that saṃskurvānāḥ here means 'making [it] shine, with propriety'."

gāvaḥ — gāvo gamanāt (Ni. 12-7 [?]) | "Because they have the nature of moving: hence gāvaḥ."

aruṣīḥ — aruṣīr ārocanāt (Ni. 12-7 [?]) | "Because they shine attractively: hence aruṣīḥ."

mātarah — bhāso nirmātryaḥ (Ni. 12-7 [?]) | "Because they are the producers of the lights: hence mātarah; the author of the Nirukta explains that these are epithets of the rays as well. The same sense is explained in the Rk —"

Translation: "The aruṇāḥ, shining bhānavaḥ, the beams of the Uṣases, vṛthā, without effort, of themselves, ut apaptan, rose up. Thereafter the Uṣases svāyujah, easily yoked to the chariot, aruṣiḥ gāḥ, bright-coloured, the previously risen rays — such, being their own vehicles [the middle words clotted [?]] — ayukṣata, yoked to their own chariot. It is said, 'aruṇo gāvaḥ uṣasām' ['the ruddy cows of the Uṣases']. Having thus mounted the chariot yoked with cows, the Uṣases pūrvathā, as on the days gone by [reading doubtful], vayunāni akran, produced knowledge in all living beings: for when the time of dawn has come, all beings become possessed of knowledge. Thereafter those Uṣases, aruṣīḥ, shining, asīśrayuḥ, served the ruśantam, white-bright, bhānum, the sun: they become one with him. 'ruśat' is a name for colour, from rocate, the root of shining and blazing', says Yāska (Ni. 2-20 [?])."

Grammar tail: apaptan — root patḥ gatau; in the luṇ, since the root is ḷdit, aṇ replaces cli; by pataḥ pum (Pā. 7-4-19 [?]) the augment pum for the root. akran — the luk of cli by mantrē ghasa... pūrvathā — by pratnapūrvaviśvemāt thāl chandasi (Pā. 5-3-111 [?]) the suffix thāl in the sense of 'like'. asīśrayuḥ — root śriṇ sevāyām; ślu for śap by bahulaṃ chandasi; jus for jhi by sijabhyastavidibhyaś ca; by jusi ca (Pā. 7-3-83 [?]) the guṇa.

aruṇāḥ — golden-red; bhānavah — (of the Uṣas deities) radiances; vṛthā — without effort; ut apaptan — rose upward. (Thereafter) uṣasaḥ — the Uṣas deities; svāyujah — fit to be easily joined; aruṣīḥ — golden-red; gāḥ — (their earlier-manifested) rays, or (their chariot's) cows; ayukṣata — yoked (to their chariot); (and) pūrvathā — as was done on earlier mornings; vayunāni — to all beings, consciousness; akran — they produced; (afterwards) aruṣīḥ — the golden Uṣas deities; ruśantam — of auspicious colour; bhānum — the sun; asīśrayuḥ — served (joined with him).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.2

"The golden-red radiances of the Uṣas deities rose upward without any effort. Thereafter the Uṣas deities yoked to their chariot their rays or cows, which are easily joined and are of the red of the twilight. And, as they did on the days of earlier mornings, they produced consciousness in all beings. Afterwards, with their own radiance, they united with the sun of auspicious colour."

English Translation ¹¹

"The purple rays fly up quickly ; easy to be yoked, the cows are harnessed ; as of yore, the dieties [sic] of the dawn have restored consciousness; and bright-rayed have attended upon the glorious Sun." — as printed.

aruṇaḥ — aruṇa ārocanaḥ (Ni. 5-20 [?]) | "That is, 'golden-red, attractive'."

vṛthā — vṛthā iti anāyāsavacanaḥ | "So Sāyaṇa says in general while explaining such Ṛks as Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-4 [?] and 1-[?]-2 [?]. Here too it may be said that, without effort, that is, out of their own pleasure, they proceeded."

svāyujah — sukhena rathe āyoktuṃ śakyāḥ | "That is, they can be easily joined and yoked in the chariot."

aruṣīḥ gāḥ — aruṣīr ārocanāt (Ni. 12-7 [?]), and 'aruṇo gāva uṣasām' (Ni. 2-[?] [?]), 'aruṇa ārocanaḥ' (Ni. 5-20 [?]) — "the author of the Nirukta explains. The meaning of this is: the rays that illumine the vehicles of the Uṣases; or, the red cows."

vayunāni — "ketaḥ, ketuḥ (Ni. 3-9 [?]) and the like being read among the names of knowledge (prajñā), the word means 'knowledge'. The intention is that by producing light they produced awakening, consciousness, in all beings."

ruśantam — ruśad iti varṇanāma rocater jvalatikarmaṇaḥ (Ni. 2-20 [?]) | "That is, from the root ruc which gives the sense of shining, the word ruśat is formed, giving the sense of 'bright colour': so the author of the Nirukta explains. It means 'of auspicious colour'."

Translation: "Nārīḥ, the leaders, the Uṣases, arcanti — viṣṭibhiḥ, with their own entering rays, samānena yojanena, by one single effort, from parāvataḥ, far-off, from the western quarter — they honour, they pervade, the region of the sky: that is, they make the whole world pervaded. They bear (vahantīḥ) every sort of iṣam, food, for the sacrificer who does good works (sukṛte), who presses Soma (sunvate), who gives well to the priests (sudānave): they bring it, they bestow it."

Grammar tail (partly clotted): nārīḥ — root nṛ naye; ṛdor ap; the vṛddhi of nṛ/nara (vārttika); by the śārṅgaravādi group (Pā. 3-3-57 [?], as printed) the suffix nīn; by jasi vā chandasi the lengthening with the preceding similar vowel. apasah — [from the word apas, 'work', the suffix ac, as printed, partly read [?]]; by supāṃ sulug jas is replaced by su; by vyatyaya the syllable before the suffix takes the acute. viṣṭibhiḥ — root viśa praveśane; "those that enter are viṣṭayah, rays"; the suffix ktic by ktic ktau ca saṃjñāyām. viśvā — by supāṃ sulug the replacement ḍā for am.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.3

"The Uṣas deities are guides to all. Bringing all food for the sacrificer who performs pure works, presses Soma-juice at the sacrifices, and gives liberally to the priests, they too, with their natural rays, simultaneously pervade even the very remote regions of the mid-region, as warriors pervade the whole battlefield."

¹⁵. printed in English in the source; Rik 92.3

"The female leaders of the morning illuminate with their inherent radiance, the remotest parts of the heaven, with a sumultaneous [sic] effort, like warriors with their shining arms in the van of the battle, bringing every kind of food to the performer of good works, to the bountiful, and to the worshipper who presents libations." — as printed.

nārīḥ — netryaḥ | "'Guides': that is, those who free all living beings from the darkness of night, give them brightness and awareness, and show the way so that each does his own works."

iṣam — "Since andhaḥ, vājaḥ and the like are read among the names for food (Ni. 2-7 [?]), iṣam means 'food'."

viṣṭibhiḥ — "Since āpaḥ, āpnaḥ and the like are read among the names for works (Ni. 2-1 [?]), 'by works' is the meaning. But here Sāyaṇa gives the sense 'with lustres'. viśanti praviśantīti viṣṭayaḥ kiraṇāḥ: because they enter and pervade all the world, 'rays' is the meaning. Both these meanings are possible here. According to the construction of Skandasvāmin, apaso na viṣṭibhiḥ means 'like women who, with works such as smearing [the floor] and other household chores, are skilled in work'." ¹⁶

Translation: "...the Uṣas, vy āvaḥ, opened out the darkness [the clause between 'uṣāḥ' and 'andhakāraṃ' is clotted in the print [?]]: she made it uncovered, unattached. — Here nṛtūr iva — "like a nṛtū, a barber": he who with the hair makes men bare. As he cuts the hair completely, so the Uṣas too destroys the darkness down to the root. Or: nṛtor iva — like a dancing woman; peśāṃsi — a name for 'forms': the Uṣas adhi vapate, 'puts on', forms that all can see; she holds them in excess on her own self. So, first dispelling the darkness with her own rays, she apornute vakṣaḥ, uncovers her own breast, the region of the chest: she makes it uncovered by darkness; she herself becomes manifest. Barjaham — the 'udder', the place where milk is produced: as the cow usrā shows it at milking-time. What is she doing? Gāvo na vrajam — as cattle by themselves quickly occupy their pen, so by herself she, having reached the eastern quarter, makes jyotiḥ, light, for viśvasmai bhuvanāya, for the whole world."

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): nṛtūḥ — tūrvī has the sense of harming; the suffix kvip; the elision of v, etc. Or from nṛtī ('to dance') — the suffix kū (U. 1-94 [?]). barjaham — root vrj saṁbhaktau; ba, 'milk': vrñīte saṁbhajate gām iti baḥ payah; the suffix vic; "that which gives it up (jahāti) is barjahah", root ohāṇ tyāge; the suffix khaś by the upasaṁkhyāna with arghaśabda in the upapada (Pā. 3-2-58 [?]) and by kṛtyalyuṭo bahulam; śap elided (ślu) because the root is of the juhotyādi class; doubling etc.; b for v by bavayor abhedah; since it belongs to the divodāsādi group, the first member's initial acute. āvaḥ — root vrñ varaṇe; luṇ; the luk of cli by mantrē ghasa...; the elision by guṇe halñyādi...; the augment aṭ, seen in Chandas also (Pā. 6-4-73 [?])."

uṣāḥ — the deity Uṣas; nṛtoḥ iva — as a barber cuts the hair completely; peśāṁsi — (the ones clinging to the world) the darkness [as read]; vapate — cuts off (destroys). [nṛtoḥ iva — like a graceful dancing woman; peśāṁsi — (attractive) her beautiful forms; adhi vapate — (in herself) fully displays.] usrā — a cow; barjaham — (at the time of milking) the udder, showing [it]; vakṣaḥ — her breast; apornute — uncovers (shows, freeing it from the darkness); gāvaḥ — cattle; vrajaṁ na — as they go to the cow-pen (so Uṣas too, going to the eastern quarter); viśvasmai bhuvanāya — for the whole world; jyotiḥ — light; kṛṇvatī — making; tamaḥ — darkness; vi āvaḥ — destroyed completely.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.4

"As a barber cuts the hair, the Uṣas deity drives away the darkness. Like a dancing woman, the Uṣas deity fully displays her attractive forms. As a cow shows her udder at milking time, she shows her breast. As cows go to the cow-pen, Uṣas, going to the eastern quarter and making light for the whole world, destroys the darkness completely."

nṛtoḥ iva — "In this simile two kinds of meaning arise: the removal of a blemish, and the display of beauty. The first: nṛtūḥ means nṛṇ tūrvati keśena riktīkarotīti nṛtūr nāpitaḥ [as read, doubtful [?]]: because he cuts all the hair of men completely, the barber is called nṛtū, nāpita."

vapate — chinatti | "She cuts off. As a barber cuts the hair of the head, so the Uṣas too peśāṃsi — the dark glooms that cover the world — adhi vapate, destroys completely. In this sense it is that she displays beauty through the removal of blemish."

"The second: nṛtoḥ iva — nṛtyantī yoṣid iva: as a beautiful woman who dances makes ready her peśāṃsi, her charming forms and graces, so the Uṣas too adhi vapate — acquires her charming beauty, spreading her radiance all around — this is the meaning."

usrā — "Since āhnyāḥ, usrā and the like are read among the names of the cow (Ni. 2-9 [?]), usrā means 'cow'. usrā viśo 'syāṃ bhogāḥ [as read, clotted [?]]: because they hold flowing milk that is a means of comfort, the cow has the name usriyā."

"Here the simile has great propriety. As the cow shows her udder in order to give milk generously, so the Uṣas too shows her breast: that is, she spreads her radiance, generously, to the world, and creates light and awareness."

vrajam — vṛṇoter vrajaḥ (Ni. 6-[?] [?]) | "Because it is enclosed [by a fence], it is called vraja. vrajam na — as a cow goes to the pen that is the place of her protection, out of her own pleasure, with no other compulsion, so the Uṣas too goes to her own place

vapate — root ḍuvap bījasantāne; this is also used in the sense of cutting (bhedana); laṭ, third person singular; the nighāta accent. nṛtūriṇa — root turvī hiṃsārthaḥ; by kvip ca the suffix kvip; by rālopa (सल्लोपः, Pā. 6-4-21 [?]) the v standing after r is elided; su following; by vor upadhāyā dirghaḥ (Pā. 8-2-76 [?]) the

Or from nṛtī gātravināme ('to dance, to move the limbs'); by nṛtīśṛdhyoḥ kūḥ (U. 1-91 [?]) the suffix kū; since it is kit, the guṇa of the light penultimate does not occur; by the suffix accent the final-acute. ūrṇute — root ūrṇuñ ācchādane of the adādi class; laṭ, third person singular; the tiñ-nighāta. barjaham — root vṛj saṃbhaktau; "vṛṇīte saṃbhajate gām iti baḥ payaḥ"; the suffix vic; the guṇa of the root on that account; since r follows, the visarga is replaced by r. "The radiance of the shining Uṣas deity is first seen in the eastern

And the daughter of heaven, Uṣas, serves the radiant sun."

"At the time of reciting the prātaranuvāka mantras, for the mantras connected with the Uṣasya sacrifice, the eight Ṛks beginning pratyarcīḥ, and also for the mantras of the Āśvina-śāstra, the application of these mantras is shown by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra 'pratyarcir ity aṣṭau vṛṣā ā vo divijā iti ṣaḍ iti traiṣṭubhaṃ' (Ā. 4-14 [?])."

svaruṃ na — "svaru means 'a stick, a rod', the stick with which collyrium is applied to the eye. As ghee is smeared with it on the sacrificial post, so the Uṣas deity adorns herself with collyrium, or with a stick applied to the eye: this is the idea.

"Besides, svaru means 'sacrificial post' too. In the Ṛk 7-35-7 [?] the word svarūṇām is explained 'svarūṇām yūpānām', and in Ṛ. Translation: "...produces vayunā, the knowledges (consciousness), in all living beings. Śriye chando na smayate: as a man who is skilful in winning over by flattery (upacchandayitā) goes near the one from whom he wants something and smayate, smiles, in order to please him, so the Uṣas vibhātī — making a special light — is seen as if smiling with her own bright rows of teeth. So supratikā, of beautiful limbs through her special form of light, for asya tamasaḥ — of this darkness of night-time; pāram — the end; atāriṣma — we have crossed; ucchantī — (removing the darkness) appearing; uṣāḥ — the deity Uṣas; vayunā — (of all beings) the consciousness; kṛṇoti — creates; śriye — for wealth; chandaḥ — one who is able to flatter by praise; smayate na — as he goes to the wealthy and smiles to please him; vibhātī — shining, with the laughter of her radiance; supratikā — beautifully shining in radiance, or one with an attractive face; saumanasāya — for the delight (of the beings); ajīgaḥ — swallowed (the darkness).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.6

"With the help of the Uṣas deity we have crossed to the end of the darkness of night. The Uṣas deity, appearing by driving away the darkness, creates consciousness in all beings. And as a man able to praise [and so win over], for the acquisition of wealth goes to the wealthy and, to please him, smiles broadly, so she too shines, smiling with the laughter of her radiance, and, beautifully lit and attractive in her radiance, she has swallowed the darkness for the delight of all beings."

English Translation ²⁶

"We have crossed over the boundary of darkness. Ushas restores the consciousness of living beings ; bright-shining, she smiles, like a flatterer, to obtain favour, and lovely in all her radiance, she has swallowed the darkness for our delight." — as printed.

ucchantī — "For this word one meaning is 'removing, destroying'; another meaning may be given: 'shining, appearing with radiance'. The derivation of the word uṣā too comes from ucchati (Ni. 2-18 [?]). But the word ucchati may be derived from the root uchī vivāse, or from vaś kāntau; the author of the Nirukta also dealt with this matter in section 2-[?]. In the present context either meaning may be taken. ucchantī uṣāḥ may also mean 'the Uṣas who appears, driving away the darkness', or 'the Uṣas who shines'."

chandaḥ — "rebhaḥ, jaritā, kāruḥ and the like are read among the names of the praiser (Ni. 3-16 [?]). The meaning here is 'the praiser, who goes to a wealthy man and flatters him to win him over, and in the course of this praise smiles at him: as this praiser becomes smiling-faced, so the Uṣas too, with her radiance, smiles': this is one meaning. Besides, as Skandasvāmin says: 'chandas iti kāntikarmasu pāṭhāt chandaśśabdo 'tra kāmivacanaḥ'' [as read, partly clotted [?]] — since 'chandas' is read among the names of loveliness (Ni. 3-[?] [?]), the word chandaḥ here may be said to mean a lover (kāmin) — a woman in love, who, smiling a little, with her tooth-rays flashing, shows [them]: yathā kāmīnī īṣat smayantī sphuraddantakiraṇā prakāśayati evam uṣāḥ svakiraṇān āviṣkaroti: as a lovely woman, smiling gently, displays the rays of her teeth, so the Uṣas also displays her rays."

supratikā — pratikaśabdo mukhavacanaḥ darśanaparyāyo vā | sumukhā sudarśanā vā | "pratika means 'face', or 'seeing, appearance'. Therefore here it means 'one who has a beautiful face' or 'one who has a charming appearance'. In the R̥ksaṃhitā:"

यावन्मात्रमुषसो न प्रतीकं सुपर्ण्यो वसते मातरिश्वः ।

yāvan māttram uṣaso na pratīkaṃ suparṇyo vasate mātariśvaḥ | (R. Saṃ. 10-88-19 [?]; the print has suparṇyo 3 vasate, a mark of protraction)

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "As much as the [bright] face of the Uṣases, the well-winged [?] wind dwells [in it]." ²⁷

"— in this Rk too the word pratīka is explained in such a way."

ājīgaḥ

— "In explaining the derivation of this word the author of the Nirukta cites a Rk of the Rksamhitā —" यदा ते मर्तो अनु भोगमानळादिद्रसिष्ठ ओषधीरजीगः ।

yadā te marto anu bhogam ānaḥ ād id grasiṣṭha oṣadhīr ajīgaḥ | (R. Saṃ. 1-58-2 [?]; the numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "When the mortal has attained your enjoyment, then you, the devourer, have swallowed the plants."

original p. 425

Special Topics of Rik 92.6, continued from p. 424 (Kannada): "— citing this Rk [yadā te marto anu bhogam ānaḥ...], the author of the Nirukta gives three meanings: 'jīgarṣtir gīratikarmā vā grṇātikarmā vā grṇhātikarmā vā' (Ni. 6-[?] [?]): that is, 'eating', or 'praising', or 'seizing' — any of these may do. But in the Rk now in hand too, for ājīgaḥ Sāyaṇa explains 'andhakāraṃ bhakṣitavatī' — 'she swallowed the darkness'; and Skandasvāmin explains 'trīn api lokān prati gacchatī' [as read [?]] — 'she goes over the three worlds, pervading them'."

aśvabudhyān — "Two kinds of meaning are given for this attribute. 'aśvair yo [yeṣu] boddhavyas te aśvabudhyāḥ tān' [as read, clotted [?]]: wealth, or food, that is to be known by the existence of horses, that is, [wealth] with abundant horses. Or, as Sāyaṇa says, since the word aśvabudhyān [stands] with y by a change of letter in place of the n, it is aśvabudhnān, from which the sense 'foods that have horses as their root' also arises. If the second meaning is given, since kings get wealth and foods by the help of horses, it is called aśvabudhya. What kind? Yaśasaṃ — endowed with fame, praised by all. Suvīraṃ — possessed of excellent heroes, sons and the like. Dāsapravargaṃ — pravarga is an excellent varga, a company: he in whom there is a company of servants, of workmen: i.e. endowed with many attendants. Aśvabudhyaṃ — such wealth as that by which horses are to be known [as present]. 32. Pratipadārtha of Rik 92.8, continued from p. 430:

"O Uṣas deity, rich in priceless wealth: pleased with our praises, accompanied by pure works, you give us food and display your wealth, which has obtained abundance. May I enjoy that well-known wealth which is praised by all, brings us fame, comes with excellent sons, and is distinguished by horses."

English Translation ³³

"May I obtain, Ushas, that ample wealth which confers fame, posterity, troops of servants and is accompanied with horses ; you abound in riches and are the giver of food ; you display them when gratified by hymns and holy Sacrifices." — as printed.

yaśasam — yaśasā kīrtiā yuktaṃ sarvaiḥ praśasyam | "Endowed with fame', that is, 'praised by all', says Sāyaṇa. And since andhaḥ, vājaḥ, payah and the like are read among the names of food (Ni. 2-7 [?]), Skandasvāmin explains yaśasvintamam [as read] — 'annena sahitam', 'accompanied by food'."

suvīram — śobhanair vīryaiḥ putraiḥ sahitam | "Accompanied by excellent sons who are heroes."

dāsapravargam — dāso dasyater upadāsayati karmāṇi (Ni. 3-[?] [?]) | "From the root das, which gives the sense 'to finish, to complete', the word dāsa: one who completely finishes all tasks such as household chores — a servant, an attendant. In Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 2-[?]-6 [?] [the print's numerals], one may see from the word dāsapatnīḥ that the word dāsa is also used in the sense of 'demon'. pravarga is prakṛṣṭo vargaḥ saṃghaḥ, an excellent company: a company of those most able in the work of the sacrificer."

33. printed in English in the source; Rik 92.8

— "The explanation of this word has been given in the Special Topics of the seventh Ṛk of this very sūkta [p. 428]: 'that which may be known by horses', that is, 'possessed of a great number of horses'."

original p. 432

subhage — "mahaṃ, rekṇaḥ, rikthaṃ and the like being read among the names of wealth (Ni. 2-10 [?]), subhaga means 'excellent wealth'. subhage is a vocative: O one who has excellent wealth."

sudaṃsasā — "āpaḥ, āpnaḥ, daṃsaḥ and the like being read among the names of works (Ni. 2-1 [?]), daṃsaḥ means 'work'. sudaṃsasā is 'by excellent works', that is, 'through excellent works'. As is said of the deities Indra, the Aśvins and others, so of Uṣas too it is described in many places that she is endowed with works such as the Agnihotra, or is a helper of works. For example —"

स्वर्जनन्ती सुभगा सुदंसा अन्तादिवः पप्रथ आ पृथिव्याः ।

svar janantī subhagā sudaṃsā antād divaḥ paprathā ā pṛthivyāḥ |
(Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-61-4 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read, doubtful [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Bringing forth svar, the fortunate, skilful one has spread from the end of heaven to the earth."

"In this Ṛk the word sudaṃsāḥ [is explained] 'śobhanāgnihotrakarmā', that is, 'performers of excellent Agnihotra rites'. By this too the meaning here is 'endowed with works'."

śravasā — "śravaḥśabdaḥ kīrtiyarthaḥ; Skandasvāmin gives the meaning 'fame' for the word śravas. The construction then is 'atiśayavat karmanimitta kīrtiyarthaṃ' [as read [?]], 'fame that is gained through excellent works'."

sudaṃsasā śravasā — "Besides the above meaning, Skandasvāmin explains in yet another way, as follows: 'daṃśadarśanayor ity asya daṃsaśabdo darśanavacanaḥ | śravaḥśabdo 'pi jyotirvacanaḥ | sudarśanena jyotiṣā vā' [as read, partly clotted (?)] — that is, in the sense of 'sight' the word daṃsa, and in the sense of 'light' the word śravas, are both suitable: so it means 'possessed of a charming radiance'. Sāyaṇa: 'śobhanena karmaṇā yuktena śravaṇīyena stotreṇa prītā tvam' — 'you, pleased with praise that is accompanied by good works'."

vājaprasūtā — "Impelled by food in the form of oblations; or 'she who gives food': so Sāyaṇa explains the word '[vājaprasūtā] asmabhyam annadātrī satī' [as read, clotted (?)] — 'being the giver of food to us'. In the compound which Skandasvāmin explains in this Ṛk, also used in the Ṛk 1-[?]-[?] [?] earlier, the word prasūtam means preritam, and the whole compound is explained 'preritaṃ havirlakṣaṇam annaṃ yaiḥ' ['those by whom food in the form of oblation is sent']; so here too the explanation of Skandasvāmin — 'impelled by food in the form of oblations' — is possible."

Translation: "The devī, the shining Uṣas, having illumined viśvāni bhuvanā, all the beings of the world, and made them luminous, thereafter, turned towards the west, urviyā, wide, spread out, with light that makes cakṣuḥ appear [i.e. with her illuminating radiance], vi bhāti, shines. And viśvaṃ jīvaṃ, all living things, carase, to go about, to engage in their own undertakings, bodhayantī, rousing them from sleep, the Uṣas — viśvasya manāyoh — of all beings possessed of mind and able to speak, avidat, obtains, hears the vācam, the speech that they have. Hence the Uṣas is rightly called sūnṛtāvati [possessing true, pleasant speech]."

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): abhicakṣya — root cakṣiṇ vyaktāyāṃ vāci; this has also the sense 'to illumine'; in a compound not beginning with nañ, lyap replaces ktvā (Pā. 7-1-37 [?]). pratīcī — from aṅc with prati; the suffix kvin by rtvigdadhr̥k...; the n is elided by aniditām...; nīp by the upasaṃkhyāna for aṅcati; the elision of the a, and the lengthening by cāv; the nīp takes the acute by the udāttanivṛtti accent. urviyā — after the word urvī, su ... by the upasaṃkhyāna on īyādi, yāj... (Pā. 7-1-39 [?]) the replacement dīyā; because of the replacement's force the s is not elided. manāyoh — "he wishes manas for himself": manasyati; kyac by supa ātmanaḥ kyac; u by kyāc chandasi; s → ā by a change of letter. Or kyañ in the agent sense and elision of s; the lengthening by akṛtsārvadhātukayoḥ.

"In these R̥ks one should compare the word cakṣase, without the preposition, with the word abhicaṣṭe, which has the preposition. cakṣase is explained 'darśanāya' (Ni. 7-[?] [?]), 'for seeing'; abhicaṣṭe 'abhipaśyati' (Ni. 10-22 [?]), 'sarvataḥ paśyati': 'he looks on all sides, well'."

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "By which Varuṇa, Mitra and Aryaman shine, by which the Nāsatyas and Bhaga; — great is your visible deed, O Viṣṇu, [may we see Turvaśa and Yadu]."

"The two verbs caṣṭe and abhicakṣyam in these Ṛks too mean prakāśayati, prakāśyam: that is, 'to make manifest, to appear'. Likewise the word abhicakṣya in the Ṛk now in hand means 'having illumined all the beings'."

manāyoh — manyater arcatikarmaṇo manā stutir ucyate; tatkāmasya manāyoh [as read [?]] | "'manā is called praise' — from man, a verb of worship. tatkāmasya manāyoh: 'of him who desires that [praise]'. Since arcati, gāyati, rebhati and the like are read among the forty-four names of worship (Ni. 3-[?] [?]), the word manā means 'praise', and manāyu means one who desires to be praised. Hence here: 'by the ṛṣi who desires praise or by the sacrificer who does so — by such a praiser', Skandasvāmin explains. Sāyaṇa too, in the other places where this word occurs, explains it in this way. For example —"

प्रियः सुकृत्प्रिय इन्द्रे मनायुः प्रियः सुप्रावीः प्रियो अस्य सोमी ।

priyaḥ sukṛt priya indre manāyuh priyaḥ supravīḥ priyo asya somī

prati manāyor ucathāni haryan tasmin dadhad vṛṣaṇaṃ śuṣmam indraḥ | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 4-21-2 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Dear is the good-doer, dear in Indra the praise-desiring one, dear the good helper, dear his Soma-possessor. — Welcoming the hymns of the praise-desiring one, Indra puts into him the bullish strength."

"In Ṛks such as these manāyuh is explained as 'one who desires praise', and manāyoḥ as 'stutikāmasya'. But for the word manāyoḥ in the Ṛk now in hand alone, manasā yuktasya vāgvyavahārasamarthasya prāñijātasya — 'of the creature endowed with mind and capable of speech' — is the explanation, that is: 'of all the class of living beings who are endowed with a mind and are able to speak'."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 92.9)

abhicakṣya — root cakṣiṇ vyaktāyāṃ vāci; since roots have more than one sense (dhātūnām anekārthatvam) this is used also in the sense of 'illuminate'; since it denotes a preceding action, the suffix ktvā is obtained; as it forms a compound with abhi, by samāse 'nañpūrve ktvo lyap (Pā. 7-1-37 [?]) the suffix ktvā is replaced by lyap; since it is pit, it is unaccented, so the accent of the root remains. praticī — the root añcu (in the senses of motion and worship), preceded by prati; by rtvigdadhrk... (Pā. 3-2-59 [?]) the suffix kvin; since it is kit, by aniditāṃ hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti (Pā. 6-4-24 [?]) the nasal of the penultimate is elided; when the feminine is intended, by the upasaṃkhyāna añcates ca the suffix ñip; since an ac-beginning suffix follows, by yaci bham (Pā. 1-4-18 [?]) the stem receives the name bha, and by aco 'ñcaḥ (Pā. 6-4-138 [?]) the a of the root is elided; by cau (Pā. 6-3-138 [?]) when the root añcu, whose n is dropped, comes after, the previous vowel is lengthened: the i of prati is lengthened: praticī; by anudāttasya ca yatrodāttalopaḥ (Pā. 6-1-161 [?]), since ñip follows and the root's a is elided though acute, the ñip takes the acute.

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 92.9, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

urvīyā — the word urvī; the su follows; by the upasaṃkhyāna īyāḍiyājīkārāṇām ca (Pā. 7-1-39 [?], vārttika) the replacement ḍiyāc; since it is ḍit, the ī is elided; since it is cit, by citaḥ the final-acute. carase — root cara gatibhakṣaṇayoḥ; in the sense of tumun, by tumarthe sesenase... (Pā. 3-4-9 [?]) the suffix ase. avidat — root viḷ lābhe; luṇ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca the i is elided; since the root is ḷit, by puṣādīdyutādyḷditaḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. 3-1-55 [?]) the replacement aṇ for cli; the augment aṭ for the stem; the nighāta accent. manāyoḥ — "manaḥ ātmana icchati manasyati": in the sense of wishing, by supa ātmanaḥ kyac (Pā. 3-1-8 [?]) the suffix kyac after the noun manas; after this kyac-ending stem, by kyāc chandasi (Pā. 3-2-170 [?]) the suffix u; since u follows, the s becomes ā by a change of letter. Or by kartuḥ kyaṇ salopaś ca (Pā. 3-1-11 [?]) the suffix kyaṇ with the elision of s by its connexion; when man + ya stands, by akṛtsārvaadhātukayor dīrghaḥ (Pā. 7-4-25 [?]) the a is lengthened because of ya; then, as before, the suffix u: manāyu; by the suffix accent the final-acute; the genitive singular. || 9 ||

Translation: "Punaḥ-punar jāyamānā — appearing daily before sunrise, purāṇī, ancient, that is, eternal. Because she shines, samānam varṇam abhi, obtaining always the one same form, through her abiding in one form on all different days [the clause "sarvatra..." is doubtful [?]]. Such a goddess, the devī, Uṣas, is wasting (jarayantī), bringing to decay, the āyur, the life, of every martasya, mortal creature; for with each day's contact with Uṣas [clause doubtful [?]] the life of all diminishes; and it was said that Uṣas is born again and again; hence she wears out life. The simile: kṛtnuḥ — a cutter — śvaghnī iva, like the wife of a hunter: as she, āminānā, by striking down the birds that vijāḥ, flutter, by cutting their wings and the like, wears out their lives, so she."

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): purāṇī — from the indeclinable pura, by sāyaṃciramprāhṇe... (Pā. 4-3-23 [?]) the suffix tyu; in the brāhmaṇa and kalpa texts proclaimed by ancient (sages), by Pā. 4-3-105 [?] the tyuḍ is irregular; yu → ana; nīp since it is ṭit; by vyatyaya the final-acute. śumbhamānā — root śumbha dīptau; śap unaccented as it is pī; the root's accent remains with śānac, a lasārvadhātuka. śvaghnī — śunā mṛgān hataṅvān śvahā; by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 3-2-88 [?]) kvip after han even with an upapada other than brahman and the like; ñīp by ṛnnebhyo ñīb; the ghatva by ho hanteḥ; the ñīp takes the acute by the udāttanivṛtti accent. kṛtnuḥ — root kṛtī chedane; the Uṇādi suffix knu. vijaḥ — root oviji bhayacalanayoḥ; "they tremble, move: vijaḥ, birds". āminānā — root mīñ hiṃsāyām of the kryādi class; the shortening by sthādīnām hrasvaḥ; with śānac the final-acute."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.10

"The radiant Uṣas deity, being beginningless, appears every day in one and the same manner, with a form that has no change at all. And as the wife of a hunter, injuring the birds that move about by tearing off their wings and the like, cuts them and makes them die, so this Uṣas too makes all beings subject to death grow old, causing their life to wear away."

English Translation ³⁹

"The divine and ancient Ushas, born again and again and bright with unchanging hues, wastes away the life of a mortal, like the wife of a hunter cutting up and dividing the birds." — as printed.

"In this R̥k a sort of distress is mixed with joy. By describing the beauty and loveliness of the Uṣas, who fills the whole world with consciousness and light and brings living things to fullness, [the poet] gives expression to the joy of experience; and in the presence of Uṣas, who remains ever in unfailing youth, all creatures, from mortals who reach old age onward, show a slight anxiety in the thought that they are drawing near to death. With the experience of beauty is joined the experience of truth. In this context Professor Max Müller, explaining the intention of this R̥k, has said certain things about the Uṣas deity which it would be inappropriate not to quote; they are given here:" ⁴⁰

"The Dawn, which to us is merely a beautiful sight, was to the early gazer and thinker, the problem of all problems. It was the unknown land from whence rose every day those bright emblems of a divine power which left in the mind of man the first impression and intimation of another world, of power above, of order and wisdom. What we simply call the sun-rise, brought before their eyes every day, the riddle of the riddles, the riddle of existence. The days of their life sprang from that dark abyss which every morning seemed instinct with light and life. Their youth, their manhood, their old age, all were to the Vedic bards the gift of that heavenly mother who appeared bright, young, unchanged, immortal every morning, while everything else seemed to grow old, to change, and drop, and at last to set, never to return. It was there, in that bright chamber, that, as their poets said, mornings and days were spun, or under a different image, where mornings and days were nourished, where life or time was drawn out". (Lectures on the Science of Language Vol. II (P. 481–482))

Kannada, continued: "Thus, in describing, before the eternal Uṣas of the unchanging life of the world, the changing youth and beauty [of mortals] —"

punaḥ punar jāyamānā purāṇī — "this is a delineation of the nature of Uṣas. Here, for jāyamānā, the meaning intended is 'birth' in the sense of 'rising': pratidivasaṃ sūryodayāt pūrvaṃ prādurbhavantī — 'appearing every day before sunrise' [Sāyaṇa]. That is, 'birth' does not mean a fresh origin; the meaning is that she appears anew, before sunrise, every day, as a new rising. Purāṇī — cirantanī, nityā ity arthaḥ | jagatsrṣṭikāla evotpannatvād uṣā purāṇīty ucyate ['ancient: eternal; since the Uṣas has been produced at the very time of the world's creation, she is called purāṇī']. The attribute purāṇī is used because she is beginningless, eternal, and has existed since the time of the creation of the world. This kind of description is seen at every step in the Ṛks that are in praise of Uṣas. For example —"

"— in such Ṛks it is described that the beginningless Uṣas, rising newly each day, awakens the world according to her own rule."

original p. 442

śumbhamānā — śumbha dīptau | "From the root śumbha, which gives the sense 'to shine, to be beautiful', the word śumbhamānā is formed. śumbhamānāḥ — śuśobhiṣamānāḥ (Ni. 6-11 [?]): so the author of the Nirukta explains it as 'those who wish to shine greatly': 'shining attractively'. This word is used in every place where the sense is 'to adorn so as to please the mind'. For example —"

āvīr vakṣaḥ kṛṇuṣe śumbhamānoṣo devi rocamānā mahobhiḥ | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-64-2 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "May the wide-spreading [doors] open widely, like women adorning themselves for their husbands. — Like waters adorning themselves downhill, Agni protects in the lap of his parents. — You bare your breast, adorning yourself, O goddess Uṣas, shining with your splendours."

"— such Ṛks may be looked at. Thus, having described the attractive nature of Uṣas, he now explains the part that gives a little distress."

vijaḥ — vir iti śakuninām veter gatikarmaṇaḥ (Ni. 3-[?] [?]) | "From the root vī, in the sense 'to move about, to wander', comes vi, and from it the word vija is formed. Skandasvāmin: 'vī iti pakṣināma | tato jāte iti vijaḥ' — 'the vi is the name of a bird; the one born from it is vija' [that is, the word vija arises from vi, 'bird'], following the Nirukta. Sāyaṇa, however, explains the word vijaḥ as derived from the root oviji bhayacalanayoḥ ('to fear, to tremble'): vijanti calantīti vijaḥ pakṣinaḥ — 'those that move about are vijaḥ, birds'."

"In general, the use of the word vijaḥ for 'bird' in the Ṛksaṃhitā may be said to occur at this one place only; for the word vijaḥ used in Ṛk 1-92-10 [as read] the meaning is udvejakaḥ ('one who causes alarm'). In all the other places the words viḥ or vayaḥ are used for 'bird'."

āminānā — mīñ hiṃsāyām | balād dhimsantī | "For this word, which arises from the root mī with the sense of injury, the meaning 'one who injures by force' arises."

kṛtnuḥ — kṛtī chedane | "From the root kṛt, 'to cut', the meaning is: one who cuts and injures all the wings."

śvaghñī — "To this word three meanings can be given: jūjagāra [a gambler, as printed], vyādha [a hunter], and vyādhapatnī [a hunter's wife]. The first, as the Nirukta writer's explanation: śvaghñī —

śvaghnī — "śvaghnī is kitavo bhavati, svaṃ hanti svaṃ punar āśritaṃ bhavati [as read] — śvaghnī means a gambler: he destroys himself; he ruins himself; and again he becomes dependent on others. [The author of the Nirukta (Ni. 5-[?] [?])] explains in this way and cites the Ṛk of the Ṛksaṃhitā —"

कृतं न श्वघ्नी वि चिनोति देवने संवर्गं यन्मघवा सूर्यं जयत् ।

kṛtaṃ na śvaghnī vi cinoti devane saṃvargaṃ yan maghavā sūryaṃ jayat | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-43-5 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read, doubtful [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "As a gambler gathers the winning throw at the dice, so [Indra] gathers the booty, when the bounteous one wins the sun."

"If one follows this explanation, here śvaghnī is a gambler. Skandasvāmin explains: 'śvabhir hantīti śvaghnī lubdhaka ihocyate' — 'he who kills by means of dogs, the huntsman, is called śvaghnī here' — that is, a hunter who kills deer by means of dogs; and Sāyaṇa: 'śunā mṛgān hataṃ śvahā | tasya strī śvaghnī' — 'the hunter's wife, who kills deer by means of dogs'. In the Ṛksaṃhitā, in the five places other than this Ṛk, there is use of the word śvaghnī. In those, Ṛ. Saṃ. 5-[?]-4 [?]; and 10-[?]-5 [?]; 6-[?]-2 [?] [the print's numerals], the word means vyādha, hunter; and in 10-42-9 [?]; 10-43-5 [?]; 9-[?]-[?] [?], where it occurs, Sāyaṇa explains it as kitava, gambler."

"Whichever meaning is given, a certain distress is also expressed: the Uṣas, who gives beauty and gives consciousness to the world, brings old age to all creatures without their knowing it, and becomes the cause of destruction."

Translation: "The Uṣas, vy ūrṇvatī, laying open the divaḥ antān, the edges of the sky, freeing them from darkness, abodhi — was noticed by all beings; became known. Thereupon, at Uṣas's appearance, svasāram, her sister, the Night, who goes off of herself, sanutaḥ [a word meaning 'hidden'], apa yuyoti — she sends away, even from the hidden places, separates her. Manuṣyā yugāni praminatī — destroying, by her going and coming, the yugas, the ages (Kṛta, Tretā and the rest) of men, the yoṣā, the wife of jāra, the wearer-out of night, the Sun, shines with her own light, vi bhāti."

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): vyūrṇvatī — root ūrṇuñ ācchādane, with vi; the śatṛ in the laṭ; nīp by ugitaś ca; by śatur anumō nadyajādī the nadī takes the acute. sanutaḥ — listed among the svarādi words as a final-acute irregular form; by āto 'vyaye saṃjñāyām... the luk of the locative. yuyoti — root yu miśraṇāmīśraṇayoh; ślu for śap by bahulaṃ chandasi. manuṣyā — ḍyā replaces the genitive by supāṃ sulug. yugāni — ghañ from yuj in the instrumental or the passive sense; kutva by cajoḥ ku gñinyatoḥ; since the word yuga is read among the umbhādi words — in the sense of a particular time and of the apparatus of a chariot and the like — the guṇa of the light penultimate does not occur; final-acute by umbhādīnām ca (Kā. 6-1-160 [?]). jārasya — dāra and jāra are formed irregularly by Pā. 3-3-20 [?] with the ghañ and the elision of ṇi.

divaḥ — of the mid-region; antān — all the end-parts; vy ūrṇvatī — (freeing them from darkness) causing them to shine, the Uṣas deity; abodhi — (by all) was known; (afterwards) svasāram — her own sister, who went away by herself, the night; sanutaḥ — to a hidden place; apa yuyoti — drives so that she is not seen; manuṣyā — of men; yugāni — the ages Kṛta, Tretā and the rest; praminatī — causing to pass; jārasya — of the Sun, who makes the night end, or her beloved Sun; yoṣā — as wife; cakṣasā — with her own radiance; vi bhāti — shines.

original p. 446

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.11

"When the Uṣas deity, freeing all the end-portions of the mid-region from darkness, was making them shine, everyone came to know her form. She sends her sister, the night, who had gone away of herself, to a hidden place, so that she is not seen.

Bringing to an end the ages of men — Kṛta, Tretā and the rest — which measure their time, she shines with her own radiance as the wife of the Sun, who makes the night end."

English Translation ⁴²

"She has been seen illuminating the boundaries of the sky, and driving into disappearance the spontaneously [sic, as printed: 'the spontaneously night'] night; wearing away the ages of the human race, she shines with light like the bride of the Sun." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.11)

vyūrṇvatī — ūrṇuñ ācchādane | "The root ūrṇu, which gives the sense 'to cover, to hide', forms ūrṇvatī. Here, joined with the preposition vi, the sense is 'removal of covering': that is, removal of the covering that is the darkness of the night. vivṛtāṃs tamasā viyuktān kurvaty uṣāḥ — 'the Uṣas who, with the radiance that has enveloped the world, makes it shine' — this is the meaning."

"In some places, when this is used as an epithet of Uṣas, there is the meaning 'giving' for vyūrṇvatī. For example —"

व्यूर्ण्वती दाशुषे वार्याणि पुनर्ज्योतिर्युवतिः पूर्वथाकः ।

vy ūrṇvatī dāśuṣe vāryāṇi punar jyotir yuvatiḥ pūrvathākaḥ | (R. Saṃ. 3-[?]-6 [?]; the numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Opening out choice things for the giver, the young woman has again made the light as of old."

"— in this Rk, prayacchantī ['giving'] is explained: 'as one who gives'; here too it means that she appears and gives. In such Rks as R. Saṃ. 6-[?]-3 [?], the explanation 'svatejasā ācchādayantī' is given. In all those places the preposition vi has the special sense of 'distinctly'; ūrṇvana is 'to cover by spreading out the radiance completely' — this is the idea."

42. printed in English in the source; Rik 92.11

svasāram — uṣasaḥ prādurbhāve sati svayam eva sarantīm niśām | "Night, who, when the Uṣas appears, goes away of herself": it is explained that with the very rising of Uṣas the night goes away of herself. Here for the word svasāram the meaning 'sister' may also be given. The Night and the Uṣas are sisters, since the Night, together with the Uṣas, is born at the same time —

original p. 447

"— and is a sister of Uṣas who gives place to the Uṣas, her own sister. The relation of these two is also described in many places —"

समानो अध्वा स्वस्रोरेनन्तस्तमन्यान्या चरतो देवशिष्टे ।

samāno adhvā svasror anantas tam anyānyā carato devaśiṣṭe | (R̥. Saṃ. 1-113-3 [?])

स्वस्वा स्वसे ज्यायस्यै योनिमारैगपैत्यस्याः प्रतिचक्ष्येव ।

svasvā svasre jyāyasyai yonim āraig apaity asyāḥ praticakṣyeva | (R̥. Saṃ. 1-124-8 [?]; the Saṃhitā text read with difficulty [?])

अरुषस्य दुहितरा विरूपे स्तृभिरन्या पिपिशे सूरौ अन्या । मिथस्तुरा विचरन्ती पावके मन्म श्रुतं नक्षत ऋच्यमाने ॥

aruṣasya duhitarā virūpe str̥bhir anyā pipiṣe sūro anyā | mīthas turā vicarantī pāvake manma śrutam nakṣata ṛcyamāne || (R̥. Saṃ. 6-49-3 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for the three): "The path of the two sisters is the same, endless; they go along it one after another, taught by the gods. — The younger sister yields her place to the elder, as if looking back at her. — The two daughters of the ruddy one, of different forms: one is adorned with stars, the other with the sun; hastening one after the other, moving about, purifying, the praised pair attain the heard prayer."

"In many Ṛks such as these, describing the sister-relation of the Night and the Uṣas, it is explained that both, by their constant and regulated movement, are the cause of the progress of the world. Hence here too it can be said that svasāram means 'sister'."

sanutaḥ — "ninyam, svasaḥ, sanutaḥ and the like being read among the six names of 'hidden' (Ni. 3-[?] [?]), it means 'hidden', 'not visible to the eye'. As an example for this word the author of the Nirukta cites the Ṛk —"

स सुत्रामा स्ववाँ इन्द्रो अस्मे आराच्छिद्वेषः सनुतर्युयोतु ।

sa sutrāmā svavāṃ indro asme ārāc cid dveṣaḥ sanutar yuyotu |
(Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-44-12 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "May Indra, the good protector, the possessor of his own, drive away from us, even far off, [our] hatred, hiding it."

"Likewise, in many Ṛks such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-[?]-3 [?]; 5-[?]-[?] [?]; 8-[?]-3 [?]; 10-[?]-6 [?] the word is used in the senses of 'secret', 'hidden', 'a place not visible to the eye'. In this context also it is said that the Uṣas drives the night, her own sister, to a hidden place that no one can see."

yugāni praminatī — yugaśabdaḥ kālavacanaḥ | manuṣyāṇām jīvitādikālān | "The word yuga means a span of time, the time of human life. (His explanation may be seen on page 2[?] of Bāl Gaṅgādhara Tilak's book The Arctic Home in the Vedas [as printed; the page number is not legible [?]].) She, causing to end the whole period of men's lives —"

— "She shines with her own radiance, with her beauty, together with her beloved Sun. In this idea the experience of truth and the sight of beauty are joined together. The truth-seeing idea that the Uṣas brings to an end the whole period of human life is expressed generally in all the descriptions of Uṣas. For example —"

ईयुष्टे ये पूर्वतरामपश्यन्व्युच्छन्तीमुषसं मर्त्यासः ।

īyuṣṭe ye pūrvatarām apaśyan vyucchantīm uṣasaṃ martyāsaḥ | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-113-8 [?]; numerals as read; the first word is printed īyuṣṭe [?])

अमिनती दैव्यानि व्रतानि प्रमिनती मनुष्या युगानि ।

aminatī daivyāni vratāni praminatī manuṣyā yugāni | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-124-2 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for both): "Those mortals who saw the earlier Uṣas dawning have gone. — Not infringing the divine laws, bringing to an end the ages of men."

"— in many such places the picture of the brevity of human life is drawn: all who saw this eternal beauty of the Uṣas in former times and were pleased have passed away; those who come afterwards will be the same; but the Uṣas alone is eternal, ever young: so the idea is expressed."

jārasya — rātrer jarayituḥ sūryasya | "Of the Sun, who brings the night to an end, or of the beloved Sun: either meaning may be taken; the second meaning is the more acceptable."

— "As a wife": since afterwards there is a relation of husband and wife, the meaning 'beloved' is appropriate. This married relationship of Uṣas and the Sun is described in many places. For example —"

सूर्यो देवीमुषसं रोचमानां मर्यो न योषामभ्येति पश्चात् ।

sūryo devīm uṣasaṃ rocamānāṃ maryo na yoṣām abhy eti paścāt | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-115-2 [?])

वाजिनीवती सूर्यस्य योषा चित्रामघा राय ईशे वसूनाम् ।

vājinīvatī sūryasya yoṣā citrāmaghā rāya īśe vasūnām | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 7-75-3 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "The Sun follows the shining goddess Uṣas from behind, like a man [following] a young woman. — The strong, the Sun's wife, of wonderful gifts, rules over the wealth of goods."

"— in many such contexts the relation of husband and wife between Sūrya and Uṣas is indicated. The author of the Nirukta also, explaining 'sūryā sūryasya patnī', cites the Ṛk Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-[?]-20 [?] (Ni. 12-[?] [?])."

caḥśasā — ātmīyena prakāśajñena | "By her own sight: with her sight in the form of radiance, being united with the Sun, she shines: this is the meaning."

penultimate of the root; by ciṇo luk (Pā. 6-4-104 [?]) the luk of the ta; the augment aṭ for the stem; the nighāta of a finite verb. sanutaḥ — since it is read in the svārādi group as a final-acute word, by svārādinipātam avyayam (Pā. 1-1-37 [?]) it has the name avyaya; by avyayād āpsupaḥ (Pā. 2-4-82 [?]) the luk of the locative ending that follows it. yuyoti — root yu miśraṇāmiśraṇayoḥ; laṭ, third person singular, tip; by bahulaṃ chandasi ślu for śap; by ślau the root is doubled; by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ the guṇa of the root's u because of tip; since it follows a word, the nighāta. manuṣyā — after the word manuṣya, the genitive-plural ending; by supām sulug the replacement ḍā [for ām]. yugāni — root yujir yoge; the suffix ghañ in the instrumental sense or the passive; by cajoḥ ku ghiṇyatoḥ (Pā. 7-3-52 [?]), since it is ñit, the ku replaces the j; the guṇa of the light penultimate would be obtained, but since the word yuga in the sense of a particular time is read in the umbhādi group, no guṇa; by umbhādīnām ca the final-acute. jārasya — dāra and jāra, by dārajārau kartari ṇiluk ca (Pā. 3-3-20 [?]), are formed irregularly ending in ghañ. || 11 ||

Translation: "Subhagā, of good wealth, citrā, to be honoured, the Uṣas — as a cowherd in the forest spreads out his cattle, so she, prthānā, spreading her lights, urviyā, being wide and great, being such vy aśvait, pervaded all the world. The simile: sindhur na kṣodaḥ — as flowing water in a low place pervades [it] quickly, so [she]. That same Uṣas, dṛśānā, seen together with the rays of the sun, ceti — became known. What is she doing? She does not injure the daivyāni vratāni, the divine rites of the new- and full-moon and the like: that is, she urges the sacrificers to perform them. For it is after the appearance of Uṣas that all rites such as the Agnihotra are performed, not at night. 'Not in the evening is the deity pleased with it', says the śruti (Ṛ. Saṃ. 3-22-1 [?])."

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): prthānā — root prtha prakhyāne, with the causative sense included; the suffix cānas in the habitual sense; luk of śap by bahulam chandasi. sindhuḥ — root syandū prasaravaṇe; saṃprasāraṇa of the root and dha (U. 1-11 [?]) the suffix u; the accent by the continuing rule nit. aśvait — root tuos ci gativṛddhyoḥ; in the luṇ sic for cli; the augment iṭ is absent because the rule on augments is not invariable; the vṛddhi before sic (Pā. 7-2-1 [?]); the iṭ-augment prevented by bahulam chandasi (Pā. 7-2-42 [?]); the elision of s by skoḥ saṃyogādyoḥ. ceti — root citī saṃjñāne; the passive luṅ; no aṭ by bahulaṃ chandasy amānyoge 'pi. ḍṛśānā — śānac in the passive laṭ from ḍṛś; the luk of the stem-suffix by bahulaṃ chandasi."

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 92.12)

subhagā — one who has excellent wealth; citrā — adorable; the Uṣas deity; paśūn na — as a cowherd lets his cattle spread over a pasture; sindhuḥ na kṣodaḥ — as a flowing river spreads its water; pṛthānā — spreading her radiance; urvyā — widely; vy aśvait — has pervaded the world; daivyāni — those connected with the gods; vrātāni — sacrificial acts; aminatī — not injuring; sūryasya — of the Sun; raśmibhiḥ — together with the rays; ḍṛśānā — becoming visible; ceti — became known.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.12

"The Uṣas deity, who has excellent wealth and is adorable, has pervaded the world, spreading her radiance widely, as a cowherd lets his cattle spread over the green meadows in all directions, and as a flowing river spreads its water. And without injuring the sacrificial acts connected with the gods, she became visible with the rays of the Sun and perceptible to all."

English Translation ⁴⁴

"The affluent and adorable Ushas has sent her rays as a cowherd drives the cattle to pasture, and spreads expansive like flowing water ; She is seen associated with the rays of the Sun, unimpeding sacred ceremonies." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.12)

citrā — pūjanīyā | "The adorable Uṣas deity. For the word citra, the meaning 'delightful, wonderful, or attractive' is commonly well known (cāyanīya). But here it means 'adorable'. The author of the Nirukta, citing the Ṛk that follows this, explains the word citra there as citraṃ-maṃhanīyam ('respectable'), 'to be honoured'; so it should be explained here too."

sindhuḥ na kṣodaḥ — "Since āvanayaḥ, yahvyaḥ, khāḥ and the like are read among the thirty-seven names of rivers (Ni. 1-[?] [?]), sindhu means 'river'; since arṇaḥ, kṣodaḥ and the like are read among the hundred names of water, kṣoda means 'water'. The simile here is apt: as a river spreads its water widely without being obstructed, so the Uṣas too spreads her radiance widely."

vy aśvait — śvatir gatyārthaḥ | vividhaṃ gacchati trīn api lokān prati | "She spreads her rays in various ways towards all the three worlds."

urviyā prthānā — "Spreading very widely: this is the meaning. The attribute prthānā is an epithet of the Uṣas who spreads over the sky and shows her lustre."

वहन्ति सीमरुणासो रुशन्तो गावः सुभगामुर्विया पृथानाम् ।

vahanti sīm aruṇāso ruśanto gāvaḥ subhagām urviyā prthānām | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 6-64-3 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read, doubtful [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "The ruddy, shining cows carry her, the fortunate one, spreading widely."

daivyāni vratāni aminatī — "'Not injuring the sacrificial and other rites connected with the gods': this is the meaning. In the Ṛk 1-124-2 [?] both the idea of the previous Ṛk, praminatī manuṣyā yugāni ('wearing out the ages of men'), and the idea of this Ṛk, aminatī daivyāni vratāni ('not infringing the divine laws'), are brought together:"

aminatī daivyāni vratāni praminatī manuṣyā yugāni | īyusīṇām upamā śasvatīnām āyatīnām prathamōṣā vy adyaut || (Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-124-2 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Not infringing the divine laws, wearing out the ages of men — last of the endless [dawns] that have gone, first of those that are to come, the Uṣas has shone forth."

"Explaining the poetic idea of this Ṛk and its style of composition, a critic named Bloomfield has greatly praised it. In his own language, describing the beauty of this Ṛk, he says:"

"Stanza I. 124-2. is the high-water mark of Vedic composition. The relation of the two pairs of words may be expressed in the proportion: aminatī : āyatīnām = praminatī : īyusīṇām. That is to say: The dawns preserve the laws of the Gods, aminatī, by their regular appearance, āyatīnām; the ages of men waste away, praminatī, as the dawns fade day by day, īyusīṇām." (Rig-Veda Repetitions I. P. 108)

Kannada (the printed English quotation is as printed; the two Sanskrit-script words are given in Kannada in the print): "...'īyusīṇām' may be said. In this way, putting together into this one Ṛk the ideas of the two Ṛks 1-92-11 and 1-92-12 [as read], he praises greatly the order of the contrasts, in the excellent poetic style, and the expression of the idea." ⁴⁵ prthānā — root prtha prakhyāne; since the sense of ṇic is included in the meaning of the root, after the ṇic-ending sense, in the habitual sense the suffix cānaś; by bahulaṃ chandasi the luk of śap; since it is cit, by cit the final-acute.

sindhuh — root syandū prasravaṇe; by syandeh saṃprasāraṇaṃ dhas ca (Uṇādi 1-11 [?]) the suffix u; because of its connexion, the d of the root becomes dh, and the y takes saṃprasāraṇa; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. 6-1-108 [?]) the preceding form; since nīt continues from the preceding sūtra, because the suffix u is nīt, by ñnityādir nityam the initial-acute. urviyā — explained in the fifth Ṛk of this very sūkta [92.9 [?]]. aśvait — root tuosvi gativṛddhyoh; luṇ, third person singular, tip; by itaś ca the i is elided; by vibhāṣā 'ñ-sveḥ (Pā. 3-1-49 [?], printed '३-१-५४, ४९') the optional añ; since there is a choice, by cleḥ sic the cli is replaced by sic; by āgamaśāstram anityam the augment iṭ, which by ārdhadhātukasyeḍ valādeḥ would come, does not come; since the sic is not iṭ-beginning, by hmyantakṣaṇaśvasajāgrṇiśvyedhitām... (Pā. 7-2-5 [?]) the prohibition of vṛddhi does not apply; by sici vṛddhiḥ parasmaipadeṣu (Pā. 7-2-1 [?]) the vṛddhi of the ik vowel of the root; by bahulaṃ chandasi (Pā. 7-3-97 [?]) since the tip is apṛkta the augment iṭ does not come; since the sic is followed by a consonant cluster beginning with s, by skoḥ saṃyogādyor ante ca (Pā. 8-2-29 [?]) the initial s is elided; the augment aṭ for the stem; since it follows a word, the nighāta. aminatī — root mīñ himsāyām, of the kryādi class; in the present sense śatr; by kryādibhyaḥ śnā the stem-suffix; since it belongs to the sthādi list, by sthādīnām hrasvaḥ the shortening of the root; since śatr is jī, by śnābhyastayor ātaḥ (Pā. 6-4-112 [?]) the ā of śnā is elided; in the feminine, since śatr is ugit, by ugitaś ca the suffix nīp; since it is a nañ-tatpuruṣa, the first member (a-) keeps its natural accent. ceti — root citī saṃjñāne; in the passive luṇ, third person singular, ta; for the cli, ciṇ; because of it, the guṇa of the light penultimate; by ciṇo luk the elision of the ta; by bahulaṃ chandasy amāṇyoge 'pi the aṭ does not come to the stem; the nighāta. ḍṛśānā — root ḍṛśir prekṣaṇe; in the passive, in the present sense, śānac; by bahulaṃ chandasi the luk of the stem-suffix (śap); in the feminine, since it ends in a, ṭāp; by cit the final-acute. || 12 ||

Translation: "In the prātaranuvāka, in the Uṣasya kratu, in the Uṣṇih metre, the three Ṛks beginning uṣas tac citram are applied; and in the Āśvina-śastra. In the section athoṣasya it is prescribed: 'uṣas tac citram ā bhareti tisra auṣṇihaṃ' (Ā. 4-14). — O vājīnīvati: vāja is food in the form of oblation; the action that has it is vājīnī; O Uṣas deity, who are united with that action: citraṃ, that wonderful, desirable wealth, ā bhara, bring, give to us, by which wealth we hold, dhāmahe, bear, tokaṃ, our son, and tanayaṃ, his son too. Here in the Nirukta: 'uṣas tac citraṃ cāyanīyaṃ dhanam āharāsmabhyam annavati yena putrāṃś ca pautrāṃś ca dadhīmahi' (Nī. 12-6): 'O Uṣas, bring us that wonderful, desirable wealth, you who have food, by which we may support our sons and grandsons.' Dhāmahe — in the laṭ of dadhāti, the luk of śap by bahulaṃ chandasi; by vyatyaya the initial-acute. Or, in the loṭ, the augment āt [read: aṭ] for the first-person by loty aḍuttamasya pic ca, and the suffix is treated as pit; so the suffix being pit and unaccented, the accent of the root remains. [The bhāṣya's final clause on aitva (Pā. 3-4-93) and the ye-connexion preventing nighāta is clotted in the print [?].]" vājinīvati — O one united with the action of oblations; uṣaḥ — O Uṣas deity; yena — by which; tokaṃ ca — a son; tanayaṃ ca — his son too (grandson also); dhāmahe — (we) might be able to support; citram — (desired) various; tat — wealth; asmabhyam — to us; ā bhara — bring.

original p. 455

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.13

"O Uṣas deity, united with sacrificial acts in which oblations are offered: bring us in many ways wealth of that kind — wealth we desire — by which we may sustain our children and grandchildren."

"In reciting the Ṛks of the Uṣṇih metre, belonging to the Uṣasya kratu at the time of reciting the prātarānuvāka mantras, these three Ṛks beginning uṣas tac citram are to be recited; and these Ṛks are applied at the time of reciting the mantras of the Āśvinaśāstra too: so it is stated by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section athoṣasya, in the sūtra uṣas tac citram ā bhara (Ā. 4-14)."

tokaṃ ca tanayaṃ ca — "tuk, tokam, tanayaḥ and the like are read among the fifteen names of offspring (Ni. 3-[?] [?]); so the meaning of both words is 'son'. Looked at crudely, the meaning of these two words is one. But in usage there is the custom of speaking of 'son and grandson' together. Not only that: the author of the Nirukta, in tokaṃ tudyateḥ ['toka from tud'] and tanayaṃ tanoteḥ ['tanaya from tan'], has shown the technical difference in the two. Explaining this, the commentators say: 'tokam iti putraḥ sa hi nityaṃ pitrā vinayitā tudyate idaṃ kuru idaṃ mā kāṛṣīr iti | tanayaṃ — tanoteḥ pautram | tadvr̥ttitarāṃ pituḥ sakāśāt tatam bhavati' — 'toka means a son: for he is constantly goaded by his father, "do this, do not do that"; tanaya is from tan, a grandson: he becomes wider [more extended] than the father': that is, the father who gives instruction, giving a fixed injunction of conduct and so regulating the son's life, is the reason why the son is called toka, and the grandson, as the means of extending and prospering the line, is called tanaya: so the meaning arises (Ni. 10-[?] [?])."

dhāmahe — dadhīmahi (Ni. 12-6 [?]) | "'To support': that is, 'we protect'. By what wealth we shall be able to protect our sons, grandsons and the like —"

citram — maṃhanīyam (Ni. 12-6 [?]) | "'Bring us wealth that is to be honoured': this is the sense of the prayer."

"After this same prayer of the same order, the Ṛk composed by the ṛṣi Vāmadeva, in which Uṣas is addressed, [is cited:]

[By hṛgrahor bhaś chandasi (Vārttika) the h is replaced by bh — printed: the rule is cited for hṛ, hence the root's form here [?].] The tiñ-nighāta. vājinīvati — as a vocative, by āmantritasya ca (Pā. 8-1-19 [?]) the nighāta accent. dhāmahe — root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ; laṭ, first person plural, with the suffix mahiñ; by ṭita ātmanepadānām ṭer e the final e; by bahulam chandasi the luk of śap. Or, in the loṭ, by āḍuttamasya picca (Pā. 3-4-92 [?]) the augment āṭ for the suffix; the suffix is treated as pit; hence by anudāttau suppitau the suffix is unaccented, and the accent of the root remains. If we take it to be a loṭ form, then by eta ai (Pā. 3-4-93 [?]) the ai-substitution is to be understood as not occurring, by vyatyaya. Since yena ("by which") precedes and is connected, by yadvṛttānnityam the nighāta does not occur. ॥ 13 ॥

Translation: "In the prātaranuvāka, in the Aśvina kratu, in the Uṣṇih metre, this triplet beginning aśvinā vartiḥ is applied; and in the Āśvina-śastra. So it is prescribed: 'aśvinā vartir asmad āśvināveha gacchatam iti ṛcau' (Ā. 4-14 [?]). — [Because of their association with the Uṣas, the two Aśvins, held in mind, are praised by this triplet beginning with idam (the reading of this clause is doubtful [?]).] O Aśvins, possessed of horses or of pervading nature, divine dasrā, destroyers of foes, ā, all around, in such a way that our vartiḥ — our house, the means of our dwelling — may become gomat, abounding in many cows, and hiraṇyavat, endowed with wealth that is good and delightful: so, being samanasā, of one mind [that is, well-disposed], do you ni yacchataṃ — turn and drive — your chariot arvāk, in the direction of, towards our house."

Grammar tail of the bhāṣya of Rik 92.16 (concluded from p. 461; noted briefly): aśvinā — the ending replaced by ā by supāṃ sulug. vartiḥ — "that in which one dwells (virtate) is vartiḥ, the house"; the Uṇādi suffix isi. asmat — the luk of the ablative (read in the print as 'ṣaṣṭhyā', where a pañcamī would be expected [?]) by supāṃ sulug. samanasā — "those two whose minds are alike are samanasau"; by samānasya chandasi the replacement sa for samāna.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 92.16)

dasrā — destroyers of foes; aśvinā — O Aśvin deities; asmat — our; vartiḥ — house, our dwelling-place; ā — all around; gomat — so as to be full of cows; hiraṇyavat — so as to be filled with wealth that is good and delightful; samanasā — with a mind of favour; ratham — your chariot; arvāk — (towards our house) facing; ni yacchatam — turn and drive.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.16

English Translation ⁵⁸

"Aswins [sic], destroyers of foes, turn your chariot towards our abode, so that with your favour it may become full of cattle and gold." — as printed.

"At the time of reciting the prātaranuvāka mantras, when reciting the Ṛks in the Uṣṇih metre belonging to the Aśvina kratu, the three Ṛks beginning aśvinā vartiḥ are to be recited, and in the recitation of the Āśvina-śāstra mantras too these Ṛks are to be recited; this is shown by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra in the sūtra 'aśvinā vartir asmadāśvināveha gacchatam iti tṛcau' (Ā. 4-14 [?])."

58. printed in English in the source; Rik 92.16

"The origin of the Āśvin deities, their nature and their place were explained in detail earlier: see Part 4, page 75 [as printed]."

dasrā — dasu upakṣaye — śatrūṇām upakṣapayitārau | "Dasu means 'to destroy': those who destroy enemies. Or, as divine physicians (devavaidyā), the destroyers of diseases. The meaning 'destroyers of enemies' or 'destroyers of disease through being divine physicians' is given to dasrā; it may also mean darśanīyau, 'beautiful in form'. In this Ṛk the bhāṣya-writer explains it as destroyers of enemies. Of the Āśvins, the sons of Saraṇyū, one is named Dasra and the other Nāsatya; but it is well known that both together are commonly called dasrā."

vartih — vartanahetubhūtaṃ grham | "Sāyaṇa explains 'the house that is the basis for living'; Skandasvāmin, 'vartiṣā [or similar; the printed Sanskrit before it is clotted [?]] prasiddhena pathā — 'by the well-known road', that is, 'by the well-known or excellent road'. Wherever the word vartih occurs, Sāyaṇa generally explains it as 'house', and Skandasvāmin as 'a well-known or excellent road'. For example, in Ṛks such as 1-34-9 [?]; 1-112-[?] [?]; 1-[?]-3 [?]; 1-[?]-4 [?] the two commentators have given different meanings in the same way. It is also a special point that the sūktas in which these Ṛks occur are all addressed to the Āśvin deities."

arvāg ratham samanāsā ni yacchatam — "'With a mind of favour towards us, turn your chariot and come towards our house.' The chariot of the Āśvin deities is exceedingly well known, both for its beauty and for its marvellousness; so in prayers to these deities there is a description of them together with their chariot, which is endowed with greatness, and a prayer to them. For example, in the seventh maṇḍala, by Vasiṣṭha, and in the eighth, by Śyāvāśva Ātreya, in the very same order of this Ṛk, the Aśvin deities are prayed to in this way —" अर्वाग्रथं समनसा नि यच्छतं पिबतं सोम्यं मधु ।

arvāg ratham samanāsā ni yacchataṁ pibataṁ somyaṁ madhu | (Ṛ. Saṁ. 7-69-3 [?]; numerals read from small digits, doubtful)

अर्वाग्रथं नि यच्छतं पिबतं सोम्यं मधु ।

arvāg ratham ni yacchataṁ pibataṁ somyaṁ madhu | (Ṛ. Saṁ. 8-35-23 [?]; numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for both): "With one mind turn your chariot this way, and drink the Soma-sweet."

"— thus, in all the prayers made to them, the 'turning of the chariot to face this way' is praised."

Translation: "Uṣarbudhaḥ — the horses awakened at dawn — ā vahantu, let them bring iha, to this sacrifice, somapītaye, for the drinking of Soma, the two Aśvins, the dasrā, destroyers of foes. What are they like? Devā — shining, or endowed with the qualities of generosity and the like; mayobhuvā — makers of mayas, of health-giving happiness: 'The Aśvins are indeed the physicians of the gods', says the śruti (Ai. Brā. 1-18 [?]). Hiraṇyavartanī — [by vartanī, the chariot is meant (the printed derivation is clotted [?])]: those two whose vartanī, chariot, is golden."

Grammar tail: in devā and the next words, the ending is replaced by ā by supāṃ sulug. somapītaye — root pā pāne; ktin in the abstract sense; ī by ghumāsthā...; somasya pītiḥ somapītiḥ; since it is in the dāsībhārādi group, the first member keeps its natural accent.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 92.18)

uṣarbudhaḥ — the horses awakened at dawn; iha — to this (our) place of sacrifice; somapītaye — for the drinking of the Soma-juice; devā — those of generous, giving nature; mayobhuvā — givers of happiness; hiraṇyavartanī — riders of a golden chariot; dasrā — destroyers of foes, the Aśvin deities; ā vahantu — let them bring.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 92.18

"The Aśvin deities are of generous giving nature, givers of happiness, riders of a golden chariot, and destroyers of foes. May the horses awakened at dawn bring such Aśvin deities of great glory to this our place of sacrifice, to drink the Soma-juice."

English Translation ⁶⁴

64. printed in English in the source; Rik 92.18

"May the horses awakened at dawn bring hither, to drink the Soma-juice, the divine Aswins [sic], who are the givers of happiness, the destroyers of foes, seated in a golden chariot." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगळ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 92.18)

uṣarbudhaḥ — uṣasi prabuddhā aśvāḥ | "'Horses awakened at the time of dawn.' This word is used in general for sacrificers who are awake at dawn for the sacrifice, and for the deities invited to receive the oblation, and in particular as an epithet of Agni. In the whole Ṛksaṃhitā there are only two places where it means the horses of the Aśvin deities: in this Ṛk, and in the Ṛk 4-45-4 [?] [numerals as read, doubtful]; in both it means the horses of the Aśvin deities."

devā

— "Shining ones, or those whose nature is generosity and the like."

original p. 468

mayobhuvā — "śimbātā, śatarā [as read, doubtful [?]] and the like being read among the twenty names of happiness (Ni. 3-11 [?]), mayas means 'happiness'. The epithet mayobhuvāḥ is applied generally to other deities too: all of them are, in some way or other, givers of happiness to sacrificers. But among the Aśvin deities there is one special feature —"

अश्विनौ वै देवानां भिषजौ ।

aśvinau vai devānāṃ bhiṣajau | (Ai. Brā. 1-18 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "The Aśvins are indeed the physicians of the gods."

"— from śruti-sentences such as this the Aśvin deities are well known as the physicians of the gods, and as bestowing a happiness in the form of health even on the sacrificers who have secured the favour of the gods. Therefore here: mayasaḥ ārogyapradasya sukhasya bhāvayitārau — 'those who give happiness in the form of health'."

hiranyavartanī — "vartanī means the chariot, or the fellow of the chariot wheel (the outer rim), or the road of the chariot. hiranyavartanī: in most places it is explained as 'a golden chariot'. Here it means 'those who have a golden chariot'. Except for the Rk 6-[?]-2 [?] of the Rksamhitā, this epithet in all other places is applied to the Aśvin deities. In some places the two epithets dasrā hiranyavartanī occur together. For example —"

दस्रा हिरण्यवर्तनी सुषुम्ना सिन्धुवाहसा माध्वी मम श्रुतं हवम् ।

वावृधाना शुभस्पती दस्रा हिरण्यवर्तनी ।

vāvṛdhānā śubhas patī dasrā hiranyavartanī | (R. Saṃ. 8-5-11 [?])

दस्रा हिरण्यवर्तनी पिबतं सोम्यं मधु ।

dasrā hiranyavartanī pibatam somyam madhu | (R. Saṃ. 8-8-1 [?])

दस्रा हिरण्यवर्तनी शुभस्पती पातं सोममृतावृधा ।

dasrā hiranyavartanī śubhas patī pātam somam ṛtāvṛdhā | (R. Saṃ. 8-87-5 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for the group): "O Dasras of the golden path, gracious, carried by the river [?], sweet, hear my call. — Growing strong, lords of splendour, Dasras of the golden chariot. — Dasras of the golden chariot, drink the sweet Soma. — Dasras of the golden chariot, lords of splendour, drink the Soma, increasers of Rta." ⁶⁵

65. The Saṃhitā texts and numerals of these four are read from the print and are doubtful in places [?].

"— in all these Ṛks the two attributes dasrā and hiranyavartanī together describe the form and the beauty of the Aśvin deities."

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 92.18, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

somapītaye — somasya pītiḥ somapītiḥ; root pā pāne; in the abstract sense, by striyām ktin (Pā. 3-3-94 [?]) the suffix ktin; since it is kit, by ghumāsthāgāpājahātisām hali (Pā. 6-4-66 [?]) the ī for the root, when it is followed by it [a consonant-beginning kit suffix]: pītiḥ. Since it is read in the dāsībhārādi group, the first member keeps its natural accent. vahantu — root vaha prāpaṇe; loṭ, third person plural, the suffix jhi; by jho'ntaḥ (Pā. 7-1-3 [?]) the replacement anta; by eruh (Pā. 3-4-86 [?]) the u; the stem-suffix śap; by ato guṇe (Pā. 6-1-97 [?]) the a of the stem and a of anta become one (the print says 'pūrvarūpa' [?]); since it follows a word [read: since it stands before a finite verb], by tiṇ atīnaḥ (Pā. 8-1-28 [?]) the nighāta accent. || 18 || ⁶⁶

"The sūkta agnīṣomau is the ninth sūkta in the fourteenth anuvāka. There are twelve Ṛks in it. The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Gotama. The first three Ṛks are in the Anuṣṭubh metre. The three from the ninth are in the Gāyatrī metre. The eighth Ṛk is in the Jagatī or the Triṣṭubh metre. The remaining five Ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre. Agni and Soma are the deities of this sūkta. In the Anukramaṇī it is said 'agnīṣomau dvādaśāgnīṣomīyam ādyās tisro 'nuṣṭubha upāntyās tisro gāyatriyo 'ṣṭamī jagatī veti'. In the animal sacrifice connected with Agnīṣoma, when the oblations of the vapā and the puroḍāśa are offered in the fire, the first three Ṛks of this sūkta are to be used in order as puronuvākyā mantras; so the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra explains it by the sūtra 'agnīṣomāv imaṃ su me yuvam etāni divi rocanāni iti tṛcau' (Ā. 3-8 [?])." ¹

Grammar tail: agniṣomau — "Agni and Soma": in the dvandva, by idagneḥ somavarunaḥ (Pā. 6-3-27 [?]) the ī; by agneḥ stutstomasomāḥ (Pā. 8-3-81 [?]) the ṣatva; in a deity-dvandva the natural accent of both members would be obtained [by devatādvandve ca], but by āmantritasya ca the initial-acute. vṛṣaṇā — ā by supāṃ sulug; by vā ṣapūrvasya nigame the lengthening of the penultimate is optional, so it does not occur.

agnīṣomau — agnīś ca somaś ca agnīṣomau; a dvandva compound; by īdagneḥ somavarunayoḥ (Pā. 6-3-27 [?]) the word agni takes ī, since the word soma follows; by agneḥ stutstomasomāḥ (Pā. 8-3-82 [?]) the s of the word soma takes ṣatva; a vocative dual; by devatādvandve ca (Pā. 6-2-141 [?]) the natural accent of both members would be obtained, but by āmantritasya ca (Pā. 6-1-198 [?]) the initial-acute accent comes. śṛṇutam — root śru śravaṇe; loṭ, second person dual, tas; since a ñit is not a prescription here [as printed [?]], the replacement tam; by śruvaḥ śr ca (Pā. 3-1-74 [?]) the replacement śr for the root; the stem-suffix śnu for śap; since it is apit and sārvadhātuka, and by being ñit [read: counted as ñit], the guṇa does not occur. vṛṣaṇā — by supām sulug the ending au is replaced by ā; by sarvanāmasthāne cāsambuddhau (Pā. 6-4-8 [?]) the lengthening of the penultimate would have to occur; but by vā ṣapūrvasya nigame (Pā. 6-4-9 [?]), since it is optional, it does not occur. havam — root hveñ spardhāyām śabde ca; to it, by bhāve 'nupasargasya (Pā. 3-3-75 [?]) the suffix ap; because of that connexion, saṃprasāraṇa; by saṃprasāraṇāc ca the preceding form; when hu + a stands, by sārvadhātukārdhadhātukayoḥ the guṇa; the replacement av; since ap is pit, the accent of the root remains. — agnīṣomā — O Agni and Soma deities; yaḥ — whichever sacrificer; adya — in this sacrificial rite; vām — you (addressing you); idaṃ vacaḥ — this speech in the form of praise; saparyati — offers with respectful worship; tasmai — to that sacrificer; suvīryam — endowed with excellent capacity; svaśvyam — endowed with excellent horses; gavām — of cattle; poṣam — prosperity; dhattam — give.

[havam, continued —] "...sūktāni — root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; when su precedes, the participle suffix kta; since it is kit, by vacisvapiyajādīnām kiti (Pā. 6-1-15 [?]) the saṃprasāraṇa; the preceding form; the word sūkta. By sūpamānāt ktaḥ (Pā. 6-2-144 [?]) the final-member final-acute accent." haryatam — root harya gatikāntyoh, of the bhvādi class; kānti means 'wish'; loṭ, second person dual; since it follows a word, the nighāta accent. bhavatam — as before, loṭ, second person dual; since it follows a word, the nighāta accent does not occur [in the print: since the finite verb stands before a word [?]]; since śap is pīṭ, it is unaccented; since the lasārvadhātuka (tam) comes after an udāttopadeśa root, by tāsyānudātteti... (Pā. 6-1-186 [?]) it is unaccented; then the accent of the root remains. || 1 ||

8. The sūtra as printed reads "...vāmānyaṁ divo mātariśvā jabhāra"; the words run together in the print and are given here as read [?].

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.2

"O Agni and Soma deities, to the sacrificer who, in this rite, offers this praise to you, give prosperity of cattle endowed with excellent capacity and with excellent horses."

English Translation ⁹

"Agni and Soma, grant to him who addresses this prayer to you both, store of cattle with sound strength and good horses." — as printed.

"In the Paurṇamāsyēṣṭi, for invoking the deities in the upāṃśuyāja offered to the deities Agni and Soma, the Ṛk agnīṣomā yo adya is to be used as the puronuvākyā mantra; the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra shows this, in the section uktā devatā, by the sūtra 'agnīṣomā yo adya vāmānyaṃ divo mātariśvā jabhāra' (Ā. 1-6 [?])."

saparyati — "irajyati, vidhema, saparyati and the like being read among the names of acts of attendance (Ni. 3-13 [?]), it means respectful worship. Citing the example 'rodasī saparyataḥ' (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-30-1 [?]), the author of the Nirukta (Ni. 10-10 [?]) explains 'paricarataḥ', that is, 'pūjayataḥ', 'they worship'. So here too it means respectful worship, an offering."

suvīryaṃ svaśvyāṃ gavāṃ poṣaṃ — "It has been described in many places that Agni and Soma, both these deities, are lords of all wealth. As in 'dadhad ratnāni dāśuṣe' (R. Saṃ. 1-12-3 [?]), said of Agni, so of Soma too (R. Saṃ. 9-3-6 [?]) it is addressed. The kind of jewels that are meant is explained:"

गोजिन्नः सोमो रथजिद्धिरण्यजित्स्वर्जिदब्जित्पवते सहस्रजित् ।

gojin naḥ somo rathajid dhiranya-jit svarjida bhit-pavate sahasrajit | (R. Saṃ. 9-[?]-4 [?]; the print is blurred in places: abjit pavate read with doubt [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Soma, winner of cows for us, winner of chariots, of gold, of heaven, of the waters, flows clear, winner of thousands."

"— as this Rk explains, the power and the generosity of Soma are described: he is the one who grants to sacrificers many kinds of wealth, namely cows, chariots, gold and the like."

वसुर्वसूनां क्षयसि त्वमेक इद्यावा च यानि पृथिवी च पुष्यतः ।

vasur vasūnāṃ kṣayasi tvam eka id dyāvā ca yāni pṛthivī ca puṣyataḥ | (R. Saṃ. 10-41-3 [?]; numerals as read, doubtful)

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "You alone, the good of goods, rule over those [goods] which heaven and earth nourish."

"— as in this Rk, in many places Agni is praised: 'Agni alone is the lord of all kinds of wealth, and both heaven and earth are nourished by the wealth that this giver gives.' So the deities Agni and Soma, the lords of all wealth, are prayed to — as is customary — for wealth in the form of excellent cattle, horses and the like, to be granted."

agnīṣomā — for the ending au of this [word], by supām sulug the replacement ā; the formation of the form was explained in the previous mantra. vacaḥ — root vaca paribhāṣaṇe; by sarvadhātubhya asun (Uṇādi 4-189 [?]) the suffix asun; since it is nit, the initial-acute accent. saparyati — root sapara pūjāyām [as printed; a nominal verb-stem [?]]; since it is read in the kaṇḍvādi list, by kaṇḍvādibhyo yak (Pā. 3-1-27 [?]) the suffix yak in its own sense; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ it takes the name of a root; laṭ, third person singular; since yaḥ ("who") is related, the nighāta does not occur; the accent of yak remains. dhattam — root ḍudhāñ dhāraṇapoṣaṇayoḥ, of the juhotyādi class; loṭ, second person dual; the replacement tam; ślu for the stem-suffix; the root is doubled; by śnābhyastayor ātaḥ (Pā. 6-4-112 [?]) the elision of the root's ā; by khari ca (Pā. 8-4-55 [?]) the dh becomes t; since it follows a word, the nighāta accent. —

gavām — the word go, in the genitive plural; by sāvekācas ṛtīyādir vibhaktiḥ (Pā. 6-1-168 [?]) the acute on the case-ending would be obtained; since the prohibition na goṣvansāvavarṇarāḍaṅkrutkṛdbhyaḥ (Pā. 6-1-182 [?]) applies, the natural accent of the stem remains. || 2 ||

"O Agni and Soma deities, may the sacrificer who offers you the oblation of ghee and the oblation of caru, puroḍāśa and the like obtain, together with sons, grandsons and others, excellent strength and a full lifetime."

English Translation ¹⁰

"Agni and Soma, may he who offers you the oblation of clarified butter, enjoy sound strength with progeny, through all his life." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगुह्य ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 93.3)

haviṣkṛtim — "The oblation in the form of caru, puroḍāśa and the like."

10. printed in English in the source; Rik 93.3

viśvam āyuh — "andhaḥ, vājaḥ and the like being read among the names of food (Ni. 2-7 [?]), here it can be 'all kinds of food'; or, if we take āyus in the sense of 'life', as said in places such as praṇa āyūṃṣi tāriṣat (R. Saṃ. 10-[?]-[?] [?]), it means 'in our lifetime completely', or 'in our whole life'. Or the meaning may be given 'may we obtain a full life'."

prajayā suvīryaṃ viśvam āyuh

— "That Soma, and Agni too, are increasers of life and favour those who have offspring, is described in many places, and their generosity is described. For example —"

| वयोवन्तं पुष्यति क्षयमग्ने शतायुषम् ।

vayovantaṃ puṣyati kṣayam agne śatāyūṣam | (R. Saṃ. 6-2-5 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read, doubtful)

| आतूर्तं श्रावयत्पतिं पुत्रं ददाति दाशुषे ।

ātūrtaṃ śrāvayat patiṃ putraṃ dadāti dāśuṣe | (R. Saṃ. 5-23-5 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read, doubtful)

| त्वं च सोम नो वशो जीवातुं न मरामहे ।

tvaṃ ca soma no vaśo jīvātum na marāmahe | (R. Saṃ. 1-91-6 [read in the print; this is Rik 91.6, p. 347 above])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for the first two, which are doubtful in reading): "[Agni] nourishes a household possessed of vigour, living a hundred years. — [He] gives a quick-going [?] son to the giver, who makes the master famous." ¹¹

original p. 478

"— in all such places it is said that Agni and Soma both favour the sacrificer who offers oblations with the prosperity of offspring in the form of sons, grandsons and the like, with a long life, and with freedom from death; and showing this support, they pray in this way that all this wealth be given to such a giver of oblations."

11. Both first citations are read with considerable doubt [?].

(vi) aśnavat

— "'May he obtain in many ways': this is the meaning."

"Just as in this Ṛk, the order of words viśvam āyur vyaśnutaḥ occurs in other places in the Ṛgveda too. For example —"

पुत्रिणा ता कुमारिणा विश्वमायुर्व्यश्नुतः ।

putriṇā tā kumārīṇā viśvam āyur vyaśnutaḥ | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 8-31-8 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for both): "Those two, with sons and with children, attain the full life. — Remain just here, do not be parted; attain the full lifespan, playing with sons and grandsons, rejoicing in your own house."

"— as said in such Ṛks, it is described in many places that for the donor of oblations the gain of all sons, grandsons and the rest, and the delight arising from them, as well as a long life, is obtained."

Translation (the whole bhāṣya, begun on p. 479): "O Agni and Soma, we have come to know that vīryam, prowess, of yours — that capacity which is about to be told — yad, by which you amuṣṇītam, carried off [apāhārṣtam], gāḥ avasam, the cows, [that are] food in the form of cattle, paṇim, from Paṇi [the case-ending is varied: from the asura of this name]. And likewise bṛsayasya — bṛsi has the sense of enveloping; he who envelops all is bṛsaya, the asura Tvaṣṭṛ. Śeṣaḥ, the offspring of that asura ('śeṣa is a name for offspring; it is left behind, it is sent forth', says Yāska, Nī. 3-2 [?]) — Vṛtra, born of Tvaṣṭṛ [reading doubtful [?]] — avātiratam: you slew; avatirati is a verb of killing. Since, being of the nature of prāṇa and apāna [the in- and out-breaths], you two were established in Vṛtra, his death occurred. So it is handed down: 'From him, as he yawned, Agni and Soma went out; or the prāṇa and apāna abandoned him then' (Tai. Saṃ. 2-5-2-4 [?]). Then, after the slaying of Vṛtra, you avindatam, obtained jyotiḥ, the one shining luminary, the Sun, going in the sky, bahubhyaḥ, for the sake of many people; alapsāthām [you two have obtained]. Tat vīryam ceti — that prowess by which all this is done has been known by us: this is the meaning."

Grammar tail: ceti — root citī saṃjñāne; in the passive luṇ the ciṇ for cli by Pā. 3-1-66 [?]; the luk of the ta after ciṇ. amuṣṇītam — root muṣa steye of the kryādi class. avasam — the Uṇādi suffix asac from av. śeṣaḥ — the replacement su for the accusative by supām sulug. ekaṃ — root iṇ gatau; the suffix kan by iṇśīṇ... (U. 3-43 [?]); since it is nit, the initial-acute.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 93.4)

agnīṣomā — O Agni and Soma deities; vām — your; yat — by which prowess; gāḥ avasam — the food in the form of cattle; paṇim — from the demon named Paṇi; amuṣṇītam — you carried off; (and) bṛsayasya — of the demon named Bṛsaya (Tvaṣṭṛ); śeṣaḥ — the son, Vṛtra; avātiratam — you slew; (not only that) jyotiḥ ekam — the one shining Sun; bahubhyaḥ — for the benefit of many people; avindatam — you obtained; tat vīryam — that capacity; ceti — was known (by us).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.4

"O Agni and Soma deities: that capacity of yours, by which you carried off the food in the form of cattle from the demon named Paṇi, and slew Vṛtra, the son of the demon Bṛsaya, and, moreover, made the one radiant Sun move in the mid-region for the benefit of all human beings — we all have well understood."

English Translation ¹⁴

"Agni and Soma, that prowess of yours by which you have carried off the cows that were the food of Pani, is well known to us ; you have slain the offspring of Brisaya, and you have acquired the one luminary (the Sun) for the benefit of the many." — as printed.

avasam — "The author of the Nirukta (Ni. 1-17 [?]) shows that the word avasam arises from the root av, which has the sense of motion, and, giving the example of the last pāda of the Ṛk 10-[?]-10 [?] [numerals as read, doubtful], 'avasāya padvate rudra

— "The wicked nature of the demon named Paṇi, or of the group of demons — what sort of harm came from them to the Vedic worshippers who were intent on performing sacrifices — and how chiefly Indra, as helper, brought back the stolen cows to prevent the harassment of these demons, and so helped the sacrificers, has been explained in detail in the previous volumes. That Agni too was a helper in these contexts is described in the Ṛks —"

tvaṃ dasyūṃ r okaso agna āja uru jyotir janayann āryāya | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 7-5-6 [?]; the Saṃhitā text as read [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for both): "Agni drove away [or confounded] those enemies of Paṇi — faithless, of weak speech, fettered, unworshipping, non-sacrificing — and made the former ones [lower] than the latter, the non-sacrificers. — You, Agni, drove the Dasyus from their dwelling, producing wide light for the Ārya."

"— as described in these Ṛks, it becomes known that Agni too freed the Āryas from the oppression of the asuras named Paṇi and furnished them with light."

bṛsayasya śeṣaḥ — "tuk, tokam, tanayaḥ and the like being read among the names of offspring (Ni. 3-2 [?]), śeṣaḥ means 'son': 'śeṣa ity apatyanāma śiṣyate prayuteḥ' (Ni. 3-2 [?]). It is well known that Vṛtra is the son of Bṛsaya."

avātiratam — "dabhnōti, śṛṇathi and the like being read among the names of acts of slaying (Ni. 2-10 [?]), it means 'you slew'. According to the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, these two deities, Agni and Soma, killed Vṛtra by causing the absence of the chief principles in the form of prāṇa and apāna —

ceti — root citī saṃjñāne; in the passive luṇ, third person singular, the suffix ta; by ciṇ bhāvakarmanoh (Pā. 3-1-66 [?]) ciṇ for cli; by ciṇo luk (Pā. 6-4-104 [?]) the luk of the ta that follows ciṇ. Since a vocative (agnīṣomā) stands before, by āmantritaṃ pūrvam avidyamānavat (Pā. 8-1-72 [?]) it counts as non-existent; and since it is non-existent, the word does not become as if it followed a finite verb; therefore by tiñ atīṇaḥ the nighāta accent does not occur; the accent of the root remains. By bahulaṃ chandasy amāñyoge 'pi the augment aṭ does not occur. amuṣṇītam — root muṣa steye, of the kryādi class; lañ, second person dual, with the replacement tam for thas; by kryādibhyaḥ śnā the stem-suffix śnā; by īhalyaghoḥ (Pā. 6-4-113 [?]) the ā of śnā is replaced by ī; since ṣ precedes, by raṣābhyāṃ no ṇaḥ samānapade (Pā. 8-4-1 [?]) ṇatva of the n of the suffix; the augment aṭ; since yat ("which") precedes and is connected, by yadvṛttān nityam the nighāta is prohibited; since the augment is acute, the word is initial-acute. avasam — root ava rakṣaṇe; the Uṇādi suffix asac; by cit the final-acute. atiratam — the root tira, used with ava as preposition, is a verb of killing; lañ, second person dual; the tiñ-nighāta accent. śeṣaḥ — the accusative singular ending am following [read: with the stem]; by supāṃ sulug the replacement su. avindatam — root viḍl lābhe; by śe mucādīnām (Pā. 7-1-59 [?]) the augment num; lañ, second person dual; since it stands at the head of the pāda, no nighāta; since the augment aṭ is acute, the word is initial-acute.

ekam — root iñ gatau; by iñśīṇspāśalyatimarcibhyaḥ kan (Uṇādi 3-33 [?], as read) the suffix kan; because of it, the guṇa of the root; by ñnityādir nityam the suffix being nit, the initial-acute accent. || 4 ||

Translation: "O Soma, you and Agni, sakratū, being of one work, yuvam, you two adhattam, set in the sky, in the world of heaven, these rocanāni, shining lights — the stars, planets and the like seen by us at night. — This is the narrative for the latter half: Indra, having slain Vṛtra and fearing the sin of Brahma-murder (brahmahatyā), lodged that sin in the earth, in the trees, in women and in the waters; the purification of those waters was accomplished by Agni and Soma. Grbhītān — seized, overcome, sindhūn, the rivers in particular, by a part of the Brahmahatyā — abhiśasteḥ, from the reviled [evident] avadyāt, from the base [?] sin, amuñcatam, you two released [the clotted words of the print are given as read [?]]. Or: Vṛtra, killed by Indra, fell into the rivers; and all the rivers were fouled by the dead body of Vṛtra. So the Taittirīya says: 'Indra slew Vṛtra; he [the dead Vṛtra] fell [or: was dying] into the waters; what was pure and fit for sacrifice in them, together with their divinity, departed from the waters' (Tai. Brā. 3-2-5-1 [?]). The rivers seized by that defect — from that defect Agni and Soma released them."

Grammar tail: rocanāni — root ruca dīptau; the suffix yuc after a root that is anudāttet and begins with a consonant (anudāttetaś ca halāder). sindhūn — by dirghād aṭi samānapāde the n becomes ru; by atrānunāsikaḥ the nasalization. grbhītān — by hṛgrahor bhaḥ the replacement bha [for ha].

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.5

"O Agni and Soma deities, you two have one and the same kind of action. These shining orbs of stars that are visible to our eyes you two together lifted up and set in the world of heaven. "In the animal sacrifice connected with the Agnīṣomīya deity, when the oblations of the vapā and the puroḍāśa are offered, the three Ṛks beginning yuvam etāni are in order yājyā mantras. The sūtra regarding this was stated earlier (Ā. 3-8 [?]); and in the paurṇamāsyā sacrifice too, for the offering of the puroḍāśa connected with the Agnīṣomīya deity, the Ṛk yuvam etāni is to be used as the yājyā mantra; this is shown by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the section uktā devatā, by the sūtra 'yuvam etāni divi rocanānīndrāgnī avasā gatam' (Ā. 1-6 [?])."

sakratū — samānakarmāṇau | "Having the same kind of action: that is, sharing the principal part in sacrificial and other rites; as explained in the Ṛks above, they cause satisfaction by sharing the oblations with Indra and the other deities, they grant the sacrificers the favour of these, they destroy the darkness that

"Here, explaining sindhūn as 'rivers in the form of flowing waters', Sāyaṇa says that, at the slaying of Vṛtra, the dead body of Vṛtra fell into the rivers, and then all the rivers were filled with fault; and quoting the sentence of the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 3-2-[5]-1 [?] —"

"— he makes clear that Agni and Soma purified the rivers seized by that fault, by removing the fault."

"But Skandasvāmin explains here the word sindhūn as 'syandanāt sindhavo raśmaya ihocyante' [as read [?]] — 'by reason of flowing, sindhus are here called rays' — that is, flowing rays; and citing the sentence 'na sindhavo rajaso antam ānaśuḥ' (R. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?]), he says that, as in that [verse], here too the meaning 'rays' should be given. In that case it is explained that Agni and Soma freed these rays, which had been enveloped by the asura Vṛtra, from the sin in the form of Vṛtra's slaying, by the slaying of Vṛtra, and made them clearly visible all around."

Translation: "For the upāṃśuyāja of the Agniśomīya, this Ṛk anyam divaḥ is the yājyā. The sūtra is quoted at agniśomā yo adya vām. — O Agni and Soma, of you two anyam, one — Agni — mātariśvā, Vāyu, divaḥ, from the world of heaven, ā jabhāra, brought for Bhṛgu the sacrificer. So another mantra: 'Mātariśvan brought, like a treasure, the twice-born, praiseworthy gift to Bhṛgu' (Ṛg. 1-60-1 [?]). Śyenaḥ — the śyenī, the Gāyatrī in the form of a bird, of praiseworthy flight, amathnāt, took by force anyam, the other, Soma, adreḥ pari, from heaven, which is situated above the mountain Meru. Thus, such as you are, great ones, being vāvṛdhānā, grown, by brahmaṇā, by the praise in the form of mantra, or by food in the form of oblation, you two made for the sacrifice of the other gods uru, a wide, extended lokam, place. U is a mere filler. Agni and Soma, the deities of the two ājyabhāgas, are offered to in the northern half and in the southern half; so all the oblations of the other deities are offered [the clause is clotted [?]]; so the place is made by Agni and Soma. So the Taittirīya says:

"These two, Agni and Soma, are the kings of the gods: they are worshipped in between the deities, to keep the deities apart [in their order]."

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 93.6)

agnīṣomā — O Agni and Soma deities; anyam — one of you two, Agni; mātariśvā — Vāyu; divaḥ — from the world of heaven; ā jabhāra — brought (for Bhṛgu the sacrificer); śyenaḥ — Gāyatrī in the form of a hawk; anyam — the other, the Soma deity; adreh pari — from the heaven at the summit of the mountain Meru; āmāthnāt — snatched and brought. (Such greatly glorious ones as you,) brahmaṇā — by praise in the form of mantra, or by food in the form of oblation; vavṛdhānā — grown; yajñāya — for the sacrifice of the other deities; uru — broad; lokam — the place (of sacrifice); cakrathuḥ — you made.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.6

"O Agni and Soma deities, Vāyu brought one of you two, Agni, from the world of heaven for Bhṛgu the sacrificer. Gāyatrī in the form of a hawk snatched and brought the other, the Soma deity, from heaven at the summit of the mountain Meru. Such greatly glorious ones as you, grown greater by praise in the form of mantra, made the place of sacrifice wide for the sacrifice of the other deities."

English Translation ²⁰

"Agni and Soma, the wind brought one of you from heaven, a hawk carried off the other by force from the summit of the mountain ; growing vast by praise you have made the world wide for sacrifice." — as printed.

anyam mātariśvā diva ā jabhāra

— "Agni, who is the soul of the sacrifice, has been described in many ways, both his supernatural manifestation and his worldly origin. He is the banner of sacrifices, the means of knowledge, the dispenser of sacrifices, the sacrifice-bearer, the king of rites [see the descriptions in R̥ks such as 3-2-3 [?]; 3-11-2 [?]; 4-2-3 [?]]. His first manifestation, in the form of lightning, is said in the R̥ksaṃhitā to have come first to Vāyu:"

"— in many such Ṛks it is well known in the śruti that Mātariśvan, for the benefit of the sacrificers Bhṛgu and Manu, called Agni who had been hidden in a distant place and benefitted all the creatures of the earth. This story will be explained in detail later."

— "The Gāyatrī in the form of a hawk snatched [Soma] from the peak of the mountain and brought him. As Mātariśvan brought Agni, who was in a very distant place, so too the story of the hawk bringing Soma to the earth is described in many śrutis."

यं सुपर्णः परावतः श्येनस्य पुत्र आभरत् ।

yaṃ suparṇaḥ parāvataḥ śyenasya putra ābharat | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-144-4 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "The wise knew the form of the delightful one when the hawk brought the andhas from afar. — Whom the well-winged son of the hawk brought from afar."

"The chief part of this story is described in the form of a dialogue in the 26th and 27th sūktas of the fourth maṇḍala of the Ṛksaṃhitā. But since the different words śyena, suparṇa and gāyatrī are used in these contexts, these contexts become meaningful only after one has learnt the details of this story."

"In explaining this Ṛk, Skandasvāmin cites the story told in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. According to it (Ai. Brā. 3-25 [read: 3-[?]] to 3-26 [?]), the ṛṣis, wishing to obtain Soma, who was in the world of heaven, as king, prayed to the Chandas — the metres — to bring that King Soma to them. Then they agreed, and, because this work was accomplished by a change into the form of a suparṇa [bird], this episode is well known as the Sauparṇākhyāna. Thereupon, in the form of birds, the metres exerted themselves; but because the Jagatī, going by the way, fell short [lit.: gave out] in the middle of the road, the Triṣṭubh metre was sent out. This too —

"— was unable to complete the way, going beyond the half-way, and had to return. Then the Gāyatrī flew upward, and, having terrified the Soma-guards, seized Soma with her beak and her feet. Then one of the Soma-guards, Kṛśānu, shot an arrow, and it cut off one claw of this bird. Even so the Gāyatrī accomplished her task. The part that she held in her right foot became the prātaḥsavana, the part in her left foot the mādhyandinasavana, and the part in her beak the trītyasavana."

"In the same way, in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa too (1-7-2-10 [?]) it is said: 'tad dvai kaniṣṭhaṃ chandaḥ sad gāyatrī prathamā chandasāṃ yujyate tad tad dvir erkyaiva yajñair eno bhūtvā divaḥ somam ābharat' [as read, clotted [?]] — in the Chandas, though the Gāyatrī is the smallest in the number of syllables, she attains the first place of all the metres. By her own power, taking the form of a hawk, she brought Soma from the world of the gods. At the time of the oblations too the praise of the Gāyatrī as a hawk is well known (Śat. Brā. 3-4-1-13 [?]; 3-9-4-10 [?]). In this very context the point that Agni and Gāyatrī are the same in nature, [as in] 'agnir vai gāyatrī tad gāyatri etam imam īte sā yad gāyatrī śyeno bhūtvā', will be explained later."

"This same narrative, with a little change, is found in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā (Tai. Saṃ. 6-1-6-1 [?]): once, there was a wager between Kadrū and Suparṇī; since Kadrū won, Suparṇī had to become her servant. Then Kadrū said to Suparṇī, 'bring Soma from the mid-region, disguised as a thief, and give him as the ransom, then you will be freed.' Then Suparṇī, to seek the help of her children, the metres, [commissioned them]; the efforts of the Jagatī and the Triṣṭubh both failed, and the Gāyatrī accomplished the work: so runs the story of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā."

brahmaṇā vavṛdhānā — "Since andhaḥ, vājaḥ, payah and the like are read among the names of food (Ni. 2-7 [?]), here it can be 'by food in the form of oblation'; or else, since the word brahman is explained as 'work' or as 'mantra' (Ni. 3-[?] [?]), the meaning may be 'by rites such as sacrifice or by mantras': 'having obtained increase by these'. Or, since the root vṛdh is generally used in the Ṛksaṃhitā in the sense 'praise' [praśaṃsā], it may also be 'those who have been praised'."

yajñāya uru lokam cakrathuḥ

— "'You made a broad place of sacrifice for the sacrifice performed with reference to the other deities': this is the meaning."

Translation: "O Agni and Soma, haviṣaḥ prasthitasya — of the oblation set forth, brought near the Āhavanīya fire for the offering — vītam, eat this oblation; and thereafter haryatam, desire us. O vṛṣaṇā, showerers of desires, juṣethām, accept our service. Thereafter be suśarmāṇā, of good happiness, and svavasā, of good protection, for us. Then dhattam, grant to the sacrificer who has given the oblation śam — the quieting of the diseases to be quieted — and yoḥ — the keeping apart of the fears to be kept apart. So Yāska says: 'quieting of diseases and keeping off of fears' (Ni. 4-21 [?])."

Grammar tail (partly clotted; characterized): haviṣaḥ — the genitive stands for the dative, since the object is a recipient (kriyāgrahaṇam kartavyam). vītam — root vī of the adādi class; luk of śap; the nighāta prohibited by the connexion of vītam ca haryataṃ ca. haryatam — at the head of the pāda, no nighāta. juṣethām — since the vocative vṛṣaṇā stands before, no nighāta. suśarmāṇā svavasā — in both bahuvrīhis, the final member's initial-acute by sor manasī alomoṣasī.

Translation: "O Agni and Soma, the sacrificer who, belonging to you two, dāśati — gives — anena ghr̥tena, with this ghee (ghee purified by utpavana and the like), an oblation joined with it, to you: to that sacrificer dīdayatam — make shine, give — br̥hat, abundant wealth."

Grammar tail: dāśati — root dāśr̥ dāne; since śap and tip are pit and unaccented, the accent of the root remains; the nighāta prevented by connexion with yaḥ. dīdayatam — dīdayati has the sense of shining.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 93.10)

agnīṣomā — O Agni and Soma deities; vām — belonging to both of you; yaḥ — whichever sacrificer; anena ghr̥tena — with this oblation of ghee; vām — to you; dāśati — offers the oblation; tasmai — to that sacrificer; br̥hat — abundant wealth; dīdayatam — give.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 93.10

"O Agni and Soma deities, give abundant wealth to the sacrificer who offers to both of you the oblation together with this oblation of ghee."

English Translation ³³

"Agni and Soma, give ample recompense to him who presents to you both, this clarified butter." — as printed.

॥ विशेषविषयगच्छ ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 93.10)

ghr̥tena — "That is, an oblation together with ghee purified by utpavana and the like."

33. printed in English in the source; Rik 93.10

dīdayatam — "bhrājate, bhrāśate and the like being read among the names of acts of shining (Ni. 2-[?] [?]), here the meaning is 'cause the abundant wealth to shine', that is, 'give it'. Mādhava explains vardhayatam: 'make it increase'."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 93.10)

dāśati — root dāśr dāne; laṭ, third person singular; since śap is pit, and tip likewise unaccented, the accent of the root remains; because yaḥ precedes, by yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) the nighāta is prohibited. dīdayatam — the root dīdaya has the sense of shining; loṭ, second person dual; since it follows a word, the nighāta. || 10 ||

Translation (the printed text is garbled in the Anukramaṇī portion; given as read [?]): "In the fifteenth anuvāka there are twelve sūktas. Of these the first, imaṃ stomam, has sixteen Ṛks; the vision of Kutsa Āṅgīrasa. The fifteenth and sixteenth are Triṣṭubh, the rest Jagatī. The deity is Agni. In the first half [of Ṛk 7?], the three pādas devā bhavatu sunvato rathaḥ are addressed to the gods; the half-Ṛk tan no mitro varuṇaḥ is addressed to the deities named by the words Mitra, Varuṇa and the rest. Or: the deity of the whole is Agni alone, and Mitra, Varuṇa and the others are subordinate, taking a share by mention only. All this is recorded in the Anukramaṇī: 'imaṃ śoḷaśa kutsa āgneyam...'. This sūkta is applied in the Āgneya kratu of the prātaranuvāka, in the Jagatī metre, and in the Āśvina-śastra; so it is prescribed: 'imaṃ stomam arhate saṃ jāgravadbhiḥ' (Ā. 4-13 [?]). It is also applied, as a jātavedasya nividdhāna, on the other Agni-Māruta day of the abhiplava śaḷaḥ; prescribed: 'prayajyava imaṃ stomam ity agnimārutam' (Ā. 8-8 [?]). At the third pressing it is the prasthitayājyā of the Agnīdh; prescribed: 'imaṃ stomam arhate jātavedasa iti tārīyasavanikyāḥ' (Ā. 5-3 [?])."

अनुवादु — Anuvāda (Kannada)

"With this sūkta the fifteenth anuvāka of the First Maṇḍala begins. In this anuvāka there are twelve sūktas (94-105 [?]). Of these, the first sūkta, beginning imaṃ stomam, has sixteen Ṛks.
The ṛṣi of this sūkta is Kutsa, son of Āṅgīras; the deity is Agni. The fifteenth and sixteenth Ṛks are in the Triṣṭubh metre; the remaining Ṛks are in the Jagatī metre. In the Anukramaṇī it is said: 'imaṃ śolaśa kutsa āgneyaṃ tad dvis triṣṭubbantaṃ pūrvo devās trayah pādā dvaivās tan no mitro 'rdharco liṅgoktadevato yad vevatyam vā sūktam iti' [as printed, garbled (?)]. In the eighth Ṛk of this sūkta the first three pādas are addressed to the gods and the last pāda to Agni. For the second half of the sixteenth Ṛk the six deities Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi, Sindhu, Pṛthivī and Dyaus are named; or it may be said that Agni is the principal deity. Varuṇa and the others are not principal. It is shown by the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra, in the sūtra 'imaṃ stomam arhate saṃ jāgravadbhiḥ' (Ā. 4-13 [?]), that this sūkta is applied in reciting the Jagatī mantras belonging to the Āgneya kratu in reciting the prātaranuvāka mantras, and for the mantras of the Āśvina-śāstra; and, as the Āśvalāyana Śrauta-sūtra explains by the sūtra 'prayajyava imaṃ stomam ity agnimārutam' (Ā. 8-8 [?]), on the sixth day of the abhiplava sacrifice this sūkta is to be used, as a nivid-containing hymn connected with Jātaveda, for the Agni-Māruta śāstra mantras. At the third pressing the Ṛtvij called Āgnīdhra is to use the first Ṛk of this sūkta, imaṃ stomam, as the prasthitayājyā mantra" ¹

Translation: "To Agni, arhate, the worthy, jātavedase, the knower of all that is born, or one of born wisdom, or of born wealth: manīṣayā, with a sharpened understanding, imam stomam, this praise in the form of a sūkta, ratham iva, as the carpenter fashions a chariot, so saṃ mahema — we make it well-honoured, we fashion it. In Agni's saṃsadi, in the assembly [or: in the company, the worship] of Agni, asya naḥ pramatīḥ, that excellent understanding of ours is bhadṛā, auspicious, capable. Therefore with that understanding we praise: this is the meaning. O Agni, tava sakhye, in your friendship — we being in friendship with you — vayaṃ mā riṣāma, may we not be harmed. Protect us."

Grammar tail: arhate — root arha pūjāyām, with the sense of praise; śatṛ for the laṭ (Pā. 3-2-133 [?]); the root's accent remains. mahemā — root maha pūjāyām. riṣāma — root riṣa hiṃsāyām; śa by vyatyaya. tava — the initial acute by yuṣmadasmador ṇasi....

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 94.1) ⁶

arhate — to the worthy of worship; jātavedase — to Agni, who knows all that has been born, or who has wealth, or who has wisdom; manīṣayā — with our (keen) understanding; imaṃ stomam — this praise in the form of a sūkta; rathamiva — as a chariot-maker builds a chariot; saṃ mahema — we build with great skill; asya — of this Agni; saṃsadi — in the assembly of worship; naḥ — our; pramatiḥ — excellent understanding; bhadrā hi — is auspicious indeed; agne — O Agni; tava — your; sakhye — in friendship (for the sake of); vayam — we; mā riṣāma — may we not be injured (favour us).

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 94.1

"To Agni, who is worthy of worship and possesses knowledge that knows everything: as a chariot-maker fashions a chariot for a king, so we too, with our keen understanding, skilfully fashion this praise in the form of a sūkta. In the worship of this divine Agni our understanding is auspicious. O Agni, because of friendship with you, favour us so that we are not harmed by enemies."

English Translation ⁷

"To him who is worthy of praise, and all-knowing, we construct, with our minds, this hymn, as (a workman makes) a car; happy is our understanding when engaged in his adoration ; O Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship." — as printed.

jātavedase — jātāni veda; jātāni vainaṃ viduḥ; jāte jāte vidyate iti vā; jātavitto vā jātadhanah; jātavidyo vā jātaprajñah (Ni. 7-19 [?])
 | "The author of the Nirukta explains it thus: [Agni is] 'one who knows all that is born'; or 'all that is born knows him'; or 'he is present in everything born'; or 'one who has wealth that is born'; or 'one whose wisdom is born': that is, he who knows all that has arisen; or all that has arisen knows him; or he abides in all that has arisen; or he has all the wealth that has arisen; or he has knowledge of everything. In the Bṛhaddevatā too he explains in detail the nature and the places of Jātavedas:"

इहाग्निर्भूतैस्त्वृषिभिलोके स्तुतिभिरीळितः । जातवेदास्तु तोमध्ये स्तुतो वैश्वानरो दिवि ॥

ihāgnir bhūtais tr ṛṣibhir loke stutibhir ṛṇitaḥ | jātavedās tu to madhye stuto vaiśvānaro divi || (Bṛ. De. 1-[?] [?]; the text of the second pāda is garbled in the print and read as given [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Here in the world Agni is praised by the seers with hymns; in the middle region Jātavedas; in heaven Vaiśvānara."

"— in this verse the ṛṣis are said to praise the Agni who is on the earth as Agni, the one in the mid-region as Jātavedas, and the one in the heavenly world as Vaiśvānara; and he continues the same idea:"

वैश्वानरं श्रितो ह्यग्निरग्निं वैश्वानरः श्रितः । अनयोजातवेदास्तु तथ्यैते जातवेदसी ॥

vaiśvānaram śrito hy agnir agniṃ vaiśvānaraḥ śritaḥ | anayor jātavedās tu tathyaite jātavedasī || (Bṛ. De. 1-[?] [?]; read as printed, doubtful [?])

"— Agni abides in Vaiśvānara and Vaiśvānara in Agni; Jātavedas is in both of these; and he explains both as the two portions of Jātavedas. Thus, having first told the places of Jātavedas in the first chapter, in the second chapter he gives the explanation of his nature:"

Gloss, editorial and tentative: "...and because he has become knowing of all that is born, or has wealth, or is known [or found] among the born; or because he is known by all beings, or is born again and again — therefore he, the Indra of the middle region, is praised as Jātavedas."

"— in the Brhaddevatā it is explained that Agni is praised as Jātavedas, like Indra, being a dweller in the middle world: because he knows everything the moment it comes into being, or because knowledge arises in him, or because, the moment he is born, he obtains all wealth, or because he is known by all beings again and again, being born anew each time. Jātavedase means: to Agni of such nature."

imaṃ stomaṃ ratham iva saṃ mahema — yathā takṣā ratham saṃskaroti tathā samyak pūjitaṃ kurmaḥ | "As a chariot-maker, for the delight of the king, makes a chariot in a way that gives delight to those travelling in it, so we too, with finely wrought speech, a speech that is pleasant to hear, and with a feeling of faith, fashion in a fitting manner these hymns, which bring delight to you, for offering to you: this is the meaning. In many contexts the poetic composition of a hymn is compared to the building of a chariot, to show how much skill is the chief thing in the making of the hymn. Here are some examples —"

etaṃ vāṃ stomam aśvināv akarmātakṣāma bhṛgavo na ratham | (Ṛ. Saṃ. 10-39-14 [?])

Gloss, editorial and tentative (for the group): "For him I fashion this hymn, as a carpenter [fashions] a chariot for the hirer. — Like a fair, well-made garment, I, the wise one, skilful, fashioned [the hymn] as a chariot. — So for Indra the bull, the showerer, we have made the prayer, as the Bhṛguṣ [made] a chariot. — This hymn for you, O Aśvins, we have made, we have fashioned it, as the Bhṛguṣ a chariot."

"— in such Ṛks, the skill in fashioning a hymn of poetic form and the skill in fashioning a chariot are shown as alike, and the greatness of hymns is praised."

Translation: "The sacrificer for whom, O Agni, you āyajase, sacrifice facing the gods, sādhati — he accomplishes his desires, obtains them. Further, that sacrificer, anarvā, unassailed by enemies, kṣeti — dwells; and dadhate, holds, obtains, suvīryam,

English Translation ¹¹

"He for whom you sacrifice, accomplishes (his objects), abides free from aggression, and enjoys (wealth, the source of) strength ; he prospers and poverty never approaches him ; let us not suffer injury, through your friendship." — as printed.

tvaṃ yasmai āyajase sa sādhati — "'The sacrificer for whom you, performing sacrifice with reference to the deities, act, obtains his desired ends': this is the meaning. Agni, as soon as he is born, creates the sacrifice and performs sacrifice for men with reference to the deities. Accepting the prayer of the householder, according to his need he is the purohita, the rtvij, the hotṛ and the brahman, and, offering oblations to the deities, causes their favour to be obtained for the sacrificer in his house. In about two hundred contexts in R̥ks that praise Agni, such as R̥. Saṃ. 1-1-1 [?]; 1-13-1 [?]; 1-31-1 [?]; 1-[?]-2 [?] and so on, Agni is described as the principal in the sacrifices. Because he is himself the sacrifice-soul, and because he is the full cause of the satisfaction of the deities, the idea is that the favour of the deities of every kind can be achieved through him."

original p. 517

anarvā — anarvā apratyṛtaḥ [apratyṛto 'nyasmin] (Ni. 6-[?] [?]) | "This word is used in many contexts in the sense 'one who has no other refuge or subjection'. In R̥ks such as R̥. Saṃ. 3-40-6 [?]; 4-[?]-10 [?]; 5-[?]-3 [?]; 6-20-[?] [?]; 10-[?]-3 [?] it gives the sense that the deities, unopposed by enemies and not subject to them, show their prowess. So here too: the sacrificer who has obtained Agni's favour lives independently, neither conquered by enemies nor subject to them."

kṣeti

— "Living independently, dwelling at his own dwelling-places, he lives in happiness: this is the idea."

tūtāva — "From the root tu, which gives the sense of 'growth' or 'strength', tūtāva. 'He has obtained growth' or 'he has obtained strength': this is the idea."

aṃhatiḥ — aṃhatiś cāṃhaś cāṃhuś ca hanteḥ (Ni. 4-[?]) | "From the root han the word aṃhati is formed. It means 'to injure, to afflict'. Here it is affliction in the form of poverty. The meaning is that for the sacrificer who has Agni's favour, aṃhatiḥ nāśnoti — poverty does not touch him."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā (Rik 94.2)

yajase — root yaja devapūjāsaṅgatikaraṇadāneṣu; laṭ, second person singular; since yasmai is connected, the nighāta does not occur; since the suffix follows an udāttopadeśa root it is unaccented; then the accent of the root remains. sādhati — root ṣidhu saṃrāddhau; since the sense of the instigator is shown, by hetumati ca the suffix ṇic; by ciñi siddhyater aparalaukike (Pā. 6-1-49 [?]) the ā [for the root's i]; by chandasy ubhayathā, as the stem-suffix is ārdhadhātuka, the elision of ṇi by ṇer aniṭi; the nighāta following a word. kṣeti — root kṣi nivāsagatyoh, bhvādi; liṭ [as printed; the form is the laṭ] third person singular, tip; by bahulaṃ chandasi the luk of the stem-suffix (śap); because of the suffix the guṇa of the root's i; the nighāta following a word. dadhate — root dadha dhāraṇe, bhvādi, with an ātmanepada because it is anudāttet; laṭ, third person singular; since a finite verb stands after a word, the nighāta does not occur; since śap is pit it is unaccented; since the lasārvadhātuka (te) follows an udāttopadeśa root, by tāsyānudāttetḥ... it is unaccented; the accent of the root remains. —

original p. 518

suvīryam — in the bahuvrīhi the accent of su is set aside by vīravīryau ca (Pā. 6-2-120 [?]), and the final member takes the initial-acute. tūtāva — tu is a sautra root, in the sense of growth; in the present sense, by chandasi luṅlaṅliṭaḥ (Pā. 3-4-6 [?]) the liṭ; because of it the root is doubled; since ṇit follows, by ata upadhāyāḥ the vṛddhi of the penultimate; since it belongs to the tujādi group, by tujādīnām dīrgho 'bhyāsasya (Pā. 6-1-7 [?]) the reduplicative is lengthened; since it follows a word, the nighāta. aśnoti — root aśū vyāptau; by vyatyayo bahulam the parasmaipada; laṭ, third person singular; the tiṅ-nighāta. aṃhatiḥ — root hana hiṃsāgatyoḥ; by hanter aṃha ca (U. 4-[?] [?]) the suffix ati; because of it the root is replaced by aṃha; by vahiśriyuśvidrū... [as read, partly clotted [?]] cit continues, so by citaḥ the final-acute.

Translation: "O Agni, may we be able to make you samidham, well kindled; may we be capable. And you, sādahaya, accomplish dhiyaḥ, our rites such as the new- and full-moon. For all sacrifices are accomplished in you. Because tve, in you, in Agni, āhutam, the oblation cast in by the priests — the havis such as caru and puroḍāśa — the gods adanti, eat: therefore accomplish: this is the meaning. Moreover bring ādityān, the sons of Aditi, all the gods, for our sacrifice; tān hi uśmasi, we desire them, now. The rest as before."

Grammar tail: śakema — root śakḷ śaktau; the āśīrlīṇ, with aṅ [as read]. samidham — root indhī dīptau; kvip in the passive sense. tve — śe for the locative singular. uśmasi — root vaśa kāntau; masi with i; luk of śap (adādi); saṃprasāraṇa by grahijā....

॥ प्रतिपदार्थ ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Rik 94.3)

agne — O Agni; tvā — you; samidham — blazing; (to make [you]) śakema — may we be able; dhiyaḥ — our (new- and full-moon and other) rites; sādhaya — accomplish [one after another] (because); tve — in you; āhutam — offered, cast in; haviḥ — oblations (caru, puroḍāśa etc.); devāḥ — the deities; adanti — eat; tvam — you; ādityān — all the deities, sons of Aditi; ā vaha — (to the sacrifice) bring and come; hi — because; tān — them; uśmasi — we desire; agne — O Agni; tava — with you; sakhye — through friendship; vayam — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer any harm.

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha of Rik 94.3

"O Agni, give us the power to make you blaze. Because the deities eat the caru, puroḍāśa and the like offered in you, accomplish our new- and full-moon and other rites. Bring all the deities, the sons of Aditi, whom we love and desire, to our sacrifice. O Agni, through friendship with you, may no harm come to us."

English Translation ¹²

"May we be able to kindle you ; make the rite perfect, for through you the gods partake of the offered oblations ; bring hither the Aditayas [sic], for we love them ; let us not suffer injury, through your friendship." — as printed.

dhiyaḥ — "āpaḥ, āpnaḥ, daṃsaḥ and the like being read among the names of works (Ni. 2-1 [?]), dhiyaḥ means 'works'. In this context, it is the prayer: 'help our new- and full-moon and other rites to be accomplished'."

uśmasi — "vaṣṭi, uśmasi, veti and the like being read among the eighteen names of acts of wishing (Ni. 2-6 [?]), the meaning here is 'we long for'."

ādityān — ādityaḥ kasmād ādatte rasān ādatte bhāsaṃ jyotiṣāṃ dīpto bhāseti vādites tu putra iti vā (Ni. 2-13 [?]) | "'From what is āditya? He takes (ādatte) the juices; he takes the lustre of the lights; he shines with lustre; or he is the son of Aditi': the author of the Nirukta explains the meaning of the word āditya as one who takes up the juices (draws them up), or who takes the radiance of the orbs of light (takes in their splendour), or who shines with his own splendour, or as the son of Aditi. For the Sun the word is a name of Parjanya [as read [?]]. But since the plural ādityān occurs in this Ṛk, it is to be understood that the word āditya applies not only to the Sun but also to the other deities. The author of the Nirukta himself, explaining this, says: vayam anyāsām api devatānām ādityaprapādā stutayo bhavanti tad yathaitan mitrasya varuṇasyāryamṇo dakṣasya bhagasyāṃśasyeti (Ni. 2-13 [?]): 'the praises of the Ādityas, too, are those of other deities': he explains that praises addressed to the Ādityas apply to Mitra, Varuṇa, Aryaman, Dakṣa, Bhaga and Aṃśa, and gives examples. In the Ṛksamhitā, in the hymns addressed to the Ādityas —

Thereafter dvipat, whatever biped there is, men and the like; uta ca catuṣpat, and whatever quadruped there is, cows and the like — both of these aktubhiḥ, by the rays which colour the earth, become coloured, touched. O Agni, citraḥ, of varied lustre, praketāḥ, the one who makes known, shows, all that is enveloped in the darkness of night, you are mahān, great, superior in qualities, even than uśasaḥ, the goddess Uṣas: for Uṣas shines in the last part of the night; but Agni shines through the whole night: that is his superiority in quality."

Grammar tail (characterized): gopāḥ — root gupū rakṣaṇe; the suffix āya by gupūdhūpavicchi... (Pā. 3-1-28 [?]); kvip after it; elision of the ā; since the kvip is aprakta its elision takes place first; dvipāt — in the bahuvrīhi "of which there are two feet", pāda loses its final by saṃkhyāsupūrvasya (Pā. 5-4-140 [?]); pad for pāda by padbhāva (Pā. 6-4-130 [?]); the final-acute by dvitribhyām pāddanmūrdhasu (Pā. 6-2-197 [?]). catuṣpāt — as before, with ṣatva of the visarga; the initial-acute of catur by dryaḥ... (Pā. 5-2-35 [?], numerals doubtful); that accent remains by the bahuvrīhi accent.

"The rays of this Agni spread all around as protectors of all beings. Those with two feet, men and the like, and those with four feet, cows and the like, gain consciousness by the rays of this Agni. O Agni, you are of varied lustre, illuminating all the world covered by darkness, and are superior in greatness even to the Uśas deity who shines only by day [read: at the close of night]. Through friendship with you, may we be afflicted by no harm of any kind."

॥ विशेषविषयगु ॥ — Special Topics (Rik 94.5)

viśām — "manuṣyāḥ, naraḥ and the like being read among the twenty-five names of men (Ni. 2-[?]), it means 'men'; but here it should be explained as sarveṣāṃ prāṇinām, 'of all living beings'."

jantavaḥ — jātāḥ raśmayāḥ | "'The rays born of Agni': the rays of Agni that have arisen from him. This word, like the words jantu, jantavaḥ, jantubhiḥ, is used as an epithet in the Rksaṃhitā, suiting the context for whatever kind of born thing may be meant: ṛtviks, sacrificers, enemies, all creatures and so on, so that the sense is taken to apply to all things possessed of birth in the various contexts (see Rks R. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?]; 1-[?]-3 [?]; 3-[?]-2 [?]; 6-[?]-[?] [?]; 10-[?]-4 [?] and so on)."

aktubhiḥ — "śyāvī, kṣapā, śarvarī, aktuḥ and the like are read among the twenty-two names of night (Ni. 1-[?]); in many places the word aktu means 'night'. But in some contexts the word is used in the senses of 'ray', 'weapon', 'darkness', and so on. Since the root añj has the senses of 'cover', 'anoint', 'be bright' and so on, the meanings 'darkness that anoints', 'rays that cover everything', 'night that is dark', 'weapon that covers the body' arise. For example, for the word aktu in R. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?] [?], they explain 'weapon'; for the word in Rk 3-[?]-3 [?], 'darkness'; but in most places the meaning is 'night'."

"If in this Rk the meaning 'night' is taken, one kind of construction arises; if 'rays', another. According to Skandasvāmin: aktubhiḥ — rātrināmaitat | iha tu sāhacaryād annaṃcareṣu rakṣaḥpiśācādiṣu

vartate | rātricaraiḥ saha ity arthaḥ — 'aktu is a name of night; but here, by association, it refers to those who move at night, such as the Rākṣasas and Piśācas: the meaning is 'together with the night-wanderers'. Since aktu is read among the names of night, it ought to mean 'night'; but here, by association, it is explained that all living beings, men and the rest, are known with the night-wandering Rākṣasas, Piśācas and others. Hence uśasaḥ (api) mahān asi — 'you are superior even to the goddess Uśas': Uśas shines only in the last part of the night, making the beings of the world visible; but you, making everything visible throughout the night, are therefore superior to Uśas. Sāyaṇa's explanation: 'all bipeds, men and the like, and quadrupeds, cows and the like, are made known by the covering rays [aktubhiḥ]'."

gopāḥ — root gupū rakṣaṇe; by gupūdhūpavicchīpanīpanibhya āyaḥ (Pā. 3-1-28 [?]) the suffix āya in its own sense; by sanādyantā dhātavaḥ the āya-ending stem takes the name of a root, since āya belongs to the sanādi group; after it the suffix kvip; by ato lopāḥ (Pā. 6-4-48 [?]) the a of the root-stem is elided because of it —

original p. 528

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.5, concluded (grammar page, noted briefly):

[gopāḥ, continued —] "...for the v of kvip, which stands after it and is apṛkta, the elision should be done; but first, by the statement ver apṛktasya and lopād vali lopo baliyān — 'the elision before val is stronger than the elision [of a]' — by lopo vyor vali (Pā. 6-1-66 [?]) the y is elided because of the v. When the y is elided, it might be doubted that the ā does not have the status of the replaced [sthānivadbhāva]; but by na padāntadvirvacana... (Pā. 1-1-58 [?]) the sthānivadbhāva is prohibited in the matter of y-elision. Thereafter, by ver apṛktasya (Pā. 6-1-67 [?]) the elision of the v of kvip. The word gopā ends in ā." caranti — root cara gatibhakṣaṇayoh; laṭ, third person plural; since it follows a word, the nighāta. dvipāt — "dvau pādāv asya"; in the bahuvrīhi, by saṃkhyāsupūrvasya (Pā. 5-4-140 [?]), since a numeral stands before, the final of pāda is elided, as a samāsānta; by ayasmayādīni chandasi (Pā. 1-4-20 [?]) it receives the name bha, and by pādaḥ pat (Pā. 6-4-130 [?]) the replacement pad; since in pāt only the short [pad] has come, by the paribhāṣā ekadeśavikṛtam ananyavat it is treated as pād itself; by dvitribhyāṃ pāddanmūrdhasu (Pā. 6-2-197 [?]) the final member takes the final-acute. catuspāt — as before, since it is a compound, the samāsānta elision and the padbhāva; when catur + pat stands, by idudupadhasya cāpratyayasya the visarga takes ṣatva. catuḥ — by nraḥ saṃkhyāyāḥ (Phiṭ-sūtra 2-[?] [?]) numerals ending in n and r take the initial-acute; since catur ends in r, it takes the initial-acute; by bahuvrīhau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam the same accent remains in the compound. || 5 ||

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): "... 'one of favourable conduct'. Or: in all rites you are placed in the Āhavanīya fire in the eastern quarter. Or, the purohita is the Brahman priest, as the deputy of Bṛhaspati, the purohita of the gods. And as another mantra has it: 'Bṛhaspati is the Brahman of the gods, I of men.' So, abiding in the Brahman as before and taking that form, you, being learned in all the priestly duties — the Adhvaryu duties and the rest — O wise Agni, you cause the rite to thrive: you perform them complete, without lack or excess. The rest is as before." Grammatical tail: januṣā from jan with the Uṇādi suffix usi; purohitaḥ from dadhāti with the participial suffix

(niṣṭhā) in the passive, the si suffix and the word pur(s) as read, final-acute; puras as an indeclinable by the rule on taddhita and non-all-case-endings, a gati by 'puro 'vyayam', hence the accent of the prior member by 'gatiṃ anantaraḥ'; ārtvijyā with ṣyañ by the brāhmaṇādi group, first-vowel acute through the ñ-marker.¹⁹

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

"O Agni, you are in the sacrifice the Adhvaryu, the principal Hotṛ, one who occupies the Maitrāvaruṇa station and the Potṛ station, and by nature the purohita. Because of friendship with you, may we suffer no harm."

or by birth the family priest ; thus conversant with all the priestly functions, you make the rite perfect ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयः ॥ — Special Topics (Kannada)

adhvaryu, hotṛ, praśāstr, purohita — "The varieties of priests named in 'adhvaryu, hotṛ, praśāstr, purohita...' have been explained in detail in earlier volumes. Since Agni, the god, is the king of the rites (adhvara), since he bears the whole burden of carrying them through, since he invites the gods so that they come to the sacrifice, since he makes the offered oblation into portions, and since he supplies to the gods and to the sacrificers, each according to their wish, the fruits that satisfy them, he is praised in the words viśvā ārtvijyā vidvān dhīra agne puṣyasi — that he knows well the duties of all the priests and carries the sacrifice through in full without the least lack or excess."

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): "O Agni, you who, being of fair limbs (supratīka), are sadṛk from every side — like to us [the word as printed is doubtful, [?]] — though you are far off, you shine surpassingly as if near (talit is a word for 'near'). This was said by Yāska: 'Though far off, you are seen as if near' (Nirukta, numeral as read [?]). rātryāś cit — even of the night, you see (paśyasi) even the great darkness belonging to the night, O shining god, and shine beyond it. The rest as before." Grammatical tail: supratīka — fair limbs; the first member of the compound gets the acute on its first syllable by kratvādayaś ca; sadṛk — dṛś with samāna in the preceding position, kvin, sa-substitution for samāna, num augment in the Veda, loss of the conjunct final, ku-substitution for the kvin suffix; accent of the earlier member in a kṛdanta compound; rātryāḥ — ñīp by the rule on rātri.^{30 31}

"agne — O Agni; yaḥ — you who; supratīkaḥ — of beautiful, lovely limbs; viśvataḥ — in all directions; sadr̥k asi — are (without the least difference) equal in appearance (such a one are you); dūre cit san — though far away, also; taḷid iva — as if near; ati rocase — you shine exceedingly; deva — O shining Agni, (you); rātryāḥ cit andhaḥ — even the darkness of the time of night; ati paśyasi — piercing it, you shine; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaṃ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer harm."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

"O Agni, you, being of lovely form, are of one aspect in every direction, without the least difference. Though far off, you shine as if near. By your radiance you pierce even the darkness of the night and shine. Because of friendship with you, may we suffer no harm of any kind."

English Translation (as printed)

You are of graceful form and alike on every side, and although remote, shine as if near ; O divine Agni, you can see beyond the darkness of night ; Agni, let us not suffer injury [sic] through your friendship.

30. The bhāṣya of this Rik is clotted at asmānaḥ, and the sūtra numbers read from small figures are doubtful [?]; the print's nuṃ is read from the Kannada note on p. 535, the bhāṣya's own letter being suṃ-like [?].

31. The bhāṣya of Rik 94.7 as set down above runs from p. 533 across the head of this page; no further bhāṣya on this page.

supratīkaḥ — śobhanamukhaḥ: "śobhanamukhaḥ, 'one of lovely face'. 'One with a charming face'; this epithet is used very commonly of Agni, Sūrya, Uṣas, and in the main in connection with them; they are said to be those whose form is endowed with lustre,³²"

original p. 535

"...so the epithets supratīkaḥ and susandṛśaḥ are found much used in their regard."

taḷit — "taḷit, āsāt, ambaram — among the eleven last names read in the list of words, which in the Nirukta (Ni. 2-9 [?]) mean 'near': 'in the vicinity'. That is, Agni, though far off, shines as lovely as if near, in his great radiance."

andhaḥ — "tamo 'sy andha ucyate nāsmīn dhyānaṃ bhavati na darśanam andhatama ity abhibhāṣante [as read, doubtful [?]]" — Ni. 3-1 [?]:

तमोऽस्यन्ध उच्यते नास्मिन् ध्यानं भवति न दर्शनमन्धन्तम इत्यभिभाषन्ते । tamo 'sy andha ucyate nāsmīn dhyānaṃ bhavati na darśanam andhantama ity abhibhāṣante |

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā

viśvataḥ — to the word viśva in the ablative sense the suffix tasīl by pañcamyās tasīl (Pā. [?]); acute on the syllable before the suffix by the lit rule. supratīkaḥ — "the one whose limb (pratīka) is lovely"; the first member's accent per kratvādayaś ca (the later member gets the initial acute). sadr̥k — root dṛś (seeing) when the word samāna is the upapada, kvin by samānānyayoś ceti

32. continues on p. 535

33. Gloss, editorial and tentative: "Darkness is called andha: in it there is no seeing and no sight; they say 'the blindest dark'." The Kannada adds:

vaktavyam (Pā. 3-2-60 [?]); sa-substitution of saṃāna by dṛgdṛśavatuṣu (Pā. 6-3-89 [?]); sadrś; then, with su following, nuṃ by dṛk-svaḥ-svatavasām chandasi (Pā. 6-1-83 [?]); saṃyogāntasya lopah removes the ś; the elision of su to be stated by hal-nyābbhyo...; ku-substitution (kvin's n → ñ) by kuṃ... (Pā. 8-2-62 [?]); form sadrñ; accent by gatikārapapadāt kṛt (the kṛt member). asi — root as (to be), ādādi class, laṭ second person singular sip, tāsasty or lopaḥ removes the s of the root (Pā. 7-4-50 [?]); the nighāta accent does not arise since the verb is joined by yad; sip being pīṭ is unaccented; the root's accent remains. rātryāḥ — rātri is a feminine stem in i; ñas/ñi by rātreś cājasau (Pā. 4-1-31 [?]) takes ñip; a variant of the genitive singular. || 7 || ³⁴

36. The bhāṣya of this Rik is clotted at several places: the word after "pāpabuddhes tasya", the clause after "abhibhavatu" and "śadarthācaraṇena"; marked [?] and read as given.

37. The grammatical tail of the bhāṣya, begun on p. 536, ends at the head of this page as transcribed above.

English Translation (as printed)

foremost ; let our, denunciations overwhelm the wicked :
understand and fulfil my words ; Agnil [sic] let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ विशेषविषयाः ॥ — Special Topics (Kannada)

dūḍhyaḥ — durdhiyaḥ (Ni. 3-? [?], numeral as read "३-२" [?]): "evil-minded, of sinful thought — our enemies who speak ill and are inclined to sin; that is the sense."

śaṃsaḥ — abhiśāparūpaṃ pāpam: "the blame-like sin: may our censuring sin go against and harm our enemies, the sinful ones, and overwhelm them."

puṣyata — pravardhayata: "make [it] grow, to the full."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā ³⁸

sunvataḥ — root ṣuñ (pressing), śatṛ in the present sense; śnu as the vikaraṇa by svādibhyaḥ śnuḥ (as read); ṣ → s for the root's initial; sārvadhātukam apit makes the suffix ñit-like so that guṇa does not arise...

original p. 538

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.8, continued : for the śatṛ and the śnu, guṇa does not arise because of the jñ-type ñit-ness as printed. sunvat is the stem; the genitive singular (the fourth-case form as read) has the case-ending acute by śatur anumō nadyajādī (Pā. 6-1-[?] [?]; the stem lacks num and the ending begins with a vowel). śaṃsaḥ — root śaṃsu (praise); ghañ in the passive sense; ñ-ness gives the first syllable acute by ñnityādir nityam. dūḍhyaḥ — "they think ill": root dhyai (thinking), kvip by kvip ca; here the ḍṛś-heading is carried forward by anyebhyo 'pi ḍṛśyate (Pā. 3-2-178 [?]) so that the rule applies to this root also, and saṃprasāraṇa arises; by the reading dhyai ca in the prṣodarādi

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): "O Agni, the two shining (aruṣā), red (rohitā, 'red-coloured') [horses]. Rohitā is a name of the horses of Agni, as seen in the saying 'the rohita of Agni'; and in the mantra-wording 'Agni, with the rohita, may he bring you to the deity' (Taittirīya Saṃhitā, as read 1-6-4-3 [?]); 'these are the gods' horses' — so it is explained there. vātajūtā — those two whose speed (jūta) is like the speed (vega) of the wind. When you have yoked such a pair to your chariot, then, burning the forests, your roar is deep like the roar of a proud great bull. And after that, with a banner of smoke — that is, the smoke is the ketu (the sign) of him — you pervade the trees that belong to the forest. The rest as before." Grammatical tail: ayukthāḥ — yuj (joining) in the aorist, with elision of the s as printed [?]; aruṣā — the dual case-ending is replaced by ā by supām suluk...; ravaḥ — root ru (sound), ap in the sense of the action by ṛdor ap; invasi — root ivi (pervading), class bhvādi, the i-marker gives num.⁵⁵

aruṣā — "Although the word aruṣa has the ordinary sense 'reddish-brown', here, since the epithet rohitā is also present, it has been explained as 'shining' (prakāśamāna)."

rohitā — "rohito 'gneḥ (Ni. 2-28 [?], as read) — the Nirukta-author thus gives the form of Agni's horse: 'golden-coloured', that is the sense."

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): "O Agni, adha — after your entering the forest to burn it — svanāt, from your loud, deep roar (uta here has the sense 'even'): the winged ones (patatrīṇaḥ), the birds also, are afraid. If even birds, able to go to another place by flying up, are afraid, what is to be said of the fear that arises in the other creatures there, the wolves and the like? So the sense is that when you enter the forest, all creatures fall into fear. When your sparks (drapsāḥ — portions of flame), the eaters of grass (yavasādaḥ), spread out in many ways, then for you the whole forest is easy to travel (sugaṃ): so that forest becomes easy for your chariots also. The sense is that when the grass and the like have been burned by the flame-tips that spread first, your chariots follow after without obstruction. The rest as before." prasvādaṅgāt of the bhāṣya (p. 547) is to be read hrasvād aṅgāt, with the number as read here, not the 8-3-12 of the bhāṣya's tail [?]; the augment aṭ for the stem. Because the word yat stands before it, the nighāta accent is blocked by yadvrttān nityam (as read); as the augment aṭ is acute, the first syllable is acute. — tāvakebhyaḥ — "these (are) yours": tava ime tāvakāḥ, in the sense of relationship; by yuṣmadasmador anyatarasyām khañ ca (as read) the suffix aṇ follows; with that suffix following, tavakamamakāv ekavacane (Pā. 4-3-3 [?]) gives tavaka for yuṣmad; taddhiteṣv acām ādeḥ gives vṛddhi of the first vowel; the suffix accent falls on the last syllable; the form is the dative plural. || 11 ||

65. Reading note: the Pada line as printed, checked on an enlargement, has no punaḥ between manaḥ and agne, although the Saṁhitā has punar agne; the omission is the print's. The Saṁhitā's mṛḷā is the Pada's mṛḷa, and bhūtv eṣām is bhūtu | eṣām.

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): "May this praiser of Agni be [fit] for the support (dhāyase) belonging to Mitra, the god who presides over the day, and Varuṇa, who presides over the night: that is, may Mitra and Varuṇa sustain this praiser of Agni. The anger (heḷaḥ) of the Maruts, the gods so named, who dwell in the atmosphere below the world of heaven (avayātām — 'those who go below'), is adbhuta, great; (adbhuta is a word for 'great'); from that anger may Mitra and Varuṇa protect this praiser of Agni, so the sentence is completed. And, O Agni, su mṛḷa, make us well content; and let the mind of these Maruts be again [kindly], let it become gracious once more. The rest as before." Grammatical tail: dhāyase — the suffix asun in the sense of the action after the roots vah, hā, dhā and the like in the Veda, with the augment yuk; avayātām — yā (reaching), śatṛ in the present of that root with the prefix ava, with the case-ending acute by the rule on śatṛ; mṛḷa — mṛḍa (pleasing); śap taken as ārdhadhātuka, with ṇi-elision; lengthening in the Saṃhitā (mṛḷā); bhūtu — elision of śap by bahulaṃ chandasi.⁶⁷

Pratipadārtha of Rik 94.12, concluded from p. 550: "...punaḥ — again; bhūtu — (graciously) let it be; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaṃ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer (any) harm."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

"May this sacrificer who praises Agni be fit to obtain the support of Mitra and Varuṇa, and receive their protection. The anger of the Maruts, who move in the lower part of the world of heaven, is terrifying. May Mitra and Varuṇa protect the sacrificer from this anger. O Agni, make us thoroughly content; may the mind of these Maruts be gracious once more. Through friendship with you, may we suffer no harm of any kind."

English Translation (as printed)

May this (your adorer) enjoy the support of Mitra and [sic] of Varuṇa ; wonderful is the fury of the Maruts ; (dwellers in the region) below (the heavens) encourage us ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

dhāyase — "This word may be derived from the root dhā, which gives the sense 'hold, support' (dhāraṇa), or from the root dheṭ 'to drink' (dheṭ pāne, as read), which gives the sense 'drinking'. dhāyase here means either 'for the support of the sacrificers, by protection and so on' or 'for the drinking of the Soma-juice'. In other places also both senses are used. In places such as Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?]; 1-[?]-[?] [numerals illegible] they explain poṣaṇāya ('for nourishment') and jagataḥ dhāraṇāya ('for the support of the world'); in 1-[?]-[?]; 3-[?]-[?] [numerals illegible], somapānāya ('for the drinking of Soma'). So here also either of the two senses may be taken. Sāyaṇa explains dhāraṇāya, avasthāpanāya bhavatu ('may it be for support, for establishment'), and Skandasvāmin explains somapānāya."

"Skandasvāmin, to explain the setting of this Ṛk, cites a story. It is this:" ⁶⁹ ⁷⁰

"Once Mitra, Varuṇa and the Maruts together came to Kutsa's sacrificial house; Kutsa, wholly absorbed in the praise of Agni, did not notice them, and they went away angry. Then he, in this Ṛk, prays to Agni. Its meaning is that the anger of the gods who departed in wrath is very strong, and that Agni should pacify them and bring them back for the drinking of Soma."

avayātām — apagacchatām: "those who go away, departing in anger."

heḷaḥ — krodhaḥ: "reḷate, heḷate, bhāmate and others are read among the ten roots in the sense of 'become angry' (Ni. 2-6 [?], as read), so the word means 'anger'. The word is used in the sense of anger in many Ṛks: Ṛ. Saṃ. 1-[?]-[?]; 1-[?]-[?]; 1-[?]-1 [numerals illegible] and others."

śarman — "In the sacrificial house.' Since it is read among the twenty-two names of 'house' — gayaḥ, kṛdaraḥ, garttaḥ and the rest (Ni. 3-[?] [?]) — the sense here is 'house'. In many contexts the word śarman also has the senses 'protection' and 'refuge'. The Nirukta-author, with the sense of 'refuge, protection', cites the Ṛk —"

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): "...the Uttaravedī is the navel' (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, as read 1-29 [?]) — so says the scripture. On that Uttaravedī, kindled, fully blazing, and gratified by the Soma-juice that has been offered, you are praised (jarase) by the priests: whatever there is that is so, is bhadra, to be sought, praiseworthy. Thus praised, being most gladdening, a giver of ease to us, you bestow the delightful fruit of rites (ratna) and wealth (draviṇa) on the worshipper who has given the oblation. The rest as before." Grammatical tail: samiddhaḥ — indhī (shining), past participle in the passive; the iṭ augment forbidden by śvīdito niṣṭhāyām; the gati (sam) retains its natural accent by gatiḥ anantaraḥ; somāhutaḥ — 'offered by Soma', the instrumental determinative, first-member accent by tṛtīyā karmaṇi; jarase — jarati is a verb of praise; the agent suffix in the passive by vyatyaya; no nighāta because of the connexion with yat; dadhāsi — the reduplicate takes the initial acute by anudātte ca.

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Kannada)

"agne — O Agni; sve dame — (ordained by the śāstra) in your dwelling-place; samiddhaḥ — well blazing, kindled (and); somāhutaḥ — one to whom the Soma-juice has been offered; jarase — (by the priests) praised; te — your; tat — that kindling and the hymn also; bhadraṃ — (for you) productive of a lovely satisfaction (you, who have obtained such satisfaction); mṛḷayattamaḥ — (us) greatly gladdening; ratnaṃ — the delightful fruit of rites; draviṇaṃ ca — and wealth too; dāśuṣe — to the sacrificer who has offered oblations; dadhāsi — you give; tava — your; sakhye — through friendship; vayaṃ — we; mā riṣāma — may we not suffer harm."

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

"O Agni, in your dwelling-place ordained by the śāstra you are well kindled, and after the offering of the Soma-juice you are praised by the priests: that kindling of yours and the hymn are a lovely satisfaction to you. Having obtained such satisfaction, you greatly gladden us, and give the delightful fruit of rites and wealth to the sacrificer who has offered oblations. Through friendship with you, may we suffer no harm of any kind."

English Translation (as printed)

It is pleasant to you when you are lighted in your own abode and propitiated by libations are praised (by the priests) ; then, much delighted, you give rewards and riches to the worshipper ; Agni, let us not suffer injury through your friendship.

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.14⁸³ samiddhaḥ — root ñi indhī (shining); cta in the passive; since the root is ī-marked, the iṭ augment is not added, by śvīdīto niṣṭhāyām (Pā. 7-2-14 [?]); the suffix being kit, the n of the root's penultimate is elided by aniditām hala upadhāyāḥ kñiti (Pā. 6-4-24 [?]); by jhaṣas tathor dho 'dhaḥ (Pā. 8-2-40 [?]) the t of the suffix becomes dh, and by jhalām jaś jhaśi (Pā. 8-4-53 [?]) the preceding dh becomes d; the gati (sam) keeps its natural accent by gatiṛ anantaraḥ (Pā. 6-2-49 [?]). — somāhutaḥ — somena āhutaḥ, a third-case tatpuruṣa; the first member keeps its natural accent by ṛtīyā karmaṇi (Pā. 6-2-48 [?]).⁸⁴

original p. 559

Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.14, continued : jarase — root jyaṣ (loss of vigour); since roots have several senses, it is used here in the sense of praise; by vyatyayo bahulam (Pā. 3-1-85 [?]) the agent suffix occurs in the passive; laṭ second person singular thās, se for thās by thāsaḥ se (Pā. 3-4-80 [?]); śap as vikaraṇa; guṇa of the root's i by sārvadhātukārdhādhātukayoḥ; the form jarase; though yat is separated from it, yadvṛttān nityam (Pā. 8-1-66 [?]) prevents the nighāta, so the root's accent remains. — dadhāsi — root ḍudhāñ (holding, nourishing), juhotyādi; laṭ second person singular sip; ślu by juhotyādibhyaḥ śluḥ (Pā. 2-4-75 [?]); reduplication by ślau (Pā. 6-1-10 [?]); the reduplicate shortened; initial acute of the reduplicate by anudātte ca (Pā. 6-1-190 [?]). — dāśuṣe — root dāśṛ (giving); kvasu in the form dāśvān, irregular (dāśvān sāhvān mīḍhvāmś ca, Pā. 6-1-12 [?]); with the dative ending following, the stem has the bha-designation, so vasoḥ

82. Glosses, editorial and tentative: "he wins all wealth through you, Agni, the mortal who has given to you"; "he grew in fame among mortals who with hymns, as sage, gave to Agni"; "the mortal who serves the god Agni in his own house — to him he shines forth wealth".

samprasāraṇam (Pā. 6-4-131 [?]) turns the v of vas into u; samprasāraṇāc ca (Pā. 6-1-108 [?]) gives the earlier form; ṣ by śāsi vasi ghasīnām ca (Pā. 8-3-60 [?]); the form dāśuṣe. || 14 ||

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): "O Agni, you of lovely wealth (sudraviṇaḥ), indivisible, in all the multitudes of rites [karmatatiṣu, the print's word read from p. 562]. Or: to the sacrificer who abides in all the sacrificial acts, you give anāgāstva — freedom from sin, the fitness for rites that comes of sinlessness — and that sacrificer prospers; and whichever sacrificer you rouse with good, desirable strength, he too prospers; and may we, the praisers, be endowed with wealth given by you, accompanied by progeny, sons and grandsons."

Grammatical tail: sudraviṇaḥ — from dru (going) with inan (drudakṣibhyām inan, Uṇ. 2-50 [?]); the added m at the end of draviṇa is the Vedic usage [as read, doubtful [?]]; dadāśaḥ — dāśr (giving), a leṭ form with the augment aṭ, śap elided by bahulaṃ chandasi, initial acute by abhyastānām ādiḥ; sarvatātā — by sarvadevāt tātil the suffix tātil in the same sense; on Yāska's view, a bahuvrīhi 'in which all the praises are', with the first member's natural accent; the ā-ending as the replacement of the locative by supām suluk...; codayāsi — cud (urging), the leṭ augment aṭ.⁸⁸

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Kannada)

"sudraviṇaḥ — O one with lovely wealth; adite — O indivisible [Agni]; sarvatātā — in the multitude of all rites, or (in faith) in all sacrifices, [him] who abides in faith; yasmai — to which sacrificer; anāgāstvam — the fitness for rites that is free of sin; tvaṃ — you; dadāśaḥ — you who give (and); yaṃ — whom; bhadreṇa — with the benevolent; śavasā — strength; codayāsi — you join [with] (he prospers, that is certain; may we too); prajāvatā — full of sons, grandsons and the like; te rādhasā — with the wealth given by you; syāma — may we be (united)."

original p. 561

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

"O Agni, possessing lovely wealth and indivisible: the sacrificer to whom, abiding with faith in all sacrificial rites, you give the fitness for rites that is free of sin, and the sacrificer whom you join with strength that does good — he surely prospers. May we too, through your favour, be possessed of wealth together with sons, grandsons and the like."

English Translation (as printed)

88. The print's karmatatiṣu on p. 560 is a clotted karmateti–; the words makāropajanaś chandasah and varṇavyāpattyātvam are doubtful [?].

Fortunate is the worshipper to whom (assiduous) in all pious works, you possessor of riches, indivisible Agni, grant exemption from sin, whom you associate with auspicious strength, may he be (enriched) by you with wealth that comprehends progeny.

॥ विशेषविषयाः ॥ — Special Topics of Rik 94.15 (Kannada)

sudraṇaḥ — śobhanadhanaḥ: "'one who has lovely wealth', that is, 'one whose wealth is excellent'. In the R̥ksaṃhitā this epithet is used only as a synonym of Agni. In the R̥k 10-61-21 [?], too, this epithet shows the excellence of Agni's wealth."

adite — "akhaṇḍanīyāgne — 'indivisible Agni'; or aditeḥ putra agne — 'O Agni, son of Aditi': it can be explained in two ways. In the first, aditi is taken to mean 'not poor' (adīnā), that is, 'not wasting away': Agni is said in many places to be free of decay and free of death." ⁸⁹

89. Glosses, editorial and tentative: "O Agni, saviour, immortal, worthy of offering, best sacrificer, bearer of oblations"; "never does the immortal, born of strength, fail, when as Hotṛ he became the messenger of Vivasvat".) "In many such contexts Agni is called deathless; so he may be called aditi. In the second sense, aditi is devamātā (Ni. 4-22 [?]), the 'mother of the gods', so Agni too is a son of Aditi; therefore, by adite is to be understood 'O son of Aditi', Skandasvāmīn says. Or, since the Nirukta-author says agnir asyāditir ucyate (Ni. 11-23 [?]), aditi is a synonym (paryāya) of Agni;" (continues on p. 562)

sarvatātā — "The Nirukta-author, citing this very Ṛk when explaining the word sarvatātā, gives the meaning sarvāsu karmatatiṣu, 'in the multitude of all sacrificial acts' (Ni. 11-23 [?]). The word sarvatātā is used generally as a synonym for 'sacrifice'. For example —"

sudraviṇaḥ, concluded: guṇa and av-substitution of the root's vowel through the suffix; since there is an r as cause, the n of the suffix becomes ṇ by aṭkuvāṇ... (Pā. 8-4-2 [?], the sūtra's end clotted); the form draviṇa. In the Saṃhitā an s-augment arises at the end of the word draviṇa in the Vedic manner (so the Kannada page, as read; the bhāṣya says makāropajana, see p. 560 [?]). On Yaska's view, the bahuvrīhi sarvāḥ stutayaḥ yeṣu yāgeṣu, 'in which all praises are', sarvatātā; the ā comes by the Vedic substitution of letters, and by bahuvrīthau prakṛtyā pūrvapadam (Pā. 6-2-1 [?]) the first member keeps its natural accent. On both views dā replaces the seventh-case ending by supāṃ suluk... — codayāsi — root cud (urging); leṭ second person singular sip; since it belongs to the curādi class, ṇic in the sense of the root itself by satyāpapāśa... (Pā. 3-1-25 [?]); guṇa of the light penultimate vowel by pugantalaḥpādhasya ca (Pā. 7-3-86 [?]); the augment aṭ by leṭo 'dāṭau; guṇa of the ṇic's i, then ay; because yat stood earlier and is connected with it, the nighāta does not arise; by the suffix accent the ā after the d is acute. — prajāvatā — "they have progeny": prajāvān; the suffix matup by tad asyāsty asminn iti matup (as read), added after a stem ending in a [as read]; m turns to v by mādupadhāyās ca... (Pā. 8-2-9 [?]); the instrumental singular form. || 15 ||

Gloss (mine, from the Kannada and the bhāṣya as printed): "O god Agni, endowed with qualities such as generosity, you of the qualities named before, knowing the nature of good fortune (saubhagatva), prolong (pra tira, 'increase': the root tir with pra has the sense of growth) our life in this rite. That life of ours, increased by you, may the six deities, Mitra and the rest, honour (māmahantām) — that is, protect. Mitra is the protector from death; Varuṇa the averter of ills; Aditi the not-poor, the indivisible, the mother of the gods; Sindhu the flowing, of the nature of open space [?], a goddess; Pṛthivī the widely spread, the earth-goddess; uta ('and') is in the sense of joining; Dyaus the shining, the goddess who is the heavenly world. All these are to be construed with 'may they honour the life increased by Agni' in the preceding." Grammatical tail: saubhagatvasya — from subhaga; the printed derivation is clotted and not reproduced [?]; māmahantām — mah (honour), bhvādi; in the imperative śap is elided by bahulaṃ chandasī, and the reduplicate's vowel is lengthened because the root belongs to the tuj-type group.⁹⁵

॥ प्रतिपदार्थः ॥ — Pratipadārtha (Kannada)

"deva — O one endowed with qualities such as giving; agne — O Agni; saḥ — you who are filled with all these qualities; tvaṃ — you; saubhagatvasya — the nature of good fortune; vidvān — knowing; iha — in this sacrificial rite; asmākam āyuh — our life; pra tira — increase; naḥ — our; tat — that life; mitraḥ — Mitra the protector; varuṇaḥ — Varuṇa (who destroys ills); aditiḥ — the indivisible mother of the gods; sindhuḥ — the flowing river-goddess; pṛthivī — the spacious earth-mother; uta — and; dyauḥ — the shining goddess of the heavenly world; mamahantām — may they protect."

95. The tail of the bhāṣya on saubhagatvasya is clotted at several words, marked [?].

॥ भावार्थः ॥ — Bhāvārtha (Kannada)

"O Agni, endowed with qualities such as giving, you are filled with all virtues; knowing the nature of good fortune, increase our life in this sacrificial rite. May Mitra, Varuṇa, Aditi, the goddess of the flowing waters, the earth-mother, and the goddess of the heavenly world also increase our life and protect it."

English Translation (as printed)

Divine Agni, do you who know what is good fortune on this occasion, prolong our existence, and may Mitra, Varuna, Aditi, ocean, earth and heaven preserve it to us.

saubhagatvasya vidvān — subhagasya bhāvaḥ saubhagaṃ | tasya bhāvaḥ |: "That is, one who knows all good fortunes and possessions. Since by epithets such as jātavedāḥ ('knower of all that is born') the omniscience of Agni is described, he knows fully the faith and devotion of the sacrificers, and their diligence in what is to be done, and the fruits proper to their good works, and bestows on them all good fortune and possessions."

asmākam āyuh pra tira — "'Make our life grow.' The Nirukta-author explains the words pra tira as pravardhaya, 'increase' (Ni. 10-40 [?], as read), and cites the Rk of the Rksaṃhitā —"

⁹⁷ "— and so shows it. In many contexts like these the meaning 'increase our life; may we live long' is given. In the same way here, asmākam āyuh pra tira means 'make our life grow', that is the sense."

tan no mitro varuṇo māmahantām aditiḥ sindhuḥ prthivī uta dyauḥ — "In these deities also, by Agni's grace, may they increase our good fortune and possessions, and make [us] honoured [the Kannada word read as pūjyāmānasa, doubtful (?)]; may they make them beneficial to our share. This is the last prayer of this Sūkta. From the beginning of the Sūkta up to here it has had Agni as its deity; but in the last half of the last Rk this prayer, addressed to all the gods, in this way, is the peculiarity of the composition of the seer Kutsa. This peculiarity is found also in the compositions of the seers Bharadvāja, Gṛtsamada and the rest. For this there is a well-known technical word, udarka ('closing', 'sequel'). The Bṛhaddevatā describes the udarka of the seer Kutsa in this way:" 98 printed in the source in Roman reference)

original p. 567

"The seer Kutsa Āṅgirasa received the vision of this Sūkta (1-94) and hymned it, sixteen Ṛks, as concerned with Jātavedas. The first three pādas of the 8th Ṛk, which begins pūrvo devāḥ, and the latter half of the last Ṛk are addressed to many deities. In the Sūktas of Bharadvāja, Gṛtsamada, Vasiṣṭha, Nodhas, Agastya, Vimada and Nabhāka also, although there are such udarkas,

98. The three stanzas are transcribed from the Kannada script of the print; several words are clotted and are read as given, doubtful [?]: especially ṣoḷaśarcam, sto 'rdham, vātra ṣaḍbhiḥ prakṛtābhyāḥ, nodhasy agastye and nodarkā. The source gives no translation of the stanzas; the Kannada that follows on p. 567 explains their sense.

whether they are of many deities or of two deities, they do not have the same characteristic as the refrain (pallavi) in the udarka of the seer Kutsa; thus the peculiarity in the composition of the seer Kutsa is shown."

"Altogether, in the compositions of eight seers such udarkas are found at the ends of Sūktas. In none of them is the last half of the Sūkta addressed to many deities [as read, doubtful [?]]. This matter will be considered in detail, with examples, in the exposition of the next Sūkta."

॥ व्याकरणप्रक्रिया ॥ — Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of Rik 94.16

saubhagatvasya — subhagasya bhāvaḥ saubhagam; because subhagān mantrē is read as such in the udgātrādi group (as read), a suffix (the Kannada print gives phiñ [?]) arises in the sense of 'state'; being ñit, it gives vṛddhi of the first vowel. saubhaga itself means 'state' [of being subhaga]; where the sense of 'state' is to be shown again, the suffix tva has to be added to the word saubhaga, in the Vedic manner; by the suffix accent the word is final-acute. — tira — the root tir with the prefix pra, in the sense of increase; loṭ, second person singular; tiñanta, nighāta accent. — mamahantām [Saṃhitā māmahantām] — root maha (honouring), bhvādi; loṭ, third person plural, jha → anta by jho 'ntaḥ (as read); āmetaḥ (Pā. 3-4-90 [?]) turns the e produced in the loṭ into ām; śap gets ślu by bahulaṃ chandasi; reduplication of the root by ślau; the reduplicate keeps the first consonant by halādisēṣa; since the root belongs to the tuj-type group, the reduplicate's vowel is lengthened by tujādīnām dīrgho 'bhyāsasya (Pā. 6-1-7 [?]); nighāta accent, since it follows a tiñanta. || 16 ||

Closing line of the print: "94ne sūktavu samāptavāgide" — "The 94th Sūkta is complete." ⁹⁹

Piṭhike — Preface of H. P. Venkata Rao

1. the print reads 'in the same manner'; the table gives 28 and 32 for the first two, so the pādas of the Uṣṇik are 8 + 8 + 12 in the R̥gveda's usual form; the author does not say this here
2. Resuming mid-sentence.
3. Digits read from a 230-dpi enlargement: the syllable-counts "23", "38", "42" and the Triṣṭup total "4253" and the chapter/part numbers are small Kannada numerals read with doubt; none is confirmed. The Triṣṭup total is as the Kannada digits seem to read, i.e. four thousand, two hundred and fifty-three, and is quoted from the missing table's context.
4. Both citations are given here as read from the print; the Kannada reference numerals are small and doubtful, "೧೦-೨೦-೧೦" and "೭-೩೩-೪" [?].
5. the sentence runs on to p. vi

- 16. SOURCE PAGE MISSING: the scan carries printed p. 513 in this place
- ¶ The page occupying PDF 428 is headed "A. 1 A. 6 Va. 30 [?]" on the left, "Ṛgvedasaṃhitā" in the centre and "513" on the right, with the printer's signature "33 ... Volume 7" at the foot. It is a stray page of the commentary on a later Sūkta (the Agni-Sūkta 94: Bṛhaddevatā quotations on jātavedas, the line imaṃ stomaṃ rathām iva saṃ mahema, and tava sakhye vayaṃ mā riṣāma), and the same page appears again at its proper place, PDF 528 = printed p. 513. Printed p. 413 itself — which, by the sequence of the text, should hold the end of the Special Topics of Rik 92.3 and the Vyākaraṇa-prakriyā of 92.3 — is not in the scan. The signature number confirms the intrusion (signature 33 belongs to printed pp. 513–528, whereas p. 413 would be in signature 27). Nothing of Rik 92.3's remaining commentary can therefore be translated; the page is to be translated at its own place (printed p. 513) when that is reached, and the missing p. 413 is noted as a gap in the source, to be supplied from another copy if the user can provide one.

52. Grammar page, noted briefly; sūtra numerals small and doubtful [?].

53. The grammar of Rik 94.9 ended on p. 542 with kṛdhi and its || 9 ||; on p. 543 only the closing words of the entry on sugam and the entry on kṛdhi remain, as above: after nighāta in the last line, the stem suga takes final acute by the suffix accent, and the accusative singular ending is the second-case singular form.
54. Reading note: the Pada, as printed, has ād invasi as āt | invasi, and the Saṃhitā ayukthā for the Pada's ayukthāḥ by sandhi, and aruṣā rohitā as printed in the dual.

64. continues on p. 549
65. Reading note: the Pada line as printed, checked on an enlargement, has no punaḥ between manaḥ and agne, although the Saṃhitā has punar agne; the omission is the print's. The Saṃhitā's mṛlā is the Pada's mṛla, and bhūtv eṣām is bhūtu | eṣām.
66. The print's asi ca no 'smān is read as printed, where the sense requires kṛdhi or the like — it is presumably a misprint for asmān alone; also the opening clause asi ca nosmān [?]. The sūtras are named without numbers in this tail; none supplied.
67. The bhāṣya is clotted at dhāraṇāyovasthāpanāya; marked [?].

70. Gloss, editorial and tentative, from the Kannada that follows: "Mitra, Varuṇa and the Maruts came to Kutsa's sacrifice; he, his mind absorbed in praising Agni, did not praise them [?]; the angry gods went away from the sacrifice; [for that reason] Kutsa spoke to Agni." Several words of the print are doubtful [?].
71. begun at the foot of p. 553; continues on p. 554
72. Gloss, editorial and tentative: "in you, Agni, all the immortals, free from guile, the gods, eat with the mouth the oblation that has been offered".
73. Gloss, editorial and tentative: "you, Agni, the immortal messenger, bearer of oblations, protector, to be praised, they have set down, age after age; gods and mortals with homage sat down by you, the watchful, the all-pervading, the lord of the clans".

84. continues on p. 559
85. Triṣṭubh; accent marks printed here, not reproduced

86. Reading note: the last line is printed ...prajāvatā rādha- | sā te syāma, the word broken at the line end; read as rādhasā te syāma, to be checked against the Pada on the next page [?]. The refrain agne sakhye mā riṣāmā vyaṃ tava is absent from the last two Ṛks, as the Anuvāda of the Sūkta noted.
87. The Pada, as printed, divides the last line rādhasā | te | syāma, which settles the reading of the Saṃhitā's last line on p. 559: rādhasā te syāma; the print's Pada carries no verse numeral at the end of the page's lines.
88. The print's karmatatiṣu on p. 560 is a clotted karmateti-; the words makāropajanaś chandasaḥ and varṇavyāpattyātvaṃ are doubtful [?].
89. Glosses, editorial and tentative: "O Agni, saviour, immortal, worthy of offering, best sacrificer, bearer of oblations"; "never does the immortal, born of strength, fail, when as Hotṛ he became the messenger of Vivasvat".) "In many such contexts Agni is called deathless; so he may be called aditi. In the second sense, aditi is devamātā (Ni. 4-22 [?]), the 'mother of the gods', so Agni too is a son of Aditi; therefore, by adite is to be understood 'O son of Aditi', Skandasvāmin says. Or, since the Nirukta-author says agnir asyāditir ucyate (Ni. 11-23 [?]), aditi is a synonym (paryāya) of Agni;" (continues on p. 562
90. The middle quotation is clotted in the print and the words are read as given, doubtful [?]. Glosses, editorial and tentative, for the first and third: "may he, the messenger of the gods, sent forth in many places, speak for us, sinless, in the rite"; "for riches, Mitra and Varuṇa, I invoke at the sacrifice, for the offspring, for weal and welfare".
91. Gloss, editorial and tentative, for the first: "whatever offence, youngest one, we have committed against you among the mortals through our lack of understanding — make us sinless before Aditi, loosen the sins on every side, Agni". The second quotation is clotted and is read as given, doubtful [?].
92. grammar page, noted briefly; continues on p. 563
93. continues on p. 563
94. Reading note: Saṃhitā māmahantām, Pada mamahantām as printed; tireha is the Pada's tira | iha.
95. The tail of the bhāṣya on saubhagatvasya is clotted at several words, marked [?].
96. continues on p. 566

97. Gloss, editorial and tentative: "O Asunīti, set your mind on us; for our living, prolong our life well".
98. The three stanzas are transcribed from the Kannada script of the print; several words are clotted and are read as given, doubtful [?]: especially ṣoḷaśarcam, sto 'rdham, vātra ṣaḍbhiḥ prakṛtābhyaḥ, nodhasy agastye and nodarkā. The source gives no translation of the stanzas; the Kannada that follows on p. 567 explains their sense.
99. Printed in Kannada after the grammar page of Rik 94.16; a printer's ornament follows. No further colophon, and no closing line for the Sixth Adhyāya, appears in the scan.
